while attempting to smuggle explosives across the Italian–French border for use in attacks against the Israeli and Jordanian embassies as part of a Black September campaign. The two drove from a Lebanese Fatah base in a Mercedes carrying 35 pounds of plastique. The two Fatah members were imprisoned for six months and then were expelled from France.

Yusuf at-Tabbal: leader of a group that was foiled in an assassination attempt against French President Mitterrand on June 3, 1982.

Geri Mehed Tabet: Libyan described by the Washington Post in April 1986 as having been in contact in October 1981 with 15 Sardinians arrested by Italian authorities in December 1982 as part of a Libyan plot to separate Sardinia from Italy.

Mehdi Nejad Tabrizi: one of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah’s last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-Seine, France, on July 17, 1980. On March 10, 1982, a Nanterre jury sentenced four of them, including Tabrizi, to life in prison. His release was demanded on July 31, 1984, by the three Guardsmen of Islam hijackers of an Air France B737 flying from Frankfurt to Paris. On July 27, 1990, France pardoned the five. They were deported to Tehran that day.

Vatch Navar Tagihitan: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through Lisbon Airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Khaled Tagiuri: arrested by Bonn police in his hotel after arriving from Tripoli. He was believed part of an anti-dissident Libyan hit team.

Pier Luigi Tagliari: on October 11, 1982, Bolivia expelled him to Italy in connection with the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189.

Ali Shafik Ahmed Taha: alias Captain Rafat. One of three Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an El Al B707 going from Rome to Tel Aviv's Lod Airport on July 22, 1968.

Bassam Taher: Austrian terrorist, age 36, arrested by police from Mexico, Austria, and Germany on April 12, 2001, in Tonala on Mexico's Pacific coast where he and his wife, Beate Graf, were living illegally. One of Interpol's five most-wanted suspects in the world, Taher was wanted for several terrorist acts against firms in Austria from 1988 to 1995. He worked with several radical leftist groups, including the Vienna-based Anarchy and the Palestinian Group of the Radical Left.

Muhammad Tahir: Palestinian arrested in connection with the April 26, 1985, bombing of the Geneva office of Libyan Arab Airlines; the bombing on the same date of the car of Ahmad Saqr, the Syrian chargé d'affaires to the United Nations; and the placement of a bomb in the car of 'Abd al'Wahab Barakat, a Syrian diplomat and a nephew of president Hafiz al-Asad. On March 19, 1985, he was convicted of carrying out the bombings and sentenced to five years in prison. He admitted membership in the Martyrs of Tal Za'Tar Organization.

Abderrahmane Tahiri: alias Mohamed Achraf. Founder of the Martyrs for Morocco. Tahiri, age 31

as of October 24, 2004, served time in a Spanish prison for credit card fraud from 1999 to 2002. He was believed to have organized the would-be attack by Islamic militants against the National Court building in Madrid on October 18, 2004. The terrorists also planned to attack the stadium of the Real Madrid soccer team and a political party's headquarters. Authorities said the plot was to be financed from Switzerland by Tahiri. He was held in a Swiss prison for immigration violations; Spain requested his extradition. He had close ties with the Armed Islamic Group (GIA) and the Salafist Group for Call and Combat. After extradition, he was indicted on March 31, 2006, with 31 others. The Madrid trial of 30 of the suspects began on October 15, 2007.

Samir Tahtah: a Moroccan, age 28, arrested near Barcelona on June 15, 2005, as part of a cell of the Ansar al-Islam Army and al Qaeda in Iraq.

Arutyun Takosyan: alias of Hagop Hagopian.

Mustapha Taleb: one of six North African men arrested on January 5, 2003, by U.K. antiterrorist police after traces of ricin were discovered in a London apartment. There is no antidote for the poison. They were held without charge under the United Kingdom's antiterrorism laws. Police said they were following a tip from French intelligence. A seventh man was grabbed on January 7.

On January 11, police charged Mouloud Feddag, age 18; Sidali Feddag; Samir Feddag, age 26; and Mustapha Taleb, age 33, with possession of articles of value to a terrorist and being concerned in the development or production of chemical weapons. Nasreddine Fekhadji was charged with forgery and counterfeiting. A sixth man was arrested for possession of drugs and immigration offenses. A seventh man was turned over to immigration officials. On February 26, British authorities charged three men with conspiring to make chemical weapons. By April 2004, nine individuals associated with the ricin threat were charged with conspiracy to murder and other related charges. Their trials were slated for May and September 2004.

Muhammad Abu Talib: variant Talb. Linked to the December 21, 1988, Lockerbie bombing of Pan American Flight 103 in which 270 people died. He was one of 15 members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command (PFLP-GC) arrested on May 18, 1989, in Sweden on suspicion of involvement in explosions in Copenhagen and other crimes. On December 21, 1989, he was convicted of murder and gross destruction dangerous to the public and was sentenced by the Uppsala town court to life in prison for setting off two bombs in Copenhagen in July 1985 against the synagogue and against the Northwest Orient Airlines office, in which one person was killed and several others injured. He was found innocent of the bombing of Northwest Orient Airlines office in Stockholm in April 1986. He was to be expelled from the country forever after the sentence had been served (presumably, parole was a possibility).

On November 2, 1989, the PFLP-GC denied that he was connected with the group. Some observers believed he was part of the Palestine Popular Struggle Front, headquartered in Damascus and financed by Libya. He received SAM-3 missile training in the Soviet Union, and he joined an Egyptian-sponsored Palestinian military unit in 1967 at age 15. While with the Popular Struggle Front, he returned to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for training in political organizing.

The news media quoted Swedish police as saying that he bought the clothing found in the suitcase in which the Pan Am bomb exploded. He visited Malta on October 19–26, 1988. He traveled to Cyprus on October 3–18, 1988, where some of the planning for the attack was believed to have taken place. He was one of 14 Arabs arrested on October 26, 1988, in Neuss, West Germany, where police found a weapons cache, including altitude-sensitive detonators that matched components used in the Lockerbie bomb.

His wife, Jamilah al-Moghrabi, is a sister of one of his fellow defendants.

The Tartan Taliban: alias of James McLintock.

Sami Houssin Tamimah (variant Sami Hussin Taiman): participant in the March 3, 1974, hijacking of a British Airways flight from Bombay to London.

Rima Tannous: one of four Black September hijackers on May 8, 1972, of Sabena Airlines 517, a B707 flying the Vienna–Athens–Tel Aviv route over Zagreb.

Shahzad Tanweer: son of the Pakistani owner of a Leeds fish-and-chips shop, age 22. On July 7, 2005, at 8:51 A.M., a bomb he placed on the floor of the third carriage of Circle Line Subway Train 204 carrying 700 passengers went off 100 yards from the Liverpool Street Station, killing 7 and wounding 100. The train was arriving from Aldgate Station. The bomber was a good friend of fellow bomber Hasib Hussain. Tanweer was a student of physical education at Leeds Metropolitan University. Pakistani authorities said Tanweer had visited Pakistan in 2004 and met with Osama Nazir, later arrested and charged with a 2002 grenade attack on an Islamabad church in which five people, including two Americans, were killed. Tanweer also spent several days at a madrasa near Lahore that had ties to Lashkar-i-Taiba.

Charaabi Tarek: one of four Tunisians convicted by a Milan court on February 22, 2002, on terrorist charges, including criminal association with intent to transport arms, explosives, and chemicals and falsifying 235 work permits, 130 driver's licenses, several foreign passports, and various blank documents. They were acquitted of charges of possession of arms and chemicals. The guilty verdicts were the first in Europe against al Qaeda operatives since the 9/11 attacks. The four belonged to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, an Algerian wing of al Qaeda. He received four years. On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

Fatahi Tarhoni: Libyan who on April 6, 1985, shot to death Gebril Denali, a Libyan opponent of Muammar Qadhafi, in Bonn's Cathedral Square. Police arrested Tarhoni with the gun still in his hands.

Mohamed Tarik: one of 14 members of a suspected Pakistan-based Tabligh Jamaat terrorist cell arrested in Spain on January 19, 2008, on suspicion of planning suicide bomb attacks against the Barcelona subway system and against a prayer house frequented by supporters of late former prime minister Benazir Bhutto of Pakistan.

Nadeem Tarmohammed: Tarmohammed, age 26, pleaded guilty on April 25, 2007, in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. Tarmohammed was also charged with possessing a reconnaissance plan of the Newark, New Jersey, Prudential Financial headquarters. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six received 15 to 26 years for conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Asmin Amin Tariq: MSNBC quoted the Transportation Security Administration as describing him as a security guard at Heathrow International Airport who was one of 24 people arrested in connection with the plan to blow up aircraft flying between the United States and United Kingdom in 2006. He helped Islamic extremists pose as employees so that they could surveil security procedures at Heathrow. He allegedly provided information about airport security procedures to the would-be bombers.

George Tartajian: Armenian shirt maker arrested on April 15, 1994, in connection with the assassination by an Iraqi gunman of Talib al-Suhayl al-Tamimi, a leading member of the London-based Free Iraqi Council opposition group in Beirut, during the night of April 12, 1994. He apparently had helped the gunmen reach the house of the victim.

Lutz Manfred Taufer: one of the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed the military attaché, Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, and the economic counselor, Heinz Hillegaart. They demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing 1 of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their sub-machine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Taufer was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison. On May 25, 1992, he said from Celle prison that the Red Army Faction, which had Socialist Patients' Collective affiliates, had renounced violence.

F. Taveras: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curacao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Mustafa Sulayman al-Tawwab: Lebanese who was one of 18 Arab terrorists reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain in August to attack Middle Eastern diplomatic missions and assassinate Saudi ambassador Muhammad Nuri Ibrahim. They had received weapons and casing reports on the ambassador from a Lebanese student resident in Spain whose initials were HMI.

Jan Taylor: former soldier, age 51, arrested on March 1993 at the home of colleague Patrick Hayes in London, where police found guns, explosives, and bomb-making equipment. He was detained in connection with the January 28, 1993, Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombing of Harrods that injured four people. He was also believed to have bombed a train from Victoria to Ramsgate in Kent in February 1993. A not-guilty plea was entered for him on eight counts on April 14, 1994.

Adel Tebourski: on May 17, 2005, a Paris court sentenced him to two to seven years for association with a terrorist enterprise and providing logistical support to the killers of Ahmed Shah Massoud, who on September 9, 2001, was assassinated in Afghanistan by al Qaeda terrorists posing as journalists.

Antonio Tejero: lieutenant colonel held in prison for organizing an abortive February 23, 1981, coup attempt. His release was demanded by 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. He refused to leave.

Janusz Telarczyk: Polish sanitarian pilot who on June 9, 1982, hijacked his Morava survey plane from Szczecin to Sturup Airport outside Malmo, Sweden, where he and his wife, two children, and a friend requested asylum.

Hugh Tenny: convicted Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member whose release was demanded by IRA members who stole 19 paintings valued at $19.2 million from the home of Sir Alfred Beit on April 26, 1974, in Ireland. The paintings were recovered unharmed on May 3.

Josu Ternera: alias of Jose Antonio Urrutikoetxea, a founder of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Fritz Teufel: arrested on September 14, 1975, by West Berlin police for the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. Teufel was detained in a police sweep following a bombing in Hamburg that injured 11. His release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On September 28, 1977, the West German federal prosecutor's office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and for kidnapping Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978.

Josip Tevek: one of three hijackers of the June 26, 1952, Yugoslavian National Airlines flight from Belgrade to Puola that was diverted to Foligno, Italy, where the trio requested asylum.

Thalassinos: would-be hijacker of an Olympic airliner flying from Athens to Crete on October 26, 1971.

Johannes Thimme: one of two suspected members of the Red Army Faction who on January 20, 1985, wheeled a bomb in a baby carriage to a data-processing center in Stuttgart-Vaihingen, West Germany. The bomb exploded prematurely, killing Thimme, a twice-convicted terrorist.

Patrick Thiolet: one of two defendants on trial for robbery in Nantes, France, who were freed and armed by Abdel Karim Khaki, a Moroccan member of Abu Nidal, when he burst into the courtroom and took hostages on December 19, 1985. He had met Khaki in jail while awaiting trial. The trio made demands regarding Lebanon but ultimately surrendered. The trio was charged with attempted murder and were to be tried in France.

Thomas Thoene: Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on June 22, 1987, and charged with setting off three bombs on August 11, 1986, at a barracks of the Federal Frontier Force in Swistal-Heimerzheim near Bonn, West Germany. On January 20, 1989, the 5th Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court found the Duisburg resident guilty of bombing the Frontier barracks and the Fraunhofer Institute for Laser Technology in Aachen in 1986. He was sentenced to 10 years. The State Prosecutor's Office was not able to prove that he was involved with the RAF.

Dominique Thomas: one of four French citizens who on October 17, 1991, were convicted by a Bayonne court of belonging to the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group (GAL), which had killed 27 alleged Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members between 1983 and 1987. The four were charged with criminal conspiracy and possession of weapons and explosives after police uncovered a GAL weapons cache near the Spanish border in 1987. He was sentenced to three years in jail.

Katie George Thomas: Iraqi Christian member of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) who was one of the hijackers of JAL 404 on July 20, 1973.

Allison Thompson: from Santa Barbara, California, age 18, arrested by Heathrow police on December 29, 1973, with two other individuals for carrying five automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. On July 16, 1974, a U.S. federal prosecutor in Los Angeles dropped charges against her of violating the Neutrality and the Firearms and Control Assistance Acts. However, on January 4, 1974, she and her accomplices were charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners. She was cleared of all charges by a British jury.

Andrew Edward Thornton: alias Sean Hick. One of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested and charged in the Netherlands with the May 27, 1990, murders by four gunmen of two vacationing 24-year-old Australian lawyers believed to be British soldiers at an Italian restaurant in Roermond. The IRA apologized for the mistake.

Fahad al Thumairy: upon arriving in Los Angeles from Frankfurt on May 6, 2003, the 31-year-old Saudi consular official was informed that his visa had been revoked in March. He was barred from returning to the United States for five years and was put on an international flight two days later. He was suspected of having links to a terrorist group. He had been at the Saudi Consulate in Los Angeles since 1996, working in the Islamic and cultural affairs section.

Alexander Detlev Tiede: hijacker of a LOT Airlines Tupolev 134 from Warsaw to East Berlin via Gdansk on August 30, 1978.

Mani' Rashid al-Tikriti: identified on October 9, 1990, by the London-based Kuwaiti newspaper al-Qabas al-Duwali as being a leader of a worldwide Iraqi terrorist network. The paper claimed that he was an aide to Barzan Ibrahim and had served as a diplomat in Rome in 1983, where he was accused of collaborating with the Red Brigades and thus was expelled. He was later seen in the United Arab Emirates, where he allegedly hired Muhammad 'Abd-al-Hamid Hasan, a Jordanian, to assassinate a Gulf state's ambassador to Kuwait.

Paolo Tilgher: on July 19, 1990, the act of association for subversion did not exist for the Bologna Assizes Appeals Court, which thus cleared him of all charges.

Ulrich Tillman: West German neo-Nazi terrorist arrested in the United Kingdom in February 1983 with Walter Kexel, who was wanted by French police for questioning about the August 9, 1982, machine-gun attack on Jo Goldenberg's Restaurant on Rue des Rosiers in the Jewish Marias Quarter in Paris. On March 15, 1985, the state protection branch of the Frankfurt higher regional court sentenced the right-wing terrorist to five years of juvenile detention for attempted murder, membership in a terrorist organization, explosives offenses, grievous bodily harm, and bank robbery in connection with the December 14–15, 1982, detonation of explosives-packed fire extinguishers that injured two U.S. soldiers near Frankfurt.

Omar al-Timimi: asylum seeker, age 37, who was convicted on July 5, 2007, in a Manchester, U.K., court for possessing terrorism training manuals, including one showing how to use gas cylinders in car bombs. He was the head of a sleeper cell and had awaited orders since arriving in the United Kingdom from the Netherlands in 2002. He was arrested in 2006 on suspicion of money laundering. Police found on his computer bomb-making instructions, videos of executions of hostages, and information on detonators and explosives. He had links with terrorists in the Netherlands and with Junade Feroze, who was convicted in June 2007 of plotting to bomb targets in the United States and United Kingdom.

Karl Tinter: one of seven anticommunist Hungarian students who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany.

Stefano Tiraboschi: on May 15, 1989, the British government announced that it had no reason to expel the member of the Italian neofascist Third Position (Terza Posizione), who had been sentenced in absentia by an Italian court on charges of participating in an armed gang. He was also suspected of involvement in the August 2, 1980, bombing of a train in Bologna in which 85 were killed and 200 injured.

Adel Tobbichi: Algerian arrested on June 21, 2002, in Montreal following a Dutch extradition request on charges of altering passports and other documents and providing them to terrorists planning to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris. He was extradited in July 2002. Dutch authorities earlier had arrested two French citizens in the plot. Rotterdam prosecutors connected Tobbichi's case to another in which wiretaps linked Jerome Courtailler and Mohammed Berkous, both age 27, to Nizar Trabelsi, the would-be suicide bomber, who was under arrest in Belgium. Tobbichi was acquitted on December 18, 2002, by a Rotterdam court on charges of planning attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Paris but was turned over to immigration authorities.

Francesco Tolino: one of several members of the Union of Communist Fighters of the Italian Red Brigades arrested in Paris on June 15, 1987. He had been living in France under an alias for several years. On November 7, 1987, he was expelled to Spain.

Raffaello Tolomei: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany police. He was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Peter Torbjornsson: Swedish television newsman arrested on March 12, 1985, for the May 30, 1984, bombing of a press conference in Nicaragua by Eden Pastora, leader of the anti-Sandinista Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, in which 8 people were killed and 22 injured. His daughter was also arrested.

Sergio Tornasghi: Italian Red Brigades fugitive arrested in Paris on February 15, 1985. He was given a life sentence in absentia by a Milan court in December 1984.

Hugh Torney: Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) leader whose detention was ordered by an Irish court on April 5, 1995. He was arrested when police stopped an INLA van on a road to Belfast by firing stun grenades. Police found 6 assault rifles, 20 handguns—many packed with their user manuals—and 2,000 rounds of ammunition.

Carlos La Torre Cardenas: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began his extradition proceedings from Sweden on terrorism charges.

Gisela La Torre Carrasco: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began her extradition proceedings from Sweden on terrorism charges.

Pilar de la Torre: one of nine members of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on October 1, 1987, by Spanish police. Police seized 6 machine guns, grenade launchers, mortars, and more than 100 kilograms of ammonal, an explosive often used in ETA car bombs.

Luis Torres Rojas: major general held in prison for organizing an abortive February 23, 1981, coup attempt. His release was demanded by 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. He refused to leave.

Mario Ines Torres: Spaniard and alleged former member of the antifascist Grupo de Accion Revolucionaria Internacionalists (GARI) whose extradition was requested of Finland by Spain on January 11, 1988. He was charged with murder. He had arrived in Finland in August 1987 without a passport and applied for political asylum. In December his asylum request was rejected, and he was imprisoned. He had been imprisoned but pardoned in 1981 on charges of GARI membership. In 1984 he was again arrested and released on bail pending trial, but he disappeared. On March 11, 1988, Finnish justice minister Matti Louekoski said Finland would deport him to Spain.

Davide Toschi: sailor and one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany police. He was charged with possessing explosives.

Ali Ben Sassi Toumi: variant Ali Ben Sassi Touri. On January 24, 2005, Judge Maria Clementina Forleo dropped terrorism charges against three Tunisians and two Moroccans, including Toumi, in a decision that differentiated between guerrillas and terrorists according to her reading of the 1999 UN Global Convention on Terrorism. She indicated that their actions in recruiting for and financing training camps in the Iraq war zone did not create civilian terror or break international humanitarian law and as such were guerilla in nature, not terrorist, and could not be prosecuted. Prosecutors said they would appeal. Toumi received a three-year sentence for arranging false documents and illegal immigration. The judge's decision was reversed by higher courts in 2007 based on the terrorist nature of the crime rather than its milieu or intended effect. Toumi was sentenced to six years.

Vlastimil Toupalik: one of two Czech hijackers of a Czech YAK40 flying to Prague from Karlovy Vary (formerly Carlsbad) on October 11, 1977.

Marie-Therese Tourreuil: one of four French Basque militants arrested on December 12, 1988, by Bayonne, France, police. Police did not release the charges.

Nizar Trabelsi: variant of Nizar Trabelzi.

Nizar Trabelzi: on September 13, 2001, Belgian police arrested the Tunisian former professional soccer player believed to have links to al Qaeda. Police seized from his apartment a submachine gun, ammunition, and chemical formulas for making explosives. Spain said he was in contact with six Algerian members of the Salafist Group for Call and Combat who had been arrested during the week. He had a longer criminal record and was linked to an individual arrested on the same day in the Netherlands. The group, also known as the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, was a dissident faction of Algeria's Armed Islamic Group. Trabelzi was in Spain at the same time as 9/11 hijacker Muhammad Atta, although there was no public evidence about whom Atta had contacted. Trabelsi was accused of planning to walk into the U.S. Embassy in Paris with a bomb taped to his chest. Spanish police said they had seized equipment for faking documents. The group may have furnished passports, plane tickets, and credit cards to Islamic radicals. Spain also seized three pair of night-vision binoculars, a diary in which the writer said he wanted to be a suicide bomber, and videos showing Taliban attacks in Afghanistan. Similar charges were made on November 18 following another raid by Spanish police in which they found videos of attacks in Chechnya.

On September 30, 2003, he was convicted of planning to bomb the NATO base at Kleine Brogel and was sentenced to a decade in prison. He had admitted to planning to drive a car bomb into the cafeteria at Kleine Brogel, the Belgian air base believed to house U.S. nuclear weapons and guarded by 100 U.S. troops. He said he intended to kill U.S. soldiers, not detonate the warheads. He said he had met Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan.

On December 21, 2007, Belgian police arrested 14 people allegedly seeking to forcibly free him.

Begona Trasvina: variant Trevino. One of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989. She was accompanied by her four-month-old daughter, whom she had with Juan Miguel Bardezi (alias Juan Miguel Barbesi Torres or Trevino), who was also expelled.

Begona Trevino: variant of Begona Trasvina.

Laura Trevisano: suspected Italian Red Brigades member arrested by Barcelona police on April 25, 1987, at one of two apartments in the Gran Via de las Corts Catalanas on Planeta Street. She was released on May 5, 1987, by Madrid police for lack of evidence.

Enrico Triaca: on January 3, 1980, Rome's public prosecutor charged him with crimes connected to the ambush that resulted in the Red Brigades kidnapping and killing on March 16, 1978, of former premier Aldo Moro and the slaying of his five-man escort. On January 15, 1981, he and 14 other Red Brigades members were arraigned on charges of kidnapping and murdering Aldo Moro.

Antonio Troitino: arrested on January 16, 1987, during Spanish police raids that broke up the Madrid Commando of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military. The group was planning an attack on Vice Admiral Julio Alberto Ferrero and was linked with 25 murders and injuries to 87 other people in the preceding 18 months. Three of the terrorists had French residence permits. Troitino's brother, Domingo, was arrested on September 5, 1987.

Domingo Troitino Arranz: one of three members of the Barcelona Command of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested on September 5, 1987, by Barcelona police at a safe house, Apartment 2 on Mallorca Street. His brother, Antonio, was arrested on January 16, 1987. He was sentenced on October 23, 1989, to 1,588 years in prison for the car bomb attack on June 19, 1987, that killed 21 people and injured 45 in a Barcelona department store.

Ignacio Trula Larranaga: suspected member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military from Zarauz, Guipuzcoa, who on August 24, 1987, was handed over to Spanish authorities by France at the Iran border. Police believed he had hidden ETA members in his home over the last three years.

Tsanikidhis: Greek, age 30, who on November 8, 1994, hijacked an Olympic Airways B737 on the Duesseldorf–Thessaloniki–Athens route over Belgrade. The plane landed at Makedhonia Airport in Thessaloniki. He was overpowered by antiterrorism police.

Vicken Tscharkhutian: Iraqi arrested on June 6, 1982, at Orly Airport in Paris for complicity in a Swiss bank bombing and the May 30, 1982, placement of a bomb at the Air Canada freight terminal at Los Angeles International Airport. On August 18, 1982, the Paris Appeals Court recommended against extradition of the member of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia.

David Tserkes: Russian emigrant resident in Israel arrested in Venice, Italy, in the 1990s, when his Opel was found to contain three kilograms of TNT, several detonators, several slow-burning fuses, and other bomb-making paraphernalia. He had arrived from Haifa on the Apollonia, a Greek ship, and was on his way to Munich, Germany.

Younis Tsouli: a Moroccan living in London, Internet screen alias Irhabi007, who served as a cyberterrorist for al Qaeda. In 2004, he posted a video of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi beheading American contractor Nicholas Berg in Iraq. He later broke into the servers of the Arkansas Highway Department and distributed al-Zarqawi's videos. He was also in contact with Syed Haris Ahmed, a Pakistani American, and Ehsanul Islam Sadequee, a Bangladeshi American, both of Atlanta, who in March 2005 met with Canadian extremists in Toronto to explore attacking military bases and oil refineries. They gave him a video of potential U.S. targets, including fuel storage tanks on Interstate 95 near Lorton, Virginia; World Bank headquarters; the Pentagon; and the George Washington Masonic Memorial in Alexandria, Virginia. He was the administrator of the jihadi forum Muntada al-Ansar al-Islami, which had served as the propaganda outlet of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi.

British authorities raided his apartment in West London in October 2005. He was logged on to youbombit.r8.org using his identity IRH007. On October 21, 2005, British police seized his hard drive, which included photos of Washington locations and a chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear (CBRN) vehicle. He was charged with possessing other computer slides showing how to make a car bomb and with conspiring with fellow detainee Wassem Mughal, age 22, to cause explosions in the United Kingdom and with Tariq al-Daour, age 19, to commit credit card fraud.

Tsouli and Mughal were charged with conspiracy to murder and to cause an explosion. Prosecutors said they ran Web sites that linked terrorists in Denmark, Bosnia, Iraq, the United States, and the United Kingdom. The sites included beheading videos. One of their laptops included a PowerPoint presentation titled The Illustrated Booby Trapping Course, which included instructions on how to create a suicide vest loaded with ball bearings. Tsouli had been asked by al Qaeda to translate into English its e-book The Tip of the Camel's Hump. The trio also stole data for hundreds of credit cards, which they used to purchase supplies for operatives, and laundered money through 350 transactions at 43 Internet gambling sites, including absolutepoker.com, betfair.com, betonbet.com, canbet.com, eurobet.com, noblepoker.com, and paradisepoker.com, using 130 credit card accounts. Tsouli and his colleagues had made more than $3.5 million in fraudulent charges for GPS devices, night-vision goggles, sleeping bags, telephones, survival knives, hundreds of prepaid cell phones, tents, and more than 250 airline tickets using 110 different credit cards at 46 airline and travel agencies. They used 72 credit card accounts to register more than 180 domains at 95 Web hosting firms in the United States and Europe. Al-Daour's computer contained 37,000 stolen credit card numbers. On July 5, 2007, a London court sentenced Tsouli to 10 years after he pleaded guilty to inciting murder on the Internet. He is the son of a Moroccan diplomat.

Fried Tufail: Baader-Meinhof Group member whose release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe.

Gerard Tuite: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member convicted in Ireland in mid-May 1982 on charges under a 1976 Irish law aimed at prosecuting terrorist offenses committed in the United Kingdom.

Viveca Turcson: Dane arrested on June 30, 1983, for links with the Shining Path in Peru. She was turned over to the Danish Embassy in Lima on July 5, 1983.

Waddud al Turk: arrest warrant was issued after detectives of the Italian UCIGOC antiterrorist squad on July 31, 1990, identified the Abu Nidal member as an organizer of the October 25, 1984, terrorist attack in which the secretary of the United Arab Emirates Embassy in Italy was wounded and a woman companion slain. He was in custody in Pakistan after an attempted aerial hijacking.

Jose Luis Turrillas Arancenta: sentenced on Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) terrorism charges on January 13, 2003, by a Paris court to nine years in prison.

Mario Tuti: one of the accused bombers of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189. He escaped from prison but was recaptured. On July 20, 1983, he was found innocent of involvement in a 1974 train bombing that killed 12 and injured 48. The 20-month trial ended on grounds of insufficient evidence. This was the second trial of suspects in the bombing that ended in acquittal.

Henri Tutuzan: alias of Hagop Hagopian.

Txabi: one of six Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) gunmen who assassinated Spanish Premier Luis Carrero Blanco in Madrid on December 20, 1973, by placing a bomb in the street in which his car was driving.

Txapela: alias of Manuel Murua Alberdi.

Txelis: alias of Jose Luis Alvarez Santacristina.

Txema: alias of Jesus Maria Olabarrieta Olabarrieta.

Txema: alias of Jose-Maria Bereciartua Echarri.

Txikierdi: alias of Juan Lasa Mitxelena.

Txmin: alias of Domingo Iturbe Abasolo.

Txomin: alias of Domingo Iturbe Abasolo.

U

---

Jose Maris Uarte Irujo: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member from Pamplona arrested by French police near St. Pee-sur-Nivelle on April 25, 1987, and turned over to Spanish authorities.

Muhammad ‘Ubayd: one of the five Guards of Islam gunmen who failed in an assassination attempt against Shapour Bakhtiar, the shah’s last prime minister, in Neuilly-sur-Seine, France, on July 17, 1980.

Numan Ucar: Kurdistan Workers’ Party (PKK) militant whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Mohammed Shamin Uddin: British citizen, age 35, charged on August 29, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and with helping to plan to smuggle explosives on board aircraft in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. The next hearing was scheduled for September 18.

Abuzer Ugurlu: Turkish criminal reportedly involved in smuggling for Bulgarians whom the Italian press claimed on December 7, 1982, had served as a link between Mehmud Ali Agca and the Bulgarians in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. Ugurlu was in jail by 1982.

Feridun Ugurlu: bomber in the November 20, 2003, attack on the British Consulate in Turkey in which 17 died.

Jussef Uhida: Libyan arrested after three gunmen killed Abdel Belil Aref, a wealthy Libyan businessman, as he was dining at the Café du Paris on the Via Veneto in Rome on April 18, 1980. On October 6, 1986, the Italian government announced that for “humanitarian motives,” it had freed three convicted Libyan gunmen, including Uhida, in exchange for four Italians who had been held in Libya for the preceding six years. A Red Cross plane for the Libyans flew to Tripoli and returned with the Italians. Uhida had been serving a 26-year sentence for Aref’s murder.

Shipon Ullah: one of three men arrested on March 22, 2007, by British police for possible involvement in the 7/7 London subway bombings in 2005. On July 5, 2007, British authorities charged the trio with conspiring with the bombers between November 1, 2004, and June 29, 2005, saying they handled reconnaissance and planning.

Ziyad al-’Umar: on November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the Palestine Liberation Front member in connection with the hijacking of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. The hijackers killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. The hijacking ended in Egypt. He purchased the cruise tickets for the terrorists. On May 11, 1988, Italy’s Supreme Court of Cassation confirmed an appeals court’s in absentia life sentence for murder and kidnapping.

Fakhri al-Umari: alias Abu Mohammed Omari, alias Mohammed Fakr Omari. Abu Daoud claimed that he had met with him in Sofia in August 1972 to plan the Black September Olympics attack of September 5, 1972. He was assassinated by a Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) body-guard armed with an AK-47 on January 15, 1991.

Husayn Umari: alias Abu Ibrahim. Iraqi for whom an international arrest warrant was issued in connection with the bombing in Orchard Street in London on December 25, 1983, near Marks and Spencer and Selfridges. He was believed to be living in South Yemen. His trial opened on December 13, 1989.

Muhamad al-'Umari: alias Abu Ibrahim. Engineer who founded the May 15 terrorist group in 1979. He developed a moldable explosive that was believed to have been used in the Pan American Flight 103 bombing in December 21, 1988, that killed 270 and the UTA 772 bombing of September 19, 1989, that killed 171.

Kasim Unal: imam of the Sochaux mosque who was expelled from France in August 1994. He was a member of the Anatolian Federal Islamic State, a radical fundamentalist movement.

Karola Unterkircher: arrested on August 15, 1994, on the Italian–Austrian Rombo pass. She was sentenced to 12 years in prison, remitted to 10 years, for her part in a series of terrorist attacks carried out in South Tirol in the 1980s by the Ein Tirol group. She was the companion of Karl Ausserer, the brains behind the group.

Kemen Uranga Artola: one of 21 individuals added by the U.S. Treasury on February 26, 2002, to the list of terrorist financiers at the request of the Spanish government. All had aided Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA).

Jose Maria Urdampilleta Goenaga: Basque held in France on charges of armed robbery and illegal possession of arms and ammunition. In November 1988, he held a hunger strike to attempt to avoid extradition. On December 16, 1988, France announced that it would extradite to Spain two Basques believed to have committed terrorist acts for Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA). The press speculated that he was one of the two, whose extradition was endorsed by an appeals court.

Eduardo Uriarte: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced to death by a five-man military tribunal on December 28, 1970, for involvement in the assassination of Meliton Manzanas, chief of the political police in Guipuzcoa Province, in 1968. He was also sentenced to death for banditry. The death sentences were commuted, possibly due to an agreement between President Franco and the kidnappers of Eugen Beihl, the Honorary West German Consul in San Sebastian, who was kidnapped on December 1, 1970. Uriarte was ordered to pay a $14,285 indemnity to Manzanas's widow. Franco's order changed the death sentence to a 30-year term. Uriarte was freed in a general amnesty in 1977. As of 2007, he was a peace activist.

Ignacio Alberi Urquia: member of the Autonomous Anti-Capitalist Commandos, a Basque extremist group, who was handed by the police of Pau, France, to Spanish authorities at the border town of Hendaye on September 11, 1986. He had ended a one-year prison term on charges of breaching house arrest regulations.

Kepa Urria: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in the Basque country in January 1992 who had received logistical support from Moreno Ramajo and Raquel Garcia Arranz, arrested on June 14, 1993, in Vilvoorde-Koningslo, Belgium.

Miguel Urriz-Dustorne: Basque member of the Autonomous Anti-Capitalist Commandos who was handed over to Spanish authorities by French police on October 10, 1986, upon his release from a Bayonne prison where he had served three months for violating a house arrest order.

Jose Luis Urrusolo Sistaiga: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military members identified by eyewitnesses as the assassins in Madrid on February 6, 1986, of Vice Admiral Colon de Carvajal and his driver, Miguel Trigo. On March 29, 1992, Spanish police believed he was vying to become the next leader of ETA–Military. On April 19, 1995, the former leader of ETA’s Madrid Commando became the prime suspect in a car bombing on Arturo Soria Street in Madrid that injured opposition People’s Party Chairman Jose Maria Aznar and 11 other people.

Juan Jose Urrutia Pia: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. A Uruguayan lower court denied his extradition. The decision was appealed before a higher court and was upheld on March 16, 1994, by an appeals court. He was released, although he was still charged with use of false documents.

Jose Antonio Urrutikoetxea: alias Josu Ternera. Founder of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested by Bayonne, France, antiterrorist police on January 11, 1989. He shot at officers as they moved to apprehend him and was found carrying a hand grenade. Madrid requested extradition.

Juan Antonio Urrutxua Zedareta: alleged member of Basque Nation and Liberty’s (ETA) Bosturia Commando, which murdered a civil guardsman. He was arrested on October 3, 1987, in a police sweep of southwestern France and was expelled.

Daniel Urtizberea: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested by French authorities in St. Jean-de-Lux on March 11, 1988.

Jihad Muhammad ‘Uthman: on October 25, 1984, he fired at Muhammad al-Sudiyah, United Arab Emirates vice consul in Rome, killing Nushin Montaseri, an Iranian student, and injuring al-Sudiyah. The Jordanian later was arrested and confessed. The Arab Revolutionary Brigades took credit.

Omar Uthman Abu Omar: variant Omar Mahmoud Mohammed Othman; alias Abu Qatada. Jordan-born (some reports say he was born in Bethlehem in 1960) Palestinian Islamic cleric, age 44 in 2005, involved in the European operations of al Qaeda and accused of inspiring the 3/11 Madrid train bombers (2004). British officials arrested him in October 2002, in a raid on his hideout in London. He had been underground since December 2001. He was wanted for questioning in France, Spain, Italy, and Germany for recruiting for al Qaeda in Europe. He had been convicted and sentenced to life in prison in absentia by Jordan for a plot to bomb tourist sites and an American school. He also conducted prayer meetings attended by shoe bomber Richard Reid and Zacarias Moussaoui. French judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere said Abu Qatada laundered money and planned and financed attacks throughout Europe. Spanish judge Baltasar Garzon said he was a contact between al Qaeda and Abu Dahdah, a Spanish-based terrorist suspect, and with terrorists in Germany, France, Italy, and Belgium. Hamburg authorities had found tapes by Abu Qatada in 9/11 hijack leader Mohammad Atta’s last known apartment. Abu Qatada had been given asylum in the United Kingdom in 1994 after fleeing Jordan. But his travel documents were seized, assets frozen, and $600 weekly welfare payments suspended in October 2001 after it was determined that he had an unexplained $270,000 in his bank account. He had expressed admiration for Osama bin Laden in interviews.

On March 11, 2005, after the British Parliament passed the government’s antiterrorism law, a special immigration appeals judge freed eight terrorism suspects, including Abu Qatada. The eight foreign citizens had been held without charge or trial for up to three and one-half years. Their freedom, however, included nighttime curfews, electronic tagging, regular searches of their homes, and a ban on the use of cell phones and computers. British authorities detained him on August 11, 2005. He was expected to be deported to Jordan.

On February 26, 2007, a special immigration court ruled that he faced no abuse if deported to Jordan. Jordan had twice convicted him in absentia and sentenced him to life in prison for plotting to bomb U.S. and Jewish sites. After two and one-half years in London's Belmarsh Prison, he was released under "control orders," a form of house arrest. He was represented by attorney Gareth Peirce, who planned to appeal.

His release was demanded by the Palestinian gunmen who on March 12, 2007, kidnapped BBC reporter Alan Johnston in Gaza City.

On April 9, 2008, a three-judge panel of the Court of Appeals for England and Wales denied deportation, saying there were reasonable grounds to believe that Jordan would jail him for life. An immigration appeals commission ordered the release of the "godfather of Londonistan" on May 8, 2008.

On June 18, 2008, Home Secretary Jacqui Smith appealed, to the House of Lords, a British tribunal's granting of bail to Abu Qatada the previous day. He was fitted with an electronic monitoring tag; had to remain at home 22 hours per day; could be visited only by his wife, children, legal representative, emergency services personnel, and children younger than 10 without formal permission; could not associate with 22 individuals, including Osama bin Laden, Ayman al-Zawahiri, and jailed British cleric Abu Hamza; could not use a cell phone, computer, fax machine, or any electronic storage device; could have only one bank account; had to provide authorities with monthly bank statements; could not send money or goods outside the United Kingdom; could not attend any mosque; could not preach, lead prayer, or give religious instruction to anyone but his wife and children; and could not publish any document or statement without prior approval.

Omar Mahmoud Uthman: alias Abu Qatada al-Filistini. A senior agent for Osama bin Laden in Europe, possibly located in London. His U.S. assets were ordered frozen on October 12, 2001.

Conrado Utrera-Diaz: Basque arrested on October 22, 1987, in Paris with a Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader and facing expulsion to Spain under emergency measures to combat terrorism.

Leandro Utrera Diez: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member from San Sebastian arrested at a Cibourne police checkpoint on April 25, 1987, by French police and turned over to Spanish authorities later in the day.

Roberto Utrilla: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member from Ortuella, Vizcaya Province, arrested by Bayonne, France, police on September 22, 1989, and handed over to Spanish security forces two days later. In 1986, he had been ordered to leave French territory.

V

---

Helene Vachier: suspected member of Direct Action arrested by Paris train station police on August 9, 1987, on returning to France after living in Denmark for several months. She was later released.

Milena Vacirca: one of three suspected Red Brigades members arrested on June 6, 1987, by Florence police for subversive association and participation in an armed band.

Ali Rad Vakili: Iranian briefly detained by French police, who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapour Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He and an associate had tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports in the names of Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas. On August 14, the People's Mujahedeen exile group said he was a member of the Al Qoods (Jerusalem) Force, a terrorist unit in the Iranian Revolutionary Guard. Paris AFP reported on August 16 that he had escaped detection at a Geneva hotel because the local police computer had broken down, preventing an identity check of the man who had checked into the Hotel Windsor as Musa Kocer. Police missed the arrest by three hours. However, Geneva police arrested him on August 21 as he was walking on a beach before dawn. He was extradited to France on August 27 and charged in Paris with murder and criminal association in connection with terrorism. On December 6, 1994, a Paris terrorism court convicted him and sentenced him to life in prison.

Vincente Valda: one of four alleged members of Irritxi, a subgroup of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military, arrested on May 17, 1986, in the Inchaurreondo neighborhood in San Sebastian, Spain, on suspicion of machine-gun attacks against French trucks. Police found 25 kilograms of Goma-2, two submachine guns, pistols, watches, detonators, wigs, and other items.

Christobal Valencuela-Barcos: one of 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. French police said he and his brother were wanted for six holdups in 1980 that netted $300,000.

Jose Valencuela-Barcos: one of 11 rightists who seized 200 hostages in Barcelona's Banco Central on May 23, 1981. French police said he and his brother were wanted for six holdups in 1980 that netted $300,000.

Bertan Valentino: Italian believed to be an Iraqi detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. He and six Iranian Hizballah members had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing but would be deported to Iran through Bogota and Caracas. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Enrico Villimburgo: Paris police arrested him on September 23, 1988. He was charged on September 26, 1988, with possession and use of false documents by French magistrates. Italy requested extradition. He was believed to be a member of the Italian Red Brigades.

Robert Vamos: one of six hijackers of a Romanian Tarom IL14 flying from Oradea to Bucharest on May 27, 1971.

Daniel van Arb: Swiss, age 23, who went on trial on September 19, 1977, in Winterthur, Switzerland, on charges of stealing weapons from army depots and passing them to urban terrorists in West Germany, France, Italy, and Spain. He was also accused of carrying out bomb attacks on diplomatic and business premises in Zurich between 1971 and 1974.

Abbott Van Backer: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Marc Van Dam: one of two Belgians arrested on March 15, 1991, by Colombian security forces in Barranquilla for involvement in at least four armed robberies and the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnapping on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. They were also affiliates of Medellin cocaine cartel leader Pablo Escobar. They apparently had signed up as mercenaries for the cartel, which was reconstituting its terrorist infrastructure. They had entered through Brazil four months before their arrests after leaving Belgium. They each had a dozen faked national ID cards with different aliases, $170,000 in cash—which they offered the arresting officers—and several telephone numbers of cartel members in Medellin. They were to be returned to Belgium on March 21, 1991, on a special Belgian military plane.

Elisabeth van Dyck: wanted in connection with arms thefts and named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977.

Guido Luciaan van Hecken: Belgian named as one of five white communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. He fled to the Motlana Institute in Maputo, Mozambique, where he was a lecturer.

Cornelis Van Hout: arrested in Paris on February 29, 1984, and later extradited to the Netherlands on suspicion of involvement in the November 9, 1983, abduction in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, of Alfred Heineken and his chauffeur.

Pascale Vandegeerde: one of four ringleaders of the Communist Combatant Cells arrested on December 16, 1985, in a fast-food restaurant in Belgium. On January 14, 1986, they were charged with the attempted murder of the night watchman at the Brussels-Lambert Bank, which had been bombed on November 4, 1985.

Michel Vander Elst: lawyer of Patrick Haemers, alleged leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. Vander Elst was arrested on March 24, 1989, on suspicion of masterminding the abduction. He was held after nine hours of questioning on charges of being the “author, coauthor or an accomplice in the kidnap” as well as on charges of extortion and forgery.

Vanzi: at-large member of the Red Brigades sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 26-plus years for the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

Mikhail Varfolomeyev: on June 24, 1990, hijacked an Aeroflot TU-134 on an internal flight from Tallinn, Estonia, to Lvov, Ukraine, and diverted it to Helsinki, Finland, where he surrendered to police and requested asylum.

Vaslo Vargas: Hungarian deserter from the French Foreign Legion who was one of the Organization of the Secret Army (OAS) members who machine-gunned French President de Gaulle’s car in the Paris suburb of Petit-Clamart on August 22, 1962. Vargas was sentenced to life in prison but was released in 1967 under an amnesty. He died on August 14, 1976, during an abortive holdup on a suburban Paris post office.

Jose Varona Lopez: alleged member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) expelled by France to Spain on July 18, 1986, near Hendaye. He had been arrested a few hours earlier in Saint-Jean-de-Luz.

M. Vasques: alias used by one of two members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who hijacked TWA 741, a B707 flying from Frankfurt to New York, on September 6, 1970.

Jelio Kolev Vassiliev: variants Zelio, Zhelyo, Vasilev, Vasiley. Former secretary to Bulgaria’s military attaché in Rome. On December 4, 1982, Italy issued an arrest warrant for him in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He had returned to Bulgaria six months earlier. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa’s car during his January 1981 visit to Rome. On March 29, 1986, Judge Severino Santiapichi announced that the Rome jury had acquitted the Bulgarian on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope because of insufficient evidence.

Gilbert Vecchi: roofer for a public works company arrested by Fresnes, France, police on December 3, 1986, and charged with “complicity in assassination and attempted assassination” and with “destruction of personal and real property belonging to others through the effect of an explosive substance which caused the death.” He allegedly assisted Max Frerot, believed to be the leader of the Direct Action bomb attack on the police anti-crime squad on July 7, 1986, which killed an inspector and injured three other policemen.

Janos Veizer: one of six hijackers of a Romanian Tarom IL14 flying from Oradea to Bucharest on May 27, 1971.

Veli: charged on May 7, 1990, by the West German Federal Prosecutor’s Office in Karlsruhe with membership in the Kurdistan Workers’ Party (PKK). He was believed to be a member of the PKK’s European central committee. He reportedly brought about “people’s court proceedings” against a former PKK functionary and, with others, physically maltreated him during interrogations. Veli had been in investigative custody in September 21, 1989.

Natalino Christopher Francis Vella: on June 24, 1984, the Ireland resident was charged with plotting the December 17, 1983, car bombing of Harrods in London that killed 6 and injured 90.

Arsenio Veloz: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curacao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Carla Vendetti: one of five members of the Italian Red Brigades–Communist Combatant Party offshoot arrested in Paris on September 2, 1989. Police discovered arms and leaflets claiming responsibility for attacks and plans for more attacks in Italy. Two men and two women were arrested in the Faubourg St. Antoine District of central Paris, and another man was arrested at a hotel in the Grands Boulevards area. A fifth suspect was arrested later at the hotel. She was suspected to be a mastermind of the combatants and was in contact with French and West German terrorists.

Ventura: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curacao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Bruno Ventura: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany police. He was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Giovanni Ventura: released on August 1, 1985, after a six-plus-month trial as a result of insufficient evidence on charges of organizing a terrorist attack on a Milan bank on December 12, 1969, that left 16 dead and 87 injured. On July 5, 1986, Italy requested Ventura's extradition from Paraguay along with several other Italian fugitives. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs. In April 1987, neofascist terrorist Stefano Delle Chiaie told an Italian court that he had helped Ventura escape to Latin America.

Jean-Martin Verdi: one of two Corsican nationalist activists held on November 12, 1987, for questioning in Bastia regarding the murder of gendarme Guy Aznar.

Ignacio Lopez de Vergara Astola: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member who had been deported from Venezuela and was turned over to Spanish police by French officials on November 3, 1987.

Pavel Verner: junior executive for a Czech uranium plant who hijacked a twin-engine private executive plane flying from Pribram to Kosice, Czechoslovakia, on May 5, 1970.

Emiliano Viana Balda: one of five suspected members of the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) armed illegal commando Aizkora arrested on October 23, 1987, by Spanish police.

Ruzena Vickova: one of two Czech hijackers of a Czech YAK40 flying to Prague from Karlovy Vary (formerly Carlsbad) on October 11, 1977.

Stejpan Vidovic: Yugoslav émigré detained in West Germany on November 11, 1978, after attacking several Yugoslav citizens in Konstanz, killing one and wounding two.

Inge Viett: escaped from West Berlin's prison on July 7, 1976. She had been held for the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. She was a former kindergarten teacher and leader of the Movement 2 June. She had been arrested in September 1975. Her release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe. She was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. She was a member of the Movement 2 June until 1979, when she joined the Red Army Faction (RAF). On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the “hard core” of RAF members. She was arrested in East Germany on June 12, 1990, and extradited to the West. She was wanted for the 1972 bombing that killed a man at a boating facility in Berlin, the 1974 murder of Berlin Supreme Court President Guenter von Drenkmann, and the Lorenz kidnapping. Her neighbors in Magdeburg notified authorities after seeing West German wanted posters. She was charged in Koblenz on June 3, 1991, with membership in the RAF and with attempted murder in the attack on General Haig and in the shooting of a French policeman in August 1981 while being chased for a traffic violation in Paris. The policeman was paralyzed from his wounds.

Laurent Vigneron: French citizen initially identified by the Greek Merchant Marine Ministry as one of three terrorists who on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98 (most reports said killing 9 and injuring 80). On January 10, 1989, the public prosecutor in Piraeus ruled there was no evidence that Vigneron had participated in the attack. The family’s lawyer planned to bring a defamation suit.

Kepa Viles Escobar: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Aleksandr Vilesov: claiming to have a bomb, on November 15, 1990, he hijacked an Aeroflot TU-134 flying from Leningrad to Moscow and diverted it to Helsinki’s Vanta Airport, where he surrendered and requested political asylum. On January 24, 1991, Finland denied asylum. On February 21, 1991, the Finnish Supreme Court agreed to extradition. On February 28, 1991, he was handed over to Soviet authorities at the Trofianovka border crossing near Vyborg. Tass said he would be tried in court soon.

Ruggero Violinia: was sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to two years and two months for involvement in the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier. Violinia had assisted police in dismantling the Red Brigades’ Venetian Column.

Michele Viscardi: leader of the Italian Front Line arrested on October 13, 1980, in Sorrento. He had assumed leadership from Corrado Alunni, arrested in September 1978 in the Moro kidnapping.

Marco de Vittorio: member of the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei who on May 2, 1985, was sentenced by a Rome court to 18 years and 2 months for a series of murders, attempted murders, bombings, and assaults between 1977 and 1981.

Mark Vlasic: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their propaganda leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. They surrendered in Paris and were immediately extradited to the United States. On May 12, 1977, a New York Supreme Court justice sentenced Vlasic to 6 to 30 years after he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of attempted kidnapping.

Andreas-Thomas Vogel: his release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers’ association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany’s most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On September 28, 1977, the West German federal prosecutor’s office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and for kidnapping Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978. On February 5, 1985, he ended his prison hunger strike.

Helmut Voigt: former East German Stasi colonel arrested by Greek police on September 6, 1992, while carrying a German passport that had been issued to Alfred Herman. He was wanted in more than 10 countries and was believed responsible for the December 1975 attack on OPEC headquarters in Vienna, Austria, led by Carlos. German authorities wanted to extradite him for his part in the Maison de France bombing. Greek authorities said they would extradite him as soon as he was tried for traveling on a false passport, for which he faced eight months in jail. In April 1994, he was sentenced to four years as an accessory to murder and to the bombing in August 25, 1983, of the Maison de France French cultural center in Berlin, in which 1 person died and 22 were injured. He had been accused of arranging for 25 kilograms of explosives to be handed over to Red Army Faction terrorist Johannes Weinrich.

Frederick von Haltazan: named on a false passport carried by Rudolph Piroh, one of four self-proclaimed “professional revolutionaries” arrested by Parma police on February 20, 1979, carrying a time bomb and other weapons in their car.

Ulrich Juengen Von Hof: East German automobile mechanic, age 19, who was one of two hijackers of a Polish Lot Ilyushin 18 flying the Warsaw–East Berlin–Brussels run on October 19, 1969, that was diverted to West Berlin’s Tegel Airport in the French sector.

Count Ekkehard Freiherr von Seckendorf-Gudent: alias of Horst Winter.

Jaroslav Vydra: one of three people who brandished a broken pistol on June 2, 1958, and forced the pilot of a domestic Czechoslovakian general aviation charter plane to fly to Vienna, Austria. The trio was arrested for extortion under threats, but the charges were dropped on June 6, 1958.

W

---

Christopher Wackernagel: wanted for bombing attacks and named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. On November 10, 1977, the former actor was injured in Amsterdam during a police attempt to arrest him and Gert Richard Schneider. The extradition trial was set for January 12, 1978. On September 5, 1980, he was sentenced in West Germany to five years in prison for attempted murder in a December 1977 shootout in the Netherlands.

Ralf Wadman: Swedish Web master who changed his name to Abu Usama el-Swede. He was arrested in Sweden in 2006 for recruiting Islamist fighters on the Internet.

Rolf Clemens Wagner: wanted for bombing attacks in West Germany and in connection with the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. He was suspected of being the driver of the van used in the getaway in the Schleyer case. He was also one of four terrorists arrested in Yugoslavia in May 1978 who were later released in a dispute over extradition of Croatian terrorists. After a shootout in Switzerland on November 19, 1979, in which a female passerby was killed and two policemen and a woman were injured, Wagner was arrested as he sat quietly, awaiting a train. On September 26, 1980, a Swiss court sentenced him to life in prison for murder and attempted murder during a Zurich bank holdup 10 months earlier. On October 7, 1982, the Swiss agreed to extradite him, but he was to eventually return to Switzerland to serve out his life sentence. If convicted in West Germany, he would be sent back to West Germany—if he was paroled early in Switzerland—to serve any sentence imposed for the Schleyer kidnapping and murder. On March 13, 1985, the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court sentenced him to two life sentences for the Schleyer murder. In November 1993, he was sentenced again to life for the June 1979 attack to kill NATO commander in chief Alexander Haig.

Abdul Waheed: originally named Don Stewart-Whyte, age 21, who lived in Hepplewhite Close, High Wycombe, and who was arrested in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day.

Adman Waki: Syrian, age 28, arrested on December 28, 2004, by Spanish police in Irun near the French border in connection with the 3/11

Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

Saad ad-Din Wali: name on a forged Iraqi passport used by Black September leader Abu Daoud when he traveled to Sofia in 1972 to buy arms for Fatah. He was credited with planning the September 1972 Munich Olympics massacre. He was arrested in February 1973 in Amman, Jordan. He would figure prominently in a 1977 extradition squabble between Israel, West Germany, and France.

Khalid bin Walid: name signed by the Red Swords in death threat letters against U.K. ambassador Kelvin K. White and his staff dated March 11, 1989, and sent to the embassies of West Germany, France, and the Netherlands on March 23, 1989. The threats came from concerns regarding publication of Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses.

John Walker: on March 14, 1991, a three-judge London appeals court threw out his conviction of involvement in Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bombings.

Les Walker: Briton sentenced on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that slightly injured his wife. A second car bomb on November 22, 2000, injured two men and a woman, all British citizens. He initially admitted the charges but later recanted. The Saudis freed and deported him on August 8, 2003.

Jason Walters: alias Jamal. One of two individuals arrested on November 10, 2004, in a raid on a Hague apartment after a 14-hour standoff during which the duo threw a grenade that wounded three police officers. A SWAT team shot Walters in the shoulder and arrested the duo. Jermaine Walters, age 17, his brother, was also arrested. The duo had converted to Islam. Jason, age 19, had trained to be a terrorist in 2003 in a Pakistani camp and was a member of the Hofstad Network, a group influenced by al Qaeda whose members included the assassin of van Gogh. Police later determined that the cell planned to kill Dutch leaders. The duo was held for the attempted murder of policemen.

Claudia M. Wannersdorfer: one of two suspected members of the Red Army Faction who on January 20, 1985, wheeled a bomb in a baby carriage to a data-processing center in Stuttgart-Vaihingen, West Germany. The bomb exploded prematurely, seriously injuring her. On December 5, 1985, she was sentenced to eight years by the Stuttgart provincial court. She was part of a Red Army Faction hunger strike on February 1, 1989, and Die Welt speculated she might get early release with four other sick or feeble prisoners.

Judith Ward: sentenced to 12 life terms after being convicted of bombing an Army bus in Leeds on February 4, 1974. On May 11, 1992, she was released on bail after the court learned that her confession had been based on a fantasy of being a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomber. On June 4, 1992, a three-judge U.K. appeals court overturned her conviction. She had served 18 years, 3 months, and 5 days. The court ruled that police, prosecutors, forensic experts, and psychiatrists had withheld evidence. She was to receive financial compensation.

Nahed al Warfelly: alias William James Wardel. An Iraqi who carries a British passport and who was one of five men detained by the Immigration Police in January 1991 as part of a terrorist plot against U.S., U.K., Israeli, and Australian installations and airlines.

Krzysztof Wasilewski: variant Krzystof. Member of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. Switzerland denied extradition. On October 10, 1983, he received three years in prison and five years' banishment from Switzerland.

Krzysztof Wasilewski: variant of Krsysztof Wasilewski.

Georges Watin: alias The Jackal. He attempted to assassinate French president Charles de Gaulle on August 22, 1962. His attack was the basis for the 1971 Frederick Forsyth novel and movie The Day of the Jackal. He fled to Switzerland and later to Spain, finally settling in Paraguay in 1965. He was condemned to death in absentia in 1963 but was pardoned by an amnesty law in 1968. He died at his home outside Asuncion, Paraguay, on February 19, 1994.

Marlise Wauter: German woman arrested on December 28, 1994, by Italian police while photographing the U.S.O. club in Naples. Police found bullets, newspaper cuttings on the French airbus hijacking, and photos of numerous European politicians in her hotel room. They also found photos of her in the company of armed camouflaged men. Her passport said she was from Durb-ing, Germany, but she resided in France. In April 1988, the U.S.O. club was bombed, leading to several deaths and injuries.

Ekkehard Weil: alias Karl Schubert. Named by Vienna's Kurier on August 22, 1982, as being involved in planned attacks against U.S. missions in Austria. He was sentenced to six years in prison in 1981 after a series of bomb attacks on nine Jewish institutions and personalities. He was named on April 18, 1994, by Vienna's PROFIL as being wanted by police in connection with a series of letter bombs throughout Europe in December 1993. He appeared on April 11, 1994, in the 8th Criminal Division of the Bochum Land Court on charges of "instigating people, fanning racial hatred, and insulting and slandering the memory of the deceased."

Bo Weimann: variant Jan Weimann. Librarian and computer expert who Copenhagen's Berlingske Tidende claimed on September 12, 1990, was involved in a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) plan to kidnap Jorn Rausing, son of multimillionaire Gad Rausing, in the mid-1980s. He was questioned in August 1989. He was one of seven PFLP members in Blekingegade, Denmark, sentenced to prison. They may have been responsible for the 1988 post office robbery, but all were acquitted for lack of evidence and were due to be released in December 1995.

Jan Weimann: variant of Bo Weimann.

Johannes Weinrich: alias Klaus Muller. Attorney who rented a car that was used in the RPG-7 attack on an El Al 707 in Orly Airport on January 13, 1975, and another that was used in the follow-up RPG-7 attack at Orly on January 19, 1975. He was co-director of the Roter Stern publishing house. He was linked to Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist, heading his European operations. He was arrested in March 1975. He was a member of the Baader-Meinhof Gang. On June 1, 1995, he was arrested in Aden, Yemen, and extradited three days later to Berlin. He carried a Somali passport in the name of John Saleh. He had been picked up the previous month in a sweep by Yemeni authorities against southern separatists. He faced trial for the two January 1975 bazooka attacks, the 1981 bombing of the Radio Free Europe headquarters in Munich that injured a Romanian journalist, the April 1983 attack on the Saudi ambassador to Greece that injured the first secretary and his driver, and the August 25, 1983, bombing of the French Cultural Center in Berlin in which 1 person was killed and 23 others were injured. Weinrich carried 55 pounds of plastic explosives on a flight into East Berlin and stored them at the Syrian Embassy. German officials believed he had lived under the name Peter Schmidt in Damascus in 1991.

On January 17, 2000, he was sentenced by a Berlin court to life in prison for murder in the bombing of the French Cultural Center in Berlin. His trial had lasted nearly four years. He was 52.

He was the lover of Magdalena Kopp, who later married Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, also known as Carlos the Jackal.

Pieter Weiter: Swiss citizen sentenced by the St. Gaudens, France, court on December 6, 1986, to 18 months for transporting six kilograms of dynamite for Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader Francisco Mugica Garmendia. When Weiter could not find his contact in the Andalusian town, he returned to France, where he was arrested by Toulouse police.

Bendix Wendt: alias Dr. Vanda. A neo-Nazi weapons fanatic with experience in using explosives who was wanted for questioning in a series of letter bombings in Europe in December 1993. He had been in prison several times and had acquired East German military equipment. He was a close friend of fellow suspect Arnulf Winfried Priem.

Mussbah Mahmud Werfalli: Libyan diplomat identified by Rageb Hammouda Daghdugh, a Libyan arrested in Rome on February 5, 1985, carrying a Walther P-38 pistol and $25,000 in checks issued by the Libyan People's Bureau. Daghdugh claimed that Werfalli and another Libyan had given him the money and gun to assassinate U.S. ambassador Maxwell Rabb and the envoys from Egypt and Saudi Arabia. Werfalli was protected by diplomatic immunity but was ordered to leave Italy. In April 1986, the Italian courts issued an arrest warrant for Werfalli, believed to be in Malta.

Thomas Weslau: his release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, on September 5, 1977. His release also was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, on October 13, 1977.

Jonathan Richard Wheatley: U.K. citizen arrested by London police on July 11, 1987, for conspiracy to kidnap members of the African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa. Searches of his residence in Guildford, Surrey, uncovered a list of ANC members, bogus passports, and other forged identity papers. The Johannesburg Business Day speculated that he and his associates had planned to kidnap Solly Smith, head of the ANC's London office, and ANC executive member Francis Melli.

Viktor Widera: hijacker of an Air Canada DC8 scheduled to fly from Frankfurt to Montreal and Toronto on November 24, 1972.

Luka Widmar: resident of Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, who was injured when a bomb went off in the regional museum in the New Castle of Voelkermarkt in Carinthia, Austria, on September 18, 1979. He confessed to planting the bomb but said he had not intended to cause injury.

Michael Wilson: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member wanted in the murder of A. Ross McWhirter, coeditor of the Guinness Book of World Records, on November 27, 1975. He surfaced on December 6, 1975, as one of four IRA gunmen who fired two shots at Scott's Restaurant in London and then fled in a car. They took two hostages and demanded a plane to Dublin. The group released their hostages and surrendered on December 12 after a 130-hour siege.

Piotr Winogrolzki: Polish militiaman assigned to guard against hijackings who on November 22, 1982, used his two pistols and two hand grenades to hijack a Polish LOT AN-24 flying from Wrocław to Warsaw and divert it to the U.S. sector of West Berlin. Three other passengers requested political asylum. On April 18, 1983, the Berlin Regional Court sentenced him to five years in prison.

Horst Winter: alias Count Ekkehard Freiherr von Seckendorf-Gudent. Red Army Faction members

Winter and his wife Monika Helbing were arrested on June 14, 1990, in East Germany. They were wanted for several kidnappings and assassinations of prominent Germans in the late 1970s, including the slaying of Hanns-Martin Schleyer in 1977. On July 27, 1990, they were freed by an East Berlin court because of the statute of limitations.

Stefan Wisniewski: arrested in France on May 11, 1978, and extradited to West Germany a year later. On November 5, 1979, he was charged in Karlsruhe with murdering Hanns-Martin Schleyer, president of the West German employers' association and the Confederation of Industry, a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz, and West Germany's most famous industrialist, who had been kidnapped by the Red Army Faction on September 5, 1977. He was also charged with murdering Schleyer's bodyguards and with kidnapping, attempted extortion, coercion, and forging documents. On December 4, 1981, the Duesseldorf Court sentenced him to life in prison. On March 13, 1993, he applied for early release; his sentence had apparently already been cut to 15 years.

Alexander Wolfert: member of the Austrian neo-Nazi scene arrested on December 9, 1993, by Vienna, Austria, police in connection with a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993. He was a member of the Parliamentary Opposition Loyal to the People (VAPO). In a search of his Schwechat apartment, police found a laboratory, where a minor explosion had apparently taken place. They also confiscated an arsenal, including 10 grenades and antitank mines. He had fought as a mercenary in Croatia.

Barry Woodhams: boyfriend of Angela Otaola, a Spanish Basque from Bilbao in whose London apartment a bag of arms from Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist, was discovered in 1975.

Billy Wright: alias King Rat. Jailed leader of the Protestant Loyalist Volunteer Force, assassinated on December 27, 1997, by prisoners of the Irish National Liberation Army. Wright was a notorious thug who ran a Protestant hit squad opposed to peace talks. The group had conducted numerous drive-by shootings. He had apparently financed his activities by trafficking in "ecstasy," a drug. He was expelled from the Ulster Volunteer Force, in part for the abduction and murder of a Catholic taxi driver in 1995 in violation of a Protestant cease-fire. Fellow Protestant paramilitary groups delivered a death threat against him on television news; he had lived underground for some time before his arrest. He was serving eight years for threatening to shoot a Protestant woman who was to testify against him. The guns were smuggled into Belfast's Maze Prison for the 10:00 A.M. attack as he was being driven in a van to the visitors' center. Three Catholic men agreed to surrender to guards only after a priest was called in.

Commandant Wysocki: alias of Florian Kruszyk.

X

---

Haxi Hassan Xhaferi: Albanian who hijacked Pan American Flight 119, a B707 flying from Beirut to New York with a stopover in Rome, on June 22, 1970, and diverted it to Cairo.

Q. Vassilis Xiros: brother of terrorist Savas Xiros who confessed to the 1997 murder of Greek ship owner Costis Peratikos and to the assassination of British military attaché Stephen Saunders in 2000. He was arrested in late June 2002 for membership in November 17.

Y

---

Brahim Yadel: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise.” The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to “integrate into terrorist structures” in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but had not used their combat training. They were not sent back to prison although they were formally sentenced. Yadel was sentenced to five years, four suspended and one year as time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The group was among seven French citizens captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005. One was freed immediately upon arrival. The others spent up to 17 months in French prisons.

Simon Khacher Yahniyon: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through Lisbon Airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

‘Abdallah Hamid Yahya: Sudanese who was one of 18 Arab terrorists reported by Madrid’s Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain in August to attack Middle Eastern diplomatic missions and assassinate Saudi ambassador Muhammad Nuri Ibrahim. They had received weapons and casing reports on the ambassador from a Lebanese student resident in Spain whose initials were HMI.

Adel Yahya: North Londoner, age 23, arrested by British police on December 20, 2005, as he arrived at Gatwick Airport on a flight from Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, in connection with the abortive plot to set off bombs in the London subway system on July 21, 2005. He had been out of the country since June. He was one of six men held on suspicion of the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. The other five men were Muktar Said Ibrahim, Yassin Hassan Omar, Ramzi Mohammed, Hussain Osman, and Manfo Kwaku Asiedu. His trial began on January 15, 2007. Defendants Yahya, Yassin Hassan Omar, and Muktar Said Ibrahim attended the Finsbury Park mosque to hear jihadist sermons by Abu Hamza Masri, convicted in 2006 for soliciting murder and inciting racial hatred.

On July 10, 2007, the jury was unable to reach a verdict on two of the six defendants—Yahya and Manfo Kwaku Asiedu—and the jury was dismissed. The judge gave prosecutors until the next morning to seek a retrial. Yahya chose to plead guilty to the lesser charge of possessing terrorist information and on November 5, 2007, was sentenced to six years and nine months in prison.

Mourad Yala: was arrested in Geleen, Netherlands, in April 2003 on suspicion of falsifying passports. He was released in 2004 and deported to Spain. The Telegraaf reported in October 2004 that Yala was suspected by Spanish investigators of developing technology for converting laptops into time bombs. He was among 18 suspected terrorists being held by Spanish authorities on November 8, 2004.

Mariko Yamamoto: alias Maria. Japanese Red Army (JRA) contact point in Paris in 1974. She ran a Japanese shop in Avenue de l'Opera. Her place was raided in 1974. She possessed a coded notebook with the addresses of 50 safe houses throughout Europe. She was also part of the 10-member VZ58 group, which was named after the type of assault rifle used in the Lod Airport attack. On June 13, 1988, the Philippines Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member. On February 15, 1997, she was one of six members of the JRA arrested by Lebanese authorities in the Bekaa Valley and West Beirut. On April 3, 1997, a Beirut investigative judge indicted five of them for passport forgery, illegal entry into Lebanon, and official stamps forgery. The offenses carried 10-year prison sentences. The trial opened on June 9, 1997; 136 lawyers offered to take their cases pro bono. On July 31, 1997, a Lebanese court sentenced five JRA terrorists to three years in jail on various charges, including forging official stamps and passports and illegal entry into Lebanon. The sentences came a day after the United States ended a decade-long ban on Americans visiting Lebanon following a Beirut pledge that it would do more to combat terrorism. On March 1, 2000, Lebanon refused Japan's request for extradition. She and three other members of the JRA involved in a bloody mountaintop standoff with Japanese police were freed on March 7, 2000, after serving three years in prison for passport fraud. Three of them had converted to Islam. A fourth married a Lebanese woman and joined her Greek Orthodox church. All four were deported. In Amman, Jordan, on March 17, 2000, they were turned over to Japanese diplomats, who put them on a plane to Japan. Tokyo Metropolitan Police arrested three, and a warrant of imprisonment was issued on the fourth. By then, she was 59 years old.

Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas: variant Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas; alias Abu Dahdah. One of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement and al Qaeda's leader in Spain arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant of Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an al Qaeda cell were arraigned. On November 19, the Washington Post quoted Spanish officials as indicating that eight of the al Qaeda cell members had had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. The charges were based on Yarkas's documents and intercepted phone conversations. Judge Garzon released three others arrested on November 13 but ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

Yarkas traveled often to Yemen, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Senegal, and Indonesia and throughout Europe, visiting the United Kingdom 10 times. He met with bin Laden twice and was in close contact with Muhammad Atef.

On March 13, 2004, the imprisoned Yarkas was questioned by the investigating judge in connection with the 3/11 Madrid commuter train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

On April 21, 2005, the trial began of al Qaeda suspects in Spain linked to the 9/11 attacks. Yarkas, age 42, told a court that he was innocent and that the prosecution's claim that they were a Spanish al Qaeda cell was a myth. On September 26, 2005, a Spanish court convicted Yarkas and sentenced him to 27 years in prison for conspiring with al Qaeda and the 9/11 hijackers. On June 1, 2006, Spain's Supreme Court threw out his conviction, citing lack of proof. He would still serve 12 years for leading a terrorist group. On April 16, 2008, Judge Ismael Moreno of the National Court indicted Yarkas on suspicion of financing terrorist cells.

Mahdi Yatsikale: variant Yatsikaya. One of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich to Istanbul and Ankara, on October 13, 1980.

Dara Yazdani-Amiri: one of four people arrested by London police on December 14, 1988, during a demonstration in front of the offices of Iran Air. They had attacked three computers of the firm and were to face charges of criminal damage and violent disorder on January 5, 1989.

Ara Yenikomchian: Armenian injured when a bomb he and a colleague were fabricating exploded in their Geneva, Switzerland, hotel room on October 3, 1980. He was the son of a successful Beirut pediatrician. He lost all of one eye and most of the other. On January 13, 1981, he was given an 18-month suspended sentence for helping extort the equivalent of $6,000 from a Geneva businessman. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia had threatened reprisals against the United States for an FBI interrogation of Yenikomchian. The arrests provoked bombing reprisals in Beirut and four European cities by the October 3 Group.

Alexander Yenkomeshian: former economist who was partially blind and missing his left hand after a bomb exploded in a Geneva hotel room in 1980 where he was with another accused Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) guerrilla, Suzy Mahseredjian, of Canoga Park, California. He was given a suspended sentence on extortion charges and was acquitted on an explosives charge. He appeared by the side of ASALA spokesperson Hagop Hagorian at a September 26, 1981, press conference in Beirut during the ASALA takeover of the Turkish Consulate in Paris.

Sergio Yergorof Arantzeta: suspected Basque nationalist freed on March 24, 1989, after an appeals court rejected extradition to Spain.

Adem Yilmaz: unemployed Turkish Muslim citizen, age 28, who lived in Hesse, Germany, and was one of three individuals arrested on September 4, 2007, who were planning "massive" attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer's gun and shot him in the hand; the terrorist was cut on the head during the struggle. One of the terrorists escaped through a window but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freudenstadt. The concentrated chemicals would have the equivalent of 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group that has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of them had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were not foreigners, but white Germans, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization. Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group's activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented the three-bedroom vacation cottage in the skiing/tourist locale, where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

Yilmaz had worked in the security division of rail operator Deutsche Bahn from 1997 to 2002, principally in the railway station of Frankfurt Airport, one of the group's targets.

Bunyamin Yilmaz: on June 16, 1981, a Turkish court found him guilty of providing arms to Mehmet Ali Agca, the would-be assassin of Pope John Paul II on May 13, 1981, in his escape from Maltepe military prison, where Yilmaz was a guard. Yilmaz had taken a 100,000 lira bribe.

Omer Yorulmaz: one of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich to Istanbul and Ankara on October 13, 1980.

Bahij Mohammed Younis: Jordanian arrested on October 28, 1981, by Austrian police while in possession of submachine guns, other small firearms, several hand grenades, and several passports. He was believed to be a mastermind behind several Palestinian terrorist attacks. On October 22, 1982, he was sentenced to life in prison in connection to the May 1, 1981, murder in Austria of Heinz Nittel, the president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, a leading Socialist Party official, and the head of the Vienna Traffic Department. Abu Nidal's Al Asifah organization claimed credit for the assassination.

Yoyes: alias of Maria Dolores Gonzalez Catarain.

Ahmet Yucksel: charged on May 7, 1990, by the West German Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsruhe with membership in the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK). He was believed to be a member of the PKK's European central committee.

Buhayj Yunis: identified by Doha's al-Sharq on March 19, 1993, as a former member of the Abu Nidal Group. After he was sentenced to prison in Austria following a terrorist operation, he announced his resignation from the group and saw his sentence suspended.

Ali Yusuf: alias of Hasan Marwan'; variant Marwan Hasan.

Z

---

Ahmad Sami Zaarour: Lebanese arrested on March 1, 1991, in a Bad Segeberg apartment by Schleswig-Holstein internal security officers on suspicion of being the person who had set off a hand grenade on February 26, 1991, on the fourth floor of central Berlin's Hotel Boulevard on the main Kurfuerstendamm shopping avenue. The short gunman fired a submachine gun at three U.S. government employees before escaping. Police said the attacker was albino with short blonde hair and blue eyes.

Andres Maria Zabala Bilbao: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on July 31, 1987, by Busturia, France, police, who expelled him to Spain.

Jesus Maria Zabala Maguira: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on November 17, 1994, by police in Toulon, France. He was sentenced on January 13, 2003, by a Paris court to nine years in prison.

Pilar Zabala Mondragon: variant Maria Pilar Mondragon Zabala. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member arrested on November 17, 1994, by police in Toulon, France.

Jose Ignacio Zabaleta: variant Jose Javier Zabaleta Elosegui; alias Waldo. Believed to be the head of Basque Nation and Liberty's (ETA) intelligence apparatus. On January 12, 1990, Paris-based Judge Vellemain ordered his arrest.

Jose Javier Zabaleta Elosegui: variant of Jose Ignacio Zabaleta. Believed to be a Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) leader in France in 1988.

Mikel Zabalza: alleged collaborator of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) who drowned on December 18, 1985, while trying to escape from security forces.

Zacharia: variant Zechariah; alias of Lt. Abdel Aziz al Atrash.

Alexander Zagirnyak: one of two Russian hijackers of an Aeroflot TU134 twin-engine jet flying from Petrozavodsk, Karelia, to Leningrad on July 10, 1977, and diverted to Helsinki, Finland.

Ahmad Zahedi: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was ordered out of the country.

Mohammad Zahedi: Iranian tried with two Arabs arrested in April 1979 trying to smuggle 50 kilograms of explosives through Austria into West Germany. He denied membership in any Palestinian organization. He said he had been hired by Mohammad Hamadi to bring a car from Europe to Beirut. On July 20, 1979, the Passau regional court sentenced him to four months for forging documents and for unlawful entry into West Germany.

Ahmed Zaid: one of two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command (PFLP-GC)–Black September–Nationalist Youth Group for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who told two vacationing British women that they were Persians and gave them an electronic music device to bring with them on an El Al B707 flying from Rome to Tel Aviv on August 16, 1972. The device had a bomb inside, which exploded shortly after takeoff. The plane landed safely in Rome. Rome police arrested the men identified as an Iraqi and a Jordanian. In February 1973, they disappeared from Italy after being given provisional liberty on the grounds that the bomb “was not adequate to destroy the airliner.”

Mohammad Abbas Zaida: alias Abu Khalid. Allegedly sent four Palestine Liberation Front (PLF) terrorists to hijack the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7, 1985. They killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer. The hijacking ended in Egypt. The plan was to conduct a suicide mission in Ashdod, Egypt, but the terrorists were discovered and forced to act earlier, thus seizing the boat. On November 13, 1985, Italian authorities issued an arrest warrant for the PLF member.

Akhmed Zakayev: Aide, age 43, to Chechen separatist leader Aslan Maskhadov. He was arrested on October 29, 2002, in Denmark for questioning in the October 23, 2002, taking of 900 hostages by Chechen terrorists at a Moscow theater. On November 29, 2003, the United Kingdom granted him refugee status. A British judge had turned down an extradition request, saying he would have been tortured if returned to Russia. He had fought against Russian forces between October 1995 and December 2000.

Waheed Zaman: took biochemistry and led prayer groups at London Metropolitan University and was arrested, at age 22, in the United Kingdom on August 10, 2006, in connection with a foiled plot by al Qaeda to use liquid explosives and common electronic devices as detonators to destroy at least 10 planes flying from the United Kingdom to the United States. Two dozen people were detained in the United Kingdom; the number rose to 41 by the next day. He was charged in the United Kingdom on August 21, 2006, with conspiracy to commit murder and preparing acts of terrorism. He was ordered held without bail until a September 18 court appearance, when 10 other suspects were to appear in court. Prosecutors had said that the trials might not begin until March 2008. His trial, along with that of seven others, began on April 3, 2008. They were charged with conspiracy to murder, contrary to the 1977 Criminal Law Act, between January 1 and August 11, 2006. They were also charged with conspiracy to commit an act of violence likely to endanger the safety of an aircraft between January 1 and August 11, 2006. He lived in Walthamstow, United Kingdom.

Mohammed Haydar Zammar: naturalized German citizen of Syrian origin, age 41, captured in Casablanca, Morocco, in December 2001. The former locksmith had been reported missing by his family after he left Hamburg, Germany, for Morocco on October 27, 2001. He was taken to Syria, and as of mid-December 2006, he remained in prison.

He was linked with those involved in the Hamburg cell behind the 9/11 attacks. He was suspected of recruiting Mohammed Atta and other Hamburg hijackers circa 1997 at his local mosque and linking them to the al Qaeda Afghan-based leaders. Although he was questioned by German police after the 9/11 attacks, there was not enough evidence to hold him. In July 2001, he was detained while in transit in Jordan for several days before being deported to Germany. On October 25, the 300-pound Zammar was issued a temporary one-year passport. He left the country ostensibly to obtain a divorce from a Moroccan woman. Moroccan authorities said he left the country for Spain; Spanish officials said he did not arrive. His partner said he had trained at an al Qaeda Afghan camp and had fought in Bosnia.

Syria held him on a long-standing charge of involvement in a bomb plot. On February 11, 2007, a Syrian security court sentenced him to 12 years in prison. He initially was sentenced to death for membership in the Muslim Brotherhood, but the sentence was commuted. He had moved to Germany with his father in 1972 and received German citizenship a decade later. He was represented by attorney Mohanad al-Husni.

Roberta Zanca: Red Brigades nurse sentenced on March 25, 1982, by a Verona court to 12 years for involvement in the December 17, 1981, kidnapping of U.S. Brig. Gen. James Lee Dozier.

Ahmed Zaoui: leader of the Algerian Armed Islamic Group who reportedly had been staying in Belgium in mid-1994. French authorities wanted to question him in connection with lethal attacks on French soil. He was arrested in March 1995. On September 4, 1995, his trial in Belgium, along with that of a dozen other Islamic militants, began.

Nordine Zaouli: Algiers-born hijacker of an Air France flight from Paris's Roissy airport to Nice on December 10, 1993, who demanded to go to Libya. He surrendered in Nice's Cote-d'Azur airport. He had a police record for armed robbery and other crimes and was on a list of people not permitted in France.

Mario Zapata: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military Izagorri commando member arrested on June 25, 1987, by Pamplona police who raided an arms cache that included three pistols, a machine pistol, nine kilograms of explosive Ammonal, one kilogram of Goma-2 plastic explosive, timing devices, an instruction manual on making incendiaries, and a letter from ETA–Military leader Francisco Mugica Garmendia.

Ramon Zapirain: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)–Military member jailed on June 13, 1986, for the murder of Joseph Couchot, a Spanish policeman who ETA believed was a member of the Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group, on November 23, 1984, on the Franco–Spanish border at Irun.

Muhammad Zari: arrested by Stockholm police on December 18, 2001. The Egyptian asylum-seeker faced years in prison in Egypt for membership in an Islamic terrorist group. He was put on a plane to Egypt.

Ne'matollah Zarifi: one of 57 people of Middle Eastern and North African origin arrested by French police on June 3, 1987, in connection with the discovery of an arms, explosives, and drugs cache in the Fontainebleau forest. Threats had been made by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners. He was ordered out of the country.

Imed Ben Zarkaoui: leader of a Milan-based network that was wrapped up on November 6, 2007, in coordinated raids in Italy, France, Portugal, and the United Kingdom. The raids netted 17 Algerians and Tunisians suspected of terrorist ties to Salafist jihadi militant cells that were recruiting would-be suicide bombers for Iraq and Afghanistan. Milan prosecutors ordered the raids in Milan, Bergamo, Verese, and Reggio Emilia. Police found poisons, remote detonators, and manuals. The leaders were identified as Dridi Sabri, Mehidi Ben Nasr, and Imed Ben Zarkaoui, all operating in Italy. Three suspects remained at large. Police said the investigation began in 2003. The detainees were charged with illegal immigration, falsifying ID documents, and helping to hide people sought for terrorist activity.

Mirek Zavadil: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

'Abd al-Rahman Zawan: one of three Libyans invited to leave Spain on December 20, 1985, when secret service agents uncovered the Libyans' plot to assassinate exile Libyan opposite leader Dr. al-Muqayrif. The trio had worked for the Libyan Embassy in Madrid but did not have diplomatic status. They left within three weeks.

Mohammed Mohsen Yahya Zayed: one of two Yemenis arrested in Germany and extradited to the United States, where they were prosecuted in 2005 for conspiracy to send money from Brooklyn to Hamas and al Qaeda. On September 1, 2005, Zayed was sentenced to 45 years in prison.

Khalil Mahmud al-Zayn: Lebanese who was one of 18 Arab terrorists reported by Madrid's Diario 16 on October 20, 1987, as having entered Spain in August to attack Middle Eastern diplomatic missions and assassinate Saudi ambassador Muhammad Nuri Ibrahim. They received weapons and casing reports on the ambassador from a Lebanese student resident in Spain whose initials were HMI.

Nadia Zekra: detained on January 17, 1995, in London under the Prevention of Terrorism Act on suspicion of the July 26, 1994, car bombing of the Israeli Embassy in London that injured 14 people. On June 22, 1995, British antiterrorism police announced the arrest of six wealthy, well-educated, leftist secular Palestinians led by Zekra, a Knightsbridge housewife, age 48, who were responsible for the attacks on the embassy and a London building that housed Jewish and Israeli charities. The group may have been members of a breakaway faction of the Syrian-supported Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP). Zekra was accused of driving and parking the car bomb. The mother of two teen sons, she had graduated from a Jordanian university's sociology department. On November 4, 1996, a London judge freed her for lack of evidence.

Omar Zemiri: one of three gang members who escaped during a March 29, 1996, raid by police in Roubaix, France, on a hideout of Algerian and Moroccan terrorists who had committed a series of bank, armored car, service station, and convenience store robberies during which bystanders were shot down. More than 1,000 shots were fired in the gun battle, which ended with four Algerians burning alive. The gang members were associated with a mosque in Lille known for preaching radical theology to disaffected North African immigrants. Zemiri said the group was attempting to finance a jihad.

Ronald Zen: American "self-employed artist" living illegally in the United Kingdom who was arrested on June 1, 1981, when he tried to reenter the United Kingdom from France. He was held in connection with the May 6, 1981, receipt of a padded package with a hoax bomb that was sent to Queen Elizabeth II while death threats were made against Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer.

Redouane Zenimi: member of a Spanish al Qaeda cell broken up by arrests on May 14, 2004. The group, which reported to Abderrazak Mahjdoub and Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, provided financing to the rest of the European network. Zarqawi ordered Abderrazak Mahdjoub and Abdelahi Djaouat to travel to Damascus in March 2003 with the intention of going to Iraq. The duo was arrested in Syria.

Muhammad el-Zery: suspected Islamic radical arrested in Sweden and later expelled by Swedish officials on December 18, 2001. After 9/11, he was deemed a security risk, despite his earlier granting of political asylum. In October 2003, he was released without having faced trial or charges. He was placed under surveillance, which continued as of mid-December 2006.

Bogdan Zigic: one of three hijackers of the June 26, 1952, Yugoslavian National Airlines flight from Belgrade to Puola that was diverted to Foligno, Italy, where the trio requested asylum.

Djamal Zitouni: variants Jamal Zitouni and Djemal Zetouni. Former militant of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front accused by French security services of being a leader of an armed gang active in the Bir Khadem area. The gang was responsible for an August 3, 1994, attack on a French school, Max Marchand, in Ain Allah, Algiers, that killed five French nationals. He was also suspected of killing two other French nationals in Bir Khadem and two Yugoslavs in the Teklea garden in Ben Aknoun. On November 18, 1994, London's al-Sharq al-Awsat reported that he had replaced Abou Khalil Mahfoud as the Armed Islamic Group's leader in Algeria. He reportedly died in late 1996 under mysterious circumstances and was succeeded by Antar Zouabri, who died on July 22, 1997, in a gun battle with authorities.

Jamal Zitouni: variant of Djamal Zitouni.

Abdellah Ziyad: variant Abdelylah Ziyad; aliases Rachid, Abdelmalek Bachir. Born in Casablana, Morocco, in 1958, he was believed to be a leading member of the Moroccan Islamic Youth Movement in France's Chartres region. He was believed to be running weapons between France and Morocco in mid-1994. He was sentenced in absentia to life in prison in 1985 for smuggling arms and munitions to Morocco from Algeria.

Abdelylah Ziyad: variant of Abdellah Ziyad.

Ceslaw Romuald Zolotucho: auto mechanic, age 18, who joined Wieslaw Szymankiewicz, age 20, in hijacking a Lot Antonov 24 flying the Wroclaw–Warsaw–Bratislava run on November 20, 1969, diverting it to Vienna, Austria.

Marina Zoni: arrested on September 15, 1978, in connection with the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former premier Aldo Moro in Rome.

Eugenio Zoppis: on July 5, 1986, Italy requested extradition from Paraguay of several Italian fugitives, including Zoppis. Some belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs.

Muhammed Galeb Kalaje Zouaydi: Syrian-born builder and real estate developer in Madrid accused of helping finance bin Laden's operations. He was arrested on April 23, 2002, by Spanish police. He was arraigned, charged with terrorism, and ordered held indefinitely without bail by Judge Baltasar Garzon. The judge said there was evidence that he had sent money to suspects in Germany linked with 9/11 hijack leader Mohamed Atta. On October 18, 2002, the Department of the Treasury designated the Illinois-based Global Relief Foundation, one of the country's largest Muslim charities, as a terrorist organization, because it had received more than $200,000 from Zouaydi. On April 21, 2005, the trial began of al Qaeda suspects in Spain linked to the 9/11 attacks, including Zouaydi, age 44, who allegedly had funneled $800,000 to radical Islamists, including al Qaeda. He was eventually sentenced to nine years in prison.

Jamal Zougam: listed in a 9/11 indictment as an al Qaeda operative, although he was not indicted. One of three Moroccans arrested on March 13, 2004, in Spain and held for questioning in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 that killed 200 and wounded 2,000. Zougam, age 30, and his half-brother Mohamed Chaoui were charged on March 19, 2004, with belonging to a terrorist organization, with auto theft, and with 4 counts of terrorism, 190 counts of murder, and 1,400 counts of attempted murder. Zougam was charged on April 11, 2006, by Judge Juan del Olmo with providing the cell phones used as detonators in the backpack bombs. Four witnesses said he had placed dark blue bags under seats in trains that blew up. On October 31, 2007, a Spanish court convicted him of membership in a jihadist terrorist cell and of terrorist murder.

Jose Luis Zruimendi Oribe: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Abdel Wael Zuaiter: Fatah representative in Italy born in Nablus, Jordan. The Jordanian had resided in Rome for 16 years and was employed as a translator for the Libyan Embassy. He was assassinated by two gunmen on October 16, 1972. The Jordanian Embassy said that he was a nephew of Akram Zuaiter, Jordan's ambassador in Beirut, but declined to confirm reports that he was a second cousin of Yasir Arafat. He had been questioned in connection with the attempt by two Jordanians to blow up an Israeli airliner on August 17, 1972. The Israelis claimed that he worked for Black September and Razd. He was also questioned after the Black September Organization (BSO) bombing of a Trieste pipeline in August 1972. His brother was expelled from West Germany after the Olympics attack. The Israelis believed that he was BSO's chief in Italy and held him responsible for the hijacking of a Rome-Tel Aviv flight to Algeria on July 22, 1968, and for the explosion of a bomb on an El Al B707 in August 1972. He had been a public apologist for the Munich attack, claiming that the Israelis had plotted to have the hostages killed so that they could gain world sympathy.

Juan Jose Zubieta Zubeldia: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member sentenced on June 24, 1993, by the National High Court of Spain to 1,311 years and fined 400 million pesetas for the May 29, 1991, attack on the Civil Guard barracks in which nine people, including five children, died.

Sabino Zubillaga Beloqui: suspected Spanish member of Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA)—Military arrested by French police on December 19, 1987, when he attempted to escape in his car down a secondary road near Saint-Pee-sur-Nivelle in the French Basque country. Police found that a van he was following was carrying 1,500 kilograms of ammonal explosives, which are often used in ETA attacks. Police believed that the group intended to smuggle the explosives into Spain.

Clothilde Zucca: Italian Red Brigades member sentenced to life for the murder of two guards during a 1982 robbery of a Turin bank. On July 4, 1985, a Turin court rejected her appeal.

Giuliano Zuccaro: suspected Red Brigades member and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. He was arrested in Turin. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri's murder.

Klaus Zuegg: one of two South Tiroleans from the Plaus community arrested on September 23, 1988, by Italian police, who found eight kilograms of explosives in a secluded farmhouse in the Vintschgau mountains. They denied involvement in recent bombings.

SELECTED READINGS

---

For incident descriptions, see chronology references in the Introduction (detailed in the following entries), and for a more thorough bibliographical treatment, see Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons, Terrorism, 2002–2004: Chronology (3 vols.). Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2006.

Atkins, Stephen E. Encyclopedia of Modern Worldwide Extremists and Extremist Groups. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2004. 404 pp.

Becker, Jillian. Hitler's Children: The Baader-Meinhof Terrorist Gang. Philadelphia: Lippincott, 1978.

Bell, J. Bowyer. The IRA, 1968–2000: Analysis of a Secret Army. Portland: Frank Cass, 2000.

Beresford, David. Ten Men Dead: The Story of the Irish Hunger Strike. London: Grafton, 1987.

Buruma, Ian. Murder in Amsterdam: The Death of Theo van Gogh and the Limits of Tolerance. New York: Penguin, 2006. 278 pp.

Clark, Robert P. "Patterns in the Lives of ETA Members." Terrorism 16, no. 3 (1983): 423–54.

Collin, Richard Oliver, and Gordon L. Freedman. Winter of Fire: The Abduction of General Dozier and the Downfall of the Red Brigades. New York: Dutton, 1990. 239 pp.

Conlon, Gerard. Proven Innocent. London: Hamilton, 1993.

Coogan, Tim Pat. The IRA: History. Niwot, CO: Roberts Rinehart, 1993. 554 pp.

Dobson, Christopher, and Ronald Payne. The Terrorists: Their Weapons, Leaders and Tactics. New York: Facts on File, 1982.

Faligot, Roger. Nous Avons tue Mountbatten! L'IRA Parle. France: Picollec, 1981. 227 pp.

Hoffman, Bruce. Inside Terrorism. New York: Columbia University Press, 1998.

McKee, Grant, and Ros Franey. Time Bomb: Irish Bombers, English Justice and the Guildford Four. London: Bloomsbury, 1988.

Mickolus, Edward F. International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events, 1968–1977. ITERATE 2 Data Codebook. Ann Arbor, MI: Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, 1982. 203 pp.

Mickolus, Edward F. The Literature of Terrorism: Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1980. 553 pp.

Mickolus, Edward F. "Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography." Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

Mickolus, Edward F. Terrorism, 1988–1991: Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Bibliographies and Indexes in Military Studies, No. 6. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1993. 928 pp.

Mickolus, Edward F. Terrorism, 2005–2007: Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2008.

Mickolus, Edward F., with Peter Flemming. Terrorism, 1980–1987: Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1988. 315 pp.

- Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: Chronology, Vol. 1, 1980–1983. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1988. 568 pp.
- Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: Chronology, Vol. 2, 1984–1987. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1989. 696 pp.
- Mickolus, Edward F., with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1992–1995: Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1997. 976 pp.
- Mickolus, Edward F., with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1996–2001: Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. 2 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002.
- Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2002–2004: Chronology. 3 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2005. 864 pp.
- Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2008–2010: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, in press.
- Moran, Sue. "The Case of Terrorist Patrizio Peci: Character Sketch." Terrorism Violence Insurgency Journal 5, no. 2 (1984): 34–5.
- Nash, Jay Robert. Terrorism in the 20th Century: Narrative Encyclopedia from the Anarchists, through the Weathermen, to the Unabomber. New York: Evans, 1998.
- O'Doherty, Shane Paul. The Volunteer: An IRA Terrorist's Story. London: Fount/HarperCollins, 1993. 204 pp.
- O'Hearn, Denis. Nothing but an Unfinished Song: Bobby Sands, the Irish Hunger Striker Who Ignited a Generation. New York: Nation, 2006. 434 pp.
- Perino, M. Lotta Continua: Sei Militanti Dopo Dieci Anni [Lotta Continua: Six Militants Ten Years Later]. Turin: Rosenberg and Sellier, 1979.
- Pisano, Vittorfranco S., and Xavier Raufer. "A Case Study in Terrorism of the Left: Action Directe." Conflict 9, no. 2 (1989): 155–69.
- Post Jerrold. The Mind of the Terrorist: The Psychology of Terrorism from the IRA to al Qaeda. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007. 320 pp.
- Proll, Astrid, ed. Baader Meinhof: Pictures on the Run 67–77. Zurich: Saelo Verlag, 1998.
- Scheerer, Sebastian. "The Crime of Klaus Croissant." Contemporary Crises: Crime, Law and Social Policy 4, no. 3 (1980): 341–9.
- Shanty, Frank, and Raymond Picquet, eds. Encyclopedia of World Terrorism. Santa Barbara: M.E. Sharpe, 2003.
- Sundberg, Jacob W. F. "Operation Leo: Description and Analysis of a European Terrorist Operation." Terrorism 5, no. 3 (1981): 197–232.
- Tenet, George J., with Bill Harlow. At the Center of the Storm: My Years at the CIA. New York: HarperCollins, 2007. 549 pp.
- U.S. Department of Justice, Office of the Inspector General. Follow-Up Audit of the Terrorist Screening Center. Audit Report 07–41. September 2007. Retrieved June 24, 2007, from <http://www.usdoj.gov/oig/reports/FBI/a0741/final.pdf>.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. Counterterrorism Calendar 2008: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods and Tactics. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2007. 160 pp.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2006 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2005.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2007 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2006.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2003 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2002.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2004 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2003.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2005 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2004.
- Weinberg, Leonard B., and William Lee Eubank. The Rise and Fall of Italian Terrorism. Boulder: Westview Press, 1987.

INDEX

---

- Abu Nidal Organization, 4, 17, 24, 28, 40, 45, 47, 77, 91, 117, 119, 146, 151–52, 183, 186, 243, 251–52, 256, 260, 266, 269, 271, 290, 296, 302, 322. See also Fatah Revolutionary Council; Revolutionary Council; Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems
- Action for National Liberation (ALN), 238
- Action for the Rebirth of Corsica (ARC), 283
- Action Front of National Socialists/ National Activists, 54, 165
- Action Group for the Liberation of Palestine, 120, 246–47
- Advice and Reform Committee, 92
- African National Congress (ANC), 125, 215, 235, 308, 316
- Algerian Islamic Group, 249
- Algerian Islamic Salvation Front (FIS), 36, 41, 51, 76, 145, 169
- Allah's Faithful, 73
- ALN. See Action for National Liberation
- Anarchy and the Palestinian Group of the Radical Left, 293
- Anatolian Federal Islamic State, 265
- ANC. See African National Congress
- Ansar al-Islam (Followers of Islam), 4, 8, 50, 56, 103, 134, 180, 202, 248–49, 293
- Anti-Capitalist Autonomous Commandos, 113
- Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front (FRAP), 57, 72, 103, 172, 269
- Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group (GAL), 79, 109, 113, 128, 167, 188, 196, 207, 237, 241, 260, 297, 325
- Arab League, 119
- Arab Liberation Front, 57
- Arab Popular Liberation Movement, 14
- Arab Revolutionary Brigades, 305
- ARC. See Action for the Rebirth of Corsica
- Argentine Anticommunist Alliance, 96
- Armed Cell for Popular Autonomy, 230
- Armed Islamic Group (GIA), 43, 122, 196, 249, 293, 299, 325, 327
- Armed Revolutionary Nuclei (NAR), 235, 283, 311
- Armenian Revolutionary Army, 4, 10, 109, 149, 196, 292, 319
- Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia, 37, 84, 102, 109, 112, 115, 196, 223, 287, 301, 321
- Arm of the Arab Revolution, 259. See also Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- Al-Asifah, 186, 248, 322
- Autonomous Anti-Capitalist Commandos, 112, 304
- Autonomous Workers Movement, 18
- Baader-Meinhof Gang, 30, 43, 48, 67, 85, 95–96, 98, 112, 114, 124, 130, 132, 151, 161–64, 167, 176, 180, 195, 227, 240, 242, 255, 276, 282, 301, 315
- Baader Solidarity Group, 30
- Badil al Hadari, 41
- Bahrain Freedom Movement, 143
- Barges-Bardeli, 55
- Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), 4–7, 10, 12–13, 15, 17, 19–22, 24, 28–29, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42–45, 47, 52, 55, 58–59, 61, 65–66, 74, 76, 79, 83–86, 88, 93, 95, 98, 100–103, 108–13, 121, 127–28, 135–41, 144–45, 162, 168–69, 171–74, 177, 184–88, 196, 199–200, 206, 212–16, 221, 225, 227–34, 236–37, 239, 241, 244, 249, 252, 255–59, 261, 264–66, 269–70, 277, 285, 290, 296–97, 299–300, 302, 304–7, 309–11, 316, 323, 325, 327–28
- Basque Nation and Liberty—Military Madrid Command, 74, 87
- al-Bhuraba terrorist camp, 221
- Black Flag, 153, 247–48
- Black June, 27, 32, 123, 131, 146, 184, 198, 202, 217
- Black March, 181
- Black September Organization (BSO), 30, 98, 116, 120, 122, 146, 153, 156, 183, 195, 217, 220, 246, 267–68, 292, 294, 304, 314, 328
- Boot Boys, 142, 165
- Bridegrooms of Death, 169
- Brunswick Group, 126, 170, 231, 264, 276
- BSO. See Black September Organization
- Calabrian Mafia, 139
- Caliphate State, 148
- Call of Jesus Christ, 59, 122, 145
- Canaries Autonomy Movement, 68
- Colombian National Liberation Army (ELN), 188–89, 201
- Commando Mohammad Boudia, 50

- Committee for Socialist Revolution-ary Union, 20, 60
- Committee for Solidarity with the Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners, 2, 14, 62, 110, 142, 147, 184, 202, 213, 220, 264, 268, 271, 323, 325
- Communist Combatant Cells, 62, 272, 308, 310
- Communist Combatant Party, 49
- Correct Course of Fatah, 32, 46, 112
- Corsican National Liberation Front, 109
- Croatian Freedom Fighters, 34
- Croatian Nationalist Movement. See Hrvatski Drzavotvorni Pokret
- Croatian National Liberation Forces, 188, 237, 311
- Croatian National Resistance, 45
- Curiel Apparat, 68, 125
- Darul Uloom Madina, 251
- Derunta terrorist camp, 221
- Dev Sol, 183
- Direct Action, 26, 36, 48, 64, 93, 105, 116–17, 166–67, 230, 238, 274, 307, 309
- Direct Action, Section Belgium, 54
- Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution, 151
- Easter Commando of Europeans, 34
- Egyptian Anathema and Exile, 43, 78, 176
- Egyptian Communist Party, 68
- Egyptian Islamic Jihad (EIJ), 6, 24, 219
- Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood, 219
- Egyptian Revolution, 257
- EIJ. See Egyptian Islamic Jihad
- Ein Tirol, 304
- ELN. See Colombian National Liberation Army
- the Emigrants. See al-Muhajiroun
- Eritrean Liberation Front, 136
- ERP. See People's Revolutionary Army
- ETA. See Basque Nation and Liberty
- Europe Labor Party, 113
- FAR. See Rebel Armed Forces of Guatemala
- FARC. See Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia
- Fatah, 13, 40, 50, 115–16, 119–20, 153, 217, 219, 246, 251, 267, 292, 314. See also Force 17
- Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC), 26, 28
- Fatah Special Operations Group, 166
- Fedayeen, 246
- Fighters for a Free Croatia, 188
- Fighting Communist Party (PCC), 171, 189, 234, 251, 298–99
- Fighting Communist Union Party, 14, 205
- First of October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO), 65, 67, 77, 169–70, 173, 185, 230, 248–49, 258, 269, 279
- FIS. See Islamic Salvation Front
- FLNKS. See Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front
- Followers of Islam. See Ansar al-Islam
- Force 17, 217
- FP-25. See Popular Forces of 25 April
- FRAP. See Anti-Fascist Patriotic Front; Proletarian Revolutionary Action Front
- FRC. See Fatah Revolutionary Council
- Freedom for the Serbia Fatherland (SEPO), 273
- Free Iraqi Council, 295
- Free Land. See Terra Lliure
- Free South Moluccan Youth Organization, 18
- Friends of Arabs, 57
- Front Line, 15, 45, 66, 96, 311
- GAL. See Anti-Terrorist Liberation Group
- GARI. See International Revolutionary Action Group
- German People's Union, 104
- GIA. See Armed Islamic Group
- Global Islamic Media Front, 181
- Global Relief Foundation, 327
- GRAPO. See First of October Antifascist Resistance Group
- Grey Wolves, 135, 148
- Guardsmen of Islam, 126, 146, 272, 292
- Guards of Islam, 146, 219, 221
- Guerrilla Army of the Free Galician People, 60
- Guerrillas of Christ the King, 259, 269
- Hamas, 211, 326. See also Islamic Resistance Movement
- Harkat-e-Jihad, 156
- Hernan Batero Moreno Command, 63, 289
- Hizballah, 23, 27, 37, 71–72, 116–17, 121, 139, 148, 213, 216, 219, 243, 256, 267, 285, 307
- Hizb ut-Tahrir (Party of Liberation), 24, 115
- Hofstad network, 52, 89, 135, 314
- Hrvatski Drzavotvorni Pokret (Croatian Nationalist Movement), 35
- Iberian Liberation Movement (MIL), 242, 286
- IJ. See Islamic Jihad
- IJO. See Islamic Jihad Organization
- Imam Musa as-Sadr Brigade, 246
- INLA. See Irish National Liberation Army
- International Revolutionary Action Group (GARI), 286, 299
- Iparretarrak, 45, 67, 87, 140, 169, 208
- IRA. See Provisional Irish Republican Army
- Iranian Lebanese Hizballah, 13
- Iranian Revolutionary Guards, 28, 307
- Irish National Liberation Army (INLA), 54, 66, 75, 111, 159, 175, 189–92, 227, 253, 288, 298, 317
- Irish Republican Army. See Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA)
- Irish Republican Army Balcome Street Four, 244
- Irish Workers' Party, 104
- Islamic Army for the Liberation of the Holy Sites, 223
- Islamic Army of Aden, 187
- Islamic Fighting Group, 223
- Islamic Front for Holy War Against the Jews and Crusaders, 92
- Islamic Group in Egypt, 122
- Islamic Jihad (IJ), 213, 257, 262, 266. See also Egyptian Islamic Jihad

- Islamic Jihad Organization (IJO), 30, 37, 89, 105, 140, 197, 265
 Islamic Jihad Union, 106, 263, 275, 321
 Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan, 106, 275, 321
 Islamic Observation Center, 284
 Islamic Resistance Movement, 211
 Islamic Salvation Front (FIS), 178
 Italian Social Movement, 14
- Jaish-e-Mohammed, 251
 Japanese Red Army (JRA), 96, 159, 320
 al-Jazeera, 15, 46
 JRA. See Japanese Red Army
 Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide, 109
- Kanak Socialist National Liberation Front (FLNKS), 75–76
 Karl-Heinz Hoffmann Group, 40
 Kashmir Liberation Army (KLA), 151
 Khaldan training camp, 209
 KLA. See Kashmir Liberation Army
 Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK), 22, 68, 85, 113, 150, 165, 196, 227, 303, 309, 322
- LARF. See Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction
 Lashkar-i-Taiba, 294
 Laskar Jihad, 284
 Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF), 2–3, 69, 73, 86, 93, 158, 184, 271
 Lebanese Forces, 89, 257
 Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, 248
 Libyan intelligence service, 20, 85, 87, 94, 120, 194
 Libyan Islamic Fighting Group, 223.
   See also Islamic Fighting Group
 Libyan People's Bureau, 87, 95, 316
 Libyan Revolutionary Committees, 264
- Martyr Kharmian Hayrik Suicide Squad, 84
 Martyrs for Morocco, 293
 Martyrs of Palestine, 152
 Martyrs of Tal Za'Tar Organization, 9
 Martyrs of the Iranian Revolution, 76, 124, 131, 224, 246
- May 15 Arab Organization for the Liberation of Palestine, 14, 31, 35, 163, 176, 286, 304
 MIL. See Iberian Liberation Movement
 Military Sports Group Hoffman, 129
 Mojahedine-e Khalq, 76, 116, 131
 Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, 50, 116, 123, 175
 Moroccan Islamic Youth Movement, 327
 Movement for Islamic Reform in Arabia, 91
 Movement for Self-Determination and Independence of the Canary Islands, 110
 Mozambique National Resistance Movement (RENAMO), 93, 96, 119, 186, 258 al-Muhajiroun (the Emigrants), 280
 Mujaheddin-e Khalq, 248
 Mujaheddin from Fallujah, 74
 Mujahedeen Movement, 5, 23, 62, 72, 179, 320
 Muntada al-Ansar al-Islami, 301
- NAR. See Armed Revolutionary Nuclei
 National Committee Against Independence, 75
 National Socialist German Workers Party/Foreign Organization (NSDAP/AO), 242
 National Youth Group for the Liberation of Palestine, 122
 Nestor Paz Zamora Committee, 225
 New People's Army (NPA), 127, 275
 NPA. See New People's Army
 NSDAP/AO. See National Socialist German Workers Party/Foreign Organization
- OAS. See Organization of the Secret Army
 Ogaden National Liberation Front, 180
 Organization Delta, 68
 Organization for the Liberation of Libya, 56, 63, 108
 Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism, 17, 30, 106, 143, 214, 250, 282–83, 286, 316
 Organization of the Secret Army (OAS), 37, 309
- Organization of the Sons of Southern Lebanon, 27
 Organization of the Strugglers of Islam, 189
 Organized Communist Movement, 242
- P-2 Mason Lodge, 105
 Palestine Liberation Front (PLF), 23–24, 101, 132, 143, 150–51, 154, 214, 221, 324
 Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), 22, 28, 32, 45, 57, 91, 118–20, 139, 144, 146, 176, 194, 217, 250, 278–79, 287, 304
 Palestine Popular Struggle Front, 208
 Palestinian Fatah Revolutionary Council, 221
 Palestinian Islamic Resistance Movement, 211
 Palestinian Martyrs, 279
 Palestinian Popular Struggle Front, 139
 Parliamentary Opposition Loyal to the People (VAPO), 242, 317
 Party of Liberation. See Hizb ut-Tahrir
 PCC. See Fighting Communist Party
 People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, 38, 126, 283
 People's Mujahedeen-e Khalq, 307
 People's Mujahedin, 157–58
 People's Party, 305
 People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), 275
 PFLP-GC. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command
 PFLP-SO. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
 PKK. See Kurdistan Workers' Party
 PLF. See Palestine Liberation Front
 PLO. See Palestine Liberation Organization
 Popular Forces of 25 April (FP-25), 270
 Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), 5–6, 20–21, 27, 35, 40, 48–49, 54–55, 69, 79, 115, 121, 124, 128, 130, 144–45, 152–53, 156, 160, 163–64, 167–68, 176, 187, 206, 208–10, 212, 214, 224, 231, 249–50, 252, 255, 259,

- 261, 266, 268–69, 276, 279–80, 282, 287, 290, 293, 297, 301, 309, 315, 317, 324, 326
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Black September, 64
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Commando Mohammed Boudia, 50
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command (PFLP-GC), 70, 107, 122, 137, 158, 165, 294
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations (PFLP-SO), 10, 268
- Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR), 238
- Popular Struggle Front, 294
- Prima Linea, 67, 327
- Proletarian Offensive Resistance Movement, 143
- Proletarian Revolutionary Action Front (FRAP), 5
- Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), 7, 32, 53–56, 58, 64–67, 76, 78–81, 90–91, 94, 97, 100–101, 103, 114, 120, 122, 125, 127, 129, 132, 134, 144, 151, 161, 163, 167, 170, 177–79, 183, 185, 187, 189–94, 200, 205–7, 215–16, 226–27, 229–30, 235, 241–44, 253, 256, 261–62, 270, 272, 274, 280, 285, 288–89, 296–97, 301, 308, 314, 316, 325
- Puig Antich, 195, 242
- al Qaeda, 1, 3, 5–6, 8–11, 15–16, 18, 27–28, 31, 33, 35–36, 38, 40–44, 46, 50–51, 53, 59–62, 66, 70–73, 76–77, 84, 88, 90, 92, 96, 100–102, 104, 106–7, 113–14, 116, 118, 123, 127, 133, 138, 140, 142, 144, 146–48, 150, 153–59, 165, 170, 176, 178–83, 185, 193, 195, 197, 199, 202, 204, 209–14, 218, 220–23, 230, 235, 237–38, 244, 246–48, 251, 253–55, 261, 263–64, 270–73, 275, 281, 283–85, 290, 293–94, 296, 299, 301, 303, 305, 313–14, 320–21, 324–27
- Al Qoods (Jerusalem) Force, 28, 307
- RAF. See Red Army Faction
- Razd, 328
- RB. See Red Brigades
- Real IRA. See Real Irish Republican Army
- Real Irish Republican Army (Real IRA), 193, 270
- Rebel Armed Forces of Guatemala (FAR), 95
- Red Army Faction (RAF), 8, 12, 30, 33, 38–39, 49, 56, 73, 80, 82–83, 85–86, 96–98, 106, 112, 121–22, 124, 126, 129–31, 142–43, 148, 159–61, 163–64, 173–74, 181, 189, 195, 198, 201–2, 204, 212, 227, 233, 240–41, 250, 255, 257, 259–60, 274–77, 281–84, 286, 288–89, 295–96, 308, 310–14, 316–17
- Red Army Faction—Khalid Akbar Commando, 111, 130
- Red Brigades (RB), 5, 15–18, 28–29, 33, 36, 39, 41, 44–45, 47–49, 53–54, 56–59, 63, 65–68, 70, 76, 81, 87, 89–91, 93, 95, 97, 100–101, 107–8, 110–11, 113, 130, 135, 143, 170–74, 176–77, 182, 184–85, 188–89, 196–99, 201, 205–8, 217, 223–25, 229, 233–39, 241, 256, 258, 260–61, 265, 268, 270, 273–74, 276–79, 287–88, 297–98, 300, 307–10, 325, 328
- Red Brigades—Communist Combatant Party, 74, 108–9
- Red Swords, 314
- Rejection Front of Stateless Palestinian Arabs, 146
- RENAMO. See Mozambique National Resistance Movement
- Returnees from Afghanistan, 122
- Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia (FARC), 65, 107, 149, 190, 207
- Revolutionary Cell Brigade Ulrike Meinhof, 195
- Revolutionary Council, 219, 251
- Revolutionary Democratic Alliance, 121, 298
- Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems, 25, 269
- Revolutionary Socialist Brigade, 76, 115, 166, 279, 308
- Right and Liberty Organization, 2
- RUF. See Sierra Leonean Revolutionary United Front
- Saiqa (Thunderbolt), 214
- Sakina Security Services, 136, 143
- Salafia Jihadia, 144, 197
- Salafist Group for Call and Combat, 123, 293
- Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, 18, 43, 51, 78, 176, 204, 222, 294, 299
- Sanabel Relief Agency, 223
- 2nd of June Movement, 255, 310
- SEPO. See Freedom for the Serbia Fatherland
- Seven Simeons, 231
- Seychelles Resistance Movement, 23, 75
- Shining Path, 47, 126, 302
- Siegfried Hausner Commando Group, 124
- Sierra Leonean Revolutionary United Front (RUF), 231
- Socialist Patients' Collective, 124, 131, 163, 250, 259, 295
- Somali Coast Liberation Front, 156, 246
- SO-PFLP. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
- SOS France, 256
- Syrian Baath, 214
- Syrian Muslim Brotherhood, 221
- Tabligh Jamaat, 14, 28, 62, 138, 155, 182, 201
- Taliban, 250
- Al Taqwa, 131
- al-Tawhid, 1, 3, 76
- Terra Lliure (Free Land), 37, 269
- Territorial Communist Cells, 234
- Terza Posizione. See Third Position
- Third Position (Terza Posizione), 16–17, 67, 95, 175, 208, 298, 327
- Thunderbolt. See Saiqa
- TPLA. See Turkish People's Liberation Army
- Tunisian Combatant Group, 148
- Turkish Federation, 59
- Turkish Grey Wolves, 6
- Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA), 24, 106, 137
- 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, 54, 186, 258
- Ulrike Meinhof Commando, 195
- Ulrike Meinhof Special Action Group, 195
- Ulster Defense Association, 234
- Ulster Volunteer Force, 287

Unified Nasirite Organization, 47
Unione Italian del Lavoro, 277
Union Islamique, 265
Union of Communist Fighters,
108, 197, 223, 233, 237,
284, 298

VAPO. See Parliamentary Opposition
Loyal to the People
VPR. See Popular Revolutionary Vanguard
Waltraud Boock Operation,
48

Workers' Autonomy movement, 20, 234
World Islamic Front for Fighting Jews and Crusaders,
92
www.azzam.com, 10
www.qoqaz.net, 8

About the Authors

DR. EDWARD F. MICKOLUS wrote the first doctoral dissertation on international terrorism while earning a PhD from Yale University. He then served in analytical, operational, management, and staff positions in the Central Intelligence Agency for 33 years, where he was CIA's first full-time analyst on international terrorism; analyzed African political, economic, social, military, and leadership issues; wrote political-psychological assessments of world leaders; and managed collection, counterintelligence, and covert action programs against terrorists, drug traffickers, weapons proliferators, and hostile espionage services. He founded Vinyard Software, Inc., whose products include ITERATE (International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events) text and numeric datasets and DOTS (Data on Terrorist Suspects). Clients include 150 universities in 21 countries. His 20 books include a series of multivolume chronologies and annotated bibliographies on international terrorism; 12 book chapters; 100 articles and reviews in refereed scholarly journals and newspapers and presentations to professional societies; and 14 humorous publications. Recent publications include Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology; Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.); The Terrorist List: The Middle East; and International Terrorism in the 1980's: A Chronology of Events, Volumes 1 and 2.

SUSAN L. SIMMONS is an independent writer, editor, and writing coach. She works with faculty to publish and achieve tenure; graduate students to complete dissertations; new fiction and nonfiction writers to complete manuscripts, prepare proposals, and find venues and agents; and businesses to prepare sensitive letters and documents and to research and write reports for venture capital firms. She specializes in the fields of international relations, art history, education, psychology, and business. Simmons holds a master's degree in English literature from the University of Minnesota and has worked in the field of terrorism since 1993. She coauthored Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.).

THE TERRORIST LIST

THE TERRORIST LIST

---

Volume 3

Eastern Europe

Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

PRAEGER SECURITY INTERNATIONAL

AN IMPRINT OF ABC-CLIO, LLC
Santa Barbara, California • Denver, Colorado • Oxford, England

Copyright 2011 by Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, except for the inclusion of brief quotations in a review, without prior permission in writing from the publisher.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Mickolus, Edward F.

The terrorist list / Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons.

v. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Contents: v. 1. Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa — v. 2. Western Europe — v. 3. Eastern Europe — v. 4. North America — v. 5. South America.

ISBN 978-0-313-37471-5 (alk. paper) — ISBN 978-0-313-37472-2 (ebook)

1. Terrorists—Biography. 2. Terrorism. I. Simmons, Susan L. II. Title.

HV6430.A1M53 2011

363.325092'2—dc22 2010033700

ISBN: 978-0-313-37471-5

EISBN: 978-0-313-37472-2

15 14 13 12 11 1 2 3 4 5

This book is also available on the World Wide Web as an eBook.

Visit www.abc-clio.com for details.

Praeger

An Imprint of ABC-CLIO, LLC

ABC-CLIO, LLC

130 Cremona Drive, P.O. Box 1911

Santa Barbara, California 93116-1911

This book is printed on acid-free paper

Manufactured in the United States of America

Our endless gratitude to Susan, Ciana, and P. B.

CONTENTS

---

INTRODUCTION	ix
THE TERRORIST LIST	1
SELECTED READINGS	195
INDEX	197

INTRODUCTION

---

The following list includes the names of individuals who have appeared in my previous chronologies of international terrorism and individuals who have been named in open sources as somehow involved in terrorist attacks or organizations. The list is designed to serve as a directory of leaders, perpetrators, financiers, defendants, detainees, persons of interest, conspirators, and aliases in the region of Eastern Europe, including Central Europe and Eurasia, from 1950 to 2008. It includes individuals with a nationality of a country in the regions, whose operations were generally considered to have been conducted in the regions, who were detained in the regions, who were wanted for trial in the regions, against whom an arrest warrant had been issued in the regions, and/or whose cases were tried on the soil of the regions. Aliases, nicknames, and kunya, when known, are included.

This list does not purport to be globally comprehensive—it is limited solely to international incidents or other incidents of sufficient import to be included in previous chronologies. Then again, inclusion does not mean the individual is a terrorist. Many of the individuals listed were later determined by a court to be innocent of any involvement in the incidents or organizations or there was not sufficient evidence to proceed to trial. Others were prisoners who had their release demanded in hostage negotiations. Still others were involved in nonterrorist hijackings or nonpolitical criminal activities similar to attacks conducted for political motives and are included to give the flavor of the security environment that existed during this period. Some of those included acted in the prehistory of modern terrorism but served as models for those whose motivations in later years were more in line with terrorism as we now know it.

I have attempted to include major cases of domestic terrorism or cases that have been tried under national antiterrorism statutes. This should not be interpreted as indicating that I consider the individuals to be terrorists, nor does it indicate any position on the underlying motivations of the individuals named or the merits of their causes. In some cases, individuals so accused have gone on to become government leaders.

The list uses the same definitions as my earlier books. International terrorism is the use or threat of use of anxiety-inducing extranormal violence for political purposes by any individual or group, whether acting for or in opposition to established governmental authority, when such action is intended to influence the attitudes and behavior of a target group wider than the immediate victims and when—through the nationality or foreign ties of its perpetrators, its location, the nature of its institutional or human victims, or the mechanics of its resolution—its ramifications transcend national boundaries. I also included incidents that were initially treated by security authorities as terrorist or quasi-terrorist, such as hijackings later determined to be the work of mentally unstable individuals or individuals seeking nontraditional modes of transportation but who did not have terrorist motives.

Due to the criminal nature of terrorism, its perpetrators often use aliases and “also known as” names to mask their identities and increase the propaganda value of their actions. I have attempted to link aliases to the perpetrators’ principal names.

Names are listed alphabetically by surname but are shown with first name first to prevent confusion in reading Arabic names. Several transliteration systems are in use for Arabic names. I have tried to include the major variants, again keyed to the principal name. Arabic names are alphabetized without regard to name fragments such as al-, bin, and Abd-al. The last main element is used for alphabetization. For further thoughts on the difficulty of establishing consistency in transliterations, see my article on the topic.<sup>1</sup> Hispanic names are alphabetized according to the individual’s patronymic.

Date and place of birth are included when reported, except for nonpolitical, nonterrorist hijackers. Such information is often available in the chronologies.

This list, although including tens of thousands of names, is not intended to be used as a terrorist watch list or supplant those used by law enforcement, homeland security, and other authorities around the world. The Justice Department’s FBI Terrorist Screening Center’s database, for example, had 754,960 records per the Government Accountability Office’s May 2007 report and was adding 20,000 records each month. This list is not aimed at such exhaustive coverage. The intention behind this list is to give students of the discipline a starting point for understanding the phenomenon of terrorism, as well as to give the blognoscenti and members of the commentariat—who believe that merely “connecting the dots” is child’s play—some appreciation for the amount of dots that exist and the difficulty experienced daily by those attempting to protect us from the depredations of terrorists.

A popular sound bite for books such as this is a top 10 list of the worst terrorists of all time. Criteria for devising such a list could include the most events masterminded over a career, the most deaths perpetrated, or involvement in a single dramatic event. In no particular order, individuals who should be considered in the hall-of-shame conversation are the following:

- Osama bin Laden, leader of al Qaeda
- Wadi Haddad, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
- Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos the Jackal
- Fusako Shigenobu, leader of the Japanese Red Army
- Abimael Guzman, leader of the Peruvian Shining Path
- Khalid Sheikh Mohammad, architect of numerous al Qaeda attacks, including 9/11
- Velupillai Prabhakaran, leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Sri Lanka
- Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf, mastermind of numerous attacks around the world
- Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber
- Theodore Kaczynski, alias the Unabomber
- Shoko Asahara, leader of Aum Shin Rikyo
- Sabri al-Banna, alias Abu Nidal, leader of the Abu Nidal Group

- Muhammad Atta, leader of the 9/11 hijackers
- Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, leader of al Qaeda in Iraq
- FNU LNU (name unknown), mailer of anthrax envelopes

For more detailed information on the terrorist incidents themselves, please consult my chronologies of events and annotated bibliographies covering 1968 to the present and published by Greenwood Press and Iowa State University Press. Also helpful are the National Counterterrorism Center's annual Counterterrorism: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods, and Tactics, published since the mid-1990s, with an interactive online version since 2007. The Terrorist List: Eastern Europe is available as the Data on Terrorists (DOTS) database from Vinyard Software, Inc., 2305 Sandburg Street, Dunn Loring, VA 22027-1124 USA or vinyardsoftware@hotmail.com.

The fates of many terrorists go unreported by the media, but numerous perpetrators have been subject to the rule of law years, even decades, after their attacks. This list demonstrates that no matter how long it may take, terrorists can be tracked down and brought to justice by like-minded governments.

Edward Mickolus
President of Vinyard Software, Inc.

NOTE

1. Edward F. Mickolus, "Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography," Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

A

---

George Ibrahim Abdallah: aliases Abdelkader Saadi, Mohammed Kacem, Hamid el-Kattabi. Lebanese arrested by Lyons police on October 25, 1984, in connection with the January 18, 1982, Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) assassination of Lt. Col. Charles R. Ray, U.S. assistant military attaché in Paris. On July 2, 1985, a Paris court issued homicide charges against Abdallah, considered one of the leaders of LARF, after a Czech pistol found in his Paris hideout was determined to be the weapon that killed Ray and Israeli Embassy attaché Yacov Barsimantov on April 3, 1982, in Paris. Abdallah was sentenced to four years in prison in July 1986 for associating with a banned group, using false documents, and possessing arms and explosives. The U.S. Embassy complained that the sentence was too light.

The Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle Eastern Political Prisoners conducted a series of bombings in Paris in September 1986, demanding his release. On November 19, 1985, Abdallah was indicted in Paris for a failed assassination attempt against U.S. consul general in Strasbourg Robert Onan Homme on March 26, 1984. During September 1986, terrorists carried out a bombing campaign in Paris to seek his release.

On January 28, 1987, Abdallah was ordered to stand trial before a seven-magistrate Court of Assizes for the attacks on Ray, Barsimantov, and Homme. Italian authorities suggested that they might request extradition for Abdallah's role in the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Gen. Leamon Hunt, the U.S. head of the multinational Sinai observation force. His release was demanding by the gunmen who kidnapped Giles Sidney Peyrolles, the director of the French Cultural Center and a consular official, near his Tripoli office on March 24, 1985. On February 3, 1986, the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners who bombed the Clarridge shopping arcade off the Champs-Elysees in Paris demanded his release. His trial in Lyons began on July 3, 1986, on charges of possessing guns, explosives, and false passports. On July 10, 1986, he was found guilty of the charges and sentenced to four years in prison. The U.S. Embassy complained that the sentence again was too light. Italy requested extradition on September 15, 1986. His trial began on February 23, 1987, where it was learned that he was a former schoolteacher from the Maronite village of Qobayat in northern Lebanon. On February 28, 1987, he was sentenced to life in prison for the murders of Barsimantov and Ray. He was eligible for parole in 15 years. He was also ordered to pay one franc in symbolic damages to the United States and another franc to Homme. He was to pay 150,000 francs ($24,600) to Ray's widow, Sharon, and 100,000 francs ($16,400) to each of their two children. Abdallah's girlfriend was Jacqueline Esber, who was herself believed involved in terrorism.

'Ali al-Abdallah: Moroccan who was arrested for the September 27, 1985, assassination of Mustafa Sabra, a Syrian sailor, near the Hotel Continental in Limassol, Cyprus. On November 3, 1985, he was given a life sentence. He claimed membership in the Eagles of Return.

Madid Abdellah: arrested on August 3, 1995, by Italian police in Trieste while he was carrying a false French ID card supposedly issued by the police headquarters in Seine-Saint-Denis. He was carrying a diskette that contained chemical formulas for explosives and other tips on the methods involved in blowing up a pylon or booby-trapping a car. He told police that he had been given the diskette in Zagreb, Croatia, and was to pass it to an accomplice in Milan. He said he belonged to the Djamel Lounici network, run by one of the military heads of Algerian Islamist forces in Europe.

Cesur Abdulkadir: Turk who on October 19, 2005, was arrested in Bosnia when Sarajevo police raided an apartment occupied by an underground group that was planning to bomb the U.K. Embassy. Police confiscated explosives, rifles, other arms, and a video hailing “brothers” who were killed in Afghanistan and Iraq. They were hiding explosives inside lemons and tennis balls and trying to set up terrorist training camps in the hills outside Sarajevo.

Ahmet Abdullah: courier from northern Iraq, arrested by Turkey in February 2005 for providing assistance to the Union of Imams. Earlier, on February 15, 2002, Turkish police in Van Province arrested two Palestinians and a Jordanian suspected of coming from Iran and attempting to enter Israel to carry out a suicide bombing at the behest of an Islamic cleric with al Qaeda ties. One confessed to plans to attack a crowded area of Ramat Gan, a Tel Aviv suburb. They were members of the Union of Imams, a Jordanian group with links to al Qaeda.

Husayn Sulayman Abdullah: one of four Palestinian terrorists who were found guilty on February 17, 1983, in Turkey and again sentenced to death for their part in the July 13, 1979, raid on the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara that resulted in the death of two security guards. They had been tried twice before at the Ankara Martial Law Command’s First Military Court and the Ankara First High Criminal Court, but both times, their sentences were annulled.

Georgy B. Abhazaza: on July 10, 1990, Abhazaza, age 27, from Tskhakaya, Georgia, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, hijacked a Soviet TU154 flying a domestic route and tried to divert it to Helsinki, Finland. The plane turned back and landed in Leningrad, where he was detained by police and KGB agents. He had been tried for extortion and was wanted since February 1989 after escaping from the commandant’s office in the Kalinin Region. The hijacker bought his ticket in Leningrad with a false passport eight hours before the flight.

Masoumeh Hommafah Abolghasem: wife of Reza Taghigmi Abolghasem. One of three Iranians arrested by Turkish police at Esenboga Airport on September 13, 1986, while trying to sneak an attaché case wired to hold explosives onto a Turkish Airlines flight bound for Cyprus. Although there were no explosives in the case, the wires would set it off when the case’s handle was touched. The trio had entered Turkey at a border point on the eastern frontier with Iran on September 4, 1986. They claimed they were flying to the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, recognized only by Turkey, to take exams and claimed no knowledge of the mechanism. On September 17, 1986, the Ankara Security Court charged them with founding a criminal organization and being members of an armed band.

Reza Taghigmi Abolghasem: husband of Masoumeh Hommafah Abolghasem. One of three Iranians arrested by Turkish police at Esenboga Airport on September 13, 1986, while trying to sneak an attaché case wired to hold explosives onto a Turkish Airlines flight bound for Cyprus. Although there were no explosives in the case, the wires would set it off when the case’s handle was touched. The trio had entered Turkey at a border point on the eastern frontier with Iran on September 4, 1986. They claimed they were flying to the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, recognized only by Turkey, to take exams and claimed no knowledge of the mechanism. On September 17, 1986, the Ankara Security Court charged them with founding a criminal organization and being members of an armed band.

Sami Aboud: Aboud, age 20, joined two other members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) who attempted to hijack a Trans World Airlines B707 in Athens on December 21, 1969. He and two others were carrying luggage that contained two guns, three hand grenades, and mimeographed announcements that the plane was being hijacked to Tunis by the PFLP. He and the other two were released after the July 22, 1970, hijacking of an Olympic Airways jet to Cairo.

Sarkis Abrahamian: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through the Lisbon airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Amud Abul: one of three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. He had rented a car, which exploded at Trocadero.

Mohamed Needl Acaid: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement, which has ties to al Qaeda, arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Spain did not offer details on the terrorists' targets. The next day, police identified three more Islamic suspects. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. Spain and other European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an Al Qaeda cell were arraigned. Washington Post quoted Spanish officials on November 19 as indicating that eight al Qaeda cell members arrested in Madrid and Granada had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon ordered eight of the suspected members held without bail because they "were directly related with the preparation and development of the attacks perpetrated by the suicide pilots on September 11." Judge Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. They also reportedly sheltered Chechen rebels and obtained medical treatment for al Qaeda members. They conducted robberies and credit card fraud and provided false documents to al Qaeda visitors. They also forwarded money to Hamburg. The group had connections to Mohamed Bensakhria, head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. He was arrested and extradited to France. The group also had connections to six Algerians detained in Spain on September 26 who were charged with belonging to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, a bin Laden-funded Algerian group.

The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. His name and phone number were in a document found in a search of a Hamburg apartment of a bin Laden associate. Police believed hijacker leader Muhammad Atta could have met with some of them when he visited Spain in January and July. The group had links to Mamoun Darkazanli. Judge Garzon released three others who were arrested on November 13 and ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

Barin Acturk: Turkish woman arrested in Paris in 1973 for gun smuggling. She was released after six months and flown to Baghdad. Some observers believed she was one of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of Air France Flight 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976, and ultimately diverted to Entebbe, Uganda.

Necdet Adali: leftist terrorist hanged by the Turkish military junta on October 8, 1980.

Gerry Adams: member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army's Army Council in December 1998 and a spokesperson for Sinn Fein.

Sojod 'Adnan: variant Sujud Adnan. 'Adnan, of Lebanon, was one of three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. He was earlier thought to be dead but arrived in Greece by train through Idhomeni Station and was part of the attack squad. On January 9, 1989, Piraeus public prosecutor Yeoryios Vlassis filed charges against 'Adnan and persons unknown on six counts of deliberate and repeated manslaughter, attempted manslaughter committed by persons particularly dangerous to public order, planned explosion and arson resulting in the death of nine persons, illegal possession of weapons, and repeated use of weapons. It was not established whether he was killed in the attack; police had not found his body. The case was referred to the Ninth Piraeus examining magistrate.

Sujud Adnan: variant of Sojod Adnan.

Mehmet Alia Agca: alias Faruk Azgun. Turkish Grey Wolves right-wing terrorist who escaped from prison on November 25, 1979, and threatened to assassinate Pope John Paul II during his three-day visit to Turkey. He was accused of murdering journalist Abdi Ipekci, the editor of Mil-liyet, a major newspaper, in 1979. He said the attack would be revenge for the November attack on Mecca. He later injured the pope in an attack on May 13, 1981, in St. Peter's Square in the Vatican. On July 19, 1981, Turkey requested his extradition. On July 22, 1981, after a three-day trial and a one-day hunger strike, he was sentenced to life in prison in Rome. He had traveled in 1980 in Bulgaria on a fake Indian passport issued to Joginder Singh. On January 19, 1981, he had stayed in the Isa Hotel in Rome under the name Faruk Azgun, the name found on the false passport he was carrying when captured in St. Peter's Square. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome. On March 29, 1986, he was sentenced to a year in prison for illegal possession of an automatic pistol.

His release was demanded on June 22, 1983, when the Turkish Anti-Christian Liberation Front kidnapped Emanuela Orlandi, daughter of a Vatican employee, and by the two Turks who hijacked an Istanbul-bound Air Malta B737 on June 9, 1997.

On December 9, 2000, his attorney said he would try to get Agca released under a new amnesty law. On December 18, 2000, a Turkish court sentenced Agca to seven years in jail for two robberies in the 1970s. The sentence was added to the nine years he had left on a sentence for the 1979 killing of Ipekci.

On January 8, 2006, Turkish authorities announced that they would release Agca, age 47. The Turkish government said Agca had completed his sentence for crimes committed in Turkey. He was freed on January 12, 2006, and failed to report to a police station the next day. Authorities could arrest him for draft dodging. He was represented by attorney Mustafa Demirbag. On January 16, 2006, a military hospital pronounced Agca unfit for military service. He was jailed on January 20, 2006, after Turkey's Supreme Court overturned the lower court's decision to release him and said that he had more time to serve on his sentence for killing Ipekci and for other crimes. A handcuffed Agca yelled, "I am the Messiah," in Turkish, English, and Italian as police led him through a crowd of journalists into a Turkish prison. On January 25, 2006, 15 Agca family members began a "fast to the death" to press for his release.

Mehmet Aglak: one of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines Flight TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich, Germany, to Istanbul and Ankara, Turkey, on October 13, 1980. The gunman was injured during the Turkish Army's rescue of the hostages.

Agop Agopyan: variants Agop Agopian, Hagop Hagopian.

Riyad Samir al-Ahad: Iraqi alleged to have planned the attack in which two gunmen shot to death Yusuf el Sebai, editor of the Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram, at the Nicosia Hilton Hotel on February 18, 1978. Sebai was a former minister of culture and a close friend of President Sadat. The duo then took 30 hostages into a restaurant and demanded to fly out of the country. A Cypriot DC8 flew them to Djibouti. After bouncing around the area, the plane returned to Larnaca Airport. Later that day, 100 Egyptian commandos landed in a C130 and attacked the hijackers. Cypriot forces fired at the commandos, killing 15 and wounding 16. The terrorists immediately surrendered.

Babar Ahmad: computer expert, age 30, accused of running U.S.-based Web sites calling for support to terrorism and trying to set up a terrorist training camp in Arizona. The Briton of Pakistani descent lived in south London and worked at the Imperial College. He had been arrested by British police in December 2003 and was held for six days on suspicion of terrorism. He ran the militant organization Abu Khubayb. Ahmad was arrested by Scotland Yard on August 5, 2004, on an extradition request from the United States. He was accused of soliciting funds and property via the Internet for "acts of terrorism in Chechnya and Afghanistan," including political murder between 1998 and the end of 2003. He had been under surveillance for several years. Police announced the next day that he was in possession of the classified routes of the USS Constellation Navy battle group. The three-year-old information discussed its operations in the Straits of Hormuz. Authorities also said he was part of an al Qaeda branch linked to Khalid Sheik Mohammed. Police said 500 gigabytes of information were seized, thanks to nine search warrants and 100 subpoenas.

Ahmad is the cousin of Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan, who was arrested in late July 2004 in Pakistan. Court documents said he operated two U.S.-based Web sites to recruit and raise money for Taliban fighters and that he had been under investigation for three years. The United States said that his "pro-jihad" Web sites called on Muslims to use every possible means to undertake military and physical training for holy war. The sites requested financial support and offered instructions on how to infiltrate war zones in Chechnya and Afghanistan. He faced four charges of involvement with terrorism, which each carried a penalty of 10 years to life in prison, according to a criminal complaint unsealed in the U.S. Attorney's Office in New Haven, Connecticut, where Ahmad's Web servers were based. He allegedly worked with a man in New Brunswick, New Jersey, who made backup copies of the sites, <http://www.azzam.com/> and <http://www.qoqaz.net/>, which the Justice Department said were "more operational" than scholarly. Mazen Mokhtar, an Egyptian-born imam and political activist, operated the Web sites that were based in Nevada and Connecticut. He works as the imam at the Masjid al-Huda mosque in New Brunswick. Mokhtar's lawyer denied that his client was a terrorist.

In Ahmad's court appearance on August 6, 2004, U.S. government attorney Rosemary Fernandes described Ahmad's possession of April 29, 2001, ship assignments, formations, movements, and vulnerabilities. She said Ahmad was in contact with an al Qaeda agent who worked within the battle group. He was identified as a reservist who is no longer in the armed forces.

Ahmad was indicted on October 6, 2004, by the U.S. attorney in Connecticut for purchasing bomb-making material and camouflage suits. The charges included conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists, laundering money for their cause, and conspiracy to kill or injure people in a foreign country. The affidavit sought his extradition. Court papers indicated that his apartment contained papers showing that from 1997 to 1998, he sought to purchase 5,000 pounds of fertilizer and large quantities of chemicals for someone possibly in Pakistan. He also purchased 100 camouflage suits from a Long Island firm and had them delivered to the United Kingdom. He visited the United States and returned to the United Kingdom with a GPS device and a bulletproof vest.

The U.K. court on March 2, 2005, gave U.S. lawyers a continuance so that it could investigate whether Ahmad could be handed over to a U.S. military tribunal if extradited. John Hardy, a U.K. attorney representing the U.S. government, argued that in 1998, Ahmad met in Phoenix, Arizona, with Yasser al-Jhiani, a member of the Islamic mujaheddin militia, and other Islamic radicals with ties to bin Laden. A U.K. judge ruled in May 2005 that he could be extradited to the United States. His family said it would appeal to the U.K. High Court.

On November 16, 2005, Charles Clarke, the United Kingdom's seniormost law enforcement official, ordered his extradition to the United States, where Ahmad faced U.S. charges of using the Internet to support al Qaeda, the Taliban, Chechen terrorists, and other Islamic extremists. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws ruled that he and Haroon Rashid Aswat could be extradited.

Najumuddin Faraj Ahmad: alias Mullah Krekar. Oslo-based radical Islamist in the 2000s and leader of Ansar al-Islam, a violent northern Iraqi separatist movement. Ahmad fled northern Iraq in 1990, receiving Norwegian asylum after claiming persecution by Saddam Hussein. In 2001, he founded Ansar al-Islam (Followers of Islam). The group was believed to have sheltered al Qaeda fugitives after the United States invaded Afghanistan in 2001. Iran sent Ahmad to Amsterdam in September 2002. On September 13, he was arrested for extradition to Jordan on drug charges, but Jordan did not follow through, and in January 2003, he was released and flew to Oslo.

Ahmad was arrested on March 20, 2003, but was released on April 2 by an appeals court. Investigators said later that he had ordered Ansar recruits to conduct suicide bombings in Iraq, citing a captured bomber. The Norwegian government declared him a security risk in 2003 and ordered him deported. On January 2, 2004, Norwegian police arrested him on charges of aiding a plot to murder his rivals in northern Iraq from December 2000 to April 2001. On January 5, 2004, a court cleared him of suspected terrorist activities but ordered him kept in custody pending the government's appeal. He was to be charged for attempted murder, conspiracy, and inciting criminal activity. On February 17, he was released; the media reported that rival Kurds had forced witnesses to testify against him. On June 15, 2004, the Norwegian prosecutor dropped all charges against Ahmad, now 47, citing lack of evidence and fears that witness testimony in Iraq was coerced.

On May 12, 2005, the Norwegian government announced it would expel him but then put off the order until October at the earliest to ensure he would not face the death penalty. He lost several appeals to various courts, including one to an appellate court on November 22, 2006. As of early December 2006, he remains in Oslo. He is fluent in four languages. Counterterrorist authorities believe he has ties to radicals in Germany, Sweden, Italy, and Spain, although none of those governments had charged him as of December 2006.

Ahmad published an autobiography titled My Own Words and claims to have quit as Ansar al-Islam's leader in 2002. In a June 2006 interview with a Kurdish newspaper, he called Osama bin Laden "a good Muslim" and wished him a long life. He noted the "bad news" of the death of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, head of al Qaeda in Iraq, but observed, "But I am not sad, because he went to paradise." He is represented by Norwegian attorneys Arvid Sjoedin and Brynjar Meling.

Strak Onnik Ajamian: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through the Lisbon airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Sukru Akbayrak: arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and two hand radio receivers.

Sheraly Akbotoyev: member of the pro-Taliban Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU). On May 29, 2002, Kyrgyz secret police announced that he had been captured in Afghanistan and brought to Kyrgyzstan to face trial on terrorism charges. Police hoped to question him about the fate of IMU leader Juma Namagani, who was reported killed in Afghanistan in late 2001; many doubted the report regarding this associate of Osama bin Laden.

Ainoulla A. Akcha: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Ankara to Istanbul, Turkey, on May 3, 1972, that was diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. The three students and one electrician demanded the release of the three TPLA members who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. They threatened to blow up the plane and everyone on board. The Turks refused to negotiate. The group extended their deadline several times and agreed on May 4 to the Turkish government's suggestion that they accept Bulgarian asylum. One passenger had suffered a heart attack during the siege. The foursome was sentenced to three years on November 3, 1972.

Umit Akduman: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Habib Aktas: al Qaeda's chief in Turkey. He was believed involved in the four al Qaeda truck bombings in Turkey in November 2003. The native of Mardin, Turkey, had fought in Chechnya and Bosnia. Two prisoners in Abu Ghraib said that Aktas died in Fallujah, Iraq.

Kahraman Aktas: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Nilufer Alcan: alias Necla-Aynur. Carried a forged ID card and was one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Dimitri K. Alexiev: one of two Bulgarian-born would-be hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 710, a B737 flying from Sacramento to Hollywood and San Francisco in California on July 5, 1972. The duo forced the pilot to fly to San Francisco, where they demanded $800,000, two parachutes, and a flight to Siberia. FBI agents carrying the money entered the plane but fired on the hijackers, killing them and a passenger in the cross-fire as well as wounding two others.

Paul Alfred: west German doctor arrested on October 2, 1986, when Turkish police at Kayseri Airport found a detonator in a bag he and his nurse were about to take onto a Turkish Airlines flight to Istanbul.

Ali: alias of Abdullah Ocalan.

Abu 'Ali: Syrian identified by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) in Nicosia, Cyprus, in 1990 as an ASALA member.

Ahmed Mustafa Ali: Palestinian serving as a Jordanian police sergeant in Serbia and Montenegro who, on April 17, 2004, fired on a three-vehicle United Nations (UN) convoy of international police officers at a UN prison in Kosovska Mitrovica, killing two American female corrections officers (another American later died) and injuring 10 Americans and an Austrian before he was shot to death. The group of police officers included 2 Turks, 21 Americans, and an Austrian who were leaving the facility after a day of training. The gun battle lasted 10 minutes, after an argument about Iraq. Four Jordanian officers were stripped of their diplomatic immunity so that they could be questioned. On April 24, authorities were investigating whether the shooter had Hamas ties. Witnesses said the gunman was smiling while firing his assault rifle. Ali had been decorated for stopping an attack on the Israeli Embassy in Amman. On May 1, police released three of the Jordanian police officers; they could be detained without formal charges for only 15 days under Kosovo law.

Issam Abdel-Alim: Egyptian Islamic Jihad (also known as al-Jihad) member who was arrested by Bulgarian authorities in August 1998 and deported to Egypt.

Mahmut Alinak: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. Alinak was sentenced to three and a half years for disseminating separatist propaganda but was ordered released because he had already spent nine months in jail.

Kazimir Ilich Almazov: Lithuanian born in 1941 who, on April 28, 1990, was arrested after throwing two containers of inflammatory mixture at the parapet of Lenin's Mausoleum in Red Square in Moscow. He was held at the detention center at Butyrki. Criminal proceedings were instituted under Article 206, Section 2.

Cihan Alptekin: on March 27, 1972, five members of the Turkish People's Liberation Army kidnapped three North Atlantic Treaty Organization radar technicians and demanded the release of three terrorists who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of four Americans on March 4, 1971. On March 30, 1972, police raided the terrorists' hideout in Kizildere, Turkey. The terrorists shot their hostages in the head. Police rockets and small arms fire killed the 10 terrorists, including Alptekin, who had escaped from prison in November 1971 with two of the other terrorists.

Anatoli Altman: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24.

Sennur Altoprak: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Adnan Musa Sulayman 'Amerin: translator for the Jordanian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, who was arrested in Turkey on October 24, 1986, for the August 1986 bombing of the Kirikkale ammunition factory in which 8 died and 27 were wounded. Hurriyet said he was working for Syrian intelligence. He claimed diplomatic immunity.

Youssef Amin: Lebanese asylum seeker in Germany and Hizballah member who, on September 17, 1992, stood guard at the door while his colleague shot to death four Democratic Party of Kurdistan politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced him to 11 years.

'Adbab Musa Sulayman Amiri: Jordanian translator at the Jordanian Embassy arrested on November 10, 1986, by Turkish authorities for involvement in the July 24, 1985, assassination of Ziyad al-Sati, the first secretary of the Jordanian Embassy in Ankara. The Islamic Jihad Organization and Black September separately claimed credit. He confessed to giving the order to kill al-Sati. He was believed to be a member of Abu Nidal. On July 8, 1987, he was acquitted. He was released from prison on July 28, 1987.

'Abd-al-Hamid 'Ammud: on February 27, 1992, French Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant for 'Ammud in connection with the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged him with murder and attempted murder. He was considered the main author of the attack. He was believed to carry several passports.

Anastasoulis: leader of the Northern Epirus Liberation Front, which had been blamed for an April 1994 attack on an Albanian barracks.

Vladimir Robertovich Anastasov: one of four men who on December 1, 1988, seized a bus with Soviet schoolchildren, a teacher, and a driver in Ordzhonikidze, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and traded them for $2 million in U.S. currency and an Ilyushin-76T jet transport. The Soviets provided an eight-man crew to fly from Mineralnyee Vody. They flew the next day to a military strip near Israel's Ben Gurion Airport, where they surrendered peacefully. On December 3, 1988, Israel extradited the hijackers. Anastasov's trial began on February 28, 1989, in Moscow. He was born in 1963, had an eighth-grade education, and was a concrete pourer with the Kanavtostroy Construction and Installation Administration. On March 17, 1989, three of the hijackers received 14 years each, part to be served in a labor camp. Another gang member who helped plot the hijacking but backed out at the last minute got three years.

Ivan Andabak: Yugoslav émigré who escaped in West Germany on November 11, 1978, after attacking several Yugoslav citizens in Konstanz, Germany, near the Switzerland border, killing one and wounding two.

Antonov: one of three individuals who, on July 8, 1987, obtained hand grenades, stole a car in Tolbukhin, Bulgaria, and kidnapped two schoolboys. They then headed for the Zlatni Pyasutsi tourist resort. They set off three grenades in front of the International Hotel, injuring three people. After 25 hours of negotiations, the terrorists threw their grenades. Authorities killed two of the terrorists on the spot; the third died the next day of his wounds.

Sergei Ivanov Antonov: arrested on November 25, 1982, by Rome police for involvement in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was believed to have provided a hideout to Mehmet Ali Agca, the would-be assassin. Antonov was the Rome station chief for Balkan Airlines. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Waleśa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome. He was permitted house arrest on November 25, 1982. On June 18, 1984, he was permitted house arrest to receive medical treatment for anorexia nervosa and circulatory and heart problems. On March 29, 1986, Judge Severino Santiapichi announced that the Rome jury had acquitted the Bulgarian on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope because of insufficient evidence. His lawyers said they would appeal the verdict in hopes of winning full acquittal by innocence. His life and health went downhill after the trial, and he was isolated in his last decades. His body was found in his Sofia apartment on August 1, 2007; he apparently had died two days earlier.

Mahir 'Arafat: Palestinian student arrested on May 2, 1991, in Politekhnioupolis, Zografos, an Athens, Greece, suburb, in connection with the explosion of a parcel bomb on April 19, 1991.

The bomb killed 7 and injured 10 others at the Patras, Greece, offices of Air Courier Service.

Coskun Aral: photographer for the Paris-based SIPA press agency who was arrested on suspicion of helping four hijackers of Turkish Airlines Flight TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich, Germany, to Istanbul and Ankara, Turkey, on October 13, 1980. He was released on October 17, 1980.

Shafik el Arida: Palestinian and one of two Black Septemberists who opened their suitcases at an Athens airport inspection on August 5, 1973, pulled out machine guns and grenades, and killed 3 and wounded 55 passengers. They had been ordered to attack the Trans World Airlines flight to Tel Aviv, Israel, but the passengers had already boarded. The dead included two Americans and an Indian. The terrorists claimed that they were avenging the Mossad execution of Abu Youssef in Beirut on April 10, 1973. They seized 35 hostages but soon surrendered to Athens police.

On August 7, 1973, the two told a court that they had "orders to hit at emigrants to Israel because they kill our wives and children." Arida, age 22, had flown from Benghazi, Libya, on August 3 to surveil the Athens transit lounge. The Seventh Suicide Squad claimed credit, although the duo was later identified as belonging to Ahmad abd-al Ghaffur's group of Fatah dissidents. After a one-day trial, a Greek court sentenced them to death on January 23, 1974. The sentences were commuted to life in prison on April 23, 1974. Their release was demanded in the armed attack and hijacking on December 17, 1973, in Italy and the February 2, 1974, takeover of a Greek ship in Karachi, Pakistan. The duo was released and expelled to Libya on May 5, 1974. It appears they were freed in Libya; one of them was with Abd-al Ghaffur when he was killed in Beirut on September 13, 1974.

Adil Arslan: identified in Munich, Germany's, Focus as a former member of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) who had earlier been charged with membership in a terrorist association and the criminal acts connected with it. In 1992, the Celle Higher Regional Court sentenced him to four years and two months in prison for severe deprivation of liberty and dangerous bodily injury. He was released on probation. He was injured when an apparent PKK gunman shot him several times in the face.

Alpaslan Arslan: after shouting "God is great" and "We are God's ambassadors," on May 17, 2006, he fired a 9-mm pistol at judges in the country's highest administrative court, killing Mustafa Yucel Ozbilgin and wounding four others in Ankara, Turkey, at midmorning. Police arrested the lawyer, who was protesting a February ruling restricting female employees from wearing Islamic head scarves in state workplaces. CNN's Turk TV said he was linked to Turkish Hizballah.

Mehmet Arslan: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Vladimer Arutiniani: variants Vladimir Arutyunian, Vladimir Arutyunov. Male suspect who was detained on July 20, 2005, in connection with the grenade that was thrown from the crowd on May 10, 2005, in Georgia during President Bush's visit. The gun battle took place at his apartment after police showed up following a tip that he might have relevant information. Police found grenades and chemicals in his home near Tbilisi, Georgia. He was shown in a video the next day admitting to having thrown the device. On July 22, he was charged with premeditated murder in the killing of the police officer. The suspect remained hospitalized with injuries sustained during the gun battle. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents removed boxes of evidence from his home on July 25.

On September 7, 2005, a grand jury in Washington, D.C., charged him with two counts of trying to assassinate the president and on a related weapons charge. He faced life in prison. He was represented by attorney Guliko Dzhimsheladze, who said her client "believes that Bush is interfering in Georgia's internal affairs."

His trial in Georgia began on December 5, 2005. He appeared in court with his mouth sutured shut in solidarity with thousands of Georgian prisoners on hunger strikes. He was convicted on January 11, 2006, and sentenced to life in prison for attempting to assassinate President Bush and Georgian president Mikheil Saakashvili and a policeman in a shootout several weeks later.

Arutun Arutunian: deputy director of Armenian national television who was arrested on January 8, 2000, and charged two days later with organizing the October 27, 1999, seizure of the Armenian Parliament in which the prime minister and 6 others were killed and at least 50 hostages were held.

Armen Arutyunian: Russian ticket scalper charged on September 24, 2004, with complicity in terrorism in connection with the suicide bombings on August 24, 2004, against two Russian passenger jets that left the same Moscow airport within 30 minutes of each other, killing all 90 on board. On April 12, 2005, a Moscow regional court charged Arutyunian and Nikolai Korenkov, an airline employee, with charges of aiding and abetting terrorism and commercial bribery in the bombings. Two Chechen women believed to have blown up the planes purchased their tickets from Arutyunian.

Vladimir Arutyunian: variant of Vladimer Arutiniani.

Vladimir Arutyunov: variant of Vladimer Arutiniani.

Kamran Asadov: Azeri Army lieutenant who deserted and stole 20 hand grenades, a machine gun, four assault rifles, and ammunition. He was linked with several members of a Wahhabi Islamic group planning to attack the U.S. Embassy and other government buildings in the country with stolen military grenades and assault rifles. They were arrested on October 27, 2007. He was detained on November 9, 2007, 10 days after robbing a gas station of several thousand dollars.

Jacqueline Asbir: variant of Jacqueline Esbar.

Qasim Asbir: on March 8, 1990, the Syrian Embassy in Athens denied press charges that the Syrian attaché was involved in killing Pavlospa Konanis.

Asenov: one of three individuals who on July 8, 1987, obtained hand grenades, stole a car in Tolbukhin, Bulgaria, and kidnapped two schoolboys. They then headed for the Zlatni Pyasutsi tourist resort. They set off three grenades in front of the International Hotel, injuring three people. After 25 hours of negotiations, the terrorists threw their grenades. Authorities killed two of the terrorists on the spot; the third died the next day of his wounds.

Issmail Jama Ashan: one of two Turks, age 18, who hijacked a Turkish Airlines B727 flying from Diyarbakir to Ankara, Turkey, on March 19, 1977, and diverted it to Beirut, Lebanon. They demanded $300,000 in Turkish currency and a visit to the nearest Palestinian refugee camp. They surrendered to Lebanese authorities.

Aslam Muhammad Aslam: one of two Pakistani brothers arrested by passport control officers at Ruzyně Airport in Czechoslovakia on January 28, 1991. He was on a list of international terrorists. The duo was searched but no suspicious objects were found. They were flown back to Belgrade, Serbia, on January 28.

Aslan: alias of Sultan Said Idiyeve.

Samet Aslan: arrested by Agri, Turkey, provincial police on July 19, 1987, when he arrived from the Netherlands at Ankara's Esenboga Airport. He allegedly was an accomplice of Mehmet Ali Agca in his attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was arrested in the Netherlands during Agca's trial in Rome for carrying an unlicensed pistol but was released after serving a short term.

Yusef Aslan: one of three Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) kidnappers of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. Their release was demanded by four TPLA hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 on May 3, 1972. On May 3, 1972, the Turkish tourist office in Sweden was bombed in response to Ankara's parliament ratifying the death sentences. The trio was hanged on May 6, 1972.

Mohammed Assomunah: Libyan student dissatisfied with his government so he hijacked a Libyan Airlines B727 flying from Benghazi to Tripoli, Libya, on its way to Frankfurt, West Germany, on August 24, 1979. He initially wanted to go to Greece, then Cyprus, Beirut, Lebanon, and Damascus, Syria, but ultimately landed at Larnaca, Cyprus, when the plane ran low on fuel. He surrendered to police and requested political asylum. The next day, Cyprus handed him over to a Libyan delegation.

Halil Atc: alias Ebu Bekir. Identified on November 11, 1993, by the Turkish Daily News as a prison escapee and leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in 1979.

Bedri Ates: alias of Oral Celik.

Menelaos Athimis: one of the EOKA-B (Ethniki Organosis Kyprion Agoniston, or National Organisation of Cypriot Fighters, a Greek Cypriot paramilitary organization) bombers of three British military bases in Cyprus on December 1, 1977. On December 4, Cypriot police arrested eight former EOKA-B members. On December 13, the police obtained an eight-day extension of the detention for three people, including Athimis. The bombing was believed related to the extradition hearing in the United Kingdom of Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot. Threats had been made against U.K. installations in April 1977 regarding his extradition. Athimis's release from Cypriot prison was demanded by the EOKA-B kidnappers of Second Lt. Achilles Kyprianou, son of president Spiro Kyprianou, on December 14, 1977.

Karim Sa'id Atmani: extradited by Canada to France on charges that he participated in the 1995 Paris subway bombing that killed 4 and injured 86. He reportedly had lived with Ahmed Ressam in Canada. Ressam was arrested on the United States–Canadian border on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives. In April 2001, Atmani was arrested by Bosnia–Herzegovina authorities. He was extradited in July 2001 to France, where he was wanted on an Interpol warrant.

Lt. Abdel Aziz al Atrash: alias Zacharia; variant Zechariah. One of the May 8, 1972, Black September hijackers of Sabena Airlines Flight 517, a B707 flying the Vienna–Athens–Tel Aviv route over Zagreb. He died when Israeli forces stormed the plane.

Mohamed Atris: on April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced Atris to five years and three months for involvement in the September 17, 1992, murder of four Democratic Party of Kurdistan politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians.

Sami Hanna Attalah: Iraqi Kurd bomber claimed that Attalah, an Iraqi second secretary, had given him a briefcase to take to the Iranian Embassy in Austria. The bomb exploded on July 30, 1980, injuring eight people. The Kurd had second thoughts and decided to call the police, but the bomb exploded as soon as he put the briefcase down and slightly injured him.

Ali Atwa: aliases Ammar Mansour Bouslim, Hassan Rostom Salim. Member of Lebanese Hizballah indicted for his role and participation in the June 14, 1985, hijacking of Trans World Airlines Flight 847, which had departed Athens en route for Rome. The attack resulted in the assault on various passengers and crew members and the murder of an American citizen. At the time of the hijacking, he was captured while loitering in the Athens airport. He had accompanied the other two hijackers to the Athens airport but did not board the flight since all the seats had been sold. He confessed, telling the Greeks that the attackers' gun had been smuggled aboard inside a fish; the grenades had been hidden inside fruit. The hijackers threatened to kill the Greek hostages if Atwa was not flown to Algiers. He was flown to Algiers and exchanged for some Greek passengers.

On July 3, 1985, a U.S. federal court in Washington, D.C., issued an arrest warrant on murder and piracy charges. On July 12, 1985, the Lebanese government announced that the hijackers would be prosecuted, but they were not arrested. Atwa is wanted for conspiracy to commit aircraft piracy, commit hostage taking, commit air piracy resulting in murder, interfere with a flight crew, place a destructive device aboard an aircraft, to have explosive devices about the person on an aircraft, and to assault passengers and crew. The Rewards for Justice Program offers $5 million for his apprehension. He was born in Lebanon in 1960 and may have both Saudi and Lebanese citizenship. He is five feet eight inches tall and weighs 150 pounds.

Anton Avirotec: one of six Croatian immigrants who were found guilty of terrorism charges in Sydney, Australia, on February 9, 1981, after a 10-month trial involving 112 witnesses. The terrorists planned to set off bombs to disrupt Sydney's water supply, bomb various travel agencies, bomb a local theater during a performance of Croatian singers and dancers visiting Australia, and bomb properties occupied by Yugoslavia. On February 17, 1981, they were sentenced to 15 years for conspiring to make bombs and to 5 plus years for possessing explosives with intent to cause injury and damage. The sentences, to run concurrently, were to date from their arrest two years earlier.

Amarchenov Avmerchan: Dagestani who hijacked a Dagestan Airlines TU-154 on November 11, 2000, after it left Makhachkala for Moscow. The plane landed in Israel, where Avmerchan was arrested and handed over to the Russians for extradition.

Kalil 'Awad: Palestinian Islamic Jihad member whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was sentenced by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992, to nine years and six months for arranging the delivery of arms and explosives.

Amer Ay: variant Omer. Grey Wolves member who was jailed in Turkey. Mehmet Ali Agca claimed he was with Ay in St. Peter's Square in the Vatican during the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981.

Omer Ay: variant of Amer Ay.

Atallah Ayad: Lebanese who was believed to have planned the September 17, 1992, Hizballah assassination of four Kurdish politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. He had been an Amal militiaman in Lebanon. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal acquitted him.

Aydemir: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Faruk Aydin: alias the Red Doctor. Founder of the Turkish People's Liberation Party-Front Warriors. He was arrested by Turkish police on December 17, 1980. He was held responsible for at least 11 murders, including the May 11, 1979, killing of U.S. Army Spec. Five Thomas Mosley.

Harun Aydin: Turkish militant arrested October 17, 2001, by Frankfurt airport authorities while attempting to board a flight to Iran with detonators, combat clothing, a mask, a biochem-protective suit, a CD-ROM advocating jihad and suicide attacks, his will, and a farewell note to his wife. The Berlin prosecutor was investigating him for planning "serious acts of violence as a member of a terrorist group with an Islamic fundamentalist background," and he was suspected of "giving instructions for serious crimes such as murder and manslaughter." He was a member of Islamic State, a Cologne-based extremist group that planned a failed suicide attack on the tomb of Turkey's founder, Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, during 1998 celebrations. The group planned to crash a plane into the tomb. Islamic State is headed by his brother-in-law, Muhammed Metin Kaplan, who was serving a four-year term in Germany for calling for the killing of a rival. Aydin was acquitted in the case.

Niyazi Aydin: deputy of Durmus Karatas, leader of a Turkish terrorist organization that planned to kill U.S. president George Bush during a visit to Ataturk's mausoleum in Ankara, Turkey. He was killed in a police raid on July 16, 1991. Aydin led the group's armed unit in Istanbul and took part in the murder of Hiram Abbas.

Ramazan Aydin: Turkish waiter, age 20, sympathetic to Chechen rebels. On March 8, 1996, Aydin hijacked a North Cyprus Turkish Airlines B727 flying from Ercan Airport in Turkish-controlled northern Cyprus to Istanbul, Turkey, diverting it to Sofia, Bulgaria. He demanded fuel, then flew to Munich, Germany, where he surrendered on March 9. He carried a Russian passport.

Cuneyt Aykut: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Ayhad Aykut: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Orhan Aykut: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Omer Ayna: on March 27, 1972, five members of the Turkish People's Liberation Army kidnapped three North Atlantic Treaty Organization radar technicians and demanded the release of three terrorists who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of four Americans on March 4, 1971. On March 30, 1972, police raided the terrorists' hideout in Kizildere, Turkey. The terrorists shot their hostages in the head. Police rockets and small arms fire killed the 10 terrorists, including Ayna, who had escaped from prison in November 1971 with two of the other terrorists. Ayna was believed involved in the kidnapping and murder of Israeli consul general Ephraim Elrom on May 17, 1971.

Perihan-Ayşe: alias of Seyhan Dogan.

Cemile Ayyildiz: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Recep Ayyildiz: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Said Ayyub: one of six members of al-Saiqa arrested in Cyprus for the May 29, 1984, shooting of Abdullah Ahmed Sulieman Saadi, a Palestinian al-Saiqa member who had defected to Yassir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. On May 13, 1984, he was deported after authorities considered the repercussions of a trial.

Mohammad Azadi: Iranian briefly detained by French police who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapur Bakhtiar in his Paris home. Azadi and an associate had tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports in the names of Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas. On August 14, the People's Mujahedeen exile group said he was a member of the Al Qoods (Jerusalem) Force, a terrorist unit in the Iranian Revolutionary Guard. They said that Azadi was a senior member of the elite unit and led the hit team.

Joseph Assad Azar: one of four al-Saiqa terrorists who were arrested by Amsterdam police detectives on September 5, 1975, while planning to take over the daily 0836 D-train from Moscow at Amersfoort station the next day. They intended to kidnap immigrating Russian Jews and demand a plane to fly them and their hostages out of the country. Three days later, they were sentenced to 18 months. Azar said that the group had been trained in 1972 in a village outside Moscow. Their preliminary six-month course covered the use of arms and explosives as well as propaganda and interrogation survival techniques.

Faruk Azgun: alias of Mehmet Alia Agca.

Tawfik Wadi' al-Azhar: one of six Arabs for whom the Nicosia District Court issued an eight-day arrest warrant on May 30, 1989, in connection with the discovery two days earlier by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader, Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca. All six were charged, inter alia, with illegal entry into Cyprus and with possession of weapons and explosives. On June 2, 1989, Lebanon requested extradition.

On June 22, 1989, the Larnaca District Court set June 30 as the date for the opening of the preliminary hearing. The trial began on October 9, 1989. All pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and transporting weapons and explosives. Five pleaded guilty to illegal entry. The trial was moved from Larnaca to Nicosia for security reasons. On October 13, 1989, the court sentenced the six on eight charges. Five received jail sentences ranging from one to eight years; the sixth received one to five years. All of the penalties were to be concurrent, effective the date of arrest. The court president said he took the psychological state of the sixth accused into consideration in determining the verdict. On April 15, 1991, Cypriot authorities deported the six Lebanese to Beirut after they had served 17 months of their sentences.

Amer Azizi: alias Othman al-Andalusi. European al Qaeda operative believed to have been in contact with the leader of the al Qaeda terrorists who on March 11, 2004, set off bombs in several commuter trains in Madrid, killing 200 and injuring 2,000. Azizi had fought in Bosnia and Afghanistan.

On April 28, 2004, Azizi, age 36, a Moroccan sought for the 3/11 attack, was indicted on charges of helping to plan the 9/11 attacks by organizing a meeting in Tarragona in northeastern Spain in July 2001, in which key plotters, Muhammad Atta and Ramzi Binalshibh, finalized details, according to Judge Baltasar Garzon. He was also charged in a September 2003 indictment against bin Laden and 34 other terrorist suspects, and he was charged with belonging to a terrorist organization. Azizi was charged with multiple counts of murder "as many deaths and injuries as were committed" on 9/11. He allegedly provided lodging for the Tarragona meeting and acted as a terrorist courier. Azizi was a close friend of Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass, who was jailed on November 2001 for leading a Spanish al Qaeda cell that funded and provided logistics for the 9/11 attackers. Azizi fled Spain in November 2001. In late 2004, the U.S. Department of State offered a $5 million reward for information leading to the arrest of Azizi's handler, Spanish citizen Mustafa Setmariam Nasar, an al Qaeda operative who ran a training camp in Afghanistan.

Michael D. Azmanoff: one of two Bulgarian-born would-be hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 710, a B737 flying from Sacramento to Hollywood and San Francisco, California, on July 5, 1972. The duo forced the pilot to fly to San Francisco, where they demanded $800,000, two para-chutes, and a flight to Siberia. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents carrying the money entered the plane but fired on the hijackers, killing them and a passenger in the crossfire as well as wounding two others.

B

---

Omar Bagci: variant of Omer Bagci.

Omer Bagci: variant Omar Bagci. Turkish terrorist believed to have given Mehmet Ali Agca the 9-mm pistol used in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was arrested a few days later by police in Solothurn, Switzerland. His appeal against extradition to Italy was rejected by the Swiss Supreme Court on October 13, 1982. On March 29, 1986, he was sentenced to three years and two months for bringing the weapon to Italy but was cleared of the principal charge of conspiracy on the grounds that there was no proof that he had knowledge of Agca's intentions.

On January 9, 1995, Philippine police announced that they were searching for him in connection with a newly-discovered plan to murder the pope during his visit to the Philippines. He allegedly was one of four Turks who had entered the country disguised as priests.

Said Bahaji: indicted by Germany in late 2001 as part of an al Qaeda cell in Hamburg that assisted the 9/11 hijackers. He was a German citizen whose father was Moroccan. Bahaji, 9/11 leader Muhammad Atta, and Ramzi Binalshibh rented an apartment on Marien Street, Hamburg, on December 1, 1998, that served as an al Qaeda cell. Hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi lived there; Pennsylvania hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah was a frequent visitor. Bahaji, the cell's logistics specialist, showed up in Karachi, Pakistan, on a Turkish Airlines flight in early September, accompanied by individuals claiming to be Abdullah Hussainy, a Belgian of Algerian origin, and Ammar Moula, a Frenchman. Investigators determined in mid-November that they were Binalshibh and Zakariya Essabar, age 24, a Moroccan who also lived on Marien Street. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked Bahaji's financial assets.

Basri Bajrami: Albanian with Yugoslav citizenship arrested for the kidnapping of former Belgian prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants on January 14, 1989. He was arrested in February 1989 in Metz, France, with 198,000 Swiss francs in his pockets, part of the ransom for Vanden Boeynants. The Yugoslav press reported on June 15, 1989, that Belgian police prevented the kidnapping of Justice Minister Melchior Wathelet. The kidnapping plan was being prepared by the Albanian mafia in cooperation with Belgian and Turkish gangsters to secure Bajrami's release. Bajrami's Belgian wife is Evelyne Braibant, who was released from jail in 1989.

Amir Bajric: Bosnian ex-convict with a tattoo of Osama bin Laden on his chest who was arrested on October 19, 2005, in Copenhagen, Denmark, after providing 40 pounds of explosives to Mirsad Bektasevic, a Bosnian who used it to fabricate an explosives vest on Polygonska Street in Sarajevo. He was arrested after Sarajevo police raided an apartment occupied by an underground group that was planning to bomb the U.K. Embassy. Police confiscated explosives, rifles, other arms, and a video hailing "brothers" who were killed in Afghanistan and Iraq. They were hiding explosives inside lemons and tennis balls and trying to set up terrorist training camps in the hills outside Sarajevo.

Turkan Balaban: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Yeoryios Balafas: Greek construction worker arrested on November 30, 1992, after a seven-year manhunt in connection with the December 23, 1975, assassination of Richard Welch, U.S. Central Intelligence Agency chief of the Athens station. He was also wanted for at least six deadly attacks, had been linked with three different terrorist groups, and was then affiliated with the November 17 group. He faced charges in the 1985 assassination of public prosecutor Yeoryios Theiphalopoulos, carried out by the Anti-State Struggle, and for killing three policemen that year. He was also wanted in the death of two security guards shot in a six million drachma supermarket robbery. Police linked him to two arms caches discovered in 1985 and 1989. His fingerprints were found on the keys to a car used in the killing of Welch. He was arrested with his girlfriend, Vasiliki Mikhou, and his friend, Andreas Kiriakopoulos, while visiting a friend's house.

Joseph Balla: one of seven anti-Communist Hungarian students who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Arbi Barayev: prominent Chechen warlord, age 27, who, with 18 of his colleagues and a Russian soldier, died in a Russian attack at Yermolovo village near Alkhan-Kala on June 25, 2001. A pro-Chechen Web site confirmed the killing of Barayev, who was reportedly responsible for 170 deaths, including those of three Britons and a New Zealander kidnapped in 1998 and found decapitated.

Movsar Barayev: nephew, age 25, of Arabi Barayev. He headed a group of Islamic radicals he called the Islamic Special Purpose Regiment of the Chechen State Defense Committee (Majlis al-Shura) with 400 active fighters and as many in reserve. On October 23, 2002, he led the scores of Chechens to take over a Moscow theater and hold 900 hostages. He was killed on October 26, 2002, when Russian troops stormed the theater.

Ulas Bardakci: one of five members of the Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) who escaped from Istanbul's maximum security military prison on November 30, 1971. He was a participant in the kidnapping and murder by the TPLA (or perhaps Dev Genc, the Turkish Revolutionary Youth Federation) of Ephraim Elrom, Israel's consul general in Istanbul, on May 17, 1971. Bardakci was shot and killed in a police shootout on the shores of the Bosphorus on February 19, 1972.

Milo Bareschic: variants Miro Baressich, Miro Baresic. Croatian assassin of Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden Vladimir Rolovic in 1971. He was imprisoned in Sweden after pleading guilty to the assassination in April 1971. His release was obtained by three Croatian hijackers of Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130, a DC9 flying from Göteborg to Stockholm, Sweden, on September 15, 1972. He was permitted to leave for Asuncion, Paraguay, on June 23, 1974. On May 28, 1980, he was extradited from the United States to Sweden, where he was imprisoned again. He was believed by the Yugoslavians to have been involved in terrorist activities in the United States. On June 3, 1980, the Croatian Freedom Fighters bombed the Washington, D.C., home of acting Yugoslav ambassador Vladimir Sindjelic, calling for an investigation into the case of Bareschic, who had worked for the Paraguayan Embassy in Washington from 1977 to 1978 under an assumed name. The member of the Croatian Nationalist Movement (Hrvatski Drzavotvorni Pokret) had been sentenced to life, but the sentence was commuted to 18 years in 1986 for good conduct. On December 2, 1987, Sweden announced that it would parole and deport him on December 10, 1987.

Miro Baresic: variant of Milo Bareschic.

Miro Baressich: variant of Milo Bareschic.

Miro Barzico: one of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslav Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16 in a Stockholm court, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. On July 14, the London Times reported that the group had planned to form a terrorist group that would attack people in Sweden suspected of working for Yugoslavia against the Croatsians.

On September 15, 1972, three Croatian émigrés hijacked a Scandinavian Airlines airliner and obtained the release of six Croatian terrorists being held in Swedish jails. The plane was flown to Spain, where authorities apprehended all nine Croatsians. The six who had been released in Sweden were permitted to leave Spain for Paraguay on June 23, 1974. Sweden requested the extradition of three of them for the Rolovic killing. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for their arrest, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay.

In May 1980, one of the Croatsians accused in the assassination was extradited to Sweden by the United States. He had been turned over to the United States for prosecution on charges of fraudulently applying for a visa to enter the United States in December 1979 but was acquitted.

Shamil Basayev: Chechen guerrilla leader whose followers on June 14, 1995, invaded Budennovsk, Russia, killed scores of people, and then took over the local hospital, taking over 1,300 hostages. His wife and children had been killed by Russian forces earlier in the month. On August 22, 1995, he threatened to carry out terrorist attacks using radioactive substances. On November 8, 1995, he told Independent Television Network where there was a buried container of cesium isotope and said that four containers were wrapped in TNT and could be detonated. He led the Islamic International Peacekeeping Brigade, which was established in 1998, and the Riyadus-Salikhin Reconnaissance and Sabotage Battalion of Chechen Martyrs (Requirements for Getting into Paradise). He claimed credit for the May 14, 2003, suicide bombing of an Islamic prayer meeting in Iliskhan-Yurt, a village outside Gudermes, killing 18 people and injuring between 45 and 150; and the September 1, 2004, attack on the school in Beslan in which hundreds were killed. He also directed two suicide bombers onto two Russian jets in 2004. The Federal Security Service on March 15, 2005, offered a $10 million bounty.

On July 10, 2006, a dynamite-laden truck exploded around midnight near Ekazhevo in Ingushetia amid a convoy of Chechen terrorists, killing Basayev, age 41. It was unclear whether the government had placed the 220 pounds of dynamite on the truck or whether it was dynamite mishandled by the terrorists. Another dozen terrorists died in the explosion, which destroyed the truck and three cars in the convoy.

Basayev was born in 1965 in Chechnya and served two years in the Soviet military. He flunked out of a land management institute in 1987 and could not get into law school. He worked as a Moscow computer salesman. In November 1991, he and two others hijacked an Aeroflot flight to Turkey. He and the passengers were permitted safe passage back to Chechnya. He became a key rebel commander during the first Chechen war of 1994–1995. In 1995, a Russian plane bombed his home town, and he lost 11 family members, including his first wife. By 1996, he had become commander of the Chechen Armed Forces. He ran for the presidency, but lost. However, in 1998, he was prime minister for a short time. In 1999, he infiltrated Dagestan, which was one of the reasons for the beginning of the second Chechen war. In 2000, he lost a foot to a landmine.

Hussein Bashir: aliases (or may be actual name) Bashir Abu Khair, Hussain al-Bathis, Hussein Abad al-Chir. Chief of the 40-man Fatah contingent in Cyprus who was killed on January 25, 1973, when a short-range radio signal set off a bomb placed beneath his bed in the Olympic Hotel on President Makarios Avenue, three days after he arrived in Nicosia. He was believed to be Black September's contact with the KGB in Cyprus and had returned from a meeting with a Cypriot agent who had given him a check for $5,000. He carried a Syrian passport and a Lebanese laissez-passer, but was a Palestinian.

Abu-al-Basir: recruitment coordinator, possibly in Bosnia, of foreign fighters for al Qaeda in Iraq in 2006.

Aram Basmadjian: Kuwaiti and one of the four Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. Turkey announced after the incident that it would try the terrorists in absentia under Section 125 of the Turkish penal code. On January 31, 1984, a Paris court sentenced the four terrorists to seven years in prison. Basmadjian hanged himself in his prison cell in April 1985.

Hussain al-Bathis: see entry for Hussein Bashir.

Moshe Antoine Bavli: Israeli of French origin, who, after plea bargaining, was sentenced on May 11, 1981, by an assize court in Cyprus to two years in prison in connection with a bomb that exploded on January 3, 1981, and injured Hani al-Hindi, a prominent Syrian journalist and publisher. Al-Hindi had founded several Arab and Palestinian movements. Police withdrew the charges of conspiring to kill the victim and attempted murder. Bavli pleaded guilty to conspiring with other persons to keep watch on al-Hindi by unlawful means, circulating a false document (a Canadian passport) with intent to deceive the authorities, driving with a forged international driving license, illegal entry into Cyprus without a passport, and use of a wireless set without a permit from the Council of Ministers.

Cemil Bayik: deputy chief of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in September 1993 and commander of the People's Liberation Army of Kurdistan military council. He succeeded Abdullah Ocalan as PKK chief after the latter's arrest on February 15, 1999.

Ibrahim al-Baykirat: Palestinian whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was sentenced by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992, to life in prison plus 25 years for forming a terrorist group and supplying, making, and transporting a bomb causing loss of human life.

Maksim Bebic: one of six Croatian immigrants who were found guilty of terrorism charges in Sydney, Australia, on February 9, 1981, after a 10-month trial involving 112 witnesses. The terrorists planned to set off bombs to disrupt Sydney's water supply, bomb various travel agencies, bomb a local theater during a performance of Croatian singers and dancers visiting Australia, and bomb properties occupied by Yugoslavia. On February 17, 1981, they were sentenced to 15 years for conspiring to make bombs and to 5 plus years for possessing explosives with intent to cause injury and damage. The sentences, to run concurrently, were to date from their arrest two years earlier.

Koti Bejleri: Albanian who was one of seven people arrested on March 19, 1995, by Greek police while preparing to conduct a terrorist attack against a barracks in Longos Gjirokaster. The group was charged with illegally possessing and transporting weapons. They were members of the Northern Epirus Liberation Front, which had been blamed for an April 1994 attack on an Albanian barracks. The group's leader said they were on vacation and accidentally discovered the weapons in a hollow in Dhelvinakion.

Theodoros Bekhrakis: arrested on September 14, 1985, by Greek police and charged with membership in a terrorist organization. He was suspected of two Revolutionary Group for International Solidarity–Khristos Kasimis bombings the previous day at Citibank in Athens and under the car of M. Sgt. Joe Brady, a U.S. serviceman at Elinikon base. On September 16, 1985, he was charged with terrorist activities dating back to 1981.

Zeynep Yildirim Bektas: alias Nurten. One of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Mirsad Bektasevic: Internet screen name "Maximus." Bosnian refugee, age 19, who lived in Sweden and later moved to Sarajevo, Bosnia, where he put together weapons for a suicide attack and filmed a martyrdom video for al Qaeda. He was arrested on October 19, 2005, in a safe house on Copenhagen, Denmark's, Polygonska Street while making an explosives vest out of nitroglycerin and ammonium nitrate. The Swedish citizen of Bosnian origin ran a Web site on behalf of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Bektasevic had pictures of the White House on his computer. He kept in touch with three men in the United Kingdom who were arrested in early November. They were hiding explosives inside lemons and tennis balls and trying to set up terrorist training camps in the hills outside Sarajevo.

Bansayah Belkacem: variant of Bensayah Belkacem.

Bensayah Belkacem: variant Bansayah Belkacem; alias Mejd. On October 9, 2001, Bosnian investigators were tracing al Qaeda links to the Bosnian arrested on a U.S. tip that he spoke by phone with a bin Laden aide on how to obtain foreign passports. He made dozens of phone calls to Afghanistan after 9/11 to Abu Zubaydah. He had arrived in Bosnia in 1995. He had been surveilling the U.S. Embassy.

On January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Belkacem and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001. The group had been arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001.

Hamdane Benhelel: Algerian member of a hijacking trio who took over Royal Dutch Airlines Flight 366, a DC9 flying from Malaga, Spain, to Amsterdam, Netherlands, on September 4, 1976. The plane landed in Tunis and Cyprus for refueling. While circling off Israel's shore, the trio demanded the release by Israel of eight prisoners, including Kozo Okamoto and Archbishop Hilarion Capucci. The trio surrendered in Cyprus. They claimed they were members of a Libyan-based Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine unit. They were believed to have obtained asylum in an undisclosed country.

Brahim Benmerzouga: Benmerzouga, age 30, who was one of two Algerians charged by British police on January 17, 2002, with planning and financing terrorist acts for al Qaeda in Leicester. Local police also detained 11 other men on charges of terrorism and immigration fraud. Benmerzouga was charged with similar offenses and “possessing racially inflammatory materials.” French media said the Leicester cell planned and financed an aborted al Qaeda effort in 2001 to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris. The duo was to appear in court the next week for a bail hearing. Police found propaganda material encouraging the recruitment of young Muslims for jihad training. They also seized money, fake credit cards, and other counterfeit documents. Police found video tapes, including 19 copies of a film of bin Laden’s speeches and films of operations in Chechnya and Afghanistan. On April 1, 2003, the Leicester Crown Court found them guilty of raising money for terrorism and sentenced them to 11 years in prison.

Isabella Bertrand: alias Daphne. Bertrand was arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People’s Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People’s Authority. The group had planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and to sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group had received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Mustafa Besheshi: one of four Palestinian terrorists who were found guilty on February 17, 1983, in Turkey and again sentenced to death for their part in the July 13, 1979, raid on the Egyptian

Embassy in Ankara that resulted in the death of two security guards. They had been tried twice before at the Ankara Martial Law Command’s First Military Court and the Ankara First High Criminal Court, but both times, their sentences were annulled.

Witold Bialoboki: Pole who, on the evening of April 8, 1983, fired a .22-mm rifle at least 13 times at the Soviet Consulate in Marseilles, France. He was apprehended the next evening for firing at the façade of the Aeroflot office in Marseilles following a car chase by police. He was charged with property damage and arrested for the two confessed shootings.

Pembegul Bibnir: fifth-year student at the Cerrahpasa Medical University who was arrested on September 11, 1989, after throwing a bomb at the U.S. Consulate General at Tepebasi, Istanbul, Turkey. She is a member of the Women’s Association for Democracy. Her father worked with a trade union affiliated with the Confederation of Revolutionary Trade Unions. Police found banned publications and documents of organizations in a search of her home in Goztepe, Kadikoy.

Stjepan Bilandzic: imprisoned in Cologne, West Germany, for the attempted murder of Vladimir Topic, Yugoslav vice-consul, in Duesseldorf in 1976. He reputedly founded the Croatian National Resistance. Yugoslav authorities requested his extradition for sending two individuals to Yugoslavia to begin a terrorist campaign. A Cologne court ruled that he could be extradited, but his lawyers petitioned Germany’s highest court for an injunction, arguing that extradition would be a death warrant.

His release was demanded by two armed Croats who seized the West German Consulate in Chicago on August 17, 1978, and demanded that the government prevent his extradition to Yugoslavia. A phone hookup was established, and he urged the duo to surrender. They did. Bilandzic was freed by a Cologne court in September 1978 and visited Chicago to raise money for a defense fund for the two. He was a distant relative of Mike Kodzoman, one of the terrorists.

Peter Binder: chemical engineer and member of the Austrian neo-Nazi scene arrested on December 9, 1993, by Vienna, Austria, police in connection with a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993. He was detained at the Kleinhagisdorf at the Hate border checkpoint with the Czech Republic when he tried to forward a weapons delivery ordered by a German neo-Nazi in Berlin. Czech border officials found 13 long rifles, 3 handguns, and ammunition in his Audi 80, which he wanted to drive to Berlin. In a search of two of his apartments, police found components for the letter bombs, including glycerin, nitric acid, and sulfuric acid, which he had bought abroad.

Miklos Biro: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 flying from Bucharest, Romania, to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich, Germany. The hijackers were disarmed by West German police and requested political asylum. He was sentenced to two and a half years by a West German court on January 20, 1971.

Piroschka Biro: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 flying from Bucharest, Romania, to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich, Germany. The hijackers were disarmed by West German police and requested political asylum. Biro was accompanied by her two children and was found innocent.

Ilyas Bitar: Lebanese named by Cypriot authorities on August 6, 1986, as having been involved in the August 3, 1986, attack by rockets, machine guns, and mortars at the British air base at Akrotiri by the Unified Nasirite Organization. A car with spent shells had been rented by him. On August 9, I Simerini reported that he flew to Europe on August 4 and was thought to be in Yugoslavia or East Germany.

Mustafa Bitayti: one of four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) who took over the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979. He was born in Beirut, Lebanon, in 1960. The four were indicted on July 28, 1979, by the Ankara Martial Law Command Military Tribunal for carrying out hostile acts aimed at damaging relations between Turkey and Egypt; premeditated murder; smuggling, possessing, and using bombs; threatening the liberty of more than one person; and other armed acts. On October 25, 1979, a military court sentenced the four Palestinians to two death sentences each for killing two Turkish guards in the attack. On May 23, 1980, Turkey's supreme military court threw out the death sentences and ordered a retrial in a civilian court. On December 23, 1980, an Ankara criminal court sentenced the four Palestinian terrorists to death.

Mendel Bodnya: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24.

Ahmed Bolkan: one of four armed Del Sol hijackers of the Halic, a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Istanbul to Bulgaria's Burgas Airport on May 24, 1981. Two hijackers were arrested when they left a plane to hold a news conference. The other two were overpowered and injured by the passengers. Turkey requested extradition. Bolkan was born on January 1, 1963.

Okan Bolko: one of four armed Del Sol hijackers of the Halic, a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Istanbul to Bulgaria's Burgas Airport on May 24, 1981. Two hijackers were arrested when they left a plane to hold a news conference. The other two were overpowered and injured by the passengers. Turkey requested extradition. He was born on January 1, 1962.

Dana Boluri: Iranian-born Kurd with German citizenship from Frankfurt who was detained briefly on December 31, 2006, on suspicion of surveilling Hutier Barracks in Lamboy, a U.S. military barracks in a section of Hanau, Germany.

Borg: Moscow Domestic Service identified him as a Red Army Faction terrorist who had told authorities about a bomb that was being prepared for detonation at the annual ball at American headquarters in Heidelberg in 1981.

Vladimir Boshko: one of three hijackers on November 24, 1994, of a Russian TU-134 on its Syktyvkar–St. Petersburg–Minsk flight, which was diverted to Tallinn, Estonia. The suspects were handed to the Central Investigation Office. Tallinn Administrative Court justices gave approval for the suspects to be kept in custody until December 9. Russia requested extradition on November 25. Boshko requested political asylum and said he would kill himself if handed over to Russia. He claimed to have acted alone. On January 19, 1995, Estonia refused asylum and said it would begin to consider the timing and procedure for his extradition. He remained in a Tallinn psychiatric hospital.

Svetlana Boskovic: born in 1965 and with a permanent residence in a temporarily occupied district of Ilidza, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Boskovic was arrested on February 9, 1995. The Office of the UN High Commissioner for Refugees employee was accused on several occasions of being directly involved in abductions of Bosnia-Herzegovina citizens from United Nations Protection Forces vehicles at checkpoints on a section of the airport route.

Boukouvala: Greek ordered detained in late 1988 as a member of the Anti-State Struggle Organization.

Lakhdar Boumediene: Bosnian detained in Bosnia by U.S. troops in January 2002. He was held at Guantánamo Bay. The U.S. military heard the case for his detention in 2004. He was one of the lead plaintiffs in a petition before the U.S. Supreme Court that challenged the constitutionality of the October 2006 Military Commissions Act. On June 12, 2008, the court ruled 5 to 4 that suspected terrorists and foreign fighters incarcerated at Guantánamo Bay by the U.S. military have the right to challenge their detention in federal court.

Ahmed Boussan: Arab carrying a Jordanian passport who was killed when a bomb exploded in his Athens hotel room on April 12, 1973. Initial investigations indicated that he had been carrying the bomb in his luggage. Other reports claimed that he was a Razd agent and died when the bomb was tossed into his room.

Viktor Bout: Tajikistan-born Russian arms dealer, age 41, who was the model for Nicholas Cage's character in Lord of War. He was arrested by Thai authorities on March 6, 2008. The U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) issued a warrant for his arrest. He was picked up in a sting in which DEA undercover agents posed as Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels who met with Bout and Andrew Smulian in the Netherlands Antilles, Denmark, and Romania. The United States charged him with conspiracy to smuggle missiles and rocket launchers to FARC rebels.

The former Soviet Air Force officer was alleged by British intelligence to have provided arms to the Taliban and al Qaeda. The U.S. government added that he made a $50 million profit from his sales to the Taliban. He was educated at the Military Institute of Foreign Languages in Moscow. In 2004, the U.S. Treasury Department froze his assets under U.S. jurisdiction. In April 2005, the United States froze assets of 30 companies and four individuals linked to him. In 2007, another seven companies and three people were added to the list. He was the principal subject of Merchant of Death, a book by Douglas Farah and Stephen Braun. He had supplied weapons to conflicts or was involved in arms deals in Angola, Afghanistan, United Arab Emirates, Bulgaria, Togo, Central African Republic, Sierra Leone, Zaire-Congo, the Republic of the Congo, and Liberia.

Mohammed Bouyeri: Bouyeri, age 26, carried dual Moroccan and Dutch citizenship and, on November 2, 2004, shot and stabbed to death Dutch filmmaker Theo van Gogh. The defendant was charged on November 5 with murder, membership in a group with “terrorist intentions,” attempting to kill a policeman and a bystander, and conspiracy to murder a politician. The defendant was believed to be a friend of Samir Azzouz, age 18, a Muslim of Moroccan origin who was to be tried for planning a terrorist attack against a nuclear reactor and Amsterdam’s Schipol Airport. On January 26, 2005, a pretrial hearing was held. Prosecutors said he dreamed of putting into place in the Netherlands an Islamic theocracy; he was supported in this view by a network of Islamic fanatics. Bouyeri skipped the hearing. On April 19, 2005, Amsterdam authorities arrested a Chechen, identified as Marad J., age 22, in the case. He was believed to be tied to the Hofstad network of Islamic fundamentalists to which Bouyeri belonged.

On May 3, 2005, prosecutors accused Bouyeri of leading a terrorist organization of 12 men, hosting the meetings in his home. The group aimed to destabilize society and establish an Islamic state through violence. On July 11, 2005, Bouyeri refused to answer questions about his motivation and said he did not plan to fight the charges. He quoted Arabic prayers and walked out of court holding a Koran above his head. The next day, he said that he was driven by religious conviction, saying, “If I were released and would have the chance to do it again . . . I would do exactly the same thing.” On July 26, 2005, Bouyeri was sentenced to life with no possibility of parole.

On December 5, 2005, 14 men, including Bouyeri, were tried for plotting attacks and membership in a terrorist network. Most of the other defendants are descendants of Moroccan immigrants. On March 10, 2006, the court convicted nine of the Muslims to membership in a terrorist group for inciting hatred of non-Muslims. The court ruled that Bouyeri could not be punished further.

Anastasia Boyiatzidhou: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People’s Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People’s Authority. The group had planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and to sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group had received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Hikmet Bozat: one of three Kurdish terrorists jailed on August 16, 1994, at London’s Old Bailey after being convicted on charges of conspiracy to damage property by fire with intent to endanger life and of damaging property by fire. The trio all lived in north London. The resident of Junction Road, Upper Holloway, received 15 years for an arson attack on November 4, 1993.

Bozic: associate of Stanko Nizic, a night porter in the Kindli Hotel in Zurich, Switzerland, who was killed on August 26, 1981, by a revolver fired at point-blank range. The Yugoslav Danas newspaper reported that police searching his home found two kilograms of plastic explosive, a machine gun, and two bazookas. Police said he was a leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia. Bozic was seen in the hotel hours before the murder and then vanished.

Amir Mansour Bozorgian: variant Amir Mansur Bozorgyan. One of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemloo, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of leaving injured persons whose lives were in danger. On November 28, 1989, Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of murder.

Amir Mansur Bozorgyan: variant of Amir Mansour Bozorgian.

Jekoslav Brajkovic: one of six Croatian immigrants who were found guilty of terrorism charges in Sydney, Australia, on February 9, 1981, after a 10-month trial involving 112 witnesses. The terrorists planned to set off bombs to disrupt Sydney's water supply, bomb various travel agencies, bomb a local theater during a performance of Croatian singers and dancers visiting Australia, and bomb properties occupied by Yugoslavia. On February 17, 1981, they were sentenced to 15 years for conspiring to make bombs and 5 plus years for possessing explosives with intent to cause injury and damage. The sentences, to run concurrently, were to date from their arrest two years earlier.

Andjelko Brajkovic: one of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslav Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16 in a Stockholm court, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. On July 14, the London Times reported that the group planned to form a terrorist group that would attack people in Sweden suspected of working for Yugoslavia against the Croatsians.

On September 15, 1972, three Croatian émigrés hijacked a Scandinavian Airlines plane and obtained the release of six Croatian terrorists held in Swedish jails. The plane was flown to Spain, where authorities apprehended all nine Croatsians. The six who had been released in Sweden were permitted to leave Spain for Paraguay on June 23, 1974. Sweden requested the extradition of three of them for the Rolovic killing. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for their arrest, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay.

In May 1980, one of the Croatsians accused in the assassination was extradited to Sweden by the United States. He had been turned over to the United States for prosecution on charges of fraudulently applying for a visa to enter the United States in December 1979 but was acquitted.

Joco Brekalo: one of three Croatian terrorists who forced their way into the Yugoslav United Nations Mission on June 14, 1977, and wounded Radomir Medich, a guard. The terrorists eventually surrendered. On June 16, 1977, the United States charged them with conspiracy to kidnap Yugoslav ambassador Jaska Petric and hold him for publicity. New York State charged them with attempted murder. On October 12, 1977, they were found guilty of plotting to kidnap the ambassador. On November 17, 1977, Brekalo received five years.

Christian Buchholz: one of four right-wing youths charged on December 30, 1993, with 5 counts of murder, 14 counts of attempted murder, and aggravated arson in connection with the May 29, 1993, arson by right-wing skinheads of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, Germany, killing 5 people and injuring 10 other Turks, including a six-month-old infant. On October 13, 1995, Buchholz was sentenced by Duesseldorf Presiding Judge Wolfgang Steffen to 10 years in prison for the killings.

Marijam Buconjic: one of three Croatian terrorists who forced their way into the Yugoslav United Nations Mission on June 14, 1977, and wounded Radomir Medich, a guard. The terrorists eventually surrendered. On June 16, 1977, the United States charged them with conspiracy to kidnap Yugoslav ambassador Jaska Petric and hold him for publicity. New York State charged them with attempted murder. On October 12, 1977, they were found guilty of plotting to kidnap the ambassador. On November 17, 1977, Buconjic received seven years.

Ugur Bulbul: suicide bomber, age 25, who on September 10, 2001, set off a device near a police post in a shopping and tourist area in central Istanbul's Taksim Square, killing himself and 2 police officers and injuring 20 others. A police officer confronted Bulbul as he attempted to walk further into a group of police; Bulbul then detonated the bomb. The terrorist from Bartın, a small town near the Black Sea, had been released from prison six months earlier after serving time for membership in the banned Marxist Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front. The group was holding a prison hunger strike; 33 inmates and sympathizers had starved themselves to death since October 2000.

Ahmad Najib Burji: Cypriot police asked Interpol's aid in finding Burji, who resided in Beirut, Lebanon, and held a Lebanese passport, following the assassination of two Palestine Liberation Organization officials in Cyprus on December 15, 1979.

Julienne Eden Busic: U.S.-born wife of Zvonko Busic who joined him as one of the Croatian nationalists who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355 on September 10, 1976. She was sentenced to life in prison on May 5, 1977. U.S. District Court Judge John R. Bartels said she could be paroled after eight years.

On September 16, 1976, the Roman Catholic Church of St. Cyril and Methodius and St. Raphael at 502 West 41st Street in New York City was bombed, causing no injuries. While the hijacked plane was parked in Paris, she phoned the Reverend Martin Cuvalo, the church pastor, to determine if the hijackers' manifesto had been published by several major newspapers.

Zvonko Busic: Yugoslavia-born New Yorker who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago, Illinois, on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 which dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived, and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn, New York. The U.S. court of appeals restored two air piracy counts that had been dismissed by a U.S. district court on a motion by the hijackers, who were accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. On May 5, 1977, Busic and his wife were sentenced to life. U.S. District Court Judge John R. Bartels said Busic could be paroled after 10 years.

On September 16, 1976, the Roman Catholic Church of St. Cyril and Methodius and St. Raphael at 502 West 41st Street in New York City was bombed, causing no injuries. Busic attended the church.

On April 17, 1987, Busic was missing at the Otisville Correctional Facility; a dummy was found in his cell. He was arrested the next day on the back porch of the Village News Stand in Milford, Pennsylvania.

C

---

Asim C.: unemployed Bosnian man, age 42, who lived in the provinces of lower Austria and was arrested on October 1, 2007, in Vienna while carrying a maroon backpack with two hand grenades, other explosives, nails, and Islamic literature. He tried to enter the U.S. Embassy in Vienna's Ninth District, but the backpack triggered metal detectors. He dropped the backpack on the street and ran away but was captured shortly thereafter. The grenades were not fitted with detonators. On October 2, police arrested a possible accomplice.

Mesut Cabuk: on November 15, 2003, Cabuk, age 29, drove the truck at the Beth Israel synagogue in Sisli, Turkey, and set off explosives. He and a fellow al Qaeda suicide bomber killed 25 and injured 303. Cabuk was detained and released by Turkish authorities in 1995 in connection with investigations of the Islamic Great East Raiders Front. He had gone to Pakistan and Iran and was a member of the Islamic Movement.

Irfan Cagirici: arrested in March 1996 by the Turkish government as being a member of an Iranian hit squad. He was to kill a prominent Jew in Turkey but was rebuffed when he demanded $13,000 from the Iranians. The Iranian Consulate in Istanbul nonetheless provided two handguns, an Ingram submachine gun, an Uzi submachine gun, and hand grenades.

Hulusi Caglar: arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and two hand radio receivers.

Nazli Caglayan: alias the Scorpion. Female Turkish terrorist arrested on February 13, 1980, on suspicion of masterminding the murders of four Americans on December 14, 1979, in an ambush near their suburban Istanbul homes near Cakmakli military base.

Jini Calasek: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Necle Can: alias Ceyda. One of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Christos Cassimis: leftist terrorist killed on October 20, 1977, in a shootout with police when he was caught placing a bomb at a factory in Athens. On October 20, 1986, the Revolutionary People's Struggle marked his ninth anniversary by setting off a bomb outside a basement window at the 14th Police Precinct in Athens.

Mahir Cayan: wounded in a police shootout on June 1, 1971, as police were rescuing Sibel Erkan, age 14. Erkan, the daughter of an army major, was kidnapped by Cayan and fellow Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) terrorist Huseyin Cevahir, who died after being hit by 23 bullets. The two were wanted in the kidnapping and murder by the TPLA (or perhaps Dev Genc, the Turkish Revolutionary Youth Federation) of Ephraim Elrom, Israel's consul general in Istanbul, Turkey, on May 17, 1971. Cayan tried to flee but surrendered to police when surrounded by an angry mob. On March 27, 1972, five members of the TPLA kidnapped three North Atlantic Treaty Organization radar technicians and demanded the release of three terrorists who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of four Americans on March 4, 1971. On March 30, 1972, police raided the terrorists' hideout in Kizildere, Turkey. The terrorists shot their hostages in the head. Police rockets and small arms fire killed the 10 terrorists, including Cayan, who had escaped from prison in November 1971 with two of the other terrorists.

On March 10, 1975, the Mahir Cayan Suicide Group threw a packet of explosives into the garden of the U.S. Consulate in Istanbul.

Yavuz Caylan: convicted accomplice of Mehmet Ali Agca in the murder of Turkish journalist Ipekci in February 1979. On March 16, 1983, the Istanbul military prosecutor questioned him in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. Caylan was serving 10 years at Canakkale prison for driving Agca to the scene of the Ipekci shooting.

Musar Serdar Celebi: variant Musa. Arrested on November 2, 1982, by police in Kriftel outside Frankfurt, West Germany, on an international arrest warrant in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was the founder of the Turkish Federation, an extreme right-wing group officials believed was a cover for the terrorist Grey Wolves. He was extradited to Italy on January 14, 1983. He was acquitted on March 29, 1986.

Bekir Celenk: Turk linked by Italian police to arms and drug smuggling and who had contact with Mehmet Ali Agca, the would-be assassin of the pope on May 13, 1981. On December 9, 1981, he was detained by Bulgarian authorities. On November 27, 1982, he was charged by Judge Ilario Martella with complicity. Turkey requested his extradition from Bulgaria on December 13 and 23, 1982, and on January 19, 1983, claiming he was wanted for smuggling and currency irregularities. On July 8, 1985, a Rome court said it would ask Turkey to extradite Celenk, who had returned to Turkey the previous day after three days in Bulgaria, where authorities had turned down five Italian extradition requests. Agca had claimed that Celenk offered him $1.2 million for the attack on behalf of the Bulgarians. Turkey said that it had ratified a convention that did not permit extradition of its citizens. On September 18, 1985, a Turkish martial court began his trial on charges of smuggling drugs and arms, for which he faced a possible death penalty. He died of a heart attack in a Turkish prison on October 14, 1985.

Oral Celik: on November 27, 1982, he was charged with complicity in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He was acquitted on March 29, 1986. He was arrested in France for drug smuggling in 1988. He used the name Bedri Ates in France. He was also involved in the killing of a prominent journalist in Istanbul in 1979. On June 17, 1992, Turkey asked France to extradite the Turkish terrorist. On January 9, 1995, Philippine police announced that they were searching for him in connection with a newly discovered plan to murder the pope during his visit to the Philippines. He allegedly was one of four Turks who had entered the country disguised as priests.

Helmut Cermiak: one of four hijackers of the Prague–Brno Czechoslovakian National Airlines Flight C47 that was hijacked on March 23, 1953, and diverted to Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Political asylum was granted.

Hana Cermiakova: one of four hijackers of the Prague–Brno Czechoslovakian National Airlines Flight C47 that was hijacked on March 23, 1953, and diverted to Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Political asylum was granted.

J. Cerny: sentenced on August 23, 1978, for planning a hijacking of a Karlovy Vary–Prague flight in mid-1978. The Czech Supreme Court raised to nine years a Prague city court sentence for preparing to jeopardize the security of a means of air transport and to leave Czechoslovakia by force of arms.

Abdelkader Cesur: Turk who was arrested on October 19, 2005, in Copenhagen, Denmark, after providing 40 pounds of explosives to Mirsad Bektasevic, a Bosnian who used it to fabricate an explosives vest on Polygonska Street in Sarajevo. He was wrestled to the floor after pulling a pistol with a silencer at detectives. In January 2007, a Bosnian court sentenced him to 13 years.

Isik Cetinli: arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and two hand radio receivers.

Huseyin Cevahir: killed when hit by 23 bullets during a police shootout on June 1, 1971, as police were rescuing Sibel Erkan, age 14. Erkan, the daughter of an army major, was kidnapped by Cevahir and fellow Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) terrorist Mahir Cayan, who was wounded. The two were wanted in the kidnapping and murder by the TPLA (or perhaps Dev Genc, the Turkish Revolutionary Youth Federation) of Ephraim Elrom, Israel's consul general in Istanbul, Turkey, on May 17, 1971.

Abdul Rahman Chaderchi: chief spokesperson of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in late 2007.

Altsek Chakurov: one of three alleged terrorists reported on October 12, 1990, by Bulgarian Deputy Minister of Justice Angel Dzhambazov to have been executed during the "regenerative process" on September 6, 1988. The trio was found guilty of terrorist acts involving explosive devices in 1985 at Varna Airport, on the train from Burgas to Sofia, Bulgaria, and at a hotel in the town of Sliven. Eleven people died and 20 were injured. The trio also planned to plant bombs on the beaches of two major seaside resorts in the summers of 1986 and 1987.

Said Chedadi: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement, which has ties to al Qaeda, arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Spain did not offer details on the terrorists' targets. The next day, police identified three more Islamic suspects. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. Spain and other European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an al Qaeda cell were arraigned. The Washington Post quoted Spanish officials on November 19 as indicating that eight al Qaeda cell members arrested in Madrid and Granada had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon ordered eight of the suspected members held without bail because they “were directly related with the preparation and development of the attacks perpetrated by the suicide pilots on September 11.” Judge Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. They also reportedly sheltered Chechen rebels and obtained medical treatment for al Qaeda members. They conducted robberies and credit card fraud and provided false documents to al Qaeda visitors. They also forwarded money to Hamburg. The group had connections to Mohamed Bensakhria, head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. He was arrested and extradited to France. The group also had connections to six Algerians detained in Spain on September 26 who were charged with belonging to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, a bin Laden–funded Algerian group.

The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda’s leader in Spain. His name and phone number were in a document found in a search of a Hamburg apartment of a bin Laden associate. Police believed hijacker leader Muhammad Atta could have met with some of them when he visited Spain in January and July. The group had links to Mamoun Darkazanli. Judge Garzon released three others who were arrested on November 13 and ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

Yasser Cheraidi: variant of Yusir Chraydi.

Winter Cherkovisian: bomber of the Turkish Consulate General in Los Angeles, California. On April 11, 1983, the Egyptian National Security Organization said that the Greek-Cypriot administration had issued 225 unused and sealed passports to the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. Cherkovisian used one of the passports.

Mr. Chernyavskiy: on August 10, 1990, would-be hijacker Chernyavskiy, age 43, was subdued by the copilot of a light AN2 approaching Livny, Russia. Chernyavskiy had a criminal record.

Teymiraz Chikhladze: one of the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad, Russia, on November 18, 1983. In August, the priest was sentenced to 14 years.

Hussein Abad al-Chir: see entry for Hussein Bashir.

Sergei Chochiyev: convicted in October 2003 in Russia and sentenced to 15 years for kidnapping a United Nations aid worker on behalf of Chechen insurgents in 1998.

Yasser Chraidi: variants Yusir Chraydi, Chreidi, Cheraidi, Yasir Shuraydah, Yusuf al-Sharidi. Libyan believed to have orchestrated the bombing of La Belle Discotheque on April 5, 1986, in West Berlin. He was arrested in 1991 in connection with a string of murders, attempted murder, and burglaries. Germany demanded his extradition from Lebanon. On June 21, 1994, the Lebanese criminal court pronounced him not guilty in the 1984 murder of Mustafa al-’Ashiq, a Libyan dissident, in Germany. He came from the ‘Ayn al-Hulwah Palestinian refugee camp on the eastern outskirts of the port city of Sidon. He had worked as a driver at the Libyan Embassy in East Berlin. He was charged as the planner of the bombing. He was a suspected member of the Abu Nidal group and of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command.

On November 15, 1994, the criminal court sentenced Chraidi to 18 months for forging his passport. In June 1995, Lebanon cleared him of suspicion in the 1986 murder of a Libyan dissident in Germany. On May 23, 1996, Lebanon extradited him to Germany after receiving assurances that Germany would not send him for trial to the United States or Turkey, where he faced the death penalty. On June 17, 1996, East German Stasi Lt. Col. Rainer Wiegand, the star witness against him, died in a collision with a truck in Portugal; police suspected foul play.

On November 18, 1997, the trial began of Abulghasem Eter, Chraidi, Ali Chanaa, Verena Chanaa, and her sister Andrea Hausler for the bombing on charges of murder, attempted murder, and being an accessory to a crime. Chraidi and the Chanaas were charged with three counts of murder, nine counts of attempted murder, and causing a fatal blast. All faced life sentences. On November 13, 2001, Chraidi was convicted of multiple counts of attempted murder and sentenced to 14 years.

Yusir Chraydi: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Yasser Chreidi: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Irene Christakou: Greek American woman who was moving to Greece from Chicago and was detained on September 27, 1980, by Athens customs officials when they found in her suitcases 2 rifles, 4 revolvers, 10 pistols, 8,300 cartridges, a large stock of powder, 2 boxes of caps, 4 hunting rifles, and a book on how to assemble weapons.

Hagop Chulfayan: variant Djulfayan. Lebanese and one of the four Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. Turkey announced after the incident that it would try the terrorists in absentia under Section 125 of the Turkish penal code. On January 31, 1984, a Paris court sentenced the four terrorists to seven years in prison. On July 26, 1986, Chulfayan was jailed for 10 days for refusing an expulsion order to Beirut, Lebanon, saying that his safety was not guaranteed.

Maksim Ciciku: Albanian arrested by Albanian authorities on January 8, 1998, for carrying out espionage for Osama bin Laden. He owned a private security company in Tirana. He had been following movements of the U.S. ambassador and other embassy personnel. He was released without charge on January 11. He told a television reporter that police had confiscated a weapon and radio equipment that he used in his work. He said that he was educated in Saudi Arabia and had provided bodyguards for Arabs in Albania.

Rudol Cihak: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

S. Cihakova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Stanislava Cihakova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Dusan Cirin: one of three Slavs who planned to hijack an American Trans-International Airways charter DC10 flying from Cleveland to Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, and divert it to South Africa or Rhodesia, where they intended to demand $1 million for the safe release of 340 Slovenian and north-west Croatian emigrants and 10 crew members on the plane on August 20, 1973. The plan fell apart at Brnik Airport two hours before the plane was due to land, when a local citizen noticed the machine gun-carrying trio acting suspiciously and warned local officials. A fourth hijacker was supposed to join them, but the group could not locate him. On the night before their attempt, the group broke into an arms depot and stole four machine guns, a revolver, and ammunition. After being spotted, two escaped into the woods but were captured two hours later. Cirin, age 24, was a cadet at the Secondary Vocational School at the Secretariat for Internal Affairs of Slovenia in Ljubljana.

The Colonel: one of the leaders of the Chechen terrorists who, on September 1, 2004, took hundreds of hostages at an elementary school in Beslan, Russia. He was believed to be a Russian. He was killed in the gun battle that ended the siege.

Selim Curukkaya: identified on August 12, 1993, by Istanbul's Hurriyet as a Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) deputy and accountant in Cologne, Germany.

Jerry Jan Czerwinski: one of two Polish Army pilots who, on April 1, 1982, ended their paratroopers training at Krakow by forcing a mechanic to aid them in taking their plane to the West. The AN2 biplane landed in Poland to pick up the pilots' families, flew at treetop level to avoid detection, and landed at Vienna's Schwechat Airport. The pilots requested political asylum. They were arrested and taken to Vienna Landesgericht Prison. The others were taken to Traiskirchen refugee camp. They faced maximum sentences of 10 years. On July 20, 1982, Czerwinski was sentenced to a year.

D

---

Hasan Dag: Athens spokesperson for the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in 1993.

Yevgeny Dagayev: would-be Russian hijacker, age 32, who claimed to have a bomb on an Aeroflot Airbus A320 flying from Moscow to Geneva on December 28, 2006. He tried to break into the cockpit to demand to fly to Africa but was overpowered by crew and other passengers and then detained during an emergency landing in Prague. No explosives were found. He was traveling with eight family members, including three children.

Abu Dahdah: alias of Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas.

Mehmet Dal: Turk, age 31, who, on February 24, 1998, tried to hijack a Turkish plane with a teddy bear which he claimed concealed a bomb. The plane, carrying 73 passengers and 5 crew members, was hijacked shortly after it took off from Adana on a flight to Ankara and was diverted to Diyarbakir, Turkey. Dal released 20 on board, including 8 who were ill. He demanded another plane to take him to Tehran with several hostages. The passengers grabbed him just as Special Forces entered the RJ-100 from the front and back doors. He was driven away in a military ambulance.

Hafiz Qasim Husayn Dalkamuni: variant of Hajj Hafiz Qasim al-Dalqamuni.

Hajj Hafiz Qasim al-Dalqamuni: variants Hafiz Qasim Husayn Dalkamuni, Haj Hafiz Kassem Kalkamoni; alias Hafez Mohamad Hussein. Believed to be the leader of a Palestinian terrorist group active in Europe in the 1980s. He was born in Nazareth, Israel. He was one of 13 people suspected of membership in the Popular Front of the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC) arrested on October 27, 1988, in Neuss, West Germany. On November 23, 1988, the Karlsruhe Federal Prosecutor's Office said there was no evidence that he was a security chief of PFLP-GC. Frankfurt police found several automatic pistols, numerous hand grenades, and explosives in his apartment. Police also seized a radio filled with explosives in a car used by Dalqamuni and left in Neuss.

Dalqamuni was born in Jordan and had received a life sentence in Israel in the late 1960s. He allegedly had been sent to Israel in 1968 on a terrorist mission. Following the premature detonation of an explosive in his possession, he was arrested. However, he was released by Israel in 1979 in a prisoner exchange. Die Welt reported on January 7, 1989, that he had entered the Federal Republic of Germany with a false passport under the alias Hafez Mohamad Hussein. A portable radio in his car contained plastic explosives and a barometrical ignition. The bombs were similar to those used on December 21, 1988, in the Pan American World Airways Flight 103 bombing over Lockerbie that killed 270. On November 9, 1989, Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann preferred charges of joint double murder and other crimes against him in the Frankfurt-Main court of appeal.

His trial opened on October 4, 1990, in the Frankfurt High Land Court State Security Senate. He was accused of arranging attacks on U.S. military trains in August 1987 and April 26, 1988.

The Federal State Prosecutor's Office said he had set up a weapons and explosives depot in Frankfurt and organized the two attacks between Kassel and Goettingen. The August 1987 attack with 150 aboard led to no casualties because the train was delayed, and the bomb exploded too early. However, it hurt a woman driving by the scene. On June 3, 1991, the PFLP-GC terrorist was sentenced to 15 years after being found guilty of attempted murder and violations of the war arms control and explosives laws. He had been staying in Germany since 1987, having been instructed to set up a branch organization of the PFLP-GC on German soil.

Some believed that he was involved in the Pan Am Flight 103 bombing. He was linked to Abu Talib, who also was a suspect. On October 19, 1988, he phoned a suspected conspirator in Cyprus, someone Talib might have contacted. One U.S. press report said Abu Talib met him in Malta in October 1988, but other reports said he was under surveillance in West Germany during that period.

Jozo Damjanovic: Croatian who shot to death Uruguayan ambassador Carlos Abdala in Asuncion, Paraguay, on June 7, 1976. Damjanovic thought he was shooting at the Yugoslav ambassador.

Fitsen Bettine Daniel: West German nurse arrested on October 2, 1986, when Turkish police at Kayseri Airport found a detonator in a bag she and a doctor were about to take onto a Turkish Airlines flight to Istanbul.

Abu Daoud: alias in general use of Uchmed Daoud Mechamed Auda; aliases Youssef Raji Hanna, Madhi Tarik, Saad ad-Din Wali. Daoud traveled on an Iraqi passport under the name Youssef Raji Hanna. Black September leader credited with planning the September 1972 Munich Olympics massacre. He was arrested in February 1973 in Amman, Jordan. In 1972, he traveled to Sofia to buy arms for Fatah, carrying a forged Iraqi passport for Saad ad-Din Wali. He was arrested on February 15, 1973, with 16 other terrorists who were planning to assassinate King Hussein in Amman and overthrow his government. He had been a member of Fatah's Revolutionary Council since 1970. His release was demanded by five Palestinians who seized the Saudi Arabian Embassy in Paris on September 5, 1973.

He figured prominently in a 1977 extradition squabble between Israel, West Germany, and France. French Directorate of Territorial Security officials arrested him at a Paris hotel on January 7, 1977. He was staying with the Palestinian delegation attending the funeral of Mahmoud Saleh, who had been assassinated earlier in the month. Daoud claimed that he had met with a French official before the arrest and that he had been promised immunity while in Beirut, Lebanon, before traveling to Europe. He was arrested on an international warrant issued shortly after the Olympics. Israel asked the French to hold him for 60 days under provisional arrest and the West Germans requested extradition. France released him on legal technicalities on January 11, 1977, and gave him a first-class seat on an Air Algeria flight to Algiers. On August 1, 1981, he was hit by five bullets fired in the evening in the Opera coffeehouse of Warsaw's Victoria International Hotel. He had arrived in Poland on an Iraqi passport for Madhi Tarik.

On May 3, 1999, he was turned away at Paris's Orly Airport when he tried to enter France to promote his new autobiography. The Interior Ministry had issued a decree in 1977 banning him from the country. He was now a member of the Palestine National Council and a Ramallah, Palestine, attorney. He acknowledged in the book his role in the Munich attack.

On June 13, 1999, Israel banned him from entering the West Bank. The German government had issued a warrant for his arrest the previous week. He said he would contest in Israeli courts the decision to prevent him from returning to Ramallah.

Tariq al-Daour: Al-Daour, age 19, was arrested in the United Kingdom on October 21, 2005, and may have been plotting to bomb the U.S. Capitol and White House. He was charged with Younis Tsouli with conspiracy to commit credit card fraud and with involvement in financial activity “for the purposes of terrorism.” In January, he had been accused of attacking a Jewish man, age 24, outside a North London parochial school in late 2004; the case was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Prosecutors said they ran Web sites that linked terrorists in Denmark, Bosnia, Iraq, the United States, and United Kingdom. The sites included beheading videos. One of their laptops included a PowerPoint presentation titled “The Illustrated Booby Trapping Course” that included how to create a suicide vest loaded with ball bearings. Tsouli had been asked by al Qaeda to translate into English its e-book titled The Tip of the Camel's Hump. They also stole data for hundreds of credit cards which they used to purchase supplies for operatives and laundered money through 350 transactions at 43 Internet gambling sites, including absolutepoker.com, betfair.com, betonbet.com, canbet.com, eurobet.com, noblepoker.com, and paradisepoker.com, using 130 credit card accounts. They had made more than $3.5 million in fraudulent charges for GPS devices, night-vision goggles, sleeping bags, telephones, survival knives, hundreds of prepaid cell phones, tents, more than 250 airline tickets using 110 different credit cards at 46 airline and travel agencies. They used 72 credit card accounts to register more than 180 domains at 95 Web hosting firms in the United States and Europe. On July 5, 2007, the law student was sentenced to six and a half years after pleading guilty.

Daphne: alias of Isabella Bertrand.

Kazem Darabi: Iranian intelligence officer alleged by Munich's Focus as having provided money, a car, arms, and Berlin apartments to a Lebanese asylum seeker in Germany and Hizballah member who, on September 17, 1992, shot to death four Kurdish politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. On June 14, 1993, Der Spiegel reported that the First Criminal Division of the Berlin Regional Court had indicted the former engineering student who lived in Berlin, worked as a greengrocer, exporter-importer at Ayad GmbH, and Kreuzberg mosque operator. His trial dragged on for four years. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced the Iranian grocer and former Revolutionary Guard to life in prison.

He was believed to be a leader and financier of the German branch of Hizballah. In 1982, he was sentenced to probationary custody for a breach of the public peace in Mainz, when he took part in an attack on students opposed to Tehran, Iran.

Hayri Darban: Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) militant whom the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Osama Darra: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement, which has ties to al Qaeda, arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Spain did not offer details on the terrorists' targets. The next day, police identified three more Islamic suspects. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. Spain and other European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an al Qaeda cell were arraigned. The Washington Post quoted Spanish officials on November 19 as indicating that eight al Qaeda cell members arrested in Madrid and Granada had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon ordered eight of the suspected members held without bail because they “were directly related with the preparation and development of the attacks perpetrated by the suicide pilots on September 11.” Judge Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. They also reportedly sheltered Chechen rebels and obtained medical treatment for al Qaeda members. They conducted robberies and credit card fraud and provided false documents to al Qaeda visitors. They also forwarded money to Hamburg. The group had connections to Mohamed Bensakhria, head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. He was arrested and extradited to France. The group also had connections to six Algerians detained in Spain on September 26 who were charged with belonging to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, a bin Laden-funded Algerian group.

The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas, al Qaeda’s leader in Spain. His name and phone number were in a document found in a search of a Hamburg apartment of a bin Laden associate. Police believed hijacker leader Muhammad Atta could have met with some of them when he visited Spain in January and July. The group had links to Mamoun Darkazanli. Judge Garzon released three others who were arrested on November 13 and ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

Ian Davison: carpenter from South Shields, County Durham, in northeast England and one of three armed terrorists who took over the First, an Israeli-owned yacht. They took two Israeli hostages after killing a woman in the initial assault in Cyprus on September 25, 1985. After nine hours of negotiations, the terrorists killed the hostages and surrendered. Fatah Force 17 claimed credit. The trio was held by Cypriot authorities, who rejected Israel’s extradition request. On December 2, 1985, the trio went on trial in Nicosia, Cyprus, saying, “I admit the killing,” although the court entered a not guilty plea for the defendants. They were found guilty in February 1986 and sentenced to life.

Davison’s release was demanded on September 5, 1986, by the four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God—Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at the Karachi airport. On September 26, 1986, he was one of three pro-Palestinian gunmen to sign a statement asking their comrades not to seize hostages to obtain their release.

Adam Dekkushev: extradited in July 2002 by Georgia to Russia for his suspected involvement in the September 1999 bombings of apartment buildings in Moscow and Volgograd that killed nearly 300. He had taken refuge in the Pankisi Gorge in Georgia, near Chechnya. He was accused of accompanying shipments of explosives used in the attacks. On January 12, 2004, Moscow City Court Judge Marina Komarova sentenced him to life in prison on charges of terrorism, murder, illegal possession of and trafficking in explosives, and other crimes in relation to the bombings. He was also fined $156,000 in compensation to the victims. He said he would appeal. He made the explosives, packed them in sugar sacks, and drove them to Moscow and Volgograd. He drove a truckload of explosives to the wall of the Golgodonsk apartment building.

Bertrand Delafosse: alias used by the purchaser of a car whose Soviet-made grenades and mortar bombs blew up outside the U.S. Tempelhof Air Force Base on October 30, 1986.

Bozo Delava: one of several people who assaulted Yugoslav consul general M. Bulajic and his wife at a New York City party on May 3, 1975.

Kartal Demirag: after escaping six months earlier from Mugla Prison in western Turkey at the start of a decadelong sentence for attempting murder, on June 18, 1988, he opened fire at a crowd during a noontime speech to the governing Motherland Party by prime minister Turgut Ozal, hitting him in the right hand. The crowd stampeded, injuring 21, including Demirag. The Kurdish Labor Party and the Revolutionary Officers Association claimed credit. Demirag said he was a Grey Wolf who conducted the attack for the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sympathized with the ultra right-wing National Movement Party. He had worked as a teacher in southeast Anatolia. He stabbed and wounded his friend Abdullah Sengul during an argument and was imprisoned.

On October 13, 1988, he was sentenced by a court in Fethiye to one year, three months, and five days on charges of escaping from prison. He had seven years and seven months to go on his original prison term. On January 26, 1989, the Supreme Court of Appeals unanimously approved the Ankara Security Court's sentence of 20 years for Demirag, who had no defense lawyer. On April 16, 1992, he was conditionally released from prison after serving a fifth of his sentence. As part of the original verdict, he was deprived of all public rights.

Elias Dergarabetian: terrorist held by the Greek government for a November 27, 1968, attack on the El Al office in Athens. His release was demanded by the hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut to Athens on July 22, 1970. The hijackers agreed to let his trial go ahead as scheduled on July 24, 1970. After the trial, the hostages would go free. He was sentenced to 18 years. He was released into the custody of the International Committee of the Red Cross and flown to Cairo, Egypt. The prosecutor who had tried him on charges of murder and had succeeded in convicting him of premeditated manslaughter told him that he hoped to see him again in his country as a tourist.

Peritan Derseem: spokesperson in May 2008 for PEJAK (or PJAK, Party of Free Life of Kurdistan), the Iranian wing of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK).

Hatip Dicle: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Rumen Cankov Dimitrov: auto mechanic who hijacked a domestic Bulgarian flight from Vidin to Sofia, Bulgaria, on June 18, 1977, and told the pilot to "fly me to the West," by which he meant London or Munich. The pilot landed in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, where the hijacker was disarmed by a Yugoslav security policeman. Dimitrov claimed that the hijacking had no connection with the Belgrade conference on the Helsinki agreement. On June 19, the Bulgarian Embassy said that it would not seek extradition and would leave the decision whether to try or expel him to the Yugoslavians. However, on June 23, Reuters reported that Bulgaria requested extradition, mentioning their antihijacking pact.

Mahri Muhyi-al-Din: variant Mehri Medieddin. On February 27, 1992, French Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant for him in connection with the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged the Lebanese with murder and attempted murder. Police in Dresden, Germany, arrested him on November 13, 1992. Greece said on November 19 it would request extradition; France planned a similar request. Dresden prosecution authorities said that he might have been staying in the capital of Saxony since the end of October 1988 when the area was still East Germany.

Mansur Seif Ed Din: one of six Palestine Popular Struggle Front or, according to some reports, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to Athens, Greece, on July 22, 1970. In Athens, the hijackers negotiated for the release of seven Arab terrorists who were being held for the December 21, 1969, attack on an El Al airliner; the December 21, 1969, attempted hijacking of a Trans World Airlines plane; and the November 27, 1968, attack on the El Al office in Athens. The Greek government agreed to continue the trial of the two November 27, 1968, terrorists on July 24 and sentenced one terrorist to 11 years, one terrorist to 18 years, and then let them both go free. The seven freed terrorists flew to Cairo, Egypt.

Vladimir Dizdar: one of three Croatian terrorists who forced their way into the Yugoslav United Nations Mission on June 14, 1977, and wounded Radomir Medich, a guard. The terrorists eventually surrendered. On June 16, 1977, the United States charged them with conspiracy to kidnap Yugoslav ambassador Jaska Petric and hold him for publicity. New York State charged them with attempted murder. On October 12, 1977, they were found guilty of plotting to kidnap the ambassador. On November 17, 1977, Dizdar received four years.

The Doctor: alias of Vassos Pavlides.

Ibrahim Dogan: member of a Turkish terrorist organization that planned to kill U.S. president George Bush during a visit to Ataturk's mausoleum in Ankara. He was killed in a police raid on July 16, 1991. He had escaped from the penitentiary in Bayrampasa and was responsible for workers' activities.

Orhan Dogan: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before the announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party outlawed by the government in June 1994. Dogan was sentenced to 15 years.

Seyhan Dogan: alias Perihan-Ayse. One of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Dogan was carrying a forged ID card for Hacer Karabulut. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Ksenija Dokmanovic: one of five individuals who were charged with the September 27, 1981, hijacking by German-speaking Croatians of a Yugoslav Airlines B737 flying from Dubrovnik to Belgrade. The group demanded to be flown to Tel Aviv, Israel. The plane refueled at Ellinikon International Airport, then landed at Larnaca after the Israelis refused landing privileges. The hijackers surrendered to police and were quickly extradited to Yugoslavia. The group was tried on February 9, 1982, in the Belgrade District Court.

Karel Doleal: one of 10 hijackers of a Slov-Air L410 flying from Marianske Lazne (Marienbad) to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on June 8, 1972. The group killed the pilot when he refused to change course. The copilot was shot in the chest but survived, as did a wounded passenger. The group landed in a small airfield inside West Germany after demanding to be flown to Nuremburg. All offenders were charged with air piracy. Czechoslovakia sought extradition. In January 1973, one of the group committed suicide in prison. On December 14, 1973, nine of the group were convicted by the Nuremburg State Court and sentenced to terms ranging from three to seven years. On December 9, 1976, the court in Ansbach, West Germany, granted political asylum to Karel Doleal and Antonin Lerch. Other reports claimed that the hijackers landed in Weiden, West Germany. On August 8, 1977, the other nine were denied asylum. (See also Karel Dolezal and Karel Dolezel with similar material from other reports.)

Karel Dolezal: one of two miners who hijacked a Slov-Air L410 flying from Prague to Mariánské Lázně and Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, on April 18, 1972, and diverted the plane to Nuremberg, West Germany. The two hijackers shot and slightly wounded the copilot. They were arrested and sentenced to seven years in prison on July 31, 1972. Their request for political asylum was denied in April 1973. Czechoslovakia requested extradition. Asylum was granted by West Germany on December 9, 1976. (See also Karel Doleal and Karel Dolezel with similar material from other reports.)

Oldrich Dolezal: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague, Czechoslovakia, that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Karel Dolezel: One of two miners convicted of the July 14, 1971, hijacking of the Prague-to-Carlsbad flight to West Germany. Czechoslovakia demanded extradition but was refused. After pleading guilty, the pair was sentenced to seven years under Germany's new hijacking law. (See also Karel Doleal and Karel Dolezal with similar material from other reports.)

Ivan Dontchev: on February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to the Bulgarian in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome.

Savas Dortyol: alias Yavuz. One of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yeniköy, Istanbul. Dortyol was carrying a forged ID card for Bekir. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Issam Doumide: Coumide, age 18, joined two other members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) and attempted to hijack a Trans World Airlines B707 in Athens, Greece, on December 21, 1969. The trio carried luggage that contained two guns, three hand grenades, and mimeographed announcements that the plane was being hijacked to Tunis, Tunisia, by the PFLP. He made a full confession, saying that the trio planned to evacuate the passengers after landing in Tunis and then blow up the plane to "warn the Americans to stop providing air communications with Israel." He and the other two were released after the July 22, 1970, hijacking of an Olympic Airways jet to Cairo, Egypt.

Dubovtsev: Soviet man born in 1959 who, on March 4, 1991, hijacked an AN24 en route from Kotlas to Leningrad and demanded to fly to Stockholm, Sweden. The plane landed at Leningrad's Pulkovo Airport. He let the hostages go, but when police attempted to arrest him, he set off a homemade bomb and died on the way to the hospital. He was a resident of Kotlas in the Arkhangelsk Region. The KGB reported that until 1987 he was registered as a multiple-drug addict and had shunned treatment after that.

Dzhokar Dudayev: Chechen rebel leader in 1995. On April 9, 1995, he went to Bamut, Chechnya, to congratulate the kidnappers of Fred Cuny, a Texas businessman and disaster relief expert grabbed five days earlier. He was also involved in the negotiations for the release of 2,000 civilians who were taken hostage by 200 heavily armed Chechen separatists in Kizlyar, Russia, on January 9, 1996. On April 21, 1996, Russian authorities announced the death of the separatist, age 52, during a Russian missile attack in Gekhi-Chu, 18 miles southwest of Grozny.

Idriz Dule: one of two individuals who, on January 9, 1991, fired on the guard of the border post in Tropoje, Albania, killing two border guards.

On January 23, 1991, Yugoslav border authorities handed the duo over to Albanian authorities at the Hani Hotit border checkpoint.

Lionel Dumont: Frenchman who converted to Islam in 1991 and who escaped during a March 29, 1996, raid by police in Roubaix, France, on a hideout of Algerians and Moroccan terrorists. The terrorists had committed a series of bank, armored car, service station, and convenience store robberies during which bystanders were shot down. More than 1,000 shots were fired in the gun battle, which ended with four Algerians burning alive. The gang members were associated with a mosque in Lille known for preaching radical theology to disaffected North African immigrants.

Dumont married travel agent Celia dos Santos, age 37, in Malaysia; she brought him home to meet relatives in Portugal. In 1997, he was arrested in Zenica, Bosnia, for armed robberies and sentenced to 20 years for fatally shooting a Bosnian police officer at a gas station. France convicted Dumont in absentia in connection to the Roubaix raid, but he escaped shortly before extradition while his guards were watching the European Cup soccer game. He used fake passports to travel to Italy, Croatia, Slovenia, and Hungary. In 2002, he moved on to Asia, traveling to Malaysia, Japan, Thailand, and Indonesia. He sold used cars in Japan and South-east Asia.

While Dumont was in Frankfurt, Germany, with his new German wife in August 2003, police believed he joined up with Andrew Rowe to plan a major attack in Europe. Rowe was British, of Jamaican descent, and also a veteran of the Bosnian War. The duo met again in Frankfurt, but Rowe was under U.K. and German surveillance. Police raided his London home during Rowe's travels and found instructions on how to fire mortar shells and a code book. Rowe was arrested while boarding a Chunnel train on the French coast. The socks in his luggage bore traces of explosives, including TNT.

Dumont had trained with the Islamic rebels in Afghanistan, fought alongside Bosnian Muslims in the Bosnian War, and later joined the gang in Roubaix.

On May 26, 2004, Japanese police raided homes and businesses linked to Lionel Dumont, who was suspected of al Qaeda connections. The 10 locations around Japan included Tokyo and Niigata City. Dumont worked as a car salesman in Niigata. Two months after Rowe's arrest, U.K. and German investigators arrested Dumont in Munich while he was taking a shower.

In September 2005, in London, Dumont, age 34, was tried for terrorism. Dumont said he went to Frankfurt to receive instructions for delivering explosives and weapons from Eastern Europe sources to Muslim fighters in Chechnya. He was convicted and sentenced to 15 years in prison. On December 16, 2005, the London jury convicted him for his role in the armed robberies in France in 1996 and sentenced him to 30 years in prison.

During his trial in Douai, France, in December 2005, witnesses testified that he met with Islamic radicals in at least 10 countries. He used women as cover and as unwitting accomplices to duck arrest.

Firdavs Dustbobyev: Tajik antigovernment activist, age 21, arrested on April 30, 1997, after he threw a hand grenade at president Imam ali Rakhmonov as he was getting out of his car in Khudjand, Tajikistan. The president was wounded in the legs. Two people were killed and another 60 injured. The country was in the midst of a civil war by Islamic militants, although the armed Islamic opposition denied involvement.

E. Dvorak: sentenced on August 23, 1978, for planning a hijacking of a Karlovy Vary–Prague flight in mid-1978. The Czech Supreme Court upheld a Prague city court sentence of 14 years for preparing to jeopardize the security of a means of air transport and to leave Czechoslovakia by force of arms.

Jerzy Dygas: variant Dygat. Hijacker of Polish Airline Flight LOT 762, an AN24 flying 39 passengers, including 2 Americans and 4 crew, from Wroclaw to Warsaw. The hijacker, carrying a dummy hand grenade, forced the pilot to land at Tempelhof Airport in West Berlin, Germany. Dygas surrendered to U.S. authorities, who turned him over to the West Berlin police. Dygas claimed he was forbidden by the government from leaving the country after an abortive attempt to reach the West via third countries in 1971. He was a Solidarity messenger and had acted as a steward at demonstrations, where he had been photographed by the security police. Despite his claims of political persecution, on January 19, 1982, he was sentenced to five and a half years by a West Berlin court.

Jerzy Dygat: variant of Jerzy Dygas.

Mark Dymshits: former U.S.S.R. air force pilot who was one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and then on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24. Dymshits was alleged to be one of the two leaders of the group and was sentenced to death before a military firing squad. The sentence was commuted to 15 years in a labor camp on December 31, 1970.

Farid Dzhabbarov: on November 9, 2007, Azerbaijan authorities arrested Dzhabbarov for plotting a "larger-scale, horrifying terror attack" on the U.S. Embassy and government buildings in Baku. He was detained 10 days after robbing a gas station of several thousand dollars. The United States and United Kingdom temporarily closed their embassies, and several international oil firms briefly shut down their offices.

Tofii Dzhafarovich Dzhafarov: one of four men who, on December 1, 1988, seized a bus with Soviet schoolchildren, a teacher, and a driver in Ordzhonikidze, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and traded them for $2 million in U.S. currency and an Ilyushin-76T jet transport. The Soviets provided an eight-man crew to fly from Mineralnyye Vody. They flew the next day to a military strip near Israel's Ben Gurion Airport, where they surrendered peacefully. On December 3, 1988, Israel extradited the hijackers. Dzhafarov's trial began on February 28, 1989, in Moscow. He was born in 1960, was a high school graduate, and worked as a driver. On March 17, 1989, three of the hijackers received 14 years each, part to be served in a labor camp. Another gang member who helped plot the hijacking but backed out at the last minute got three years.

Akram Dzhahalolov: leading activist in the Hizb ut-Tahrir (Party of Liberation), banned in February 2003 for terrorist connections. On June 10, 2003, Dzhahalolov was arrested by Russia's Federal Security Service (FSB) with 54 others for plotting against the government. The FSB found plastic explosives, hand grenades, dynamite, and detonator cords in raids. FSB spokesperson Sergei Ignatchenko said, "They were preparing fighters to send to Chechnya" and planning attacks in Moscow. Ignatchenko said they were "Muslim brothers" of al Qaeda. Most of those arrested were from Uzbekistan and Tajikistan.

Satsita Dzhebirkhanova: one of two Chechen women believed to be the suicide bombers who set off their bombs on August 24, 2004, on two Russian passenger jets that left the same Moscow airport within 30 minutes of each other, killing all 90 on board. The women had initially been stopped by police but were inexplicably let go. Some Russian newspapers said that the passports were faked.

E

---

George Economeas: journalist who was arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group had planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group had received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Mesut Edipsoy: Iranian-born Turkish citizen for whom French Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant on September 8, 1992, for aiding and abetting murderers and association with an illegal paramilitary group. Edipsoy was connected with the August 6, 1991, assassination of former Iranian Premier Shapur Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He allegedly passed two forged Turkish passports to Ali Rad Vakili and Mohamad Azadi, the presumed killers.

A. Eisenhamerova: sentenced on August 23, 1978, for planning a hijacking of a Karlovy Vary–Prague flight in mid-1978. The Czech Supreme Court raised a Prague city court sentence to six years for preparing to jeopardize the security of a means of air transport and to leave Czechoslovakia by force of arms.

Zeki Ejder: Turkish migrant worker who entered France illegally in 1974. He hijacked a Turkish Airlines DC10 flying from Paris, France, to Istanbul, Turkey, on April 30, 1976, and demanded to go to Marseille or Lyons. Landing permission was refused, and the plane returned to Orly, where he surrendered. He told a policeman that he was attempting to avoid expulsion and “to rejoin a woman he loves and who is under arrest in France.” On May 1, he flew on the same plane with 55 of the original passengers and 2 French plainclothesmen to Istanbul, where he was taken into custody.

Aykut Ekinci: among 22 Turks extradited to Turkey by Syria on November 30, 2003, in connection with a series of al Qaeda truck bombings that month in Turkey.

Azad Ekinci: suspected accomplice of two suicide truck bombers who attacked two Turkish synagogues on November 15, 2003, killing 25 and injuring 303. He had gone to Pakistan and Iran with suicide truck bomber Mesut Cabuk. Police believed Ekinci used the ID card of his brother Metin to purchase one of the trucks. Police said Ekinci had been to Iran six times and was training in bomb making. He also had been detained for questioning regarding the Islamic Great East Raiders Front.

He was later tentatively identified as one of the two al Qaeda suicide bombers who, on November 20, 2003, set off truck bombs at the British Consulate and HSBC bank headquarters, a British bank, killing at least 30 people and wounding 450.

Hakan Ekinci: Turkish man, age 28, who, on October 3, 2006, hijacked a Turkish Airlines B737-400 jetliner carrying 113 people from Tirana, Albania, to Istanbul, Turkey, and diverted it to Brindisi in southern Italy's Adriatic coastal area. In Brindisi he surrendered and released all the passengers unharmed. Turkish officials said he was seeking political asylum. Turkish Transport Minister Binali Yildirim said the hijacker was trying to avoid military service. An Italian official said the hijacker also had an undisclosed message for Pope Benedict XVI. He sent a letter to the pope on August 30 asking for help in avoiding military service. "I am Hakan Ekinci, I am a Christian and I never want to serve in a Muslim army. I am begging you for help as the spiritual leader of us, Christians' world."

Initial reports indicated that two Turks hijacked the plane to protest the pope's scheduled November visit to Turkey. The hijacker yelled inside the cockpit, "There's two of us."

Ekinci was a convert to Christianity. Authorities said he was an army deserter and antimilitarist who had fled to Albania in 2006.

Levon Ekmekjian: variant of Levon Ekmekjian.

Levan Ekmekjian: variant Levon Ekmekjian. Carried a French passport and was one of the three members of the Martyr Kharmian Hayrik Suicide Squad of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia who fired submachine guns and set off a bomb in a crowded international flight terminal passenger lounge at Ankara's Esemboga Airport on August 7, 1982. He was wounded by police in a gun battle. He was executed in January 1983.

Gokhan Elaltuntas: variant Alaltuntas. Elaltuntas, age 22, had recently moved to Istanbul. On November 15, 2003, he drove the truck to the Neve Shalom synagogue in Turkey and set off explosives. He and a fellow al Qaeda suicide bomber killed 25 and injured 303. A family member owns an Internet café in Bingol, Turkey, in which the two suicide bombers and colleague Azad Ekinci often met.

Elaltuntas, who managed the Bingol Internet Merkezi Café, was engaged to be married later that month to a woman he met on the Internet. Members of his extended family were tied to Turkish Hizballah.

Raffi Elbakian: one of two members of the Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide who seriously wounded Turkish ambassador to Yugoslavia Galip Balkar and his driver on March 9, 1983, in downtown Belgrade, Serbia. He escaped but was captured eight hours later. On March 9, 1984, the two attackers, Lebanese citizens of Armenian extraction, were found guilty and sentenced to 20 years each.

Zalikhhan Elikhadzhiyeva: woman from Kurchaloi, age 20, who, on July 5, 2003, was one of two Chechen suicide bombers who killed 16 and hospitalized at least 60 at an afternoon outdoor rock concert at Moscow's Tushino Airfield. Authorities said the casualty figures would have been higher if the terrorists had gotten past guards and into the festival, where 40,000 were in attendance. Elikhadzhiyeva's passport was found at the scene. She had left home six months earlier. Her brother is a Wahhabist leader, and her husband is an American. The duo had worn belts with TNT and metal fragments.

Dervis Elmadjoglu: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army hijackers of a Turkish Airlines B707 flying from Istanbul to Ankara on October 22, 1972, and diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. They threatened to blow up the plane if the Turkish government did not release 13 political prisoners, abolish the strike ban in martial law areas, reorganize the universities by giving them greater freedom, engage in land reform, and abolish antidemocratic articles in the constitution. The Turks refused to talk to the hijackers, who surrendered to the Bulgarians the next day. The pilot and a passenger were wounded. Bulgaria granted the hijackers political asylum but sentenced them to two-plus years in prison on February 2, 1973.

Patrick Emers: variant of Patrick Haemers.

Sahim Engisek: senior member of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) who was arrested in Paris, France, on August 25, 1994, following a demonstration in support of the outlawed party. He was deported to Germany on August 31, 1994, because his papers were not in order.

Bahoz Erdal: Kurdistan Workers' Party commander, age 39, interviewed for a Washington Post article that ran on March 8, 2008. He studied medicine in Damascus, Syria, two decades earlier.

Sedat-Erdal: alias of Kenan Gunyel.

Omer Faruk Erdem: variant of Omer Faruk Erden.

Omer Faruk Erden: variant Erdem. Owner of an Istanbul farm who was arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and 2 hand radio receivers. On February 17, 1983, he was sentenced to 21 years in prison for assisting the attackers.

Adnan Ersoz: leader of the al Qaeda cell responsible for the November 15, 2003, suicide truck bombings of two Turkish synagogues that killed 25 and injured 303. On December 20, Ersoz, charged with helping to organize the series of bombings, said al Qaeda provided $150,000 for the attacks. He was believed to be a senior member of al Qaeda in Turkey. He was charged on December 19 with treason. He said an Iranian sent him $50,000 by courier. He later contacted Habib Aktas, al Qaeda's chief in Turkey, for another $100,000. Ersoz denied advance knowledge of the attacks or that he had received orders from bin Laden. He received military training in Afghanistan.

Mete Ertekin: Middle East Technical University student, age 24, who was detained by Ankara police on March 4, 1971, on suspicion of involvement in the Turkish People's Liberation Army kidnapping of four U.S. airmen stationed near Ankara. The kidnappers immediately demanded his release. During interrogation, Ertekin yielded the names of his accomplices.

Jacqueline Esbar: variant of Jacqueline Esber.

Jacqueline Esber: variants Esbar, Asbir. Girlfriend in 1984 of George Ibrahim 'Abdallah, who was believed to be the leader of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF). In November 1983, Yugoslav police found a map pinpointing the March 26, 1984, attack in Strasbourg, France, against U.S. consul general Robert Onan Homme, who was slightly injured by a lone gunman. On October 11, 1985, a Rome appeals court threw out the explosives smuggling charges against the at-large LARF member for insufficient evidence. Esber was accused of participating in the kidnapping of Jean Piro and the killing of Israeli diplomat Yacov Barsimantov in Paris. On September 19, 1986, French police stations were given wanted bulletins for the 'Abdallah brothers and other LARF members, including Esber, following the drive-by bombing on September 17, 1986, of the Tati clothing store on the Rue de Rennes in the Montparnasse section of Paris. The bombing killed 7 and injured 61, including 15 foreigners.

Gocha Esebua: key figure, age 30, in the February 9, 1998, assault of the motorcade of Georgian president Eduard Shevardnadze. He led a group of rebels who, on February 19, 1998, kidnapped four United Nations (UN) military observers of the Abkhazia mission and four members of a family. The hostages included two Uruguayans, a Czech, and a Swede. The rebel group demanded the release of suspects held in the February 9 assassination attempt on Shevardnadze. UN and Georgian officials negotiated with the gunmen who were surrounded in a remote farmhouse with the hostages. On February 22, one of the Uruguayan military observers was released. The other hostages were released after President Shevardnadze met with the Gamsakhurdia opposition on February 25. Eight of the kidnappers were captured. On February 26, 20 gunmen loyal to the late Georgian leader Zviad Gamsakhurdia surrendered. The last hostage snuck away from his captors while they were having a party in a nearby room. Czech Lieutenant Colonel Jaroslav Kulisek was found in the woods near the western village of Dzhikhaskari after he radioed for help, saying he was lost. Esebua escaped with two comrades. He was tracked to western Georgia and killed in a police shootout on March 31. On April 5, five mourners were killed and eight wounded when gunmen fired on Esebua's funeral procession.

Andreas Evthimiou: charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Astrid Eyzaguirre: dual-citizen German American fiancée, age 23, of Osman Petmezci, a Turkish al Qaeda sympathizer. The couple was arrested by German police on September 6, 2002, as they were planning to bomb the U.S. Army's European headquarters and other targets in Heidelberg on September 11. Police found 290 pounds of chemicals, 5 pipe bombs, gunpowder, and marijuana plants in their apartment in Walldorf, six miles south of Heidelberg. Police also found a picture of bin Laden, Islamic literature, and a book about bomb making. The chief law enforcement officer for Baden-Wuerttemberg state said the man is a Muslim "who hates Americans and Jews." The man worked at a chemical warehouse in Karlsruhe.

Eyzaguirre was an assistant manager at the post exchange store at the U.S. military facility in Heidelberg, which gave her access to many post facilities. The facility hosts the army headquarters (called Campbell Barracks), the army's Fifth Corps headquarters, a small North Atlantic Treaty Organization facility, and hundreds of U.S. service members and their families. She had worked at the base for several years. She was initially identified as of Turkish origin, but her neighbors said she was Hispanic, with a Peruvian father and a Dominican Republic mother. Her father, Marcos Eyzaguirre, age 55, is a retired army officer who had worked for the U.S. military in Germany and returned to the U.S. five years earlier. He then worked as a civilian for the navy in Newport News, Virginia. He said his daughter was born and raised in Germany, where he was stationed for 23 years.

A Turkish man living below the duo had complained about a strange liquid leaking into his apartment from theirs. He had broken into a red rash on one side of his face. The neighbors also said Petmezci hated Jews.

Police received a tip on the couple in mid-July, but the arrest was delayed for two months. A judge put off questioning a witness, originally scheduled for August 13, because a summons could not be delivered on time. Prosecutors obtained a search warrant on August 30.

Prosecutors said on September 18 that they had not found a link to international terrorists.

As the trial opened on April 11, 2003, Petmezci denied plotting an attack and said the chemicals were intended for making firecrackers. On May 6, he was convicted of illegal possession of explosives, drug violations, stealing gunpowder and chemicals to make liquid potassium nitrate, and other lesser charges. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison. Prosecutors withdrew the terrorism counts, saying there was not "sufficient specificity" to prove the plot against the base. Eyzaguirre was acquitted of the explosives charge but convicted of a drug offense and sentenced to six months. The eight months she had already served counted against the sentence.

F

---

Isaac Faari: Israeli citizen arrested at Athens's Elinikon Airport on April 28, 1988, as he was trying to leave on an El Al flight. He was released by police after no incriminating evidence was found. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) accused him of intending to murder PLO first secretary 'Isamat Sabri in Athens. Faari said he had gone to Athens for two days to see an English friend and that he accidentally found himself with a young woman outside Sabri's house in Ayia Paraskevi.

Sarhane Ben Abdelmajid Fakheth: alias The Tunisian. Leader and coordinator, age 35, of the March 11, 2004, al Qaeda bombings of several commuter trains in Madrid, Spain, that killed 200 and injured 2,000. An international arrest warrant, issued on March 31, 2004, said he had rented a house 25 miles southeast of Madrid, where the explosives were prepared. He died on April 3 when Madrid police in the Leganes suburb cornered him and six other terrorist suspects in their safe house. After a two-hour gun battle, the terrorists set off bombs in their apartment. Police said on April 7 that the dead terrorists had planned another major attack in Madrid, possibly during Easter, and possibly against Jewish sites. Police found 200 copper detonators, 22 pounds of Goma 2 Eco explosives, money, and other evidence of plans in the apartment debris. One document mentioned a Jewish cemetery and cultural center in a mountain town 20 miles northwest of Madrid. The body of one terrorist was found near a swimming pool with two kilograms of explosives strapped around his mutilated body. The next day, police cordoned off the area and evacuated a nearby building after finding a backpack filled with explosives and a detonator.

By April 11, investigators believed the cell leader, Fakheth, sought out al Qaeda for assistance, but the group did not directly participate. He traveled to Turkey in late 2002 or early 2003 to meet with senior al Qaeda European operative Amer Azizi, to whom he outlined plans for the attack. He asked for manpower and other support to carry it out. Azizi fought in Bosnia and Afghanistan. He said al Qaeda could not offer direct aid but supported the plan and said Fakheth could use al Qaeda's name in claiming credit. Azizi also suggested contacting Jamal Zougam, a follower of Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass, imprisoned since November 2001 on suspicion of being al Qaeda's Spanish cell leader.

Yusef Fakhi: one of six Palestine Popular Struggle Front or, according to some reports, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to Athens, Greece, on July 22, 1970. In Athens, the hijackers negotiated for the release of seven Arab terrorists who were being held for the December 21, 1969, attack on an El Al airliner; the December 21, 1969, attempted hijacking of a Trans World Airlines plane; and the November 27, 1968, attack on the El Al office in Athens. The Greek government agreed to continue the trial of the two November 27, 1968, terrorists on July 24 and sentenced one terrorist to 11 years, one terrorist to 18 years, and then let them both go free. The seven freed terrorists flew to Cairo, Egypt.

Fantomas: bodyguard of Chechen terrorist leader Shamil Basayev in the early 2000s. He also was one of the leaders of the Chechens who took over an elementary school in Beslan, Russia, on September 1, 2004. He was killed in the gun battle that ended the siege.

‘Umar Sadat al-Salam ‘Abd al-Fatah: Jordanian arrested on November 28, 1985, in Verona, Italy, on arms smuggling charges. His apartment contained 20 kilograms of explosives, 2 Polish machine pistols, other arms, and a radio transmitter and receiver. He said that the weapons would have been used against Syrian targets in the Netherlands. The Palestine Liberation Organization denied that he was a member. Phone taps indicated that he planned to free the four Achille Lauro hijackers held in Italy. On December 11, 1985, he was found guilty of arms smuggling and sentenced to 14 years in prison. As of 1988, he faced charges for conspiracy to carry out armed attacks. On March 7, 1996, Italian newspapers reported that the judiciary had released him the previous fall, four years early. He had been involved in several terrorist attacks in Italy.

Mohammad Faytz: auto mechanic from Madaba, Jordan, who was arrested by police in Komotini, Greece, for smuggling 60 kilograms of explosives, timing devices, detonators, and fuses beneath a Mercedes with a Bari, Italy, license plate. He and Abd-al Usamah az-Zumar said the explosives were not intended for use in Greece. The duo had crossed the Greece–Turkey border by posing as tourists. They were jailed pending trial for smuggling.

Sabahudin Fijuljanin: Bosnian Muslim, age 41, arrested on October 26, 2002, by U.S. troops from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization–led Stabilization Force peacekeeping force based in Tuzla, Bosnia-Herzegovina, on suspicion of spying on a U.S. base. Police found an antitank weapon and several passports in his home. He was linked to al Qaeda on December 3. He was turned over to Bosnian Federation authorities in late January 2003; they released him on bail. The federation government charged him with illegal weapons possession in February 2003.

Ulrike Fildberg: passport name used by Sigrid Sternbeck.

Hidir Filiz: smuggler arrested in connection with the arrests of members of the Islamic Jihad Organization on April 10, 1987, who had planned to kidnap Americans and Israelis living in Turkey and to attack U.S. consulates. The group had smuggled 91 kilograms of explosives into the country, intending to obtain the release of 200 colleagues imprisoned in Israel.

Giorgios Flamourides: construction worker who hijacked an Olympic DC6B flying from Crete to Athens, Greece, on January 2, 1969, and diverted it to Cairo, where he requested political asylum. He was imprisoned for eight months in Egypt until the Swedish diplomatic service took him to Sweden on the initiative of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. He was tried for hijacking in Sweden and sentenced to 22 months in June 1970. A Greek request for extradition was denied in September 1970. He was arrested earlier in Greece for antijunta activities and had joined the clandestine Communist resistance organization Patriotic Front.

Petros Floros: name on stolen Greek passport used by Abd al-Rahim Khalid.

Maurizio Foligni: accused by Rome magistrates of arms trafficking between the Red Brigades, Palestinian terrorists, and Libya. Greece refused to extradite him in the summer of 1988.

Foris: alias of Onisiforos Kharalambous Kolo-siatis.

Waldemar Frey: would-be hijacker of a LOT AN24 flying from Szcegin to Katowice, Poland, on August 7, 1970. He wanted to go to Hamburg, Germany, but was denied entry into the cockpit and the pilot returned to East Berlin. Frey was extradited to Poland and sentenced on September 19, 1970, to eight years for aircraft hijacking and five years for rape and blackmail.

‘Imad Furaij: Palestinian Islamic Jihad member whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was sentenced by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992, to four and a half years.

Yuri Fyodorov: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad’s Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24.

G

---

Magomed Gakayev: convicted in 2003 of banditry and possession of illegal weapons in connection with his participation in the January 2001 terrorist attacks on a Doctors Without Borders convoy in Chechnya, Russia. He was also charged with kidnapping U.S. citizen Kenneth Gluck, the head of Doctors Without Borders, but was later acquitted.

Nodsio I. Gakof: Bulgarian hijacker of a Balkan Airlines (Bulgarian) Antonov-24 flying from Varna to Sofia on June 28, 1975, and diverted to Thessaloniki (or Salonica), Greece, where he requested political asylum. Gakof, who apparently had mental problems, was extradited to Bulgaria. He later committed suicide.

Eva Galaskova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremberg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Christian Ganczarski: Polish-born German convert to Islam, age 35, with ties to al Qaeda figures. On April 22, 2002, Tunisia blamed an April 11, 2002, truck bomb attack on a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia, on Tunisian citizen Nizar Nawar and a relative living in the country. Police discovered that Nawar phoned Ganczarski in Germany shortly before the blast that killed 17 people. Nawar was asked if he needed anything and replied, "I only need the command." Ganczarski, active in radical Muslim circles in Duisburg, was released without charge after questioning.

Ganczarski said he met Nawar in August 2001 in Pakistan. He also admitted knowing Mouhamadou Ould Slahi, who was extradited by Mauritania to the United States on suspicion of involvement in the December 1999 plot to bomb the Los Angeles airport. The duo apparently attended the same Duisburg mosque. Police also found in Ganczarski's apartment the bank account number of the wife of a Mounir Motassadeq, who had witnessed the will of 9/11 hijacker Muhammad Atta. A witness at Motassadeq's terrorism trial, Jordanian citizen Shadi Abdallah (variant Abdellah), age 27, said Ganczarski had trained in Afghan camps. Ganczarski and his family quietly left Germany for Saudi Arabia via Frankfurt and Amsterdam in November; police learned of his departure post facto. On June 2, 2003, police at Charles de Gaulle Airport arrested Ganczarski.

Mohammad Gandour: variants Gandura, Mowefaq Said Gandour. Palestinian arrested in Rome in early September 1985 for possession of fake documents. He was an alleged courier and financier for the Palestine Liberation Front hijackers of the cruise ship Achille Lauro on October 7–9, 1985. Other reports said he was a Palestine Liberation Organization colonel arrested in Italy on October 15, 1985, while traveling from Tunis, Tunisia, to Beirut, Lebanon, and carrying a false passport. On June 18, 1986, his Genoa, Italy, trial began for being an accomplice to murder and kidnapping. On July 10, 1986, he was sentenced to eight months and freed because he had already served the time while awaiting trial. On May 24, 1987, a Genoa appeals court upheld the conviction. He was deprived of his passport and threatened with extradition.

On April 20, 1987, a caller to a Western press agency in Nicosia, Cyprus, said the Eagles for the Liberation of Palestine would attack Italian interests throughout the world if “Gandura” was expelled to a country not of his liking. The caller said that in September 1985 he had helped free three Soviet diplomats kidnapped in Beirut. On July 25, 1987, Gandour jumped to his death from his fifth-floor Rome apartment while trying to avoid arrest and extradition to Syria on fraud charges.

Gennadi Yurievich Gannemets: variant Gennadiy Yuryevich Gan. Novorossiysk resident and hijacker of an Aeroflot TU-154 flying from Tashkent to Odessa on January 21, 1991, who wanted to go to Ankara, Turkey. Turkey refused landing permission, so the plane landed in Burgas, Bulgaria, where he was overpowered by police, who believed he was mentally ill. Russian authorities said he was a repeat offender who was released from jail on November 16, 1990. He was born in 1955. On March 1, 1991, he was extradited from Varna to Moscow. Tass reported he would be tried soon.

Kaddour Gaonajm: Lebanese driver of a Mitsubishi Pajero car loaded with 300 pounds of dynamite that exploded on May 11, 1988, 200 yards from the Israeli Embassy after police prevented him from parking there. He had come to Cyprus on March 26, 1988, left on April 13, and returned on April 23.

Varadjian Garabidjian: his release from a French prison was demanded by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in October 1986.

Sean Garland: leader of a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) splinter group who was indicted in 2004. In the 1990s, Garland allegedly couriered more than $1 million in counterfeit supernotes to Europe from the North Korean Embassy in Moscow. On October 12, 2005, the U.S. Department of Justice indicted the Irish Worker’s Party (political arm of the banned Official IRA splinter group) leader, age 71, and six accomplices on charges of conspiring with North Korea to put millions of dollars of counterfeit U.S. $100 bills into circulation in the United Kingdom and Eastern Europe. Garland was arrested in a Belfast hotel lobby on October 7, 2005. His attorney entered a plea of not guilty. As of January 2008, he was in Ireland. Ireland said the United States had not requested extradition.

Ihsan Garnaoui: Tunisian, age 33, arrested after he left the apartment of Abdel-Karim Jahha on May 4, 2004. He was charged in Berlin with planning to bomb Jewish and U.S. targets in Germany during the March 2003 U.S.-led invasion of Iraq. He trained at Afghanistan al Qaeda camps in July 2001 and in January 2003 illegally entered Germany. According to the charge sheet, in Afghanistan “the accused first learned battle training and how to produce and handle explosives and weapons. After that he was active as a trainer for al Qaeda. During this time he made the personal acquaintance of Osama bin Laden.” He was represented by attorneys Michael Rosenthal and Margarete von Galen in what was known as the Berlin al Qaeda trial. Six other plotters were not charged.

Garnaoui’s indictment was based on statements from two confidential informants. As of May 30, 2004, security officials refused to permit the two informants to testify and a key police report was missing. The prosecution was unable to specify what attacks Garnaoui was planning. On April 6, 2005, he was acquitted of terrorism charges in Berlin but found guilty of tax evasion and illegal possession of weapons. He was sentenced to three years and nine months.

Varadjian Garbidjan: Syrian arrested on July 18, 1983, by French police on suspicion of ties to Armenian militants. He was believed to head the military wing of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in France. He was deported to Turkey and held for trial on terrorist activities. Shortly after his arrest, he admitted to planting a bomb at Orly Airport's south terminal that killed 8 and wounded 53 on July 15, 1983. On July 29, 1983, he renounced his confession before a Paris judge, saying that his confession was motivated to protect those who were arrested. On March 3, 1985, a Paris court sentenced him to life for the Orly bombing. On February 3, 1986, the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners bombed the Claridge shopping arcade off the Champs-Elysees in Paris and demanded his release.

Markus Gartmann: one of four right-wing youths charged on December 30, 1993, with 5 counts of murder, 14 counts of attempted murder, and aggravated arson in connection with the May 29, 1993, arson by right-wing skinheads of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, Germany, killing 5 people and injuring 10 other Turks, including a six-month-old infant. Gartmann was a former member of the extremist German People's Union. On October 13, 1995, he was sentenced by Duesseldorf presiding judge Wolfgang Steffen to 15 years in prison for the killings.

Milan Gasparini: one of three Slavs who planned to hijack an August 20, 1973, American Trans-International Airways charter DC10 flying from Cleveland, Ohio, to Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, and divert it to South Africa or Rhodesia, where they would then demand $1 million for the safe release of 340 Slovenian and northwest Croatian emigrants and 10 crew members. The plan fell apart at Brnik Airport in Slovenia two hours before the plane was due to land when a local citizen noticed the machine gun-carrying trio acting suspiciously and warned local officials. A fourth hijacker was supposed to join them, but the group could not locate him. On the night before their attempt, the group broke into an arms depot and stole four machine guns, a revolver, and ammunition. After being spotted, two of them escaped into the woods but were captured two hours later. Gasparini, age 19, was a machinist at the ROB bicycle factory.

Fritz Martin Gelowicz: aliases Abdullah, Abdul Malik. Ringleader, age 28, of two Germans and one Turkish citizen who were arrested on September 4, 2007, at their rented house on Oak Lane in Oberschledorn, Germany. They were planning "massive" attacks against U.S. interests, including Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and the Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer's gun and shot him in the hand. One of the terrorists escaped through a window but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freusdenstadt. The concentrated chemicals were equivalent to 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group which has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of the terrorists had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were white Germans, not foreigners, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization.

Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group's activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented the three-bedroom vacation cottage in the skiing and tourist locale where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

Gelowicz came from an upper-middle-class background and converted to Islam in 2005. He was from Bavaria State and was born in Munich. His mother was a doctor and his father owned a successful business. His parents were separated. He was married in January 2007, attended a technical college in Ulm, and studied industrial engineering at the Neu-Ulm University of Applied Science. He was active in Islamist circles in Ulm and a regular at the Multi-Kultur-Haus, a Wahhabi center in the Ulm scene. He was also active in Islamic circles in Stuttgart. Gelowicz was seen with Yehia Yousif in Neu-Ulm. Yousif was a key figure in the Multicultural House which catered to Islamists.

Gelowicz was arrested on December 11, 2004, at 1:00 A.M. with Atilla Selek (alias Muaz), age 22, for setting a book on fire in front of an Ulm store. In his car was a CD that praised the jihad, Osama bin Laden, and one of the 9/11 attackers.

Gelowicz and Selek, along with Ayhan T. of Langen and Dana Boluri, an Iranian-born Kurd with German citizenship from Frankfurt, were detained briefly on December 31, 2006, on suspicion of surveilling Hutier Barracks in Lamboy, a U.S. military barracks in a section of Hanau. Boluri admitted to taking part in the Hanau surveillance. Gelowicz was on welfare. He had traveled through Saudi Arabia and Syria and attended a terrorist training camp in Pakistan.

He appeared in a Karlsruhe court in closed session.

German Interior Minister Wolfgang Schauble announced on September 25 that the plotters had smuggled Syrian-origin detonators through Turkey and received orders from Pakistani-based operatives. They were to attack Americans in Europe within days.

Ozgur Gencarslan: on March 28, 2003, Gencarslan, age 20, hijacked a Turkish Airlines Airbus

A310 that took off from Istanbul en route to Ankara and diverted it to Athens, Greece, where he surrendered after a three-hour standoff. The hijacker was apparently sitting in business class upset about family problems when he made his decision. He rushed into the cockpit when the cabin door opened 25 minutes after takeoff. He claimed to have explosives and wanted refueling in Athens before departing for Berlin, Germany. Several Turkish legislators and government officials were among the 194 passengers and crew of 9 on the flight. On March 31, he was arraigned and ordered to undergo a psychiatric evaluation. He faced three charges. He said he was emotionally distraught because of family problems. Prosecutors said he used razor blades and candles disguised as dynamite in the hijacking.

Dionissis Georgiadis: member of the November 17 group in Greece who was arrested in late 2002 and confessed to robberies and bombings in which no one was injured.

Johannes Gerdus: Dutch terrorist who died during the hijacking by the Organization of Struggle Against World Imperialism of Lufthansa Flight 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, Germany, on October 13, 1977. The gunmen demanded the release of the same 11 terrorists in West German jails as mentioned in the Schleyer kidnapping of September 5, 1977, and the release of 2 Palestinian terrorists held in Turkish jails for the August 11, 1976, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine machine-gun attack on passengers awaiting an El Al flight in Istanbul, Turkey. They demanded $15 million for themselves and 100,000 DM for each released prisoner. The prisoners were to be flown to Vietnam, Somalia, or People's Democratic Republic of Yemen, which all indicated their unwillingness to receive the prisoners. After the plane hopscotched to various countries, the terrorists shot the pilot in Aden. A West German GSG9 team ran a successful rescue operation in Somalia on October 18, initially killing two of the hijackers. A third in the first-class compartment opened fire and threw a grenade after being hit. A female hijacker opened fire and was quickly subdued. Gerdus was believed to have been the group's leader, identifying himself as Captain Mahmoud and Walter Mahmoud.

Deniz Gezmiş: one of three Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) kidnappers of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. Their release was demanded by four TPLA hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 on May 3, 1972. On May 3, 1972, the Turkish tourist office in Sweden was bombed in response to Ankara's parliament ratifying the death sentences. The trio was hanged on May 6, 1972.

Emile Allen Adib Ghazalah: variant Emile Ghazali. Lebanese arrested on May 26, 1989, in Cyprus in connection with the discovery by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader, Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca. He was held for aiding the illegal detention of Joe Emilie Karam, a sailor from Beirut. He was placed under an eight-day detention order. All six were charged, inter alia, with illegal entry into Cyprus and with possession of weapons and explosives. On June 2, 1989, Lebanon requested extradition.

On June 22, 1989, the Larnaca District Court set June 30 as the date for the opening of the preliminary hearing. The trial began on October 9, 1989. On August 30, 1989, the Muslim 14 March group threatened to hijack a Cyprus Airlines plane if the government did not release them. The group seeks to avenge the 40 Lebanese Muslims who were killed by 'Awn's troops on March 14, 1989. All pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and transporting weapons and explosives. Five pleaded guilty to illegal entry. The trial was moved from Larnaca to Nicosia for security reasons. On October 13, 1989, the court sentenced the six on eight charges. Five received jail sentences ranging from one to eight years; the sixth received one to five years. All of the penalties were to be concurrent, effective the date of arrest. The court president said he took the psychological state of the sixth accused into consideration in determining the verdict. On April 15, 1991, Cypriot authorities deported the six Lebanese to Beirut after they had served 17 months of their sentences.

'Ali Akbar Ghorbani: member of the Iranian People's Mojahedin who was kidnapped in Istanbul in late 1992. His body was found near Yalova, Turkey, on January 28, 1993. Two Turks who worked for Iran were implicated.

Nikolai Gilev: alias F. Ginlov. One of two hijackers of an Aeroflot IL14 flying the Kerchi–Krasnodar–Sevastopol domestic route on October 27, 1970. He and fellow student and cousin Vitaly M. Pozdeyev requested asylum when the plane landed at Akliman, Sinop, Turkey. They were extradited to the Soviet Union. In September 1972, one was sentenced to 10 years, the other to 13 years.

I. Gimatov: Armenian pilot who, on April 24, 1991, hijacked a helicopter from a military airport in the Soviet Republic of Armenia, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and diverted it to Erzurum, Turkey, where he requested political asylum. The Union of Soviet Social Republics requested his return.

F. Ginlov: alias of Nikolai Gilev.

Sava Giorgiev: one of three alleged terrorists reported on October 12, 1990, by Bulgarian deputy minister of justice Angel Dzhambazov to have been executed during the "regenerative process" on September 6, 1988. The trio was found guilty of terrorist acts involving explosive devices in 1985 at Varna Airport, on the train from Burgas to Sofia, Bulgaria, and at a hotel in the town of Sliven. Eleven people died, and 20 were injured. The trio also planned to plant bombs on the beaches of two major seaside resorts in the summers of 1986 and 1987.

Dimitriu Giorgiu: name on a false Cypriot passport carried by an Armenian who was arrested at Orly Airport as he was about to board a plane for Beirut on November 11, 1981. His release was demanded by the Orly Group, an Armenian organization, after it bombed the Air France office and French Cultural Center in Beirut on November 12, 1981. The group also bombed an auto parked near the Eiffel Tower on November 14 to demand his release.

On November 14, 1981, senior French political authorities ordered the release of the suspected Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) militant for “reasons of expediency.” He later showed up at a December 10, 1981, ASALA press conference in Lebanon, during which the group threatened to “attack all French institutions if the government does not respect its undertaking and grant political asylum” to four ASALA members who took over the Turkish Embassy in September 1981.

Alexandros Giotopoulos: alias Michael Oikonomous. French-born academic, age 58, who was arrested on July 17, 2002, at his island home in Lipsoi, 160 miles of Athens. Police believed he was the ideological leader and possibly a founder of November 17 in Greece. He was questioned in Athens about items seized from his Athens residence, including a typewriter that might have been used for November 17 propaganda statements. Police set a fire as a ruse, permitting the helicopter team to swoop in. On July 19, police charged Giotopoulos with the premeditated murder of 13 people, including 2 U.S. military officials and a U.K. military attaché, back to 1984.

On December 8, 2003, Giotopoulos was convicted for killings and attacks that began with the assassination on December 23, 1975, of CIA chief of station at Athens Richard Welch and left 23 people dead. He had lived under an alias in Greece for decades. On December 17, 2003, he was sentenced to 21 life terms and 25 years.

Umberto Giovine: one of two Italian hijackers of an Olympic Airlines B707 flying from Paris, France, to Athens, Greece, who forced the plane back to Paris on November 8, 1968. They gave the passengers leaflets saying that they were being punished for flying to Greece, whose junta they opposed. He was sentenced to eight months.

Raki Gisba: Abkhazian pirate and associate of a group of pro-Chechen gunmen who, on January 16, 1996, hijacked the 3,800 ton Panama-registered Aurasya, a Sochi, Russia-bound ferry carrying 200 passengers and crew in Trabzon, threatening to sink it in the Bosphorus Strait unless Russian troops stopped their attacks on the Chechen hostage takers in Pervomayskoye, Dagestan, Russia. The pirates surrendered on January 19 in Riva Bay. Moscow's Trud claimed that Gisba had purchased 10 pump-action shotguns.

Achimez Gochiyayev: alleged by Alexander Litvinenko, a former Russian security agent, to have been paid $500,000 by a rebel leader to organize two of the September 1999 bombings of apartment buildings in Moscow and Volgograd that killed nearly 300 people. He said he rented office space in the two buildings at the request of a child's friend he thought was a Russian security agent.

Husnu Gol: fired a .22-caliber revolver to kill Dursun Aksoy, an administrative attaché in the Turkish Embassy in Brussels on July 14, 1983. He dropped the gun while fleeing the scene. He was arrested on July 22, 1983, in the Netherlands and was extradited to Belgium to face trial. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia, the Justice Commandos of Armenian Genocide, and the Armenian Revolutionary Army claimed credit.

V. Gubanov: warrant officer who helped Vadif Kurbanov, an Azeri pilot, who, on April 8, 1992, hijacked a supersonic SU-25 ground-attack aircraft from the Sitelchay Air Force Base and handed it to Azeri militants at Sangachaliy Air Base, 42 kilometers southwest of Baku. He was one of three people who tied up the flight line duty officer and stole the keys to the antihijack device.

Hasan Hayri Guler: Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) militant who the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, as wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Ibrahim Gumrukcuoglu: militant Muslim gunman, age 48, who, on May 18, 1996, failed to assassinate Turkish president Suleyman Demirel but wounded presidential bodyguard Sukru Cukurlu and Milleyet newspaper reporter Ihsan Yilmaz after President Demirel opened a shopping mall in Izmit. The Izmit pharmacist was angry about a recent military agreement with Israel.

Bedrettin Gunduz: Turkish member of the Islamic Jihad Organization arrested by Turkish officials on April 10, 1987, with three others who planned to kidnap Americans and Israelis living in Turkey and to attack U.S. consulates. The group smuggled 91 kilograms of explosives into the country, intending to obtain the release of 200 colleagues imprisoned in Israel. The explosives were hidden in three bags buried in the garden of Gunduz's home.

Hasan Gunesser: one of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines Flight TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich, Germany, to Istanbul and Ankara, Turkey, on October 13, 1980. The gunman was injured during the Turkish Army's rescue of the hostages. On October 26, 1980, the Diyarbakir Martial Law Military Court charged him with conspiracy to rearrange the basic social, economic, and legal system of the state in accordance with religious principles and beliefs against secularism; engaging in propaganda with this aim; hijacking an airplane at gunpoint; violating Law 6136; and instigating robbery, murder, and injury.

Kenan Gunyel: alias Sedat-Erdal. One of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Gunyel carried a forged ID card for Suat Karabulut. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Surat Gusynov: believed to be the leader of a group of armed men who, on June 22, 1993, entered the Nakhichevan Hotel in Baku, Azerbaijan, fired into the air, and shouted, "Elchibey's servants, we will kill you all." At least 40 Turks were staying in the hotel, which is managed by a Turk.

Mohammed Hassan Guzel: one of two Turks, age 18, who hijacked a Turkish Airlines B727 flying from Diyarbakir to Ankara, Turkey, on March 19, 1977, and diverted it to Beirut, Lebanon. They demanded $300,000 in Turkish currency and a visit to the nearest Palestinian refugee camp. They surrendered to Lebanese authorities.

Kevork Guzelian: Lebanese and one of the four Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. Turkey announced after the incident that it would try the terrorists in absentia under Section 125 of the Turkish penal code. On January 31, 1984, a Paris court sentenced the four terrorists to seven years in prison. On July 26, 1986, Guzelian was jailed for 10 days for refusing an expulsion order to Beirut, saying that his safety was not guaranteed.

Cen Guylsai: one of four armed Del Sol hijackers of the Halic, a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Istanbul to Bulgaria's Burgas Airport on May 24, 1981. Two hijackers were arrested when they left a plane to hold a news conference. The other two were overpowered and injured by the passengers. Turkey requested extradition. Guylsai was born in 1962.

H

---

I.H.: Dutch woman, age 19, arrested on July 18, 1990, by Dutch police in connection with the May 27, 1990, murders by four gunmen at an Italian restaurant in Roermond, the Netherlands. The gunmen believed two vacationing Australian lawyers, age 24, to be British soldiers and killed them. I.H. was believed to have helped with the murder. She lived in Amstelveen, near Amsterdam, and was arrested at the frontier with Germany, near Venlo, on returning from holiday in Yugoslavia. Police searched her flat and found documents indicating that she had rented the Provisional Irish Republican Army hideout. She was believed to be friendly with Edward Thornton, one of three individuals held for the murders.

Samir Mohammed Hadar: variants Samir Khadir, Samir Kadar. Jordanian and one of two gunmen who shot to death Yusuf el Sebai, editor of the Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram, at the Nicosia Hilton Hotel on February 18, 1978. Sebai was a former minister of culture and a close friend of President Sadat. The duo then took 30 hostages into a restaurant and demanded to fly out of the country. A Cypriot DC8 flew them to Djibouti. After bouncing around the area, the plane returned to Larnaca Airport. Later that day, 100 Egyptian commandos landed in a C130 and attacked the hijackers. Cypriot forces fired at the commandos, killing 15 and wounding 16. The terrorists immediately surrendered. Cyprus rejected Egypt's extradition request, and Egypt suspended diplomatic relations on February 21. On April 15, 1978, the gunmen were sentenced to death. A July 31, 1978, appeal was rejected, but on October 23, 1978, the Cypriot president commuted their sentences.

In June 1980, extra security precautions were taken at Prague Castle and the Niederschoenhausen Palace in Berlin after threats were made against Cypriot president Spyros Kyprianou. Iraqi terrorists were reportedly demanding Hadar's release. He was released in 1982. He was believed to have been involved in the attacks on Rome's main synagogue in 1982 and on the Rome airport in 1985. He was believed to have been involved with the three terrorists who on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. He used dozens of aliases as a senior Abu Nidal operative. On December 20, 1988, Washington Post reported that he worked out of Rome and had set up an export-import company that traded in Italian marble but was a front for logistics, arms, and finances for terrorists. He met Aija Saloranta, a Finnish woman, at an Italian café and later married her in Sweden. He had met his first wife in Lebanon.

Patrick Haemers: variant Patrick Emers. Alleged Belgian leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. On May 29, 1989, Brazilian federal police arrested him in Rio de Janeiro. He was detained along with Lizzie Shack, his wife, and Diane Inu, both Belgians. Brazil's Supreme Court ordered their extradition on March 7, 1990. On March 30, 1990, Belgium sent an Air Force Hercules C130 to Brazil to bring back Haemers, who confessed to the kidnapping.

Andrea Haeusler: variant of Andrea Hausler.

Isam al-Din Hafiz: senior Egyptian Islamic Jihad member who was deported from Baku, Azerbaijan, to Egypt in September 1998.

Hagop Hagopian: Hagop Hagopian may not be actual name; variants Hagop Hagorian, Agop Agopyan, Agop Agopian; aliases Arutyun Takosyan, Henri Titizian, Henri Tutuzan, Abdul Mohammed Kasim, Bedros Hovanissian, Minas Ohabessian. Hooded spokesperson for the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. On July 31, 1982, he and his bodyguard died from injuries suffered in an Israeli bombing of the group's Beirut headquarters the previous day. Other reports said that he was assassinated by ASALA members on April 28, 1988, in front of his Athens home. He was carrying a South Yemeni passport in the name of Lebanese Henri Tutuzan.

Hagop Hagorian: variant of Hagopian.

Mohammed Haidar: Tajik who was one of two organizers of the bombing that killed a dozen people, including four Americans working for DynCorp in Afghanistan on August 29, 2004.

Mustafa Haji: alleged by the Mojahedin-e Khalq as being the leader of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemblou, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. On November 28, 1989, Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of murder.

Therese Halaseh: one of four Black September hijackers on May 8, 1972, of Sabena Airlines Flight 517, a B707 flying the Vienna–Athens–Tel Aviv route over Zagreb. The group landed at Lod Airport in Israel and demanded the release of 317 fedayeen prisoners, most of them held at Ramleh Prison. They threatened to blow up the plane and all aboard. Halaseh was wounded when Israeli forces stormed the plane and rescued the hostages. The two male hijackers died in the rescue.

Halaseh was born near Nazareth to a middle-class Arab family. She completed high school and became a nursing student. She was recruited into Fatah by a fellow student and in 1971 went across the border to a Fatah camp. She trained in pistol shooting and explosives handling in Fatah's camp at Sidon, Lebanon.

The two female hijackers were tried in a military court in the theater of the old British Army camp at Sarafand. They were charged for terrorist crimes in violation of Point 58.d of the 1945 British Mandatory Government's Defence (Emergency) Regulations and for being members of the unlawful El Fatah association, contrary to Point 85.1.a. The two women claimed constraint according to Section 17 of the Criminal Code Ordinance of 1936 and said that they were forced to carry the arms and were not willing members of Fatah. The tribunal rejected that defense, noting that the law allowed that defense only if there was an immediate threat of death or grievous harm, which did not appear to be the case. One of the judges demanded the death sentence for the women after they were found guilty of the three charges. His colleagues disagreed. On August 14, 1972, the two were sentenced to life in prison. Halaseh's release was demanded by the four Black September terrorists who took over the Israeli Embassy in Bangkok on December 28, 1972.

Dr. Halatyan: member of the Majlis in Iran. On October 27, 1983, Halatyan was reportedly designated to head the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia after it moved its headquarters to Tehran. It was to reorganize under the name Armed Propaganda Union for the Liberation of Turkish Armenia.

Ahmed el-Amiani Hallal: stateless individual arrested in Perpignan, France, on July 28, 1994. He had ties to Quamraddine Kherbanne, a founder of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front. Hallal was a member of a charity organization operating in Croatia, where Kherbanne then resided.

Muhammad Abdu Hallum: arrested by Turkish police in January 27, 1987, in connection with the discovery of 30 kilograms of explosives and timed detonators in Hatay's Reyhanli District. Hallum told the Ankara State Security Court in Ankara that he was a member of the Muslim Brotherhood and had agreed to cooperate with Iraqi intelligence to attack Syrian interests.

Muhammad 'Abd al-Halqum: Syrian carrying an Iraqi tourist passport who was arrested by Turkish police on December 31, 1986, for smuggling explosives into the country. He was indicted on January 27, 1987, by the Turkish State Court for working for the illegal Muslim Brotherhood by smuggling 13 kilograms of explosives and aiming to overthrow the regime. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Salih 'Ali Hamad: one of three Arabs charged on May 16, 1987, in a Limassol, Cyprus, district court with plotting to murder two British citizens on April 20, 1987, attempted murder, carrying and using automatic weapons, carrying explosives, and possessing forged passports. The attackers were members of the al-Mehdi Ben Barka organization. They were also suspected in the bombing on August 3, 1986, of the Akrotiri military airport. On January 29, 1988, the Kuwaiti was jailed for seven years. On June 28, 1989, the Supreme Court overturned the sentence by the Limassol Assize Court, acquitting him on the ground that his complicity was not proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

Hamoud Hamid: alias of an unknown Lebanese man who rented a car in Athens in July 1988. He was part of a group that was going to carry out a car bomb attack on a U.S. military base in Greece.

A premature explosion wrecked the car and killed two terrorists in the Athens harbor.

Poison Hand: alias of Dimitris Koufodinas.

Faruk Hapinyan: member of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) who fell down an elevator shaft in Ankara while trying to escape arrest on March 8, 1985. Police found material on his body that indicated he was planning a terrorist attack with four other ASALA members.

Mahdi Su'du Hasan: one of two Lebanese hijackers of a Romanian B707 chartered by the Libyan Arab Airways to fly from Athens, Greece, to Tripoli, Libya, on June 23, 1983. The hijackers demanded to be flown to Beirut, Lebanon. The plane landed in Rome to refuel; the pilot was denied landing permission in Beirut. After hopscotching, the plane landed at Larnaca Airport in Cyprus. The hijackers demanded to go to Tehran. The hijackers surrendered. The hijackers were members of a Shi'ite Moslem militia group who wanted an independent investigation to look into the 1978 disappearance in Libya of Musa as-Sadr, the group's spiritual leader. On August 2, 1983, the hijackers were sentenced to seven years in jail after pleading guilty in a Nicosia, Cyprus, court.

Fatih Hasanein: leader of the Third World Relief Agency from 1992 to 1995. Hasanein received money from Osama bin Laden to buy weapons for Bosnian fighters.

Ahmad Hashahit: aliases Ahmad al-Shaqiq Dusuqi Ahmad, Ahmad Hashaykah, Ahmad Hasayqah. Palestinian Islamic Jihad member with a Jordanian passport believed responsible for setting off a parcel bomb on April 19, 1991. The bomb killed 7 and injured 10 others at the Air Courier Service office in the town center of Patras, Greece. His body was blown apart in the explosion. He had posed as a student at the Polytechnic School of Patrai University and was a resident of the Stasikhena Patron student dormitory. Police believed the bomb went off accidentally as he was carrying it out of the apartment of his Greek girlfriend, who lived in the building.

Lahoussine el-Haski: most-wanted suspect in Saudi Arabia, who was arrested in July 2004 in Maaseik, Belgium. He had returned from a trip to Syria and Turkey. On February 16, 2006, a Belgian court sentenced him to seven years for belonging to the Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, which was involved in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004 and the 2003 bombing in Casablanca, Morocco, that killed 32 people. He was indicted on April 11, 2006, by Spanish Judge Juan del Olmo for membership in a terrorist group, murder, and attempted murder.

Hasmamat: Chechen rebel spokesperson for the scores of Chechen terrorists who on October 23, 2002, seized 900 hostages at a Moscow theater.

Mohammad Shaban Hassan: Libyan Embassy employee in charge of administrative affairs who met with the two Libyans, Ali Ecefli Ramadan and Recep Muhtar Rohama Tarhuni. Ramadan and Tarhuni were stopped by police on April 18, 1986, in front of the U.S. officer's club in Ankara, Turkey; threw away a bag containing six grenades; and ran. Hassan's trial began in absentia on May 13, 1986, in the State Security Court. On June 7, 1986, the charges were dropped because of diplomatic immunity.

Andrea Hausler: variants Haeusler, Haeussler. The extradition of Hausler, age 31, from Greece to Germany was announced on January 8, 1997, in connection with the April 5, 1986, bombing of La Belle Discotheque that killed 4 and injured 229 people. She was arrested in October 1996 at the request of German authorities while vacationing in the Chalkidiki resort near the northern port city of Thessaloniki.

On November 18, 1997, the trial began of Abulghasem Eter, Yasser Chraidi, Ali Chanaa, Verena Chanaa, and her sister Andrea Hausler for the bombing on charges of murder, attempted murder, and being an accessory to a crime. Eter and Hausler were charged as accessories. All faced life sentences. On November 13, 2001, Hausler was acquitted for lack of proof that she knew there was a bomb in her sister Verena's bag.

Bedros Havanassian: alias of Hagop Hagopian.

'Umar Ahmad Hawillu: variant of Omar Ahmad Hawillo.

Yasin Hayal: convicted of bombing a McDonald's in 2004. He confessed on January 22, 2007, to inciting the murder of Turkish Armenian journalist Hrant Dink the previous week.

David William Hedges: Briton named as one of five white Communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122 mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. The U.K. government said it could not send him to South Africa in the absence of an extradition treaty.

Volker Heidel: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Rolf Heissler: student, age 26, serving eight years for armed robbery. He was freed during the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. He and several other freed terrorists entered a plane on March 3 that was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Libya; Beirut, Lebanon; Damascus, Syria; and Amman, Jordan. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum.

Heissler was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and of the Confederation of Industry, and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On August 1, 1995, Heissler was one of nine imprisoned RAF members who announced the start of a three-day hunger strike to protest the planned execution in the United States of Mumia Abu Jamal, who was convicted of killing a police officer.

Jaballa Hejab: one of three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. Greece authorities said he entered Greece on June 1, 1988, on a Libyan passport and was probably the group's leader. He stayed in several hotels in the Attiki area and in an apartment on 6 Grigorios Lambrakis Street in Glifadha, the terrorists' base of operations. Fingerprints indicated that he had participated in the February 18, 1978, assassination in Cyprus of Egyptian journalist Yusuf al-Siba'i.

Monika Helbing: alias Elke Winter. Red Army Faction (RAF) terrorist arrested in East Germany on June 14, 1990. She was married to Horst Winter, a fellow RAF terrorist, with whom she had a one-year-old son. The Berlin City Court issued an arrest warrant on June 17, 1990, following an earlier complaint from the German Democratic Republic general state prosecutor about the refusal of the Central Municipal Court to arrest three RAF members. The couple was picked up in Frankfurt (Oder). They were wanted for several kidnappings and assassinations of prominent Germans in the late 1970s, including the slaying of Hanns-Martin Schleyer in 1977. The Federal Republic of Germany intended to request extradition. Helbing was handed over to West German authorities on September 26, 1990.

Ahmed Mohd Ali Hersh: Jordanian who shot to death 'Azmi al-Mufti, the second highest ranking official at the Jordanian Embassy in Bucharest, Romania, on December 4, 1984. Hersh was a student at the Bucharest Institute of Construction. Black September claimed credit, although the Abu Nidal Group was suspected. Hersh was arrested.

Karl-Heinz Hoffman: leader of the neo-Nazi paramilitary Hoffman Military Sports Group. He and five of his followers were arrested on September 27, 1980, in West Germany in connection with the detonation of a hand grenade the previous day near the exit from the Munich Oktoberfest beer festival that killed 13 and injured 215. On September 29, 1980, five of the suspects were released for insufficient evidence of connection to the blast.

Sieglinde Hoffmann: member of the West German Red Army Faction (RAF) who was arrested with four other women in the Latin Quarter of Paris on May 6, 1980. Police found gasoline bombs, guns, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, and false identity papers. On August 1, 1995, she was one of nine imprisoned RAF members who announced the start of a three-day hunger strike to protest the planned execution in the United States of Mumia Abu Jamal, who was convicted of killing a police officer.

Barbara Perau-Hofmeier: Red Army Faction member who was serving eight years in prison for a bomb attack on a federal border guard barracks. She was freed early from custody on March 13, 1993.

Josef Norbert Hofmeier: Red Army Faction member arrested on June 22, 1987, and charged with setting off three bombs on August 11, 1986, at a barracks of the Federal Frontier Force in Swistal-Heimerzheim near Bonn, West Germany. On January 20, 1989, the Fifth Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court found the Duisburg resident guilty of bombing the Frontier barracks and the Fraunhofer Institute for Laser Technology in Aachen, Germany, in 1986. He was sentenced to 10 years. The State Prosecutor's Office was not able to prove that he was involved with the RAF.

Birgit Hogefeld: on January 4, 1985, the Criminal Investigation Department in Wiesbaden, Federal Republic of Germany, issued a warrant for six new members of the Red Army Faction (RAF), including Hogefeld. On September 20, 1988, the Khalid Akbar Commando of the RAF and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer. The government issued a warrant for Hogefeld's arrest in the case. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the "hard core" of RAF members.

On June 27, 1993, Hogefeld was arrested following a gun battle with officers of the GSG-9 anti-terrorist unit of the Federal Frontier Protection Force in Bad Kleinen near Schwerin, Germany. Police were investigating whether she was involved in the March 1993 bombing of the prison in Weiterstadt, in Hesse, Germany. She was also wanted for questioning in the early 1985 assassination of Maschinen-Turbinen Union board member Zimmermann, the July 1985 killing of Siemens board member Beckurts and his driver Groppler, the October 1985 attack on diplomat van Braunnmühl, and the November 1989 attack on Deutsche Bank Board Chairman Herrhausen. She had been a RAF member since 1974.

Hogefeld was born in Wiesbaden in 1956. She passed her final university exam in 1975. She broke off law studies and taught the organ.

On November 5, 1996, she was sentenced to life in prison by a five-judge court for the bombing of a U.S. Army base in Frankfurt in which Airman First Class Frank Scarton and civilian Becky Jo Bristol were killed. Soldier Edward Pimental was killed before the bombing so that his identity card could be used. She was also convicted for taking part in the 1988 attack on Tietmeyer, who had since become president of the Bundesbank. The court was silent on the charge of murder linked to her June 1993 arrest. Hogefeld said the RAF was part of a "bygone era" and should disband and that the armed struggle was wrong.

Cleven Holt: aliases Clevin Raphael Holt, Kevin Holt, Isa Abdullah Ali. On January 22, 1996, the U.S. media reported that he was a U.S.-born suspected Hizballah terrorist who was in Bosnia working with local Islamic terrorists. The press said he was arrested earlier for posing as a U.S. serviceman. He once worked as a groundskeeper and janitor at Howard University. Holt claimed to have been a gunman with Hizballah in Beirut, Lebanon, in the early 1980s. He claimed he was a member of Amal, the Lebanese Shi'ite militia, when he was interviewed by a Washington Post reporter in 1982. He was the subject of a U.S. manhunt in Bosnia in 1996 when he tried to enter a NATO compound.

Clevin Raphael Holt: alias of Cleven Holt.

Kevin Holt: alias of Cleven Holt.

Josef Homolov: Czech-born Canadian who hijacked an Air India B747 flying the Bombay-Beirut-Rome-New York run on December 25, 1974. He demanded a gun and passage to a place of his choice. During the two-hour siege, he attempted to force the pilot to put the plane into a sharp dive over the center of Rome. He was overpowered by the crew. Homolov received a minor head injury. He was arrested by Italian authorities upon landing in Rome.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hornik: two of three people who brandished a broken pistol on June 2, 1958, and forced the pilot of a domestic Czechoslovakian general aviation charter plane to fly to Vienna, Austria. The trio was arrested for extortion under threats, but the charges were dropped on June 6, 1958.

Muhamet Houda: variant Mohamed Huda. Houda, age 39, was one of two Egyptians arrested by Albanian police on June 29, 1998, and accused of attempting to organize an Islamic fundamentalist network throughout the country. They led the Renaissance of the Islamic Heritage, which had been active in charitable work for a year. Another report listed the organization as the Tirana branch of the Kuwaiti Society for the Revival of the Islamic Heritage. Such groups were also suspected of being covers for terrorist groups. The duo rented an apartment in the Tirana suburbs in which police found forged documents, two automatic pistols, two rifles, and ammunition.

On July 4, the Albanian newspaper Tirana Koha Jone claimed that the duo was arrested in Elbasan in central Albania, escorted to Rians Airport, and put onto a military plane. The paper claimed that the duo was wanted for two murders committed in France and Algiers and were thought to belong to a Saudi terrorist group. Another report said “Huda” was an Egyptian Islamic Jihad and al Qaeda member. A judge had allegedly freed them, but the police helped to spirit them out of the country after they were declared persona non grata.

The Tirana Gazeta Shqiptare on July 14 claimed that the duo would set up a training camp in Elbasan for young Muslims who, on graduation, would infiltrate the Kosovo Liberation Army.

They were alleged to be members of the Selephist sect. Another report said the duo was sent to Egypt.

Mohammad Rashid Husayn: claimed to be innocent and merely fighting for the liberation of Palestine when Husayn and Mahdi Mohammad Zubeyde’s trial began at the Fourth High Criminal Court in Istanbul on November 4, 1977. Husayn and Zubeyde were accused of attacking the Istanbul airport in August 1976 and causing the deaths of 4 and injuries to 20 others. The duo was sentenced to life in prison for murder and causing injuries, but the Supreme Court of Appeals reversed the sentences. The prosecutor asked instead for 5 to 10 years for infiltrating arms into Turkey.

Rashid Kurshid Husayn: Kurd whom Ha’aretz claimed on November 13, 1986, of being one of the masked suicide terrorists who fired on and threw grenades at worshippers in the Neve Shalom, Istanbul, Turkey, synagogue on September 6, 1986, doused the 21 corpses with gasoline, and set them alight. Two terrorists who had barred the door died in the attack when their grenades exploded in their hands. A third escaped. The attack was claimed by the Islamic Jihad, Abu Nidal, the Northern Arab League, the Islamic Resistance, the Palestinian Resistance Organization, the Fighting International Front—’Amrush Martyr Group, and the Organization of the Unity of the Arab North.

I

---

I.I.: Turk, age 41, arrested in a café on June 27, 1988, following the fatal shooting of Nihat Karaman, founder of the Association of Turkish Workers in the Netherlands, outside his Amsterdam home during the night. He had opposed the extreme right Turkish terrorist Grey Wolves and was active in the Dutch pacifist movement.

Bislan I.: Chechen, age 25, arrested in Tours, France, on May 18, 2005, in connection with the November 2, 2004, murder of filmmaker Theo van Gogh. He was believed tied to the Hofstad network of Islamic fundamentalists to which assassin Mohammed Bouyeri belonged.

Mauro Iacone: Italian Defense Ministry employee arrested by Rome police on June 25, 1987, in connection with the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, a Red Brigades splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Ahmed Mohammed Ibrahim: Ethiopian student and suspected Eritrean Liberation Front member, age 24, who was arrested on December 10, 1969, in the Madrid airport while carrying a suitcase containing explosives. He said that he and another planned to hijack an Ethiopian Airlines flight on the Madrid–Romeo–Athens–Addis Ababa run on December 12, 1969, fly the plane over Paris and London, distribute leaflets, and then destroy the plane on the ground in Copenhagen, Denmark.

Mohammad Ibrahim: Lebanese-born Palestinian who threw a grenade into the Shoham, Limassol, Cyprus, offices of the Israeli shipping firm on September 23, 1981, injuring three female and two male Greek Cypriot employees. He was a Black June member.

Sukur Mohamed Ibrahim: Palestinian guerrilla arrested at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport in July 1981. On February 24, 1983, the Martial Law Court of Istanbul acquitted him of "conspiracy to commit a felony" and released him from custody. He was accused of perpetrating attacks against the Israeli Consulate and its personnel and faced a 10-year prison term.

Sultan Said Idiyev: alias Aslan. Chechen armed with a grenade, two pounds of TNT, a submachine gun, and explosives taped to his body, who, on July 31, 2001, hijacked a bus in southern Russia and held more than 25 passengers hostage. The bus was going from Nevinnomyssk to Stavropol at 7:00 A.M. when the hijacker ordered it to an airport outside Mineralnyye Vody, a resort town less than 100 miles from Chechnya. Authorities initially believed two hijackers were involved. He demanded the release of five Chechens who were imprisoned for a May 1994 bus hijacking. After a 12-hour siege in 100 degree heat, members of the Alpha unit of the Federal Security Service rushed the bus with gunfire and smoke grenades. As a smoke bomb went off, the gunman peeked through a window and a sniper killed him.

Bajro Ikanovic: after conducting several criminal activities in France, he returned to his native

Bosnia-Herzegovina and converted to Islam. He was arrested on October 19, 2005, in Copenhagen, Denmark, after providing 40 pounds of explosives to Mirsad Bektasevic, a Bosnian who used it to fabricate an explosives vest on Polygon-ska Street in Sarajevo. He was arrested after Sarajevo police raided an apartment occupied by an underground group that was planning to bomb the U.K. Embassy. Police confiscated explosives, rifles, other arms, and a video hailing "brothers" who were killed in Afghanistan and Iraq. They were hiding explosives inside lemons and tennis balls and trying to set up terrorist training camps in the hills outside Sarajevo.

Ahmet Ikaz: listed by Interpol as a Pakistani criminal, age 24, he was one of seven men killed on March 2, 2002, by Macedonian police who initially said they were plotting terrorist attacks at the U.S., German, and U.K. embassies in Skopje. Five of the dead were Pakistani or Middle Eastern; the others may have been ethnic Albanians. Police had been following them since detaining two Jordanians and two Bosnians in February and seizing computer disks with information on embassies and government installations. The police fired warning shots when attempting to detain the terrorists, who fired back. Police suffered no casualties in the shootout on a dirt road leading to Ljuboten. Police said they had seized eight Chinese-designed hand grenades (probably from Albania), a rocket-propelled grenade launcher with ammunition, an antitank weapon, four automatic weapons, two pistols, a bazooka, flares, and more than a dozen new uniforms of the Albanian National Liberation Army. The terrorists were in civilian clothing. Some carried Turkish bank notes and two plastic cards with Arabic writing.

On April 30, 2004, Macedonian police spokesperson Mirjana Konteska told the media that police had ambushed and killed seven innocent South Asian (six Pakistanis and one Indian) illegal immigrants to show that police were participating in the war on terrorism. Three former police commanders, two special police officers, and a businessman were charged with murder and faced life sentences. The immigrants were smuggled into Macedonia from Bulgaria by a special Macedonian police group who told the victims that they would be transferred to Western Europe. The next day, police accused former Interior Minister Ljube Boskovski of ordering the killings. He reportedly skipped to Croatia, where, police said, they could not arrest and extradite him because of his Croatian citizenship.

Adnan Ilhan: awakened the four suicide bombers in a series of al Qaeda attacks in November 2003 that killed 58 people and wounded 750 in Istanbul. He was captured in southwestern Turkey.

Huseyin Inan: one of three Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) kidnappers of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. Their release was demanded by four TPLA hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 on May 3, 1972. On May 3, 1972, the Turkish tourist office in Sweden was bombed in response to Ankara's parliament ratifying the death sentences. The trio was hanged on May 6, 1972.

Vilim Inkret: one of three hijackers of the June 26, 1952, Yugoslavian National Airlines flight from Belgrade to Puola that was diverted to Foligno, Italy, where the trio requested asylum. Inkret broke into the cockpit with an ax, took over the controls, and flew to Foligno, while the other two pointed guns at the passengers.

Ali Aslan Isik: one of the top leaders of Turkish Hizballah, a Kurdish Islamic (Sunni) extremist group unrelated to Lebanese Hizballah, who was arrested by Turkish authorities in December 2002.

Itskhakov: one of two prisoners whose release was obtained by 15 prisoners who, on August 19, 1990, hijacked an Aeroflot Tupolev 154 flying them between Neryungri and Yakutsk in Russia. The hijacking prisoners demanded to be flown abroad. The plane landed in New Delhi, India, and later Karachi, Pakistan, where the hijackers surrendered to local authorities and requested political asylum. The Pakistanis initially granted asylum to 11 Soviet hijackers but then took them into custody. They were to be charged with hijacking, which carries a penalty of death or 25 years in jail. On August 21, the deputy chairman of Uzbekistan's KGB said the 11 would be extradited. Tass said one of the two released prisoners was the hijacking ringleader. On September 2, a special Pakistani court handling antiterrorist cases sent to prison the 11 hijackers after finding them guilty of charges of hijacking and possessing unlicensed weapons. On September 4, Tass said that the Karachi court had decided to remand the hijackers in custody until September 23. By November 20, all the hijackers had been sentenced to various terms in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and were awaiting trial by Pakistani courts.

Dakha Iverieli: one of the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad, Russia, on November 18, 1983. In August, Iverieli was sentenced to 14 years.

Paata Iverieli: one of the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad, Russia, on November 18, 1983. In August, Iverieli was sentenced to 14 years.

Franjo Ivi: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for resistance) who were arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, Ivi was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot, for planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency, and for planning to assassinate a political opponent.

Stipe Ivkovic: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for resistance) who were arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, Ivkovic was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot, for planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency, and for planning to assassinate a political opponent.

Franciszek Izdebski: would-be hijacker of a Polish Lot flying from Katowice to Gdansk on August 5, 1981. He was arrested by the Citizens' Militia in Gdansk, Poland.

J

---

K.J.: received an eight-year unsuspended sentence on July 28, 1978, by the Bratislava Regional Court for planning to hijack a plane in April 1978 on the Bratislava–Prague route. He was assigned to the Third Correctional-Educational Group.

L.J.: on October 11, 1989, Czechoslovakia's Rude Pravo announced that the government was initiating criminal proceedings against the unemployed individual who was born in 1971 and resided in Prievidza District for preparing to hijack a plane to a foreign country. He had made imitation incendiary devices and a fake revolver.

Marad J.: Chechen, age 22, arrested in Amsterdam on April 19, 2005, in connection with the November 2, 2004, murder of filmmaker Theo van Gogh. He was believed tied to the Hofstad network of Islamic fundamentalists to which assassin Mohammed Bouyeri belonged.

Hijab Jaballah: alias Khadir Samir Muhammad. Jaballah was reportedly involved with the three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. His fingerprints were found in a hired car and in the Glifadha apartment in which he lived. Abu Nidal's group had claimed that he died in 1985.

Idris Jamal Jabir: one of six Arabs for whom the Nicosia District Court issued an eight-day arrest warrant on May 30, 1989, in connection with the discovery two days earlier by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader, Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca, Morocco. All six were charged, inter alia, with illegal entry into Cyprus and with possession of weapons and explosives. On June 2, 1989, Lebanon requested extradition.

On June 22, 1989, the Larnaca District Court set June 30 as the date for the opening of the preliminary hearing. On August 30, 1989, the Muslim 14 March group threatened to hijack a Cyprus Airlines plane if the government did not release them. The group seeks to avenge the 40 Lebanese Muslims who were killed by 'Awn's troops on March 14, 1989. The trial began on October 9, 1989. All pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and transporting weapons and explosives. Five pleaded guilty to illegal entry. The trial was moved from Larnaca to Nicosia for security reasons. On October 13, 1989, the court sentenced the six on eight charges. Five received jail sentences ranging from one to eight years; the sixth received one to five years. All of the penalties were to be concurrent, effective the date of arrest. The court president said he took the psychological state of the sixth accused into consideration in determining the verdict. On April 15, 1991, Cypriot authorities deported the six Lebanese to Beirut after they had served 17 months of their sentences.

Isabell Jacob: Red Army Faction member who was released early on March 13, 1993. She had been serving a four-and-a-half-year sentence for a bombing of the Hannover Fair, inter alia.

Husayn Abu Ja'far: Hizballah member claimed by Ha'aretz on November 13, 1986, as being one of the masked suicide terrorists who fired on and threw grenades at worshippers in the Neve Shalom, Istanbul, Turkey, synagogue on September 6, 1986, doused the 21 corpses with gasoline, and set them alight. Two terrorists who had barred the door died in the attack when their grenades exploded in their hands. A third escaped. The attack was claimed by the Islamic Jihad, Abu Nidal, the Northern Arab League, the Islamic Resistance, the Palestinian Resistance Organization, the Fighting International Front—'Amrushi Martyr Group, and the Organization of the Unity of the Arab North. The newspaper said Ja'far was the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine representative in Iran and a trainer at the Mansuriyat base. He left Istanbul and returned to Tehran three days before the attack, leaving the operation to the two remaining terrorists.

Joseph Jakaby: one of seven anti-Communist Hungarian students who, on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Győr to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Abdulfettah Jalhan: Palestinian guerrilla arrested at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport in July 1981. On February 24, 1983, the Martial Law Court of Istanbul acquitted him of "conspiracy to commit a felony" and released him from custody. He was accused of perpetrating attacks against the Israeli Consulate and its personnel and faced a 10-year prison term.

Janko Janjic: Serbian war crimes suspect, age 43, who, on October 12, 2000, set off a hand grenade as North Atlantic Treaty Organization peacekeeping troops tried to arrest him in Foca, Bosnia, 25 miles southeast of Sarajevo. The blast killed him and wounded four German soldiers, none critically. He was the third suspected war criminal to die while resisting arrest. Janjic was a car mechanic before the war. He was one of four Bosnian Serb subcommanders indicted for the torture, rape, and enslavement of women and girls in Foca in summer 1992.

Frazek Jarda: engineer of a Czech four-car passenger train who with accomplices on September 11, 1951, hijacked the train to Selb-Ploesberg in the U.S. zone of Germany when a confederate switched a track at Asch station and crossed the border. The United States granted him asylum.

Roman Jasinski: one of two armed male Poles who tried to hijack a LOT AN24 flying from Katowice to Warsaw, Poland, on June 9, 1970. The crew foiled them.

Muhammad Brazim Jayyusi: alias 'Ali Shawqi. Lebanese whose eight-day detention was ordered by Limassol's district court in connection with the Black June attack in which a grenade was thrown into the Shoham, Limassol, Cyprus, offices of the Israeli shipping firm on September 23, 1981, injuring three female and two male Greek Cypriot employees.

Aiden Jelal: one of four armed Del Sol hijackers of the Halic, a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Istanbul to Bulgaria's Burgas Airport on May 24, 1981. Two hijackers were arrested when they left a plane to hold a news conference. The other two were overpowered and injured by the passengers. Turkey requested extradition. Jelal was born on March 2, 1960.

Borivoje Jelic: one of five individuals who were charged with the September 27, 1981, hijacking by German-speaking Croatians of a Yugoslavian National Airlines B737 flying from Dubrovnik to Belgrade, Serbia. The group demanded to be flown to Tel Aviv, Israel. The plane refueled at El-Linikon International Airport, then landed at Larnaca after the Israelis refused landing privileges. The hijackers surrendered to police and were quickly extradited to Yugoslavia. The group was tried on February 9, 1982, in the Belgrade District Court. Jelic claimed to have led the hijacking after his release from a punitive correction center and subsequent inability to find a job or passport.

Jhosepian: identified on August 13, 1983, by the Commando for the Defense of Western Civilization as the sixth member of a group of Armenian Revolutionary Army terrorists who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through the Lisbon airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983. It was never confirmed that there was a sixth terrorist.

Bashir Ibrahim Jibril: Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) member assassinated in Athens, Greece, on August 19, 1978. The PFLP blamed the Greek government.

Abu Jihad: leader of three terrorists, who on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98.

Al-Zir Jihad: one of two Palestinian students who threw a hand grenade at two other Palestinian students at a Thessaloniki, Greece, student hotel on November 8, 1985. They were arrested while attempting to leave the country on a flight from Mikra Airport. Police found an automatic weapon, 2 grenades, and 420 grams of dynamite in the al Fatah members' apartment.

K

---

Czesław K.: Polish pilot who diverted his Polish LOT on its Warsaw–Wrocław run on February 12, 1982, and landed at the U.S. Air Force base at Tempelhof in West Berlin, where he requested political asylum. It was granted. On July 19, 1982, he was acquitted of hijacking.

Ekrem K.: alias Usume. Leader of al Qaeda in Turkey who was captured in Konya on January 29, 2007. He was believed to have communicated with al Qaeda in code and trained new recruits.

F.K.: received a nine-and-a-half years unsuspended sentence on July 28, 1978, by the Bratislava Regional Court for planning to hijack a plane in April 1978 on the Bratislava–Prague route. He was assigned to the Third Correctional-Educational Group.

J.K.: foiled in a hijack plan during a check of security installations at Prague’s Ruzyne Airport on June 5, 1978. J.K. was sentenced by the Prague City Court to nine years for planning a hijacking.

Slawomir K.: overpowered by crewmen when he tried to hijack a hydrofoil en route from Szczecin to Swinoujscie, Poland, and divert it to Sweden. He was arrested.

Muhammad Kabous: variant Kabbus; alias Taliban. Kabous lived in Tharodant or Tharudant, Hungary, and was born in 1982. He joined al Qaeda in Iraq as a martyr in 2007, contributing 150 euro, 15 in Turkish currency, and his passport, ID, and driver’s license. His recruitment coordinator was Mua’awia al Maghribi, who he met through Al Bashieer (variant al-Bashir). Kabous flew from Morocco to Turkey and on to Syria, where he met Abd Al Rahman, Omar, and Walied. He brought 150 euros. He had experience as a mechanic and had worked as a driver. His mobile phone number was 0021268771451; his cousin’s was 0021268735144.

Tallal Khaled Kaddourah: Lebanese, age 21, and one of two Black Septembrists who opened their suitcases at an Athens airport inspection on August 5, 1973, pulled out machine guns and grenades, and killed 3 and wounded 55 passengers. They had been ordered to attack the Trans World Airlines flight to Tel Aviv, Israel, but the passengers had already boarded. The dead included two Americans and an Indian. The terrorists claimed that they were avenging the Mossad execution of Abu Youssef in Beirut, Lebanon, on April 10, 1973. They seized 35 hostages but soon surrendered to Athens police. On August 7, 1973, the two told a court that they had “orders to hit at immigrants to Israel because they kill our wives and children.” The Seventh Suicide Squad claimed credit, although the duo was later identified as belonging to Ahmad abd-al Ghafur’s group of Fatah dissidents. After a one-day trial, a Greek court sentenced them to death on January 23, 1974. The sentences were commuted to life in prison on April 23, 1974. Their release was demanded in the armed attack and hijacking on December 17, 1973, in Italy and the February 2, 1974, takeover of a Greek ship in Karachi, Pakistan. The duo was released and expelled to Libya on May 5, 1974. It appears they were freed in Libya; one of them was with Abd-al Ghaffur when he was killed in Beirut on September 13, 1974.

Rabah Kadre: Kadre, age 35, with al Qaeda ties, was arrested in November 2002 in the United Kingdom on terrorism-related charges. Kadre was accused of possessing materials for the “preparation, instigation or commission of terrorism.” He had been to terrorist training camps in Afghanistan. He was linked to three Algerians and a Moroccan arrested in a Paris suburb on December 16, 2002, who had two vials of an unidentified liquid and an anticontamination suit that could protect “against biological, chemical, and nuclear risks.” Police believed they were planning a terrorist attack on the Russian Embassy in Paris.

Kafarov: vocational school student and one of two men who attempted on September 2, 1990, to hijack a Soviet airliner in Kirghizia in central Asia as it was flying from Przhelyalsk to Frunze, the capital of Kirghizia, but were overpowered. They demanded to go to South Africa but were arrested. They came from Tokmak, Kirghizia.

Ramazani Kahlo: one of five Iranian diplomats arrested in Turkey on October 25, 1988, who were planning to kidnap Said Abu Hassan Mochhadezade, an anti-Khomeini engineer working in Erzincan and who reportedly was a member of the People’s Mujahedeen. They were to be tried by a state security court in Istanbul State. The press reported that two of the diplomats were members of the Savama Iranian secret police; the other three were members of the embassy’s bodyguard team.

Stojilko Kajejvic: leader of three members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland, an anti-Communist Serbian émigré group, arrested in New York City by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges.

Moussafer Kakar: Turk arrested on April 24, 1985, at the Gare du Nord by Paris police for smuggling four sticks of dynamite and four detonators. He had just arrived on a Brussels, Belgium, train. He also had eight forged identity cards and eight forged Belgian driver’s licenses. The dynamite was traced to a theft in June 1984 at Ecossine of 800 kilograms of explosives by Direct Action.

Kiriakos Kakis: Greek Cypriot subject of a 1977 U.K. extradition hearing sought by Cyprus. In April 1977, two individuals arrested in November 1977 sent an EOKA-B letter to the British High Commission in Cyprus threatening that diplomats and servicemen would be kidnapped and killed if Kakis was surrendered. The EOKA-B bombing of three British military bases in Cyprus on December 1, 1977, was believed related to the hearing.

Ivan Kale: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for resistance) arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, Kale was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot, planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency, and planning to assassinate a political opponent.

Mahmut Kalkan: hijacker of a Turkish B727 that left Istanbul for Izmir, Turkey, on April 15, 1983. He diverted the plane to Ellinikon Airport near Athens. Police stormed the plane after he released the 106 passengers. He apparently wanted to go to Australia or Iceland. He said that his actions were motivated to gain freedom from the Turkish regime. Greek law forbade the extradition request of Turkey because his actions were politically motivated. He claimed membership in Del Sol, a leftist extremist group in Turkey, but he recanted under interrogation. On February 5, 1984, he was sentenced by an Athens court to 13 years and 5 months in prison for hijacking.

Kany: spokesperson for the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) who, on October 2, 1991, said that his group would exchange 7 Turkish soldiers kidnapped on August 4, 1991, for 500 KWP (variant of PKK) prisoners.

Yuriy Yuryevick Kapirushov: student, age 17, at the Krasnoyarsk vocational and technical college and would-be hijacker. On June 28, 1990, Kapirushov attempted to hijack Aeroflot Flight 3594, a TU154 flying from Krasnodar to Orenburg and Krasnoyarsk, Russia. He wanted to go to Turkey but was seized. The KGB directorate for Orenburg Oblast filed criminal charges.

Muhammed Metin Kaplan: alias the Caliph of Cologne. Leader of the Islamic State, a Cologne-based extremist group that planned a failed suicide plane attack on the tomb of Turkey's founder, Mustafa Kemal Atatürk, during 1998 celebrations. In October 2001, the Turk was serving a four-year term in Germany for calling for the killing of a rival Berlin-based religious leader who claimed Islamic supremacy in Germany. The individual was killed in 1997 by unknown attackers. He was convicted of public incitement to criminal acts in November 2000. He is the brother-in-law of Harun Aydin, a Turkish militant arrested October 17, 2001, by Frankfurt airport authorities while he was attempting to board a flight to Iran with detonators, combat clothing, a mask, a biochem protective suit, a CD-ROM advocating jihad and suicide attacks, his will, and a farewell note to his wife. The group's 1,100 members had links to al Qaeda and called for the overthrow of Turkey's secular government. Turkey had requested his extradition on charges of high treason for several years. His father, Cemaleddin Kaplan, set up the group in 1983.

On June 20, 2005, a court in Istanbul convicted Kaplan on charges of planning to crash a plane into the hillside where Atatürk is buried. He was sentenced to life in prison for attempting to "overturn the constitutional order," a charge of treason.

Elie Karabetian: Jordanian member, age 23, of the Palestine Popular Struggle Front who joined Mansur Seifeddin Mourad in throwing two hand grenades into the Athens office of El Al on November 27, 1969, killing a two-year-old Greek child and wounding 15 others, including 3 Americans, a Briton, 10 Greeks, and a three-year-old Greek child. He was sentenced to eight years but was released on July 22, 1970, after the hijacking of an Olympic Airways jet to Cairo.

Hacer Karabulut: alias of Seyhan Dogan.

Suat Karabulut: alias of Kenan Gunyel.

Geza Karaczony: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 flying from Bucharest, Romania, to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich, Germany. The hijackers were disarmed by West German police and requested political asylum. Karaczony was sentenced to two and a half years by a West German court on January 20, 1971.

Nihat Karadeniz: one of three people arrested after Turkish border police at the Cilvegözü gate from Jordan arrested the driver of a Mercedes carrying 30 kilograms of high explosives. The driver said he had received $400 to drive the car to Turkey. Two Iraqis with Jordanian passports were arrested; police also were searching for a holder of a Jordanian passport. The car's documents were forged. The car was registered to Karadeniz, who had worked in Kuwait.

Joe Emilie Karam: sailor from Beirut arrested on May 26, 1989, in Cyprus in connection with the discovery by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader, Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca, Morocco.

Andrzej Jaroslaw Karasinski: hijacker of a Polish TU134 flying from Copenhagen to Warsaw on November 4, 1976. He diverted the plane to Vienna's Schwechat Airport, where he surrendered. What the crew thought were a grenade and pistol was actually partly chewed rye bread colored with shoe polish. Karasinski was being deported to Poland after serving a four-month term in Denmark for burglary, theft, and forgery. Poland requested extradition. On February 15, 1977, Karasinski was sentenced to four years by Judge Kurt Wachsmann, who said Karasinski would not be expelled from Austria provided that no other criminal acts committed by him were brought to the court's attention.

Mehmet Karasungur: identified on November 11, 1993, by the Turkish Daily News as a leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in 1980 whose group infiltrated Turkey over the Syrian border.

Durmus Karatas: leader of a Turkish terrorist organization that planned to kill U.S. president George Bush during a visit to Ataturk's mausoleum in Ankara. Karatas was killed in a police raid on July 16, 1991.

Dursun Karatas: leader of the Dev Sol (Revolutionary Left of Turkey) arrested on September 10, 1994, by French police when he was attempting to enter the country in Madon via Italy under a false ID card. Turkey requested extradition. He was wanted by Interpol and was arrested on an international arrest warrant issued by Turkey.

After nine years in prison, he escaped from an Istanbul prison on October 25, 1989, along with Dev Sol's deputy, Bedri Yagan, who was killed in a 1993 police raid. In 1991, a military tribunal sentenced Karatas to death in absentia. The sentence was commuted to life for "good behavior" while he was in prison. While he was hiding in France in April 1995, he called for his group to reorganize under the name Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Costas Karatsolis: charged on July 21, 2002, with carrying out three armed robberies and participating in the theft of dozens of antitank rockets from an army base in central Greece in 1989. He was arrested that weekend with his friend Iraklis Kostaris.

Murat Karayilan: leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in late 2007. He graduated from a Turkish college and went to work for the Turkish government in 1980. That lasted for three months, when he claimed he was discriminated against for his Kurdish heritage.

Huseyin Karbulut: brother of Metin Karbulut, both Kurds. He was arrested on August 6, 1990, for the attempted murder the previous day of Hamut Yerli, a Turk, reportedly the leader in Austria of the Turkish right-wing Grey Wolves group, who was shot in Vienna, Austria. Yerli survived two shots to the stomach. Karbulut's trial for attempted murder began on June 7, 1994, in Wiesbaden.

Metin Karbulut: brother of Huseyin Karbulut, both Kurds. He escaped arrest on August 6, 1990, for the attempted murder the previous day of Hamut Yerli, a Turk, reportedly the leader in Austria of the Turkish right-wing Grey Wolves group, who was shot in Vienna, Austria. Yerli survived two shots to the stomach. Metin Karbulut was later arrested in Wiesbaden.

Hamid Reza Karimi: alias Hamid Gezo Mehran Beheiri. One of five Iranian diplomats arrested in Turkey on October 25, 1988, who were planning to kidnap Said Abu Hassan Mochhadezade, an anti-Khomeini engineer working in Erzincan and who reportedly was a member of the People's Mujahadeen. They were to be tried by a state security court in Istanbul State. The press reported that two of the diplomats were members of the Savama Iranian secret police; the other three were members of the embassy's bodyguard team. On October 28, 1988, Karimi was expelled and flown out of Turkey.

Azizbek Karimov: alias Medetbek Taliyev. On December 26, 2002, Karimov, age 24, failed to get close enough to the U.S. Embassy, so on December 27, 2002, he walked to a market in Bishkek, Kyrgyzstan, and left his explosives-laden briefcase. When the bomb went off, 7 people died and 20 were injured.

After being berated by his Islamic mentors for not bombing the U.S. Embassy, on May 8, 2003, he brought a perfume box with a grenade and timer to a Bakai Bank wire transfer outlet in Osh. The grenade killed cashier, Dilshat Aliyev, age 27, who Karimov had met. The police tracked him down by his alias, and he fled to Uzbekistan.

He was captured later in May 2003 in a shoot-out with Uzbekistan police in his basement hide-out in Andijan. Before capture, he unsuccessfully attempted to commit suicide with a spoonful of rat poison and by slicing his arm.

After his capture, he told authorities that he was given explosives and thousands of dollars to kill Americans. If he could not attack the U.S. Embassy because it was too well protected, he was to bomb the Pinara-Bishkek Hotel, which attracts foreigners. He said his Islamic radical commanders told him in September 2002 in Istanbul that "Americans came to Afghanistan and killed our brothers. We have to pay them back."

Karimov was born in Andjjan, Uzbekistan, 175 miles east of Tashkent. He underwent six months of training in guns and explosives at a Chechen camp near Khasavyurt, Dagestan. He linked up with the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan terrorist group led by former Soviet paratrooper Juma Namangani. He claimed he met bin Laden and went to Afghanistan for more training.

On February 16, 2004, the Uzbekistan Supreme Court convicted and sentenced him to death.

Ara Hovsel Karvikian: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through the Lisbon airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

'Abd al-'Aziz Farhat al-Kashab: variant al-Kashat. One of three Arabs charged on May 16, 1987, in a Limassol, Cyprus, district court with plotting to murder two British citizens on April 20, 1987, attempted murder, carrying and using automatic weapons, carrying explosives, and possessing forged passports. The attackers were members of the al-Mehdi Ben Barka organization. They were also suspected in the bombing on August 3, 1986, of the Akrotiri military airport. The merchant with a Saudi passport was arrested on April 29, 1987, by Limassol police.

Vladimir Kashpuk: deputy chairman of the Kuril, U.S.S.R., local council who, on August 31, 1990, led the passengers who hijacked an Aeroflot AN24 in Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk airport and demanded to be taken home to Iturup part of the Kuril Islands. They were exhausted by numerous earlier flight delays. On approach, the plane could not land because of bad weather and returned to Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk. The passengers refused to deplane.

Arslan Kasimov: ex-convict, age 48, arrested on December 27, 1993, in connection with the December 23, 1993, attack by four masked gunmen on a classroom at School No. 25 in Rostov-on-Don, Russia. They took a dozen students and their teacher hostage, forced them into a bus, and were given an MI-8 helicopter. He was an ethnic Kyrgyz from Azerbaijan.

Monzer al-Kassar: variant Munsir al-Qaysar. Syrian arms trafficker who sold weapons to groups in Nicaragua, Brazil, Cyprus, Bosnia, Croatia, Somalia, Iran, Iraq, and the Palestinian territories. He was connected to Mohammed Abbas (alias Abu Abbas), who was behind the Achille Lauro attack, and to Saddam Hussein's older son Uday. On July 24, 1987, he and his brother Haytham were expelled from Spain. He was accused of being connected with two attacks on Arab citizens in Madrid.

On November 1, 1989, subpoenas issued in the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., in connection with a suit against Pan American World Airways pending in federal court in Brooklyn, New York, asked for all documents pertaining to al-Kassar's activities. The suit arose from the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie that killed 270 people.

On June 4, 1992, Marbella, Spain, police arrested him. He was believed to have financed the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252 people.

On February 24, 1993, the Spanish National Hearings Court granted his extradition to Argentina, where he was wanted for forgery. He was accused of having illegally obtained Argentine nationality.

He was acquitted in Spain in 1995 of supplying assault rifles used by the Palestinians who shipjacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro in 1985, killing an American.

He was arrested by Spanish authorities in Madrid on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of "conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of small arms, ammunition, thousands of machine guns, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, and possible surface-to-air missiles" to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels "to protect their cocaine trafficking business and to attack United States interests in Colombia." He was living in a 15-room Renaissance palazzo near Marbella, on the Costa del Sol, where on February 6, 2007, he met with two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration informants to discuss a deal worth $7.8 to $13.5 million, plus costs of transportation. The indictment also said al-Kassar offered "to send 1,000 men to the informants to fight with the FARC against U.S. military officers in Colombia." He and his associates were indicted on four counts of supplying material support to a foreign terrorist group; conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, officials, and employees; and conspiracy to acquire an antiaircraft missile. Romanian authorities arrested his codefendants, Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi and Luis Felipe Morena-Godoy. The U.S. requested extradition.

The Spanish National Hearings Court approved his extradition in October 2007. The court said that since the 1970s, he had provided weapons to armed groups in Nicaragua, Brazil, Bosnia, Iran, and Iraq, inter alia. The Spanish government gave its final approval in early June 2008.

On June 13, 2008, he was extradited by Spain to the United States, accompanied on the Madrid–New York City flight by U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration officers. He was held on charges of supplying millions of dollars of weapons to FARC rebels to attack U.S. forces in Colombia. The indictment charged him with conspiracy to support terrorists, conspiracy to kill U.S. soldiers, conspiracy to acquire and use antiaircraft missiles, and money laundering. The United States agreed not to seek the death penalty or life without parole, punishments that are not available in Spanish law.

Ayyub Katayev: convicted in 2003 of banditry and possession of illegal weapons in connection with his participation in the January 2001 terrorist attacks on a Doctors Without Borders convoy in Chechnya, Russia. He was also charged with and later acquitted of kidnapping U.S. citizen Kenneth Gluck, the head of Doctors Without Borders.

Josef Katrincak: taxi driver and one of three hijackers of a Czech Ilyushin 18 airliner flying from Prague to Brno and diverted to Rhine-Main Airport in West Germany on May 10, 1978. Police believed that the hijackers' explosives were carried on board by his children. Two of the hijackers were sentenced to three years by a Frankfurt court.

Anna Katrincakova: one of three hijackers of a Czech Ilyushin 18 airliner flying from Prague to Brno and diverted to Rhein-Mein Airport in West Germany on May 10, 1978. Two of the hijackers were sentenced to three years by a Frankfurt court.

Nikola Kavaja: one of three members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO or SEPO), an anti-Communist Serbian émigré group, arrested in New York City by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges. Kavaja had been freed on $350,000 bond and was on his way to Chicago on June 20, 1979, to be sentenced for his part in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago, for which the group had been convicted on May 24, 1979. Instead, the mechanic from Paterson, New Jersey, hijacked American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago. He demanded the release of Reverend Stojilko Kavejic, a Serbian Orthodox priest, who, together with the hijacker and four other Serbs, were arrested in November 1978 on charges of bombing and conspiracy to murder. He initially demanded to go to Peru but later changed to Johannesburg, South Africa. The plane eventually landed at Ireland's Shannon Airport, where Kavaja surrendered. He was deported from Ireland on June 22 and sentenced to 20 years for the 1975 incident. On November 9, 1979, he was convicted of air piracy and bail-jumping.

Reverend Stojilko Kavejic: Serbian Orthodox priest whose release was demanded on June 20, 1979, by Nikola Kavaja, the Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293.

Ali Kaya: name used in a false Turkish passport by an Iranian briefly detained by French police who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian Premier Shapur Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He and an associate had tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports in the names of Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas.

Ali Haydar Kaytan: on January 24, 1989, the chief West German federal prosecutor preferred charges against the suspected Kurdish terrorist before the Fifth Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court for a double murder by a Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) execution squad on June 10, 1987. The PKK "revolutionary court" had conducted a show trial in Lebanon in which Kaytan helped sentence the two rebel party members to death. Kaytan had been in custody since March 25, 1988.

Benjamin Kechichian: member of the Armenian Revolutionary Movement arrested in Paris on November 28, 1985.

K. Kejmar: sentenced on August 23, 1978, to four years for planning a hijacking of a Karlov Vary to Prague flight in mid-1978. The Czech Supreme Court upheld a Prague city court sentence for preparing to jeopardize the security of a means of air transport and leave Czechoslovakia by force of arms.

Bozo Kelava: one of two armed Croatians who seized the West German Consulate in Chicago on August 17, 1978, and demanded that the government prevent the extradition of Stjepan Bilandzic to Yugoslavia. In a phone conversation, he urged the duo to surrender, which they did. They were held in a federal prison in lieu of a $1 million cash bond each. On December 1, 1978, the two were acquitted of kidnapping and conspiracy charges but convicted of imprisoning a West German diplomat with a deadly weapon. They faced a maximum sentence of 10 years.

Khaled Kelkal: petty criminal from a depressed Lyon suburb whose fingerprints were found on a gas canister used in a failed bomb attack on a high speed train in Lyon, France. French police initiated a manhunt for him on September 9, 1995. He escaped a September 11 series of raids in Paris and Grenoble and a September 27 raid of his forest hideout near Lyon. He was killed by police on September 29, 1995, during a nighttime shootout at a bus stop near Vaugneray outside Lyon. He refused to surrender and shot at arresting officers. The gun he carried had been used in the assassination of a senior Islamic leader in Paris. The next day, French police said they had discovered detonators, cartridges, guns, and other equipment in his hideout. They were similar to those used in an ongoing bombing campaign. He was believed involved in six bombings that killed 7 and injured more than 130 people.

‘Ali Kent: Iranian-born director of a Turkish travel agency who was arrested on November 10, 1986, by Turkish authorities for involvement in the July 24, 1985, assassination of Ziyad al-Sati, the first secretary of the Jordanian Embassy in Ankara. The Islamic Jihad Organization and Black September separately claimed credit. He was believed to be a member of Abu Nidal. On July 8, 1987, he was acquitted.

Sbiec Kezlik: one of three people arrested after Turkish border police at the Cilvegözü gate from Jordan arrested the driver of a Mercedes carrying 30 kilograms of high explosives. The driver said he had received $400 to drive the car to Turkey.

Two Iraqis with Jordanian passports were arrested; police also were searching for a holder of a Jordanian passport. The car's documents were forged. The Syrian had driven the car to Turkey.

Samir Muhammad Ahmad Khadir: variant of Samir Mohammed Hadar. Organized the attack by three terrorists who on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. On August 11, 1988, Swedish police raided a northern Stockholm apartment believed to belong to the Palestinian Force 17 mastermind. Police found a weapons cache of four Kalashnikov rifles a few kilometers away, near Arlanda Airport. He had been living in Stockholm from 1986 until early June 1988, when he left Stockholm for Athens via Copenhagen, Denmark. Stockholm Domestic Service credited him with planning the 1986 hijacking of the Pan American World Airways plane in Karachi, Pakistan, a bomb attack in a Rome café that injured 38 people, and the terrorist attack at Rome's airport in December 1985. Sweden, France, Denmark, and Italy were conducting investigations of Khadir; Bolivian, Sudanese, and Indian authorities were also interested in his status.

Imas Salman al-Khafarsi: one of six Arabs for whom the Nicosia District Court in Cyprus issued an eight-day arrest warrant on May 30, 1989, in connection with the discovery two days earlier by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader, Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca, Morocco. All six were charged, inter alia, with illegal entry into Cyprus and with possession of weapons and explosives. On June 2, 1989, Lebanon requested extradition.

On June 22, 1989, the Larnaca District Court set June 30 as the date for the opening of the preliminary hearing. The trial began on October 9, 1989. All pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and transporting weapons and explosives. Five pleaded guilty to illegal entry. The trial was moved from Larnaca to Nicosia for security reasons. On October 13, 1989, the court sentenced the six on eight charges. Five received jail sentences ranging from one to eight years; the sixth received one to five years. All of the penalties were to be concurrent, effective the date of arrest. The court president said he took the psychological state of the sixth accused into consideration in determining the verdict. On April 15, 1991, Cypriot authorities deported the six Lebanese to Beirut after they had served 17 months of their sentences.

Bashir Abu Khair: see entry for Hussein Bashir.

Suleiman Khairulla: Chechen rebel leader killed on November 8, 2004, in a raid by security forces in the Veden Region, 30 miles southeast of Grozny. He was believed responsible for the May 9, 2004, bombing in the Dynamo Stadium in Grozny, the Chechen capital. The bombing killed Chechnya's pro-Russian president Akhmad Kadyrov and 7 others and seriously injured Col. Gen. Valery Baranov, the top field commander of Russian forces in the area, and 56 others, including 5 children.

Mahmoud Youssef Sheik Khaldi: variant and most likely Khalid. One of two Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution or possibly al-Saiqa terrorists who took five hostages on board diesel passenger train number 2590, which left Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, and entered Marchegg, Austria, on September 28, 1973. Two of the hostages escaped. The gunmen later took off for Vienna's Schwechat Airport, where they demanded that Austria close down the Schonau Castle facility for Soviet Jewish émigrés and not allow further émigré transit through Austria. The hostages were newly arrived Soviet Jews on their way to Israel. The Austrians agreed to safe passage. After refueling stops in Yugoslavia and Italy, the plane was denied landing by Tunisia and Algeria, and eventually landed in Libya. In December 1973, Libya announced that the duo had been released to fight against Israel. Some reports claimed that the duo had trained in a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine camp in Lebanon. One of them participated in the December 1975 attack on the ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

Lidiya Khaldykhoroieva: on June 5, 2003, after the Samara resident failed to stop a bus carrying Russian soldiers to an air base near Chechnya, she set off a belt bomb, killing herself and 18 other people and wounding 15 more, 8 critically. Many of the dead and wounded were Russian Air Force technicians. The bombing took place near Mozdok in North Ossetia, 80 miles northwest of Grozny. Witnesses said she had cased the area several times, asking about the bus schedule. She appeared to be in her late 20s. A man who had been seen with her drove off shortly before the attack.

Abd al-Rahim Khalid: variants Abdul Rahim Khalid, Abdul Rahim Khaled; alias Mohammed Nouami. Senior aide to Palestine Liberation Front leader Abu Abbas. On November 3, 1985, ANSA reported that he had traveled under a stolen Greek passport bearing the name Petros Floros and was on the Achille Lauro twice to plan the October 7, 1985, hijacking of the Italian cruise ship. A court in Genoa, Italy, convicted Khalid in absentia in 1986 and sentenced him to seven and a half years in prison. In May 1987, a Genoa appeals court increased the sentence to life in prison. On March 5, 1991, Athens police arrested him and three Greeks in the Athens home of Floros while they were making bombs. Police said that they had been planning to bomb a Barclays Bank branch. They found drugs in Khalid's home. Rome requested extradition. On March 20, 1991, Athens police said that Khalid had admitted to planning the attack. He left the ship in Alexandria, Egypt, giving the shipjackers their final orders. Greece announced that it first would try him for arms possession. On May 6, 1991, Khalid, using the name Mohammed Nouami, was sentenced to 10 years in prison for drug dealing. He tried to escape from Kordhallos Maximum Security Prison near Piraeus with 31 others on May 12, 1991, but was arrested. A May 20, 1991, jailbreak trial was postponed because key prosecution witnesses were absent. On May 29, 1991, a three-member Athens appeals court decided to extradite him to Italy. The appeals council rejected his claim that he was an Iraqi garage owner with the name Yusuf hu Khalid. On July 16, 1991, a five-member panel of the Greek Supreme Court postponed the extradition hearing until September 24 because Khalid's attorney was absent. They again postponed the hearing until October 8 at the request of Khalid's new lawyer, Takis Pappas. On October 25, 1991, the Greek Supreme Court ruled in favor of extradition. Khalid was serving a 33-month sentence for trying to escape. It was left to the justice minister to decide whether to extradite.

Rahman Khalid: Iraqi that witnesses said on October 31, 1985, placed a time bomb on a bus en route from the Athens city center to Argiroupolis, Greece. The blast injured 35 people, including Khalid. The Revolutionary Militant Wing claimed credit.

Abdel Hakkis Saado Khalifa: variant 'Abd al-Hakim Sa'du al-Khalifah. Jordanian laborer and one of three armed Palestinian terrorists who took over the First, an Israeli-owned yacht, taking two Israeli hostages after killing a woman in the initial assault in Cyprus on September 25, 1985. After nine hours of negotiations, the terrorists killed the hostages and surrendered. Fatah Force 17 claimed credit. The trio was held by Cypriot authorities, who rejected Israel's extradition request. On December 2, 1985, the trio went on trial in Nicosia, saying, "I admit the killing," although the court entered a not guilty plea for the defendants. They were found guilty in February 1986 and sentenced to life. Khalifa's release was demanded on September 5, 1986, by the four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God–Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi airport. On September 26, 1986, he was one of three pro-Palestinian gunmen to sign a statement asking their comrades not to seize hostages to obtain their release.

Maha Abu-Khalil: teacher, age 21, who led a group of three members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) who attempted to hijack a Trans World Airlines B707 in Athens, Greece, on December 21, 1969. He and two others were carrying luggage that contained two guns, three hand grenades, and mimeographed announcements that the plane was being hijacked to Tunis, Tunisia, by the PFLP. He and the other two were released after the July 22, 1970, hijacking of an Olympic Airways jet to Cairo.

Khamzat: Chechen leader of the Special Purpose Islamic Regiment after the death on October 26, 2002, of Movzar Barayev.

Sidique Khan: variant Mohammed Sidique Khan. Teaching assistant, age 30, at a Leeds public school. On July 7, 2005, at 9:17 A.M., a bomb he placed on the floor of the second carriage of the London underground Circle Line Train 216 leaving Edgware Road Station for Paddington Station exploded, killing seven people. The explosion ripped through a wall and damaged two other trains.

Khan was born in the United Kingdom to Pakistani parents. He was married and the father of an eight-month-old girl. He had recently moved to Dewsbury. He earned a degree in education from Leeds University. He traveled to Karachi, Pakistan, with Shehzad Tanweer on November 16, 2004, on a Turkish Airlines flight and flew home with him on February 7, 2005. They had stayed at separate addresses near Lahore. Khan was in Israel for a day in spring 2003. Sunday Telegraph said that Khan, the leader of the team who set off four bombs that day, met in Pakistan in fall 2004 with Mohammed Yasin (alias Ustad Osama), in his 30s, an explosives expert who manufactured “suicide jackets” for Harkat-e-Jihad.

On April 24, 2008, the prosecution in the case of terrorists involved in the attack played a video Khan made in November 2004, in which Khan bounced his baby girl on his knee and said, “Sweetheart, not long to go now. And I’m going to really, really miss you a lot. I’m thinking about it already. Look, I absolutely love you to bits and you have been the happiest thing in my life.” He said he was “doing what I’m doing for the sake of Islam. I just wish I could have been part of your life. I just so much wanted to be with you. But I have to do this thing for our future and it will be best . . . in the long run. That’s the most important thing.” In another video made in October 2004, Khan introduced her to her “uncles,” including Waheed Ali, one of the defendants.

Thomas Kharalambous: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People’s Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People’s Authority. The group had planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Khaled ‘Abd al-Qadir al-Khatib: Syrian student and one of three armed Palestinian terrorists who took over an Israeli-owned yacht, the First, taking two Israeli hostages after killing a woman in the initial assault in Cyprus on September 25, 1985. After nine hours of negotiations, the terrorists killed the hostages and surrendered. Fatah Force 17 claimed credit. The trio was held by Cypriot authorities, who rejected Israel’s extradition request. On December 2, 1985, the trio went on trial in Nicosia, saying, “I admit the killing,” although the court entered a not guilty plea for the defendants. They were found guilty in February 1986 and sentenced to life. Al-Khatib’s release was demanded on September 5, 1986, by the four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God–Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at Karachi airport. On September 26, 1986, he was one of three pro-Palestinian gunmen to sign a statement asking their comrades not to seize hostages to obtain their release.

Yousef Khatib: variant Yusaf al Khatib. One of three Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an El Al B707 going from Rome to Tel Aviv, Israel’s Lod Airport on July 22, 1968. The plane was diverted to Algiers, where the hijackers demanded the release of 1,200 Palestinian prisoners from Israeli jails. The Algerians held the trio at a military camp for the balance of the negotiations.

Khatib led five Palestinian skyjackers in a February 22, 1972, incident in which Lufthansa Flight 594, a B747 flying from New Delhi, India, to Athens, Greece, was hijacked by guerrillas armed with hand grenades, dynamite, and pistols. They initially told the pilot to go to the desert along the Red Sea, but they landed at Aden, South Yemen. They demanded the release of the killers of Wasfi Tell in Cairo, Egypt, and the Black September murderers of five Jordanian workers in Cologne, West Germany, on February 6, 1972. The group called themselves the Organization for Victims of Zionist Occupation, the Organization for Resistance to Zionist Conquest of Palestine, and the Organization for Resistance to Zionist Occupation. In a letter, terrorists threatened to blow up the plane and the passengers if $5 million was not sent to a secret location outside Beirut, Lebanon. The West Germans announced the ransom payment on February 25. The group freed the passengers and surrendered to South Yemeni authorities, who released them on February 27.

Zahir al-Khatib: named by the Voice of Lebanon in September 1981 as the deputy of the Workers' League (Rabitat ash-Shaghghilah) group that was training the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in the Bar Ilyas area of western al-Biqā' in Lebanon.

Ibn al-Khattab: leader of Chechen and Arab Afghan terrorists who attacked a Russian military convoy on April 16, 1996, killing 273 Russian soldiers. He had led the Islamic International Peacekeeping Brigade, which was established in 1998. Authorities believed he was responsible for the March 29, 2000, Chechen guerrilla ambush of an OMON (Otdel Milicii Osobogo Naznacheniya, or Special Operations Police Unit, the Russian special-purpose police) convoy that killed 32 members of the 41-man unit. The other nine were kidnapped and later executed.

Russia's Federal Security Service announced on April 25, 2002, the late March 2002 death in Chechnya of Arab guerrilla leader al-Khattab, who had ties to bin Laden. Al-Khattab claimed in November that he and the Taliban were fighting "infidels" on Muslim territory. He had fought against Russian troops in Chechnya since 1991, having fought in the 1980s against the Russian invasion of Afghanistan. He was blamed for a 1996 attack that killed 53 soldiers and wounded 52 others. He was believed to be from either Saudi Arabia or Jordan. A Chechen Web site and Moscow newspapers suggested that he was killed by a fast-acting poison hidden in a letter.

Georguia Khatzakou: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group had planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Abu Khavs: Jordanian commander of foreign mercenaries in Chechnya who was reportedly al Qaeda's top emissary in the North Caucasus. Khavs was killed in a shootout with Russian police on November 26, 2006.

'Imad Salman al-Khawaz: one of six Muslims detained on May 26, 1989, at Larnaca, Cyprus, for conspiring to murder Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, leader of the Lebanese Phalangists, and for possession of arms, missiles, and munitions. The six were due to be tried by a Larnaca criminal court on October 9, 1989. On August 30, 1989, the Muslim 14 March group threatened to hijack a Cyprus Airlines plane if the government did not release them. The group seeks to avenge the 40 Lebanese Muslims who were killed by 'Awn's troops on March 14, 1989.

Quamraddine Kherbanne: founder of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front (FIS). He was expelled from France in 1992 and moved to Croatia. He was a former MIG fighter pilot for the Algerian Air Force. Police suspected that in mid-1994, he masterminded an arms smuggling ring operating between central Europe and Algeria. He represented Salafist former guerrillas active before the 1989 founding of FIS.

Arye Khnokh: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24.

Vladimir Khodov: variant of Vladimir Khodoyev.

Vladimir Khodoyev: variant Khodov; alias Abdullah. One of the leaders of the Chechen terrorists who, on September 1, 2004, took hundreds of hostages at an elementary school in Beslan, Russia. He upbraided the other gunmen when they permitted hostages to take a drink of water late in the takeover. He earlier fought alongside Chechen terrorist leader Shamil Basayev. He was killed in the gun battle that ended the siege.

Andreas Rodhotheou Khristofi: charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Kiriakos Khristofis: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Nirvan Kibanu: one of four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) terrorists who took over the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979. He was born in Damascus, Syria, in 1955. The four were indicted on July 28, 1979, by the Ankara Martial Law Command Military Tribunal for carrying out hostile acts aimed at damaging relations between Turkey and Egypt; premeditated murder; smuggling, possessing, and using bombs; threatening the liberty of more than one person; and other armed acts. On October 25, 1979, a military court sentenced the four Palestinians to two death sentences each for killing two Turkish guards in the attack. On May 23, 1980, Turkey's supreme military court threw out the death sentences and ordered a retrial in a civilian court. On December 23, 1980, an Ankara criminal court sentenced the four Palestinian terrorists to death.

Ekrem Kilic: one of four armed Del Sol hijackers of the Halic, a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Istanbul to Bulgaria's Burgas Airport on May 24, 1981. Two hijackers were arrested when they left a plane to hold a news conference. The other two were overpowered and injured by the passengers. Turkey requested extradition. On July 6, 1983, Bulgaria extradited Kilic; the other three hijackers remained in Bulgaria.

Samir Kishk: alias Hamada. Kishk, age 46, was arrested on November 30, 2001, by Italian police at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport as he arrived from Cairo, Egypt, en route to his Paris home. He was believed to be a major figure in a Milan-based Islamic extremist group with bin Laden ties. The arrest warrant was issued in October. The Milan cell provided false documents, cell phones, and other logistical support for Muslims trying to reach al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan or trying to fight the Russians in Chechnya. Kishk was charged with criminal association with the intent of trafficking in arms, explosives, chemicals, and false ID documents, and aiding and abetting clandestine immigration. He was believed to have close ties with the Milan cell's leader, Essid Sami Ben Khemais, a Tunisian arrested in April. Kishk could be a leader in France of the extremist Tunisia-based Salafite Group for Preaching and Combat, to which Khemais belongs.

Ivan Vasilievich Kislov: major from a military unit in Khabarovsk in the Far Eastern Military District of Russia who was arrested on January 27, 1993, on suspicion of intent to assassinate president Boris Yeltsin. On January 30, he told an examining bureau, "I came to Moscow on 1 January 1993 for the purpose of assassinating Boris Yeltsin." He believed that the results of the presidential elections were rigged and that Yeltsin's policies were hostile to the people. He was charged under three articles of the criminal code—preparing a killing, committing a terrorist act, and being willfully absent from his military unit for over a month. He was detained for vagrancy. On January 31, 1993, the case was handed over to the Russian General Procurator's Office. He was scheduled for a psychiatric exam. He was born in 1959 and was a senior assistant to the chief of a section of the Military Construction Unit N 1571 in Khabarovsk.

Gabor Kiss: one of seven anti-Communist Hungarian students, who on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Cumali Kizilgoca: Turk who, on June 11, 2003, threw two grenades at a U.S. consulate garden in Turkey, shattering windows but causing no injuries. One of the grenades did not explode and was later detonated by police. Kizilgoca was arrested. He said he was retaliating for the recent assassination attempt by Israel on a Hamas leader.

Vera Klementova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody, and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Peter Klemt: East German automobile mechanic, age 24, who was one of two hijackers of a Polish Lot Ilyushin 18 flying the Warsaw–East Berlin–Brussels run on October 19, 1969, which was diverted to West Berlin's Tegel Airport in the French sector. The duo was taken away by French authorities. They said they were in trouble with East German authorities for opposing the invasion of Czechoslovakia. On November 20, 1969, a French military tribunal found them guilty of having endangered air safety and hindering air traffic and sentenced them to two years in prison. The prosecutor had demanded three years for “exemplary punishment.”

German Kobakhidze: son of a prominent movie director and one of the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot Flight 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad, Russia, on November 18, 1983. Kobakhidze was sentenced to 14 years in August 1984.

Musa Kocer: name used in a false Turkish passport by an Iranian briefly detained by French police who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapur Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He and an associate had tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports in the names of Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas.

Mike Kodzoman: one of two armed Croats who seized the West German Consulate in Chicago on August 17, 1978, and demanded that the government prevent the extradition of Stjepan Bilandzic to Yugoslavia. In a phone conversation, Bilandzic urged the duo to surrender, which they did. They were held in a federal prison in lieu of a $1 million cash bond each. On December 1, 1978, the two were acquitted of kidnapping and conspiracy charges but convicted of imprisoning a West German diplomat with a deadly weapon. They faced a maximum sentence of 10 years. Kodzoman was a distant relative of Bilandzic.

Felix Koehnen: Koehnen, age 16, was one of four right-wing youths charged on December 30, 1993, with 5 counts of murder, 14 counts of attempted murder, and aggravated arson in connection with the May 29, 1993, arson by right-wing skinheads of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, Germany, killing 5 people and injuring 10 other Turks, including a six-month-old infant. On October 13, 1995, he was sentenced by Duesseldorf Presiding Judge Wolfgang Steffen to 10 years in prison for the killings.

Ilija Kokotovic: one of two brothers who were among six Croatian immigrants found guilty of terrorism charges in Sydney, Australia, on February 9, 1981, after a 10-month trial involving 112 witnesses. The terrorists planned to set off bombs to disrupt Sydney's water supply, bomb various travel agencies, bomb a local theater during a performance of Croatian singers and dancers visiting Australia, and bomb properties occupied by Yugoslavia. On February 17, 1981, they were sentenced to 15 years for conspiring to make bombs and 5 plus years for possessing explosives with intent to cause injury and damage. The sentences, to run concurrently, were to date from their arrest two years earlier.

Joseph Kokotovic: one of two brothers who were among six Croatian immigrants who were found guilty of terrorism charges in Sydney, Australia, on February 9, 1981, after a 10-month trial involving 112 witnesses. The terrorists planned to set off bombs to disrupt Sydney's water supply, bomb various travel agencies, bomb a local theater during a performance of Croatian singers and dancers visiting Australia, and bomb properties occupied by Yugoslavia. On February 17, 1981, they were sentenced to 15 years for conspiring to make bombs and 5 plus years for possessing explosives with intent to cause injury and damage. The sentences, to run concurrently, were to date from their arrest two years earlier.

Hakki Kolgu: one of three members of the Marxist-Leninist Armed Propaganda Unit who shot and killed Master Chief Boatswain's Mate Sam A. Novello, a U.S. citizen, and his Turkish driver, Sabri Bayraktar, on April 16, 1980. The trio escaped on a motorcycle but were arrested following a clash with police during which Kolgu was killed.

Onisiforos Kharalambous Kolossiatis: alias Foris. One of the EOKA-B bombers of three British military bases in Cyprus on December 1, 1977. On December 4, Cypriot police arrested eight former EOKA-B members. On December 13, the police obtained an eight-day extension of the detention for three persons, including Kolossiatis. The bombing was believed related to the extradition hearing in the United Kingdom of Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot. Threats had been made against U.K. installations in April 1977 regarding his extradition. Kolossiatis's release from Cypriot prison was demanded by the EOKA-B kidnappers of Second Lt. Achilles Kyprianou, son of president Spiro Kyprianou, on December 14, 1977.

Vahéh Kontaverdian: member of the Armenian Secret Army of the Liberation of Armenia who, on December 8, 1982, was injured when he set off a bomb outside the Kuwait Air offices in Athens. He was from Isfahan, Iran, and temporarily resided in Athens at 28 Renee Piau in Neos Kosmos. He said his collaborator, Sako, had instigated him to throw the bomb from their motorcycle at the offices of Saudi Airlines but that they had made a mistake.

Alexander Koptsev: skinhead from Moscow, age 20, who, on January 11, 2006, stabbed eight people, four of them seriously, at the Bolshaya Bronnaya synagogue in central Moscow during evening services. The rabbi's son tackled him and held him until police arrived. Among those injured were an American, an Israeli, and a Tajik. He yelled, "I will kill Jews."

Robert Korcz: Pole who on October 19, 1993, took over the future Polish Consulate General in the Hamburg District of Steilshoop, Germany. He was overpowered by police 14 hours later and died of gunshot injuries. He had been fined $150 (3 million zloty) in April 1993 for threatening employees of the municipal welfare office in Gorzow Wielkopolski, Poland. He attacked the consulate building to protest the court verdict. He had also served a prison term at Rawicz in the 1980s, where, in protest against maltreatment, he climbed a high-voltage tower.

Nikolai Korenkov: Russian airline employee charged on September 24, 2004, with complicity in terrorism in connection with the suicide bombings on August 24, 2004, against two Russian passenger jets that left the same Moscow airport within 30 minutes of each other, killing all 90 on board. On April 12, 2005, a Moscow regional court charged Armen Arutyunian, a ticket scalper, and Korenkov with charges of aiding and abetting terrorism and commercial bribery in the bombings. Korenkov accepted a $36 bribe to let one of the women on a flight.

Pranas Fransizkas Koreyevo: Lithuanian truck driver who joined his son Algedas in hijacking an Aeroflot AN24 flying between Batumi and Sukhermi, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, on October 15, 1970. Pranas Koreyevo had planned the hijacking for three years but could not persuade his wife and daughters to join him. The duo demanded to be taken to Turkey. The pilot took evasive action but failed, and the duo started firing, killing a stewardess and seriously wounding the pilot and also wounding the radio operator and a passenger. The copilot flew to Trebizond, Turkey, where the hijackers surrendered and requested political asylum. The Soviet government demanded extradition, which was refused. The duo was tried, convicted, and jailed on hijacking charges. Their sentences were reduced due to a Turkish general amnesty decree, and they were released from prison on May 21, 1974. They fled to a Turkish camp for displaced persons in Yozgat, Anatolia.

In June 1976, they left the camp. On June 28, 1976, they showed up at the U.S. Embassy in Turkey to request political asylum, but they were turned over to the Turks. The duo flew from Istanbul to Rome on July 11, 1976. They resurfaced in Venezuela and then in Canada. On August 24, 1976, while changing planes in New York, they disappeared from Kennedy Airport. Nine days later, Algedas Koreyevo married a U.S. citizen of Lithuanian descent in Worcester, Massachusetts. The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) arrested him there on September 14. On September 15, his father turned himself in to INS officials in New York. Both requested asylum. They were released on bonds of $5,000 each. As of November 1977, asylum had been denied, and they faced deportation to Venezuela.

Algedas Koreyevo: son of Lithuanian hijacker Pranas Fransizkas Koreyevo. In September 1976, Algedas married a U.S. citizen of Lithuanian descent in Worcester, Massachusetts. The Immigration and Naturalization Service arrested him there on September 14, 1976.

Salim al-Korshani: Egyptian married to a Bosnian Muslim who told a Bosnian journalist on May 9, 1996, that the previously unknown Islamic Group Military Branch would launch suicide missions against North Atlantic Treaty Organization–led Implementation Force troops in Bosnia.

Iraklis Kostaris: Greek real estate agent, age 36, charged on July 21, 2002, with participating in four November 17 murders, including that of U.S. Air Force Sgt. Ronald O. Stewart in March 1991 and U.K. Defense Attaché Brig. Stephen Saunders in June 2000. The defendant's close friend, Costas Karatsolis, was charged with carrying out three armed robberies and participating in the theft of dozens of antitank rockets from an army base in central Greece in 1989. The duo was arrested in the north over the weekend. Police arrested a 10th November 17 suspect later that day, identifying him as Thomas Serifis, age 36, who worked for the Athens public bus company.

The arrests derailed a plot to attack a convoy of North Atlantic Treaty Organization peacekeepers driving from Thessaloniki to Macedonia and Kosovo.

Andreas Kosta Khatzikharalambous Kostouris: charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Dimitris Koufodinas: alias Poison Hand. Beekeeper, age 45, and November 17 group's main hit man who, on September 5, 2002, got out of a taxi at Athens, Greece, police headquarters and surrendered. On December 8, 2003, a special tribunal convicted Koufodinas for killings and attacks that began with the assassination on December 23, 1975, of CIA chief of station in Athens Richard Welch and left 23 people dead. His wife was acquitted. On December 17, 2003, he was sentenced to 13 life terms and 25 years.

Dimitrios Koundanis: Greek American man convicted with nine other people in an Athens court on June 1, 1979, for forming a right-wing terrorist organization and participating in 34 bombings. Koundanis, who worked at a U.S. Navy communications base in Greece, received three and a half years for possessing arms and participating in a terrorist group.

Fuad Kourad: Jordanian arrested on May 22, 1984, for the November 15, 1983, assassination in Athens of U.S. Navy Capt. George Tsantes and his chauffeur and for the April 3, 1984, wounding of U.S. M. Sgt. Robert H. Judd Jr. in Athens, Greece. The November 17 Movement claimed credit. The murder weapon had been linked to the 1975 assassination of CIA chief of station in Athens Richard Welch.

Kovalenko: one of two individuals who, on July 23, 1990, failed to hijack Aeroflot Flight 8305 scheduled to fly from Riga, Latvia, to Murmansk, Russia. They threatened to blow up the TU234 unless it was flown to Stockholm, Sweden, or any foreign military field. The crew landed at Petrozavodsk, Russia, where a rescue squad seized the hijackers.

Cafer Kovaycin: one of three Kurdish terrorists jailed on August 16, 1994, at London's Old Bailey after being convicted on charges of conspiracy to damage property by fire with intent to endanger life and of damaging property by fire. The trio all lived in north London. The resident of Lingfield Gardens, Lower Edmonton, received 15 years for an arson attack on November 4, 1993.

Anastasias Andreou Koyiotis: charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Oleg Kozlov: unmarried Russian speaker who, on June 19, 1990, hijacked Aeroflot Flight 8305, a TU134 flying from Riga, Latvia, to Murmansk, Russia, and diverted it to Helsinki's Vanta Airport. He gave himself up to Finnish authorities and requested asylum. He ultimately wanted to fly to Israel or the United States. The Soviets requested extradition under a 1974 bilateral treaty. On June 21, 1990, the Helsinki City Court arrested him. His lawyer admitted guilt only to the illegal seizure of an aircraft, for which Kozlov faced 12 years. The Finnish Union of Airline Pilots called for his extradition. On July 2, the interior minister denied asylum. The next day, the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees stated that Kozlov was eligible to apply for asylum and that aircraft hijacking is not such a serious offense that it would automatically prevent the granting of asylum. On July 6, his attorney said he would appeal the decision to the European Commission on Human Rights. Kozlov barricaded himself in his cell in the Helsinki provincial prison to protest the asylum rejection. He threatened to commit suicide if anyone attempted to enter the cell by force. After four days in which he threatened to kill himself with a knife, police disarmed him and transferred him to a more secure cell. One policeman was wounded in the scuffle. On July 27, 1990, he was handed over to the Soviets at the Vaalimaa border station. He was to be prosecuted in Latvia. On September 28, 1990, staffers of the Latvia KGB investigation department sent him for examination to the V.P. Serbskiy Scientific Research Institute of General and Forensic Psychiatry in Moscow. He received five years in a labor camp.

Hanna Elisa Krabbe: variant Hanna-Elise. Former companion of Hans Joachim Klein, an associate of Venezuela terrorist Carlos. She was one of the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. They initially claimed they were members of the Holger Meins Commando who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, the military attaché, and Heinz Hillegaart, the economic counselor. The Collective members' release demand included Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof, Gudrun Ensslin, and Jan-Carl Raspe. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing a terrorist and injuring 13 people, including Krabbe. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Krabbe was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison. Her release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On May 16, 1992, she and three other imprisoned RAF female terrorists said in a televised interview from Luebeck Prison that the RAF had not given up terrorism. On August 1, 1995, she was one of nine imprisoned RAF members who announced the start of a three-day hunger strike to protest the planned execution in the United States of Mumia Abu Jamal, who was convicted of killing a police officer.

Jan Kralovansky: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava, Slovakia, to Prague, Czechoslovakia, that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany; the crewmen were believed to be involved in the plot.

Mullah Krekar: alias of Najumuddin Faraj Ahmad.

Danos Kristallis: arrested on September 14, 1985, by Greek police and charged with membership in a terrorist organization. He was suspected of two Revolutionary Group for International Solidarity–Khristos Kasimis bombings the previous day at Citibank in Athens and under the car of M. Sgt. Joe Brady, a U.S. serviceman at Ellinikon base. On September 16, 1985, he was charged with terrorist activities dating back to 1981. A search of his apartment turned up various bomb-making substances.

Jorgo Kristo: Albanian who was one of seven people arrested on March 19, 1995, by Greek police while preparing to conduct a terrorist attack against a barracks in Longos Gjirokaster. The group was charged with illegally possessing and transporting weapons. They were members of the Northern Epirus Liberation Front, which had been blamed for an April 1994 attack on an Albanian barracks. The group's leader said they were on vacation and accidentally discovered the weapons in a hollow in Dhelvinakion.

Kritonis: alias of Erotokritos Mattheou.

Marko Krizic: one of five individuals charged with the September 27, 1981, hijacking by German-speaking Croatians of a Yugoslavian National Airlines B737 flying from Dubrovnik to Belgrade. The group demanded to be flown to Tel Aviv, Israel. The plane refueled at Ellinikon International Airport, then landed at Larnaca after the Israelis refused landing privileges. The hijackers surrendered to police and were quickly extradited to Yugoslavia. The group was tried on February 9, 1982, in the Belgrade District Court.

Marko Krpan: fired four shots at Yugoslav vice consul in Duesseldorf Vladimir Topic as he was entering his office building on June 28, 1976. None of the shots hit Topic. Krpan escaped in a car driven by Pavle Perovic, but both were later arrested.

Florian Kruszyk: alias Commander Wysocki. Leader of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. He claimed to be descended from Piotr Wysocki, a Polish national hero who led a rebellion of Polish cadets against Russian occupiers in 1930. He also claimed he was a former Polish Army officer who resigned after martial law was declared in December 1981. Police revealed that he was a member of Polish intelligence from 1962 to 1965 and was convicted of spying in Vienna in 1968. He was rearrested in Vienna in 1969 for robbing a jewelry store and holding a family hostage. He served a nine-year sentence for the robbery. He then moved to the Netherlands, where he married a Dutch citizen and made threats against the Polish Embassy in the Hague. On September 30, 1982, Poland requested extradition, which Switzerland denied. The trial began on October 3, 1983. On October 10, 1983, he received 6 years in prison and 15 years banishment from Switzerland.

Yusef Krymshamkhalov: Russian citizen extradited by Georgia to Russia in December 2002 in connection with the September 1999 bombings of apartment buildings in Moscow and Volgograd that killed nearly 300. He made the bombs, packed them in sugar sacks, accompanied the explosives, and positioned the truck against the Golgodonsk apartments before taking refuge in the Pankisi Gorge in Georgia, near Chechnya. On January 12, 2004, Moscow City Court judge Marina Komarova sentenced him to life in prison on charges of terrorism, murder, illegal possession of and trafficking in explosives, and other crimes in relation to the bombings. He was also fined $156,000 in compensation to the victims. He said he would appeal.

Krbystov Krynski: one of five hijackers of a LOT IL14 flying between Gdansk and Warsaw, Poland, on August 19, 1970, and diverted to the Danish island of Bornholm, where the hijackers surrendered to police and requested political asylum.

Ioannis Ktimatis: EOKA-B member and former policeman serving a prison term for illegal possession of firearms, who was arrested on February 4, 1977, and charged with killing U.S. ambassador to Cyprus Rodger P. Davies and a Greek Cypriot Embassy secretary on August 19, 1974, during a riot in Nicosia. EOKA-B terrorists attacked the U.S. Embassy and official residence, and threw firebombs at official vehicles. Nearly 100 bullets hit the ambassador's office from two angles. Ktimatis, age 39, was charged with homicide. He was arraigned on charges of manslaughter on February 11, 1977. On June 3, a Cypriot court threw out the homicide charges against him, citing lack of evidence. On June 20, 1977, Ktimatis, a Greek Cypriot, was convicted of illegal use and possession of firearms, riot, and property damage. On June 21, 1977, he was sentenced to 7 years out of a possible 15 years.

Michael Kuehnen: chairman and founder in 1977 of the neo-Nazi Action Front of National Socialists–National Activists. Kuehnen was arrested on the Westautobahn near Ybbs, Austria, on November 22, 1983, for possession of an automatic pistol and a gas pistol.

Anton Kujundzic: warrant was issued for his arrest in connection with the September 1979 incident in which four Yugoslav émigrés fired on diners at the Balkan Grill in Frankfurt, West Germany. One person was killed.

Farid Kuku: Lebanese identified by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) in Nicosia in 1990 as a member of ASALA.

Nur-Pashi Kulayev: Chechen terrorist who was captured following his participation in the September 1, 2004, takeover of an elementary school in Beslan, Russia. He was put on Russian state television on September 6. He was injured and had trouble talking. His trial began on May 17, 2005, on charges of murder and terrorism. On May 16, 2006, chief justice of the Supreme Court in North Ossetia Tamerlan Aguzarov ruled that Kulayev, age 25, the sole surviving Chechen terrorist, had taken part in murder and terrorism. It did not technically constitute a verdict in the yearlong case, but it made it likely that he would be found guilty on all eight counts. Kulayev's brother was among the terrorists killed in the attack. On May 26, 2006, Kulayev was sentenced to life in prison for his role, although the judge said he deserved the death penalty. Russia had declared a moratorium on executions when it joined the Council of Europe.

Asif Kuliyeu: hijacker on October 25, 1994, of a Russian YAK-40 plane in Makhachkala who demanded to fly to Iran. Azerbaijan officials refused landing permission. He was originally from Agdam, Azerbaijan. He had stolen the passport of Elton Mekhtizade. On October 27, he killed himself with an explosive device when a special team from the counter-intelligence service attempted a rescue operation.

Ilyas Kuncak: Kuncak, age 47, of Ankara was one of the two al Qaeda suicide bombers who, on November 20, 2003, set off truck bombs at the British Consulate and HSBC bank headquarters, a British bank, killing at least 30 people and wounding 450. The spice merchant drove the HSBC truck.

Yusuf Kupeli: member of the Turkish People's Liberation Party-Front whose release was demanded by 4 hijackers who diverted a Turkish airliner with 71 passengers aboard to Sofia, Bulgaria, in December 1972.

Vadif Kurbanov: Azeri pilot who, on April 8, 1992, hijacked a supersonic SU-25 ground-attack aircraft from the Sitelchay Air Force Base and handed it to Azeri militants at Sangachaliy Air Base, 42 kilometers southwest of Baku.

Ertugrul Kurkcü: on March 27, 1972, five members of the Turkish People's Liberation Army kidnapped three North Atlantic Treaty Organization radar technicians and demanded the release of three terrorists who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of four Americans on March 4, 1971. On March 30, 1972, police raided the terrorists' hideout in Kizildere. The terrorists shot their hostages in the head. Police rockets and small arms fire killed 10 terrorists, but Kurkcü was captured alive.

Semsettin Kurt: Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) demonstrator who died of his wounds following a shootout with Turkish Embassy workers in Bern, Switzerland, on June 24, 1993.

Mehmet Kus: on December 23, 2003, Turkish authorities arrested and charged Kus with "aiding and abetting an illegal organization" after 12 bags of a substance used for making explosives were found at his home. Kus blamed a relative for storing the potassium nitrate, which was used in the November 15, 2003, truck bombings of two Istanbul synagogues that killed 25 and injured 303 people.

Mario Kutulla: Albanian who was one of seven people arrested on March 19, 1995, by Greek police while preparing to conduct a terrorist attack against a barracks in Longos Gjirokaster. The group was charged with illegally possessing and transporting weapons. They were members of the Northern Epirus Liberation Front, which had been blamed for an April 1994 attack on an Albanian barracks. The group's leader said they were on vacation and accidentally discovered the weapons in a hollow in Dhelvinakion.

Kuznetsov: one of two individuals who, on July 23, 1990, failed to hijack Aeroflot Flight 8305 scheduled to fly from Riga, Latvia, to Murmansk, Russia. They threatened to blow up the TU234 unless it was flown to Stockholm, Sweden, or any foreign military field. The crew landed at Petrozavodsk, Russia, where a rescue squad seized the hijackers.

Eduard Kuznetsov: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24. Kuznetsov, the alleged leader or one of two leaders of the group, was sentenced to death before a military firing squad. The death sentence was commuted to 15 years in a labor camp in December 31.

Silva Kuznetsov: Riga dissident and wife of Eduard Kuznetsov, one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24. The term was eventually reduced.

Ole Nicolai Kvisler: member, age 22, of a neo-Nazi group called the Boot Boys who was convicted on January 17, 2002, in Oslo City Court in Norway of the premeditated murder of Benjamin Hermansen, age 15, who was stabbed to death. He was sentenced to 15 years.

L

---

Abu al-Lahd: alias of Walid.

Sabir Lahmar: Algerian suspected of membership in the Armed Islamic Group who was arrested in Bosnia-Herzegovina shortly after the 9/11 attacks. Earlier he made threats against the North Atlantic Treaty Organization–led Stabilization Force and U.S. interests.

Ahmed Laidouni: arrested on January 18, 1999, by French police for ties to Osama bin Laden and charged with criminal association with a terrorist enterprise. He was born in France to Algerian parents. He fought with Bosnian Muslims from 1992 to 1995 and trained in Afghan camps. On March 17, 2004, he went on trial for “criminal association in relation to a terrorist enterprise,” which carries a 10-year sentence.

Hemant Lakhani: British arms dealer, age 68, arrested on August 12, 2003, by federal officials in Newark, New Jersey, who charged him with selling Russian shoulder-fired SA-18 missiles to agents posing as al Qaeda terrorists planning to take down U.S. planes on U.S. soil. Police in New York arrested Muslim and Malaysian resident Moinuddeen Ahmed Hameed and Orthodox Jew and Manhattan jewelry dealer Yachuda Abraham, age 76, who ran a hawala that wired Lakhani, who is of Indian descent, the funds overseas for the Grouse/Igla missiles. Lakhani had approached Russian criminals for an SA-18 as part of what would have been a longer-term deal for 50 more for $5 million and a separate deal for tons of C-4 plastique. The Russian Federal Security Service alerted the United States of the purchase attempt and provided an inert SA-18 for the sting operation. The trio was initially held without bail. Lakhani was charged with providing material support to terrorists and illegal weapons dealing. The Federal Bureau of Investigation taped 150 conversations Lakhani had with their undercover agents, including his praise of bin Laden and the 9/11 attacks. In January 2002, when an FBI informant claiming to be part of a Somali group seeking anti-aircraft guns and missiles talked to Lakhani, the arms dealer said bin Laden “straightened them all out” and “did a good thing.” In April 2002, when the informant said he represented a buyer who needed missiles for jihad against planes, Lakhani observed, “The Americans are bastards.”

On September 4, Lakhani’s bail hearing was postponed to September 11 so that prosecutors could present a witness to bolster its case.

On December 18, prosecutors said Lakhani also offered to deliver tanks, anti-aircraft guns, and a radioactive dirty bomb. He was represented by attorney Henry E. Klingeman, who said his client was not a terrorist and had no history of illegal arms trafficking.

On April 27, 2005, a federal jury in Newark, New Jersey, convicted Lakhani of five counts of trying to sell shoulder-launched missiles to what he believed was a terrorist group planning to down airliners. He was convicted of attempting to provide material support to terrorists, money laundering, and other charges. On September 12, 2005, he was sentenced to 47 years in prison.

Boumediene Lakhdar: on January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Lakhdar and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001. The group had been arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001.

Phelim Lally: one of two Irishmen arrested on February 1, 1979, in Greece after crossing the Turkish border. Lally was from Newry, County Down, lived in Northern Ireland, and held an Irish passport. They were charged with “smuggling, possession and transportation of arms and explosives with the intention of supplying terrorist groups,” believed to be the Provisional Irish Republican Army, for which they faced 10 years. The U.K. consul said he could not request extradition because they were not wanted for any offense in the United Kingdom.

Antonin Larch: one of two miners who hijacked a Slov-Air L410 flying from Prague to Mariánské Lázně and Marienbad, Czechoslovakia, on April 18, 1972, and diverted the plane to Nuremberg, West Germany. The two hijackers shot and slightly wounded the copilot. They were arrested and sentenced to seven years in prison on July 31, 1972. Their request for political asylum was denied in April 1973. Czechoslovakia requested extradition. Asylum was granted by West Germany on December 9, 1976. (See also two entries for Antonin Lerch with similar material from different reports.)

Lebedev: unemployed resident of Leningrad, age 17, who, on July 12, 1990, attempted to hijack a TU-154 of the Leningrad Civil Aviation Directorate. He demanded to fly to Stockholm, Sweden, but was overpowered by the passengers and crew. He was taken into custody at Murmansk’s Pulkovo Airport in Russia.

Neoptolemos Leftis: EOKA-B member who was arrested on February 4, 1977, and charged with killing U.S. ambassador to Cyprus Rodger P. Davies and a Greek Cypriot Embassy secretary on August 19, 1974, during a riot in Nicosia. EOKA-B terrorists attacked the U.S. Embassy and official residence and threw firebombs at official vehicles. Nearly 100 bullets hit the ambassador’s office from two angles. Leftis was charged with homicide. He was arraigned on charges of manslaughter on February 11, 1977. On June 3, a Cypriot court threw out the homicide charges against him, citing lack of evidence. On June 21, 1977, he was convicted of illegal possession of firearms and riot. On June 21, 1977, he was sentenced to five years out of a possible eight years.

Marinko Lemo: convicted of being an accomplice of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16 in a Stockholm court, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. Lemo was given a two-year term for complicity. On July 14, the London Times reported that the group planned to form a terrorist group that would attack people in Sweden suspected of working for Yugoslavia against the Croats. Lemo was scheduled to be freed on November 1, 1972.

On September 15, 1972, three Croatian émigrés hijacked a Scandinavian Airlines airliner and obtained the release of six Croatian terrorists being held in Swedish jails. Lemo was pressed into negotiating with the hijackers by the minister of justice, then agreed to board the plane in exchange for the passengers. Lemo slept through the rest of the incident. The plane was flown to Spain, where authorities apprehended all nine Croats. The six who had been released in Sweden were permitted to leave Spain for Paraguay on June 23, 1974.

Sweden requested the extradition of three of them for the Rolovic killing. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for their arrest, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay.

In May 1980, one of the Croatians accused in the assassination was extradited to Sweden by the United States. He had been turned over to the United States for prosecution on charges of fraudulently applying for a visa to enter the United States in December 1979 but was acquitted.

Antonin Lerch: one of 10 hijackers of a Slov-Air L410 flying from Mariánské Lázně (Marienbad) to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on June 8, 1972. The group killed the pilot when he refused to change course. The copilot was shot in the chest but survived, as did a wounded passenger. The group landed in a small airfield inside West Germany after demanding to be flown to Nuremberg. All offenders were charged with air piracy. Czechoslovakia sought extradition. In January 1973, one of the group committed suicide in prison. On December 14, 1973, nine of the group were convicted by the Nuremberg State Court and sentenced to terms ranging from three to seven years. On December 9, 1976, the court in Ansbach, West Germany, granted political asylum to Karel Doleal and Antonin Lerch. Other reports claimed that the hijackers landed in Weiden, West Germany. On August 8, 1977, the other nine were denied asylum. (See also Antonin Larch and second entry for an Antonin Lerch with similar material from different reports.)

Antonin Lerch: one of two miners convicted of the July 14, 1971, hijacking of the Prague–Carlsbad flight to West Germany. Lerch shot the copilot twice; reports differ as to whether the victim survived. Czechoslovakia demanded extradition but was refused. After pleading guilty, the pair was sentenced to seven years under Germany's new hijacking law. (See also Antonin Larch and first entry for an Antonin Lerch with similar material from different reports.)

Haroutioun Levonian: one of two members of the Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide who seriously wounded Turkish ambassador to Yugoslavia Galip Balkar and his driver on March 9, 1983, in downtown Belgrade. Levonian was wounded and captured. On March 9, 1984, the two attackers, Lebanese citizens of Armenian extraction, were found guilty and sentenced to 20 years each. On June 4, 1987, Turkey demanded to know why Levonian had been released from prison that year. Yugoslav authorities said he was half paralyzed and suffering from ailments that could not be treated in Yugoslavia.

Orjan Lihe: one of five Iranian diplomats arrested in Turkey on October 25, 1988. They were planning to kidnap Said Abu Hassan Mochhadezade, an anti-Khomeini engineer working in Erzincan and who reportedly was a member of the People's Mujahedeen. They were to be tried by a state security court in Istanbul State. The press reported that two of the diplomats were members of the Savama Iranian secret police; the other three were members of the embassy's bodyguard team.

Nikila Lisac: one of three Croatian men who hijacked Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130, a DC9 flying from Göteborg to Stockholm, Sweden, on September 15, 1972. The group forced the plane to Malmö. They demanded the release of seven Croatians in Swedish jails, including the two who had been convicted of the 1971 murder of Yugoslav Ambassador Rolovic. The terrorists demanded $200,000 but settled for $105,000 and six prisoners—a seventh refused release. They flew on to Spain. On December 5, 1974, a Spanish military court sentenced the three hijackers to 12 years in prison, but on February 13, 1975, Gen. Franco granted them a full pardon. Sweden's extradition request initiated Spanish legal proceedings. On June 12, 1974, the Audiencia Provincial dismissed the extradition request.

Magomed Lolokhoyev: on September 20, 2004, the Russian prosecutor's office said that Lolokhoyev, a traffic policeman, used his position to enable guerrillas, including leader Basayev, to pass through police checkpoints before their June 21, 2004, attack. The Interior Ministry headquarters in Nazran, Ingushetia, was taken over by 200 to 1,000 gunmen, who then attacked police headquarters, border checkpoints, and government offices in the region, killing 22 people, including Acting Interior Minister Abukar Kostoyev and 2 other senior officials, and injuring 47 people. Some of the attackers shouted, “Allahu akbar,” a frequent cry of Chechen Islamic separatists. Attackers seized police buildings in Karabulak and Ordzhonikidzevskaya. Lolokhoyev was also accused of transporting weapons for the terrorists.

Maria Lountzas: on September 10, 1988, Lophis village police in Limassol seized a cache of arms in Lountzas’s house that included 14 weapons of various types, hand grenades and detonators, 6,000 bullets, and 91 clips hidden in two large earthen containers. Police arrested her two children, Mikhalis and Pola.

Mikhalis Kharalambous Lountzas: brother of Pola Kharalambous Lountzas, both of whom were arrested on September 10, 1988, by Lophis village police in Limassol. Police seized a cache of arms in their mother Maria’s house that included 14 weapons of various types, hand grenades and detonators, 6,000 bullets, and 91 clips hidden in two large earthen containers. The duo was released the next day for lack of sufficient evidence.

Pola Kharalambous Lountzas: sister of Mikhalis Kharalambous Lountzas, both of whom were arrested on September 10, 1988, by Lophis village police in Limassol. Police seized a cache of arms in their mother Maria’s house that included 14 weapons of various types, hand grenades and detonators, 6,000 bullets, and 91 clips hidden in two large earthen containers. The duo was released the next day for lack of sufficient evidence.

Katerina Loutakidou: Greek member of the Islamic Jihad whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. She was acquitted by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992.

Zvonko Luburic: one of several people who assaulted Yugoslav consul general M. Bulajic and his wife at a New York City party on May 3, 1975.

Ivan Lukic: one of several people who assaulted Yugoslav consul general M. Bulajic and his wife at a New York City party on May 3, 1975.

M

---

Z.M.: foiled in a hijack plan during a check of security installations at Prague's Ruzyně Airport on June 5, 1978. Z.M. was sentenced by the Prague City Court to eight years for planning a hijacking.

Habib Maamar: variant Habib Ma'mar. Tunisian member of the May 15 Organization arrested in Paris in May 1986 who confessed to the bombing in Orchard Street in London on December 25, 1983, near Marks and Spencer and Selfridges. He claimed he was paid $3,000 per month by a pro-Iraqi faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization led by Abu Ibrahim to bomb Israeli targets. He also confessed to the February 23, 1985, bombing of Marks and Spencer in Paris that killed 1 and injured 14 and to the August 21, 1985, bombing of the Israeli Bank Leumi office in Paris. A large quantity of penthrite, a plastic explosive, was found in his Paris home. His trial opened on December 13, 1989. He told police he was asked to photograph Jewish establishments in Paris, London, Athens, and Istanbul. He made regular visits to Baghdad, Iraq, to collect money and explosives. He traveled via Madrid, Spain, under various names and used forged Moroccan passports.

‘Umar Mabruk: alias ‘Abd al-Jalid Khalid Ahmad al-Subbar. Arrested in connection with the attempted assassination on November 29, 1984, in Athens of Jordan's Chargé d'Affaires ‘Asim Qutayshat. The gun jammed. Border police arrested him at the Idomeni checkpoint on the Greece–Yugoslavia border. He was traveling under a forged Moroccan passport. Eyewitnesses identified him as the assailant. He had entered Greece on October 28. He was convicted of attempted murder and sentenced to 10 and a half years in prison.

Vato Machitidze: one of 18 people arrested and charged on March 15, 2005, for attempting to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgia republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan. Five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices; 13 were charged with weapons trafficking.

Stefan Macicko: one of two Czech teen hijackers who, on March 29, 1989, shot their way onto a Hungarian Malev Tupolev-154B on its regular Budapest–Prague–Amsterdam–Barcelona route in Prague and demanded to be flown to the United States. He was born on December 10, 1972. Both hijackers lived in the Banska Bystrica District. They surrendered in Frankfurt. The Americans took custody of the duo and handed them over to German police. The duo wanted to stay in West Germany. On March 30, 1989, the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs requested their extradition. They repeated the request on April 13, May 5, and June 8. On August 29, 1989, a Frankfurt am Main court sentenced them to two years to be served in a juvenile detention center, where they were to study German and learn automobile mechanics. On September 13, 1989, Bonn denied extradition, saying that the offenses fell within West German legislation.

Franjo Macukic: alias Bozic. Associate of Stanko Nizic, a night porter in the Kindli Hotel in Zurich, Switzerland, who was killed on August 26, 1981, by a revolver fired at point-blank range. The Yugoslav Danas newspaper reported that police searching his home found two kilograms of plastic explosive, a machine gun, and two bazookas. Police said he was a leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia. Macukic was arrested on December 12, 1981, while attempting to cross the Swiss–German border with arms and ammunition.

Salai Madaminov: alias Mukhammed Salikh. Poet and a leader of the Erk (Freedom) Democratic Party of Uzbekistan in February 1999. He was connected with a series of bombings in which 16 people died. He lost the 1991 election to Uzbek president Islam Karimov. He went into exile in 1993 and was sentenced in absentia in 2000 to 15 plus years in prison by a Tashkent court. President Karimov narrowly escaped being killed in the bombings. On November 28, 2001, Prague Airport border police detained the poet when he arrived from Amsterdam.

Ahmed Maden: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army hijackers of a Turkish Airlines B707 flying from Istanbul to Ankara, Turkey, on October 22, 1972, and diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. They threatened to blow up the plane if the Turkish government did not release 13 political prisoners, abolish the strike ban in martial law areas, reorganize the universities by giving them greater freedom, engage in land reform, and abolish anti-democratic articles in the constitution. The Turks refused to talk to the hijackers, who surrendered to the Bulgarians the next day. The pilot and a passenger were wounded. Bulgaria granted the hijackers political asylum but sentenced them to two-plus years in prison on February 2, 1973.

Emil Madzharov: one of three alleged terrorists reported on October 12, 1990, by Bulgarian Deputy Minister of Justice Angel Dzhabazov to have been executed during the “regenerative process” on September 6, 1988. The trio was found guilty of terrorist acts involving explosive devices in 1985 at Varna Airport, on the train from Burgas to Sofia, Bulgaria, and at a hotel in the town of Sliven. Eleven people died, and 20 were injured. The trio also planned to plant bombs on the beaches of two major seaside resorts in the summers of 1986 and 1987.

Magaryan brothers: on July 20, 1988, Geneva police arrested two Armenian terrorists identified as the Margaryan brothers, nephews of Yanikian, who murdered Turkey's Los Angeles Chief Consul Behadir Demir on January 27, 1973. The duo was carrying out foreign currency transfer operations for terrorists. They were caught as part of the La Atilla operation launched by Turkish and Italian police 18 months earlier that had extended into 13 countries. The duo was under investigation for nine months and was believed to have been involved in the murder of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in 1986 and the raid on a synagogue in Turkey.

Magas: alias of Ali Taziyev.

Magas: alias of Magomed Yevloyev.

Jasem Mahboule: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement, which has ties to al Qaeda, arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Spain did not offer details on the terrorists' targets. The next day, police identified three more Islamic suspects. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. Spain and other European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an al Qaeda cell were arraigned. Washington Post quoted Spanish officials on November 19 as indicating that eight al Qaeda cell members arrested in Madrid and Granada had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon ordered eight of the suspected members held without bail because they "were directly related with the preparation and development of the attacks perpetrated by the suicide pilots on September 11." Judge Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. They also reportedly sheltered Chechen rebels and obtained medical treatment for al Qaeda members. They conducted robberies and credit card fraud and provided false documents to al Qaeda visitors. They also forwarded money to Hamburg. The group had connections to Mohamed Bensakhria, head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. He was arrested and extradited to France. The group also had connections to six Algerians detained in Spain on September 26 who were charged with belonging to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, a bin Laden-funded Algerian group.

The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. His name and phone number were in a document found in a search of a Hamburg apartment of a bin Laden associate. Police believed hijacker leader Muhammad Atta could have met with some of them when he visited Spain in January and July. The group had links to Mamoun Darkazanli. Judge Garzon released three others who were arrested on November 13 and ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

Husseini Rad Mahmoud: one of two Black March terrorists who, on April 16, 1979, tried to take over El Al Flight 334, a B707 with a flight plan that included Tel Aviv, Israel, and Vienna, Austria, at Zaventem Airport in Brussels, Belgium. They conducted a gun battle with police in which a dozen people were injured and then shot seven more Belgians. El Al security men and Belgian police shot one of the terrorists and arrested both. On August 16, 1979, the duo was sentenced to eight years for attempted murder and for carrying illegal weapons and false identity papers.

Suzy Mahseredjian: variant Suzy Masseredjian. Alec Yenikomchian's colleague who was with him fabricating a bomb in their Geneva, Switzerland, hotel room on October 3, 1980, when the bomb exploded. Yenikomchian was badly injured. Masseredjian of Canoga Park, California, was arrested and acquitted of the explosives charge. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia had threatened reprisals against the United States for a Federal Bureau of Investigation interrogation. The arrest provoked bombing reprisals in Beirut and four European cities by the October 3 Group.

Uwe Johannes Mainka: one of two neo-Nazi members of the Karl-Heinz Hoffmann Group, produced on June 25, 1981, in Lebanon by the Maronite Christian Phalange Party. He claimed he was recruited for terrorist training by Fatah leader Salah Khalaf (alias Abu Iyad) in B'ir Hasan in Beirut. He referred to a terrorist recruiting network headquartered in Damascus, Syria, and headed by Mahammad Hijaza, 'Atif Bsisu, and Amin Hindi. They claimed they had entered Lebanon in October 1980. They snuck out of the camp on June 14 and were picked up in east Beirut by the Phalange.

Mohammed Majid: alias Mullah Fouad. Iraqi Kurd and key Ansar organizer in Parma, Italy, who fled to Syria a year earlier and who was allegedly behind the November 12, 2003, truck bombing in Nasiriyah, Iraq, that killed 19 Italians and 12 Iraqis.

E. M. Maknayev: attempted to hijack a Soviet airliner flying between Krasnodar and Baku, Azerbaijan, on November 15, 1978. He was killed by a guard.

Al-Majid: one of two Palestinian students who threw a hand grenade at two other Palestinian students at a Thessaloniki, Greece, student hotel on November 8, 1985. They were arrested while attempting to leave the country on a flight from Mikra Airport. Police found an automatic weapon, 2 grenades, and 420 grams of dynamite in the al Fatah members' apartment.

Elevtheria Makridhou: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Khristina Makridhou: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Marco Malaspina: suspected Red Brigades member and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. Malaspina was considered to be the link between the Rome column of the Red Brigades and the Union of Communist Fighters. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri's murder.

Andrzej Malek: one of two Polish Army pilots who, on April 1, 1982, ended their paratrooper training at Krakow by forcing a mechanic to aid them in taking their plane to the West. The AN2 biplane landed in Poland to pick up the pilots' families, flew at treetop level to avoid detection, and landed at Vienna's Schwechat Airport. The pilots requested political asylum. They were arrested and taken to Vienna Landesgericht Prison. The others were taken to Traiskirchen refugee camp. They faced maximum sentences of 10 years. On July 20, 1982, Malek was sentenced to a year. He claimed that he was coerced into joining the Communist Party.

Nikolay Malenko: Russian who was arrested with two Peruvians on April 25, 1981, by Peruvian authorities on charges of carrying dynamite and participating in terrorist attacks.

Abdul Malik: alias of Fritz Martin Gelowicz.

Sergei Malyschew: alias Amin al-Ansari. Belarusian chemical weapons expert who was one of 15 people arrested by Spanish authorities on December 19, 2005, on charges of setting up a recruiting network for al Qaeda that sent Islamic militants to Iraq. Police said at least two men were preparing to travel to Iraq as fighters. There was no evidence that they were preparing attacks in Spain, but they had materials to make explosives.

F. Mamedov: lieutenant and aircraft technician who helped Vadif Kurbanov, an Azeri pilot, who, on April 8, 1992, hijacked a supersonic SU-25 ground-attack aircraft from the Sitelchay Air Force Base and handed it to Azeri militants at Sangachaliy Air Base, 42 kilometers southwest of Baku. He was one of three people who tied up the flight line duty officer and stole the keys to the antihijack device.

Janos Mamuzsits: one of four Hungarian hijackers of a Romanian TAROM BAC111 flying from Bucharest, Romania, to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on September 14, 1970, and diverted to Munich, Germany. The hijackers were disarmed by West German police and requested political asylum. He was sentenced to two plus years by a West German court on January 20, 1971.

May Elias Mansur: Lebanese woman initially suspected of setting off a bomb on Trans World Airlines Flight 840 en route from Rome to Athens, Greece, on April 2, 1986. Four people were sucked out of the hole in the side of the B727. Mansur sat in seat 10F and disembarked before the plane left. She allegedly had past connections with a terrorist act involving an Alitalia flight, but it was determined that authorities had confused her with a man believed responsible for placing a bomb on an Alitalia flight in 1983. She was questioned by Lebanon's military prosecutor and an investigating judge on April 10, 1986, but no arrest warrant was ever issued.

Umrans Mansur: manager of the Libyan Arab Airlines office in Istanbul who met with the two Libyans who were stopped by police on April 18, 1986, in front of the U.S. officer's club in Ankara, Turkey, and threw away a bag containing six grenades and ran. Mansur allegedly selected the target. His trial began in absentia on May 13, 1986, in the State Security Court. On June 7, 1986, the charges were dropped because of diplomatic immunity.

N.R. Mantsev: one of two armed men who on September 20, 1986, seized a TU-134 airliner at Ufa Airport in the Ural Mountains of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and shot and killed two passengers before being killed themselves. The plane was en route from Kiev to Nizhnevartovsk.

S. Marketos: young man who entered the cockpit of an Olympic Airways SC7 flying from Athens to Mykonos, Greece, on September 27, 1975. He claimed to be holding nitric acid and threatened to blind the pilot if he did not fly to Albania. He was overpowered by the crew and turned over to authorities at Mykonos.

Hasan Marwan (or Marwan Hasan): alias Ali Yusuf. Egyptian (or Jordanian) who was arrested on August 29, 1981, by Austrian police after he fired a Polish PN-63 machine pistol and threw grenades into a Vienna, Austria, synagogue, killing 2 and injuring 20. He was believed connected to the May 1, 1981, murder in Austria of Heinz Nittel, president of the Austrian-Israeli-Friendship League, a leading Socialist Party official, and head of the Vienna Traffic Department. Abu Nidal's Al Asifah organization claimed credit for the assassination. Marwan was wounded in the synagogue attack. Police later received a phone call from an Arab-accented man who threatened to bomb three movie theaters if the synagogue terrorists were not released. On January 21, 1982, a Vienna court sentenced him to life imprisonment for the Nittel murder. Marwan testified in the case against Bahij Mohammed Younis, who was sentenced to life for masterminding the Nittel murder and the grenade attack.

Aslan Maskhadov: former Soviet Army colonel and Chechen rebel leader, age 53, with a $10 million price on his head, who was linked to the September 1, 2004, Beslan hostage siege and mass murder. He was killed by Russian Special Forces on March 8, 2005. The Federal Security Service announced on March 15 that it had paid $10 million for the information that led to its finding former Chechen President Maskhadov and offered the same reward for Shamil Basayev, who claimed credit for the Beslan attack. The security forces had pinned him down in a bunker in Tolstoy-Yurt, 12 miles north of Grozny, in northern Chechnya. Some reports said Russian gunfire killed him; other sources said one of his bodyguards inadvertently fired a weapon; still others said a grenade killed him.

Khaled el-Masri: German citizen of Lebanese descent, age 43, arrested on May 17, 2007, in Germany on suspicion of arson and sent to a psychiatric ward following a 4:45 A.M. fire in a wholesale market in Neu-Ulm that caused $680,000 in damage. He was represented by attorney Manfred Gnjjidic, who claimed his client had experienced a "complete nervous breakdown" because he claimed the CIA had kidnapped him in Macedonia on New Year's Eve 2003 and tortured him in an Afghan prison. In March 2007, the U.S. Federal Appeals Court in Richmond, Virginia, refused to reinstate his lawsuit, saying it could jeopardize national security by exposing state secrets.

Izettin Rida Masrojev: Palestinian guerrilla arrested at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport in July 1981. On February 24, 1983, the Martial Law Court of Istanbul acquitted him of "conspiracy to commit a felony" and released him from custody. He had been accused of perpetrating attacks against the Israeli Consulate and its personnel and had faced a 10-year prison term.

Petar Matavick: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan in New York City; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 which dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn, New York. The U.S. court of appeals restored two air piracy counts that had been dismissed by a U.S. district court on a motion by the hijackers, who were accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. Matavick was convicted on May 5, 1977, of air piracy and conspiracy and sentenced to 30 years on July 21.

Erotokritos Mattheou: alias Kritonis. One of the EOKA-B bombers of three British military bases in Cyprus on December 1, 1977. On December 4, Cypriot police arrested eight former EOKA-B members. On December 13, the police obtained an eight-day extension of the detention for three persons, including Mattheou. The bombing was believed related to the extradition hearing in the United Kingdom of Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot. Threats had been made against U.K. installations in April 1977 regarding his extradition. Mattheou's release from Cypriot prison was demanded by the EOKA-B kidnappers of Second Lt. Achilles Kyprianou, son of president Spiro Kyprianou, on December 14, 1977.

Qasim Mu'in Anwar Matti: arrested on December 5, 1988, in Cyprus on charges of counterfeiting U.S. dollars. Three days later, the Palestinian Liberation Movement demanded his release.

Maximus: Internet screen name for Mirsad Bektasevic.

Barbara Mayer: variant Meyer. The Baden-Wuerttemberg land criminal investigation office reported in July 1985 that her fingerprints matched those found during investigations at a gravel pit in Ortenau Kreis where members were suspected of trying to steal explosives. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the “hard core” of Red Army Faction (RAF) members. On May 8, 1999, Mayer, age 42, was detained at the Frankfurt Airport after having turned herself in. She had been hiding out in Lebanon.

Guglielmo Mazzochi: Naples member of the Communist Guerrilla Nucleus arrested in Paris on May 21, 1987. He had been sentenced to five years in prison by a Naples court. Italy requested extradition.

Farid Abdel Meguid: leader of six Palestine Popular Struggle Front or, according to some reports, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to Athens, Greece, on July 22, 1970. In Athens, the hijackers negotiated for the release of seven Arab terrorists who were being held for the December 21, 1969, attack on an El Al airliner; the December 21, 1969, attempted hijacking of a Trans World Airlines plane; and the November 27, 1968, attack on the El Al office in Athens. The Greek government agreed to continue the trial of the two November 27, 1968, terrorists on July 24 and sentenced one terrorist to 11 years, one terrorist to 18 years, and then let them both go free. The seven freed terrorists flew to Cairo, Egypt.

Mona Abdel Meguid: sister of the leader and one of six Palestine Popular Struggle Front or, according to some reports, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to Athens, Greece, on July 22, 1970. In Athens, the hijackers negotiated for the release of seven Arab terrorists who were being held for the December 21, 1969, attack on an El Al airliner; the December 21, 1969, attempted hijacking of a Trans World Airlines plane; and the November 27, 1968, attack on the El Al office in Athens. The Greek government agreed to continue the trial of the two November 27, 1968, terrorists on July 24 and sentenced one terrorist to 11 years, one terrorist to 18 years, and then let them both go free. The seven freed terrorists flew to Cairo, Egypt.

Monte Melkonian: founder of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia who was arrested in Paris on November 28, 1985, for possession of arms and false documents. He was also a member of the Armenian Revolutionary Movement. Police found evidence at his apartment of planned attacks against Turkish diplomats.

Memo: name used by one of the 13 Kurdish gunmen, some of them Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) members, who, on June 24, 1993, took hostage 25 employees of the Turkish Consulate in Munich, Germany. After 14 hours, the hostage takers surrendered. On June 30, 1993, Turkey requested extradition after they were tried in Germany.

Iosif Mendelevich: variant Jozef. One of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24. The government said it was being lenient, noting that his wife, Mary, who was pregnant, received only 15 years. On February 18, 1981, the Soviets released him. He was the last of the group released. He spent 11 years in detention camps and was permitted to immigrate to Israel after years of Western pressure.

Jozef Mendelevich: variant of Iosif Mendelevich.

Mehieddin Merki: one of three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98.

Fabrizio Meroglio: Red Brigades (RB) member captured in Rome on January 22, 1987, following a firefight with the carabinieri. On March 31, 1987, he was indicted by investigating magistrate Domenico Sica as an accessory to the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement. Meroglio was also charged with the attempted murder of Giorgieri on December 15, 1986.

Omer Mersan: individual who allegedly provided a pilfered passport to Mehmet Ali Agca, would-be assassin of the pope on May 13, 1981. Mersan was also linked to Turkish smuggler Abuzer Ugurlu. Mersan surrendered to Italian authorities on March 12, 1984, after being extradited from West Germany. He was wanted in Italy for false testimony in Agca's first trial.

Baghdad Mezaine: at age 38, one of two Algerians arrested on September 26, 2001, in Leicester, United Kingdom, where police found propaganda material encouraging the recruitment of young Muslims for jihad training. They also seized money, faked credit cards, and other counterfeit documents. Police found videotapes, including 19 copies of a film of bin Laden's speeches and films of operations in Chechnya and Afghanistan. On April 1, 2003, the Leicester Crown Court found them guilty of raising money for terrorism and sentenced them to 11 years in prison.

Marek Michalski: member of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. On September 30, 1982, Poland requested extradition, which Switzerland denied. The trial began on October 3, 1983. On October 10, 1983, he received two and a half years in prison and five years banishment from Switzerland.

Mihran Mihanian: member of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) Orly Group in 1982. He resurfaced on October 17, 1986, as an ASALA spokesperson in interviews with Le Monde and Agence France Presse.

David Mikhberidze: one of the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot Flight 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad, Russia, on November 18, 1983. He committed suicide on learning that the plane was returning to Tbilisi.

Anatoliy Mikhaylenko: student who, on June 30, 1990, hijacked Aeroflot Flight 8678, which was scheduled to fly from Lvov, Ukraine, to Leningrad, Russia, and diverted it to Arlanda Airport in Stockholm, Sweden, where he surrendered to police. On July 2, the Soviets requested extradition, giving it in writing the next day. On July 5, he requested political asylum. His lawyer cited the hijacker's refusal to perform military service, his political outlook, and humanitarian considerations. On July 11, he was placed under arrest for extradition by the Sollentuna District Court. On July 18, 14 of the Ukrainian Supreme Soviet deputies asked the Swedish authorities not to extradite him. On July 28, 16 of the deputies asked the Swedes to prosecute him instead of extraditing him. On July 26, the Swedish Supreme Court ruled that Sweden was guided by its international commitments to fight air piracy and that no laws prevented his extradition. Soviet authorities would prosecute him only for the hijacking and not for violating the border. He was turned over to Soviet representatives on August 3. He said he had conducted a hunger strike to protest being returned to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He was a former technical college graduate from Lvov who worked as a graphic designer.

Stanislav Milicevic: convicted as an accomplice of two Croatian terrorists who entered the Yugoslav Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslav ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16 in a Stockholm court, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. Milicevic was given a two-year term for complicity. On July 14, the London Times reported that the duo planned to form a terrorist group that would attack people in Sweden suspected of working for Yugoslavia against the Croats. Milicevic was due to be freed on November 1, 1972.

On September 15, 1972, three Croatian émigrés hijacked a Scandinavian Airlines airliner and obtained the release of six Croatian terrorists being held in Swedish jails. Milicevic refused to be released. The plane was flown to Spain, where authorities apprehended all nine Croats. The six who had been released in Sweden were permitted to leave Spain for Paraguay on June 23, 1974. Sweden requested the extradition of three of them for the Rolovic killing. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for their arrest, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay.

In May 1980, one of the Croats accused in the assassination was extradited to Sweden by the United States. He had been turned over to the United States for prosecution on charges of fraudulently applying for a visa to enter the United States in December 1979 but was acquitted.

Anto Minas: Greek identified by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) in Nicosia, Cyprus, in 1990 as an ASALA member.

Sultan Minas: identified by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) in Nicosia, Cyprus, in 1990 as an ASALA member.

Aslan Mintas: police cadet, age 17, who attempted to hijack a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Istanbul to Izmir, Turkey, on February 13, 1977. He fired his pistol wildly, slightly wounding the pilot and a stewardess, and demanded to go to Yugoslavia. A passenger disarmed him as the plane was approaching its Izmir landing. Police arrested Mintas.

Mirciyan: Armenian who the Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, was wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm.

Goran Mise: one of three Slavs who planned to hijack an American Trans-International Airways charter DC10 flying from Cleveland, Ohio, to Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, and divert it to South Africa or Rhodesia, where they would demand $1 million for the safe release of 340 Slovenian and northwest Croatian emigrants and 10 crew members on the plane on August 20, 1973. The plan fell apart at Brnik Airport two hours before the plane was due to land, when a local citizen noticed the machine gun-carrying trio acting suspiciously and warned local officials. A fourth hijacker was supposed to join them, but the group could not locate him. On the night before their attempt, the group broke into an arms depot and stole four machine guns, a revolver, and ammunition. After being spotted, two of them escaped into the woods but were captured two hours later.

Grazhina Mitskute: one of two would-be hijackers of an Aeroflot AN2 flying from Vilnius and Palanga, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, on November 9, 1970. She joined her husband, Vitas Simokaitis, in demanding to go to Sweden. They were overpowered and tried in Vilnius. He was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to 15 years in a labor camp.

Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan Moayad: variant Mouyad. One of two Yemenis arrested in Germany on January 10, 2003, and extradited to the United States, where they were prosecuted in 2005 for conspiracy to send money from Brooklyn, New York, to Hamas and al Qaeda. He claimed to have sent millions to the groups. Evidence included documents obtained in Afghanistan, Yemen, and Croatia, sources in the United Kingdom and Israel, and electronic surveillance of their hotel room in Germany where they stayed in 2003. On March 10, 2005, Moayad was convicted of conspiracy, providing material support to Hamas, and attempting to support al Qaeda, but he was acquitted of providing support to al Qaeda. Defense attorneys said they would appeal. Moayad was represented by attorney William H. Goodman. Moayad faced 60 years. On July 28, 2005, Moayad was sentenced to 75 years, the maximum allowed. As of 2007, he was held in the Florence supermax prison in Colorado.

Hendrik Moebus: convicted neo-Nazi fugitive, age 24, was arrested on August 26, 2000, by U.S. marshals in Lewisburg, West Virginia, 20 miles from the 200-acre property of white separatist William Pierce, author of The Turner Diaries, which had inspired Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh. As a minor, he had been convicted in Germany in 1994 with two accomplices for the luring and strangling of a “non-Aryan” teen. He violated the terms of his 1998 parole by giving Nazi salutes, attending right-wing meetings, and suggesting that the kidnapping and murder he was convicted of was not really a crime. He entered the United States through Seattle using his real name in December 1999, while a German arrest warrant was pending. He began using an alias and had assistance from several people. He visited Richmond, Virginia, parts of Ohio, and landed in West Virginia, where he lived in a building on the Pierce compound. Pierce founded the National Alliance white supremacist group. He was arrested after having been driven out of the Pierce compound. No weapons were found in the vehicle.

Mahoud M. Mohammad: one of two members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine

(PFLP) who threw grenades and fired a machine gun in the Athens, Greece, airport at an El Al plane waiting to take off for New York on its way from Tel Aviv, Israel, on December 26, 1968. Israeli passenger Leon Shirdan was killed, and a stewardess suffered a fractured leg and spinal injuries when she jumped out of the plane. The PFLP duo was immediately arrested by Greek police; they were convicted and sentenced on March 26, 1970. Mohammad received 17 years and five months for interference with air traffic, arson, and illegal use and possession of explosives. A charge of premeditated murder against him for using the machine gun was lessened to a count of manslaughter by negligence. Mohammed, age 25, was a Palestinian refugee. The duo was freed on July 22, 1970, when six Palestinians hijacked an Olympic Airways plane to Beirut.

Binyam Mohamed: variant Binyam Mohamed. Ethiopian detainee and U.K. resident held at Guantánamo who was believed part of a “North American support cell” that sent money, recruits, and other forms of support overseas to assist in a global jihad. Mohamed lived in the United States as a teen for a few years before moving to the United Kingdom in 1994. In May 2001, unemployed, he turned up in Afghanistan, hoping that the Taliban’s antidrug policy would help him get off his drug habit. Prosecutors said he trained at al Qaeda camps. He was detained at Karachi’s airport in Pakistan in April 2002, planning on flying back to the United Kingdom on a false U.K. passport. At his hearing in 2004 before the Combatant Status Review Tribunal in Guantánamo, he said he had received paramilitary training in Afghanistan on how to falsify documents and encode phone numbers in preparation for going to fight in Chechnya. Prosecutors said he agreed to rent apartments inside large buildings in the United States, fill them with natural gas, and set them off with timers. He was also alleged to have been trained, along with Jose Padilla, by Khalid Sheikh Muhammad in how to spray nightclubs with cyanide. In December 2005, he was referred to the military commission in Guantánamo on accusation of conspiring with Jose Padilla to set off a radioactive device in the United States. The charge sheet said he and Padilla had met in Pakistan after 9/11 to study how to build a dirty bomb, discussed such an attack with al Qaeda leaders, and agreed to blow up buildings. The charges were dismissed after the June 2006 Supreme Court ruling that the current system of military commissions was unconstitutional. Pentagon prosecutors linked him to Abu Zubaydah and Khalid Sheikh Muhammad. In 2008, Mohamed was age 29. On June 5, 2008, a U.K. judge ordered a hearing as to whether the British government had to turn over evidence to the defense, led by attorney Clive Stafford Smith.

Najib Chaib Mohamed: Moroccan arrested in January 2002 in Spain for his alleged involvement in a suspected al Qaeda recruiting and logistics cell led by Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass.

Binyam Mohammed: variant of Binyam Mohamed.

Lokman Amin Mohammed: Kurdish immigrant, age 33, convicted in a German court on January 12, 2006, of smuggling fighters to Iraq for the Ansar al-Islam network in 2003. He was sentenced to seven years in prison in Munich. Prosecutors said he confessed to helping eight would-be suicide bombers to travel from Europe to Iraq. His network also brought wounded militants back into Europe, among them an Ansar bomb maker who lost both hands in an explosives accident. German police had arrested him in December 2003. His attorney said he was only a freelance smuggler for Ansar, but the court convicted him of membership in a terrorist organization.

Bouchoucha Mokhtar: Tunisian member of an al Qaeda cell in Italy who was serving prison terms in Italy for trafficking in arms and explosives when, on April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

Mikhail Mokretsov: student at a vocational school in Solekamsk, age 19, who, on July 5, 1990, hijacked an Aeroflot TU-154 flying from Leningrad, Russia, to Lvov, Ukraine, and diverted it to Arlanda Airport in Stockholm, Sweden. He surrendered to police, saying he could no longer stand living in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He also hoped to avoid military service. On July 6, the Soviets requested extradition. On August 1, the Supreme Court canceled proceedings after he tried to commit suicide in Kronoberg Prison the previous day. He decided to take his life after learning that the government had decided to extradite Soviet hijacker Anatoliy Mikhaylenko (or Mikhailenko). Mokretsov cut both wrists with a broken cell lamp but was saved by Swedish authorities. He ended a two-week hunger strike on August 15. On August 16, the Swedish Supreme Court barred his extradition on humanitarian grounds. A court psychiatrist said that he would not be able to stand conditions in a Soviet prison. He had been rejected four times by Soviet officials to emigrate and faced induction into the Red Army. On August 24, he was formally charged with aggravated hijacking. On September 11, the Sollentuna District Court sentenced him to four years in prison. Senior Prosecutor Birgit Thunved requested his expulsion to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics or that he be deported and not permitted to enter the country for a decade.

Yousef Magied Molqi: Palestinian convicted of killing Leon Klinghoffer, age 69, a wheelchair-bound Jewish American who was murdered and thrown overboard in the takeover of the Achille Lauro cruise ship on October 7, 1985, in Greece. On February 25, 1996, Molqi, age 34, disappeared during a prison furlough at a church-run shelter in Prato, near Florence, Italy. He was scheduled to return to Rebibbia Prison in Rome at the end of his 12-day pass. He was serving a 30-year term but had been permitted release four times before. On March 13, 1996, Italy offered a “substantial” reward for his arrest. The U.S. Department of State offered a $2 million reward and resettlement in the United States for informants and their families.

On March 22, 1996, Spanish Civil Guard detectives, aided by Italian police, arrested Molqi in Estepona. On December 4, 1996, Spain extradited him to Italy, which put him back in a Rome prison cell.

Montazer: driver of the getaway motorcycle used by one of the three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassem-lou, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989.

Christopher Moreau: young Italian Swiss arrested on July 25, 1970, by Israel authorities as he stepped off the Greek liner Enotria in Tel Aviv, Israel. He was carrying five pounds of Soviet-made explosives, detonators, and six copper labels inscribed PFLP. He claimed that he had contacted the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) in Beirut and had been trained for several weeks. He had always been interested in left-wing politics but could not go to Vietnam and thus joined a geographically closer cause. He was paid $900 in advance and was to receive another $5,000 when his bombs exploded. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Massimo Morzello: on May 15, 1989, the British government announced that it had no reason to expel the member of the Italian neo-fascist Third Position (Terza Posizione), who had been sentenced in absentia by an Italian court on charges of participating in an armed gang. He was also suspected of involvement in the August 2, 1980, bombing of a train in Bologna in which 85 people were killed and 200 injured.

Mounir El Motassadeq: Moroccan student at Hamburg's Technical University in Germany. He transferred money to 9/11 hijack leader Muhammad Atta and Ramzi Binalshibh. He also had power of attorney for 9/11 United Airlines Flight 175 hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi. He was one of two Muslim witnesses to Atta's will, although he denied having seen the will. He said he transferred $1,000 to Atta in 2000 to pay for a computer. He did not explain his transferring $2,350 to Binalshibh. On November 28, 2001, Hamburg police arrested Motassadeq on "urgent suspicion of supporting a terrorist group." He might have visited an al Qaeda terrorist camp in Afghanistan in the summer of 2000; Pakistan said that he was in Pakistan in July 2000. While in Pakistan, he stayed at the same Karachi hotel as fugitive Said Bahaji and probably fugitives Binalshibh and Essabar using aliases. Police said he managed one of Al-Shehhi's accounts, into which large sums of money were deposited from May to November 2000 to finance flight lessons and pay for the upkeep in the United States of Al-Shehhi, Atta, and Ziad Jarrahi.

Motassadeq is married to a Belarussian and has a son. He came to Hamburg in 1995 to study for a degree in electrical technology. Atta helped him to find a Goeschen Street apartment, around the corner from his Marien Street apartment. Motassadeq flew to Istanbul in May 2001, where he met with a man who transported Islamic fighters to and from Afghanistan and Chechnya. He apparently had contact with people affiliated with Mamdouh Mahmud Salim, a suspected al Qaeda financier extradited by Germany to the United States in 1998. He had signed up to tour a Stade nuclear power plant near Hamburg in 2001. He, Atta, Al-Shehhi, Jarrahi, and Essabar attended Bahaji's 1999 wedding at the al-Quds mosque in Hamburg.

On August 28, 2002, German federal prosecutors filed charges in Hamburg Superior Court against the Moroccan electrical engineering student, age 28. He was charged with more than 3,000 counts of accessory to murder and membership in a terrorist organization. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked his financial assets. On October 23, 2002, he told the court that he transferred $2,500 from Marwan al-Shehhi's account to pay for his military training in Afghanistan at the request of Ramzi Binalshibh. On February 19, 2003, the German court convicted him of the 3,000 counts. He was sentenced to 15 years in prison. On March 4, 2004, a German appeals court ordered a new trial, saying the proceeding had been compromised by U.S. refusal to give Motassadeq access to Binalshibh. He was freed by the Hamburg court on April 7, 2004, pending a retrial in June. His retrial began on August 10, 2004.

On May 13, 2005, the United States sent six pages of summaries from interrogations of Ramzi Binalshibh and Mohamedou Ould Slahi to a Hamburg court retrying Motassadeq. On August 19, 2005, a German court convicted Motassadeq and sentenced him to seven years as a member of the Hamburg cell but found him not guilty of more than 3,000 counts of accessory to murder in the 9/11 attack, ruling that he did not play a direct role in the plot. On February 7, 2006, Motassadeq was unexpectedly freed from a Hamburg prison, pending appeals. On October 12, 2006, a German court began a hearing on whether it should reinstate the accessory-to-murder charges.

On November 16, 2006, Germany's Federal Court of Justice overturned the Hamburg court's acquittal of Motassadeq, who now faced 15 years when he was to be resented in Hamburg. On January 12, 2007, Germany's Federal Constitutional Court refused to take up his appeal of helping three of the 9/11 hijackers. The appeal was separate from his appeal of the 15-year sentence he received on January 8, 2007, for being an accessory to the deaths of the 246 people who died on the planes.

Mansour Mourad: variant Mansur Seifeddin Mourad. Terrorist held by the Greek government for a November 27, 1968 or 1969, attack on the El Al office in Athens, Greece. The Jordanian member, age 21, of the Palestine Popular Struggle Front joined Elie Karabetian in throwing two hand grenades into the Athens office of El Al, killing a two-year-old Greek child and wounding 15 others, including 3 Americans, a Briton, 10 Greeks, and a three-year-old Greek child. His release was demanded by the hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to Athens on July 22, 1970. The hijackers agreed to let his trial go ahead as scheduled on July 24, 1970. After the trial, the hostages would go free. He was sentenced to 11 years. He was released into the custody of the International Committee of the Red Cross and flown to Cairo. The prosecutor who tried him on charges of murder and succeeded in convicting him of premeditated manslaughter told him that he hoped to see him again in his country as a tourist.

Shiraz Mousazadeh: one of three Iranians arrested by Turkish police at Esenboga Airport on September 13, 1986, while trying to sneak an attaché case wired to hold explosives onto a Turkish Airlines flight bound for Cyprus. Although there were no explosives in the case, the wires would set it off when the case's handle was touched. The trio had entered Turkey at a border point on the eastern frontier with Iran on September 4, 1986. They claimed they were flying to the Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus, recognized only by Turkey, to take exams and claimed no knowledge of the mechanism. On September 17, 1986, the Ankara Security Court charged them with founding a criminal organization and being members of an armed band.

Musheg Movsesian: Armenian lawmaker arrested on November 5, 1999, and charged five days later with organizing the October 27, 1999, seizure of the Armenian Parliament in which the prime minister and 6 others were killed and at least 50 hostages were held.

Haregin Movseyan: one of three hijackers of a YAK12 chartered passenger plane of the Russian domestic air service on September 10, 1961. The three Armenians attempted to divert the plane to Turkey. When the pilot attempted to throw the attackers off balance, the trio stabbed him several times. When the plane crashed, one hijacker died. The remaining hijackers were captured and sentenced to death.

Kamil Mraz: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Brno to Prague, Czechoslovakia, that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Christopher N. Mrozowski: resident of Bethesda, Maryland, age 34, who, on September 27, 1996, along with a Polish woman and an Iranian man, was detained and then arrested by the Turkish government on charges of aiding Kurdish rebels. Mrozowski was hiking in Turkey after finishing a summer job teaching Peace Corps volunteers in Warsaw. The trio was taken off a bus in eastern Turkey. The trio denied the charges. They were released on October 10, 1996, pending trial for assisting the rebels. No trial date was set.

Zaiad Muchasi: Black September contact of the KGB in Cyprus who was killed on April 9, 1973, when he switched on a light in his Nicosia hotel room after returning from a meeting with the KGB. The switch triggered a detonating device. He had arrived in Cyprus two days earlier as the replacement for the Black September KGB contact who had been killed three months earlier.

Wassem Mughal: arrested on October 21, 2005, in the United Kingdom, Mughal, age 22, may have been planning to bomb the White House and U.S. Capitol. Mughal was charged with having, in his bedroom in Chatham, Kent, a DVD titled Martyrdom Operations Vest, an Arabic document titled "Welcome to Jihad," a piece of paper with the words "Hospital = attack," a recipe for rocket propellant, and "guidance-containing explosion." Younis Tsouli and Mughal were charged with conspiracy to murder and to cause an explosion. Prosecutors said they ran Web sites that linked terrorists in Denmark, Bosnia, Iraq, the United States, and United Kingdom. The sites included beheading videos. One of their laptops included a PowerPoint presentation titled "The Illustrated Booby Trapping Course" that included how to create a suicide vest loaded with ball bearings. Tsouli was asked by al Qaeda to translate into English its e-book The Tip of the Camel's Hump. They also stole data for hundreds of credit cards which they used to purchase supplies for operatives and laundered money through 350 transactions at 43 Internet gambling sites, including absolutepoker.com, betfair.com, betonbet.com, canbet.com, eurobet.com, noblepoker.com, and paradisepoker.com, using 130 credit card accounts. They had made more than $3.5 million in fraudulent charges for GPS devices, night-vision goggles, sleeping bags, telephones, survival knives, hundreds of prepaid cell phones, tents, and more than 250 airline tickets using 110 different credit cards at 46 airline and travel agencies. They used 72 credit card accounts to register more than 180 domains at 95 Web hosting firms in the United States and Europe. On July 5, 2007, the biochemistry graduate student was sentenced to seven and a half years after pleading guilty.

Abu Muhammad: Ha'aretz claimed, on November 13, 1986, that Palestinian Muhammad was the leader of the masked suicide terrorists who fired on and threw grenades at worshippers in the Neve Shalom, Istanbul, Turkey, synagogue on September 6, 1986, doused the 21 corpses with gasoline and set them alight. Two terrorists who had barred the door died in the attack when their grenades exploded in their hands. A third escaped. The attack was claimed by the Islamic Jihad, Abu Nidal, the Northern Arab League, the Islamic Resistance, the Palestinian Resistance Organization, the Fighting International Front—'Amrushi Martyr Group, and the Organization of the Unity of the Arab North. He served as the terrorist team's squad leader, as he had been in Turkey several times. He left Istanbul and returned to Tehran three days before the attack, leaving the operation to the two remaining terrorists.

Joseph Muhammad: one of three terrorists who on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98.

Tagun Mehemet Muhammad: Libyan arrested in Limassol, Cyprus, on September 17, 1990, at an offshore company office that publishes Arabic newspapers and magazines. He was held on suspicion of planning terrorist activities and was expected to be deported. He arrived in Cyprus one and a half months earlier and had vanished. His short-stay visa expired. No incriminating evidence was found in his Limassol apartment, but he was charged with living in Cyprus illegally.

Zuzant Muhammad: one of three terrorists who on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98.

Mahdi Muhammed: variant Mahde. One of two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who threw grenades and fired submachine guns at a crowd waiting to board El Al Flight 582, a B707 bound for Tel Aviv, Israel, from Istanbul, Turkey, on August 11, 1976. They killed 4 and wounded 26 before surrendering. They claimed Libya had financed the operation. On November 16, 1976, a Turkish court sentenced them to death but commuted the sentences to life in prison. Muhammed's release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa Flight 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, Germany, on October 13, 1977.

Leonard Murati: one of two Albanian immigrants, age 24, who, on December 15, 2004, armed with shotguns, hijacked a bus with 26 passengers just after midnight and held it for 18 hours before surrendering to police. The duo claimed to have explosives and demanded a $1.3 million ransom and safe passage out of Greece. Relatives were permitted to phone the duo and talk them out of the incident. Negotiators had talked the duo into releasing the passengers by twos and threes until they were down to only six hostages. The duo then set an 8:00 A.M. December 16 deadline for their demands to be met. But four hours after the duo set the deadline, they opened the doors and freed the rest of the hostages. They soon surrendered. They were charged with multiple counts of kidnapping and attempted murder. The two are house painters who had resided in Greece for seven years. They were jailed without bond pending a December 20 arraignment.

Vladimir Aleksandrovich Muravlev: one of four men who, on December 1, 1988, seized a bus with Soviet schoolchildren, a teacher, and a driver in Ordzhonikidze, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and traded them for $2 million in U.S. currency and an Ilyushin-76T jet transport. The Soviets provided an eight-man crew to fly from Mineralnyye Vody. They flew the next day to a military strip near Israel's Ben Gurion Airport, where they surrendered peacefully. On December 3, 1988, Israel extradited the hijackers. Muravlev's trial began on February 28, 1989, in Moscow. He was born in 1962, graduated from vocational school, was unemployed, and had two previous convictions. On March 17, 1989, three of the hijackers received 14 years each, part to be served in a labor camp. Another gang member who helped plot the hijacking but backed out at the last minute got three years.

Alexei Murzhenko: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24.

Hasan Hodge Hajji Musa: Lebanese student arrested at Larnaca Airport on May 10, 1988, after police found that he was carrying a radio cassette player with a silencer-equipped pistol and two full magazines of ammunition inside his bag. He admitted that he intended to murder someone in Cyprus.

Larisa Musalayeva: Chechen woman in her late 40s or early 50s who, on May 14, 2003, blew herself up at an Islamic prayer meeting in Iliskhan-Yurt, a village outside Gudermes, killing 18 people and injuring between 45 and 150. Musalayeva sought revenge for her dead brother, who killed himself when pro-Moscow Chechens attempted to arrest him. The terrorist had ties to a rebel unit led by Shamil Basayev, a Chechen rebel commander. She had a pound of TNT hidden on her body or in her video camera. She was initially misidentified as Shakida Baimuradova, who was later determined to be a victim.

Abu Musayev: Chechen rebel intelligence chief in 1995. He received U.S. hostage Fred Cuny on April 12, 1995, from Chechen rebels.

Alisher Musayev: head of the Moscow branch of the Hizb ut-Tahrir (Party of Liberation), which was banned in February 2003 for terrorist connections. On June 10, 2003, he was arrested by Russia's Federal Security Service (FSB) with 54 others for plotting against the government. The FSB found plastic explosives, hand grenades, dynamite, and detonator cords in raids. FSB spokesperson Sergei Ignatchenko said, "They were preparing fighters to send to Chechnya" and planning attacks in Moscow. Ignatchenko said they were "Muslim brothers" of al Qaeda. Most of those arrested were from Uzbekistan and Tajikistan.

Majed Mustafa: Egyptian Islamic Jihad and al Qaeda member who was arrested in Albania in 1998 and sent to Egypt. He had material indicating a planned bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Tirana. He had worked in the Tirana branch of the Kuwaiti Society for the revival of the Islamic Heritage.

Hadi Mustafavi: one of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemloo, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of leaving injured persons whose lives were in danger.

Zarima Muzhikhoyeva: woman, age 22, detained on July 10, 2003, who intended to enter a Moscow restaurant on Tverskaya Street with a pound of military-issue explosives in a bag. She was led away in handcuffs from a table in the Mon café. Federal Security Service bomb tech Georgi Trofimov died while trying to dismantle the bomb. He defused part of an explosives belt at the rock concert days earlier. Police reported that she was a widow from the Ingush ethnic group who lived in a Chechen village. Her husband died fighting against the Russians. Her bomb was similar to those used in the rock concert blasts. On April 5, 2004, a jury found her guilty of terrorism. On April 8, a Moscow court sentenced her to 20 years in prison.

N

---

Nabil: one of the three Egyptian Revolution hijackers of Egyptair Flight 648 that left Athens, Greece, bound for Cairo on November 23, 1985. He executed two female Israeli passengers and injured two Americans.

Nikush Nadirashvili: one of 18 people arrested and charged on March 15, 2005, who attempted to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgia republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan. Five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices; 13 were charged with weapons trafficking.

Aminat Nagayeva: one of two Chechen women who were believed to be the suicide bombers who set off their bombs on August 24, 2004, on two Russian passenger jets that left the same Moscow airport within 30 minutes of each other, killing all 90 on board. The women had initially been stopped by police but were inexplicably let go. Some Russian newspapers said that the passports were faked.

Jihad Abu-al-Naja: Palestinian Islamic Jihad member whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was acquitted by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992.

Ahmed Naji: Egyptian Islamic Jihad member who fled Albania but was arrested by Italian police in early October 1998. He reportedly had planned the failed attack on the U.S. Embassy in Tirana.

Samir Hassan Najmeddin: head of the SAS (International Trading and Investments) export-import company that was ordered shut down in August 1987 by Poland after the United States said it was financing Palestinian terrorism. He left the country on January 14, 1988. No expulsion had been ordered, but Poland did not renew his visa.

Abdel Hadi Nakaa: one of two Black September members who were seriously injured when their explosives-laden car blew up on a Rome street on June 17, 1973. He was a Syrian. It was believed they were driving their booby-trapped car toward their next mission, which may have been against the transit camp in Austria for Soviet Jewish émigrés. Some reports claim that Mossad arranged for the premature detonation of the bombs.

Thomas Derry Nakaba: one of seven Danish neo-Nazis arrested on January 17, 1997, while planning to send letter bombs overseas. Police linked them to three packages of explosive detonators seized from a mailbox in Malmo, Sweden, addressed to the United Kingdom. Police also seized a dozen detonators, black powder, and several shotguns. Nakaba, age 26, was charged with shooting a policeman during the arrests. Nakaba had placed the packages in the mailbox.

Juma Namagani: former Soviet paratrooper and leader of the pro-Taliban Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan who was reported killed in Afghanistan in late 2001. Many doubted the report regarding this associate of Osama bin Laden.

Mustafa Setmariam Nasar: variant Mustafa Sitmaryan Nassar; aliases Abu Musab al-Suri, Umar Abd al-Hakim. Spanish citizen who might also have Syrian citizenship and a leading al-Qaeda ideologue. While a member of the Syrian Muslim Brotherhood, he fled Syria in the 1980s, roaming through the Middle East and North Africa, where he became associated with the Algeria Islamic Group. He settled in Madrid in 1987 and married a Spaniard, obtaining Spanish citizenship. In Spain, he wrote inflammatory essays under the pen name Umar Abd al-Hakim. In 1995, he moved to the United Kingdom, serving as a European contact for al Qaeda. He roamed throughout Europe and Afghanistan through the late 1990s. He moved his family to Afghanistan in 1998. He was a trainer at the Derunta and al-Bhuraba terrorist camps in Afghanistan, working closely with Midhat Mursi al-Sayid 'Umar (alias Abu Khabab al-Masri) and training extremists in poisons and chemicals.

Following the 9/11 attacks, he swore loyalty to Osama bin Laden as an al Qaeda member. The United States announced a $5 million reward for his arrest. He was indicted in Spain in September 2003 for al Qaeda membership and terrorist activities and was linked to Imad Yarkas, a Syrian-born Spaniard who ran the group's Spanish cell.

He was suspected of having a role in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. British authorities wanted to question him in connection with the 7/7 multiple bombings of the London subway system in 2005. He was captured by Pakistani forces in a Quetta shop that serves as an office of an Islamic charity tied to a radical group, near the Afghan border, on November 4, 2005. He was transferred to Syrian custody.

Nasar claims to have been born on October 26, 1958, in Aleppo, Syria. He wrote a 1,600-page tome on how to attack Islam's enemies. There had been a $5 million bounty for him. He had traveled to Sudan, Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq, Syria, and two European capitals. UPI reported on October 19, 2006, that he was in U.S. custody.

Balik Nasban: Lebanese named by Cypriot authorities on August 6, 1986, as having been involved in the August 3, 1986, attack by rockets, machine guns, and mortars at the British air base at Akrotiri by the Unified Nasirite Organization. A car found with spent shells had been rented by Nasban.

Antoinette Nasif: Palestinian housewife carrying a Lebanese passport who was arrested on September 17, 1986, by Greek police. She was carrying 248 rounds of automatic weapon ammunition in a secret compartment as she boarded Cyprus Airways Flight 337 for Larnaca, Cyprus, and Damascus, Syria. Cypriot president Spiros Kiprianou was a passenger on the same flight. Nasif arrived at Ellinikon Airport in Athens on a Scandinavian Airlines flight from New York via Copenhagen, Denmark. She claimed she was to board a ship for Lebanon from Larnaca. She said she did not know that it was illegal to import ammunition into Greece.

Ilyas Nasif: signature used by one of the Palestinian gunmen who, on September 26, 1986, signed a statement asking their comrades not to seize hostages to obtain their release. He had been sentenced to life in Cyprus in February 1986 in connection with the takeover of an Israeli-owned yacht, the First, taking two Israeli hostages after killing a woman in the initial assault in Cyprus on September 25, 1985. After nine hours of negotiations, the terrorists killed the hostages and surrendered. Fatah Force 17 claimed credit.

Sami Nasir: Palestinian with a Jordanian passport who was arrested by Larnaca Airport security personnel in Cyprus on December 17, 1985. Nasir tried to smuggle arms aboard a Swissair plane scheduled to depart for Amman, Jordan. His hand luggage contained 3 hand grenades, 2 pistols, 2 magazines, a silencer, and 90 rounds of ammunition. Police believe he intended to hijack the plane with three others who did not board. His sister's apartment contained five grenades and two silencers. On January 15, 1986, he was sentenced to six years for arms possession at the airport. He was also sentenced to five years for the arms found at his sister's apartment. On July 31, 1986, he was quietly deported. Some sources indicated that he had been exchanged for two Cypriot students—Panayiotis Tirkas and Tavros Yiannaki—held by a Muslim group in Beirut, Lebanon. Cypriot authorities said Nasir had a heart ailment.

Mustafa Sitmaryan Nassar: variant of Mustafa Setmariam Nasar.

Peter Naumann: German neo-Nazi who on August 14, 1995, revealed the location of eight arms and explosives caches in Lower Saxony and Hesse, Germany, to the Federal Prosecutor's Office. Police received 150 kilograms of arms and explosives.

Nizar bin Mohammed Nawar: variant Naouar; alias Sword of the Faith. Tunisian, age 25, living in Lyons, France, and one of the men who, on April 11, 2002, drove a truck transporting natural gas to the outer wall of North Africa's oldest synagogue on the island of Djerba, Tunisia, where they exploded it, killing 17 people, including 11 German tourists, 5 Tunisians, and a French citizen. Nawar died in the explosion. On April 16, the Islamic Army for the Liberation of the Holy Sites, which has links to bin Laden, claimed credit. In a will dated July 5, 2000, and faxed to Al-Quds Al-Arabi newspaper, Nawar called on his family to contribute to a holy war "with their souls and money." The fax included Nawar's name before the police released the name.

On April 22, 2002, Tunisia blamed the attack on Nawar and a relative living in the country. Police discovered a phone call to Germany by Nawar shortly before the blast. Nawar phoned Christian Ganczarski, age 35, a Polish-born German convert to Islam. Ganczarski asked Nawar if he needed anything, and Nawar replied, "I only need the command."

Soner Nayir: his release from a French prison was demanded by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in October 1986.

Khalid al-Karim Nazzal: Algerian senior official of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who was killed by two gunmen on motorcycles on June 9, 1986, outside his hotel at 87 Alexandra Avenue in Athens, Greece.

Mohamed Nechle: on January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Nechle and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001. The group was arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001.

Mile Nekic: one of six Croatian immigrants who were found guilty of terrorism charges in Sydney, Australia, on February 9, 1981, after a 10-month trial involving 112 witnesses. The terrorists planned to set off bombs to disrupt Sydney's water supply, bomb various travel agencies, bomb a local theater during a performance of Croatian singers and dancers visiting Australia, and bomb properties occupied by Yugoslavia. On February 17, 1981, they were sentenced to 15 years for conspiring to make bombs and to 5 plus years for possessing explosives with intent to cause injury and damage. The sentences, to run concurrently, were to date from their arrest two years earlier.

Klavdhios Neokleous: arrested in November 1977 for sending an EOKA-B letter to the British High Commission in Cyprus in April 1977 threatening that diplomats and servicemen would be kidnapped and killed if Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot in the United Kingdom whose extradition was sought by Cyprus, was surrendered.

Stanko Nizic: night porter in the Kindli Hotel in Zurich, Switzerland, who was killed on August 26, 1981, by a revolver fired at point-blank range. The Yugoslav Danas newspaper reported that police searching his home found two kilograms of plastic explosive, a machine gun, and two bazookas. Police said he was a leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland, into West Germany and Yugoslavia. His collaborators, Bozic and Rados, disappeared after having been seen in the hotel a few hours before the murder.

Nokolov: one of three individuals who, on July 8, 1987, obtained hand grenades, stole a car in Tolbukhin, Bulgaria, and kidnapped two schoolboys. They then set off for the Zlatni Pyasutsi tourist resort. They set off three grenades in front of the International Hotel, injuring three people. After 25 hours of negotiations, the terrorists threw their grenades. Authorities killed two of the terrorists on the spot; the third died the next day of his wounds.

Asir al-Nubani: variant As'ad al-Nubani. Arrested on April 23, 1991, in connection with the explosion of a parcel bomb on April 19, 1991, that killed 7 and injured 10 others at the Patras, Greece, offices of Air Courier Service. The Palestine Liberation Organization had arranged for his surrender to the Ministry of Public Order. His trial began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was sentenced by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992, to life in prison plus 25 years for forming a terrorist group and supplying, making, and transporting a bomb causing loss of human life.

Adnan Ahmad Nuri: one of two hijackers of a British Airways flight from Bombay, India, to London on March 3, 1974. The duo diverted the plane after its Beirut, Lebanon, stopover and demanded to fly to Athens. In Athens, they intended to demand the release of Black September terrorists in the Athens airport attack on August 5, 1974. Greece denied landing permission, so the plane flew to Amsterdam's Schipol Airport in the Netherlands. The terrorists allowed everyone to leave before torching the plane. The two were captured by police. They claimed membership in the Palestine Liberation Army, but later the Organization of Arab Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine claimed credit. On June 6, 1974, a Dutch court convicted them on charges of air piracy and arms violations and sentenced them to five years.

The Palestinian next surfaced on October 26, 1974, when he and another imprisoned Arab terrorist, joined by two Dutch criminals, took 22 hostages in the prison chapel at Scheveningen, Netherlands. Guns had been smuggled into the prison. After a 105-hour siege, police raided the chapel. The Dutch attorney general said the four would be charged with unlawful deprivation of liberty.

Nuri and Sami Houssin Tamimah, his fellow March 3 hijacker, were released on November 24, 1974, and flown to Tunis as part of an agreement reached with four hijackers of a British Airways plane in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, on November 22, 1974. On December 7, 1974, the two terrorists went to Libya with the four hijackers who had demanded their release and five other terrorists released from Egypt. The two hijackers of the VC10 apparently were given their freedom in Libya.

O

---

Cuckovic Obrad: hijacker on July 8, 1959, of a Yugoslav airliner flying from Cattaro (or Kotor), Yugoslavia, to Belgrade, Serbia, that was diverted to Bari, Italy.

Niall O'Brien: Irish Roman Catholic priest who, on February 26, 1983, was charged in the Philippines with the ambush and murder of Pablo Sola, mayor of Kabangalan, on March 10, 1982.

Hamed Obysi: one of two people arrested on August 6, 2005, by Turkish police for links to al Qaeda. Police grabbed Obysi, age 21, at a Turkish border post when he tried to bribe police.

Abdullah Ocalan: founder, in 1974, and leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK), which wants to establish an independent Kurdistan in southern Turkey. He fled the country in 1980 following the military coup and hid in Syria, leaving in 1998. He bounced from country to country, including Italy, which refused Turkey's extradition request eight days after he was arrested at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport on November 12, 1998. He was on trial in absentia in Turkey on charges punishable with a death sentence, including leading a terrorist organization, threatening the country's territorial integrity, and ordering killings. Italy freed him on November 21, 1998. Germany renewed a 1990 warrant for Ocalan, but said it would not seek extradition. The warrant accused him of killing PKK dissidents and staging a series of arson attacks in Germany. He was represented by attorney Giuliano Pisapia.

Ocalan showed up at the Greek Embassy in Kenya. While he was being driven to the Nairobi airport, he was detained by Turkish intelligence and returned to Turkey on February 15, 1999, sparking Kurdish protests throughout Western Europe. He was formally arrested and charged with treason on February 23, 1999. He was sentenced on June 29, 1999, to be hanged for treason and murder. His attorneys appealed the sentence on July 5. On August 3, 1999, Ocalan formally called upon the PKK to end its armed struggle, although he didn't call for disarmament and surrender. On November 25, 1999, the five-judge Turkish appeals court unanimously upheld his death sentence. On January 12, 2000, Turkey stayed his execution pending the European Court of Human Rights ruling on Ocalan's appeal. On October 3, 2002, two months after the Turkish parliament abolished capital punishment, Turkey commuted his death sentence. On February 14, 2007, the Council of Europe rejected his petition for a new trial in Turkey. PKK members frequently called him apo, Kurdish for "uncle."

Ruslan Odizhev: former Taliban-linked detainee at Guantánamo who was killed on June 27, 2007, by Russian security service agents who were trying to arrest him and another man in Kabardino-Balkariya, near Chechnya. He was a suspected in the 1999 bombings of apartment buildings in Moscow and Volgograd and had participated in a 2005 attack on police and government facilities in Nalchik, Kabardino-Balkariya. The attack had been led by Shamil Basayev, who was killed in the shootout. Russian authorities found three homemade bombs on Odizhev's body. He had been captured in Afghanistan and released from Guantánamo in 2004.

Ismail Oezden: charged on May 7, 1990, by the West German Federal Prosecutor's Office in Karlsruhe with membership in the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK). He was believed to be a member of the PKK's European central committee. He was also charged with involvement in the capture and abduction of a former party functionary in July 1987.

Alimuradov Shamil Gadji Ogly: copilot who hijacked his Aeroflot Antonov 24 flying from Nerchinsk to Irkutsk, Russia, on December 19, 1985. The plane landed in Heilongjiang Province, China, where he was taken into custody. The Union of Soviet Socialist Republics requested his return to face air piracy charges. On February 21, 1986, the Chinese government announced that it would try the hijacker. The trial began on March 4, 1986; he was found guilty the next day and sentenced to eight years in prison.

Patrick (Patsy) O'Hara: imprisoned Irish National Liberation Army terrorist who died on May 22, 1981, during the 61st day of his hunger strike in Maze Prison. He was serving an eight-year jail term for possession of explosives. The Commando Patrick O'Hara, a wing of the Red Army Faction, took credit for the February 1, 1985, murder of Ernest Zimmermann, chairman of the board of the Motoren-und Turbinen-Union, in Gauting near Munich, Germany.

Michael Oikonomous: alias of Alexandros Giotopoulos.

Yunus Okut: one of three people arrested after Turkish border police at the Cilvegözü gate from Jordan arrested the driver of a Mercedes carrying 30 kilograms of high explosives. The driver said he had received $400 to drive the car to Turkey. Two Iraqis with Jordanian passports were arrested; police also were searching for a holder of a Jordanian passport. The car's documents were forged.

Rudolf Olma: would-be hijacker, accompanied by his wife and child, of a LOT AN24 flying from Katowice to Warsaw, Poland, on August 24, 1970. He wanted to go to Vienna, Austria, but his bomb accidentally exploded, injuring him and 10 other passengers, tearing off the door of the flight deck, damaging electrical equipment, and setting the plane on fire. The pilot landed safely at Katowice. Olma was sentenced to 25 years on April 8, 1971.

Yusuf Ozer: deportee from West Germany who, on June 28, 1985, attempted to hijack a Turkish Airlines B727 en route from Frankfurt to Istanbul, Turkey. He was disarmed.

Irvan Orlov: retiree and writer, age 65, for the nationalist Russkaya Pravda magazine who, on November 4, 1998, drove a car bomb that went off near a main gate to the Kremlin during the evening, injuring three guards and himself. He apparently planned to drive through the Kremlin's Spassky Gate, which was damaged. Federal Security Service agents interrogated him at the hospital.

Nazmi Ortac: arrested on March 1, 1992, after two individuals threw two hand grenades near the Neve Shalom synagogue in Istanbul, Turkey, slightly injuring a Jewish passerby. Turkish Hizballah was blamed. On April 2, two Hizballah members were sentenced to 39 years by the Istanbul State Security Court.

Laureano Ortega Ortega: top leader of the 1 October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who, on December 5, 1992, was arrested in a shootout with Spanish police in a supermarket parking lot. He and other GRAPO members raided an armored van servicing the supermarket, taking 80 million pesetas. He was carrying false documents when captured.

Fatma Osmancebelioglu: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Paul Otte: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Igor Dmitriyevich Ovechkin: one of several members of the Seven Simeons, an Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, Russia, who, on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad. When the plane touched down at a military airfield outside Leningrad, the hijackers engaged in a gun battle with a rescue team during which 5 of the 11 hijackers, a flight attendant, 3 passengers, and a Leningrad police colonel were killed. Another 35 people were wounded. The hijackers then set off an explosive in the tail of the plane, killing one of the hijackers. Ovechkin escaped out the emergency door but was arrested while trying to hide in a car on the runway. On July 19, 1988, he was charged with "taking a decision together with other members of the family in early 1988 to hijack an aircraft out of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and taking part in implementing this criminal plan." The destruction of the plane cost the state 1,371,948 rubles.

Oleg Ovechkin: one of several members of the Seven Simeons, an Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, Russia, who, on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad. When the plane touched down at a military airfield outside Leningrad, the hijackers engaged in a gun battle with a rescue team during which 5 of the 11 hijackers, a flight attendant, 3 passengers, and a Leningrad police colonel were killed. Another 35 people were wounded. The hijackers then set off an explosive in the tail of the plane, killing one of the hijackers. The destruction of the plane cost the state 1,371,948 rubles.

Olga Dritrieva Ovechkin: one of several members of the Seven Simeons, an Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, Russia, who, on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad. When the plane touched down at a military airfield outside Leningrad, the hijackers engaged in a gun battle with a rescue team during which 5 of the 11 hijackers, a flight attendant, 3 passengers, and a Leningrad police colonel were killed. Another 35 people were wounded. The hijackers then set off an explosive in the tail of the plane, killing one of the hijackers. On July 19, 1988, she was charged with "taking a decision together with other members of the family in early 1988 to hijack an aircraft out of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and taking part in implementing this criminal plan." The destruction of the plane cost the state 1,371,948 rubles.

Vasiliy Ovechkin: one of several members of the Seven Simeons, an Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, Russia, who, on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad. When the plane touched down at a military airfield outside Leningrad, the hijackers engaged in a gun battle with a rescue team during which 5 of the 11 hijackers, a flight attendant, 3 passengers, and a Leningrad police colonel were killed. Another 35 people were wounded. The hijackers then set off an explosive in the tail of the plane, killing one of the hijackers. The destruction of the plane cost the state 1,371,948 rubles.

Ninel Ovechkina: one of several members of the Seven Simeons, an Ovechkin family Dixieland jazz ensemble from Irkutsk, Russia, who, on March 8, 1988, tried to hijack Irkutsk Aviation Enterprise Flight 3739 to London or another Western European city from its scheduled flight from Irkutsk to Kurgan and Leningrad. When the plane touched down at a military airfield outside Leningrad, the hijackers engaged in a gun battle with a rescue team during which 5 of the 11 hijackers, a flight attendant, 3 passengers, and a Leningrad police colonel were killed. Another 35 people were wounded. The hijackers then set off an explosive in the tail of the plane, killing one of the hijackers. The destruction of the plane cost the state 1,371,948 rubles. Ovechkina had earlier been named a Soviet Hero Mother for bearing 10 children. Two of the sons shot her in despair over the failed hijacking and then committed suicide.

Yalcin Ozbey: Turkish drug trafficker jailed in West Germany. On July 17, 1985, public prosecutor Antonio Marini requested the court to attempt to secure his temporary extradition before his jail term ended in mid-September. Ozbey, a member of the Grey Wolves, claimed that Mehmet Ali Agca sought assistance from the Bulgarians but was rebuffed in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981.

Haci Ozdemir: hijacker who gave himself up at the Turkish Embassy in Vienna, Austria, in 1982 after 10 years abroad. In January 1983, the repatriate hijacker appeared before an Istanbul, Turkey, martial law court to face trial for hijacking a Turkish airliner with 71 passengers aboard to Sofia, Bulgaria, in December 1972. He and his three fellow hijackers were tried by a Bulgarian court and sentenced to two plus years in prison. The military prosecutor charged him with hijacking for the purpose of obtaining a prison release of Ziya Yilmaz, Yusuf Kupeli, and other members of the Turkish People's Liberation Party-Front. He was also found guilty of attempting to kill the pilot.

Zervet Ozen: one of three Kurdish terrorists jailed on August 16, 1994, at London's Old Bailey after being convicted on charges of conspiracy to damage property by fire with intent to endanger life and of damaging property by fire. The trio all lived in north London. The resident of Denmark Road, Hornsey, received 12 years for an arson attack on November 4, 1993.

Nahit Ozkaya: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

P

---

Alexandra Di Pace: one of several members of the Union of Communist Fighters of the Italian Red Brigades arrested in Paris on June 15, 1987. She had been living in France under an alias for several years. On November 7, 1987, she was expelled to Spain.

Sergio Padula: member of the Combatant Communist Party on trial in Rome, who attempted to read a handwritten statement in court on September 22, 1988, taking credit for the incident on September 20, 1988, in which the Khalid Akbar Commando of the Red Army Faction and the Italian Red Brigades fired four shots at a car carrying Bonn State Secretary for Finance Hans Tietmeyer.

Pierluigi Pagaliai: Italian neo-Nazi injured in the nape of the neck by a Bolivian policeman's bullet while trying to escape from his surrounded home on October 10, 1982. He was wanted for questioning in the 1980 Bologna, Italy, bombing in which 85 people were killed. He was connected to neo-fascist terrorist leader Stefano Delle Chiaie. He was extradited to Rome but died on November 5, 1982, after remaining in a coma for three weeks.

Ghousror Abdallah Pahhoul: one of five Iranian diplomats arrested in Turkey on October 25, 1988, who were planning to kidnap Said Abu Hassan Mochhadzade, an anti-Khomeini engineer working in Erzincan who reportedly was a member of the People's Mujahedeen. They were to be tried by a state security court in Istanbul State. The press reported that two of the diplomats were members of the Savama Iranian secret police; the other three were members of the embassy's bodyguard team.

Alexander Panaryu: alias used by a man carrying a Cypriot passport who purchased the motorcycle used in a bombing outside a Paris synagogue on October 3, 1980, killing 4 and injuring 12.

Dr. Gianfranco Pancino: leftist doctor who was arrested by French police on December 17, 1987. He was facing 26 years in jail in Italy for kidnapping, possession of explosives, and involvement with armed groups. He worked as a researcher for the previous five years at the St. Louis Hospital in Paris and was arrested at his home after Italian authorities filed for his temporary detention. In May 1987 he was sentenced in absentia to 26 years along with other members of the Workers' Autonomy Movement. On March 19, 1986, he was sentenced to 12 years, and in July 1985, to 10 years, for involvement with the Territorial Communist Cells. In March 1987, he sent a letter to Italian president Francesco Cossiga dissociating himself from terrorism and requesting clemency.

Maurizio Panichi: one of two Italian hijackers of an Olympic Airlines B707 flying from Paris to Athens, Greece, who forced the plane back to Paris on November 8, 1968. They gave the passengers leaflets saying that they were being punished for flying to Greece, whose junta they opposed. He was sentenced to eight months.

Calogero Paolinello: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany, Italy, police. He was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Harallamb Papa: Albanian who was one of seven people arrested on March 19, 1995, by Greek police while preparing to conduct a terrorist attack against a barracks in Longos Gjirokaster. The group was charged with illegally possessing and transporting weapons. They were members of the Northern Epirus Liberation Front, which had been blamed for an April 1994 attack on an Albanian barracks. The group's leader said they were on vacation and accidentally discovered the weapons in a hollow in Dhelvinakion.

Kharalambous Yeoryiou Papakleovoulou: captain in the Cypriot National Guard who was charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Nikos Papanastasio: souvenir shop owner, age 50, who was arrested on July 26, 2002, by Athens, Greece, police who believed that he and Alexandros Giotopoulos, already in custody, were the ideological founders of November 17.

Pappous: alias of Konstandinos Zirinis.

Maria Anna Pasevski: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Ryszard Paszkowski: one of two Polish hijackers of LOT Flight 10116 from Budapest, Hungary, to Warsaw, Poland, on August 25, 1982, that was diverted to Munich, Germany. On February 14, 1983, he was sentenced by the Munich Regional Court.

Vassos Pavlides: alias The Doctor. Chief of the Limassol cell of EOKA-B and leader of the EOKA-B kidnappers of Second Lt. Achilles Kyprianou, son of president Spiro Kyprianou, on December 14, 1977. The kidnappers released the hostage on December 18. Greece announced the next day that it would allow the kidnappers' plane to land at Ellinikon Airport, but they would then have to fly to another country.

Vasos Khristodhoulou Pavlidhis: alias Yiatros. Charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Gunnar Pavlus: exiled Latvian and Swedish citizen who on December 17, 1986, was sentenced by Judge Dieter Bannert of the Vienna Provincial Court for the arson against the Russian monument on Vienna, Austria's Schwarzenbergplatz on November 5, 1986. He was protesting against Soviet policy in the Baltic States. He paid 50,000 schillings for the damage and received a four-month suspended sentence. He returned to Sweden that week.

Pedrycz: one of two young men, one carrying a submachine gun, who on May 14, 1987, attempted to hijack a Gawron sports plane that was warming up at Poland's Gdansk Aeroclub air field. The pilot said he taught Pedrycz how to fly. After switching off the fuel supply, the pilot jumped out of the plane, breaking his collarbone. The plane rose but quickly fell when the engine died out. The hijackers initially escaped, but one was arrested that evening.

Lubomir Peichev: Bulgarian-born accomplice of two Bulgarian-born would-be hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 710, a B737 flying from Sacramento to Hollywood and San Francisco, California, on July 5, 1972. The duo forced the pilot to fly to San Francisco, where they demanded $800,000, two parachutes, and a flight to Siberia. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents carrying the money entered the plane but fired on the hijackers, killing them and a passenger in the crossfire, as well as wounding two others. Peichev was sentenced to concurrent terms of life imprisonment and 20 years on December 21, 1972, for aiding and abetting air piracy and conspiring to interfere with commerce by extortion.

Mursel Peker: hijacker on October 29, 1998, of a Turkish Airlines B737 shortly after it left Adana, Turkey, on a domestic flight. He said he was protesting Turkish military actions against Kurdish rebels. He demanded to fly to Lausanne, Switzerland, but the pilot landed in Ankara, Turkey, to refuel. Special Forces stormed the plane after six hours of negotiations and killed the hijacker.

Plamen Antonov Penchev: on April 6, 1984, Penchev was sentenced in Sofia, Bulgaria, to death by firing squad for sending postal parcels that killed Vasil Vasilev, Stefka Bizheva, Petya Todorova, and two employees at the central post office in Gorna Oryakhovitsa.

Boris Penson: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24.

Barbara Maria Perau: Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on June 22, 1987, and charged with setting off three bombs on August 11, 1986, at a barracks of the Federal Frontier Force in Swistal-Heimerzheim near Bonn, West Germany. On January 20, 1989, the Fifth Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court found the Duisburg resident guilty of bombing the Frontier barracks and the Fraunhofer Institute for Laser Technology in Aachen, Germany, in 1986. She was sentenced to nine years. The State Prosecutor's Office was not able to prove that she was involved with the RAF.

Mladen Perisic: Yugoslav émigré who escaped in West Germany on November 11, 1978, after attacking several Yugoslav citizens in Konstantz, killing one and wounding two.

Andrzej Perka: Pole who hijacked a Polish Airlines LOT Antonov-24 twin-engine prop plane flying from Zielona Gora to Warsaw, Poland, on December 4, 1980, and diverted it to Tempelhof, West Berlin, where he requested political asylum. Poland requested extradition. On March 10, 1981, a West Berlin court rejected Perka's claim that he was escaping secret police oppression in Poland and sentenced him to four years in prison for air piracy.

Pavle Perovic: driver of the getaway car for Marko Krpan, who fired four shots at Yugoslav vice consul in Duesseldorf Vladimir Topic as he was entering his office building on June 28, 1976. None of the shots hit Topic. Perovic and Krpan were later arrested.

Paolo Perpichetti: arrested by police on June 3, 1987, at the Via Giotto, San Saba hideout in Rome of the Red Brigades (RB) and believed involved in the March 20, 1987, assassination by the Union of Communist Fighters, an RB splinter group, of Italian Air Force Gen. Licio Giorgieri, director general of the Defense Ministry's Department of Space and Armaments Procurement.

Marian Pesko: Czech who attempted to hijack a TU-134 scheduled to fly from Poprad to Bratislava, Slovakia, and then on to Prague, Czechoslovakia, on February 18, 1983. Pesko violently attacked an air hostess and tried to enter the cockpit but was injured when he failed to surrender to national security guards. He later died of his injuries.

Frane Pesut: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago, Illinois, on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan, New York City; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 which dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn, New York. The U.S. court of appeals restored two air piracy counts that had been dismissed by a U.S. district court on a motion by the hijackers, who were accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. Pesut was convicted on May 5, 1977, of air piracy and conspiracy and sentenced to 30 years on July 21.

Michael Peters: arrested on November 25, 1992, in Gudow near Moelln, Germany, on suspicion of forming a “rightist terrorist organization” with 10 other purported neo-Nazis. He reportedly attempted on September 5, 1992, to attack the asylum-seekers hostel in Pirtzier, during which time two Molotov cocktails were thrown at police. On December 8, 1993, the five judges of the Second Criminal Bench of the Schleswig Higher Regional Court sentenced him to life in prison on three counts of murder, several counts of attempted murder, and a particularly serious case of arson.

Walter J. Petlikowsky: Polish-born accomplice of Martin Joseph McNally, hijacker of American Airlines Flight 119, a B727 flying the New York–St. Louis–Tulsa route on June 23, 1972. Petlikowsky was arrested on June 30, 1972. He was sentenced to 10 years on May 18, 1973, for aiding and assisting someone sought for air piracy.

Osman Petmezci: Turkish al Qaeda sympathizer, age 25, arrested by German police on September 6, 2002, with his dual-citizen German American fiancée, Astrid Eyzaguirre, age 23. They were planning to bomb the U.S. Army’s European headquarters and other targets in Heidelberg on September 11. Police found 290 pounds of chemicals, 5 pipe bombs, gunpowder, and marijuana plants in their apartment in Walldorf, six miles south of Heidelberg. Police also found a picture of bin Laden, Islamic literature, and a book about bomb making. The chief law enforcement officer for Baden-Wuerttemberg state said the man is a Muslim “who hates Americans and Jews.” The man worked at a chemical warehouse in Karlsruhe.

Eyzaguirre was an assistant manager at the post exchange store (PX) at the U.S. military facility in Heidelberg, which gave her access to many post facilities. The facility hosts the Army headquarters (called Campbell Barracks), the Army’s Fifth Corps headquarters, a small North Atlantic Treaty Organization facility, and hundreds of U.S. service members and their families. She had worked at the base for several years.

Petmezci was born in Germany to Turkish parents and is a Turkish national; Germany does not offer citizenship to people born in the country to non-Germans. He had a criminal record involving theft and drugs.

A Turkish man living below the duo had complained about a strange liquid leaking into his apartment from theirs. He had broken into a red rash on one side of his face. The neighbors also said Petmezci hated Jews.

Police received a tip on the couple in mid-July, but the arrest was delayed for two months. A judge put off questioning a witness, originally scheduled for August 13, because a summons could not be delivered on time. Prosecutors obtained a search warrant on August 30.

Prosecutors said on September 18 that they had not found a link to international terrorists.

As the trial opened on April 11, 2003, Petmezci denied plotting an attack and said the chemicals were intended for making firecrackers. On May 6, he was convicted of illegal possession of explosives, drug violations, stealing gunpowder and chemicals to make liquid potassium nitrate, and other lesser charges. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison. Prosecutors withdrew the terrorism counts, saying there was not "sufficient specificity" to prove the plot against the base. Eyzaguirre was acquitted of the explosives charge but convicted of a drug offense and sentenced to six months. The eight months she already served counted against the sentence.

Michael Petri: member of the German neo-Nazi scene arrested on December 10, 1993, by Mainz, Germany, police in connection with a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993. He was a friend of Arnulf Winfried Priem, later identified as being involved with the letter bombs.

Mustafa Phalivanoglu: right-wing terrorist hanged by the Turkish military junta on October 8, 1980.

Bernard Pientka: hijacker of a Polish Airlines LOT twin-engine AN24 flying from Katowice to Gdansk, Poland, on July 21, 1981, and diverted to Tempelhof Airport in West Berlin. He turned himself over to authorities. Poland demanded extradition, saying he deserved penalties for misdemeanors and for defying alimony warrants. On October 8, 1981, a West Berlin court sentenced him to five years in prison.

Kemal Pir: identified on November 11, 1993, by the Turkish Daily News as a prison escapee and leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) in 1979.

Dariusz Piskorek: would-be hijacker of a Lot flight from Wroclaw to Warsaw, Poland, on August 28, 1986, who was overpowered by flight security officers. On February 27, 1987, he was found guilty and sentenced to five years in prison for the hijacking attempt.

Avyi Platsi: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Mirosław Plewinski: member of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. On September 30, 1982, Poland requested extradition, which Switzerland denied. The trial began on October 3, 1983. On October 10, 1983, he received two and a half years in prison and five years banishment from Switzerland.

Helmut Pohl: one of six suspected Red Army Faction (RAF) members who were arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt, Germany, apartment. He was among the most-wanted terrorists in West Germany. A resident reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling, which was the terrorists' floor. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against U.S. troops' clubs, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. On June 25, 1985, Pohl was charged at the Fifth Criminal Division of the Duesseldorf Provincial High Court with belonging to a terrorist organization, falsifying documents, and violating the firearms law. He was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977. He was sentenced to life in prison on 17 counts of attempted joint murder.

He organized a prison hunger strike by 38 RAF terrorists that began on February 1, 1989. The prisoners took two-week shifts during the strike; he was due to join the strike again on April 12, 1989. On August 1, 1995, he was one of nine imprisoned RAF members who announced the start of a three-day hunger strike to protest the planned execution in the United States of Mumia Abu Jamal, who was convicted of killing a police officer. He was pardoned on May 18, 1998, a month after RAF members announced that they had given up their leftist campaign.

Rolf Pohl: lawyer who was sentenced to six years for belonging to the Baader-Meinhof Gang. He was convicted in 1974 in West Germany of conspiracy, forgery, and fraud. He was freed during the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. Pohl and several other freed terrorists entered a plane on March 3 that was denied landing privileges in Tripoli, Libya; Beirut, Lebanon; Damascus, Syria; and Amman, Jordan. The People's Democratic Republic of Yemen finally granted them political asylum. On May 27, 1976, he arrived in Athens, Greece, on a false Peruvian passport. After his arrival from Corfu, he was identified from photographs brought to Athens by West German policemen after his arrest on July 2, 1976. A lower court ruled that he was not covered by the 1907 Greek-German extradition agreements because his acts were those of a genuine revolutionary, not a criminal. The Greek Supreme Court overturned the decision. He was flown to Munich on October 1, 1976, to complete his six-and-a-half-year sentence. On October 21, 1977, police discovered that a room to which Andreas Baader, Jan-Carl Raspe, Gudrun Ensslin, and Irmgard Moeller had access had nine ounces of explosives hidden under a floor molding; the cell had been occupied by Pohl.

Yusuf Polat: charged in a Turkish court on November 29, 2003, as being an accomplice in the November 15, 2003, suicide truck bombings of two Turkish synagogues that killed 25 people and injured 303. He was captured trying to cross into Iran. He told police he had surveilled the Beth Israel synagogue for its weakest point. He told police he and the two bombers were "followers of Osama bin Laden." He told the truck's driver, Mesut Cabuk, that the rear entrance was easier and "you can come now. May your campaign for Islam be blessed." Police found Polat using Cabuk's prepaid cell phone card that was found in the debris. Polat had fought in Chechnya.

Georg Polyak: one of seven anti-Communist Hungarian students who, on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Viktor Popelka: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Ostrava to Prague that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Luciano Porcari: self-professed Communist Italian auto mechanic who hijacked an Iberia Airlines B727 flying from Barcelona to Palma de Mallorca on March 14, 1977, demanding to go to Abidjan, Ivory Coast, where he was given $140,000 by the government and his daughter Margarita, age three, from his former African mistress. The plane bounced around Algeria, Spain, and Italy, where several passengers were released. His estranged wife, Isabella Zavoli, refused to give him their daughter Consuelo, age five. He distributed $50,000 of the money to the passengers. He turned down negotiation attempts by his mother and brother. He flew to Zurich, Switzerland, circled Turin, Italy, and flew to Warsaw, Poland. He received permission to fly to Moscow, but an exhausted pilot balked.

Porcari flew to Zurich, where he was overpowered by a Spanish policeman and two Swiss police. On August 6, 1981, he sent threatening letters to hijack a second plane unless he was given the $250,000 he supposedly was granted during the 1977 hijacking. He had been serving a 10-year prison sentence for the hijacking and failed to return to a Zurich prison from compassionate leave.

Jaroslav Porer: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child. They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody, and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Dinos Khristodhoulou Poyiatzis: charged by Limassol, Cyprus, authorities on June 9, 1978, with conspiring between January 1, 1977, and April 8, 1978, to use explosives to damage the premises of political parties and foreign embassies and to use firearms against individuals.

Vitaly M. Pozdeyev: one of two hijackers of an Aeroflot IL14 flying the Kerchi–Krasnodar–Sevastopol domestic route on October 27, 1970. He and fellow student and cousin Nikolai Gilev requested asylum when the plane landed at Akliman, Sinop, Turkey. They were extradited to the Soviet Union. In September 1972, one was sentenced to 10 years and the other to 13 years.

Andreas Ppouris: arrested in November 1977 for sending an EOKA-B letter to the British High Commission in Cyprus in April 1977 threatening that diplomats and servicemen would be kidnapped and killed if Kiriakos Kakis, a Greek Cypriot in the United Kingdom whose extradition was sought by Cyprus, was surrendered.

Erik Prauss: on December 18, 1987, arrested by Duesseldorf police on suspicion of membership in the Red Army Faction and participating in the bombing of the Dornier works in Immenstaad on Lake Constance on July 25, 1986, causing 1.3 million marks damage. On January 18, 1989, the Fifth Criminal Division of the Stuttgart Higher Regional Court sentenced him to nine years.

Rudolf Preskalo: one of three Croatian men who hijacked Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130, a DC9 flying from Göteborg to Stockholm, Sweden, on September 15, 1972. The group forced the plane to Malmo. They demanded the release of seven Croatians in Swedish jails, including the two who had been convicted of the 1971 murder of Yugoslav Ambassador Rolovic. The terrorists demanded $200,000, but settled for $105,000 and six prisoners—a seventh refused release. They flew on to Spain. On December 5, 1974, a Spanish military court sentenced the three hijackers to 12 years in prison, but on February 13, 1975, Gen. Franco granted them a full pardon. Sweden's extradition request initiated Spanish legal proceedings. On June 12, 1974, the Audiencia Provincial dismissed the extradition request.

William Libero Prevato: Italian charged with Organized Communist Movement terrorist activities. On August 24, 1985, the Nicaraguan Supreme Court rejected Italy's extradition request.

Arnulf Winfried Priem: Berlin-based leader of the underground National Socialist German Workers Party/Foreign Organization, an affiliate of the Austrian Parliamentary Opposition Loyal to the People, who was identified on December 12, 1993, by the German media as a mastermind of a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993.

Marie Prochazkova: one of eight hijackers of a Czechoslovakian National Airlines IL14 flying from Karlovy Vary to Prague on June 8, 1970, and diverted to Nuremburg, Germany. The four men and four women were accompanied by a child.

They surrendered and asked for asylum. They were taken into police custody, and because they were carrying arms, they were sentenced to 8 to 30 months.

Milan Prpic: one of five individuals who were charged with the September 27, 1981, hijacking by German-speaking Croatians of a Yugoslavian National Airlines B737 flying from Dubrovnik to Belgrade, Serbia. The group demanded to be flown to Tel Aviv, Israel. The plane refueled at Ellinikon International Airport, then landed at Larnaca, Cyprus, after the Israelis refused landing privileges. The hijackers surrendered to police and were quickly extradited to Yugoslavia. The group was tried on February 9, 1982, in the Belgrade District Court.

Maria Purgall: Polish wife of Zbigniew Purgall, who joined her in hijacking a Bulgarian Tupolev 134 carrying 76 people from Burgas, Bulgaria, to Warsaw, Poland, on October 14, 1982, and diverted it to Vienna's Schwechat International Airport in Austria, where they surrendered and requested political asylum. On November 18, 1982, she was given a one-year suspended sentence for conspiracy.

Zbigniew Purgall: Polish husband of Maria Purgall, who, with his wife, hijacked a Bulgarian Tupolev 134 carrying 76 people from Burgas, Bulgaria, to Warsaw, Poland, on October 14, 1982, and diverted it to Vienna's Schwechat International Airport in Austria, where they surrendered and requested political asylum. On November 18, 1982, he was sentenced to two years in prison.

Q

---

Samir Qadar: on March 2, 1989, Hamburg's Bild claimed that the Libyan was the mastermind of the December 21, 1988, Lockerbie bombing of Pan American World Airways Flight 103 that killed 270 people. The paper claimed that he had killed Egyptian journalist Yusuf Sebai in Cyprus on February 12, 1978, and was released from prison in 1982 after Abu Nidal threats. It claimed he organized the attacks on the U.S. Embassy and a synagogue in Rome in 1983 that killed 37; the attack on Leonardo da Vinci Airport in Rome on Christmas 1985; the September 5, 1986, hijacking of a Pan Am plane in Karachi; and the June 11, 1988, City of Poros shipjacking. In 1986, he married a Finnish woman and moved to Stockholm, Sweden.

Samir Muhammad Ahmad al-Qadir: variant Samir Muhammad Ahmad Khudayr; aliases 'Ajjab Jabalah, Michel Nabih Raphael, Zahir al-Rabi'. On February 21, 1994, a Swedish court issued a warrant for al-Qadir's arrest. He was suspected of being the mastermind in the shipjacking of the Achille Lauro in the Mediterranean on October 7, 1985, in which U.S. citizen Leon Klinghoffer was murdered. Al-Qadir settled in Sweden in 1986 under another name. He was an operations officer of the Abu Nidal group. On February 27, 1992, French Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant for him in connection with the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged him with murder and attempted murder. The Palestinian carried a Libyan passport. He was identified by Doha's al-Sharq on March 19, 1993, as a former member of the Abu Nidal Group and a prominent member of its intelligence group. He was purged after he was suspected of contacting an Arab country's intelligence agency. Some reports indicate that he was killed in Athens, Greece, by a car bomb in 1988.

Abu Bakr Qaidah: Egyptian Arab Afghan who was killed in the raid by Ibn Khattab's Chechen and Arab Afghans on December 22, 1997, against the Russian Army's 136th Mechanized Brigade General Command.

Tal'at Fu'ad Qasim: alias Abu-Talal al-Qasimi. Media spokesperson for the Egyptian Islamic Group who was arrested on September 12, 1995, by Croatian authorities after he had escaped from Denmark to a military zone in Bosnia-Herzegovina. Cairo requested his extradition on September 14. Egypt's Higher Military Court passed a death sentence against him in December 1992 in the "returnees from Afghanistan" case. He had been charged in the al-Jihad case of 1981 and spent three years in jail. He then left for an unnamed Arab country and then moved to Peshawar, Pakistan, where he published the magazine Al-Murabitun. He obtained political asylum in Pakistan in 1992. He traveled to several European and African countries, including Sudan, during the next three years. He later changed his name to Ibrahim Ya'qub 'Izzat. On September 25, 1995, the Vanguard of Islamic Conquest threatened "severe" reprisals against Croatia and Egypt if he was extradited to Egypt. Croatia announced that he had left the country for an unknown destination on September 18. On October 20, 1995, the Egyptian Gama'at members who set off a car bomb in the parking lot of the police department of Primorje-Gorani in Rijeka, Croatia, killing 1 person and injuring 29, demanded his release. On October 25, London's al-Hayah reported that the Danish government had been informed that Qasim was abducted from Croatia, possibly by the Israelis, who took him to France.

Isma'il al-Qaysiyah: Palestinian Islamic Jihad member whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was sentenced by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992, to four and a half years.

R

---

S.R.: one of two Czechs, age 17, detained on September 13, 1989, by the Czechoslovakia National Security Corps before they were able to initiate their plan to hijack an aircraft from Prague to the West.

Bosko Radonjic: one of three members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), an anti-Communist Serbian émigré group arrested in New York City by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington, D.C. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges. Radonjic was found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago, Illinois. He had pleaded guilty and was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

Rados: associate of Stanko Nizic, a night porter in the Kindli Hotel in Zurich, Switzerland, who was killed on August 26, 1981, by a revolver fired at point-blank range. The Yugoslav Danas newspaper reported that police searching his home found two kilograms of plastic explosive, a machine gun, and two bazookas. Police said he was a leader of a Croatian terrorist network that was smuggling arms from Switzerland into West Germany and Yugoslavia. Rados was seen in the hotel hours before the murder and then vanished.

Salman Raduyev: leader of the Chechen militia group Lone Wolf, which took 2,000 civilians hostage in Kizlyar, Russia, on January 9, 1996. He took credit for the February 9, 1998, attack on the seven-car motorcade of Georgian president Eduard Shevardnadze that killed two bodyguards and one attacker.

Captain Rafat: alias of Ali Shafik Ahmed Taha.

Ibrahim Abdul Azis Raghif: alias Abu Safwat. Member of Fatah's office in Beirut, Lebanon, who was assassinated in Cyprus on December 15, 1979, by a gunman who ran off. Israel said he was in Cyprus to organize raids against Egyptian and Israeli targets.

'Alayni 'Abd al-Rahim: Palestinian who, on March 13, 1984, was chased down in front of the Israeli Embassy in Palaion Psikhikon, an Athens suburb, and found to be carrying a loaded pistol. He confessed that he and four other members of the Lebanese National Resistance Front intended to assassinate Yehezkel Barnea, the Israeli chargé d'affaires in Greece. He had made an earlier trip to Athens on February 2 and stayed until March 2 to plan the assassination. His Moroccan passport said he was born in Tripoli, Lebanon. On March 15, 1984, he was charged with the attempted assassination and jailed to await trial. On April 19, 1984, the trial was postponed indefinitely while the judicial decision on his indictment was translated into Arabic.

Saleh Abder Rahman: Jordanian and one of three Action Group for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who attempted to hijack an El Al B707 in Munich, Germany, on February 10, 1970. They were thwarted in their attempt and threw hand grenades at a shuttle bus and the transit lounge. He was injured when he crashed through a skylight attempting to escape. The trio was charged with murder, but they were freed during the September 6, 1970, multiple hijacking by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which had claimed credit for the attack, as did the Action Organization for the Liberation of Palestine.

‘Arif Ahmad Raja: one of two Lebanese hijackers of a Romanian B707 chartered by the Libyan Arab Airways to fly from Athens to Tripoli, Libya, on June 23, 1983. The hijackers demanded to be flown to Beirut, Lebanon. The plane landed in Rome to refuel, and they were denied landing permission in Beirut. After hopscotching, the plane landed at Larnaca Airport in Cyprus. The hijackers demanded to go to Tehran, Iran. The hijackers surrendered. The hijackers were members of a Shi’ite Moslem militia group who wanted an independent investigation to look into the 1978 disappearance in Libya of Musa as-Sadr, the group’s spiritual leader. On August 2, 1983, the hijackers were sentenced to seven years in jail after pleading guilty in a Nicosia court.

Anton Rajah: London-based spokesperson for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in May 1991 who said that his group was not responsible for the murder of Rajiv Gandhi, India’s former prime minister, on May 22, 1991.

Husham Mohammed Rajih: arrested on August 29, 1981, by Austrian police after he attacked a synagogue, killing 2 and injuring 20. The Iraqi confessed to the May 1, 1981, murder in Austria of Heinz Nittel, president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, a leading Socialist Party official, and head of the Vienna Traffic Department. Abu Nidal’s Al Asifah organization claimed credit for the assassination. Rajih had lived in Austria since December 1978 and was a student at Vienna’s technical university. He was sentenced by a Vienna, Austria, court to life in prison on January 21, 1982, for the Nittel murder.

‘Ali al-Ajafli Ramadan: variant of Ali Ecefli Ramadan.

Ali Ecefli Ramadan: variant ‘Ali al-Ajafli Ramadan. One of two Libyans who, when stopped by police on April 18, 1986, in front of the U.S. officer’s club in Ankara, Turkey, threw away a bag containing six grenades and ran. They were apprehended. The attack was to occur during a wedding party attended by 100 people. The terrorists were aided by a Libyan diplomat at the local embassy. On April 28, 1986, the duo was charged with conspiracy to kill a group of people and with smuggling arms. The duo entered Turkey on April 16, 1986, and contacted Umran Mansur, manager of the Libyan Arab Airlines office in Istanbul. He allegedly selected the target. The grenades were supplied by Mohammad Shaban Hassan, a Libyan Embassy employee in charge of administrative affairs who met with the duo on April 17 and 18. The trial began on May 13, 1986, in the State Security Court. On June 7, 1986, he was convicted of possession of explosives and was sentenced to five years in prison. The duo was acquitted of the more serious conspiracy charges. The Court of Appeals revoked the decision on the grounds that they were not punished for establishing an organization for the aim of committing a crime. During a retrial, the court insisted on its previous decision, causing a second revocation by the Court of Appeals Criminal Assembly. On April 14, 1988, Ramadan was sentenced to eight years and four months in prison for establishing an armed organization with the purpose of killing more than one person. He was also fined 62,500 Turkish lira.

Ghalib Ramadan: resident of Ayios Pavlos, Nicosia, Cyprus, who, on February 1, 1990, was arrested along with a member of the Palestine Liberation Organization diplomatic mission to Cyprus following a police chase after the duo was involved in a nighttime shooting involving machine guns in the Ayios Dhometios area while trying to sell heroin and hashish.

Jose Carlos Ramos Mateos: arrested by Spanish police in Valladolid on May 14, 1983, on suspicion of membership in the 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, an ultra right-wing group formed to protest the Socialist Party's electoral victory.

Hussein Muhammed al Rashid: one of two Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists who threw grenades and fired submachine guns at a crowd waiting to board El Al Flight 582, a B707 bound for Tel Aviv, Israel, from Istanbul, Turkey, on August 11, 1976. They killed 4 and wounded 26 before surrendering. They claimed Libya had financed the operation. On November 16, 1976, a Turkish court sentenced them to death but commuted the sentences to life in prison. His release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa Flight 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, Germany, on October 13, 1977.

Mohammed Rashid: arrested in 1973 for smuggling hashish in Greece and served three years of a six-year term. He was arrested in Greece on May 30, 1988, while entering the country on a forged Syrian passport in the name of Mohammed Hamdan. On June 13, 1988, the United States requested extradition in connection with charges stemming from the August 11, 1982, explosion on board Pan American World Airways Flight 830 from Honolulu, Hawaii, to Tokyo, Japan, that killed a Japanese teen and wounded 15 other passengers. He was also suspected of planting a bomb on a Trans World Airlines flight from Rome to Athens, Greece, in April 1986 that killed four Americans. Greece denied the extradition request for that incident on June 6, 1988. On July 14, 1988, the Palestinian was sentenced by the First Magistrates Court in Athens to seven months in Koridhallos Prison on the passport charge. He was believed to be a member of the Abu Nidal group or a group run by Mohammed Abdel Ali Labib (alias Colonel Hawari). On August 3, 1988, the Supreme Court Council in Athens rejected his appeal of his seven-month sentence.

On October 10, 1988, the appeals court announced that the council had ruled in favor of extradition to the United States. On October 28, 1988, during the extradition hearing, the Direct Revolutionary Action for the Liberation of Palestine told Reuters, "We warn the Greek government against continuing to hold our struggling brother Mohammed Rashid and extraditing him to the American authorities. All Greek governmental, civilian, and diplomatic institutions in Greece as well as outside will be the target of attacks." On November 16, 1988, the Supreme Court requested more evidence from the United States regarding his identity. On March 28, 1989, the Piraeus Court of Appeals sentenced him to eight months for possession of arms inside the prison where he was being detained. On September 13, 1990, deputy prime minister Athanasios Kanellopoulos announced that he would not be extradited but would be tried in Greece. On September 18, 1990, the Athens prosecutor brought criminal charges of premeditated manslaughter, provocation, and illegal capture of an aircraft against Rashid. The trial began on October 7, 1991, with charges of premeditated manslaughter, seizing an airplane, and planting a bomb on an airplane.

On January 7, 1992, a three-member Greek criminal court sentenced him to 18 years in prison for premeditated manslaughter and damaging an airplane. The court ordered that he be deprived of his civil rights for five years and deported after completion of his sentence. The 43 months he had already served were to be subtracted from his sentence. Two of the three judges found him guilty of voluntary homicide but the third declared him innocent because of lack of proof of identity. He was found innocent of charges of an act of violence against an aircraft and of actually placing the bomb. On November 21, 1992, his trial in Greece was adjourned. On March 3, 1993, a five-member court began hearings in Koridhallos, western Athens's top security prison, on his bid to overturn his 18-year sentence. His appeal had been postponed several times because of a lawyers' strike. On June 18, 1993, a Greek appeals court cut his sentence to 15 years. On December 9, 1994, the Supreme Court rejected his application to overturn the verdict by the Athens Appeals Court that sentenced him in June 1994 to 15 years for premeditated manslaughter and causing damage to an airplane.

On December 4, 1996, a Greek court released him from Athens's Korydallos Prison. He was then deported to Tunisia. Greece had rejected a U.S. extradition request. The United States pointed out that Rashid was the ringleader of a prison riot and that his cell had been found full of contraband and weapons. Rashid was arrested apparently in Egypt, on June 2, 1997, and flown to the United States. On June 3, 1997, he was arraigned in a U.S. court in Washington, D.C., on a nine-count indictment for conspiracy to murder, assault, and aircraft sabotage. He pleaded not guilty and claimed he was being subjected to double jeopardy because the Greek court had convicted him in 1992. U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson ordered him held for a hearing. The indictment also named as an accomplice Rashid's wife, Christine Pinter (alias Fatima), who remained at large. U.S. officials had earlier accused him of planting a bomb, which did not explode, on a Pan Am plane in Brazil in 1982 and of setting off a bomb on a Trans World Airlines plane approaching Athens in 1986 that killed four Americans. He said it was a case of mistaken identity, claiming to be Rashid Salah Mohammed Alzagahary of Palestine. He was believed to be a member of the Iraq-based Arab Organization of May 15 terrorist group. The prosecution said it would seek life in prison. In December 2002, he secretly pleaded guilty to conspiracy and murder charges.

On March 24, 2006, he was sentenced by U.S. district judge Royce C. Lamberth to seven years for setting off a bomb on Pan Am Flight 830. He also was detained for two years in Egypt. He was due to be released in 2013 and deported.

Mohammed Hussein Rashid: alias Youssef Awad. Arrested after confessing to the April 10, 1983, assassination of 'Isam as-Sartawi, Palestine Liberation Organization representative at the Socialist International Conference held in Albufeira, Portugal. Abu Nidal claimed credit, as did the Antiterrorist Iberian Command. The Abu Nidal group threatened Portuguese interests and citizens worldwide if he was not released. On January 11, 1984, he was acquitted of the murder charge and sentenced to three years for using a forged passport. During the trial, he had claimed that his confession was meant to draw attention away from the true killers. In June 1984, the Supreme Court overturned the lower court's acquittal. On May 10, 1985, a second trial acquitted him of murder and sentenced him to three years for using a false passport.

Jan-Carl Raspe: one of the principal members of the Baader-Meinhof group, also known as the Red Army Faction (RAF) in West Germany. He was captured on June 1, 1972, after a gunfight with Frankfurt police. His release was demanded by the Socialist Patients' Collective who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm, Sweden, on April 24, 1975.

He was one of three RAF members sentenced to life in prison on April 28, 1977, by a five-man tribunal in Stuttgart, Germany, for the murders of four U.S. soldiers in bombings of U.S. installations in Frankfurt and Heidelberg in May 1972. Raspe was in poor physical condition as a result of a hunger strike. The three were also convicted of 34 counts of attempted murder and of joining in a criminal conspiracy and were sentenced to life plus 15 years. The counts included bomb attacks on two police stations, a publishing house, and a judge's car and the attempted murder of policemen during a shootout when they were arrested. Their attorney, Otto Schilly, argued that their actions had been legitimate protests against the Vietnam War and that they should be treated as prisoners of war.

Raspe's release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of Air France Flight 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe, Uganda, and by the RAF kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. His release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa Flight 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt on October 13, 1977. Raspe committed suicide in Stammheim Prison in Stuttgart on October 18, 1977, hours after the Lufthansa rescue in Somalia by the West German GSG9 team. Raspe died from a bullet wound shortly after being found shot in his cell.

Musayev Tamerlan Rasulovich: alias Demyan. Azerbaijani who, on February 20, 1993, hijacked an Aeroflot twin-engine Tupolev-134A from Siberia to St. Petersburg, saying he wanted to go to the United States. His Georgian wife, Marina Shotayevna Musayeva, sat quietly in the back of the plane with their baby boy. The plane flew to Tallinn, Estonia, and on to Sweden, where he surrendered. On February 25, Russia requested extradition of the couple. On June 10, Sweden announced that the couple and their child would be extradited. On June 16, Marina was hospitalized, having slashed her wrists at the decision. Their request for political asylum in Sweden was rejected.

Khalil Said Ratib: arrested on September 27, 1981, by Larnaca Airport police in connection with the Black June attack in which a grenade was thrown into the Shoham, Limassol, Cyprus, offices of the Israeli shipping firm on September 23, 1981, injuring three female and two male Greek Cypriot employees.

Guenther Maria Rausch: suspected member of the Red Army Faction who gave himself up to a West German Embassy in a neighboring country on October 18, 1983.

Fabio Ravalli: on April 21, 1988, Italian magistrates issued a warrant for him on charges of complicity to commit murder and belonging to an illegal armed organization in connection with the April 16, 1988, assassination by the Fighting Communist Union Party of university professor and Christian Democratic senator Roberto Ruffilli in Forli. Ravalli had spent a decade in jail on common criminal charges and was released in 1981. Rome police arrested 21 members of the Fighting Communist Party, including Ravalli and his wife, Maria Cappello, on September 7, 1988.

'Arif Rayya: Lebanese prisoner said to be in ill health whose release was demanded on February 7, 1985, by the hijackers of a Cyprus Airways B707 in Lebanon. He was not released by Cypriot officials.

Tomislav Rebrina: leader of three Croatian men who hijacked Scandinavian Airlines Flight 130, a DC9 flying from Göteborg to Stockholm, Sweden, on September 15, 1972. The group forced the plane to Malmo. They demanded the release of seven Croatians in Swedish jails, including the two who had been convicted of the 1971 murder of Yugoslav Ambassador Rolovic. The terrorists demanded $200,000 but settled for $105,000 and six prisoners—a seventh refused release. They flew on to Spain. On December 5, 1974, a Spanish military court sentenced the three hijackers to 12 years in prison, but on February 13, 1975, Gen. Franco granted them a full pardon. Sweden's extradition request initiated Spanish legal proceedings.

On June 12, 1974, the Audiencia Provincial dismissed the extradition request.

The Red Countess: Fiora Pirri Ardizzoni, an aristocratic leftist and wife of Franco Piperno, leader of the Workers' Autonomy Movement of Italy.

Jaromir Rehak: Rehak joined his father Vladimir and his brother Vladimir Jr. in hijacking a Czechoslovakian IL14 flying from Prague to Bratislava and diverting it to Vienna, Austria, where the trio requested political asylum. Czechoslovakia requested extradition.

Vladimir Rehak: father who joined his two sons in hijacking a Czechoslovakian IL14 flying from Prague to Bratislava and diverting it to Vienna, Austria, where the trio requested political asylum. Czechoslovakia requested extradition.

Vladimir Rehak Jr.: Rehak joined his father Vladimir and his brother Jaromir in hijacking a Czechoslovakian IL14 flying from Prague to Bratislava and diverted to Vienna, Austria, where the trio requested political asylum. Czechoslovakia requested extradition.

Ralf Reinders: suspected leader of the Movement 2 June of West Germany who was arrested in September 1975. His release was demanded in June 1976 by the Entebbe, Uganda, hijackers and by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On September 28, 1977, the West German Federal Prosecutor's Office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and kidnapped Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978.

Gaz Resuli: one of two Albanian immigrants, age 24, who, on December 15, 2004, armed with shotguns, hijacked a bus with 26 passengers just after midnight and held it for 18 hours before surrendering to police. The duo claimed to have explosives and demanded a $1.3 million ransom and safe passage out of Greece. Relatives were permitted to phone the duo and talk them out of the incident. Negotiators had talked the duo into releasing the passengers by twos and threes until they were down to only six hostages. The duo then set an 8:00 A.M. December 16 deadline for their demands to be met. But four hours after the duo set the deadline, they opened the doors and freed the rest of the hostages. They soon surrendered. They were charged with multiple counts of kidnapping and attempted murder. The two are house painters who had resided in Greece for seven years. They were jailed without bond pending a December 20 arraignment.

Torsten Retta: arrested on March 11, 1985, for the bombing of the photo department of the Hertie department store in Dortmund, West Germany, on March 7, 1985. He confessed that he had planted the bomb "for the fun of a big bang." The Action Christian Klar claimed credit.

Thomas Reuter: one of two Baader-Meinhof Gang members sent to Kenya to find out what happened to their Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) colleagues who were arrested by authorities at Nairobi's Embakasi International Airport on January 25, 1976. The colleagues had SAM-7 heat-seeking missiles and planned to bring down a Johannesburg, South Africa, to Tel Aviv, Israel, El Al flight. They were arrested before they could carry out their plan. Reuter and companion Brigitta Schultz were arrested. Orders to the terrorists were inscribed on Schultz's stomach in invisible ink. The Israelis announced that they would try the group in secret. The release of the terrorists was demanded by the PFLP hijackers of an Air France plane to Entebbe, Uganda, on June 27, 1976. On December 23, 1980, Israel granted him amnesty. His five-year prison term would have ended in February.

Samir Rhadir: Jordanian sentenced to death in Nicosia, Cyprus, for the February 18, 1978, Black June assassination of Yusef el-Sebai. In April 1978, Cyprus's High Commission in London received a phone call warning that the building would be blown up if the killers were executed.

Abbas Rhayel: Lebanese asylum seeker in Germany and Hizballah member who, on September 17, 1992, shot to death four Democratic Party of Kurdistan politicians in Berlin's Mykonos restaurant at the behest of the Iranians. On April 10, 1997, a German tribunal sentenced Rhayel to life in prison.

Christian Riha: variants Riher, Reher. Skinhead, age 16, arrested on May 30, 1993, by German police on charges of murder and arson in connection with the May 29, 1993, arson by right-wing skinheads of a Turkish family's three-story house in Solingen, killing 5 people and injuring 10 other Turks, including a six-month-old infant. A Duesseldorf investigator said he had been setting fires since he was eight years old. He lived across from the Turkish family. Police knew of him from a series of forest fires and urban crimes. He was also a soccer hooligan who participated in beatings of Turks in Solingen. He was a member of the German Combat Sports Initiative in the Solingen District of Graefarth in der Freiheit 22. It is a subgroup of the German Athletic Combat Arts Association, backed by the since-banned Nationalistic Front. On December 30, 1993, he was one of four right-wing youths charged with 5 counts of murder, 14 counts of attempted murder, and aggravated arson. On October 13, 1995, he was sentenced by Duesseldorf presiding judge Wolfgang Steffen to 10 years in prison for the killings.

Christian Riher: variant of Christian Riha.

Bruno Rivera: Italian charged in the People's Revolutionary Solidarity car bombing near the Saudi Embassy in Athens on April 13, 1983. He had rented the car.

'Umar Muhammad 'Ali al-Rizaq: sole surviving Egyptian Revolution hijacker of Egyptair Flight 648 that left Athens bound for Cairo, Egypt, on November 23, 1985. The terrorists executed several passengers before a government rescue operation. The final death toll was 61, with another 26 injured. Egypt requested extradition on November 27, 1985; the request was denied on December 4, 1985. On December 12, 1985, al-Rizaq was charged in Malta with two murders, hijacking sequestration, and attempted murder. He arrived in Athens in the morning on November 23 on a flight from Tripoli, Libya, and had met the other two hijackers only 30 minutes before the attack. He pleaded not guilty on January 6, 1986.

J. Rodrigues Reis: one of two deserters from the Portuguese Army who hijacked an Angolan Air Taxi general aviation craft scheduled to fly from Luanda to Cabinda, Angola, on June 12, 1971, and diverted it to Pointe Noire in the Republic of the Congo.

Juan Alberto Rodriguez Martin: arrested by Spanish police in Valladolid on May 14, 1983, on suspicion of membership in the 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, an ultra right-wing group formed to protest the Socialist Party's electoral victory.

Bernd Roesner: variant of Bernard Maria Roessner.

Bernard Maria Roessner: variants Bernd Roesner, Bernd Rossner. One of six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. They initially claimed they were members of the Holger Meins Commando who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm, Sweden, on April 24, 1975, and killed Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, the military attaché, and Heinz Hillegart, the economic counselor. The Collective members' release demand included Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof, Gudrun Ensslin, and Jan-Carl Raspe. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing 1 of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Roessner was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison. His release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. Roessner engaged in a prison hunger strike in early 1985. He was part of a RAF hunger strike by 38 prisoners that began on February 1, 1989. On March 28, 1989, Die Welt speculated that four sick or feeble prisoners, including Roessner, might be released before the end of their prison terms. In May 1994, outgoing German president Richard von Weizsaecker pardoned him after serving 19 years.

Helga Roos: Frankfurt student arrested on October 19, 1981, in connection with the Red Army Faction's firing of two RPG-7s on September 15, 1981, at the armored Mercedes of U.S. Army in Europe Cdr. Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen.

Bernhard Rosenkoeter: Red Army Faction member who was released early on March 13, 1993. He was serving five years for an arson attack against a Renault branch.

Bernd Rossner: variant of Bernard Maria Roessner.

Andrew Rowe: British citizen of Jamaican descent and a convert to Islam who was sentenced to 15 years in September 2005 by a British court. He had used a cover of a traveling cell phone salesman and used references to Nokia phone models as code words for terrorist communications. Police believed that he was planning, with fellow Bosnian War veteran Lionel Dumont, a major attack in Europe. The duo met in a Frankfurt hotel in August 2003; Dumont was spending time there with his new German wife. The duo met again in Frankfurt, but Rowe was under U.K. and German surveillance. Police raided his London home during Rowe's travels and found instructions on how to fire mortar shells and a code book. Rowe was arrested while boarding a Chunnel train on the French coast. His socks in his luggage bore traces of explosives, including TNT.

Ciro Rozzato: member of the Red Brigades who was killed in the fall of 1983 during an armed attack on a French bank executed by Direct Action.

Fawzi Hamza al-Rubay': Mujahedin opponent of the Iraqi regime expelled by France to Baghdad. He had been pardoned by Iraq on March 12, 1986, following French intervention. On August 27, 1986, the Al-Rafidayn Vanguard of the Hizbollah in Iraq kidnapped an Iraqi, Kamil Abd al-Husayn al-Zubaydi, in Cyprus and said they would exchange him in Beirut, Lebanon, for al-Rubay' and Muhammad Hasan Khayr al-Din.

Mario Rudela: one of two Croatian nationalists who were killed on May 23, 1979, when a pipe bomb they were transporting accidentally exploded in their pickup truck in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California.

Sheamus Ruddy: one of two Irishmen arrested on February 1, 1979, in Greece after crossing the Turkish border. Ruddy was from Belfast but held a Republic of Ireland passport. They were charged with “smuggling, possession and transportation of arms and explosives with the intention of supplying terrorist groups.” The duo was believed to belong to the Provisional Irish Republican Army, for which they faced 10 years. The U.K. consul said he could not request extradition because they were not wanted for any offense in the United Kingdom.

Mohamed Rustin: Syrian member of a hijacking trio who took over Royal Dutch Airlines Flight 366, a DC9 flying from Malaga, Spain, to Amsterdam, Netherlands, on September 4, 1976. The plane landed in Tunis and Cyprus for refueling. While circling off Israel’s shore, the trio demanded the release by Israel of eight prisoners, including Kozo Okamoto and Archbishop Hilarion Capucci. The trio surrendered in Cyprus. They claimed they were members of a Libyan-based Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine unit. They were believed to have obtained asylum in an undisclosed country.

Andrzej Rybak: one of two armed male Poles who tried to hijack a LOT AN24 flying from Katowice to Warsaw, Poland, on June 9, 1970. The crew foiled them.

S

---

K.S.: foiled in a hijack plan during a check of security installations at Prague's Ruzyně Airport on June 5, 1978. K.S. was sentenced by the Prague City Court to nine years for planning a hijacking.

L.S.: one of two Czechs, age 17, detained on September 13, 1989, by the Czechoslovakia National Security Corps before they were able to initiate their plan to hijack an aircraft from Prague to the West.

Dariusz S.: security officer from Olsztyn, Poland, who, on November 27, 1982, used a pistol to attempt to hijack a Hungarian Malev Tupolev-154 on the Leningrad–Warsaw–Budapest route. He demanded to fly to Tempelhof Airport in West Berlin. He was overpowered by flight security protection personnel and carried off the plane with serious head injuries.

Zafer S.: Turk believed at large in Turkey or Iraq who was wanted in connection with the September 4, 2007, arrest in Germany of two Germans and one Turkish citizen at their rented house on Oak Lane in Oberschledorn. They were planning “massive” attacks against U.S. interests, including Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer's gun and shot him in the hand. One of the terrorists escaped through a window but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freusdenstadt. The concentrated chemicals were equivalent to 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group which has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of them had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were white Germans, not foreigners, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization. Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group's activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented the three-bedroom vacation cottage in the skiing and tourist locale where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

Ibrahim Bin Masoud Sa'ad: alias Abu Zer. Algerian clerk from Constantinople who was born on September 20, 1983, and joined al Qaeda in Iraq as a fighter on November 17, 2006. He brought his passport. His recruitment coordinator was Abu Jalal. His father's phone number was 02139942378.

Fouhad Sabour: one of five Algerian al Qaeda members, age 38, whose trial began on April 16, 2002, in Frankfurt, Germany, on charges of plotting to bomb the Strasbourg marketplace on December 23, 2000. They were charged with forming a terrorist organization, planning to cause an explosion, plotting to commit murder, falsifying documents, dealing drugs, and various weapons charges. The French citizen moved to London in July 2000 after spending time in Bosnia and Pakistan. Sabour flew to Frankfurt in October 2000. He was convicted in absentia in a French court for bombings in Paris in 1995. On March 10, 2003, the Frankfurt court found him guilty of preparing a bomb in the attack on the Strasbourg Christmas market and with conspiracy to murder. He was sentenced to 10 to 12 years. He said that the prosecution failed to prove al Qaeda links.

Stanislav Sacha: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague, Czechoslovakia, that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Selim Sadak: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. Sadak was sentenced to 15 years.

Bakhram Sadirov: variant of Bakhram Sadirov.

Bakhram Sadirov: variant Bakhram. Brother of Rezvon Sadirov. On February 4, 1997, in Obigarm, Tajikistan, Sadirov took hostage four Russian journalists. The rebels ultimately seized 16 people, including 8 United Nations personnel—a Ukrainian, a Nigerian, 2 Swiss, and 4 Tajiks. Authorities believed that Rezvon Sadirov was behind the kidnapping on November 18, 1997, of a Frenchwoman to obtain his brother's freedom.

Rezvon Sadirov: variant Rizvon. In January 1995, Sadirov was the commander of the armed wing of Tajikistan's Islamic Revival Movement. He declared jihad against Russia. Authorities believed that Rezvon was behind the kidnapping in Tajikistan on November 18, 1997, of a Frenchwoman to obtain his brother Bakhram's freedom. Rezvon Sadirov was killed by Tajik forces on December 2, 1997.

Abdul-Khalim Sadulayev: senior Chechen rebel leader killed on June 17, 2006, after he resisted arrest in Grozny, Czech Republic. Sadulayev led the terrorist group after police killed Aslan Maskhadov in March 2005. Chechen prime minister Ramzan Kadyrov said that an informant had tipped police that the gunman planned an attack in Argun to coincide with the G-8 Summit in St. Petersburg in mid-July. Sadulayev was believed to have organized the 2001 kidnapping of Kenneth Gluck of New York. Mashkhadov claimed that Sadulayev was a key organizer of the 2004 raid on police and security facilities that killed 90 people in Ingushetia.

Abdulhadid Hadi Sadun: security guard at the Libyan Embassy who was linked to the two Libyans, Ali Eceflı Ramadan and Recep Muhtar Rohama Tarhuni. Ramadan and Tarhuni were stopped by police on April 18, 1986, in front of the U.S. officer's club in Ankara, Turkey, threw away a bag containing six grenades, and ran. Sadun's trial began in absentia on May 13, 1986, in the State Security Court. On June 7, 1986, the charges were dropped because of diplomatic immunity.

Mamet Sadyk: member of the East Turkestan Islamic Movement deported by Kyrgyzstan to China in May 2002 for planning terrorist attacks against embassies, markets, and public gathering places in Bishkek.

Mohammed Jaafari Sahraroodi: variant Mohammad Ja'fari Sahrarudi; alias Rahimi. One of three Iranian government agents believed to have assassinated Abdolrahman Qassemblou, secretary general of the Kurdish Democratic Party, in Vienna, Austria, on July 13, 1989. He carried an Iranian diplomatic passport. He was taken to a hospital with bullet wounds apparently accidentally sustained. On November 28, 1989, Austria issued an arrest warrant for him on charges of murder.

Abu Said: Chechen rebel spokesperson for the scores of Chechen terrorists who, on October 23, 2002, seized 900 hostages at a Moscow theater.

Salah Muhammad Umar Sa'id: Egyptian Islamic Jihad and bin Laden associate who died in a gunfight with Albanian police on October 25, 1998. He was part of the team that planned to attack the U.S. Embassy in Tirana.

Semdin Sakik: ex-Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) deputy who was sentenced to death for treason in Turkey on May 20, 1999.

Sirri Sakik: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. Sakik was sentenced to three and a half years for disseminating separatist propaganda but ordered released because he had already spent nine months in jail.

Louai al-Sakka: variant Louasi Sakka; alias Louai al-Turki. One of two people arrested on August 6, 2005, by Turkish police for links to al Qaeda. Al-Sakka was a liaison between al Qaeda and a Turkish cell that carried out bombings in Istanbul in November 2003, financing the attack. Police put out an alert after a suspicious fire in apartment 1703 in Antalya on August 4 at 3:00 A.M., where they discovered a large quantity of explosives, two fake passports, and other documents. Al-Sakka had been fabricating a bomb, which exploded prematurely. Al-Sakka was stopped while trying to board a flight to Istanbul from Diyarbakir using a fake name. Al-Sakka was represented by attorney Ilhami Sayan.

On August 11, a Turkish court charged al-Sakka in connection with a plot to attack Israeli cruise ships by hitting one carrying U.S. soldiers with an explosives-laden yacht. More than 5,000 Israelis on five ships were diverted from Turkish ports to Cyprus after the threat was received. He yelled to reporters, "I have prepared one ton of explosives. I was going to hit the Israeli ships. No Turks were going to be hurt, only Israelis." The press said he was a senior al Qaeda operative involved in major terrorist plots in Turkey, Jordan, and Iraq and that he had worked with Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Sakka was also involved in the millennium plot to attack hotels in Amman on December 31, 1999. A Jordanian court had earlier convicted him in absentia for the millennium plot. He also planned the 2003 truck bombing in Istanbul that killed 57 people. That plot was financed with $160,000 in al Qaeda money. He also provided false passports to jihadis. Al-Sakka was involved in attacks on U.S. bases and commanded forces in Fallujah, Iraq, and was involved in the murder of a Turkish truck driver.

On February 10, 2006, an Ankara court charged the Syrian with planning the 2003 bombings that killed 58 people and wounded 750 in Istanbul. Prosecutors said Osama bin Laden had ordered the man to conduct the attacks. On March 20, 2006, al-Sakka, age 32, initially told the court he was Ekrem Ozel but also admitted working beside Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. Prosecutors said he had provided other terrorists $170,000 to carry out the four truck bombings. He was being prosecuted along with 72 Turks. The judge recessed the trial for two months. Al-Sakka's attorney, Osman Karahan, was ordered off the case on the first day of the trial, accused of aiding and abetting a terrorist organization. He represented 14 other defendants in the Istanbul terrorism case. He said the indictment falsely linked him to the 7/7 London rail bombings in 2005. Al-Sakka faced prison in Jordan, where he and al-Zarqawi were convicted in absentia for plotting to blow up hotels on December 31, 1999. Turkey police arrested al-Sakka in August 2005 when he was planning to steer a bomb-filled yacht into an Israeli cruise ship. His attorney said that al-Sakka had moved across Turkish borders 55 times on 18 different passports. On February 16, 2007, a Turkish court sentenced seven men, including al-Sakka, to life in prison.

Louasi al-Sakka: variant of Louai al-Sakka.

Sako: member of the Armenian Secret Army of the Liberation of Armenia who, on December 8, 1982, was killed when he set off a bomb outside the Kuwait Air offices in Athens.

Abdul Latif Salah: dual Albanian Jordanian citizen deported by Albania on November 12, 1999. He was believed to be an Egyptian Islamic Jihad (EIJ) associate of Osama bin Laden. He lived in Tirana from 1992 to 1999 and had connections to several local political parties. He worked with several Islamic nongovernmental organizations and had set up the local EIJ network.

Wadi' Salim Salam: one of six Arabs for whom the Nicosia District Court issued an eight-day arrest warrant on May 30, 1989, in connection with the discovery two days earlier by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader,

Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca, Morocco. All six were charged, inter alia, with illegal entry into Cyprus and with possession of weapons and explosives. On June 2, 1989, Lebanon requested extradition. On June 22, 1989, the Larnaca District Court set June 30 as the date for the opening of the preliminary hearing. The trial began on October 9, 1989. All pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and transporting weapons and explosives. Five pleaded guilty to illegal entry. The trial was moved from Larnaca to Nicosia, Cyprus, for security reasons. On October 13, 1989, the court sentenced the six on eight charges. Five received jail sentences ranging from one to eight years; the sixth received one to five years. All of the penalties were to be concurrent, effective the date of arrest. The court president said he took the psychological state of the sixth accused into consideration in determining the verdict. On April 15, 1991, Cypriot authorities deported the six Lebanese to Beirut after they had served 17 months of their sentences.

Amin Salamah: leader of four al-Saiqa terrorists who were arrested by Amsterdam police detectives on September 5, 1975, while planning to take over the daily 0836 D-train from Moscow at Amersfoort station the next day. They intended to kidnap immigrating Russian Jews and demand a plane to fly them and their hostages out of the country. Three days later, they were sentenced to 18 months. Salamah said that the group was trained in 1972 in a village outside Moscow. Their preliminary six-month course covered the use of arms and explosives, as well as propaganda and interrogation survival techniques.

Wadi' Salim Salamah: one of six Muslims detained on May 26, 1989, at Larnaca, Cyprus, for conspiring to murder Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, leader of the Lebanese Phalangists, and for possession of arms, missiles, and munitions. The six were due to be tried by a Larnaca criminal court on October 9, 1989. On August 30, 1989, the Muslim 14 March group threatened to hijack a Cyprus Airlines plane if the government did not release them. The group seeks to avenge the 40 Lebanese Muslims who were killed by 'Awn's troops on March 14, 1989.

John Saleh: name on a Somali passport carried by Johannes Weinrich.

Krikor (KoKo) Saliba: Lebanese Armenian immigrant wanted for questioning in the January 28, 1982, Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide assassination in Los Angeles of Turkish consul general Kemal Arian.

'Abd-al-Latif Salih: variant Abdul Saleh-U. Associate, age 42, of Osama bin Laden arrested on November 12, 1999, by Albanian police. The Egyptian, who had obtained Albanian citizenship, was expelled to an undisclosed location. He was believed to be a member of the Muslim Brotherhood that advocates turning Egypt into a strict Muslim state. He arrived in Albania in the early 1990s and was a key figure in channeling aid from Islamic states to build mosques and hospitals. He also invested heavily in the construction industry. Reuters reported that a source indicated that "there is evidence that he was connected to other Egyptian nationals extradited from Albania last year and to an Albanian involved in planning an attack on the U.S. Embassy."

'Azmi Husayn Mahmud Salih: north Yemeni arrested in the bombing on October 4, 1984, of a rental car parked at the Israeli Embassy in Nicosia, Cyprus. The Abu Musa Organization claimed credit and threatened Nicosia police if the two suspects, who had gone on a hunger strike, were not released. On October 22, 1984, the duo was deported; the government said that there was insufficient evidence to convict.

Fu'ad 'Ali Salih: Tunisian member of Hizballah charged on December 3, 1987, by Paris judge

Gilles Boulouque with four attacks carried out in 1986, including attacks against the post office at the Paris town hall, in the Rue de Rennes in Paris, and the bombing by the Committee for Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners on September 12, 1986, of the crowded Casino cafeteria in the La Defense shopping center in Paris that injured 41 people. By February 1990, he was on trial in Paris with nine others, charged with illegal possession of explosives and setting up a terrorist network linked to the pro-Iranian Hizballah. On March 9, 1990, he was sentenced to 20 years.

Mukhammed Salik: alias of Salai Madaminov.

Magomed Salikhov: arrested in Baku, Azerbaijan, on November 12, 2004, and brought to Russia the next day in connection with the September 1999 bombings of apartment buildings in Moscow and Volgograd that killed nearly 300. He was suspected of helping organize the attack in Buinaksk, Dagestan.

Rashid 'Abdallah Salim: one of three Arabs charged on May 16, 1987, in a Limassol, Cyprus, district court with plotting to murder two British citizens on April 20, 1987, attempted murder, carrying and using automatic weapons, carrying explosives, and possessing forged passports. The attackers were members of the al-Mehdi Ben Barka organization. They were also suspected in the bombing on August 3, 1986, of the Akrotiri military airport. On January 29, 1988, the Kuwaiti citizen was jailed for nine years. On June 28, 1989, the Supreme Court ratified the sentence handed down by the Limassol Assize Court.

Luis Queba Sambu: security officer for the Guinean Embassy in Portugal who was arrested on November 6, 1987, by Portugal's police anti-terrorism department after explosives were found at the embassy and in the Guinean Armed Forces captain's residence. He was suspected of having links with the Popular Forces of April 25 and the French Direct Action. He had studied military strategy in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and Libya. He initially said the explosives were to be used against Guinean exiles. He later requested political asylum.

Aslan Samet: young Turk with this name on a false passport arrested on May 14, 1985, by police in Venlo, Netherlands, during the pope's visit. He arrived on a West German train and smuggled in a 9-mm Browning automatic pistol that was one of four guns bought by Mehmet Ali Agca and an accomplice prior to the May 13, 1981, assassination attempt against Pope John Paul II. Samet had three cartridges identical to those used by Agca to try to kill the pope. He carried forged documents, including Turkish and French passports. He was a member of the Grey Wolves.

Salahem Samir: Palestinian laborer from Amman, Jordan, arrested by Athens police on August 30, 1985, 90 meters from the Jordanian Embassy while carrying an Austrian-made Steyer automatic weapon, a grenade, a knife, and three magazines of bullets. He admitted that he was on a Black September mission to assassinate the Jordanian ambassador. His release was demanded by the Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems (an alias of the Abu Nidal group) on September 3, 1985, after one of the members threw two hand grenades at the Hotel Glifadha in an Athens suburb, injuring 18 British tourists.

Nicos Sampson: variant Nikos. Member of EOKA that fought for Cyprus unity with Greece during the 1955–1959 struggles against British colonialism. He was twice sentenced to death for weapons charges. He was included in the 1959 amnesty that was part of the independence agreement. He led a militia that battled Turkish Cypriots in 1964. He was elected to parliament in 1970 and served as president of Cyprus for eight days after a 1974 coup, but he resigned when Turkey invaded. He was tried and sentenced in 1976 to 20 years in prison for his role in the coup.

His release from Cypriot prison was demanded by the EOKA-B kidnappers of Second Lt. Achilles Kyprianou, son of president Spiro Kyprianou, on December 14, 1977. Sampson, an EOKA-B member, repudiated any prisoner release obtained by violence.

Sampson was sent to Paris in 1979 for medical treatment. In 1983, Interpol suggested that he was involved with a heroin smuggling ring that was financing activities of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. He was jailed again in Cyprus in 1990, but citing health reasons, his sentence was suspended and amnesty granted in 1993.

Referred to as the “executioner of Murder Mile” for the street where 12 plus Britons were killed. Sampson, age 66, died of cancer on May 9, 2001, in a Nicosia clinic.

Nikos Sampson: variant of Nicos Sampson.

Bekir Sitki Sancar: one of the three members of the Martyr Kharmian Hayrik Suicide Squad of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia who fired submachine guns and set off a bomb in a crowded international flight terminal passenger lounge at Ankara's Esemboga Airport on August 7, 1982. He was wounded by police in a gun battle.

Joaquin Sanchez Nunez: Catalan separatist member of the Terra Lliure (Free Land) organization who died on December 15, 1985, when a bomb he was carrying exploded in a phone booth in Barcelona, Spain.

Ali Sapan: Kurdish rebel spokesperson placed under house arrest on September 7, 1993, by Italian court officials pending the outcome of extradition proceedings by Turkey. He belonged to the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) National Liberation Front and was wanted under an international arrest warrant issued by a Turkish military court in April 1993 for membership in a terrorist organization.

Loa'i Mohammad Haj Bakr al-Saqa: Syrian that Turkish authorities say masterminded the 2003 bombing of two synagogues, a U.K.-based bank, and the British Consulate in Istanbul that killed 58 people. The authorities said he moved $170,000 between al Qaeda and the Turkish militants.

Erdogan Sarikaya: Turkish member of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) who, on July 31, 1988, was identified by a Swedish publisher as being the assassin of prime minister Olaf Palme on February 28, 1986. Sarikaya, who had lived in Sweden since 1982, said that he had gone to bed early that night and denied PKK membership, although he hung their flag in his apartment.

Josephine 'Abdu al-Sarkis: variant Josephine Abdo Sarkis. Member of the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF) arrested on December 19, 1984, in Ostia, Italy, and charged on May 8, 1985, by an Italian judge with the February 15, 1984, assassination in Rome of Leamon R. Hunt, the American director general of the multinational force in Egypt's Sinai Peninsula. On June 18, 1985, a Trieste court found her guilty and sentenced her to 15 years and a $510 fine. On October 11, 1985, a Rome appeals court threw out the charges against the LARF member for insufficient evidence. On November 27, 1985, the group threatened Italy unless she was released. On March 20, 1986, a bomb exploded in the crowded Point-Show shopping mall just off the Champs Elysees in Paris, killing 2 Lebanese and wounding 30; the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners demanded the release of Sarkis.

Franciszek Sarzynski: one of two Polish hijackers of LOT Flight 10116 from Budapest to Warsaw on August 25, 1982, that was diverted to Munich, Germany. On February 14, 1983, he was sentenced by the Munich Regional Court.

Hampig Sassounian: variant of Harry M. Sassounian.

Harout Sassounian: Harout Sassounian is Harry Sassounian's brother. Harry Sassounian was found guilty of the January 28, 1982, assassination of Turkish consul general Kemal Arikan in Los Angeles, California. Harout was arrested in February 1982 for the 1980 firebombing of the Arikan's Los Angeles residence. Harout's first trial ended in a mistrial in May 1982 because of publicity about Armenian assassinations. The next month, he was convicted of the firebombing.

Harry M. Sassounian: variant Hampig Sassounian. Brother of Harout Sassounian. Armenian immigrant to the United States who lived in Pasadena and who was arrested in Los Angeles on January 28, 1982, for shooting to death Turkish consul general Kemal Arikan a few hours earlier. The Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide claimed credit. He pleaded innocent to murder charges on February 1, 1982. A jury deliberated from November 28, 1983, to early 1984 before finding him guilty of first-degree murder for the assassination. Superior Court sentenced him to life without possibility of parole on June 16, 1984. He was later sentenced to life with the possibility of parole. He was denied parole at his first parole hearing on August 31, 2006. His next parole hearing is scheduled for 2010.

Bertrand Sassoie: one of four ringleaders of the Communist Combatant Cells who were arrested on December 16, 1985, in a fast-food restaurant in Belgium. On January 14, 1986, they were charged with the attempted murder of the night watchman at the Brussels-Lambert Bank, which had been bombed on November 4, 1985.

Bassam Dalati Satut: one of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement, which has ties to al Qaeda, arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Spain did not offer details on the terrorists' targets. The next day, police identified three more Islamic suspects. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. Spain and other European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an Al Qaeda cell were arraigned. The Washington Post quoted Spanish officials on November 19 as indicating that eight al Qaeda cell members arrested in Madrid and Granada had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon ordered eight of the suspected members held without bail because they "were directly related with the preparation and development of the attacks perpetrated by the suicide pilots on September 11." Judge Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. They also reportedly sheltered Chechen rebels and obtained medical treatment for al Qaeda members. They conducted robberies and credit card fraud and provided false documents to al Qaeda visitors. They also forwarded money to Hamburg. The group had connections to Mohamed Bensakhria, head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. He was arrested and extradited to France. The group also had connections to six Algerians detained in Spain on September 26 who were charged with belonging to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, a bin Laden-funded Algerian group.

The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. His name and phone number were in a document found in a search of a Hamburg apartment of a bin Laden associate. Police believed hijacker leader Muhammad Atta could have met with some of them when he visited Spain in January and July. The group had links to Mamoun Darkazanli. Judge Garzon released three others who were arrested on November 13 and ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

On April 16, 2008, Judge Ismael Moreno of the National Court indicted Syrian-born Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas, age 44, Syrian-born Muhamed Galeb Kalaje Zouaydi, age 47, and Bassam Dalati Satut, age 48, on suspicion of financing terrorist cells. The indictment said that the duo removed $76,500 in December 2006 from Zouaydi's company and gave the money to Yarkas. Satut had been on provisional liberty. The indictment said that police found in his home two bank checks "issued in December 2006, which have as the beneficiary—without any justifying cause—Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbas, for the financing of terrorist cells." Satut was charged with collaboration with a terrorist group. The trio was arraigned on April 24, denying the charges.

Avit Sava: Abkhazian member of a group of pro-Chechen gunmen who, on January 16, 1996, hijacked the 3,800-ton Panama-registered Avrasya, a ferry bound for Sochi, Russia, and carrying 200 passengers and crew in Trabzon, threatening to sink it in the Bosphorus Strait unless Russian troops stopped their attacks on the Chechen hostage takers in Pervomayskoye, Dagestan, Russia. The pirates surrendered on January 19 in Riva Bay. Sava escaped. Moscow's Trud claimed that he had purchased 10 pump-action shotguns.

Mustafa Savak: variant Mustafa Savas. Turk who was arrested by police in Rho, near Milan, Italy, on February 2, 1983, on charges of plotting to murder Pope John Paul II during a visit to Milan in May. He was carrying two passports, one of which gave his date of birth as 1945. He arrived in Italy two months earlier, driving a car with West German plates. More recently, he had driven a Renault with Rome plates. An Italian held on drug charges said Savak had tried to hire him to shoot the pope.

Zivotije Savic: freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO or SEPO) terrorist found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago, Illinois. He pleaded guilty and was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

Loizos Savva: EOKA-B member and former policeman who was arrested on February 4, 1977, and charged with killing U.S. ambassador to Cyprus Rodger P. Davies and a Greek Cypriot Embassy secretary on August 19, 1974, during a riot in Nicosia, Cyprus. EOKA-B terrorists attacked the U.S. Embassy and official residence and threw firebombs at official vehicles. Nearly 100 bullets hit the ambassador's office from two angles. Savva was charged with homicide. He was arraigned on charges of manslaughter on February 11, 1977.

Evangelos Savvakis: would-be hijacker of an Olympic Airlines 707 flying from Iraklion to Athens, Greece, on May 28, 1972. He used a toy pistol to commandeer the plane and demand money and a ticket to London, where he wished to receive medical treatment. The plane landed in Athens, where he left the plane and was arrested. On February 10, 1973, he was sentenced to two years.

Yezid Gasper Sayiagh: Palestinian holding a U.S. passport who was arrested on December 18, 1985. He was an associate of a Palestinian with a Jordanian passport who was arrested by Larnaca Airport security personnel on December 17, 1985, for trying to smuggle arms aboard a Swissair plane scheduled to depart for Amman, Jordan. He was released for lack of evidence that he was part of a plot to hijack the plane.

Muhammad al-Sayyid: on March 8, 1990, the Syrian Embassy in Athens denied press charges that the Syrian diplomat was involved in killing Pavlospa Konanis. The embassy said he started his career with a mission to the Arab League and then worked as a secretary general of the Arab-Greek Chamber of Commerce before becoming a commercial advisor at the Syrian Embassy.

Gregorio Scarfo: chief of the Rome Red Brigades who was identified by police as one of the Red Brigades–Fighting Communist Party who, on February 14, 1987, conducted a $1.2 million holdup in Rome that left two police officers dead and a third seriously wounded. By April 1988, police had obtained a warrant for the new head of the Roman Column of the Red Brigades. He was believed involved in the April 16, 1988, assassination by the Fighting Communist Union Party of university professor and Christian Democratic senator Roberto Ruffilli in Forlì, Italy.

Arthur Scheller: variant Schiller. Joined brothers Boris and Vitali Schmidt, all three Soviet citizens of German origin, to hijack the Aeroflot AN24 on a Novorossiysk–Odessa flight on November 7, 1982, and divert it to the Sinop NATO Base in Turkey. They requested political asylum in West Germany, where they claimed to have relatives. On December 13, 1982, their trial opened in Sinop's High Criminal Court, where they were charged with hijacking a plane, assault, and carrying arms without a permit. They said they had spent four years studying Soviet airport security. They claimed they had a choice between prison, banishment to Siberia, or hijacking. They were acquitted of hijacking on December 20, 1982, by the Sinop court. On the prosecutor's appeal, the Supreme Appeals Court in Ankara reversed the verdict and ordered a retrial in Zonguldak. On July 9, 1983, the new court sentenced Scheller to nine years and two months on air piracy and an additional charge of possessing and using a weapon.

Arthur Schiller: variant of Arthur Scheller.

Mareile Schmegner: arrested on July 3, 1985, in a police raid on a Red Army Faction (RAF)

hideout in Offenbach, West Germany, where police found guns and false passports. She was charged on February 26, 1986, by the Frankfurt Higher Regional Court. On March 5, 1987, she was sentenced by the court to 3 years and 10 months for supporting the RAF and resisting arrest during which two police officers were injured. She provided a hideout for Eva Haule-Frimpong, who had since been arrested. She was also given five days detention for disrupting the trial.

Boris Schmidt: variant Schnidi. Boris Schmidt, his brother Vitali Schmidt, and Arthur Scheller, all three Soviet citizens of German origin, joined together to hijack the Aeroflot AN24 on a Novorossiysk–Odessa flight on November 7, 1982, and divert it to the Sinop NATO Base in Turkey. They requested political asylum in West Germany, where they claimed to have relatives. On December 13, 1982, their trial opened in Sinop's High Criminal Court, where they were charged with hijacking a plane, assault, and carrying arms without a permit. They said they had spent four years studying Soviet airport security. They claimed they had a choice between prison, banishment to Siberia, or hijacking. They were acquitted of hijacking on December 20, 1982, by the Sinop court. On the prosecutor's appeal, the Supreme Appeals Court in Ankara reversed the verdict and ordered a retrial in Zonguldak. On July 9, 1983, the new court sentenced the Schmidt brothers to eight years and four months for air piracy.

Peter Schmidt: believed to be an alias of Johannes Weinrich.

Vitali Schmidt: variant Schnidi. Vitali Schmidt, his brother Boris Schmidt, and Arthur Scheller, all three Soviet citizens of German origin, joined together to hijack the Aeroflot AN24 on a Novorossiysk–Odessa flight on November 7, 1982, and divert it to the Sinop NATO Base in Turkey. They requested political asylum in West Germany, where they claimed to have relatives. On December 13, 1982, their trial opened in Sinop's High Criminal Court, where they were charged with hijacking a plane, assault, and carrying arms without a permit. They said they had spent four years studying Soviet airport security. They claimed they had a choice between prison, banishment to Siberia, or hijacking. They were acquitted of hijacking on December 20, 1982, by the Sinop court. On the prosecutor's appeal, the Supreme Appeals Court in Ankara reversed the verdict and ordered a retrial in Zonguldak. On July 9, 1983, the new court sentenced the Schmidt brothers to eight years and four months for air piracy.

Daniel Martin Schneider: German-born recent convert to Islam, age 21, who lived in Saarbrücken, Germany, next to a mosque. He was on welfare. He studied at Islamic schools in Syria and Egypt and was radicalized four years earlier. He was one of three individuals arrested on September 4, 2007, who were planning "massive" attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer's gun and shot him in the hand. One of the terrorists escaped through a window, but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freusdenstadt. The concentrated chemicals were equivalent to 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group which has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of them had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were white Germans, not foreigners, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization.

Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group's activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented the three-bedroom vacation cottage in the skiing and tourist locale where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

Boris Schnidi: variant of Boris Schmidt.

Vitali Schnidi: variant of Vitali Schmidt.

Oliver Schreiber: one of five members of the neo-Nazi Brunswick Group who went on trial in West Germany on September 30, 1980, for bombing courts in Hanover and Flensburg and planning attacks on unnamed public figures.

Brigitta Schultz: variant Brigitte Schulz. Member of the Baader-Meinhof Gang, age 23, who was one of two members sent to Kenya to find out what happened to their Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) colleagues who were arrested by authorities at Nairobi's Embakasi International Airport on January 25, 1976. The colleagues had SAM-7 heat-seeking missiles and planned to bring down a Johannesburg, South Africa, to Tel Aviv, Israel, El Al flight. Schultz and companion Thomas Reuter, age 24, were arrested. Orders to the terrorists were inscribed on Schultz's stomach in invisible ink. The Israelis announced that they would try the group in secret. The release of the terrorists was demanded by the PFLP hijackers of an Air France plane to Entebbe, Uganda, on June 27, 1976. On December 23, 1980, Israel granted her amnesty. Her five-year prison term would have ended in February.

Adelheid Schulz: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. She was also on the wanted list for the murders of Juergen Ponto and Siegfried Buback. She was arrested on November 11, 1982, with Brigitte Mohnhaupt as they approached a weapons cache outside Frankfurt. On March 13, 1985, the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court sentenced her to three life sentences for Schleyer's murder. On August 1, 1995, she was one of nine imprisoned RAF members who announced the start of a three-day hunger strike to protest the planned execution in the United States of Mumia Abu Jamal, who was convicted of killing a police officer.

Brigitte Schulz: variant of Brigitta Schultz.

The Scorpion: alias of Nazli Caglayan.

Luigi Scricciolo: left-wing Unione Italian del Lavoro unionist who was jailed in the early 1980s on charges of spying and terrorism. He was held in connection with the Dozier kidnapping of December 17, 1981, in which two Red Brigades members were said to have been aided by Bulgarians. He claimed to have active contact with four Bulgarian officials believed connected to the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to him in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa's car during his January 1981 visit to Rome.

Merban Seban: one of four Palestinian terrorists who were found guilty on February 17, 1983, in Turkey and again sentenced to death for their part in the July 13, 1979, raid on the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara that resulted in the death of two security guards. They had been tried twice before at the Ankara Martial Law Command's First Military Court and the Ankara First High Criminal Court but both times their sentences were annulled.

Radomir Sebesth: one of three hijackers of a Czech Ilyushin 18 flying from Prague to Brno and diverted to Rhein-Mein Airport in West Germany on May 10, 1978. Two of the hijackers were sentenced to three years by a Frankfurt court.

Henri Sekoyan: one of three hijackers of a YAK12 chartered passenger plane of the Russian domestic air service on September 10, 1961. The three Armenians attempted to divert the plane to Turkey. When the pilot attempted to throw the attackers off balance, the trio stabbed him several times. When the plane crashed, one hijacker died. The remaining hijackers were captured and sentenced to death.

Atilla Selek: alias Muaz. Selek, age 22, was arrested on December 11, 2004, at 1:00 A.M. for setting a book on fire in front of an Ulm, Germany, store. In a car in which he was a passenger was a CD that praised the jihad, Osama bin Laden, and one of the 9/11 attackers. He was detained briefly on December 31, 2006, on suspicion of surveilling Hutier Barracks in Lamboy, a U.S. military barracks in a section of Hanau.

Selek, in an October 11, 2007, interview in his family's town of Konya, Turkey, said that he had been in the area since February and was not involved in the plot. He moved to Turkey after the authorities raided his German residence in January. He married a Turkish woman in Konya in June, going to the German Embassy to register his marriage. The German authorities said that he had slashed the tires of one of its surveillance vehicles. He was represented by Ulm attorney Manfred R. Gnjdjic. On November 5, 2007, Turkish police in Konya arrested the suspected al Qaeda member and charged him with belonging to a terrorist organization and preparing to bomb U.S.-related targets in Germany.

Abu Selim: Palestine Liberation Organization mediator who was nonetheless believed to have been involved in the preparation and planning of the Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979.

Nikolay Ivanovich Selivanov: hijacker of a Yakovlev-40 flying on the Novgorod–Leningrad–Petrozavodsk, U.S.S.R., route on October 5, 1990, who demanded to go to Stockholm, Sweden. The plane landed at Helsinki's Vantaa airport in Finland, where he requested asylum. He was sent to a provincial prison. He was born in 1949 and lived in Lipetsk Oblast, working as a concrete layer and driver. The Soviets demanded his return. On October 12, he ended a weeklong hunger strike. He asked for his psychiatric condition to be examined by Finnish doctors. On October 25, Finland denied asylum. He was handed over to the Soviets two months after the hijacking. On March 5, 1991, Tass announced that the Novgorod regional court had sentenced him to forced treatment in a psychiatric hospital. He had earlier been treated at a psychiatric facility and been declared insane.

Gennady L. Seluzko: one of two Russian hijackers of an Aeroflot TU134 twin-engine jet flying from Petrozavodsk, Karelia, to Leningrad on July 10, 1977, and diverted to Helsinki, Finland. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Arlanda Airport in Stockholm, Sweden, but there was not enough fuel. They demanded a Finnish crew to fly to Sweden, but Sweden refused them entry. They then demanded to go to another country. The hijackers turned down an offer of a Cessna to fly them out of Finland, and they surrendered on July 11. The Soviets requested extradition the next day and vowed harsh punishment for the two when they were returned under terms of the Soviet-Finnish antihijacking treaty on July 15. On November 10, 1977, he was sentenced to 15 years.

Sultan Gregoriyann Sematerdem: Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorist who died on March 28, 1984, on Fereshteh Street in Tehran, Iran, when a bomb he attempted to place in the car of Deputy Commercial Attaché Isil Unel, of the Turkish Embassy, exploded prematurely.

Dimitriy Semenov: Belarussian polytechnical student, age 17, from Zhodino, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who, on June 8, 1990, forced the crew of an Aeroflot TU-154 to change its Minsk–Murmansk route and fly to Stockholm, Sweden. He earlier had a fight with his parents, who told him to leave home. He surrendered at Stockholm’s Arlanda Airport. On June 10, 1990, a Stockholm court ordered him kept in detention. His lawyer requested that his client be given psychiatric counseling. On June 19, the deputy chairman of the Swedish Pilots Union called for his extradition, as requested by the Soviets. On July 11, the Swedish Supreme Court ruled that there were no legal obstacles to extradition. The next day, the acting premier said Semenov would be extradited. On July 13, 10 Soviet immigrants demonstrated outside the government office in Rosenbad to protest the extradition. He was handed over to the Soviets on July 17. Sweden demanded that he should not be charged with any offense other than the hijacking, such as illegally leaving the country. The Soviets agreed.

Ioannes Semerci: his release from a French prison was demanded by the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia in October 1986.

Mehemet Sener: police believed he was a second gunman in the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. In March 1983, Switzerland released him from jail.

Ahmed Hossein Abu Sereya: Palestinian who was arrested and charged after he ran from the scene of two grenade explosions at the Café de Paris on Via Veneto in Rome on September 16, 1985. The explosions killed 39 people. A search of his apartment disclosed a round-trip ticket from Damascus to Vienna to Rome. He was carrying $1,000 and a fake passport. The Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems claimed credit. On August 6, 1986, Assistant Attorney General Domenico Sica recommended that Sereya stand trial for the grenade attack. The prosecutor’s office said that Sereya is a member of the Palestinian Martyrs, a group led by Abu Nidal. The trial was scheduled for July 3, 1987.

Pavlos Serifis: alias Nikitas. Serifis, age 46, who is related to two other suspected November 17 detainees, was arrested in Karditsa on July 24, 2002, by Greek police. They believed he was the second in command of the group. He may have carried instructions from the group’s leader, Alexandros Giotopoulos, to the group’s hit squad. Serifis was a telephone operator at an Athens children’s hospital.

Thomas Serifis: November 17 suspect, age 36, arrested by Greek authorities on July 21, 2002. He worked for the Athens public bus company.

Vojislav Seselj: deemed the “duke of terror” by Vienna’s Neue Kronen-Zeitung, which reported on July 30, 1991, that the Serb had announced that a new wave of attacks would begin in Austria. The paper claimed he was behind the attack on the Krsko nuclear power plant.

Ladislav Sevec: sentenced by a Brno court in Czechoslovakia on June 12, 1978, to eight years for conspiracy to hijack a Czech plane.

Jose Manuel Sevillano: member of the 1 October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO) who died on May 25, 1990, from a 177-day hunger strike in Madrid’s Gregorio Maranon Hospital of cardiac arrest. He joined GRAPO in 1985 shortly after a police operation broke up its leadership. He was sentenced to 24 years in prison for a series of bank robberies. Some 40 GRAPO prisoners began the hunger strike on November 30, 1989, to protest the Justice Ministry's policy of dispersing them to several prisons. Violent demonstrations broke out following the announcement of his death.

Abu Omar As-Seyf: Arab alleged to represent al Qaeda in Chechnya who was alleged by Tass to have financed the Chechen terrorist attack on the elementary school in Beslan, Russia, on September 1, 2004.

Lizzie Shack: wife of Patrick Haemers, alleged Belgian leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. On May 29, 1989, Brazilian federal police arrested the couple in Rio de Janeiro along with Diane Inu, a Belgian. Brazil's Supreme Court ordered their extradition on March 7, 1990. On March 30, 1990, Belgium sent an Air Force Hercules C130 to Brazil to bring back Haemers, who confessed to the kidnapping.

Rasoul Bagher Shaian: variants Resul Bagher Nejad Shaian, Rasul-Baqer Sha'iyen. One of five Iranian diplomats arrested in Turkey on October 25, 1988, who were planning to kidnap Said Abu Hassan Mochhadezade, an anti-Khomeini engineer working in Erzincan who reportedly was a member of the People's Mujahedeen. They were to be tried by a state security court in Istanbul State. The press reported that two of them were members of the Savama Iranian secret police; the other three were members of the embassy's bodyguard team. On October 28, 1988, he was expelled and flown out of Turkey.

Abdallakh Shamil: alias of Shamil Basayev.

Yusuf al-Sharidi: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Anzor Sharmaidze: former Georgian soldier, age 21, who was convicted in 1994 and sentenced to 15 years of hard labor for the August 8, 1993, murder of Central Intelligence Agency station chief Freddie Woodruff. Woodruff was shot in the head while traveling with three Georgians outside Tbilisi. Sharmaidze retracted his confession, which he said was made under torture.

'Ali Shawqi: alias of Muhammad Brazim Jayyusi.

Seffer A. Shemshek: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Ankara to Istanbul on May 3, 1972, that was diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. The three students and one electrician demanded the release of the three TPLA members who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. They threatened to blow up the plane and everyone on board. The Turks refused to negotiate. The group extended their deadline several times and agreed on May 4 to the Turkish government's suggestion that they accept Bulgarian asylum. One passenger had suffered a heart attack during the siege. The foursome was sentenced to three years on November 3, 1972.

Abdel Hamid Shibli: one of two Black September members who were seriously injured when their explosives-laden car blew up on a Rome street on June 17, 1973. He was a Jordanian. It was believed they were driving their booby-trapped car toward their next mission, which may have been against the transit camp in Austria for Soviet Jewish émigrés. Some reports claimed that Mossad arranged for the bombs' premature detonation.

Tawfiq wat al-Shiyar: one of six Muslims detained on May 26, 1989, at Larnaca, Cyprus, for conspiring to murder Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, leader of the Lebanese Phalangists, and for possession of arms, missiles, and munitions. The six were due to be tried by a Larnaca criminal court on October 9, 1989. On August 30, 1989, the Muslim 14 March group threatened to hijack a Cyprus Airlines plane if the government did not release them. The group seeks to avenge the 40 Lebanese Muslims who were killed by 'Awn's troops on March 14, 1989.

Igor Shkouro: Leningrad-born holder of an Australian passport who, on September 25, 1982, hijacked an Alitalia B727 flying from Algiers to Rome. He was overpowered in Catania, Sicily. He appeared to be under the influence of drugs.

Aleksandr Anatoliyevich Shmonov: on November 7, 1990, he fired two shots from a 16-mm double-barreled hunting rifle into the air near the Gum Department Store in Red Square during the celebration marking the 73rd anniversary of the October Revolution. He was arrested 100 yards away from Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev as he was attempting to join the parade. Police said that he was aiming at the general area of Gorbachev and was quoted by a local police sergeant who wrestled him to the ground as yelling, "I wanted to kill Gorbachev." Shmonov, born in 1952, had worked as a fitter at the Izhora Works but was recently unemployed. He told interrogators he had prepared the act for two years. Tass said he distributed leaflets threatening Gorbachev. He was charged under Section 2, Article 15 and Section 1, Article 66 of the Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic Criminal Code.

Yasir Shuraydah: variant of Yasser Chraidi.

Vasken Sicilian: variant Sislian. Lebanese leader of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia terrorists who attacked the Turkish Consulate in Paris on September 24, 1981. He was injured during the shootout with police and conducted negotiations from a hospital. The French government said it would try the terrorists. On January 31, 1984, a Paris court sentenced the four terrorists to seven years in prison. On July 26, 1986, he was jailed for 10 days for refusing an expulsion order to Beirut, saying that his safety was not guaranteed. Turkey announced after the incident that it would try the terrorist in absentia under Section 125 of the Turkish penal code.

Surinder Sikh: on January 24, 1990, Larnaca District Court issued an eight-day remand order for Sikh from the Punjab after Larnaca police discovered a Walther pistol inside his suitcase. The pistol was wrapped in nylon and paper and concealed inside a tape recorder. It was found during an X-ray check on luggage about to be loaded on the Iraqi Airlines flight bound for Baghdad. Sikh was traveling to New Delhi via Baghdad. His passport indicated that his home address was Chakmander, Jaladhar.

Andonios Yeroyiou Sikiotakis: would-be hijacker of Olympic Airways Flight 507, en route from Iraklion to Athens, Greece, with an intermediate stop in Crete on February 10, 1984. He wanted to go to Florida to meet a young American woman. He was arrested.

Nikos Sillouris: Athens Law School graduate from Nicosia, Cyprus, who was arrested on January 26, 1993, at Beirut, Lebanon, airport after police found half a stick of dynamite and 50 grams of Semtex explosives in his belt and eight sticks of dynamite in a cassette recorder in his suitcase. He was due to arrive in Cyprus on Middle East Airlines Flight 261. He tried to leave Cyprus for Beirut on January 25 but was stopped because he had no visa.

Zvonko Simac: one of two Croatian nationalists who were killed on May 23, 1979, when a pipe bomb they were transporting accidentally exploded in their pickup truck in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California.

Vitautas Simokaitis: one of two would-be hijackers of an Aeroflot AN2 flying from Vilnius and Palanga, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, on November 9, 1970. He and his wife, Grazhina Mitskute, wanted to go to Sweden. They were overpowered and tried in Vilnius. He was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to 15 years in a labor camp.

Roberto Simoni: employee of an industrial equipment firm and member of the Union of Communist Fighters who was arrested on August 18, 1987, by Genoa, Italy, police on charges of organizing armed groups and entering in subversive association. Police said he had taken part in several terrorist acts over the last decade.

Husayn Muhammad Simtayn: alias Husayn 'Ismat Sulayman. Member of the Islamic Jihad Organization (IJO) arrested by Turkish officials on April 10, 1987, with three others who had planned to kidnap Americans and Israelis living in Turkey and to attack U.S. consulates. The group smuggled 91 kilograms of explosives into the country, intending to obtain the release of 200 colleagues imprisoned in Israel. Simtayn was carrying a false passport and coded messages including phone numbers for IJO Beirut, Lebanon, headquarters and Abu Muhammad, IJO's Middle East operations chief in Beirut.

Rustum Najib Sirhan: one of six Arabs for whom the Nicosia District Court issued an eight-day arrest warrant on May 30, 1989, in connection with the discovery two days earlier by fishermen of two Soviet-made SAM-7 missiles in the McKenzie seashore area near Larnaca International Airport. A group of six young Arabs were plotting to shoot down the helicopter of Lebanon's Christian leader, Maj. Gen. Michel 'Awn, who was scheduled to arrive in Cyprus en route to Casablanca, Morocco. All six were charged, inter alia, with illegal entry into Cyprus and with possession of weapons and explosives. On June 2, 1989, Lebanon requested extradition. On June 22, 1989, the Larnaca District Court set June 30 as the date for the opening of the preliminary hearing. On August 30, 1989, the Muslim 14 March group threatened to hijack a Cyprus Airlines plane if the government did not release them. The group seeks to avenge the 40 Lebanese Muslims who were killed by 'Awn's troops on March 14, 1989. The trial began on October 9, 1989. All pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and transporting weapons and explosives. Five pleaded guilty to illegal entry. The trial was moved from Larnaca to Nicosia for security reasons. On October 13, 1989, the court sentenced the six on eight charges. Five received jail sentences ranging from one to eight years; the sixth received one to five years. All of the penalties were to be concurrent, effective the date of arrest. The court president said he took the psychological state of the sixth accused into consideration in determining the verdict. On April 15, 1991, Cypriot authorities deported the six Lebanese to Beirut after they had served 17 months of their sentences.

Vasken Sislian: variant of Vasken Sicilian.

Nikola Sivovic: one of two members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland, an anti-Communist Serbian émigré group, arrested by Chicago, Illinois, police on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington, D.C. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges.

Skubenko: would-be hijacker who was killed on May 7, 1978, while attempting to hijack a local Aeroflot flight in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. He was resisting arrest during the flight from Ashkabad, near the Iranian border, to Mineralniye Vodi.

Nikolay Skvortsov: on February 3, 1994, he kidnapped two toddlers from a nursery school and demanded a van, $500,000, a pistol, and a plane. The would-be hijacker was overpowered in Rostov-on-Don, Russia, as he boarded the plane.

Miroslav Slovak: one of four hijackers of the Prague–Brno C47 flight of Czechoslovakian National Airlines that was hijacked on March 23, 1953, and diverted to Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Political asylum was granted to Slovak, the pilot.

Jan Slupski: on February 17, 1988, the Warsaw Voivodship court sentenced Slupski, a Pole, to 10 years in jail for attempting to hijack a plane on May 15, 1987, with a homemade grenade. He had forced the driver of an interurban bus to drive to Okęcie International Airport in Warsaw, where he demanded a plane to fly him to West Germany. Before he was overpowered, his grenade went off, injuring a passenger.

Borijov Smid: one of the four crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Bratislava to Prague, Czechoslovakia, that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Smirnaïos: Greek ordered detained in late 1988 as a member of the Anti-State Struggle Organization.

Steen Smyrek: German neo-Nazi and convert to Islam who was arrested in late 1997 in Israel for planning a suicide attack. He had trained at an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan.

Rezvon Sodirov: leader of an armed gang that, on December 20, 1996, stopped a convoy between Fayzabad and Gharm, Tajikistan, seizing 23 hostages, including 7 foreign national United Nations military observers and Tajik government officials. The group demanded that several of their supporters be returned to them. The hostages were eventually released.

Vasiliki Sokratous: arrested in Greece on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Guenther Sonnenberg: police shot and seriously wounded Sonnenberg on May 3, 1977, in a shootout in the town of Singen, Germany, on the Swiss border. Ballistic tests showed his machine gun had been used in the April 7, 1977, Ulrike Meinhof Special Action Group assassination of Siegfried Buback, West Germany's chief public prosecutor. His release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. His release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa Flight 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt, Germany, on October 13, 1977. His release was demanded on September 12, 1981, by the RAF firebombers of the Frankfurt home of the U.S. consul general. He had engaged in a prison hunger strike in early 1985. On September 15, 1986, the Anna Maria Ludmann Fighting Unit of the West German RAF bombed the Munich offices of Panavia Aircraft Ltd., a joint West German-British-Italian venture that manufactures the Tornado NATO aircraft. The bombers demanded Sonnenberg's release. He was sentenced in April 1987 on two counts of conspiracy to murder and was sentenced to life in prison for shooting two police officers while attempting to avoid arrest.

He was part of a RAF hunger strike by 38 prisoners that began on February 1, 1989. On February 25, 1989, prison officials intercepted a message he sent to Knut Folkerts. On March 28, 1989, Die Welt speculated that four sick or feeble prisoners, including Sonnenberg, might be released before the end of their prison terms. On May 8, 1992, the federal prosecutor applied for his early release.

Vasily Sosnovsky: Latvian mechanic who hijacked a Soviet Antonov 24 twin-engine turboprop flying from Riga to Daugavpils, Latvia, on May 26, 1977, and diverted it to Stockholm, Sweden. The Swedes denied extradition and granted political asylum. Sosnovsky claimed that he had been punished in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for a previous escape attempt and would be happier in a Swedish prison than free in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. On July 27, 1977, he was sentenced to four years.

Mustafa Soudeidan: one of two Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution or possibly al-Saiqa terrorists who took five hostages on board diesel passenger train number 2590, which left Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, and entered Marchegg, Austria, on September 28, 1973. Two of the hostages escaped. The gunmen later took off for Vienna's Schwechat Airport, where they demanded that Austria close down the Schonau Castle facility for Soviet Jewish émigrés and not allow further émigré transit through Austria. The hostages were newly arrived Soviet Jews on their way to Israel. The Austrians agreed to safe passage. After refueling stops in Yugoslavia and Italy, the plane was denied landing by Tunisia and Algeria and eventually landed in Libya. In December 1973, Libya announced that the duo had been released to fight against Israel. Some reports claimed that the duo had trained in a Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine camp in Lebanon. One of them participated in the December 1975 Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries raid.

Nayir Souner: arrested in 1983 in connection with the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia bombing of Orly Airport.

Nejelko Sovulj: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for resistance) who were arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, he was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot, planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency, and planning to assassinate a political opponent.

Ishmail Hassan Sowan: variant Ismael. Jordanian serving as a Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) research assistant who was arrested on August 17, 1987, by Scotland Yard in a raid on a Westbourne Avenue flat in Hull, Humberside, under the Prevention of Terrorism Act. They seized 30 kilograms of Czech-made Semtex high explosives, four assault rifles, seven hand grenades, detonators and clocks for making bombs, eight magazines loaded with ammunition, and a large quantity of .38- and 9-mm ammunition in the dawn raid in connection with the July 22, 1987, killing of Ali Naji Awad al-Adhami, a Palestinian political cartoonist. Sowan had been in the United Kingdom since 1984, studying for a degree at Bath University. He lived in the flat with his wife. He was charged with several arms offenses. Police suggested that the cache was to be used for an Arab terrorist blitz in Europe. On June 17, 1988, Sowan was sentenced to 11 years on weapons charges. The United Kingdom said he was a double agent recruited by Mossad to penetrate Fatah's Force 17, an elite PLO unit believed responsible for an assassination in the United Kingdom.

Ismael Sowan: variant of Ishmail Hassan Sowan.

Jeffrey Sowden: Cypriot police asked Interpol's aid in finding Sowden, who resided in the United Kingdom and held a South African passport, following the assassination of two Palestine Liberation Organization officials in Cyprus on December 15, 1979.

Cevat Soysal: leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) arrested on July 17, 1999, by Turkish authorities. The PKK said he was handed over to Turkish authorities by Moldova. PKK leader Abdullah Ocalan claimed that Soysal was in charge of training rebels abroad. Germany granted political asylum to Soysal. He was flown to Ankara, Turkey, to face charges of organizing separatist activity. He appeared in a Turkish court on July 23, 1999.

Angelika Speitel: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry, and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. Speitel was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. She was sentenced for murder in 1979 for the fatal shooting of policeman Hans-Wilhelm Hansen in Dortmund on September 24, 1978. She was pardoned by the West German president.

Dimicias Speranzo: Italian immigrant who, on April 4, 1979, carrying bombs on his body and in his hands, grabbed a woman in the Sydney, Australia, airport terminal and took over a Pan American World Airways B727 scheduled to fly to Los Angeles, California. He wanted to go to Italy to meet with the pope and Communist leader Enrico Berlinguer and then to go Moscow. An antihijack squad shot him to death.

Ernst Volker-Wilhelm Staub: one of six suspected Red Army Faction (RAF) members who were arrested on July 2, 1984, in a police raid on a Frankfurt, Germany, apartment. A resident reported that a bullet had pierced his ceiling which was the terrorists' floor. The raid uncovered a cache of guns, hand grenades, timing devices, walkie-talkies, and a large amount of money, along with logistical plans outlining planned attacks against clubs for U.S. troops, barracks, mess halls, and the residences of commanders. He was charged on September 15, 1985, with terrorist incidents perpetrated since 1977. He became one of Germany's Most Wanted RAF terrorists as of April 1, 1991. It was unclear whether he was involved in the RAF killing of Detlev Karsten Rohwedder, chief of the Berlin Trust Agency, on that day in a bombing in front of his Duesseldorf apartment. He was also wanted for questioning in the attack on Trust Agency Chief Rohwedder and State Secretary Hans Neusel.

Sigrid Sternbeck: variant Sternebeck. Named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. Sternbeck was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. On August 13, 1985, police were looking for her as the woman who left a disco on August 7, 1985, with Edward F. Pimental, a U.S. serviceman attached to the 563rd Ordinance Company in Wiesbaden. He was shot in the back of the neck the morning of August 8, 1985. She matched the description of the person who used his ID card to drive an Audi with stolen license plates onto the U.S. Rhein-Main Air Base near Frankfurt on August 8, 1985. The car exploded, killing 2 Americans and injuring 19 German and U.S. citizens. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the "hard core" of RAF members.

On June 15, 1990, Sternbeck was arrested in Schwedt, East Germany, near Frankfurt-on-Oder on the Polish border. She offered no resistance when detectives arrested her at the Angermuende station after leaving the Berlin-Angermuende express train. From 1977 to 1980 she lived mainly in France and the Netherlands. She admitted having regular contact with the East German intelligence service since 1980, when she arrived in the country using a West German passport for Ulrike Fildberg, born on July 18, 1950. She received the passport from other RAF members. The Stasi helped her get an apartment and a job in Schwedt as a photographer and photocopier.

On June 22, 1992, the Stuttgart Higher Regional Court sentenced her to eight and a half years for preparing the explosives attack on North Atlantic Treaty Organization commander in chief Alexander Haig in June 1979. She was found guilty of aiding in hostage taking, attempted murder, and setting off a bomb. She had earlier renounced RAF ties.

Sigrid Sternebeck: variant of Sigrid Sternbeck.

Rados Stevlic: one of two members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO or SEPO), an anti-Communist Serbian émigré group, arrested by Chicago, Illinois, police on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington, D.C. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges. The SOPO terrorist was found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago. He was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

Ante Stojanom: leader of a group of Croatian terrorists that included a duo who entered the Yugoslavian Embassy in Sweden on April 7, 1971, and shot Vladimir Rolovic, the Yugoslavian ambassador to Sweden, several times and wounded Mira Stemphihar, a secretary. Rolovic died on April 15. The duo was charged with murder on April 16 in a Stockholm court, along with a third man suspected of aiding them. They were sentenced by the Stockholm city court to life in prison on July 14. Stojanom received a four-year term. On July 14, the London Times reported that the group planned to form a terrorist group that would attack people in Sweden suspected of working for Yugoslavia against the Croatians.

On September 15, 1972, three Croatian émigrés hijacked a Scandinavian Airlines airliner and obtained the release of six Croatian terrorists being held in Swedish jails. The plane was flown to Spain, where authorities apprehended all nine Croatians. The six who had been released in Sweden were permitted to leave Spain for Paraguay on June 23, 1974. Sweden requested the extradition of three of them for the Rolovic killing. As of 1979, Paraguayan authorities had issued warrants for their arrest, but they had not been found. Some press reports speculated that they had fled to Uruguay.

In May 1980, one of the Croatians accused in the assassination was extradited to Sweden by the United States. He had been turned over to the United States for prosecution on charges of fraudulently applying for a visa to enter the United States in December 1979 but was acquitted.

Willy Peter Stoll: named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. He was also on the wanted list for the murder of Juergen Ponto. On December 20, 1977, the Swiss incorrectly announced that they had arrested him on the French border; they had really arrested Christian Moller.

Moreno Stortini: Italian arrested with two Argentines on September 22, 1987, in Rome in connection with the January 13, 1987, shooting and wounding of Colombian ambassador Enrique Parejo Gonzalez in Hungary. The Hernan Botero Moreno Command, a narco group, claimed credit. The men were arrested at their Treasury offices.

Dusan Styk: one of two Czech teen hijackers who, on March 29, 1989, shot their way onto a Hungarian Malev Tupolev-154B on its regular Budapest–Prague–Amsterdam–Barcelona route in Prague and demanded to be flown to the United States. He was born on February 13, 1973. Both hijackers lived in the Banska Bystrica District. They surrendered in Frankfurt. The Americans took custody of the duo and handed them over to German police. The duo wanted to stay in West Germany. On March 30, 1989, the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs requested their extradition. They repeated the request on April 13, May 5, and June 8. On August 29, 1989, a Frankfurt am Main court sentenced them to two years to be served in a juvenile detention center, where they were to study German and learn automobile mechanics. On September 13, 1989, Bonn denied extradition, saying that the offenses fell within West German legislation.

Isam al-Sufriti: wanted by Nicosia, Cyprus, police in connection with the shooting of Hisham al-Sa'udi, a Yemeni Palestinian director of an off-shore company, on January 31, 1985.

'Adnan Sujud: on February 27, 1992, French Judge Jean-Louis Bruguiere issued an international arrest warrant for Sujud in connection with the July 11, 1988, Abu Nidal attack on the Greek ship City of Poros that killed 9 people and injured 80. The warrants charged him with murder and attempted murder. He was the only one of the four defendants thought to have been on the ship at the time of the attack. Greek authorities believed that Sujud threw grenades and sprayed passengers with gunfire.

Mahab H. Suleiman: one of two members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) who threw grenades and fired a machine gun in the Athens airport at an El Al plane waiting to take off for New York on its way from Tel Aviv, Israel, on December 26, 1968. Israeli passenger Leon Shirdan was killed, and a stewardess suffered a fractured leg and spinal injuries when she jumped out of the plane. The PFLP duo was immediately arrested by Greek police; they were convicted and sentenced on March 26, 1970. Suleiman received 14 years and 3 months for interference with air traffic, arson, and illegal use and possession of explosives. Suleiman, age 19, was from Tripoli, Libya. The duo was freed on July 22, 1970, when six Palestinians hijacked an Olympic Airways plane to Beirut, Lebanon.

Aleksandr Suslikov: on March 22, 2001, he was sentenced to six years in Russia for attempting to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Igor Suslov: one of 15 prisoners who, on August 19, 1990, hijacked an Aeroflot Tupolev 154 flying the prisoners between Neryungri and Yakutsk and demanded to be flown abroad. The plane landed in New Delhi, India, and later Karachi, Pakistan, where the hijackers surrendered to local authorities and requested political asylum. The Pakistanis initially granted asylum to 11 Soviet hijackers but then took them into custody. They were to be charged with hijacking, for which the penalty can be death or 25 years in jail. On August 21, the deputy chairman of Uzbekistan's KGB said the 11 would be extradited. On September 2, a special Pakistani court handling anti-terrorist cases sent to prison the 11 hijackers after finding them guilty of charges of hijacking and possessing unlicensed weapons. On September 4, Tass said that the Karachi court had decided to remand the hijackers in custody until September 23. By November 20, all of the hijackers had been sentenced to various terms in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and were awaiting trial by Pakistani courts. Suslov committed suicide on October 5.

Vladimir Svetlik: one of two crewmen of a Czech DC3 heading from Ostrava to Prague, Czechoslovakia, that was hijacked on March 24, 1950, to Erding in the U.S. zone of Germany, who were believed to be involved in the plot.

Roman Svistunov: former Aeroflot employee from Nikolayev, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, who, on May 27, 1987, stole an Antonov-2 single-engine crop duster in Saldus, a small town near Riga, Latvia, ditched the plane in the Baltic Sea, and waded ashore to Gotland, a Swedish island. He left behind an estranged wife and two children. The Soviets demanded extradition of the asylum seeker. On September 3, 1987, Tass reported that Stockholm authorities had given him a residence permit and a job. On November 27, 1987, Moscow's Sovetskaya Rossiya reported that a court at Visby on Gotland Island found him guilty of hijacking but gave him a two-year suspended sentence. On October 21, 1988, the Latvian SSR Supreme Court Civil Cases Collegium substantiated the action for more than 350,000 rubles in material damages brought by the Latvian Civil Aviation Administration against the hijack. The decision was conveyed to Sweden for examination by a regional court.

Stavros Sykopezides: New York City hotel cashier who was wrestled to the ground by security guards after he lunged at former Turkish prime minister Bulent Ecevit during a protest demonstration on July 26, 1976. The Cypriot was indicted for assault and held on $100,000 bail.

Wieslaw Szymankiewicz: radio mechanic, age 20, who joined Ceslaw Romuald Zolotuch, age 18, in hijacking a Lot Antonov 24 flying the Wrocław–Warsaw–Bratislava run on November 20, 1969, and diverting it to Vienna, Austria. He was sentenced to 27 months in jail and ordered expelled from Austria after serving his term.

T

---

Ayhan T.: Langen, Germany, resident, who was detained briefly on December 31, 2006, on suspicion of surveilling Hutier Barracks in Lamboy, a U.S. military barracks in a section of Hanau, Germany. He was wanted in connection with the September 4, 2007, arrest of two Germans and one Turkish citizen at their rented house on Oak Lane in Oberschledorn; they were planning “massive” attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer’s gun and shot him in the hand. One of the terrorists escaped through a window but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freudenstadt. The concentrated chemicals were equivalent to 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group which has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of them had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were white Germans, not foreigners, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization. Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group’s activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented the three-bedroom vacation cottage in the skiing and tourist locale where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects’ vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

German Federal Bureau of Criminal Investigation agents searching the apartment of Ayhan T. found a video of several men singing jihad songs in Turkish. After the sing-a-long, he talked about jihad in front of the camera.

Talip T.: one of three Muslim men arrested on September 27, 2001, by police in Wiesbaden, Germany, for planning terrorist attacks in the country. Talip T. was a Turk, age 27, charged with possession of weapons and forging documents. His Internet site solicited money for the Taliban and provided information on “military training for The Fight.” Searches of their apartments yielded a loaded weapon, large amounts of cash, and forged documents. Police seized computers, cell phones, and open-return airline tickets between London and Islamabad, Pakistan. The e-mail list of one of the individuals included the address of Said Bahaji, age 26, who lived with three of the 9/11 hijackers.

Vatch Navar Tagihitan: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through the Lisbon airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Ali Shafik Ahmed Taha: aliases Captain Rafat, Ahmed Mousa Awad. One of three Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers of an EL Al B707 going from Rome to Tel Aviv's Lod Airport in Israel on July 22, 1968. The plane was diverted to Algiers, where the hijackers demanded the release of 1,200 Palestinian prisoners from Israeli jails. The Algerians held the trio at a military camp for the balance of the negotiations.

He led a Black September hijacking on May 8, 1972, of Sabena Airlines Flight 517, a B707 flying the Vienna–Athens–Tel Aviv route over Zagreb by two male and two female Black September members. The group landed at Lod Airport in Israel and demanded the release of 317 fedayeen prisoners, most of them held at Ramleh Prison. They threatened to blow up the plane and all aboard. He was killed when Israeli forces stormed the plane.

In 1969, he had supervised the two Young Tigers of the PFLP's Ho Chi Minh section who bombed the Brussels office of El Al. He was also a member of the Revolution Airstrip commando squad in 1970 during the PFLP's multiple hijackings. In 1971, he joined Black September.

His release was demanded by the four Black September terrorists who took over the Israeli Embassy in Bangkok on December 28, 1972.

Abu Taleb: Palestine Liberation Organization mediator who was nonetheless believed to have been involved in the preparation and planning of the Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979.

Muhammad Abu Talib: variant Talb. Linked to the December 21, 1988, Lockerbie bombing of Pan American World Airways Flight 103, in which 270 people died. He was one of 15 members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command (PFLP-GC) arrested on May 18, 1989, in Sweden on suspicion of involvement in explosions in Copenhagen, Denmark, and other crimes. On December 21, 1989, he was convicted of murder and gross destruction dangerous to the public and sentenced by the Uppsala town court to life in prison for setting off two bombs in Copenhagen in July 1985 against the synagogue and against the Northwest Orient Airlines office, in which one person was killed and several others injured. He was found innocent of the bombing of Northwest Orient Airlines office in Stockholm, Sweden, in April 1986. He was to be expelled from the country forever after the sentence was served (presumably, parole was a possibility). On November 2, 1989, the PFLP-GC denied that he was connected with the group. Some observers believed he was part of the Palestine Popular Struggle Front, headquartered in Damascus, Syria, and financed by Libya. ABC quoted Swedish police as saying that he bought the clothing found in the suitcase in which the Pan Am bomb exploded. He visited Malta on October 19–26, 1988. He traveled to Cyprus on October 3–18, 1988, where some of the planning for the attack was believed to have taken place. He was one of 14 Arabs arrested on October 26, 1988, in Neuss, West Germany, where police found a weapons cache, including altitude-sensitive detonators that matched components used in the Lockerbie bomb.

He received SAM-3 missile training in the Soviet Union. He joined an Egyptian-sponsored Palestinian military unit in 1967 at age 15. While with the Popular Struggle Front, he returned to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics for training in political organizing. His wife, Jamilah al-Moghrabi, is the sister of one of his fellow defendants.

Medetbek Taliyev: alias of Azizbek Karimov.

Zaurbek Talkhigov: sentenced on June 2003 by Russian authorities to eight and a half years for tipping off terrorists about police attempts to rescue the 900 hostages following the October 23, 2002, takeover by Chechen terrorists of a Moscow theater.

Sulejman Talovic: on February 12, 2007, yelling, "Allah akbar," the Bosnian Muslim immigrant, age 18, fired a .38-caliber pistol and a shotgun at shoppers in Salt Lake City's Trolley Square shopping mall in Utah, killing five people and injuring another four before an off-duty policeman from Ogden City shot him to death.

Kadir Tandogan: one of three members of the Marxist-Leninist Armed Propaganda Unit who shot and killed Master Chief Boatswain's Mate Sam A. Novello, a U.S. citizen, and his Turkish driver, Sabri Bayraktar, on April 16, 1980. The trio escaped on a motorcycle but was arrested following a clash with police, in which Tandogan was slightly wounded. An Istanbul, Turkey, military court sentenced him to death on October 13, 1980. He was executed the morning of June 25, 1981.

Ahmet Taner: one of three members of the Marxist-Leninist Armed Propaganda Unit who shot and killed Master Chief Boatswain's Mate Sam A. Novello, a U.S. citizen, and his Turkish driver, Sabri Bayraktar, on April 16, 1980. The trio escaped on a motorcycle but was arrested following a clash with police. An Istanbul, Turkey, military court sentenced him to death on October 13, 1980. He was executed the morning of June 25, 1981.

Rima Tannous: one of four Black September hijackers on May 8, 1972, of Sabena Airlines Flight 517, a B707 flying the Vienna–Athens–Tel Aviv route over Zagreb. The group landed at Lod Airport in Israel and demanded the release of 317 fedayeen prisoners, most of them held at Ramleh Prison. They threatened to blow up the plane and all aboard. She was captured when Israeli forces stormed the plane. The two male hijackers died in the rescue.

Tannous was an orphan who was reared by nuns. She entered nursing in Amman, Jordan. She claimed that she was raped by a young man and then became a mistress to a Fatah doctor who gave her drugs. She said that she was forced to sleep with Fatah members and was beaten or refused morphine if she refused. She claimed that she was totally dependent on Fatah for food and money. "I had to comply with their orders. I had as much free will as a robot." She was selected for a special course in sabotage and subjected to an intense loyalty test.

The two female hijackers were tried in a military court in the theater of the old British Army camp at Sarafand. They were charged for terrorist crimes in violation of Point 58.d of the 1945 British Mandatory Government's Defence (Emergency) Regulations and for being members of the unlawful El Fatah association, contrary to Point 85.1.a. The women, claiming constraint according to Section 17 of the Criminal Code Ordinance of 1936, said that they were forced to carry the arms and were not willing members of Fatah. The tribunal rejected that defense, noting that the law allowed that defense only if there was an immediate threat of death or grievous harm, which did not appear to be the case. One of the judges demanded the death sentence for the women after they were found guilty of the three charges. His colleagues disagreed, and on August 14, 1972, the two were sentenced to life in prison. Her release was demanded by the four Black September terrorists who took over the Israeli Embassy in Bangkok, Thailand, on December 28, 1972.

Rajab Mukhtar Tarhuni: variant of Recep Muhtar Rohama Tarhuni.

Recep Muhtar Rohama Tarhuni: variant Rajab Mukhtar Tarhuni. One of two Libyans who when stopped by police on April 18, 1986, in front of the U.S. officer's club in Ankara, Turkey, threw away a bag containing six grenades and ran. They were apprehended. The attack was to occur during a wedding party attended by 100 people. The terrorists were aided by a Libyan diplomat at the local embassy. On April 28, 1986, the duo was charged with conspiracy to kill a group of people and with smuggling arms. The duo entered Turkey on April 16, 1986, and contacted Umrans Mansur, manager of the Libyan Arab Airlines office in Istanbul. He allegedly selected the target. The grenades were supplied by Mohammad Shaban Hassan, a Libyan Embassy employee in charge of administrative affairs who met with the duo on April 17 and 18. The trial began on May 13, 1986, in the State Security Court. On June 7, 1986, he was convicted of possession of explosives and was sentenced to five years in prison. The duo was acquitted of the more serious conspiracy charges. The Court of Appeals revoked the decision on the grounds that they were not punished for establishing an organization for the aim of committing a crime. During a retrial, the court insisted on its previous decision, causing a second revocation by the Court of Appeals Criminal Assembly. On April 14, 1988, Tarhuni was sentenced to eight years and four months in prison for establishing an armed organization with the purpose of killing more than one person. He was also fined 62,500 Turkish liras.

George Tartajian: Armenian shirtmaker who was arrested on April 15, 1994, in connection with the April 12, 1994, assassination by an Iraqi gunman of Talib al-Suhayl al-Tamimi, a leading member of the London-based Free Iraqi Council opposition group in Beirut, Lebanon, during the night. He apparently helped the gunmen reach the house of the victim.

Serdar Tatar: born in Turkey and legally residing in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Tatar, age 23, was among the six people arrested on May 7, 2007, by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, who were planning to attack Fort Dix and kill 100 soldiers with assault rifles and grenades. They were alleged to have conducted firearms training in the Pocono Mountains in Gouldsboro, Pennsylvania. The defendants used cell phones to conduct video surveillances. A Circuit City clerk spotted footage and jihad training videos they wanted transferred to DVD and alerted authorities in January 2006. An Egyptian military veteran worked with the FBI in befriending a suspect and taping conversations. The FBI said the investigation took 16 months.

Tatar worked at a 7-11 store. He was recruited by the Duka brothers, who were also arrested, at the South Jersey Islamic Center.

The group had considered Fort Monmouth in New Jersey, Dover Air Force Base in Delaware, the U.S. Coast Guard Building in Philadelphia, Fort Dix, and other locations. They picked Fort Dix because Serdar Tatar had delivered pizzas there from his family-owned Super Mario Pizza and had a map of the base. The group also planned to attack a U.S. naval base in Philadelphia just before the Army-Navy football game. He was charged with conspiring to kill military personnel, which carries a life sentence.

Lutz Manfred Tauber: one of the six members of the Socialist Patients' Collective who demanded the release of 26 prisoners held in jail for the deaths of 8 people and injuries to 100 others. They initially claimed they were members of the Holger Meins Commando who took over the West German Embassy in Stockholm on April 24, 1975, and killed Lt. Col. Andreas Baron von Mirach, the military attaché, and Heinz Hillegaart, the economic counselor. The Collective members' release demand included Andreas Baader, Ulrike Meinhof, Gudrun Ensslin, and Jan-Carl Raspe. The prisoners were to be given $20,000 each and flown to an unannounced location. A bomb exploded accidentally during the night, killing one of the terrorists and injuring 13 people. The terrorists threw down their submachine guns and were found by police wandering about the embassy grounds. The four terrorists who did not need extensive hospitalization were immediately extradited to Germany, to be later joined by Hanna Elisa Krabbe. On July 20, 1977, Tauber was sentenced by a Duesseldorf court to life in prison. On January 30, 1985, he gave up his prison hunger strike. On May 25, 1992, he said from Celle Prison that the Red Army Faction had renounced violence.

Ali Taziyeu: alias Magas. One of the leaders of the Chechen terrorists, age 30, who took over an elementary school in Beslan, Russia, on September 1, 2004. He was a former police officer who disappeared on October 10, 1998, while working as a guard for a local official. He and another police officer were guarding the official's wife in a market when Chechens kidnapped the trio. She was ransomed in late 1999. The other officer's body was found in 2000. Taziyeu was declared dead in 2001. However, he had joined the terrorists and led an attack in Ingushetia in June 2004. Some authorities believed he had staged the kidnapping and had joined the terrorists earlier. He became head of the Ingush Jamaat, a group allied with the Chechens. He led the June raids in Ingushetia, killing dozens of prosecutors and policemen. His alias, Magas, is a common name, first heard in the terrorist milieu in the April 2004 assassination attempt against Ingushetian president Murat Zyazikov. Taziyeu was killed in the gun battle that ended the siege.

Janusz Telarczyk: Polish sanitarian pilot who, on June 9, 1982, hijacked his Morava survey plane from Szczecin to Sturup Airport outside Malmo, Sweden, where he and his wife, two children, and a friend requested asylum.

Mehmet Refit Terzi: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Fritz Teufel: arrested on September 14, 1975, by West Berlin police for the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. Teufel was detained in a police sweep following a bombing in Hamburg that injured 11. His release was demanded by the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On September 28, 1977, the West German federal prosecutor's office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and kidnapped Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978.

Josip Tevek: one of three hijackers of the June 26, 1952, Yugoslavian National Airlines flight from Belgrade to Puola that was diverted to Foligno, Italy, where the trio requested asylum.

Thalassinos: would-be hijacker of an Olympic airliner flying from Athens, Greece, to Crete on October 26, 1971. He wanted to go to Rome but was overpowered.

Johannes Thimme: one of two suspected members of the Red Army Faction who, on January 20, 1985, wheeled a bomb in a baby carriage to a data-processing center in Stuttgart-Vaihingen, West Germany. The bomb exploded prematurely, killing Thimme, a twice-convicted terrorist.

Thomas Thoene: Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on June 22, 1987, and charged with setting off three bombs on August 11, 1986, at a barracks of the Federal Frontier Force in Swistal-Heimerzheim near Bonn, West Germany. On January 20, 1989, the Fifth Criminal Bench of the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court found the Duisburg resident guilty of bombing the Frontier barracks and the Fraunhofer Institute for Laser Technology in Aachen, Germany, in 1986. He was sentenced to 10 years. The State Prosecutor's Office was not able to prove that he was involved with the RAF.

Guia Tibidze: one of the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot Flight 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad on November 18, 1983. Tibidze demanded to be flown to Turkey but was shot and killed by one of the pilots.

Alexander Detlev Tiede: hijacker of a LOT Airlines Tupolev 134 from Warsaw to East Berlin via Gdansk, Poland, on August 30, 1978. The East German was accompanied by a woman and an 11-year-old child. U.S. military authorities held the trio after they landed at Tempelhof Airport in West Berlin. Tiede was tried and convicted by a specially constituted U.S. court in Berlin, Germany.

Ulrich Tillman: West German neo-Nazi terrorist arrested in the United Kingdom in February 1983 with Walter Kexel, who was wanted by French police for questioning about the August 9, 1982, machine gun attack on Jo Goldenberg's Restaurant on Rue des Rosiers in the Jewish Marias Quarter in Paris. On March 15, 1985, the State Protection Branch of the Frankfurt Higher Regional Court sentenced the right-wing terrorist to five years of juvenile detention for attempted murder, membership in a terrorist organization, explosives offences, grievous bodily harm, and bank robbery in connection with the December 14–15, 1982, detonation of explosives-packed fire extinguishers that injured two U.S. soldiers near Frankfurt.

Mikhail Timoshukov: on May 24, 1978, claiming to represent the Russian Liberation Army, Timoshukov seized two Soviet hostages in the Moscow office of Finnair and demanded to be flown out of the country. Following a gun battle in which he was injured, he was arrested. Tass said he was an escaped convict from Kazakhstan; other reports said he was from Semipolatsinsk in western Siberia.

Karl Tinter: one of seven anti-Communist Hungarian students who, on July 13, 1956, hijacked a Hungarian twin-engine Malev flying from Gyor to Szombathely, Hungary, and diverted it to Ingolstadt, West Germany, where the hijackers and two of the passengers requested political asylum.

Muhammed Tokcan: Turk of Abkhazian ancestry and leader of a group of pro-Chechen gunmen who, on January 16, 1996, hijacked the 3,800-ton Panama-registered Aurasya, a ferry bound for Sochi, Russia, and carrying 200 passengers and crew in Trabzon, threatening to sink it in the Bosphorus Strait unless Russian troops stopped their attacks on the Chechen hostage takers in Pervomayskoye, Dagestan, Russia. The pirates surrendered on January 19 in Riva Bay. On January 29, the Russian government demanded that Turkey try the nine pirates as international terrorists. Tokcan later escaped but was recaptured. He was released in December 2000 under an amnesty program that freed thousands of prisoners.

On April 22, 2001, Tokcan led a group of 13 armed Chechen sympathizers who took 120 staff members and guests hostage in the lobby of the exclusive Swissotel in Istanbul, Turkey. CNN-

Turk reporters called Tokcan on his cell phone, but he was “too busy” to talk. The gunmen surrendered their weapons to the concierge after releasing the hostages the next day. The gunmen said they wanted to publicize Russia’s unjust war against Chechnya. Police escorted them out of the lobby.

Sadi Toker: Turkish law student, age 27, who hijacked a Turkish Airways Viscount flying from Istanbul to Ankara, Turkey, on September 16, 1969, that was diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. The Turks said he was a former mental patient who had been hospitalized several times and who was released 10 days before the hijacking. He was involved in the stabbing of a U.S. soldier in 1967 during a visit of the U.S. Sixth Fleet but was declared mentally ill and escaped punishment. He had served several prison terms in Turkey and other countries. The Bulgarians announced that they would return him by land to Turkish authorities at the frontier. He was committed to a mental institution.

Francesco Tolino: one of several members of the Union of Communist Fighters of the Italian Red Brigades arrested in Paris on June 15, 1987. He had been living in France under an alias for several years. On November 7, 1987, he was expelled to Spain.

Raffaello Tolomei: one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany, Italy, police. He was charged with membership in an armed subversive group.

Usamah Tookan: signature used by one of the Palestinian gunmen who, on September 26, 1986, signed a statement asking their comrades not to seize hostages to obtain their release. He had been sentenced to life in Cyprus in February 1986 in connection with the takeover of an Israeli-owned yacht, the First, in which two Israeli hostages were held after killing a woman in the initial assault in Cyprus on September 25, 1985. After nine hours of negotiations, the terrorists killed the hostages and surrendered. Fatah Force 17 claimed credit.

Ubico Torokzik: one of two names signed on a communiqué by the Secret Anti-Communist Army after two fragmentation grenades were thrown from an automobile at the office and residence of Aleksandr Trushin, TASS correspondent in Guatemala, on May 18, 1988.

Davide Toschi: sailor and one of six suspected members of the Fighting Communist Party, a Red Brigades splinter group, arrested in November 1987 by Tuscany, Italy, police. He was charged with possessing explosives.

Vlastimil Toupalik: one of two Czech hijackers of a Czech YAK40 flying to Prague from Karlovy Vary (formerly Carlsbad) on October 11, 1977. The hijackers were members of the airline’s ground staff and were dressed in Czech Airlines uniforms. They carried pistols and forced the pilot to fly to Frankfurt, Germany, where they surrendered and asked for political asylum. The Czech news agency said Toupalik faced charges at home for failure to pay alimony. The hijackers were held on charges of endangering airline transportation.

Nizar Trabelsi: variant of Nizar Trabelzi.

Nizar Trabelzi: on September 13, 2001, Belgian police arrested the Tunisian former professional soccer player believed to have links to al Qaeda. Police seized from his apartment a submachine gun, ammunition, and chemical formulas for making explosives. Spain said he was in contact with six Algerian members of the Salafist Group for Call and Combat who had been arrested during the week. He had a longer criminal record and was linked to an individual arrested on the same day in the Netherlands. The group, also known as the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, was a dissident faction of Algeria’s Armed Islamic Group. Trabelzi was in Spain at the same time as 9/11 hijacker Muhammad Atta, although there was no public evidence about possible contact. Trabelsi was accused of planning to walk into the U.S. Embassy in Paris with a bomb taped to his chest. Spanish police said they had seized equipment for faking documents. The group may have furnished passports, plane tickets, and credit cards to Islamic radicals. Spain also seized three pair of night vision binoculars, a diary in which the writer said he wanted to be a suicide bomber, and videos showing Taliban attacks in Afghanistan. Similar charges were made on November 18 following another raid by Spanish police in which they found videos of attacks in Chechnya.

On September 30, 2003, Trabelzi was convicted of planning to bomb the NATO base at Kleine Brogel and was sentenced to a decade in prison. He admitted to planning to drive a car bomb into the cafeteria at Kleine Brogel, the Belgian air base believed to house U.S. nuclear weapons guarded by 100 U.S. troops. He said he intended to kill U.S. soldiers, not detonate the warheads. He said he had met Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan.

On December 21, 2007, Belgian police arrested 14 people allegedly seeking to forcibly free him.

Tsanikidhis: Greek, age 30, who, on November 8, 1994, hijacked an Olympic Airways B737 on the Duesseldorf–Thessaloniki–Athens route over Belgrade. The plane landed at Makedhonia Airport in Thessaloniki. He was overpowered by antiterrorist police.

Vicken Tscharkhutian: Iraqi arrested on June 6, 1982, at Orly Airport in Paris for complicity in a Swiss bank bombing and the May 30, 1982, placement of a bomb at the Air Canada freight terminal at Los Angeles International Airport. On August 18, 1982, the Paris Appeals Court recommended against extradition of the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia member.

David Tserkes: Russian emigrant resident in Israel who was arrested in Venice, Italy, in the 1990s, when his Opel was found to contain three kilograms of TNT, several detonators, several slow-burning fuses, and other bomb-making paraphernalia. He had arrived from Haifa on the Apollonia, a Greek ship, and was on his way to Munich, Germany.

Dr. Vassilios Tsironis: hijacker of an Olympic Airlines DC3 on the Athens–Agrinion–Ioannina run on August 16, 1969, which was diverted to Valona, Albania. He was accompanied by his wife and two sons. He was a minor Greek politician who had formed a political party that was highly critical of the Greek establishment. He had served several prison terms for his views. He was a former Greek Army nurse, age 40. The family moved on to Sweden. He was sentenced to three and a half years in prison on July 7, 1971.

Younis Tsouli: Internet screen alias Irhabi007. Moroccan living in London who served as a cyberterrorist for al Qaeda. In 2004, he posted a video of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi beheading American contractor Nicholas Berg in Iraq. He later broke into the servers of the Arkansas Highway Department and distributed al-Zarqawi's videos. He was also in contact with Syed Haris Ahmed, a Pakistani American, and Ehsanul Islam Sadequee, a Bangladeshi American, both of Atlanta, who, in March 2005, met with Canadian extremists in Toronto to explore attacking military bases and oil refineries. They gave him a video of potential U.S. targets, including fuel storage tanks on Interstate 95 near Lorton, Virginia, World Bank headquarters, the Pentagon, and the George Washington Masonic Memorial in Alexandria, Virginia. He was the administrator of the jihadi forum Muntada al-Ansar al-Islami, which had served as the propaganda outlet of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi. British authorities raided his apartment in West London in October 2005. He was logged on to youbombit.r8.org using his identity IRH007. On October 21, 2005, British police seized his hard drive that included photos of Washington, D.C., locations and a chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear (CBRN) heavy reconnaissance vehicle. He was charged with possessing other computer slides showing how to make a car bomb and with conspiring with fellow detainee Wassem Mughal, age 22, to cause explosions in the United Kingdom and with Tariq al-Daour, age 19, to commit credit card fraud. Tsouli and Mughal were charged with conspiracy to murder and to cause an explosion. Prosecutors said they ran Web sites that linked terrorists in Denmark, Bosnia, Iraq, the United States, and United Kingdom. The sites included beheading videos. One of their laptops included a PowerPoint presentation titled "The Illustrated Booby Trapping Course" that included how to create a suicide vest loaded with ball bearings. Tsouli was asked by al Qaeda to translate into English its e-book The Tip of the Camel's Hump. The trio also stole data for hundreds of credit cards, which they used to purchase supplies for operatives and laundered money through 350 transactions at 43 Internet gambling sites, including absolutepoker.com, betfair.com, betonbet.com, canbet.com, eurobet.com, noblepoker.com, and paradisepoker.com, using 130 credit card accounts. He and his colleagues made more than $3.5 million in fraudulent charges for GPS devices, night-vision goggles, sleeping bags, telephones, survival knives, hundreds of prepaid cell phones, tents, and more than 250 airline tickets using 110 different credit cards at 46 airline and travel agencies. They used 72 credit card accounts to register more than 180 domains at 95 Web hosting firms in the United States and Europe. Al-Daour's computer contained 37,000 stolen credit card numbers. On July 5, 2007, a London court sentenced him to 10 years after he pleaded guilty to inciting murder on the Internet. He is the son of a Moroccan diplomat.

Hilmi Tuglaoglu: husband of Leyla Tuglaoglu. The couple was among 22 Turks extradited to Turkey by Syria on November 30, 2003, in connection with a series of al Qaeda truck bombings that month in Turkey. They were believed linked to Azad Ekinci, age 27, who police said bought two of the Isuzu trucks used in the bombings and who was believed to have masterminded the attacks.

Leyla Tuglaoglu: wife of Hilmi Tuglaoglu. The couple was among 22 Turks extradited to Turkey by Syria on November 30, 2003, in connection with a series of al Qaeda truck bombings that month in Turkey. They were believed linked to Azad Ekinci, age 27, who police said bought two of the Isuzu trucks used in the bombings and who was believed to have masterminded the attacks.

Serge Tumanyan: one of three hijackers of a YAK12 chartered passenger plane of the Russian domestic air service on September 10, 1961. The three Armenians attempted to divert the plane to Turkey. When the pilot attempted to throw the attackers off balance, the trio stabbed him several times. When the plane crashed, one hijacker died. The remaining hijackers were captured and sentenced to death.

Remziye Turhan: alias Deniz. One of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Ahmet Turk: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. Turk was sentenced to 15 years.

Henri Tutuzan: variant Henri Titizian; alias of Hagop Hagopian.

Kamolakham Tuychieva: one of four Uzbeks, age 41, arrested in a van in Parkin, Arkansas, and questioned by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) regarding possible connections to terrorism. As of November 2001, he remained in federal custody in connection with the FBI's investigation of the 9/11 attacks. By November 2002, he had been released.

Vassilis Tzortzatos: electrician, age 48, charged in Greece on July 19, 2002, with killing eight Greeks, including businessmen, politicians, and police officers, during the November 17 group's terrorism campaign.

U

---

S.U.: received a six-year unsuspended sentence on July 28, 1978, by the Bratislava Regional Court in connection with plans to hijack a plane in April 1978 on the Bratislava–Prague route. He was assigned to the Second Correctional-Educational Group on charges of planning to threaten the security of an aircraft and leaving the republic

Numan Ucar: Swedish police announced on September 2, 1987, that this Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) militant was wanted for questioning in the February 28, 1986, assassination of Swedish prime minister Olaf Palme in Stockholm, Sweden.

Abuzer Ugurlu: Turkish criminal reportedly involved in smuggling for Bulgarians. The Italian press claimed on December 7, 1982, that Ugurlu had served as a link between Mehmet Ali Agca and the Bulgarians in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. Ugurlu was jailed in 1982.

Ahmet Ugurlu: from Eskisehir, Turkey. His name appeared on the registration papers for one of the trucks used in the suicide bombings of two Turkish synagogues on November 15, 2003, that killed 25 and wounded 303. He said that his son Feridun had stolen his ID card and had not been in contact with his family for several months. He was later tentatively identified as one of the two al Qaeda suicide bombers, who on November 20, 2003, set off truck bombs at the British Consulate and HSBC bank headquarters, a British bank, killing at least 30 people and wounding 450.

Feridun Ugurlu: bomber in the November 20, 2003, attack on the British Consulate in Turkey, in which 17 died.

Afgan Unal: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front.

Kasim Unal: imam of the Sochaux mosque who was expelled from France in August 1994. He was a member of the Anatolian Federal Islamic State, a radical fundamentalist movement.

Mihrac Ural: Syrian leader in 1980 of the outlawed Turkish People's Liberation Party Acilciler organization. He married the secretary of Rif'at al-Asad, brother of the Syrian president.

Usame: alias of Ekrem K.

V

---

Ali Rad Vakili: Iranian briefly detained by French police who later believed that he was a member of the hit squad that, on August 6, 1991, stabbed to death former Iranian premier Shapur Bakhtiar in his Paris home. He and an associate had tried to enter Switzerland on August 7 with forged visas in Turkish passports in the names of Musa Kocer and Ali Kaya. They were turned over to French authorities, who released them because they had valid French visas. On August 14, the People's Mujahedeen exile group said he was a member of the Al Qoods (Jerusalem) Force, a terrorist unit in the Iranian Revolutionary Guard. Paris AFP reported on August 16 that Vakili had escaped detection at a Geneva hotel because the local police computer had broken down, preventing an identity check of the man who had checked into the Hotel Windsor as Musa Kocer. Police missed the arrest by three hours. However, Geneva police arrested him on August 21 as he was walking on a beach before dawn. He was extradited to France on August 27 and charged in Paris with murder and criminal association in connection with terrorism. On December 6, 1994, a Paris terrorism court convicted him and sentenced him to life in prison.

Marc Van Dam: one of two Belgians arrested on March 15, 1991, by Colombian security forces in Barranquilla for involvement in at least four armed robberies and the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnapping on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. They were also affiliates of Medellin cocaine cartel leader Pablo Escobar. They apparently had signed up as mercenaries for the cartel, which was reconstituting its terrorist infrastructure. They entered through Brazil four months earlier after leaving Belgium. They each had a dozen faked national ID cards with different aliases, $170,000 in cash—which they offered the arresting officers—and several telephone numbers of cartel members in Medellin. They were to be returned to Belgium on March 21, 1991, on a special Belgian military plane.

Elisabeth van Dyck: wanted in connection with arms thefts and named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz.

Guido Luciaan van Hecken: Belgian named as one of five white Communists who infiltrated South Africa and masterminded the African National Congress firing of four Soviet-made 122-mm rockets from Laudium, an Indian suburb, into Voortrekkerhoogte, a military base six miles from Pretoria, on August 13, 1981. He fled to the Motlana Institute in Maputo, Mozambique, where he was a lecturer.

Pascale Vandegeerde: one of four ringleaders of the Communist Combatant Cells who were arrested on December 16, 1985, in a fast-food restaurant in Belgium. On January 14, 1986, they were charged with the attempted murder of the night watchman at the Brussels-Lambert Bank, which had been bombed on November 4, 1985.

Michel Vander Elst: lawyer of Patrick Haemers, alleged leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. Vander Elst was arrested on March 24, 1989, on suspicion of masterminding the abduction. He was held after nine hours of questioning on charges of being the “author, coauthor or an accomplice in the kidnap” as well as charges of extortion and forgery.

Zdenek Vardan: sentenced by a Brno court on June 12, 1978, to one year for conspiracy to hijack a Czech plane.

Mikhail Varfolomeyev: on June 24, 1990, hijacked an Aeroflot TU-134 on an internal flight from Tallinn, Estonia, to Lvov, Ukraine, and diverted it to Helsinki, Finland, where he surrendered to police and requested asylum. He was arrested by the Helsinki City Court on June 27 and faced a 12-year sentence. The Soviets demanded extradition under a 1974 bilateral treaty. He told interrogators he lived near Leningrad and that he was politically persecuted in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics because of his pacifism. He preferred to go to Sweden but requested Finnish asylum. On August 10, the Finnish Ministry of Justice announced that it would extradite him on suspicion of hijacking an aircraft and rejected his request for political asylum. The Supreme Court agreed that there were legal grounds to extradite him. On August 23, he was handed over to Soviet officials at checkpoint Valima on the Finnish–Soviet border.

Vaslo Vargas: Hungarian deserter from the French Foreign Legion who was one of the Organization of the Secret Army members who machine-gunned French President de Gaulle’s car in the Paris suburb of Petit-Clamart on August 22, 1962. Vargas was sentenced to life in prison but was released in 1967 under an amnesty. He died on August 14, 1976, during an abortive holdup on a suburban Paris post office.

Anna Varsimashvili: Aeroflot lounge attendant who helped the eight would-be hijackers of Aeroflot Flight 6833, en route from Tbilisi, Georgia, to Leningrad, Russia, on November 18, 1983, smuggle weapons aboard. In August, she was given a five-year suspended sentence.

Jelio Kolev Vassiliev: variants Zelio, Zhelyo, Vasilev, Vasiley. Former secretary to Bulgaria’s military attaché in Rome. On December 4, 1982, Italy issued an arrest warrant for him in connection with the attempted assassination of the pope on May 13, 1981. He had returned to Bulgaria six months earlier. On February 28, 1983, Rome magistrates sent a judicial warning to Vassiliev in connection with an alleged plot to bomb Lech Walesa’s car during his January 1981 visit to Rome. On March 29, 1986, Judge Severino Santiapichi announced that the Rome jury had acquitted the Bulgarian on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope because of insufficient evidence.

Veli: charged on May 7, 1990, by the West German Federal Prosecutor’s Office in Karlsruhe with membership in the Kurdistan Workers’ Party (PKK). He was believed to be a member of PKK’s European central committee. He reportedly brought about “people’s court proceedings” against a former PKK functionary, and with others, to have physically maltreated him during interrogations. Veli was in investigative custody on September 21, 1989.

Vennikov: factory worker and one of two men who attempted, on September 2, 1990, to hijack a Soviet airliner in Kirghizia in central Asia as it was flying from Przhelyalsk to Frunze, the capital of Kirghizia, but were overpowered. They demanded to go to South Africa but were arrested. They came from Tokmak, Kirghizia. He stabbed himself several times during his arrest and had to be hospitalized.

Mariano Ventura Rodriguez: surrendered to Zaragoza, Spain, authorities after attempting to hijack an Iberian CV880 flying from Madrid to Zaragoza on January 7, 1970, and divert it to Athens, Greece, and Albania. Ventura, age 18, was sentenced to six years and one day.

Pavel Verner: junior executive for a Czech uranium plant who hijacked a twin-engine private executive plane flying from Pribram to Kosice, Czechoslovakia, on May 5, 1970. He wanted to seek political asylum and a job by diverting the plane to West Germany but instead flew to Linz, Austria. On landing, he stabbed the pilot with a penknife and knocked the other passenger unconscious. The other passenger was his boss. Austrian authorities arrested him. He was sentenced to a year in jail on September 2, 1970.

Ruzena Vickova: one of two Czech hijackers of a Czech YAK40 flying to Prague from Karlovy Vary (formerly Carlsbad) on October 11, 1977. The hijackers were members of the airline's ground staff and were dressed in Czech Airlines uniforms. They carried pistols and forced the pilot to fly to Frankfurt, Germany, where they surrendered and asked for political asylum. The hijackers were held on charges of endangering airline transportation.

Predrag Vidakovic: one of five individuals who were charged with the September 27, 1981, hijacking by German-speaking Croatians of a Yugoslav Airlines B737 flying from Dubrovnik, Croatia, to Belgrade, Serbia. The group demanded to be flown to Tel Aviv, Israel. The plane refueled at Ellinikon International Airport and then landed at Larnaca, Cyprus, after the Israelis refused landing privileges. The hijackers surrendered to police and were quickly extradited to Yugoslavia. The group was tried on February 9, 1982, in the Belgrade District Court.

Stejpan Vidovic: Yugoslav émigré detained in West Germany on November 11, 1978, after attacking several Yugoslav citizens in Konstanz, killing one and wounding two.

Inge Vielt: escaped from West Berlin's prison on July 7, 1976. She had been held for the February 27, 1975, Movement 2 June kidnapping of Peter Lorenz, chairman of the Berlin Christian Democratic Union. She was a former kindergarten teacher and leader of the Movement 2 June. She had been arrested in September 1975. Her release from a West German jail was demanded on June 27, 1976, by the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of Air France Flight 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv, Israel, to Paris and ultimately diverted to Entebbe, Uganda. She was named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. She had escaped from the Berlin women's jail. She was a member of the Movement 2 June until 1979, when she joined the RAF. On December 3, 1989, she was listed as one of the "hard core" of RAF members.

On June 12, 1990, Vielt was arrested in East Germany and extradited to the West. She was wanted for the 1972 bombing that killed a man at a boating facility in Berlin, the 1974 murder of Berlin Supreme Court president Guenter von Drenkmann, and the Lorenz kidnapping. Her neighbors in Magdeburg notified authorities after seeing West German wanted posters. She was charged in Koblenz on June 3, 1991, with membership in RAF and attempted murder in the attack on Gen. Haig and the shooting of a French policeman in August 1981 while being chased for a traffic violation in Paris. The policeman was paralyzed from his wounds.

Laurent Vigneron: French citizen initially identified by the Greek Merchant Marine Ministry as one of three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98. On January 10, 1989, the public prosecutor in Piraeus ruled that there was no evidence that Vigneron had participated in the attack. The family's lawyer was planning to bring a defamation suit.

Adrian Vila: one of two individuals who, on January 9, 1991, fired on the guard of the border post in Tropoje, Albanian, killing two border guards. On January 23, 1991, Yugoslav border authorities handed the duo over to Albanian authorities at the Hani Hotit border checkpoint.

Aleksandr Vilesov: claiming to have a bomb, on November 15, 1990, Vilesov hijacked an Aeroflot TU-134 flying from Leningrad to Moscow and diverted it to Helsinki's Vanta Airport in Finland, where he surrendered and requested political asylum. On January 24, 1991, Finland denied asylum. On February 21, 1991, the Finnish Supreme Court agreed to extradition. On February 28, 1991, he was handed over to Soviet authorities at the Trofianovka border crossing point near Vyborg. Tass said he would be tried in court soon.

German Lvovich Vishnyakov: one of four men who, on December 1, 1988, seized a bus with Soviet schoolchildren, a teacher, and a driver in Ordzhonikidze, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and traded them for $2 million in U.S. currency and an Ilyushin-76T jet transport. The Soviets provided an eight-man crew to fly from Mineralnyee Vody. They flew the next day to a military strip near Israel's Ben Gurion Airport, where they surrendered peacefully. On December 3, 1988, Israel extradited the hijackers. Vishnyakov's trial began on February 28, 1989, in Moscow. He was born in 1966, graduated from high school, and was unemployed. On March 17, 1989, three of the hijackers received 14 years each, part to be served in a labor camp. Another gang member who helped plot the hijacking but backed out at the last minute got three years.

Marco de Vittorio: member of the Armed Revolutionary Nuclei who, on May 2, 1985, was sentenced by a Rome court to 18 years and 2 months for a series of murders, attempted murders, bombings, and assaults between 1977 and 1981.

Mark Vlasic: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago, Illinois, on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan, New York City; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 which dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived, and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn, New York. The Brooklyn U.S. Court of Appeals restored two air piracy counts that had been dismissed by a U.S. district court on a motion by the hijackers, who were accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. On May 12, 1977, a New York Supreme Court justice sentenced him to a minimum of 6 years and maximum of 30 years in prison after he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of attempted kidnapping.

Andreas-Thomas Vogel: Vogel's release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On September 28, 1977, the West German Federal Prosecutor's Office indicted him for having been one of the Movement 2 June members who murdered Guenter von Drenkmann, president of the Berlin Higher Court, in November 1974 and kidnapped Peter Lorenz in February 1975. He was also accused of several bank robberies in which 861,340 marks were stolen and of stealing hunting weapons and other equipment from a gunsmith store. The trial was expected to begin in March 1978. On February 5, 1985, he ended his prison hunger strike.

Helmut Voigt: former East German Stasi colonel arrested by Greek police on September 6, 1992, while carrying a German passport that had been issued to Alfred Herman. He was wanted in more than 10 countries and was believed responsible for the December 1975 attack on Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries headquarters in Vienna, Austria, led by Carlos. German authorities wanted to extradite him for his part in the Maison de France bombing. Greek authorities said they would extradite him as soon as he was tried for traveling on a false passport, for which he faced eight months in jail. On April 1994, he was sentenced to four years as an accessory to murder and for the bombing on August 25, 1983, of the Maison de France French cultural center in Berlin, in which 1 person died and 22 were injured. He was accused of arranging for 25 kilograms of explosives to be handed over to Red Army Faction terrorist Johannes Weinrich.

Ulrich Juengen Von Hof: East German automobile mechanic, age 19, who was one of two hijackers of a Polish Lot Ilyushin 18 flying the Warsaw–East Berlin–Brussels run on October 19, 1969, that was diverted to West Berlin's Tegel Airport in the French sector. The duo was taken away by French authorities. They said they were in trouble with East German authorities for opposing the invasion of Czechoslovakia. On November 20, 1969, a French military tribunal found them guilty of having endangered air safety and hindering air traffic and sentenced them to two years in prison. The prosecutor had demanded three years for "exemplary punishment."

Count Ekkehard Freiherr von Seckendorf-Gudent: alias of Horst Winter.

Voyiatzis: Greek ordered detained in late 1988 as a member of the Anti-State Struggle Organization.

Jaroslav Vydra: one of three people who brandished a broken pistol on June 2, 1958, and forced the pilot of a domestic Czechoslovakian general aviation charter plane to fly to Vienna, Austria. The trio was arrested for extortion under threats, but the charges were dropped on June 6, 1958.

W

---

Christopher Wackernagel: wanted for bombing attacks and named by the West German Federal Criminal Office on October 19, 1977, as one of 16 individuals believed involved in the Red Army Faction kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. On November 10, 1977, the former actor was injured in Amsterdam, Netherlands, during a police attempt to arrest him and Gert Richard Schneider. The extradition trial was set for January 12, 1978. On September 5, 1980, he was sentenced in West Germany to five years in prison for attempted murder in a December 1977 shootout in the Netherlands.

Rolf Clemens Wagner: wanted for bombing attacks in West Germany and in connection with the Red Army Faction (RAF) kidnapping and murder of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. He was suspected of being the driver of the van used in the getaway in the Schleyer case. He was also one of four terrorists arrested in Yugoslavia in May 1978 who were later released in a dispute over extradition of Croatian terrorists. After a shootout in Switzerland on November 19, 1979, in which a female passerby was killed and two policemen and a woman were injured, Wagner was arrested as he sat quietly awaiting a train. On September 26, 1980, a Swiss court sentenced him to life in prison for murder and attempted murder during a Zurich bank holdup 10 months earlier.

On October 7, 1982, the Swiss agreed to extradite him, but he was eventually to return to Switzerland to serve out his life sentence. If convicted in West Germany, he would be sent back to West Germany—if he was paroled early in Switzerland—to serve any sentence imposed for the Schleyer kidnapping and murder. On March 13, 1985, the Duesseldorf Higher Regional Court sentenced him to two life sentences for the Schleyer murder. In November 1993, he was sentenced again to life for the June 1979 attack to kill North Atlantic Treaty Organization commander in chief Alexander Haig. On August 1, 1995, he was one of nine imprisoned RAF members who announced the start of a three-day hunger strike to protest the planned execution in the United States of Mumia Abu Jamal, who was convicted of killing a police officer.

'Abd al-Wakim: Iraqi whose eight-day detention was ordered by Limassol's district court in connection with the Black June attack in which a grenade was thrown into the Shoham, Limassol, Cyprus, offices of the Israeli shipping firm on September 23, 1981, injuring three female and two male Greek Cypriot employees.

Walid: alias Abu al-Lahd. Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine member claimed by Ha'aretz on November 13, 1986, of being one of the masked suicide terrorists who fired on and threw grenades at worshippers in the Neve Shalom, Istanbul, Turkey, synagogue on September 6, 1986, doused the 21 corpses with gasoline, and set them alight. Two terrorists who barred the door died in the attack when their grenades exploded in their hands. A third escaped. The attack was claimed by the Islamic Jihad, Abu Nidal, the Northern Arab League, the Islamic Resistance, the Palestinian Resistance Organization, the Fighting International Front-'Amrush Martyr Group, and the Organization of the Unity of the Arab North.

Abu al-Walid: coleader of the Islamic International Peacekeeping Brigade, which took part in the October 23, 2002, takeover by Chechen terrorists of a Moscow theater and the seizure of 900 hostages. On April 18, 2004, Abdullah Saeed Ghamdi, who was al-Walid's brother and who led Arab fighters in Chechnya, said that Abu Walid was killed in Chechnya a few days earlier. Abu Walid was wanted for organizing the subway bombing on February 6, 2004, that killed 41 and wounded more than 200 and was believed behind the 1999 apartment building bombings that killed hundreds.

Khaled Abul Walid: one of six Palestine Popular Struggle Front or, according to some reports, Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hijackers of an Olympic Airways B727 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to Athens, Greece, on July 22, 1970. In Athens, the hijackers negotiated for the release of seven Arab terrorists who were being held for the December 21, 1969, attack on an El Al airliner; the December 21, 1969, attempted hijacking of a Trans World Airlines plane; and the November 27, 1968, attack on the El Al office in Athens. The Greek government agreed to continue the trial of the two November 27, 1968, terrorists on July 24 and sentenced one terrorist to 11 years, one terrorist to 18 years, and then let them both go free. The seven freed terrorists flew to Cairo, Egypt.

Janusz Jakub "Koba" Walus: Polish immigrant, age 40, arrested in a Boksburg, South Africa, shopping center 30 minutes after the assassination on April 10, 1993, of South African Communist Party general secretary Chris Hani. He was believed to be the triggerman and had two guns with him. He was a member of the neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement. On October 14, 1993, he was convicted of murder and sentenced to death the next day. On December 1, 1994, the Conservative Party expressed shock that the appeals court affirmed the death sentence.

Claudia M. Wannersdorfer: one of two suspected members of the Red Army Faction (RAF) who, on January 20, 1985, wheeled a bomb in a baby carriage to a data-processing center in Stuttgart-Vaihingen, West Germany. The bomb exploded prematurely, seriously injuring her. On December 5, 1985, she was sentenced to eight years by the Stuttgart Provincial Court. She was part of a RAF hunger strike by 38 prisoners that began on February 1, 1989. On March 28, 1989, Die Welt speculated that four sick or feeble prisoners, including Wannersdorfer, might be released before the end of their prison terms.

Krzysztof Wasilewski: variant Krzystof. Member of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982. On September 30, 1982, Poland requested extradition, which Switzerland denied. The trial began on October 3, 1983. On October 10, 1983, Wasilewski received three years in prison and five years banishment from Switzerland.

Krzysztof Wasilewski: variant of Krzystof Wasilewski.

Johannes Weinrich: alias Klaus Muller. Attorney who rented a car that was used in the RPG-7 attack on an El Al Flight 707 in Orly Airport on January 13, 1975, and another that was used in the follow-up RPG-7 attack at Orly on January 19, 1975. He was codirector of the Roter Stern publishing house. He was linked to Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorist, heading his European operations. He was arrested in March 1975. He was a member of the Baader-Meinhof Gang. On June 1, 1995, he was arrested in Aden, Yemen, and extradited three days later to Berlin. He carried a Somali passport in the name of John Saleh. He had been picked up the previous month in a sweep by Yemeni authorities against southern separatists. He faced trial for the two January 1975 bazooka attacks; the 1981 bombing of the Radio Free Europe headquarters in Munich that injured a Romanian journalist; the April 1983 attack on the Saudi ambassador to Greece that injured the first secretary and his driver; and the August 25, 1983, bombing of the French Cultural Center in Berlin, in which 1 person was killed and 23 others injured. Weinrich carried 55 pounds of plastic explosives on a flight into East Berlin and stored them at the Syrian Embassy. German officials believed he had lived under the name Peter Schmidt in Damascus in 1991.

On January 17, 2000, Weinrich, age 52, was sentenced by a Berlin court to life in prison for murder in the bombing of the French Cultural Center in Berlin. His trial lasted nearly four years.

He was the friend and lover of Magdalena Kopp, who later married Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, also known as Carlos the Jackal.

Bendix Wendt: alias Dr. Vanda. Neo-Nazi weapons fanatic with experience in using explosives, who was wanted for questioning in a series of letter bombings in Europe in December 1993. He had been in prison several times and had acquired East German military equipment. He was a close friend of fellow suspect Arnulf Winfried Priem.

Thomas Weslau: his release was demanded by the Red Army Faction kidnappers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. His release was demanded by the Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism hijackers of Lufthansa Flight 181, a B737 scheduled to fly from the Spanish resort island of Mallorca to Frankfurt on October 13, 1977.

Viktor Widera: hijacker of an Air Canada DC8 scheduled to fly from Frankfurt, Germany, to Montreal and Toronto, Canada, on November 24, 1972. The gunman forced everyone off the plane except for a flight attendant. He demanded the release of several Czechs, one who was held by West Germany for hijacking a plane from Prague, Czechoslovakia, to Nuremberg, Germany. He requested a radio and while the cockpit door was open Widera was shot and killed by police.

Luka Widmar: Widmar, of Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, was injured when a bomb went off in the regional museum in the New Castle of Voelkermarkt in Carinthia, Austria, on September 18, 1979. He confessed to planting the bomb but said he had not intended to cause injury.

Piotr Winogrolzki: Polish militiaman assigned to guard against hijackings. On November 22, 1982, Winogrolzki used his two pistols and two hand grenades to hijack a Polish LOT AN24 flying from Wroclaw to Warsaw, Poland, and divert it to Tempelhof Airport in the U.S. sector of West Berlin. He jumped from the plane but was fired on by two other guards on board, wounding him in the right foot. He fired back at the guards but aimed his shots to avoid injury. Three other passengers requested political asylum. On April 18, 1983, the Berlin Regional Court sentenced him to five years in prison.

Horst Winter: alias Count Ekkehard Freiherr von Seckendorf-Gudent. Red Army Faction (RAF) member arrested on June 14, 1990, in East Germany. He was married to RAF member Monika Helbing, and they had a one-year-old son. The Berlin City Court issued an arrest warrant on June 17, 1990, following an earlier complaint from the German Democratic Republic (GDR) general state prosecutor about the refusal of the Central Municipal Court to arrest three RAF members. The couple was picked up in Frankfurt (Oder). They were wanted for several kidnappings and assassinations of prominent Germans in the late 1970s, including the slaying of Hanns-Martin Schleyer in 1977. The Federal Republic of Germany intended to request extradition, but there was a five-year statute of limitations for withdrawing GDR citizenship on the grounds of false information on naturalization. On July 27, 1990, Winter was freed by an East Berlin court. He was suspected of involvement in a bank robbery in Wuerzburg in 1984. The charges of RAF membership lapsed under a statute of limitations; he had been a GDR citizen since 1980.

Stefan Wisniewski: arrested in France on May 11, 1978, and extradited to West Germany a year later. On November 5, 1979, he was charged in Karlsruhe with murdering Hanns-Martin Schleyer on September 5, 1977. Schleyer was West Germany's most famous industrialist as president of the West German Employers' Association and the Confederation of Industry and a member of the board of directors of Mercedes-Benz. He was also charged with murdering Schleyer's bodyguards, kidnapping, attempted extortion, coercion, and forging documents. On December 4, 1981, the Duesseldorf Court sentenced him to life in prison. On March 13, 1993, he applied for early release; his sentence had apparently already been cut to 15 years.

Alexander Wolfert: member of the Austrian neo-Nazi scene arrested on December 9, 1993, by Vienna, Austria, police in connection with a series of letter bombings throughout Europe in December 1993. He was a member of the Parliamentary Opposition Loyal to the People, a neo-Nazi movement led by Gottfried Kuessel, who had been sentenced to 10 years in prison the previous summer for attempting to reestablish the National Socialist Democratic Workers Party. In a search of his Schwechat apartment, police found a laboratory where a minor explosion had apparently taken place. They also confiscated an arsenal, including 10 grenades and antitank mines. He fought as a mercenary in Croatia.

'Abd al-Hamid Wusaym: Jordanian arrested on September 24, 1981, in connection with the Black June attack in which a grenade was thrown into the Shoham, Limassol, Cyprus, offices of the Israeli shipping firm on September 23, 1981, injuring three female and two male Greek Cypriot employees.

Commandant Wysocki: alias of Florian Kruszyk. Leader of a group of armed Poles who seized the Polish Embassy in Bern, Switzerland, on September 6, 1982.

X

---

Haxi Hassan Xhaferi: Albanian and U.S. resident who hijacked Pan American World Airways Flight 119, a B707 flying from Beirut, Lebanon, to New York with a stopover in Rome on June 22, 1970, and diverted it to Cairo, Egypt. He said he was against U.S. imperialism in Vietnam and was seeking asylum. He also claimed to be a supporter of the Palestinian cause. Cairo police briefly detained him. On February 15, 1973, he was arrested in Los Angeles, California. He was tried and sentenced to 15 years for interference with a flight crew member on June 8, 1973.

Christodoulos Xiros: brother of Savas Xiros, he confessed to taking part in the murders of publisher Nikos Momferratos in 1985; a police officer in 1985; industrialist Dimitris Angelopoulos in 1986; U.S. Navy attaché William Nordeen in 1988; and the fatal car bombing of U.S. Air Force Sgt. Ronald O. Stewart in 1991. He was arrested in late June 2002 for membership in Greece's Revolutionary Organization 17 November.

Savas Xiros: variant Savas Xyros. Church icon painter, age 40 or 44, and son of a Greek Orthodox priest. On June 29, 2002, Xiros lost a hand when a bomb he was carrying exploded as he walked past a busy dock in Piraeus, Greece. He was arrested by police, who suspected he was a member of November 17. He was charged with possession of explosives and placed under guard at an Athens hospital. His fingerprints matched those found in a car used by the group in the 1997 murder of Greek shipowner Costis Peratikos. The pistol found on the street beside Xiros was used to shoot at a police officer during a 1984 robbery. ID documents and keys on Xiros led police to two apartment hideouts; a .45-caliber pistol used in 6 out of 23 November 17 killings was found in one of them. Two of his brothers were arrested. Christodoulos Xiros confessed to taking part in the murders of publisher Nikos Momferratos in 1985; a police officer in 1985; industrialist Dimitris Angelopoulos in 1986; U.S. Navy attaché William Nordeen in 1988; and the fatal car bombing of U.S. Air Force Sgt. Ronald O. Stewart in 1991. Vassilis Xiros confessed to the Peratikos killing and the assassination of British Military Attaché Stephen Saunders in 2000. Dionissis Georgiadis, who was also arrested, confessed to robberies and bombings in which no one was injured. Police found bombs, mortars, antitank rockets, and police uniforms among the Xiros family possessions.

On August 11, 2002, Savas Xiros told investigators that he fired the four killing shots at British military attaché Saunders after his accomplice's gun jammed. He offered 10 hours of testimony from his hospital bed, confessing to involvement in nine killing and dozens of bomb and rocket attacks. He apologized to the families of the victims, including a Turkish diplomat and U.S. captain Nordeen. Xiros was charged with killing Saunders and other offenses.

Savas Xyros: variant of Savas Xiros.

Y

---

Viken Yacoubian: Armenian convicted of a 1982 plot to blow up the office of a Turkish diplomat. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Ninth Circuit (San Francisco) ruled that he could be deported because a judge lacked the jurisdiction to naturalize him. The decision quashed a federal judge's granting of citizenship after the Immigration and Naturalization Service refused his application.

Bedri Yagan: second in command of the Turkish Revolutionary Left (Dev Sol), he escaped from an Istanbul, Turkey, prison on October 25, 1989. He was killed in 1993 in a police raid.

S. V. Yagmurzhik: one of two armed men who, on September 20, 1986, seized a TU-134 airliner at Ufa Airport in the Ural Mountains of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and shot and killed two passengers before being killed themselves. The plane was en route from Kiev, Ukraine, to Nizhnevartovsk, Russia.

Simon Khacher Yahniyon: one of five armed members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army who fired on guards and then took hostages at the Turkish Embassy in Lisbon, Portugal, on July 27, 1983. The terrorists set off bombs in the building, killing themselves and two hostages. They had entered through the Lisbon airport as tourists using Lebanese passports, one of which had expired in March 1983.

Pavel Lvovich Yakshiyants: truck driver from Krasnodar and leader of four men and his wife, Tamara, who, on December 1, 1988, seized a bus with Soviet schoolchildren, a teacher, and a driver in Ordzhonikidze, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and traded them for $2 million in U.S. currency and an Ilyushin-76T jet transport. The Soviets provided an eight-man crew to fly from Mineralnyee Vody. They flew the next day to a military strip near Israel's Ben Gurion Airport, where they surrendered peacefully. On December 3, 1988, Israel extradited the hijackers. Yakshiyants's trial began on February 28, 1989, in Moscow. He was born in 1950, was a high school graduate, and reportedly had three previous convictions. On March 17, 1989, he was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Tamara Yakshiyants: wife of the leader of four men who on December 1, 1988, seized a bus with Soviet schoolchildren, a teacher, and a driver in Ordzhonikidze, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and traded them for $2 million in U.S. currency and an Ilyushin-76T jet transport. The Soviets provided an eight-man crew to fly from Mineralnyee Vody. They flew the next day to a military strip near Israel's Ben Gurion Airport, where they surrendered peacefully. On December 3, 1988, Israel extradited her, even though she was forced by the hijackers to join them.

Yakub: Chechen warlord who led the January 9, 2001, kidnappers of two U.S. relief workers in Starge Atagi in central Chechnya, Russia.

Yilmaz Yalciner: one of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich, Germany, to Istanbul and Ankara, Turkey, on October 13, 1980. The gunman was injured during the Turkish Army's rescue of the hostages. On October 26, 1980, the Diyarbakir Martial Law Military Court charged him with conspiracy to rearrange the basic social, economic, and legal system of the state in accordance with religious principles and beliefs against secularism; engaging in propaganda with this aim; hijacking an airplane at gunpoint; violating Law 6136; and instigating robbery, murder, and injury.

Mariko Yamamoto: alias Maria. Japanese Red Army (JRA) contact point in Paris in 1974. She ran a Japanese shop in Avenue de l'Opera. Her place was raided in 1974. She possessed a coded notebook with the addresses of 50 safe houses throughout Europe. She was also part of the 10-member VZ58 group, which was named after the type of assault rifle used in the Lod Airport attack. On June 13, 1988, the Philippines Department of National Defense announced it was searching for the JRA member.

On February 15, 1997, Yamamoto was one of six members of JRA arrested by Lebanese authorities in the Bekaa Valley and West Beirut, Lebanon. On April 3, 1997, a Beirut investigative judge indicted five of them for passport forgery, illegal entry into Lebanon, and official stamps forgery. The offenses carried 10-year prison sentences. The trial opened on June 9, 1997; 136 lawyers offered to take their cases pro bono. On July 31, 1997, a Lebanese court sentenced five JRA terrorists to three years in jail on various charges, including forging official stamps and passports and illegal entry into Lebanon. The sentences came a day after the United States ended a decadelong ban on Americans visiting Lebanon following a Beirut pledge that it would do more to combat terrorism. On March 1, 2000, Lebanon refused Japan's request for extradition. Yamamoto and three other members of the JRA involved in a bloody mountaintop standoff with Japanese police were freed on March 7, 2000, after serving three years in prison for passport fraud. Three of them had converted to Islam. A fourth married a Lebanese woman and joined her Greek Orthodox church. The four were deported. In Amman, Jordan, on March 17, 2000, they were turned over to Japanese diplomats, who put them on a plane to Japan. Tokyo Metropolitan Police arrested three, and a warrant of imprisonment was issued on the fourth. By this time, Yamamoto was 59 years old.

Zelimkhan Yandarbiyev: announced by Chechen rebel field commander Shamil Basayev as the replacement for Chechen separatist leader Dzhokhar Dudayev, who was killed in a Russian missile attack on April 21, 1996. Local media said he was killed in a battle with a rival faction near Urus-Martan on April 29, 1996, but he held a press conference on May 1, 1996, to say that he was still running the organization. On June 26, 2003, the United Nations (UN) Security Council named the former Chechen president as a supporter of bin Laden. He lived in exile in Doha, Qatar. The Russian government was seeking his extradition, saying he helped orchestrate the 1999 incursion into Dagestan by Chechen rebels and collaborated with the terrorists who seized 900 hostages in a Moscow theater in October 2002. UN members must bar him from traveling to their countries, freeze his assets, and prevent him from transporting weapons. On February 13, 2004, he was killed by a two-kilogram car bomb in Doha, Qatar. The week before the bombing, Russia agreed to a trial in Qatar.

Gourgen M. Yanikian: assassin on January 27, 1973, at the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel of Turkish consul general Mehmet Baydar and deputy consul general Bahadır Demir in Los Angeles. Yanikian surrendered to authorities and claimed that members of his Armenian family were killed in attacks by Turkey in 1915.

Constantine Yannopolous: would-be hijacker of an Olympic Airways YS11A flying from Kalamata to Athens, Greece, on October 16, 1971. He wanted to go to Beirut, Lebanon. He allowed the plane to refuel in Athens, where the police boarded the plane and arrested the hijacker. He was sentenced on October 11, 1972, to eight years and two months.

Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass: variant Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas; alias Abu Dahdah. One of nine members of the Mujahedeen Movement, which has ties to al Qaeda, arrested on November 13, 2001, by Madrid and Granada police on charges of recruiting members to carry out terrorist attacks. Interior Minister Mariano Rajoy said the arrests followed two years of investigations. The leader was initially identified as Emaz Edim Baraktyarkas (variant Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass), a Syrian with Spanish nationality. The other eight were from Tunisia and Algeria. Spain did not offer details on the terrorists' targets. The next day, police identified three more Islamic suspects. Police seized videos of Islamic guerrilla activities, hunting rifles, swords, fake IDs, and a large amount of cash. Spain and other European nations expressed concern about extraditing suspects to the United States for trial by military tribunals announced by President Bush.

On November 17, CNN reported that 11 suspected members of an Al Qaeda cell were arraigned. Washington Post quoted Spanish officials on November 19 as indicating that eight al Qaeda cell members arrested in Madrid and Granada had a role in preparing the 9/11 attacks. Judge Baltasar Garzon ordered eight of the suspected members held without bail because they "were directly related with the preparation and development of the attacks perpetrated by the suicide pilots on September 11." Judge Garzon charged them with membership in an armed group and possession of forged documents. They were also accused of recruiting young Muslim men for training at terrorist camps in Indonesia. They also reportedly sheltered Chechen rebels and obtained medical treatment for al Qaeda members. They conducted robberies and credit card fraud and provided false documents to al Qaeda visitors. They also forwarded money to Hamburg. The group had connections to Mohamed Bensakhria, head of the Frankfurt-based cell that planned a terrorist attack in Strasbourg, France. He was arrested and extradited to France. The group also had connections to six Algerians detained in Spain on September 26 who were charged with belonging to the Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, a bin Laden-funded Algerian group.

The charges were based on documents and intercepted phone conversations of detainee Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas, al Qaeda's leader in Spain. His name and phone number were in a document found in a search of a Hamburg apartment of a bin Laden associate. Police believed hijacker leader Muhammad Atta could have met with some of them when he visited Spain in January and July. The group had links to Mamoun Darkazanli. Judge Garzon released three others who were arrested on November 13 and ordered them to report regularly to the authorities.

Yarkas, a father of four, was picked up at his central Madrid apartment. He met with bin Laden twice and was in close contact with Muhammad Atef. Yarkas earned $2,000 per month and traveled often to Yemen, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Senegal, Indonesia, and throughout Europe, visiting the United Kingdom 10 times. He met bin Laden associates in the United Kingdom.

On March 13, 2004, the imprisoned Yarkas was questioned by the investigating judge in connection with the March 11, 2004, multiple bombings of trains in Madrid that killed 200 and wounded 2,000.

On April 21, 2005, the trial began of al Qaeda suspects in Spain linked to the 9/11 attacks. Among them was Yarkas, age 42, who faced 40 years each for nearly 3,000 counts of accessory to murder, recruiting Islamic fighters to go to Bosnia and Afghanistan, and membership in a terrorist organization. On July 5, 2005, Yarkas told a court that he was innocent and that the prosecution's claim that they were a Spanish al Qaeda cell was a "myth." On September 26, 2005, a Spanish court convicted Yarkas and sentenced him to 27 years in prison for conspiring with al Qaeda and the 9/11 hijackers. On April 6, 2006, a Spanish prosecutor told the Spanish Supreme Court that the conviction of Yarkas should be overturned for lack of evidence. On June 1, 2006, Spain's Supreme Court threw out his conviction, citing lack of proof. He had been sentenced to 27 years. He would still serve 12 years for leading a terrorist group.

On April 16, 2008, Judge Ismael Moreno of the National Court indicted Syrian-born Imad Eddin Barakat Yarkas or Yarbass, age 44, Syria-born Muhamed Galeb Kalaje Zouaydi, age 47, and Bassam Dalati Satut, age 48, on suspicion of financing terrorist cells. The indictment said that the duo removed $76,500 in December 2006 from Zouaydi's company and gave the money to Yarkas. Yarkas was charged with membership in a terrorist organization. The trio was arraigned on April 24, denying the charges.

Mamet Yasyn: member of the East Turkestan Islamic Movement deported by Kyrgyzstan to China in May 2002 for planning terrorist attacks against embassies, markets, and public gathering places in Bishkek.

Mahdi Yatsikale: variant Yatsikaya. One of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich, Germany, to Istanbul and Ankara, Turkey, on October 13, 1980. The gunman was injured during the Turkish Army's rescue of the hostages. On October 26, 1980, the Diyarbakir Martial Law Military Court charged him with conspiracy to rearrange the basic social, economic, and legal system of the state in accordance with religious principles and beliefs against secularism; engaging in propaganda with this aim; hijacking an airplane at gunpoint; violating Law 6136; and instigating robbery, murder, and injury.

Amir Muhammad Yazdi: lieutenant in Savama, the Iranian intelligence organization, who was believed to have been one of the gunmen who shot and critically wounded Arab League Deputy Director Midhat al-Hiyali, an Iraqi, in Palaio Psikhiko, Athens, Greece, on December 21, 1987. Yazdi arrived in Greece the previous day through Volos and was traveling on a Jordanian passport.

Alec Yenikomchian: variants Ara Yenikomchian, Alexander Yenkomeshian. Armenian who was injured when a bomb he and colleague Suzy Masseredjian were fabricating exploded in their Geneva, Switzerland, hotel room on October 3, 1980. He was a former economist and son of a successful Beirut pediatrician. He lost all of one eye, most of the other, and his left hand in the explosion. On January 13, 1981, he was given an 18-month suspended sentence for helping extort the equivalent of $6,000 from a Geneva businessman and acquitted of the explosives charge. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA) had threatened reprisals against the United States for a Federal Bureau of Investigation interrogation. The arrest provoked bombing reprisals in Beirut and four European cities by the October 3 Group. Yenikomchian appeared by the side of ASALA spokesperson Hagop Hagopian at a September 26, 1981, press conference in Beirut during the ASALA takeover of the Turkish Consulate in Paris.

Yevdokimov: one of two prisoners whose release was obtained by 15 prisoners who, on August 19, 1990, hijacked Aeroflot Tupolev Flight 154 flying the 15 prisoners between Neryungri to Yakutsk, Russia, and demanded to be flown abroad. The plane landed in New Delhi, India, and later Karachi, Pakistan, where the hijackers surrendered to local authorities and requested political asylum. The Pakistanis initially granted asylum to 11 Soviet hijackers but then took them into custody. They were to be charged with hijacking, for which the penalty can be death or 25 years in jail. On August 21, the deputy chairman of Uzbekistan's KGB said the 11 would be extradited. Tass said one of the two released prisoners was the hijacking ringleader. On September 2, a special Pakistani court handling antiterrorist cases sent to prison the 11 hijackers after finding them guilty of charges of hijacking and possessing unlicensed weapons. On September 4, Tass said that the Karachi court had decided to remand the hijackers in custody until September 23. By November 20, all of the hijackers had been sentenced to various terms in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and were awaiting trial by Pakistani courts.

Magomed Yevloyev: alias Magas. Ingush ally of the Chechen rebels who, on June 21, 2004, led between 200 and 1,000 Chechen rebels in the takeover of the Interior Ministry headquarters in Nazran, Ingushetia. They then attacked police headquarters, border checkpoints, and government offices in the region, killing 22 people, including Acting Interior Minister Abukar Kostoyev and two other senior officials, and injuring 47 people. Some of the attackers shouted, “Allahu akbar,” a frequent cry of Chechen Islamic separatists. Attackers seized police buildings in Karabulak and Ordzhonikidzevskaya. On June 28, Yevloyev, age 32, died while battling Russian and Ingush troops trying to seize him.

Yiatros: alias of Vasos Khristodhoulou Pavlidhis.

Abdulkerim Yildiz: jailed Turk indicted on January 27, 1987, by the Turkish State Court for working for the illegal Muslim Brotherhood by smuggling 13 kilograms of explosives and aiming to overthrow the regime. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Ahmet Yildiz: jailed Turk indicted on January 27, 1987, by the Turkish State Court for working for the illegal Muslim Brotherhood by smuggling 13 kilograms of explosives and aiming to overthrow the regime. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Mehmet Yildiz: one of 13 men and 8 women arrested by Turkish police on April 19, 1995, who were planning to assassinate Turkish prime minister Tansu Ciller at her residence in Yenikoy, Istanbul. Police seized sketches of her house, operational plans, a 7.65-mm gun, and organizational documents belonging to the Revolutionary People’s Liberation Party-Front.

Nurettin Yildiz: arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and two hand radio receivers.

Adem Yilmaz: unemployed Turkish Muslim citizen, age 28, who lived in Hesse, Germany, and was one of three individuals arrested on September 4, 2007, who were planning “massive” attacks against U.S. interests, including at Ramstein Air Base, a nightclub, and Frankfurt airport. One of the terrorists grabbed a police officer’s gun and shot him in the hand. One of the terrorists escaped through a window but was captured running down the street. Authorities said the would-be terrorists wanted to kill as many Americans as possible and were also examining bars, nightclubs, and restaurants. Police discovered 12 vats of 730 kilograms of hydrogen peroxide, which can be used in explosives, at a garage in Freusdenstadt. The concentrated chemicals were equivalent to 550 kilograms of TNT. Police also seized military detonators from Syria.

The terrorists were identified as a cell of the Pakistan-based Islamic Jihad Union, a Sunni group which has al Qaeda contacts and is a splinter of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. Some of them had recently traveled to Pakistan for terrorist training. Police arrested three men in a central German village. Police noted that they were white Germans, not foreigners, a change from the Islamist stereotype. The trio was charged with membership in a foreign terrorist organization. Nearly 300 investigators had monitored the trio for nine months. The group’s activities led to an April 20 warning by the U.S. Embassy in Berlin of increased terrorist activity. In July, police had exchanged the 35 percent peroxide solution with a far less concentrated 3 percent mixture. In early September, the terrorists began moving the materials from the garage to the cottage, where police also found detonators and electronic parts. On August 17, using an alias, one of the suspects rented the three-bedroom vacation cottage in the skiing and tourist locale where they began their bomb making on September 2. The suspects' vehicle was stopped the next day because its high beams were on during the day. Even though the terrorists knew that they had attracted police attention, they went ahead with their plans, attempting to duck surveillance.

Yilmaz worked in the security division of rail operations Deutsche Bahn from 1997 to 2002, principally in the railway station of Frankfurt Airport, one of the group's targets.

Bunyamin Yilmaz: on June 16, 1981, a Turkish court found Yilmaz guilty of providing arms to Mehmet Ali Agca, the would-be May 13, 1981, assassin of Pope John Paul II, on his escape from Maltepe military prison, where Yilmaz was a guard. Yilmaz received a 100,000 lira bribe.

Kani Yilmaz: leader of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and one of Turkey's most wanted men, he was arrested on October 26, 1994, by British immigration officials at the Westminster tube station on his way to address the Houses of Parliament. The day after the arrest, the Home Office issued a deportation notice. Turkey requested extradition. On November 24, Germany requested extradition. The PKK had been banned in Germany since November 25, 1993. German prosecutors were attempting to determine whether he was involved in a series of attacks on Turkish targets in Germany in 1993, including a hostage taking at the Turkish Consulate in Munich. On July 24, 1995, a British court decided to extradite him to Germany, setting off rioting.

Ziya Yilmaz: one of five members of the Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) who escaped from a maximum security military prison in Istanbul, Turkey, on November 30, 1971. He was a participant in the kidnapping and murder by the TPLA (or perhaps Dev Genc, the Turkish Revolutionary Youth Federation) of Ephraim Elrom, Israel's consul general in Istanbul, on May 17, 1971. He was captured in a police shootout on the shores of the Bosphorus on February 19, 1972. On March 17, 1972, he was given a death sentence by an Istanbul military court for Elrom's killing. His release was demanded by the four hijackers who diverted a Turkish airliner with 71 passengers aboard to Sofia, Bulgaria, in December 1972.

Alexandros Yiotopoulos: leader and founder of 17 November in Greece. He was arrested in Greece on July 17, 2002. On May 4, 2007, a special appeals panel in Athens upheld the 2003 conviction of Yiotopoulos in the 1975 assassination of CIA chief of station at Athens Richard Welch.

Fevzi Yitiz: Turk who confessed to recruiting the two suicide bombers and preparing the truck bombs for the November 15, 2003, attacks on two Turkish synagogues that killed 25 and injured 303. He guarded the bombs in the warehouse, often sleeping beside them. He went by bus to Tehran, Iran, meeting another conspirator. He was detained on December 10 in southeastern Turkey near the Iranian and Iraqi borders. He was carrying a forged passport and attempting to flee. He rented an Istanbul workshop where the bombs were made. Police believed he helped rig the trucks used in the November 15 and 20 bombings. He named Adnan Ersoz as one of the leaders of the al Qaeda cell. On December 14, a Turkish court charged him.

Ferit Yogurtcu: arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and 2 hand radio receivers.

Tahir Yoldashev: leader of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan, which has links to Osama bin Laden.

Omer Yorulmaz: one of four hijackers of Turkish Airlines TK-890, a B727 flying from Munich, Germany, to Istanbul and Ankara, Turkey, on October 13, 1980. The gunman was injured during the Turkish Army's rescue of the hostages. On October 26, 1980, the Diyarbakir Martial Law Military Court charged him with conspiracy to rearrange the basic social, economic, and legal system of the state in accordance with religious principles and beliefs against secularism; engaging in propaganda with this aim; hijacking an airplane at gunpoint; violating Law 6136; and instigating robbery, murder, and injury.

Mehmed H. Youlmaz: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA) hijackers of a Turkish Airlines DC9 flying from Ankara to Istanbul, Turkey, on May 3, 1972, that was diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. The three students and one electrician demanded the release of the three TPLA members who had been sentenced to death for the kidnapping of three U.S. servicemen on March 4, 1971. They threatened to blow up the plane and everyone on board. The Turks refused to negotiate. The group extended their deadline several times and agreed on May 4 to the Turkish government's suggestion that they accept Bulgarian asylum. One passenger suffered a heart attack during the siege. The foursome was sentenced to three years on November 3, 1972.

Bahij Mohammed Younis: Jordanian arrested on October 28, 1981, by Austrian police while in possession of submachine guns, other small firearms, several hand grenades, and several passports. He was believed to be a mastermind behind several Palestinian terrorist attacks. On October 22, 1982, Younis was sentenced to life in prison in connection to the May 1, 1981, murder in Austria of Heinz Nittel, president of the Austrian-Israeli Friendship League, a leading Socialist Party official, and head of the Vienna Traffic Department. Abu Nidal's Al Asifah organization claimed credit for the assassination.

Fawaz Younis: variants Yunis, Rida Yunus; alias Nazeeh. Leader of the six Brigades of the Marches of Lebanese Resistance hijackers who took over Royal Jordanian Airlines Flight 402, a B727 boarding passengers at Beirut International Airport in Lebanon on June 11, 1985. The plane hopscotched through Europe and the Middle East. The hijackers escaped after setting off a bomb on the plane in Beirut. On September 13, 1987, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) arrested the Lebanese Shi'ite, who was believed to have been the spokesperson identified as Nazih. At the time of his arrest, Younis was lured onto the Skunk Kilo yacht off the Cyprus coast by a friend in the hope of buying drugs. He was taken to a U.S. Navy vessel that headed west for a rendezvous off Corsica with the U.S. aircraft carrier Saratoga. He was then flown to Andrews Air Force Base and held at Quantico Marine Base. He pleaded not guilty on September 17, 1987, in a 10-minute hearing before U.S. Magistrate Jean F. Dwyer in Washington, D.C., to a five-count indictment of conspiracy, destruction of an aircraft, and hostage taking, the latter count of which carries a life term. On October 7, 1987, he was arraigned in a federal court on charges of air piracy, placing a destructive device aboard an aircraft, committing violence aboard an aircraft, and aiding and abetting a hijacking. On February 12, 1988, U.S. District Court Judge Barrington D. Parker ruled that he could be charged with leading the hijacking of the Jordanian airliner but not with assaulting passengers and blowing up the Royal Jordanian Airline jet at Beirut International Airport. Parker refused to dismiss six conspiracy and hijacking counts under the 1984 Hostage Taking Act and upheld the use of Navy vessels to transport him. However, on February 23, 1988, Judge Parker threw out Younis's written confession and all other statements he made to the FBI shortly after his arrest. On October 14, 1988, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia Circuit overturned Parker's decision. On March 14, 1989, the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., convicted him of air piracy and taking of hostages. He was found not guilty on three counts of blowing up the aircraft and threatening or harming the passengers. On October 4, 1989, he was sentenced to 30 years in prison. On January 29, 1991, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia upheld the conviction. On March 29, 1993, the Jabal Lubnan Public Prosecution Office indicted him for hijacking the Jordanian plane and blowing it up. His attorney requested extradition.

Younis served almost 16 years in prison. In February 2005, he was released from federal prison in Petersburg, Virginia. On March 28, 2005, the United States deported him to Lebanon for being an illegal immigrant.

Mohammed Yousef: one of three terrorists who, on July 11, 1988, fired machine guns and threw hand grenades at the City of Poros, a Greek island ferry that was carrying tourists in the Aegean Sea, killing 11 and injuring 98.

Tahir Yuldashev: variant Tohir; alias Qari Tahir. In 1991, Yuldashev, age 24, led an Islamic uprising in Namangan, Uzbekistan. He then fled to Afghanistan, where he founded the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan, which was supported by the Taliban and bin Laden. On October 12, 2001, his U.S. assets were ordered frozen. By March 2004, he had become the leader of the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan.

Tohir Yuldashev: variant of Tahir Yuldashev.

Fawaz Yunis: variant of Fawaz Younis.

Mohammed Yunis: arrested in Jordan on October 1986 and believed to be the second in command in the plot that led to the July 24, 1985, assassination of Ziyad al-Sati, the first secretary of the Jordanian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey. The Islamic Jihad Organization and Black September separately claimed credit. Turkey requested extradition.

Valeriy Yurevich: former pilot of the Odessa air brigade who on June 18, 1990, hijacked an empty AN2 and diverted it to Kefken's Kumcagiz Region in the Kandira District of Turkey. He had requested his discharge from the service a few months earlier. He landed on the beach and walked to the nearest gendarmerie post, where he requested asylum. The Soviet Embassy demanded his extradition.

Sedat Yurttas: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. He was sentenced to seven and a half years for advocating support for the PKK.

'Adli Yusuf: member of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) diplomatic mission in Nicosia, Cyprus, who on February 1, 1990, was arrested along with a Nicosia resident following a police chase after the duo was involved in a nighttime shooting involving machine guns in the Ayios Dhometios area while trying to sell heroin and hashish.

Ali Yusuf: alias of Hasan Marwan (or Marwan Hasan).

Haji Yuzdenir: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army hijackers of a Turkish Airlines B707 flying from Istanbul to Ankara, Turkey, on October 22, 1972, and diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. They threatened to blow up the plane if the Turkish government did not release 13 political prisoners, abolish the strike ban in martial law areas, reorganize the universities by giving them greater freedom, engage in land reform, and abolish anti-democratic articles in the constitution. The Turks refused to talk to the hijackers, who surrendered to the Bulgarians the next day. The pilot and a passenger were wounded. Bulgaria granted the hijackers political asylum but sentenced them to two plus years in prison on February 2, 1973. After a decade as a fugitive, he gave himself up to the Turkish Embassy in Vienna, Austria, in July 1982. On October 11, 1983, he was sentenced to 20 years by an Istanbul martial law court.

Z

---

Zacharia: variant Zechariah; alias of Lt. Abdel Aziz al Atrash

Alexander Zagirnyak: one of two Russian hijackers of an Aeroflot TU134 twin-engine jet flying from Petrozavodsk, Karelia, to Leningrad on July 10, 1977, and diverted to Helsinki, Finland. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Arlanda Airport in Stockholm, Sweden, but there was not enough fuel. They demanded a Finnish crew to fly to Sweden, but Sweden refused them entry. They then demanded to go to another country. The hijackers turned down an offer of a Cessna to fly them out of Finland, and they surrendered on July 11. The Soviets requested extradition the next day and vowed harsh punishment for the two when they were returned under terms of the Soviet-Finnish antihijacking treaty on July 15. On November 10, 1977, he was sentenced to eight years.

Isa Zainutdinov: Dagestani resident, age 62, arrested by police in Makhachkala, Russia, on May 20, 2000, on suspicion of being a “major perpetrator” of the bombing in September 1999 of an apartment building in Buynaksk that killed 64 people. He admitted driving a truckload of explosives to the apartment block but claimed he was unaware of its intended use.

Akhmed Zakayev: aide, age 43, to Chechen separatist leader Aslan Maskhadov. Zakayev was arrested on October 29, 2002, in Denmark for questioning in the October 23, 2002, taking of 900 hostages by Chechen terrorists at a Moscow theater. He was held until November 12 pending investigation. He had been attending the final session of the World Chechen Congress in Copenhagen. On December 3, 2002, Denmark rejected extradition. After suicide terrorists on December 27, 2002, drove a Jeep SUV and a Kamaz heavy truck laden with more than a ton of explosives into the courtyard of the Russian government headquarters building in Grozny, Chechnya, killing more than 80 people and wounding 210 others, he deemed “today’s event as a successful retribution act from Chechens.” On November 29, 2003, the United Kingdom granted him refugee status. A British judge turned down an extradition request, saying he would have been tortured if he was returned to Russia. He had fought against Russian forces between October 1995 and December 2000.

Izrael Zalmanson: one of 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad’s Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. The plane was bound for Petrozavodsk, Karelia, near the Finnish border. The government claimed that the 11 men and 1 woman planned to hijack the plane to Finland and on to Sweden, from where they would work their way to Israel. The trial of 11 of the Russians began on December 15, 1970. A tribunal sentenced them on December 24. Zalmanson is Riga dissident Silva Kuznetsov’s brother. Silva Kuznetsov is the wife of Eduard Kuznetsov, one of the two leaders of the group.

Lt. Vulf Zalmanson: brother of Izrael Zalmanson and one of the 12 Russians accused by the government of intending to hijack an Aeroflot AN2 at Leningrad's Smolny Airport on June 15, 1970. On January 7, 1971, a Leningrad military court sentenced him to 10 years in prison for attempted hijacking, which differed from the primary charges against the other 11 of attempting to immigrate to Israel without permission.

Leyla Zana: one of eight Kurdish legislators found guilty on December 8, 1994, by a Turkish court for involvement with the outlawed Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK) and sentenced to prison. Hours before announcement of the sentences, the State Security Court dropped treason charges, which carry the death penalty, against the eight, seven of whom were members of the pro-Kurdish Democracy Party that was outlawed by the government in June 1994. The only woman in the group, she was sentenced to 15 years.

Muhammad Abu Zarat: one of four Palestinian terrorists who were found guilty on February 17, 1983, in Turkey and again sentenced to death for their part in the July 13, 1979, raid on the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara that resulted in the death of two security guards. They had been tried twice before at the Ankara Martial Law Command's First Military Court and the Ankara First High Criminal Court, but both times their sentences were annulled.

Imed Ben Zarkaoui: leader of a Milan-based network that was wrapped up on November 6, 2007, in coordinated raids in Italy, France, Portugal, and the United Kingdom that netted 17 Algerians and Tunisians suspected of terrorist ties in Salafist jihadi militant cells that were recruiting would-be suicide bombers for Iraq and Afghanistan. Milan prosecutors ordered the raids in Milan, Bergamo, Verese, and Reggio Emilia. Police found poisons, remote detonators, and manuals. The leaders were identified as Dridi Sabri, Mehdi Ben Nasr, and Imed Ben Zarkaoui, all operating in Italy. Three suspects remained at large. Police said the investigation began in 2003. The detainees were charged with illegal immigration, falsifying ID documents, and helping to hide people sought for terrorist activity.

Amin Aminah Sulayman Za'rul: variant Za'rur. Lebanese arrested on August 14, 1986, in Larnaca, Cyprus, while carrying a loaded pistol and 18 hand grenades in his suitcase. He was scheduled to appear in court on September 22, 1986, on charges of possessing and carrying arms and explosives. His release was demanded on September 5, 1986, by the four hijackers of the Libyan Revolutionary Cells and the Organization of the Soldiers of God—Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group who took over Pan American World Airways Flight 73 at the Karachi airport. He was given a seven-year sentence. On January 10, 1987, a bomb consisting of dynamite in a drain pipe exploded at a Larnaca apartment building on Sofronios Khristodhoulou Street; he had lived on the ground floor of the building. A note at the site of the bombing demanded his release. Hizballah was suspected.

Valentin Zasimov: Soviet pilot who flew a small plane to Iran on September 23, 1976, and requested political asylum in the United States. Iran returned him to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics on October 28, 1976, under a Soviet-Iranian antihijacking agreement.

Mohammed Mohsen Yahya Zayed: one of two Yemenis arrested in Germany and extradited to the United States, where they were prosecuted in 2005 for conspiracy to send money from Brooklyn, New York, to Hamas and al Qaeda. His colleague, Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan al-Moayad, claimed to have sent millions to the groups. Evidence included documents obtained in Afghanistan, Yemen, and Croatia; sources in the United Kingdom and Israel; and electronic surveillance of their hotel room in Germany, where they stayed in 2003.

On March 10, 2005, Zayed was convicted of conspiring to funnel money to al Qaeda and Hamas. He was convicted of attempting to provide material support to Hamas but acquitted of attempting to aid al Qaeda. Defense attorneys said they would appeal. Zayed was represented by Jonathan Marks. On September 1, 2005, Zayed was sentenced to 45 years in prison. As of 2007, he was held in the Florence supermax prison in Colorado.

Halit Adil Zayit: arrested on August 7, 1979, by Turkish authorities for assisting the four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) in their takeover of the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, on July 13, 1979. Police found at the hideout a Kalashnikov rifle, 20 knives, 150 rounds of ammunition, a bulletproof vest, and 2 hand radio receivers.

Muhammad Abu Zera: one of four Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution (another name for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine) terrorists who took over the Egyptian Embassy in Ankara on July 13, 1979. He was born in Darha, Syria, in 1960. The four were indicted on July 28, 1979, by the Ankara Martial Law Command Military Tribunal for carrying out hostile acts aimed at damaging relations between Turkey and Egypt; premeditated murder; smuggling, possessing, and using bombs; threatening the liberty of more than one person; and other armed acts. On October 25, 1979, a military court sentenced the four Palestinians to two death sentences each for killing two Turkish guards in the attack. On May 23, 1980, Turkey's supreme military court threw out the death sentences and ordered a retrial in a civilian court. On December 23, 1980, an Ankara criminal court sentenced the four Palestinian terrorists to death.

Bogdan Zigic: one of three hijackers of the June 26, 1952, Yugoslavian National Airlines flight from Belgrade to Puola that was diverted to Foligno, Italy, where the trio requested asylum.

Haytham al-Zir: Palestinian Islamic Jihad member whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was sentenced by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992, to three years for handling arms and explosives.

Jihad al-Zir: Palestinian Islamic Jihad member whose trial for setting off a bomb that killed seven people in Patras, Greece, on April 19, 1991, began on May 8, 1992, in a courtroom within the Kordhallos Prison in Piraeus. He was acquitted by an Athens appeals court on July 6, 1992.

Konstandinos Zirinis: alias Pappous. Greek who was arrested on February 14, 1980, along with several other members of the People's Front Initiative, a group formed in November 1979 by members of the Marxist-Leninist People's Authority. The group planned to bomb the embassies and assassinate the ambassadors of the United States, Israel, Turkey, Cyprus, and West Germany and sabotage U.S. military bases in Greece. The group received weapons training in the Middle East and had links with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and the Marxist-Leninist Organization of Cyprus.

Djamal Zitouni: variants Jamal Zitouni, Djemal Zetouni. Former militant of the Algerian Islamic Salvation Front accused by French security services of being a leader of an armed gang active in the Bir Khadem area that was responsible for an August 3, 1994, attack on a French school, Max Marchand, in Ain Allah, Algiers, that killed five French nationals. He was also suspected of killing two other French nationals in Bir Khadem and two Yugoslavs in the Teklea garden in Ben Aknoun. On November 18, 1994, London's al-Sharq al-Awsat reported that he had replaced Abou Khalil Mahfoud as the Armed Islamic Group's leader in Algeria. He reportedly died in late 1996 under mysterious circumstances and was succeeded by Antar Zouabri, who died on July 22, 1997, in a gun battle with authorities.

Jamal Zitouni: variant of Djamal Zitouni

Nikola Zivovic: Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO or SEPO) terrorist found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago, Illinois. He was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

Ceslaw Romuald Zolotucho: auto mechanic, age 18, who joined Wieslaw Szymankiewicz, age 20, in hijacking a Lot Antonov 24 flying the Wrocław–Warsaw–Bratislava run on November 20, 1969, and diverting it to Vienna, Austria. He was sentenced to two years in jail and then ordered expelled from Austria after serving his term.

Marina Zoni: arrested on September 15, 1978, in connection with the March 16, 1978, Red Brigades kidnapping and murder of former Premier Aldo Moro in Rome.

Yudzel Zoskurt: one of four Turkish People's Liberation Army hijackers of a Turkish Airlines B707 flying from Istanbul to Ankara, Turkey, on October 22, 1972, and diverted to Sofia, Bulgaria. They threatened to blow up the plane if the Turkish government did not release 13 political prisoners, abolish the strike ban in martial law areas, reorganize the universities by giving them greater freedom, engage in land reform, and abolish anti-democratic articles in the constitution. The Turks refused to talk to the hijackers, who surrendered to the Bulgarians the next day. The pilot and a passenger were wounded. Bulgaria granted the hijackers political asylum but sentenced them to two plus years in prison on February 2, 1973.

Mohammed Zozad: name on a Lebanese passport used by a man who checked into the Kreoli Hotel in Glifada, Greece, in June 1988. He was believed part of a group that was going to car bomb a U.S. military base in Greece, but the bomb exploded prematurely, killing the two terrorists.

Mahdi Mohammad Zubeyde: claimed to be innocent and merely fighting for the liberation of Palestine when his trial began at the Fourth High Criminal Court in Istanbul on November 4, 1977, for the attack in Istanbul Airport in August 1976 that led to the deaths of 4 people and injuries to 20 others. He and Mohammad Rashid Husayn were sentenced to life in prison for murder and causing injuries, but the Supreme Court of Appeals reversed the sentences. The prosecutor asked for 5 to 10 years for infiltrating arms into Turkey.

Abd al-Usamah al-Zumar: variant Osama Abdel Zomar. Palestinian student living in Varese, Italy, who was arrested on November 22, 1982, by border police in Kipi, Greece, when customs officials found 60 kilograms of dynamite, detonators, and other material hidden in a Mercedes with a Bari license plate. He was sentenced to 20 months on the border charge and, in 1987, to an additional 20 months for weapons concealment. He finished his sentence on November 29, 1988, but was held in prison pending an extradition decision. On March 23, 1985, the Italian media reported that Greece had decided to extradite him to Italy for the October 9, 1982, attack on Rome's main synagogue with hand grenades and submachine guns in which a two-year-old boy died and 37 persons were injured. On December 6, 1988, Greece rejected Italy's extradition request and deported the Abu Nidal member to Libya. On May 24, 1989, a Rome criminal court judge sentenced him in absentia to life in prison following his conviction for organizing the attack. Zumar had served as president of a group of Palestinian students in Rome.

SELECTED READINGS

---

For incident descriptions, see chronology references in the introduction, and for a more thorough bibliographical treatment, see Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons, Terrorism, 2002–2004: Chronology, 3 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2006.

Atkins, Stephen E. Encyclopedia of Modern Worldwide Extremists and Extremist Groups. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2004.

Bell, J. Bowyer. The IRA, 1968–2000: Analysis of a Secret Army. Portland, OR: Frank Cass, 2000.

Dobson, Christopher, and Ronald Payne. The Terrorists: Their Weapons, Leaders and Tactics. New York: Facts on File, 1982.

Hoffman, Bruce. Inside Terrorism. New York: Columbia University Press, 1998.

Mickolus, Edward F. The Literature of Terrorism: Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1980.

Mickolus, Edward F. International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events, 1968–1977, ITERATE 2 Data Codebook. Ann Arbor, MI: Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, 1982.

Mickolus, Edward F. “Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography.” Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

Mickolus, Edward F. Terrorism, 1988–1991: Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Bibliographies and Indexes in Military Studies 6. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1993.

Mickolus, Edward F. Terrorism, 2005–2007: Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2008.

Mickolus, Edward F., with Peter Flemming. Terrorism, 1980–1987: Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1988.

Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: Chronology. Vol. 1, 1980–1983. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1988.

Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: Chronology. Vol. 2, 1984–1987. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1989.

Mickolus, Edward F., with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1992–1995: Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1997.

Mickolus, Edward F., with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1996–2001: Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. 2 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002.

Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2002–2004: Chronology. 3 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2005.

Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2008–2010: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, in press.

- Nash, Jay Robert. Terrorism in the 20th Century: Narrative Encyclopedia from the Anarchists, through the Weathermen, to the Unabomber. New York: Evans, 1998.
- Pisano, Vittoriofranco S., and Xavier Raufer. "A Case Study in Terrorism of the Left: Action Directe." Conflict 9, no. 2 (1989): 155–69.
- Post, Jerrold. The Mind of the Terrorist: The Psychology of Terrorism from the IRA to al-Qaeda. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
- Shanty, Frank, and Raymond Picquet, eds. Encyclopedia of World Terrorism. Santa Barbara, CA: M. E. Sharpe, 2003.
- Tenet, George J., with Bill Harlow. At the Center of the Storm: My Years at the CIA. New York: HarperCollins, 2007.
- U.S. Department of Justice, Office of the Inspector General. Follow-up Audit of the Terrorist Screening Center. Audit Report 07-41. <http://www.usdoj.gov/oig/reports/FBI/a0741/final.pdf>.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2006 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. National Counterterrorism Center, 2005.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2007 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. National Counterterrorism Center, 2006.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. Counterterrorism Calendar 2008: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods, and Tactics. Washington, DC: U.S. National Counterterrorism Center, 2007.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2003 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center, 2002.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2004 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center, 2003.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2005 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center, 2004.

INDEX

---

- Abu Musa Organization, 143
Abu Nidal Organization, 9, 32, 58, 62, 64, 69, 78, 100, 109, 128, 131–32, 144, 151, 178, 188, 194.
See also Fatah Revolutionary Council; Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems
Action Front of National Socialists-National Activists, 89
Action Group for the Liberation of Palestine, 131
African National Congress, 61, 172
Afrikaner Resistance Movement, 178
Algeria Islamic Group, 113
Algerian Islamic Salvation Front, 60, 193
Amal, 14, 63
‘Amrushi Martyr Group, 64, 69, 109, 178
Anatolian Federal Islamic State, 171
Anna Maria Ludmann Fighting Unit, 155
Ansar al-Islam (Followers of Islam), 6–7, 106
Anti-Christian Liberation Front, 4
Anti-State Struggle Organization, 25, 176
Antiterrorist Iberian Command, 133
Arab League, 147
Arab Organization of May 15, 133
Armed Islamic Group (GIA), 92, 167, 193
Armed Propaganda Union for the Liberation of Turkish Armenia, 85
Armed Propaganda Unit, 163
Armed Revolutionary Nuclei, 175
Armenian Revolutionary Army, 3, 7, 56, 70, 75, 162, 182
Armenian Revolutionary Movement, 77, 102
Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia (ASALA), 8, 21, 33, 45, 52–53, 56, 59–60, 82, 85, 90, 98, 102–3, 114, 142, 144, 151, 153, 156, 185
ASALA. See Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia
Al Asifah, 100, 131, 188
Baader-Mainhof Gang, 125, 133, 135, 179
al-Bhuraba terrorist camp, 113
Black June, 65, 134, 177, 180
Black March, 98
Black September Organization (BSO), 8, 10, 13, 36, 59, 62, 71, 78, 109, 112, 115, 144, 152, 162–63, 189
Boot Boys, 91
Brunswick Group, 61, 118, 149
BSO. See Black September Organization
Combatant Communist Party, 120
Committee for Solidarity with the Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners, 1, 53, 143, 145
Communist Combatant Cells, 145
Croatian Nationalist Movement (Hrvatski Drzavotvorni Pokret), 20
Croatian Nationalist Resistance, 23
Croatian National Liberation Forces, 28, 101, 123, 175
Democracy Party, 8, 39–40, 141
Derunta terrorist camp, 113
Dev Genc, 187
Dev Sol (Turkish Revolutionary Left), 74
DHKP-C. See Revolutionary People’s Liberation Party-Front
Direct Action, 137, 144
Eagles of Return, 1
Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution, 156
East Turkestan Islamic Movement, 141, 185
Egyptian Gama’at, 128
Egyptian Islamic Group, 128
Egyptian Islamic Jihad (EIJ), 8, 59, 64, 111, 141–42
Egyptian Revolution, 112, 136
EIJ. See Egyptian Islamic Jihad
EOKA-B. See Ethniki Organosis Kypriou Agoniston
Eritrean Liberation Front, 65
Erk (Freedom) Democratic Party of Uzbekistan, 97
Ethniki Organosis Kypriou Agoniston (EOKA-B), 12–13, 72, 85, 89, 93, 101, 115, 121, 126, 144, 147
FARC. See Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia
Fatah, 10, 36, 38, 59, 71, 81, 99, 163, 167. See also Force 17
Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC), 36
Federal Frontier Force, 166
Fighters for a Free Croatia, 28, 123, 175
Fighting Communist Party, 120, 134, 147, 167
Fighting Communist Union Party, 134
Fighting International Front, 64, 69, 109, 178
FIS. See Islamic Salvation Front

- Followers of Islam. See Ansar al-Islam
 Force 17, 38, 81, 167
 FRC. See Fatah Revolutionary Council
 Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), 72, 77, 130, 147, 154, 158, 194
 Free Iraqi Council, 164
 Free Land. See Terra Lliure
 German Athletic Combat Art Association, 136
 German People's Union, 53
 GIA. See Armed Islamic Group
 GRAPO. See 1 October Antifascist Resistance Group
 Grey Wolves, 4, 30, 39, 65, 74, 119, 144
 Guinean Armed Forces, 143
 Hamas, 193
 Harkat-e-Jihad, 81
hawalas, 92
 Hernan Botero Moreno Comman, 158
 Hizballah, 9, 11, 13, 37, 45, 63, 66, 69, 117, 136, 143, 192
 Hizb ut-Tahrir (Party of Liberation), 43, 111
 Hoffman Military Sports Group, 62
 Hofstad network, 26, 65, 68
 Holger Meins Commando, 88, 137, 164
 Hrvatski Drzavotvorni Pokret. See Croatian Nationalist Movement
 IJ. See Islamic Jihad
 IJO. See Islamic Jihad Organization
 IMU. See Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan
 IRA. See Provisional Irish Republican Army
 Iranian People's Mojahedin, 55
 Iranian Revolutionary Guards, 16, 37
 Irish National Liberation Army, 117
 Irish Republican Army. See Provisional Irish Republican Army
 Irish Worker's Party, 52
 Islamic Army for the Liberation of the Holy Sites, 114
 Islamic Great East Raiders Front, 29
 Islamic Group Military Branch, 86
 Islamic International Peacekeeping Brigade, 20, 82, 178
 Islamic Jihad (IJ), 14, 50, 64, 69, 95, 109, 178. See also Egyptian Islamic Jihad; Palestinian Islamic Jihad
 Islamic Jihad Organization (IJO), 9, 49, 57, 78, 139, 154, 189
 Islamic Jihad Union, 53, 148, 161, 186
 Islamic Movement, 29
 Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU), 7, 53, 75, 113, 139, 148, 186, 188
 Islamic Resistance, 64, 69, 109, 178
 Islamic Revival Movement, 140
 Islamic Salvation Front (FIS), 60, 82
 Islamic State, 14, 73
 Japanese Red Army (JRA), 183
 al-Jihad, 8, 128
 JRA. See Japanese Red Army
 Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide, 94, 143
 Karl-Heinz Hoffmann Group, 98
 Khalid Akbar Commando, 63
 Kosovo Liberation Army, 64
 Kurdish Democracy Party, 189, 192
 Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK), 8, 10–12, 21, 31, 34–35, 37, 39–40, 46, 57, 73–74, 77, 90, 102, 116–17, 124, 140–41, 144–45, 156–57, 169–70, 173, 187, 192
 LARF. See Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction
 Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction (LARF), 1, 46, 145
 Lebanese National Resistance Front, 130
 Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, 131
 Libyan Revolutionary Cells, 80–81, 192
 March 14, 68, 143, 153
 Martyr Kharmian Hayrik Suicide Squad, 45, 144
 al-Mehdi Ben Barka, 75, 143
 Mojahedin-e Khalq, 59
 Moroccan Islamic Combatant Group, 61
 Movement 2 June, 135, 165, 174
 Mujahdeen Movement, 3, 31, 98, 145, 184
 Muntada al-Ansar al-Islami, 168
 Muslim Brotherhood, 113
 National Alliance, 105
 Nationalistic Front, 136
 Nationalist Socialist Democratic Workers Party, 180
 National Liberation Front, 144
 National Movement Party, 39
 National Organisation of Cypriot Fighters. See Ethniki Organosis Kypriou Agoniston
 National Socialist German Workers Party/Foreign Organization, 126
 Northern Arab League, 64, 69, 109, 178
 Northern Epirus Liberation Front, 9, 22, 88, 121
 November 17, 54, 56, 86, 181
 1 October Antifascist Resistance Group (GRAPO), 117, 151–52
 Organization for Resistance to Zionist Conquest of Palestine, 81
 Organization for Resistance to Zionist Occupation, 81
 Organization for Victims of Zionist Occupation, 81
 Organization of Arab Nationalist Youth for the Liberation of Palestine, 115
 Organization of Cyprus, 23, 26, 44, 81–82, 99, 121, 124, 155, 193
 Organization of Struggle against World Imperialism, 54, 110, 132, 155, 179
 Organization of the Secret Army, 173
 Organization of the Soldiers of God–Martyr Zulfikar Ali Bhutto Group, 38, 80–81, 192
 Organization of the Unity of the Arab North, 64, 69, 109, 178
 Organized Communist Movement, 126
 Orly Group, 56
 Otpor, 67, 72, 156
 Palestine Liberation Army, 115
 Palestine Liberation Front (PLF), 51
 Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), 15, 28, 48, 96, 132–33, 150, 156, 162, 189
 Palestine Popular Struggle Front, 39, 73, 102, 162–63, 178
 Palestine Resistance Organization, 64

- Palestinian Islamic Jihad (PIJ), 60, 112, 129, 193
- Palestinian Liberation Movement, 101
- Palestinian Martyrs, 151
- Palestinian Resistance Organization, 69, 109, 178
- Parliamentary Opposition Loyal to the People, 126, 180
- Party of Free Life of Kurdistan (PEJAK), 39
- Party of Liberation. See Hizb ut-Tahrir
- Patriotic Front, 49
- PEJAK. See Party of Free Life of Kurdistan
- People's Authority, 23, 26, 44, 81–83, 99, 121, 124, 155, 193
- People's Front Initiative, 26, 83, 99, 121, 124, 155
- People's Liberation Army, 21
- People's Mujahadeen, 75, 120, 152
- People's Revolutionary Solidarity, 136
- PFLP-GC. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command
- PIJ. See Palestinian Islamic Jihad
- PKK. See Kurdistan Workers' Party
- PLF. See Palestine Liberation Front
- PLO. See Palestine Liberation Organization
- Popular Forces of April 25, 143
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), 3, 23, 26, 31, 40–41, 44, 46, 48, 54, 70, 79–83, 99, 102, 105, 107, 110, 114, 121, 124, 131–32, 134–36, 138, 149, 155–56, 159, 162, 174, 177–78, 186–87, 193. See also Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command (PFLP-GC), 32, 35–36, 162
- Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), 4, 52, 93, 138, 146
- al Qaeda, 2–3, 5–7, 16, 18, 21–23, 25, 29, 31–32, 37–38, 42–49, 51–53, 64, 66, 71–73, 82–83, 90, 92, 96, 98, 100, 105–7, 111–13, 116, 123, 139–41, 145–46, 148, 150, 152, 155, 161, 167–70, 184–86, 192–93
- al Qaeda, in Iraq, 7, 21
- Al Qoods (Jerusalem) Force, 16, 172
- Rabitat ash-Shaghghilah. See Workers' League
- RAF. See Red Army Faction
- RB. See Red Brigades
- Red Army Faction (RAF), 25, 62–63, 68, 88, 102, 106, 117, 120, 122, 124–26, 133–35, 137, 147–49, 155, 157–58, 165–66, 172, 174–79
- Red Brigades (RB), 49, 63, 65, 99, 103, 120–22, 137, 147, 149, 167, 194
- Red Eagles of the Palestinian Revolution, 24, 31, 46, 83, 150, 162, 186–87, 193
- Renaissance of the Islamic Heritage, 64
- Requirements for Getting into Paradise. See Riyadhus-Salikhin Reconnaissance and Sabotage Battalion of Chechen Martyrs
- Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia (FARC), 25, 76
- Revolutionary Group for International Solidarity, 22, 88
- Revolutionary Militant Wing, 80
- Revolutionary Organization 17 November, 181, 187
- Revolutionary Organization of Socialist Moslems, 151
- Revolutionary People's Liberation Party-Front (DHKP-C), 7–8, 11, 14–15, 19, 22, 28–29, 40–41, 57, 74, 118–19, 165, 169, 171, 186
- Revolutionary People's Struggle, 29–30
- Revolutionary Socialist Brigade, 58, 172–73
- Riyadus-Salikhin Reconnaissance and Sabotage Battalion of Chechen Martyrs (Requirements for Getting into Paradise), 20
- Russian Liberation Army, 166
- al-Saiqa, 15–16, 156
- Salafist Group for Call and Combat, 167
- Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, 3, 32, 83, 98, 145, 167, 184
- Savama, 72, 75, 94, 120, 152, 185
- Secret Anti-Communist Army, 167
- Seventh Suicide Squad, 10, 71
- Socialist Patients' Collective, 133, 136, 164
- Society for the Revival of Islamic Heritage, 64
- SOPO. See Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland
- Special Purpose Islamic Regiment, 80
- Taliban, 5–6, 25–26, 113, 116, 168
- Terra Lliure (Free Land), 144
- Territorial Communist Cells, 120
- Terza Posizione. See Third Position
- Third Position (Terza Posizione), 107
- Third World Relief Agency, 60
- TPLA. See Turkish People's Liberation Army
- Turkish Hizballah, 66
- Turkish People's Liberation Army (TPLA), 7–8, 12, 15, 19, 30–31, 46, 55, 66, 90, 97, 152, 187–89, 194
- Turkish People's Liberation Party Acilciler, 171
- Turkish People's Liberation Party-Front, 90, 119
- Turkish Revolutionary Left. See Dev Sol
- Turkish Revolutionary Youth Federation, 30–31, 187
- 28 October National Armed Syndicalist Group, 132, 136
- Ulrike Meinhof Special Action Group, 155
- Unified Nasirite Organization, 24, 113
- Unione del Lavoro, 149
- Union of Communist Fighters, 65, 99, 103, 120, 122, 154
- Union of Imams, 2
- Vanguards of Islamic Conquest, 128
- VZ58, 183
- Women's Association for Democracy, 23
- Workers' Autonomy Movement, 120, 135
- Workers' League (Rabitat ash-Shaghghilah), 82
- www.azzam.com, 5
- www.qoqaz.net, 5

About the Authors

DR. EDWARD F. MICKOLUS wrote the first doctoral dissertation on international terrorism while earning a PhD from Yale University. He then served in analytical, operational, management, and staff positions in the Central Intelligence Agency for 33 years, where he was CIA's first full-time analyst on international terrorism; analyzed African political, economic, social, military, and leadership issues; wrote political-psychological assessments of world leaders; and managed collection, counterintelligence, and covert action programs against terrorists, drug traffickers, weapons proliferators, and hostile espionage services. He founded Vinyard Software, Inc., whose products include ITERATE (International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events) text and numeric datasets and DOTS (Data on Terrorist Suspects). Clients include 150 universities in 21 countries. His 20 books include a series of multivolume chronologies and annotated bibliographies on international terrorism; 12 book chapters; 100 articles and reviews in refereed scholarly journals and newspapers and presentations to professional societies; and 14 humorous publications. Recent publications include Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology; Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.); The Terrorist List: The Middle East; and International Terrorism in the 1980's: A Chronology of Events, Volumes 1 and 2.

SUSAN L. SIMMONS is an independent writer, editor, and writing coach. She works with faculty to publish and achieve tenure; graduate students to complete dissertations; new fiction and nonfiction writers to complete manuscripts, prepare proposals, and find venues and agents; and businesses to prepare sensitive letters and documents and to research and write reports for venture capital firms. She specializes in the fields of international relations, art history, education, psychology, and business. Simmons holds a master's degree in English literature from the University of Minnesota and has worked in the field of terrorism since 1993. She coauthored Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.).

THE TERRORIST LIST

THE TERRORIST LIST

---

Volume 4

North America

Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

PRAEGER SECURITY INTERNATIONAL

AN IMPRINT OF ABC-CLIO, LLC
Santa Barbara, California • Denver, Colorado • Oxford, England

Copyright 2011 by Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, except for the inclusion of brief quotations in a review, without prior permission in writing from the publisher.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Mickolus, Edward F.

The terrorist list / Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons.

v. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Contents: v. 1. Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa — v. 2. Western Europe — v. 3. Eastern Europe — v. 4. North America — v. 5. South America.

ISBN 978-0-313-37471-5 (alk. paper) — ISBN 978-0-313-37472-2 (ebook)

1. Terrorists—Biography. 2. Terrorism. I. Simmons, Susan L. II. Title.

HV6430.A1M53 2011

363.325092'2—dc22 2010033700

ISBN: 978-0-313-37471-5

EISBN: 978-0-313-37472-2

15 14 13 12 11 1 2 3 4 5

This book is also available on the World Wide Web as an eBook.

Visit www.abc-clio.com for details.

Praeger

An Imprint of ABC-CLIO, LLC

ABC-CLIO, LLC

130 Cremona Drive, P.O. Box 1911

Santa Barbara, California 93116-1911

This book is printed on acid-free paper

Manufactured in the United States of America

Our endless gratitude to Susan, Ciana, and P. B.

CONTENTS

---

INTRODUCTION	ix
THE TERRORIST LIST	1
SELECTED READINGS	297
INDEX	301

INTRODUCTION

---

The following list includes the names of individuals who have appeared in my previous chronologies of international terrorism and individuals who have been named in open sources as somehow involved in terrorist attacks or organizations. The list is designed to serve as a directory of leaders, perpetrators, financiers, defendants, detainees, persons of interest, conspirators, and aliases from 1950 to 2008 in the regions of North America. It includes individuals with a nationality of one of the countries in the region, whose operations were generally considered to have been conducted in the regions, who were detained in the regions, who were wanted for trial in the regions, against whom an arrest warrant was issued in the regions, and/or whose cases were tried on the soil of the regions. Aliases, nicknames, and kunya, when known, are included.

This list does not purport to be globally comprehensive—it is limited solely to international incidents or other incidents of sufficient import to be included in previous chronologies. Then again, inclusion does not mean that the individual is a terrorist. Many of the individuals listed were later determined by a court to be innocent of any involvement in incidents or organizations, or it was determined that there was not sufficient evidence to proceed to trial. Others were named as prisoners whose release was demanded in hostage negotiations. Still others were involved in non-terrorist hijackings or in nonpolitical criminal activities that are similar to attacks conducted for political motives, and these are included to give a flavor of the security environment that existed during this period. Some of the individuals included acted in the prehistory of modern terrorism but served as models for the actions of those whose motivations in later years were more in line with terrorism as we have come to know it.

I have attempted to include major cases of domestic terrorism or cases that have been tried under national antiterrorism statutes. This should not be interpreted as indicating that I consider the individuals to be terrorists, nor does it indicate any position on the underlying motivations of the individuals named or the merits of their causes. In some cases, individuals so accused have gone on to become governmental leaders.

The list uses the same definitions as my earlier books. International terrorism is the use or threat of use of anxiety-inducing extra-normal violence for political purposes by any individual or group, whether acting for or in opposition to established governmental authority, when such action is intended to influence the attitudes and behavior of a target group wider than the immediate victims and when—through the nationality or foreign ties of its perpetrators, its location, the nature of its institutional or human victims, or the mechanics of its resolution—its ramifications transcend national boundaries. I also included incidents that were initially treated by security authorities as terrorist or quasi-terrorist, such as hijackings later determined to be the work of mentally unstable individuals or individuals seeking non-traditional modes of transportation but who did not have terrorist motives.

Because of the criminal nature of terrorism, its perpetrators often use aliases and “also known as” names to mask their identities and to increase the propaganda value of their actions. I have attempted to link aliases to the perpetrator’s principal name.

Names are listed alphabetically by surname but are shown with first name first to prevent confusion in reading Arabic names. Several transliteration systems are in use for Arabic names. I have tried to include the major variants, again keyed to the principal name. Arabic names are alphabetized without regard to name fragments such as al-, bin, and Abd-al. The last main element is used for alphabetization. For further thoughts on problems in establishing consistency in transliterations, see my article on the topic.<sup>1</sup> Hispanic names are alphabetized according to the individual’s patronymic.

Date and place of birth are included when reported, except for nonpolitical, non-terrorist hijackers. Such information is often available in the chronologies.

This list, although including tens of thousands of names, is not intended to be used as a terrorist watch list or to supplant those used by law enforcement, homeland security, and other authorities around the world. The Justice Department’s FBI Terrorist Screening Center’s database, for example, had 754,960 records per the Government Accountability Office’s May 2007 report and was adding 20,000 records each month. This list is not aimed at such exhaustive coverage. The intention behind this list is to give students of the discipline a starting point for understanding the phenomenon of terrorism, as well as to give the blognoscenti and members of the commentariat who believe that mere “connecting the dots” is child’s play some appreciation for the amount of dots that exist and the difficulty experienced daily by those attempting to protect us from the depredations of terrorists.

A popular sound bite for books such as this is a Top 10 List of the worst terrorists of all time. Criteria for devising such a list could include most events masterminded over a career, most deaths perpetrated, or involvement in a single dramatic event. In no particular order, individuals who should be considered in the hall of shame conversation are as follows:

- Osama bin Laden, leader of al Qaeda
- Wadi Haddad, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
- Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos the Jackal
- Fusako Shigenobu, leader of the Japanese Red Army
- Abimael Guzman, leader of the Peruvian Shining Path
- Khalid Sheikh Mohammad, architect of numerous al Qaeda attacks, including 9/11
- Velupillai Prabhakaran, leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Sri Lanka
- Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf, mastermind of numerous attacks around the world
- Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber
- Theodore Kaczynski, alias the Unabomber
- Shoko Asahara, leader of Aum Shin Rikyo
- Sabri al-Banna, alias Abu Nidal
- Muhammad Atta, leader of the 9/11 hijackers

- Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, leader of al Qaeda in Iraq
- FNU LNU (name unknown), mailer of anthrax envelopes

For far more detailed information on the terrorist incidents themselves, please consult my chronologies of events and annotated bibliographies beginning 1968 to the present and published by Greenwood Press and Iowa State University Press. Also helpful are the National Counterterrorism Center's annual Counterterrorism: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods and Tactics, published since the mid-1990s, with an interactive online version since 2007. The Terrorist List: North America is available as the Data on Terrorists (DOTS) database from Vinyard Software, Inc., 2305 Sandburg Street, Dunn Loring, VA 22027-1124 USA or from vinyardsoftware@hotmail.com

The fate of many terrorists goes unreported by the media, but numerous perpetrators have been subject to the rule of law years, or even decades, after their attacks. This list demonstrates that no matter how long it may take, terrorists can be tracked down and brought to justice by like-minded governments.

Edward F. Mickolus
President of Vinyard Software, Inc.

NOTE

1. Edward F. Mickolus, "Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography," Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

A

---

Mohammed Aatique: one of 11 members of the “Virginia jihad network” named in a 42-count federal indictment on June 25, 2003, unsealed on June 27, 2003, for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. The U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, was told that the men trained and fought for Lashkar-i-Taiba, a group that tries to get India out of Kashmir and has been named a terrorist group by the U.S. government. In raids on June 27, federal agents arrested six men in the Washington, D.C., suburbs and Pennsylvania. Two were already in custody as part of the investigation, which had begun in 2000. Three others were in Saudi Arabia. The nine U.S. citizens and two foreigners faced weapons counts and charges of violating the Neutrality Act. There was no evidence that they intended attacks within the United States. Authorities found pistols and rifles in the homes of some of the defendants. The indictment said they had trained at private and military firearms ranges in northern Virginia to ready themselves for attacks in Chechnya, the Philippines, Kashmir, and other locations. They practiced small-unit tactics on private property in Spotsylvania County, using paintball games as a cover. Two defendants were alleged to have fired at Indian positions in Kashmir after training at a Lashkar camp in Pakistan.

On September 22, 2003, Aatique pleaded guilty to preparing to fight for Muslim causes abroad and admitted that his co-conspirators might have taken up arms against the United States if they had not been arrested. Sentencing was scheduled for December 12. On December 12, he was sentenced to 10 years and 2 months on a gun charge.

Judge Leonie Brinkema said she was hamstrung by sentencing guidelines. Prosecutors praised his cooperation in the case. He was represented by attorney Alan Dexter Bowman. (See also Sabri Benkhala, Ali Asad Chandia, Seifullah Chapman, Ibrahim Ahmed al-Hamdi, Khwaja Mahmood Hasan, Masoud Ahmad Khan, Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem, Hammad Abdur-Raheem, Randall Todd Royer, Donald Thomas Surratt, Ali al-Timimi, and Yong Ki Kwon.)

Mohdar Abdallah: Yemeni, age 23, picked up on September 21, 2001, in a San Diego parking lot. He was held as a material witness in New York. Upon returning to San Diego, he was charged with lying on a political asylum application by claiming to be a Somali refugee, an immigration violation. The San Diego State University junior worked with 9/11 hijacker Nawaf Alhazmi at a Texaco station as its assistant manager. He lived in Canada before coming to the United States. A federal judge set his bond at $500,000.

Amir Zaid Abdelghani: one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI and charged with planning to bomb the UN headquarters building in Manhattan; 26 Federal Plaza, which includes the local FBI headquarters; the 47th Street diamond district, run principally by Orthodox Jews; and the Lincoln and Holland tunnels connecting Manhattan and New Jersey. They planned to assassinate Sen. Alfonse M. D’Amato (R-NY); Asm. Dov Hiking, an Orthodox Jewish legislator from Brooklyn; UN secretary general Boutros Boutros-Ghali; and Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak. They were tied to those charged with the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC). Five were arrested in a Queens safe house assembling explosives by combining fertilizer nitrates and diesel fuel in 55-gallon drums. The FBI seized 400 to 500 pounds of explosives, components of a crude timing device, and other bomb-making equipment. Other arrests occurred in Yonkers, Brooklyn, and Jersey City.

On June 25, the eight defendants appeared before a magistrate in U.S. District Court and were charged with conspiracy and attempting to “destroy by means of fire and explosive” buildings used in interstate commerce. The charges included maximum terms of 15 years in prison plus fines of $500,000.

The Jersey City resident moved to the United States from Sudan in 1985. He became a resident alien in 1987 and was to take his citizenship test in June 1993. He had returned to Sudan annually for the preceding eight years to visit his wife and child. He drove a van for a medical supply service. He was accused of testing a bomb timing device, providing money to buy stolen cars, casing target sites, and planning the bombings. U.S. Magistrate James Francis refused to grant bail, saying that he was politically motivated and would pose a threat to the community if released.

He was found guilty on October 1, 1995, of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, and attempted bombing. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 30 years. (See also Fadil Abdelghani, Siddiq Ibrahim Siddiq Ali, Victor Alvarez, Hsab Babkir, Earl Gant, Clement Rodney Hampton-El, Tariq el-Hasan, Hilmi Ibrahim, Fares Khallafalla, Sheik Omar Ahmed Abdel Rahman, Mohammad Saleh, and Osman el-Sheikh.)

Fadil Abdelghani: cousin of Amir Zaid Abdelghani and one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. The Sudanese medical supplies delivery driver and cabbie lived in Brooklyn. He had become a U.S. citizen in 1991 after marrying a U.S. citizen, from whom he was estranged. Another wife lived in Sudan. He had traveled recently to Sudan, Egypt, South American, and the Netherlands. He was denied bail on June 28.

On October 1, 1995, Abdelghani was found guilty of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, and attempted bombing. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 25 years. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Shareef Abdelhaleen: Abdelhaleen, age 30, was one of 17 people arrested on June 2, 2006, in nighttime raids in the Toronto suburbs. The 17 had a huge cache of explosives, including three tons of ammonium nitrate and a detonator made from a cell phone. They had planned to set off truck bombs at public targets, including power plants in Ontario, the Parliament building in Ottawa, the Toronto Stock Exchange, and the Toronto offices of the Canadian Security and Intelligence Service near the downtown CN Tower. A police spokesperson denied that the group had targeted the Toronto subway system. They also had planned to take over the Canadian Parliament, hold hostages, and behead prime minister Stephen Harper if Canada did not withdraw its 2,300 troops from Afghanistan and to demand the release of Muslim prisoners in Afghanistan and Iraq. The group had wanted to take over the downtown Toronto studios of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and had talked about using remote-controlled toys that would carry explosives into police stations.

On June 3, they appeared in court, charged under the country's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. The 17 had Arabic names and were ages 15 to 43 (later reports said five of them were under age 18). Most of the suspects were believed to be Canadian citizens, but the group included people from Somalia, Egypt, and Pakistan. Most were born in Canada or had arrived as young children. Police said the group had trained outside Toronto and were “adherents of a virulent ideology inspired by al Qaeda.” Canadian authorities spotted the 17 via Internet chat rooms, e-mail, and telephone communications. They had communicated with fellow militants in the United States and Europe.

On June 4, the Toronto Star reported that the government had provided the terrorists with three tons of explosives in a sting operation and intercepted the ammonium nitrate and substituted harmless powder before the arrests. Once the group paid $4,000 for the materials, they were arrested. More arrests outside Canada were expected. Authorities were looking into whether the detainees had links to Islamists held in the United States, United Kingdom, Bangladesh, Bosnia, Denmark, and Sweden. Police said 10 of the men had gathered in a wooded area near Washago, 90 miles north of Toronto, for terrorism training.

Abdelhaleen was charged in the explosives plot. (See also Fahim Ahmad, Zakaria Amara, Asad Ansari, Steven Vikash Chand, Mohammed Dirie, Amin Mohamed Durani, Ahmad Mustafa Ghany, Qayyum Abdul Jamal, Jahmaal James, Saad Khalid, Yasmin Abdi Mohamed.)

Abed Jamil Abdeljalil: on March 5, 1997, police in Roanoke, Virginia, arrested 9 men and were seeking a 10th suspected of laundering hundreds of thousands of dollars to Middle Eastern terrorist front organizations during the previous seven years. The suspects were held on federal murder, racketeering, narcotics, and extortion charges and were believed to have built a fortune via narcotics distribution and insurance scams involving arson, burglary, robbery, and fraud. The group owned or had a financial interest in 33 restaurants, convenience stores, and other shops. One of the front organizations was SAAR (name beyond acronym unknown), an investment-management agency that reportedly supports Hamas and has ties to Osama bin Laden. The U.S. Attorney’s Office for the Western District of Virginia identified the group as the Abed Family, named after the two brothers who controlled it, Joseph Abed and Abed Jamil Abdeljalil, both born in El Bireh, Palestinian Authority. They and four sons born in northern Virginia, along with a Jordanian, a Saudi, an Iraqi, and an American employee of the U.S. Postal Service, faced charges that could lead to life in prison. (See also Joseph Abed and Ahmad Thiab.)

Fathy Saleh Abdelkhalek: Egyptian arrested in Evansville, Indiana, and initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 attacks, but later released.

Abdillah S. Abdi: on September 11, 2002, U.S. District Judge James C. Cacheris sentenced Abdi, age 36, and his uncle Abdirahman Sheikh-Ali Isse, age 49, who headed the Al Barakaat branch on Beauregard Street in Alexandria, Virginia, on charges of wiring more than $7 million from their Raage Associates branch to Al Barakaat’s headquarters in the United Arab Emirates over three-plus years. The amounts were always less than $10,000, the Internal Revenue Service’s reporting trigger on money laundering. They remained free on bond while they appealed their sentences. In November 2001, the government declared that Al Barakaat was helping to fund al Qaeda through the hawala system. The duo pleaded guilty in June 2002 to one count of conspiring to structure transactions to avoid reporting requirements. Abdi was sentenced to five months in prison and five months of home detention.

Mohammed Abdi: naturalized U.S. citizen from Somalia whose phone number and “Mohumed” were scrawled in yellow highlighter on a D.C.-area map found in a blue Toyota left by 9/11 hijacker Nawaf Alhazmi. On November 5, 2001, the resident of Alexandria, Virginia, age 44, pleaded not guilty to 12 counts of unrelated forgery charges in U.S. District Court in Alexandria. He requested a jury trial for allegations that he forged his landlord’s name on checks made out jointly to Abdi and the landlord by an Arlington County rent assistance program. When arrested, Abdi had a clipping about Algerian terrorist Ahmed Ressam in his pocket. Abdi had worked since 1994 as a Burns International security guard assigned to Freddie Mac's headquarters in D.C. He refused to cooperate with the FBI or prosecutors following his September 23, 2001, arrest. On December 13, Abdi pleaded guilty and admitted to depositing a $220 check—and 11 others—in his own bank account rather than giving them to his landlord because his apartment's air conditioning had not been repaired. Abdi faced 10 years in prison.

Meanwhile, Abdi failed an FBI polygraph on whether he had inside knowledge of the 9/11 hijacking (inconclusive) and whether he had contacts with the hijackers (deception indicated). U.S. District Judge T.S. Ellis III ordered Abdi held when it was also revealed that he tried to give five Burns uniforms to a friend, who called the FBI. Abdi was held without bond until his sentencing on January 11, 2002, to four months in prison for forging a signature on a housing subsidy check.

Nuradin M. Abdi: Somali and al Qaeda terrorist, age 32, detained for planning an attack against a Columbus, Ohio, shopping mall. He was arrested on November 28, 2003. He was linked to Ayman Faris, a former cabdriver convicted in June 2003 of an al Qaeda plot in the United States and sentenced to 20 years on October 29, 2003. He was indicted for conspiring to engage in terrorist attacks after traveling to Ethiopia to study "radio usage, guns, guerrilla warfare, bombs, and 'anything to damage the enemy.'" Abdi was also charged with fraud and misuse of documents. He lied on his asylum application and applied for travel documents to Germany and Saudi Arabia for religious study in 1999, when he actually planned to travel to Ogaden, Ethiopia, for jihad training. He returned to the United States in March 2000, using the fraudulent documents. Faris picked him up from the airport. An immigration judge revoked his asylum status on January 28, 2004. Abdi worked at Cell-U-Com, a cell phone business in Columbus, where he provided cell phones to Faris. Abdi was represented by attorney Douglas S. Weigle in the earlier immigration hearings and faced 55 years in prison.

On June 16, Magistrate Mark Abel ordered Abdi to undergo psychiatric tests to determine competency after Abdi slammed his face on a table and smiled vacantly during court hearings.

On November 27, 2007, a Columbus judge sentenced Abdi to 10 years for plotting to bomb an Ohio shopping mall in collusion with a man later convicted of al Qaeda membership. Abdi was to be deported to Somalia after serving his sentence.

Samir Abdoun: arrested on September 22, 2001, Abdoun, age 38, was deported by the United States on December 31, 2004, to Algeria after conviction of immigration and passport violations and Social Security fraud. He had met with two of the 9/11 hijackers.

Mohammad Aidaros Abdulla: Abdulla, age 62, was one of six men arrested in the Detroit area on December 18, 2002, for the unlicensed transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. Police seized five bank accounts in Detroit and Dearborn, Michigan. On January 8, 2003, federal officials dropped the charges; he was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. Assistant Agent-in-Charge James Dinkins said the Customs Service would file new charges soon.

Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah: fugitive indicted by a federal grand jury in New York on December 19, 2000, on capital charges of playing a direct role in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, having sat next to bin Laden and others on the al Qaeda consultation council that "discussed and approved major undertakings, including terrorist operations." In October 2001, the United States identified him as an Egyptian, circa age 38, five feet eight inches, with weight unknown, and as a co-leader of bin Laden's cells in East Africa at the time of the Africa bombings. He helped plan several al Qaeda strikes and arranged some of its propaganda tapings. (Possibly same person as in next entry.)

Abdullah Ahmed Abdullah: questioned in connection with the November 28, 2002, incident in which three suicide terrorists drove a green four-wheel-drive Mitsubishi Pajero bomb into the Israeli-owned Paradise Hotel resort in Mombasa, killing themselves, 3 Israelis, and 10 Kenyans and injuring 80 others. (Possibly same person as in previous entry.)

Hani Saleh Rashid Abdullah: Yemeni detained as of February 2008 in Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of involvement in terrorism. He was represented by attorney Charles Carpenter.

Mohdar Abdullah: Yemeni, age 24, in federal custody since shortly after the 9/11 attacks, who on July 19, 2002, pleaded guilty to lying to an immigration officer in San Diego. He was suspected of helping three of the 9/11 hijackers get driver's licenses and establish themselves in the United States. The former college student was sentenced to six months on October 2, 2002, with credit for time served.

Ramadan Abdullah: murder suspect, age 24, in whose Brooklyn apartment New York police found bomb-making material on January 4, 1977. They suggested the cache may be connected with the December 29, 1975, La Guardia bombing in which 11 were killed and 75 were injured. A caller claimed a Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) commando squad had carried the armed struggle into the United States. A Puerto Rican group, the underworld, and the Symbionese Liberation Army claimed credit as well.

Agron Abdullahu: Abdullahu, age 24, was one of six people arrested on May 7, 2007, by the FBI in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, for planning an attack on Fort Dix to kill 100 soldiers with assault rifles and grenades. They were alleged to have conducted firearms training in the Pocono Mountains in Gouldsboro, Pennsylvania. The defendants used cell phones to conduct video surveillances. A Circuit City store clerk spotted footage and jihad training videos they wanted transferred to DVD and alerted authorities in January 2006. An Egyptian military veteran worked with the FBI in befriending a suspect and taping conversations. The FBI said the investigation took 16 months. For the attack the group considered Fort Monmouth in New Jersey, Dover Air Force Base in Delaware, the U.S. Coast Guard Building in Philadelphia, Fort Dix, and other locations. They picked Fort Dix because one of the group delivered pizzas there from his family-owned Super Mario Pizza and had a map of the base. The group also planned to attack a U.S. naval base in Philadelphia just before the Army–Navy football game.

Abdullahu was an ethnic Albanian born in the Serbian province of Kosovo and legally residing in Buena Vista Township in New Jersey, and he worked at a Shop-Rite supermarket. He and his family had fled and obtained asylum in the United States in 1999.

Two of the six were arrested when they showed up at a home to purchase assault rifles that had been disabled by the FBI. The 26-page indictment charged five “radical Islamists” with conspiracy to murder members of the armed forces, which carries a life sentence. Abdullahu was charged with aiding and abetting illegal weapons possession and faced 10 years. The six were held without bond after a May 8, 2007, court appearance.

The six were ordered held without bail on May 11 at a federal detention center in Philadelphia. On May 17, U.S. Magistrate Joel Schneider in Camden denied bail to Abdullahu as a flight risk.

On July 10, federal prosecutors requested an anonymous jury.

On October 30, 2007, Abdullahu pleaded guilty to conspiring to provide weapons and faced five years in prison. He admitted letting the group use his legally owned Beretta 9-mm pistol and a Yugoslav-made semiautomatic rifle. He said he knew it was illegal for them to own the weapons but did not know it was illegal for them to use the guns at a firing range. He was represented by public defender Richard Coughlin. Sentencing was scheduled for February 6, 2008. Prosecutors said he had a minor role. (See also Mohamad Ibrahim Shnewer and Serdar Tatar.)

Mujahid Abdulqaadir: born Melvin Lattimore of St. Louis, Abdulqaadir, age 51, was arrested on a weapons charge, and as of December 12, 2001, he remained in federal custody. He was mentioned in the indictment of Zacarias Moussaoui and had met Moussaoui at a mosque and roomed with him in Norman, Oklahoma. The FBI also questioned his son, Khalid.

Mufid Abdulqader: top fund-raiser for the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF)—the nation's largest Muslim charity—and half-brother of Akram Mishal. He was among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against the HLF, charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. On October 22, 2007, a Dallas jury found little evidence against him, and the judge declared a mistrial. (See also Shukri Abu Baker.)

Joseph Abed: on March 5, 1997, police in Roanoke, Virginia, arrested 9 men and were seeking a 10th suspected of laundering hundreds of thousands of dollars to Middle Eastern terrorist front organizations during the previous seven years. Abed was one of two brothers who controlled the group and faced charges that could lead to life in prison. (See also Abed Jamil Abdeljalil.)

Mohammed Abouhalima: on May 29, 1997, he was found guilty of helping his brother Mahmud with the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing by driving him to JFK International Airport after the bombing. He faced a 15-year sentence. Sentencing was scheduled for September 22, 1997. His lawyer said he would appeal. On November 24, 1998, Judge Michael Mukasey sentenced him to eight years in prison.

Mahdi Abousetta: one of four accomplices of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. The Arlington, Virginia, resident was the financial officer of the McLean, Virginia-based People's Committee for Libyan Students. U.S. Magistrate Leonie Brinkema set bond between $25,000 and $50,000. The group apparently was planning revenge against U.S. officials believed to have planned the April 1986 air raid against Libya in retaliation for Libyan involvement in several terrorist attacks. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya.

Yehuda Abraham: in an August 12, 2003, sting operation, federal officials in Newark, New Jersey, arrested Orthodox Jew and Manhattan jewelry dealer Yehuda Abraham, age 76, who ran a hawala, for conspiracy to operate an unlicensed money transmitting business. Abraham handled the funds transfer for arms dealer Hemant Lakhani and Moinuddeen Ahmed Hameed, charged with selling Russian shoulder-fired SA-18 missiles to agents posing as al Qaeda terrorists planning to take down U.S. planes on U.S. soil. On March 30, 2004, Abraham pleaded guilty to unwittingly handling a $30,000 payment for the smugglers. He could be fined $250,000 and sentenced to five years in prison.

Mohammed Absadeh: Jordanian, age 31, held by U.S. authorities as of November 2001 in connection with their 9/11 investigations.

Hassan Abujihad: variant Abu-Jihad; alias of Paul R. Hall.

Osama Sabhi Abulhassan: one of two Dearborn, Michigan, residents, age 20, stopped on August 8, 2006, by police in Marietta, Ohio, on a traffic violation. Police discovered airplane passenger lists, information on airport security checkpoints, $11,000 in cash, and 12 phones. The next day, the duo was charged with money laundering in support of terrorism. On August 10, prosecutors also charged them with soliciting or providing support for acts of terrorism and a misdemeanor count of falsification. They were ordered held on bonds of $200,000 each and were to surrender their passports. They said they had purchased about 600 phones in recent months at stores in southeast Ohio. Their attorneys said the college students were victims of discrimination. Attorney Rolf Baumgartel said, "These are all-American kids that unfortunately, in this day and age since 9/11, have names that call them into question." On August 14, Ohio authorities dropped all charges for lack of evidence. Washington County Prosecutor James Schneider wanted to continue a charge of lying to police.

Joseph Aceto: member of the Sam Melville–Jonathan Jackson Unit indicted on July 15, 1976, for setting off a bomb on an Eastern Air Lines Electra II Lockheed prop jet at Boston's Logan International Airport on July 2, 1976. The blast destroyed the $500,000 plane, and one person was injured. A courthouse built in 1805 sustained $100,000 damage in another Boston blast. A National Guard truck was destroyed in a third bombing in Boston. He was also a member of the Fred Hampton Unit of the People's Forces.

Abdul Adam: also known as George W. Smith. Held on $50,000 bond as one of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 44 to 132 years. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980.

Catherine Dee Adams: resident of Boyd, Texas, age 35, who was one of four would-be terrorists arrested on April 22, 1997, by the Dallas Joint Terrorism Task Force in a raid on a safe house in rural Wise County. They were planning to stage attacks and rob an armored car in Chico of $2 million on May 1. Her husband, Edward Taylor Jr., was also arrested. Local and federal officials held the suspects without bond. They were charged with conspiracy to commit a robbery affecting interstate commerce, which carries a maximum 20-year sentence.

The terrorists' plan was to blow up a gas refinery owned by Mitchell Energy and Development Corporation in Bridgeport. Two to four pipe bombs would be planted at the refinery, one in a visible location. The foursome believed that an explosion at the refinery would release a deadly cloud of hydrogen sulfide gas, killing the policemen who would arrive to investigate a bomb threat that was to be phoned in by Catherine Adams. After police found the visible bomb, the others would detonate 45 minutes later. The bombing would give them the diversion they needed to rob the truck and use the money to finance other terrorist activities. They provided gas masks to their family members. They had tested small pipe bombs twice in recent weeks in the Lyndon B. Johnson National Grasslands, a 20,000-acre preserve in Montague and Wise counties. Thanks to an informant in the group, the terrorists were arrested. A gas firm spokesperson said that hydrogen sulfide would not have been released because the company produces only "sweet gas."

Abdoreza Afhami: one of 25 members of the People's Majority, an anti-Khomeini group, who seized the Iranian Interests Section in Washington, D.C., and held six Iranian employees hostage for an hour on August 7, 1981. They were put on probation and ordered to complete 25 hours of community service.

Muhammed Abid Afridi: one of three people arrested by Hong Kong authorities while attempting to buy four Stinger missiles from undercover FBI agents during a September 20, 2002, meeting in a Hong Kong hotel. On November 6, the U.S. Justice Department announced that a naturalized U.S. citizen living in Minneapolis, Minnesota, and two Pakistanis were indicted on October 30 for offering to trade 5 metric tons of hashish and 600 kilograms of heroin for 4 Stingers that they then planned to sell to the Taliban and al Qaeda. Syed Mustajab Shah, age 54, and Muhammed Abid Afridi, age 29, were from Peshawar, Pakistan; Ilyas Ali, age 55, of Minneapolis was a naturalized U.S. citizen from India.

They fought extradition to the United States. Hong Kong magistrate Ariana Ching scheduled extradition proceedings for January 12, 2003. They were represented by attorney Jonathan Acton-Bond. They arrived from Hong Kong on March 6 after giving up their extradition battle. An indictment in the U.S. District Court in Southern California said that Ali had met in April with undercover FBI agents in San Diego to discuss drug deals. The drug charges each carried life sentences and fines of $4 million; supporting terrorists carried a sentence of 15 years and a $250,000 fine. On March 8, 2003, the trio pleaded guilty in a San Diego court to the charges. They were held without bond pending a detention hearing in federal court on March 12.

Babar Ahmad: computer expert, age 30, who worked at Imperial College London and was accused of running two “pro-jihad” U.S.-based Web sites calling for support to terrorism and trying to set up a terrorist training camp in Arizona. The Briton of Pakistani descent was arrested by Scotland Yard on August 5, 2004, on a U.S. extradition request. He was accused of soliciting funds and property via the Internet for “acts of terrorism in Chechnya and Afghanistan,” including political murder between 1998 and the end of 2003. New Jersey imam Mazen Mokhtar helped operate the Web sites (www.azzam.com and www.qoqaz.net), deemed “more operational” than scholarly by the Justice Department. Authorities also said he was the cousin of Muhammad Naeem Noor Khan and part of an al Qaeda branch linked to Khalid Sheik Mohammed. He ran the militant organization Abu Khubayb and was arrested and released by British police in December 2003 on suspicion of terrorism.

At Ahmad’s court appearance on August 6, U.S. government attorney Rosemary Fernandes said Ahmad had three-year-old documents outlining the specific assignments of each USS Constellation Navy battle-group ship, a sketch of its formations, and details of movements and vulnerabilities.

Ahmad was indicted on October 6 by the U.S. attorney in Connecticut for conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists, for laundering money for their cause, and for conspiracy to kill or injure people in a foreign country, and including the purchase of bomb-making material and camouflage suits.

On January 5, 2006, a British court ruled that Ahmad could be extradited to the United States. His family appealed. On November 16, 2005, Charles Clarke, the U.K. senior-most law enforcement official, ordered Ahmad’s extradition to the United States. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws approved the extradition.

Fahim Ahmad: Ahmad, age 21, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada’s antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Ahmad was charged in the explosives plot, with importing guns and ammunition, and with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Mahmud Abed Ahmad: variant of Mahmud al-’Abd Ahmad.

Mahmud al-’Abd Ahmad: variant Mahmud Abed Ahmad. On May 12, 1987, the Fatah-

Revolutionary Council (Abu Nidal Group) warned the United States not to extradite the Palestinian to Israel “under any circumstances, regardless of any legal pretext or agreement used as a justification to hunt down peaceful citizens and fighters.” The group also criticized Venezuela for extraditing him to the United States. On February 2, 1989, Judge Edward Korman of the Eastern District of New York ruled that the naturalized U.S. citizen and Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) member could be extradited to Israel to face charges of firebombing a bus and murdering its driver. Abu Nidal echoed its warning to the United States on September 30, 1989.

Fayez Ahmed: on June 25, 2001, he opened a bank account at the Standard Chartered Bank in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, that the 9/11 terrorists used to move funds between al Qaeda and the hijacking teams. Ahmed entered the United States days later. A month later, he turned over control of the U.A.E. account to Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, who shipped credit and ATM cards to Ahmed in Florida.

Guleed Hassan Ahmed: alias Gouled Hassan Dourad. Somali, age early 30s, who on April 28, 2007, in his hearing before a U.S. Combatant Status Review Tribunal at Guantánamo Bay denied al Qaeda ties and said he fought only Ethiopian soldiers in Somalia. The U.S. military said he belonged to al-Ittihad al-Islami, was an al Qaeda cell leader in Djibouti, and was part of a group that killed Ethiopians in Mogadishu, Somalia, in 2002. On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees, including Ahmed, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay.

Khaleel Ahmed: U.S. citizens and Chicago-area cousins Khaleel Ahmed, age 26, and Zubair Ahmed, age 27, were arrested on February 21, 2007, on federal charges of conspiracy to conduct holy war against Americans overseas, including U.S. troops in Iraq. A Cleveland grand jury charged three other men and the duo with conspiracy to “kill or maim” Americans between June 2004 and February 2006, for finding recruits and sites for training. On March 21, 2007, he pleaded not guilty. He faced life in prison.

Nasser K. Ahmed: Egyptian, age 39, accused by the FBI of being a terrorist. He was incarcerated based on classified evidence linking him to Sheik Abd-al-Rahman, who led the conspiracy to bomb the United Nations. He was Abd-al-Rahman’s interpreter. He was released after spending three and one-half years in a New York jail. The Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) intended to deny his asylum request and have him deported.

Ruhal Ahmed: one of five U.K. citizens held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban who was deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. He was immediately arrested on suspicion of terrorism and released after questioning the next day.

Said Ahmed: variant Saeed Ahmed; alias of Abdul Hakim Murad. Pakistani associate of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf who was seen running from a burning apartment in Manila, Philippines, on January 6, 1995. Police found explosives, wires, Bibles, pictures of the Pope, and maps of the papal route. A laptop computer had details of terrorist plots and Yusuf’s aliases. He was arrested on January 9, 1995, while making bombs in another Manila apartment. On April 13, 1995, federal officials in New York charged him with conspiring to plant bombs on commercial U.S. aircraft.

Syed Haris Ahmed: Pakistani-born naturalized American, age 21, based in Atlanta, who in March 2005 joined Ehsanul Islam Sadequee in a meeting in Toronto with Canadian Islamic extremists to explore attacks on military bases and oil refineries. In April 2005, the duo drove Ahmed’s pickup to Washington, D.C., where they videotaped the U.S. Capitol, World Bank headquarters, a Metro station, a hazardous materials vehicle, and fuel storage tanks. The videos went to al Qaeda Internet leader Younis Tsouli and Abid Hussain Khan, who faced terrorism charges in the United Kingdom. Ahmed was arrested by the FBI in July 2006 after returning to the United States following an attempt to find terrorist training in Pakistan. Ahmed said he had traveled to Canada with Sadeque to meet with “like-minded Islamic extremists” to discuss “strategic locations in the United States suitable for a terrorist strike, to include oil refineries and military bases.” Ahmed and Sadeque faced 60 years in prison. Ahmed was an engineering student at Georgia Tech. He was represented by attorney Jack Martin.

Zubair Ahmed: U.S. citizens and Chicago-area cousins Zubair Ahmed, age 27, and Khaleel Ahmed, age 26, were arrested on February 21, 2007, on federal charges of conspiracy to conduct holy war against Americans overseas, including U.S. troops in Iraq. A Cleveland grand jury charged three other men and the duo with conspiracy to “kill or maim” Americans between June 2004 and February 2006, by finding recruits and sites for training. They faced life in prison.

Syed Talha Ahsan: owner of the defunct jihadi Web site www.azzam.com who faced extradition to the United States from the United Kingdom as of March 2007.

Hamid Aich: Algerian, age 34, who police in Canada, Ireland, and the United States said on January 21, 2000, was wanted for questioning. He shared an apartment in a Vancouver suburb with Abdelmajid Dahoumane, one of the suspects in the millennium bomb plot by Algerian Islamic extremists.

Mohammad Ahmad Ajaj: Palestinian refugee seeking U.S. asylum who was in jail at the time of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. He was serving six months for entering the United States from Pakistan with a false Swedish passport identifying him as Khurram Khan. He had entered the United States illegally at JFK airport on September 1, 1992, carrying 12 bomb-making and chemical manuals. Two manuals bore the fingerprints of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf. Ajaj was released on March 1 but was rearrested on March 9, 1993. He was represented by attorney Lynne Stewart, who said that he had applied for asylum in 1991. Israel said he had been a member of Fatah and later joined the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, training at a jihad camp in Pakistan. On May 7, 1993, he was named at a detention hearing in U.S. District Court in Manhattan as the sixth suspect in the WTC conspiracy. On May 26, he was named in an eight-count indictment for planning and carrying out the WTC attack. He pleaded not guilty on May 28, 1993. On March 4, 1994, the jury found him guilty on all counts of conspiracy, explosives charges, and assault. On May 24, 1994, U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy sentenced him to 240 years in prison, a life term calculated by adding the life expectancy of each of the people killed in the blast, plus 30 years for two other counts.

Abdullah Saleh al Ajmi: Kuwaiti, age 29, who set off a suicide bomb in Mosul, Iraq, near a police patrol in March or April 2008. Three suicide bombings that day killed 7 people, including 2 police officers, and wounded 28 others. Al Ajmi was released from Guantánamo to Kuwait in November 2005. He had been accused of being a Taliban fighter. He was represented in April 2002 by Shearman and Sterling, who represented a dozen Kuwaiti detainees. In 2004 in Rasul v. Bush, the U.S. Supreme court ruled in favor of their habeas corpus petition. Prosecutors opposed his release from Guantánamo because he had deserted from the Kuwaiti Army to join the Afghan jihad, had been supplied with grenades by the Taliban, had admitted to fighting for the Taliban, was captured in an area frequented by bin Laden, demonstrated “aggressive” behavior in Guantánamo, and was a threat to the United States and its allies.

In Kuwait in May 2005, he was tried for membership in al Qaeda and for raising money for the group, but he was acquitted and released. He traveled from Kuwait to Iraq via Syria. In his martyrdom video, he said, “Whoever can join them and execute a suicide operation, let him do so. By god, it will be a mortal blow. The Americans complain much about it. By God, in Guantánamo, all their talk was about explosives and whether you make explosives. It is as if explosives were hell to them.”

It was the first suicide bombing in Iraq linked to a former Guantánamo detainee. The Defense Intelligence Agency claimed that about 36 of the circa 500 Guantánamo alumni returned to terrorism.

Kamran Akhtar: alias Kamran Shaikh. Pakistani resident of Elmhurst, Queens, New York City, age 36, who was arrested on July 20, 2004, in Charlotte, North Carolina, when he was spotted videotaping skyscrapers in downtown Charlotte (including the Bank of America and Wachovia buildings). On August 10, he was ordered held on federal charges that he lied about his immigration status. He had been ordered to leave the United States in 1998 by a New York immigration court but had stayed. His camera held video of buildings in Atlanta, Houston, Dallas, and New Orleans, along with footage of an Austin dam and trolley and transportation systems in several cities. Akhtar’s videotapes of Disneyland, the Golden Gate Bridge, and Las Vegas tourist attractions became the subject of dispute between Las Vegas officials and Detroit prosecutors. In one tape, someone mentioned Khalid Sheikh Muhammad. Seven videotapes had commentary in Urdu. FBI officials said this did not constitute a specific threat.

On October 8, Akhtar pleaded guilty to immigration charges and was sentenced on January 24, 2005, to six months in jail. After serving his sentence, he was ordered deported to Pakistan.

Jamal Akkal: Gaza-born Canadian citizen, age 24, arrested by Israeli authorities in the Gaza Strip on November 1, 2003. He was charged with conspiring to commit manslaughter. On November 24, 2004, he pleaded guilty to planning attacks on Israelis in North America and was sentenced by a military court to four years in prison. He had planned to attack Israeli officials traveling in the United States and to bomb Jewish targets in North America.

Abdurahman Alamoudi: naturalized U.S. citizen, age 51, born in Eritrea and founder of the American Muslim Foundation and the American Muslim Council. On August 16, 2003, London police arrested Alamoudi when they found $340,000 in undeclared cash in his luggage as he was preparing to travel to Damascus, Syria. He was freed after forfeiting the cash. He said an unidentified Libyan official had given him the money in a London hotel room.

On September 28, 2003, U.S. authorities arrested Alamoudi as he attempted to enter the United States. He was charged on September 30, 2003, with illegally accepting money from Libya to influence U.S. policy and funding terrorists in the United States and abroad. Federal prosecutors said that the $340,000 he was carrying when arrested in August 2003 in London “was intended for delivery in Damascus to one or more of the terrorists or terrorist organizations active in Syria” such as al Qaeda, Hizballah, the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas), and Palestinian Islamic Jihad. The U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, was told that he had also given four checks for several hundred dollars each to pay the “salary” of Patrice Lumumba Ford. Two other checks paid the utilities of Ahmed Bilal. Alamoudi had obtained his U.S. citizenship in 1996, but prosecutors said it was fraudulently obtained because he had lied on his immigration application.

On October 23, 2003, he was indicted on charges of taking money from a nation designated as a terrorist patron, money laundering, and fraud. The 18-count indictment said he had assisted al Qaeda and Hamas. One of the charities to which he sent $160,000 was implicated in the foiled December 2000 millennium plot by al Qaeda to bomb Los Angeles International Airport and the Seattle Space Needle. The government said he had been in contact with eight known terrorists.

In mid-June 2004, the Washington Post and New York Times reported that Alamoudi, who was being held in an Alexandria jail on 34 counts of money smuggling, had claimed that Libyan leader Moammar Qadhafi intended to use the money to finance the assassination of Saudi government leader Crown Prince Abdullah. The Post said his story was corroborated by Libyan intelligence colonel Mohamed Ismael, who was in Saudi custody. Alamoudi said he had met twice with Qadhafi in May and June 2003 regarding the plot. Ismael and his confederates were arrested in Egypt.

On July 30, 2004, Alamoudi pleaded guilty to illegally moving nearly $1 million cash from Libya and admitted working with two Saudi dissidents—Mohammad Massari and Saad Faqih—in the assassination plot. He pleaded guilty to tax violations and lying on his immigration form. On October 15, U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton sentenced Alamoudi to the maximum 23-year prison term; he had faced life without the plea bargain. Alamoudi lost his U.S. citizenship and signed a deportation order.

Abdulaziz Alangari: Saudi arrested in New York City and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Vincent Alba: questioned by New York Police regarding the August 3, 1977, Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) bombing of a Department of Defense building and the Mobil Building in New York City. His roommate was arrested for illegal possession of a shotgun, a revolver, and 100 rounds of ammunition.

Ali A. Albanna: nephew, age 29, of Mohammed Albanna arrested in Buffalo, New York, on December 17, 2002, on allegations of involvement in the unauthorized transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas in violation of the USA Patriot Act.

Mohammed Albanna: leader, age 51, of the Lackawanna, New York, Yemeni community and owner of Queen City Cigarettes and Candy Company who was arrested in Buffalo, New York, on December 17, 2002, on allegations of involvement in the unauthorized transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas in violation of the USA Patriot Act. Also arrested were family members Ali A. Albanna and Ali Taher Elbaneh. The trio pleaded not guilty. On January 8, 2004, a new charge of illegally sending $3.5 million to Yemen replaced previous charges. On January 12, he pleaded not guilty.

Tarek Abdelhamid Albasti: Egyptian American, age 29, arrested in Evansville, Indiana, and held as of November 2001 by federal officials in their 9/11 investigations. By November 2002, he had been released and did not testify before any grand jury.

Kamel Albred: Iraqi, age 33, who was one of 21 men in seven U.S. states indicted in October 2001 for fraudulently obtaining commercial driver's licenses to haul hazardous materials.

Hasan Saddiq Faseh Alddin: possibly a mistransliteration of Aladdin. Saudi who was believed to have roomed with a friend of two of the 9/11 hijackers and who was arrested in the United States on immigration charges on May 27, 2004.

Tahir Ibrihim Aletwei: Jordanian foreign-exchange graduate student, age 30, at the University of Texas at Arlington who on January 31, 2003, was arrested and charged with immigration violations, making him subject to deportation. He had come to the United States in August 2001 to study software engineering. Due to achieve a master's degree in three months, he was ordered thrown out of the country on February 7, 2003, after he acknowledged that he had considered becoming a suicide bomber if the United States invaded Iraq. He told Immigration Judge D. Anthony Rogers, "I was looking at America as my enemy. If someone would have approached me and asked me to do something against the country, I was willing to do it." He confessed hoping that his story would protect the United States from those with similar thoughts and feelings.

Dimitri K. Alexiev: one of two Bulgarian-born would-be hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 710 on July 5, 1972. The duo forced the pilot to fly to San Francisco, where they demanded $800,000, two parachutes, and a flight to Siberia. FBI agents carrying the money entered the plane but fired on the hijackers, killing them and killing a passenger in the crossfire, as well as wounding two others.

Ahmed Alghamdi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 175, a B767 flying from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport with 65 people, including 7 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The plane was diverted across New Jersey and pulled sharply right, and it just missed crashing into two other airliners as it descended toward Manhattan. They crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center South Tower at 9:05 A.M.

Hamza Alghamdi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers, age 20, who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 175, a B767 flying from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport with 65 people, including 7 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The plane was diverted across New Jersey and pulled sharply right, and it just missed crashing into two other airliners as it descended toward Manhattan. They crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center South Tower at 9:05 A.M. Alghamdi had been the first hijacker to depart from Saudi Arabia, leaving his Baljurshi home 18 months earlier.

Saeed Alghamdi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 93, a B757-200 flying from Newark International Airport to San Francisco's International Airport with 45 people, including 5 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The hijackers subdued the pilots and then forced several passengers to phone their relatives to say they were about to die. Oracle software executive Todd Beamer, a former star athlete at Illinois' Wheaton College, indicated to GTE colleague Lisa Jefferson that the passengers were about to fight the terrorists, ending his conversation with "Let's roll." The plane made a hairpin turn over Cleveland and headed for Washington, D.C. The plane then made seven sharp turns and crashed in Stony Creek Township, Pennsylvania, at 10:06 A.M., killing all on board.

Nawaf Alhamzi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 77, a B757 headed from Washington's Dulles International Airport to Los Angeles with 64 people, including 4 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The hijackers, armed with box cutters and knives, forced the passengers and crew to the back of the plane. The plane made a hairpin turn over Ohio and Kentucky and flew back to Washington, D.C., with its transponder turned off. It headed full throttle toward the White House but made a 270-degree turn at the last minute and crashed at 9:40 A.M. into the Pentagon in northern Virginia. The plane hit the helicopter landing pad adjacent to the Pentagon and slid into the west face, cutting a 35-foot wedge through the building's E, D, C, and B rings between corridors 4 and 5.

Salem M. S. Alhamzi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 77, a B757 headed from Washington's Dulles International Airport to Los Angeles with 64 people, including 4 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The hijackers, armed with box cutters and knives, forced the passengers and crew to the back of the plane. The plane made a hairpin turn over Ohio and Kentucky and flew back to Washington, D.C., with its transponder turned off. It headed full throttle toward the White House but made a 270-degree turn at the last minute and crashed at 9:40 A.M. into the Pentagon in northern Virginia. The plane hit the helicopter landing pad adjacent to the Pentagon and slid into the west face, cutting a 35-foot wedge through the building's E, D, C, and B rings between corridors 4 and 5.

Abid Noraiz Ali: one of 5 to 19 names involved in the one-week hunt for would-be terrorists; the report turned out to be a hoax, and the search was called off by the FBI on January 6, 2003.

Ahmad Muhammad Hamid Ali: variant Ahmed Mohammed Hamed Ali; aliases Shuaib, Abualslam al-Surir, Ahmed Ahmed, Ahmed the Egyptian, Ahmed Hemed, Hamed Ali, Ahmed Shief Abu Islam, Ahmed Mohammed Ali, Ahmed Hamed, Ahmed Mohammed Abdurehman, Abu Khadijah, Abu Fatima, Ahmad al-Masri. Egyptian, born in 1965, wanted in connection with the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, destroy U.S. buildings and property, and destroy the U.S. national defense infrastructure. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He is circa five feet seven inches tall. He may have formal training in agriculture and may have worked in this vocation. He lived in Kenya until August 2, 1998, when he fled to Pakistan. He may be living in Afghanistan.

Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali: alias Ammar al-Baluchi. Born in Pakistan and raised in Kuwait, Ali was one of the 14 detainees transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay as announced by President Bush on September 6, 2006. On March 30, 2007, Ali told a U.S. military commission hearing that he had no ties to the Taliban or al Qaeda. He was accused of preparing an attack against the U.S. Consulate in Karachi when he was arrested in 2003. He admitted to wiring more than $100,000 to 9/11 hijacker Marwan al-Shehhi as a favor.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges against six individuals detained at Guantánamo believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks. The six, including Ali, were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and providing material support for terrorism. Ali was also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. He had provided $127,000 for the 9/11 attackers and facilitated their travel to the United States.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment before the Guantánamo military commission, he said he wanted to represent himself. He spoke English fluently. The formal opening of the trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Bilal Sunni-Ali: acquitted in the federal district court in Manhattan on September 3, 1983, in connection with the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck.

David Nasser Ali: Ali, age 40, was one of six men arrested in the Detroit area on December 18, 2002, for the unlicensed transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. Police seized five bank accounts in Detroit and Dearborn, Michigan. On January 8, 2003, federal officials dropped the charges; he was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. Assistant Agent-in-Charge James Dinkins said the Customs Service would file new charges soon.

Ifthikhar Khozmai Ali: one of 5 to 19 names involved in the one-week hunt for would-be terrorists; the report turned out to be a hoax, and the search was called off by the FBI on January 6, 2003.

Isa Abdullah Ali: alias of Cleven Holt.

Khalid Ali: alias of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Khyzar Ali: variant of Khyzer Ali.

Khyzer Ali: variant Khyzar Ali. One of nine family members arrested by Lahore police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized U.S. citizen was a former Florida resident. On March 5, 2003, the Lahore High Court ordered his release.

Mukarram Ali: one of two Saudis picked up in Norman, Oklahoma, on September 11, 2001. He was mentioned in the indictment of Zacarias Moussaoui as having roomed with him in Oklahoma. His nationality was unclear; some reports said he was Indian. By November 2002, he had been released.

Siddiq Ibrahim Siddiq Ali: one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. The FBI filed a criminal complaint in U.S. District Court in New York identifying the Sudanese as the leader of the group. He had worked on the defense team of El Sayyid Nosair, the Palestinian convicted of weapons violations in connection with the assassination of Rabbi Meir Kahane, leader of the Jewish Defense League (JDL), on November 5, 1990.

Ali immigrated to the United States in 1988 as a permanent resident alien with a green card. He had a college degree in education. He married a U.S. citizen who was a Trinidad-born Muslim. He worked as a New York security officer, as a taxi driver, in the front offices of two Egyptian hotels, and as a guard for the Federal Home Loan Bank of New York, whose offices were in the World Trade Center. He had 10 traffic violations in a seven-month period.

He told an informer on May 10, 1993, that he had Sudanese UN mission friends who could get diplomatic plates to help get a car bomb into the UN building. He also said he could get a Sudanese mission van for the job.

On June 25, 1994, he agreed to turn state's evidence. On February 6, 1995, he pleaded guilty to seven counts and signed an agreement to cooperate with the prosecution. He faced life in prison. He said that the conspirators had considered kidnapping former president Richard M. Nixon and former secretary of state Henry A. Kissinger and holding them hostage to force the release of El Sayyid A. Nosair, one of the defendants. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Jose Alicea: alias of Jose Padilla.

Abdul Tawal Ibn Ali Alishtari: charged in the United States in February 2007 with terrorism financing, material support of terrorism, and money laundering. Alishtari, age 53, pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan, New York. In 2003, he donated $20,000 to the National Republican Senatorial Committee and more than $15,000 to the National Republican Congressional Committee.

Bilal Alkaisi: Lebanese or Jordanian resident of New York and New Jersey arrested on March 24, 1993, and charged with using explosives to cause the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. He was arraigned in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, where he pleaded not guilty. On May 26, he was named in an eight-count indictment for planning and carrying out the WTC attack. He pleaded not guilty on May 28, 1993.

Ahmed Allali: Algerian, age 37, who on June 17, 2005, was sentenced in Indianapolis, Indiana, to a year in prison after he pleaded guilty to three counts of making false statements by pretending to have information about an al Qaeda plot to bomb five U.S. cities.

Alain Allard: one of two Canadian hijackers of National Airlines Flight 91, a B727 flying from New York to Miami, Florida, on May 5, 1969, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. He and Jean Pierre Charrette remained fugitives.

James R. Allbee: Portland resident who hijacked a United Airlines flight on August 23, 1979, and forced the pilot to return to Portland. He surrendered to the FBI.

Naser Rahimi Almani: Iranian arrested on October 4, 1980, by the FBI in his framing and glass shop, where they found two pipe bombs. He was sentenced to 50 years in prison on August 23, 1981, for setting off two Iranian Liberation Army bombs at a meeting of the pro-Khomeini Iranian Students Association at Berkeley High School in San Francisco on August 20, 1980. He was charged in a seven-count federal indictment for threatening president Jimmy Carter's life three times, attempting to bomb a pro-Khomeini rally at San Jose State, and making two bombs that exploded during an Iranian cultural event at the University of California at Berkeley.

Khalid Almihdhar: variant Khalid al-Midhar. One of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 77, a B757 headed from Washington's Dulles International Airport to Los Angeles with 64 people, including 4 flight attendants and 2 pilots on board. The hijackers, armed with box cutters and knives, forced the passengers and crew to the back of the plane. The plane made a hairpin turn over Ohio and Kentucky and flew back to Washington, D.C., with its transponder turned off. It headed full throttle toward the White House but made a 270-degree turn at the last minute and crashed at 9:40 A.M. into the Pentagon in northern Virginia. The plane hit the helicopter landing pad adjacent to the Pentagon and slid into the west face, cutting a 35-foot wedge through the building's E, D, C, and B rings between corridors 4 and 5.

In January 2000, Almihdhar was videotaped meeting with al Qaeda operatives in Malaysia. In August 2001, the CIA added him to a watch list, but the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and FBI were unable to find them.

Anwar Mohamed Almirabi: Saudi arrested in Arlington, Texas, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Hassan Almrei: Syrian citizen, age 26, arrested by Canadian authorities in October 2001 for training at an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan. He was held without formal charge on a security certificate. On February 23, 2007, Canada's Supreme Court unanimously struck down the use of secret testimony to imprison and deport foreigners as possible terrorist suspects, saying it violated the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The court suspended the ruling for a year, leaving six detainees—five Arabs and one Sri Lankan—in limbo. Almrei, accused of al Qaeda affiliation, was on a hunger strike.

Ahmed Alnami: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 93, a B757-200 flying from Newark International Airport to San Francisco's International Airport with 45 people, including 5 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The hijackers subdued the pilots and then forced several passengers to phone their relatives to say they were about to die. Oracle software executive Todd Beamer, a former star athlete at Illinois' Wheaton College, indicated to GTE colleague Lisa Jefferson that the passengers were about to fight the terrorists, ending his conversation with "Let's roll." The plane made a hairpin turn over Cleveland and headed for Washington, D.C. The plane then made seven sharp turns and crashed in Stony Creek Township, Pennsylvania, at 10:06 A.M., killing all on board.

Abdullah Alnoshan: Saudi employee, age 44, of the Muslim World League, a Saudi-based charity suspected of terrorist financing, arrested on July 22, 2005, at his home in Alexandria, Virginia. On July 25, 2005, FBI and Homeland Security agents raided the group's Falls Church, Virginia, offices and confiscated computers, photographs, and immigration documents. He was represented by attorney Ashraf Nubani.

Abdulaziz Alomari: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 11, a B767 carrying 92 people, including 9 flight attendants and 2 pilots, from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport. The plane was diverted over New York and crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center North Tower at 8:45 A.M., killing all on board. Some reports said Alomari lived in Vero Beach, Florida, with his wife and four children; other reports said no hijackers were accompanied onto the plane by family members.

Eyad M. Alrababah: Jordanian resident of Bridgeport, Connecticut, who on February 27, 2002, was identified as one of five people publicly charged with helping two of the 9/11 Pentagon hijackers—Hani Hanjour and Khalid Almihdhar—get Virginia ID cards. He was the first to point out the loophole in Virginia law and helped them get to Virginia from New York in August 2001. He went to the FBI on September 29, 2001, after seeing newspaper photos of the hijackers. He was charged on November 16 with federal fraud charges in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia. He said he had helped more than 50 illegal aliens get such IDs through Virginia's DMV. On April 17, 2002, he pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit ID fraud and was sentenced to time served and ordered to be deported.

Sami Alshaalan: Sami Alshaalan, age 28, and his brother, Sattan Alshaalan, age 23, were held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in their 9/11 investigations. The duo claimed membership in the Saudi royal family.

Sattan Alshaalan: Sattan Alshaalan, age 23, and his brother, Sami Alshaalan, age 28, were held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in their 9/11 investigations. The duo claimed membership in the Saudi royal family.

Mohand Alshehri: one of the al Qaeda hijackers, age 23, who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 175, a B767 flying from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport with 65 people, including 7 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The plane was diverted across New Jersey and pulled sharply right, and it just missed crashing into two other airliners as it descended toward Manhattan. They crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center South Tower at 9:05 A.M.

Wail Alshehri: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 11, a B767 carrying 92 people, including 9 flight attendants and 2 pilots, from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport. The plane was diverted over New York and crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center North Tower at 8:45 A.M., killing all on board. Wail Alshehri, age 28, was possibly Waleed Alshehri's brother.

Waleed M. Alshehri: one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 11, a B767 carrying 92 people, including 9 flight attendants and 2 pilots, from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport. The plane was diverted over New York and crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center North Tower at 8:45 A.M., killing all on board. Waleed Alshehri, between 22 and 28 years old, was possibly Wail Alshehri's brother.

Victor Alvarez: alias Mohammad. One of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. The Jersey City resident was a U.S. citizen born in Puerto Rico and had worked in a supermarket near his house. He was denied bail. He was accused of providing a rifle to protect the safe house, agreeing to obtain stolen cars for carrying bombs, and mixing the diesel oil and fertilizer.

On October 1, 1995, the auto mechanic and carpenter was found guilty of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, attempted bombing, charges involving interstate transportation, and the use and carrying of firearms. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 35 years. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Sahim Alwan: one of five U.S. citizens of Yemeni origin arrested on September 13–14, 2002, who resided in Lackawanna, New York, and were identified as an al Qaeda–trained terrorist cell on American soil. The five were well known in the local community. One was voted the high school’s friendliest senior. Four are married; three have children.

In June 2001, they attended the al Qaeda al-Farooq training camp in Afghanistan and learned how to use assault rifles, handguns, and other weapons, and they left the camp before the 9/11 attacks. They were charged with providing, attempting to provide, and conspiring to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist group (al Qaeda). The camp was also attended by American Taliban John Walker Lindh, and the recruits were addressed by bin Laden.

The defendants were identified as Sahim Alwan, age 29; Faysal Galab, age 26; Yahya Goba, age 25; Safal Mosed, age 24; and Hasein Taher, age 24, and they lived within a few blocks of one another. Two associates were believed to be in Yemen; another was out of the country. The associates, identified only as A, B, and C, included two U.S. citizens from Lackawanna. Prosecutors later identified the ringleader as unindicted co-conspirator Kamal Derwish, age 29, believed to be living in Yemen. The defendants were later joined by Mukhtar al-Bakri, age 22, who, with Alwan, admitted attending the camp.

At the September 19 bail hearing, Alwan was represented by court-appointed attorney James Harrington, who said his client was seeking religious training at the Tablighi Jamaat school in Pakistan and naively visited the camp. Alwan said, “I was scared and missed my family, and on Day Six I pleaded to let me go. I faked an ankle injury to get them to let me go.” Alwan worked as a security guard at the Iroquois Job Corps Center in Medina, New York. He told Buffalo News in September 2001 that he had been attacked by seven men during the Persian Gulf War in 1991.

The FBI began their investigation when the men came to Lackawanna in June 2001. The Bureau said there was no evidence that they were planning a specific attack in the United States. Federal prosecutors noted on September 27 that some of the accused had tapes and documents in their homes that called for suicide operations against Islam’s “enemies.” Alwan had audiotapes calling for jihad and martyrdom. One tape included a lecture by a radical Islamic cleric who called for “fighting the West and invading Europe and America with Islam.”

On October 8, Judge Schroeder released Alwan on $600,000 bond but ordered the other five held without bail. Alwan had assisted the FBI after returning from Afghanistan. The judge said he must remain in his home most of the day and pay for a GPS device that would track his movements. He must also allow the FBI to search him or his home at any time. One of his phone lines would be tapped.

On October 21, a federal grand jury indicted the six on charges of providing and attempting to provide support to al Qaeda and with conspiring to provide material support to the terrorists. They pleaded not guilty.

On April 8, 2003, Alwan acknowledged that he had met bin Laden in Afghanistan in 2001 and pleaded guilty to supporting al Qaeda by attending the al Farooq camp and receiving weapons training there. On December 17, Sahim Alwan was sentenced to nine years.

Zakaria Amara: Amara, age 20, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Amara was charged in the explosives plot and with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Mohammad Zaki Amawi: citizen of the United States and Jordan, age 26, and one of three people living in Toledo, Ohio, charged by the FBI on February 21, 2006, with planning to attack U.S. troops in Iraq by setting up a Middle Eastern terrorism training camp. Between November 2004 and August 2005, the trio learned to build bombs, shoot handguns, and set up a fraudulent non-profit organization. Amawi tried to acquire chemical explosives and threatened to kill President Bush. He left Toledo in August 2005 and flew from Detroit to Jordan, carrying five laptops that he planned to give to jihadis. Formal charges included conspiracy to kill Americans abroad, providing material support to terrorists, taking weapons training, and trying to acquire or build explosives. They faced life in prison. They had been indicted the previous week. They pleaded not guilty in federal courts in Cleveland and Toledo to charges of conspiracy to kill or maim people outside the United States. On February 28, 2006, a federal magistrate ordered him held without bail. Prosecutors said he has a family in Jordan and regularly travels overseas. During their trial on April 23, 2008, undercover informant Darren Griffin said the trio had met only once during the two years he had investigated them.

Amawi was one of three men convicted by a federal grand jury in Ohio on June 13, 2008, of plotting to kill U.S. soldiers in Iraq. A former Army Special Forces soldier posing as a radical recorded the men talking about training in explosives, guns, and sniper tactics for about two years beginning in 2004. U.S. District Judge James G. Carr did not set a sentencing date. The trio faced life in prison. They had been raising money for their jihad against U.S. troops.

Maria Amendola: indicted on August 12, 1978, by a court in Burlington, Vermont, on misdemeanor charges of joining two men in aiding Kristina Katherina Berster, a suspected West German terrorist, who was arrested on July 16, 1978, as she attempted to enter Vermont from Canada using a fake Iranian passport. Amendola was released on a $5,000 bond.

Shahla Amenli: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On November 26, 1979, charges were dismissed against her and her husband, Mohammad S. Tofighi.

Adham Amhaz: one of four Lebanese nationals arrested March 2001 in the United States on charges of supporting Hizballah by smuggling cigarettes from low-tax North Carolina to states with higher tobacco taxes. Amhaz, age 35, was arrested for extradition by Canadian authorities on October 2001.

Abu Suhayb al-Amriki: alias of Adam Yahiyeh Gadahn.

Azzam al-Amriki: alias of Adam Yahiyeh Gadahn.

Brian David Anderson: Canadian, age 61, wanted by the United States for fraud and financing a terrorist training camp in Afghanistan. He was arrested in Spain on March 12, 2007.

Spec. Ryan G. Anderson: tank crew member, age 26, from the National Guard's 81st Armor Brigade in Washington State arrested by federal officials on February 12, 2004, on charges of trying to provide information to al Qaeda. Federal officials posed as terrorists in a sting against Anderson, who offered to provide “information about the capabilities and vulnerability of some U.S. weapons systems.” He was turned over to the Army for prosecution. He graduated from Washington State University in 2002 with a degree in military history and an emphasis on the Middle East. He had converted to Islam five years before. He bragged on the Internet for years about his mastery of guns and military skills, using the screen name “aka gunfighter.” On September 2, 2004, a court in Fort Lewis, Washington, convicted him on five counts of trying to help al Qaeda by providing information about U.S. troops, including methods for killing soldiers. He tried to give terrorists information about troop strength and tactics. He passed on diagrams of tanks and their vulnerabilities to undercover agents posing as al Qaeda operatives. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Francesco F. Anile: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines 403, a DC8 flying from Newark, New Jersey, to Miami, Florida, on April 21, 1971. The Italian-born hijacker wanted to go to Italy. The pilot determined he was unarmed and flew to Miami, where federal agents took Anile into custody. He was given a suspended sentence.

Asad Ansari: Ansari, age 21, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada’s antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Ansari was charged in the explosives plot and with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Hamid Reza Arabzadeh: one of 25 members of the People’s Majority, an anti-Khomeini group, who seized the Iranian Interests Section in Washington, D.C., and held six Iranian employees hostage for an hour on August 7, 1981. They were put on probation and ordered to complete 25 hours of community service.

Pompilio Aragon Zamora: alias Pomponio. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Maher Arar: Canadian Syrian arrested at JFK airport in New York City in September 2002. The Washington Post claimed he was held for a day in Jordan. He was later returned to Canada.

Yassin Muhiddin Aref: Iraqi Kurd, age 34, and imam of the Masjid al-Salam mosque in Albany, New York, who was arrested with a worshipper on August 5, 2004, and charged in a sting with helping a government informant sell a shoulder-fired grenade launcher to terrorists. The two were charged in U.S. District Court in Albany with concealing material support for terrorism and participating in a money-laundering conspiracy. The rocket-propelled grenade was to be used against a Pakistani diplomat in New York City as a punishment for pro-U.S. policies. The informant was a convicted felon who said he was working for Jaish-e-Mohammed, a Pakistani Islamic terrorist group. The duo had ties to Ansar al-Islam, the Iraq-based al Qaeda affiliate, and was paid $65,000 in cash for their participation. Each made his $250,000 bail and was released.

German Arevalo Hernandez: alias Porfirio. Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front member indicted on July 11, 1991 (the indictment was unsealed on July 30, 1991), for the January 2, 1991, shoot-down of a U.S. UH-1 Huey military transport helicopter with a missile near the village of Lolotique, El Salvador, killing three American crewmen on board. On July 30, 1991, the FBI office in Miami issued an arrest warrant, charging him with two counts of first-degree murder of an American outside the United States and two counts of using a machine gun in a violent crime. He faced a life sentence. He voluntarily surrendered on March 17, 1992. His defense lawyer requested that he be included in the amnesty decree promulgated by the government with the end of the guerrilla war. Extradition to the United States was denied. On May 24, 1993, he was freed by judicial authorities after passage of a general amnesty law.

Sami Amin al-Arian: University of South Florida computer engineering professor, age 45, against whom the Justice Department forwarded a 50-count, 120-page indictment in Tampa, Florida, on February 20, 2003. The indictment cited seven other people as well in conspiracy to commit murder via suicide attacks in Israel and the Palestinian territories, operating a criminal racketeering enterprise since 1984 that supports the Palestine Islamic Jihad (PIJ), conspiracy to kill and maim people abroad, conspiracy to provide material support to the group, extortion, visa fraud, perjury, money laundering, and other charges. Authorities arrested the Kuwait-born al-Arian at his suburban Tampa home and said he had been a top PIJ leader, serving as secretary of its Shura Council (top governing body) for several years. Al-Arian allegedly raised and sent money to the families of PIJ suicide bombers and ran the World and Islamic Studies Enterprise and the Islamic Committee for Palestine.

Also charged were Ramadan Abdullah Shallah, a close associate of al-Arian in Tampa during the 1990s who now heads PIJ from Damascus, Syria; and Abd-al-Aziz Awda, a founder and spiritual leader of PIJ. Khaled Batsh, a PIJ leader in the Gaza Strip, said that of the eight indicted, only Ramadan Abdullah Shallah was an active PIJ member.

On December 9, 2003, it was announced that Florida court workers had erroneously destroyed 1995 search warrants used to collect evidence against al-Arian.

On December 6, 2005, a federal jury in Tampa deliberated for 13 days before it acquitted al-Arian on 8 of 17 counts and deadlocked on the rest. He was represented by attorneys William Moffitt and Linda G. Moreno. As of December 13, he remained in jail on immigration charges while prosecutors determined whether to retry any charges.

On January 18, 2006, U.S. District Judge James S. Moody Jr. refused to dismiss the remaining charges, making a second trial likely. On April 21, 2006, al-Arian pleaded guilty in Tampa to one count of conspiracy to provide support to a Palestinian terrorist organization, and he was sentenced to serve 18 more months in prison and then be deported.

In April 2008, he finished serving a 57-month sentence for conspiracy. On June 30, 2008, he was arraigned in a federal court in Alexandria, Virginia, on charges of refusing to testify on October 16, 2007, and March 20, 2008, before a grand jury investigating whether Islamic charities in northern Virginia financed terrorists. The trial was set for August 13, 2008.

Hector Aristy: former Dominican ambassador to the UN Education, Scientific, and Cultural Organization who on June 16, 1977, was charged in Paris with involvement in the kidnapping of Luchino Revelli-Beaumont, president of the Fiat Subsidiary, who was seized by the Committee for Socialist Revolutionary Unity on April 13, 1977. They demanded a $30 million ransom by June 11. Aristy had been serving as an intermediary between the family and the kidnappers.

Enaam Arnaout: Syria-born executive director of the Benevolence International Foundation, a Muslim charity in Chicago with ties to al Qaeda. A March 2002 raid in Bosnia by a U.S. military task force on the group's Sarajevo offices provided material for the April 30, 2002, 35-page FBI indictment in Chicago charging Arnaout, age 39, and his $4 million per year Illinois-based foundation with perjury regarding his denial that he and his group had provided aid to bin Laden or any other terrorists. The indictment said the group was financing terrorists and helping al Qaeda obtain weapons of mass destruction. The affidavit said Mamdouh Salim, a bin Laden aide, had traveled to Bosnia using documents signed by Arnaout declaring Salim to be a Benevolence director. Salim was awaiting trial in New York on charges of conspiracy to kill Americans in the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

The FBI claimed Arnaout had transferred money, equipment, and weapons for Muslim movements in Afghanistan, Bosnia, and Chechnya, some with al Qaeda ties. Mohamed Bayazid, who tried to obtain uranium for al Qaeda, listed Benevolence's Illinois address as his residence in obtaining a driver's license.

On September 13, 2002, U.S. District Judge Joan Gottschall threw out the perjury charges on technical grounds. On October 9, Arnaout was charged with using donations to fund bin Laden and conspiring to defraud his group's donors. The foundation was represented by Matthew Piers. Arnaout was represented by attorney Joseph Duffy, who said the government was trying to criminalize Arnaout's dealings with Afghan Hezb e Islami leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar, who had called for an anti-U.S. jihad, and complained the government was holding Arnaout responsible for the activities of an unrelated group; U.S. officials said the Lajnat al-Birr al-Islamiah charitable foundation was a precursor to Benevolence. The seven-count indictment said Benevolence had funded terrorist activities and commingled dollars from altruistic donors with money from Saudis who knew of its terrorist ties.

On February 10, 2003, Arnaout pleaded guilty to one count of racketeering. As part of a plea agreement, prosecutors dropped all terrorism-related charges and agreed to reduce his potential 20-year sentence if he cooperated in future terrorism investigations. On August 18, U.S. District Judge Conlon sentenced Arnaout to 11-plus years for defrauding donors. His sentence was later reduced to 10 years.

Eduardo Arocena Omar: alleged Omega-7 leader arrested in the Little Havana district of Miami on July 22, 1983. On December 29, 1983, Arocena was indicted on 14 bombing or attempted bombing charges, with other indictments pending. As of February 21, 1984, he was awaiting trial on charges of attempted murder in the March 25, 1980, discovery of explosives under the car of Cuban UN representative Raul Roa Kouri in New York City. On September 13, 1984, he admitted to having introduced dengue fever, a disease transmitted by mosquito, to Cuba in 1980. In 1981 the disease killed 158 Cubans, including 101 children. The admission came during his New York trial for the machine-gun killing of Cuban diplomat Felix Garcia Rodriguez in 1980. On September 22, 1984, he was convicted of planning the Queens murder of Garcia, conspiracy in more than a dozen terrorist bombings, racketeering, perjury, weapons charges, and the attempted murder of a second Cuban diplomat. On November 9, 1984, he was sentenced by the U.S. District Court to life plus 35 years. He still faced charges for the bombings of the Mexican and Venezuelan consulates two years earlier.

Tre Arrow: alias of Michael Scarpitti.

Jose Miguel Arrugaeta: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Mark Alphonzo Artis: American in his twenties from Illinois arrested on October 18, 1988, in Quetta, Pakistan, as he was boarding a domestic flight. Police found 10 grams of hashish in his luggage, as well as an aviation book, maps, electronic equipment, pro-Iranian radical literature, and validated visas to Iran in his passport. Police believed that he might have been involved in the August 17, 1988, explosion on the C130 plane of Pakistani president Mohammed Zia ul-Haq that killed all 32 on board. He was released in May 1989.

Steve Ashburn: New Orleans biochemist who on February 22, 1991, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in New Orleans to making a Sarin nerve gas threat against U.S. president George Bush. Ashburn unsuccessfully attempted to get Iraqi Embassy officials to support his plan.

Dr. Abdelhaleem Hasan Abdelraziq Ashqar: imprisoned for contempt for refusing to testify despite receiving immunity in the 1998 grand jury investigation into Hamas money laundering in the United States by Mousa Abu Marzook, the group's political leader. Ashqar, age 39, said he would rather die than betray "long-held and unshakable religious, political, and personal beliefs . . . and commitments to freedom and democracy for Palestine" and began a hunger strike. U.S. District Judge Denise Cote ordered his release on August 21, 1998, after hearing testimony that further imprisonment would not compel his testimony.

On September 5, 2003, the former Howard University professor and Hamas activist was jailed again for contempt for refusing to testify despite receiving immunity before a grand jury investigating Hamas finances and activities. On October 10, the civil contempt charge was upgraded to criminal contempt. Ashqar began a hunger strike. On November 3, he was released on $1 million bail.

On August 20, 2004, Mousa Mohammed Abu Marzook, a Hamas deputy chief expelled from the United States in 1997; Ashqar of Fairfax County, Virginia; and Muhammad Hamid Khalil Salah, age 51, of suburban Chicago, were indicted by the Justice Department for conspiring to launder millions of dollars for Hamas. The money paid for false passports, kidnappings, murders, and other crimes in Israel. U.S. officials planned to seize $2.7 million.

On February 1, 2007, a federal jury in Chicago acquitted Ashqar of racketeering charges but found him guilty of obstruction of justice and criminal contempt. On November 21, 2007, U.S. District Judge Amy St. Eve sentenced him to 135 months in prison and fined him $5,000 for refusing to testify before a federal grand jury.

Fawzi Mustapha Assi: arrested in July 1998 by Detroit Metropolitan Airport police while carrying night-vision goggles and other equipment that the FBI said was going to Hizballah. He denied the charge and fled to Lebanon after he was released on bond. On May 20, 2004, Assi, age 38, was one of the first men charged under a 1996 antiterrorist law and voluntarily returned to the United States to face trial on charges of providing material support to a terrorist organization.

Haroon Rashid Aswat: variant Haroon Radhi Aswat. Pakistani (or Indian) U.K. citizen, age 31, who was raised in Batley, United Kingdom, who attended technical college, and who was an aide to Abu Hamza Masri, a radical Muslim preacher in London. He comes from the same general area of West Yorkshire as three of the 7/7 London subway bombers (2005) and received 20 calls from them, including one the night before the bombing. Zambia police arrested Aswat on July 20, 2005, as he was crossing into the country from Zimbabwe. He was deported to the United Kingdom on August 7, 2005, and arrested on U.S. warrants that he helped plan a terrorist training camp in Bly, Oregon. On January 5, 2006, a British court ruled that the suspected al Qaeda member could be extradited to the United States to stand trial in a U.S. federal court but not a military tribunal. On November 30, 2006, Lord Justice John Laws approved the extradition.

Karim Sa'id Atmani: possible Ressam associate extradited by Canada to France on charges that he participated in the 1995 Paris subway bombing that killed 4 and injured 86. In April 2001, Atmani was arrested by Bosnia-Herzegovina authorities. He was extradited in July 2001 to France on an Interpol warrant.

Mohamad Atriss: Egyptian-born naturalized U.S. citizen who operated businesses selling fake IDs in Paterson and Elizabeth, New Jersey. On July 31, 2002, investigators told Interpol that he had fled the United States for Egypt just before arrest. He sold fake ID cards to Khalid Almihdhar and Abdulaziz Alomari, who were on the 9/11 planes. On August 20, 2002, he was arrested by U.S. Customs agents at JFK airport as he arrived from Egypt. On February 4, 2003, local prosecutors dismissed 26 of the 27 charges, and he pleaded guilty to one felony count of selling false ID documents. He was sentenced to five years of probation and fined $15,000.

Ahmed Nawaz Atta: Pakistani, age 19, questioned by the FBI about possible involvement in a terrorist organization and held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in their 9/11 investigations.

Mahmoud Abed Atta: alias of Mahmoud Mahmoud Atta.

Mahmoud Mahmoud Atta: aliases Mahmoud Abed Atta, Dr. Mahmud al-ʿAbid. Naturalized U.S. citizen for whom Israel issued an international arrest warrant after two gunmen fired on an Israeli bus in the occupied West Bank after throwing a fire bomb in front of the bus on April 12, 1986. Atta was arrested in May 1987 by Venezuelan officials, who deported him to the United States. On May 7, 1987, the FBI arrested the native Jordanian at JFK airport in New York when he deplaned from Caracas. He was an alleged Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) member. Atta was extradited on October 31, 1990. He was represented by former U.S. attorney general Ramsey Clark.

Mohamed Atta: variant of Mohammad Atta.

Mohammad Atta: alias Mohamed bin Mohamed El-Amir Awad El-Sayed. Leader, age 33, of the 9/11 al Qaeda hijackers and specifically of the hijacking of American Airlines Flight 11, a B767 carrying 92 people, including 9 flight attendants and 2 pilots, from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport. The plane was diverted over New York and crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center North Tower at 8:45 A.M., killing all on board.

Hussein Al-Attas: one of two Saudis (or possibly a Yemeni) picked up in Norman, Oklahoma, on September 11, 2001. Al-Attas briefly shared a Norman apartment with Zacarias Moussaoui during the summer. On August 9, 2001, he drove Moussaoui to Minnesota.

Hassan bin Attash: Yemeni arrested in Karachi, Pakistan, in September 2002 on suspicion of involvement in terrorism. The Washington Post claimed he was held in Jordan for 10 months before being moved to Guantánamo.

Walid Muhammad Salih Mubarak bin Attash: aliases Tawfiq bin Attash, Khallad, Tawfiq Attash Khallada, Salah Saeed Mohammed bin Yousaf. Yemeni who was born and raised in Saudi Arabia and lost his left leg in a battlefield accident in 1997. His father Mohammed was reportedly close to Osama bin Laden. Attash had served as a bodyguard for bin Laden, and he ran a terrorist training camp in Logar, Afghanistan. He had been arrested briefly and released in Yemen in April 1999 for suspected terrorist ties. He was chosen by Osama bin Laden to be the 20th 9/11 hijacker but was unable to obtain a U.S. visa, perhaps because his paperwork was incomplete or because he is Yemeni rather than Saudi. His younger brother, Hassan, was held at Guantánamo starting in 2004.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 "high value" detainees, including Attash, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. On March 12, 2007, Attash told a U.S. military tribunal in Guantánamo that he had organized the USS Cole attack and the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He claimed to have purchased the explosives and faked travel documents for the bombings. He helped choose the 9/11 attackers. On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared him an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi bin al-Shibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash. The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Attash was also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. At his June 5, 2008, arraignment, Attash said he wanted to represent himself. The trial was scheduled to begin September 18, 2008.

Ali Atwa: aliases Ammar Mansour Bouslim, Hassan Rostom Salim. Member of Lebanese Hizballah indicted for his role and participation in the June 14, 1985, hijacking of Trans World Airlines Flight 847, which departed Athens, Greece, en route for Rome. Passengers and crew were injured; an American citizen was murdered. Atwa did not board the flight and confessed to Greek authorities when captured while loitering at the Athens airport. He said the hijackers' gun was smuggled aboard inside a fish; the grenades were hidden inside fruit. Atwa was flown to Algiers and exchanged for some Greek passengers when the two hijackers on board threatened to kill the Greek hostages.

On July 3, 1985, a U.S. federal court in Washington, D.C., issued an arrest warrant on murder and piracy charges. On July 12, 1985, the Lebanese government announced that the hijackers would be prosecuted, but they were not arrested. Rewards for Justice offered $5 million for his apprehension. He was born in Lebanon in 1960 and has Saudi and Lebanese citizenship. He is five feet eight inches tall and weighs 150 pounds.

Muhsin Musa Matwalli Atwah: aliases Abdul Rahman, Abdul Rahman al-Muhajir, Abdel Rahman, Mohammed K. A. al-Namer, Abu'Abd al-Rahman al-Muhajir. Al Qaeda member born on June 19, 1964, in Egypt and wanted for the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for providing explosives training in Afghanistan, Pakistan, and Sudan that trained Somali tribesmen to attack U.S. soldiers. U.S. Rewards for Justice offered $5 million for his apprehension. Circa five feet five inches tall, Atwah, age 41, is believed to have died in a Pakistani helicopter air strike in North Waziristan on April 12, 2006.

Burson Augustin: member of the "Liberty City Seven" arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami, Florida, for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the Miami FBI office. U.S. District Judge Joan A. Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants on December 13, 2007, and a second mistrial on April 16, 2008.

Rotschild Augustine: member of the "Liberty City Seven" arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami, Florida, for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the Miami FBI office. U.S. District Judge Joan A. Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants on December 13, 2007, and a second mistrial on April 16, 2008.

Anwar al-Aulaqi: born in New Mexico in 1971 while his father, a former Yemeni government minister, studied for a college degree. He spent some of his childhood in Yemen and moved to study engineering at Colorado State University in 1991. He became an imam of mosques in Fort Collins, Colorado; San Diego, California; and Falls Church, Virginia. Three 9/11 hijackers attended his mosques. He enrolled in a PhD program at George Washington University in January 2001 while working at the Dar al-Hijrah mosque in Washington, D.C. He ran the Dar al-Hijrah mosque in Falls Church, Virginia, from 2001 to 2002.

Terrorist suspects' computers included transcripts and audio files of his lectures that promoted the strategies of the late Yusef al-Ayeri, alias Swift Sword, a Saudi al Qaeda military commander. Federal prosecutors alleged in 2004 that the now-defunct Charitable Society for Social Welfare, Inc., a U.S. branch of a Yemeni charity that al-Aulaqi had served as vice president, was a front that funded al Qaeda. He was also in contact with radical cleric Ali al-Timimi, who was ultimately sentenced to life for inciting followers to join the Taliban to battle the United States. Al-Aulaqi moved to the United Kingdom in 2002 and then on to Yemen in 2004. While in Yemen, he lectured at an Islamic university in Sana'a run by Sheik Abd-al-Majid al-Zindani, who fought with bin Laden in Afghanistan and was named a terrorist in 2004 by the United States.

Nagib A. Awad: Florida resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Osama Awadallah: Jordanian, age 21, picked up on September 21, 2001, at his San Diego apartment when authorities found his phone number in the glove compartment of a suspected 9/11 hijacker's car. The Grossmont College student was held as a material witness in New York in the 9/11 attacks and then charged with lying to a grand jury. He had met 9/11 hijacker Nawaf Alhamzi at the Texaco station where they worked and admitted knowing him as an acquaintance. He had a permanent-resident green card. On October 10 and 15, in New York grand jury sessions, he first denied knowing American Airlines Flight 77 hijacker Khalid al-Midhar even after prosecutors showed him his own journal that mentioned him. He also knew hijacker Hani Hanjour.

On November 5, Awadallah pleaded not guilty to making false statements. On November 27, U.S. District Judge Shira A. Scheindlin in New York set bail at $500,000 and ordered him to report every day to a law enforcement agency and wear an electronic monitoring bracelet. His family and friends made bond, and he was released on December 13, 2001. On April 30, 2002, Judge Scheindlin dismissed the perjury charges, saying he was "unlawfully detained." Her ruling was overturned by Judge Michael B. Mukasey, who ruled that the Justice Department can illegally imprison "material witnesses."

In spring of 2006, a jury voted to convict 11–1 but remained deadlocked, and a mistrial was declared. On November 17, 2006, a New York jury acquitted Awadallah, age 26, of perjury regarding knowing two of the 9/11 hijackers in San Diego. Prosecutors said that in grand jury testimony on October 10, 2001, he tried to minimize the relationships.

'Abd al-Aziz Awda: aliases al-Shaykh, Shaykh Awda, Sheik Odeh, Abdel Aziz Odeh, Abd al Aziz Odeh, Abed al Aziz Odeh, Abu Ahmed, Sheik Awda, Fadl Abu Ahmed, Al Sheik, The Sheik, Mawlana. Palestinian born on December 20, 1950, in Jabaliyah, Gaza Strip, and educated in Arab and Islamic studies in Cairo, Egypt. He worked as a lecturer at a university and as an imam at a mosque, both in the Gaza Strip. He was an original founder and spiritual leader of Palestine Islamic Jihad (PIJ), headquartered in Damascus, Syria, and remained a member of its Shura Council.

On January 23, 1995, Awda was listed a “specially designated terrorist” under U.S. law, and on February 20, 2003, he was indicted on 53 counts in a Florida U.S. District Court in the Sami Amin al-Arian case. He was added to the U.S. list of most-wanted terrorists on February 28, 2006. Awda was also wanted for conspiracy to conduct PIJ affairs through a pattern of racketeering activities such as bombings, murders, extortion, and money laundering.

Shaykh Awda: alias of ‘Abd al-Aziz Awda.

Sheikh Awda: alias of ‘Abd al-Aziz Awda.

Yusuf al-Ayeri: alias Swift Sword. Ron Suskind’s The One Percent Doctrine: Deep Inside America’s Pursuit of Its Enemies since 9/11 revealed a 2003 al Qaeda plan to release hydrogen cyanide gas in the New York City subway. The plan was called off by Ayman al-Zawahiri. Suskind reported the identity of the contact between a Saudi terrorist and a U.S. al Qaeda cell as al-Ayeri. He was held by the Saudis and later released. He died in a gun battle with Saudi forces near Mecca on May 31, 2003.

William Ayers: member of the Weather Underground who lived with leader Bernardine Dohrn from 1969 to December 3, 1980, when she surrendered to Chicago police. He was a member of the Prairie Fire faction of the Weathermen that believed in surfacing from the underground.

Ayre: alias of Johnny Coulter.

Abdul Aziz: relative of Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, leader of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B’nai B’rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. He stayed behind at the Hanafi center and was a press spokesperson.

Michael D. Azmanoff: one of two Bulgarian-born would-be hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 710 on July 5, 1972. The duo forced the pilot to fly to San Francisco, where they demanded $800,000, two parachutes, and a flight to Siberia. FBI agents carrying the money entered the plane but fired on the hijackers, killing them and killing a passenger in the crossfire, as well as wounding two others.

Mohammed Jaweed Azmath: one of two Indian Muslims from Hyderabad living in Jersey City who were arrested on September 12, 2001, by police in Texas, who pulled them from an Amtrak train. They had $5,000 in cash, hair dye, and box cutters. The Indian duo had boarded Trans World Airlines Flight 679 on September 11, which left Newark at 6:10 A.M., but which was grounded in St. Louis, Missouri, after the terrorist attacks, at which time the duo boarded the train. The duo had multiple passports with fake information.

By December 13, the government was backing away from suggesting that the duo was part of the 9/11 plot. Police were investigating how the duo was able to send $64,000 to relatives. They faced new charges for running up $470,000 on fraudulent credit cards.

Azzam: terrorist who may have died in the August 7, 1998, al Qaeda truck bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York.

Azzam the American: alias of Adam Yahiyeh Gadahn.

B

---

Mohammed Junaid Babar: Pakistani American, age 29, of Queens, New York, who in June 2004 pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Manhattan to providing al Qaeda with money, night-vision goggles, waterproof socks, and other equipment to be used against American troops in Afghanistan. He admitted meeting a senior al Qaeda member in South Waziristan, Pakistan, earlier in 2004 and turning over the equipment. Babar was granted immunity to testify in a U.K. case against seven colleagues who planned to set off bombs throughout the United Kingdom. He was a co-conspirator in the case of Syed Hashmi, a U.S. citizen wanted in the United States on charges of procuring military equipment for al Qaeda.

Joaquin Babin Estrada: one of the hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 7, a B727 flying from Newark, New Jersey, to Miami, Florida, on February 3, 1969, and diverted to Havana, Cuba.

Hsab Babkir: one of three Sudanese roommates of Fares Khalafalla, one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. Babkir was arrested and held on a $75,000 bond because the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) said that “the circumstances of their arrests indicate they may pose a threat to society.” His tourist visa had expired. He initially was not charged in the plot. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Louis Gabor Babler: hijacker of a Crescent Airlines Piper Apache PA10 he had chartered to fly from Hollywood, Florida, to Bimini, Bahamas. He diverted the plane to Havana on November 20, 1967. He was indicted on May 7, 1969.

Leslie Bacon: on April 27, 1971, she was arrested in Washington as a material witness to the March 1, 1971, bombing by the Weather Underground of an unmarked men’s lavatory in the Senate wing of the U.S. Capitol, causing $300,000 damage.

Ahmed Badawi: American arrested in Orlando, Florida, and later released. He testified as a grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Jamal Mohammad Ahmad Ali al-Badawi: aliases Jamal Muhsin al-Tali, Abu Abdul Rahman al-Badawi, Abu Abdul Rahman al-Adani, Jamal Mohammad Ahmad. Named on December 8, 2000, as a prime suspect in the al Qaeda bombing of the USS Cole on October 12, 2000, in Yemen. He admitted to being trained in bin Laden’s camps in Afghanistan and to being sent with bin Laden’s forces to fight in Bosnia’s civil war. He was held for the USS Cole attack but escaped from a Yemeni prison on April 11, 2003. On May 15, 2003, a federal grand jury indicted him on 50 counts, including murder and conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals and U.S. military personnel, conspiracy and use of weapons of mass destruction, damaging and destroying government properties and defense facilities, and providing material support to a terrorist organization. He was believed to have obtained the boat used in the suicide attack. He was recaptured in Yemen in March 2004. On September 29, 2004, Yemeni judge Najib al-Qaderi sentenced him to death for the USS Cole attack. The sentence was reduced to 15 years on appeal in March 2005.

On February 3, 2006, 23 convicted al Qaeda members, including al-Badawi, broke out of a Sana'a prison by crawling through a 140-yard-long tunnel they had dug with outsiders' help. On July 5, 2006, UPI reported that Yemeni security forces had recaptured al-Badawi on July 1. Other reports said he had surrendered.

On October 25, 2007, Yemen freed him after he pledged loyalty to Yemeni president Ali Abdullah Saleh, although he was still wanted by the FBI. Yemen refused extradition.

He has used July 22, 1960; October 23, 1960; and October 23, 1963, as birth dates. He claims to have been born in al-Shargian, Makiras, Yemen. He is approximately five feet five inches tall and weighs 175 pounds. He was added to the FBI's most-wanted list on February 23, 2006. The State Department has offered a $5 million reward for his apprehension or conviction.

Bashir Ali Baesho: Libyan University of Maryland graduate student who on May 9, 1984, purchased three .45 caliber pistols with silencers from an undercover FBI agent for $43,000. He was arrested with another Libyan grad student and charged with violating the National Firearms Act for possessing silencers not registered with the proper authorities. The government suspected him of plotting the assassination of Qadhafi defectors. He was extradited to Brooklyn, New York, to stand trial.

Doris Baffrey: Filipino married to an American who confessed on October 31, 1980, that she had planted an April 6 Liberation Movement bomb that exploded inside a delegate's bag at the opening session of the American Society of Travel Agents Convention in Manila, Philippines, injuring 20 people. She said she believed it was a big firecracker.

Mohammad Reza Bahadoritoolabi: variant Mohammad Toolabi. One of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On February 25, 1980, U.S. District Judge Shirley Jones dismissed charges against Bahadoritoolabi. He agreed to leave the United States after his semester in civil engineering at the Community College of Baltimore ended on May 31, 1980.

Khalid Bahammani: Saudi arrested in Chicago, Illinois, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Ali Hamza Ahmed Sulayman al Bahlul: Yemeni who was one of two bin Laden bodyguards detained at the Guantánamo Bay military prison and charged on February 24, 2004, by the United States with conspiracy to commit war crimes, terrorism, attacking civilians, murder, and destruction of property. On August 26, 2004, he was accused of coordinating bin Laden's propaganda. He told the court he was an al Qaeda member and asked to represent himself.

Bahlul was alleged to be an al Qaeda propagandist who produced videos lauding the attack on the USS Cole in October 2000. On 9/11, he arranged a satellite hookup to Afghanistan so that bin Laden could watch the attacks, but mountains blocked the signals. He then collected data on the economic damage of the 9/11 attacks. Bahlul was represented by attorneys Navy Lt. Cdr. Philip Sundel, Army Maj. Tom Fleener, and Army Maj. Mark Bridges.

On February 9, 2008, a new congressionally approved military commission charged him with being an al Qaeda conspirator. The Pentagon said it would seek life in prison. Arraignment was expected by March 26, 2008.

Joseph Martin Bailie: arrested on December 26–27, 1995, in connection with a 30-gallon plastic drum packed with explosives discovered December 18, 1995, outside the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) office in Reno, Nevada. The fuse had fizzled. An anonymous caller fingered Ellis Edward Hurst, who implicated Bailie after his arrest. The IRS had attached Bailie's wages to repay a tax debt. Police ruled out militia involvement. The duo faced 20 years for the attempted destruction of a government building and a mandatory 30 years for using a destructive device.

Omar Bakarbashat: Yemeni, age 28, detained on September 16, 2001, in San Diego, California. The college student was held as a material witness in New York for two weeks in connection with the 9/11 attacks. He was charged with immigration violations such as overstaying his student visa, misusing immigration documents, and Social Security fraud in San Diego, and he faced deportation. He had worked at the same Texaco station as Nawaf Alhamzi and lived in the same house as 9/11 hijackers Alhamzi and Khalid Almihdhar after they left.

Shukri Abu Baker: Hamas member and founder and CEO of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF)—the United States' largest Muslim charity—which raised $13 million from U.S. residents in 2000. President Bush ordered HLF's assets seized on December 4, 2001, saying some monies were used to fund Hamas efforts to "recruit suicide bombers and to support their families." The HLF aided the family of a Hamas terrorist jailed for killing a Canadian Jewish tourist in Tel Aviv, Israel. The FBI and Treasury Department raided offices and froze $1.9 million in HLF funds in five U.S. banks.

Baker was among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against HLF, charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. On October 22, 2007, a Dallas jury split on charges against him, and the judge declared a mistrial. (See also Mufid Abdulqader and Basman, Bayan, Ghassan, Hazim, Ihsan, and Nadia Elashi.)

Yasin Abu Bakr: imam and leader of the Jamat al Muslimeen (JAM), which held the prime minister of Trinidad and members of Parliament hostage for five days beginning on July 27, 1990. He surrendered to authorities and was later granted amnesty. On June 2, 2007, three individuals—Nur, Ibrahim, and Kadir—were arrested in connection with a foiled terrorist plot to bomb the aviation fuel pipelines that supply JFK International Airport in New York City. The press reported the defendants were associates of Bakr, having met with him in May to discuss the plot. Authorities also believed JAM had contacts with al Qaeda and Hizballah, but no operational relationship. Bakr denied knowing the trio, but Guyana's acting police chief told the press that Kadir and Bakr had a lumber business together.

Ali Sayyid Muhamed Mustafa al-Bakri: variants and aliases 'Ali Sayyid Muhammad Mustafa al-Bakri, 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Masri, Hasan 'Umar Ibrahim, 'Ali Saleem, Abu Salsbil, Abu Salasabil Hassan Omar, Hasan 'Umar Zizo. Al Qaeda's nuclear chief, according to Khalid Sheik Mohammed, as reported in George Tenet's memoirs. He was detained in Iran. He reportedly conducted experiments with explosives to test nuclear yields.

The U.S. National Counterterrorism Center (2008) reported that al-Bakri is an expert on explosives and chemical weapons. He is a member of the al Qaeda Shura Council and a close associate of Sayf al-Adel and Ayman al-Zawahiri. He was earlier a member of the Egyptian Islamic Jihad. He served as an instructor in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan, providing training in the use of explosives and chemical weapons. He unsuccessfully attempted to hijack a Pakistani Air passenger flight in December 2000. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered a $5 million reward for his capture and conviction.

Mukhtar al-Bakri: co-captain of the championship Lackawanna High School soccer team who was arrested in Bahrain a day after he was married. He was accused of involvement in the Lackawanna Six case in which six U.S. citizens of Yemeni descent were arrested on September 13–14, 2002. Al-Bakri, age 22, was accused of sending an e-mail warning of a “very big meal” to come, code words for an al Qaeda attack. “No one will be able to withstand it, except those with faith,” said the e-mail. His lawyer said he was merely referring to a thirdhand warning at a dinner in Saudi Arabia.

His presence in Bahrain so concerned U.S. officials that they closed the U.S. Embassy there and had him arrested. Prosecutors said al-Bakri may have gone on to Bahrain in the summer of 2002 to plot a “very huge” attack. Al-Bakri, still in Bahrain, told the FBI that bin Laden had told them in the training camp that there “is going to be a fight against Americans,” and that he was trained to fight Americans. Authorities found a registered pistol and rifle from a New York residence used by al-Bakri.

On May 19, 2003, al-Bakri pleaded guilty, and on December 3, 2003, a federal court in New York sentenced him to 10 years and $2,000 fine. (See also Sahim Alwan.)

Kuwasi Balagoon: alias Donald Weems. On October 6, 1983, a Goshen, New York, court sentenced him to 75 years to life for robbery and murder in connection with the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink’s truck. Judge David S. Ritter of Orange County Court said he would not be eligible for parole for 75 years. Before sentencing, the defendant read a statement denouncing the United States as imperialist and predicting the inevitability of revolution.

Barbaro Balans: member of El Poder Cubano convicted on November 15, 1968, of the September 16, 1968, rifle attack against the Polish freighter Polanika in Miami.

Ghassan Zayed Ballut: Chicago dry cleaner who on December 6, 2005, was acquitted of all federal charges of aiding the Palestinian Islamic Jihad in the Sami al-Arian case.

Abd-al-Basit-al-Balushi: alias of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Mohammad al-Banar: identified by the FBI in 1995 as one of seven men with ties to Hamas and the Islamic group who helped plan the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing.

Fayez Rashid Ahmed Hassan Al Qadi Banihammad: Saudi, age 24, who was one of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 175, a B767 flying from Boston’s Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport with 65 people, including 7 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The plane was diverted across New Jersey and pulled sharply right, and it just missed crashing into two other airliners as it descended toward Manhattan. They crashed into New York City’s 110-story World Trade Center South Tower at 9:05 A.M.

Gurcharan Singh Banwait: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal, Quebec, Canada, on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. The charges against Banwait were dropped.

Mohammed Barakat: Palestinian American who lived in Chicago and was arrested with his cousin, Samih Jaber, on February 9, 1995, as they disembarked from a plane in Tel Aviv. They were accused of funneling the $154,000 in cash and checks they were carrying from Chicago’s Muslim community to Islamic Jihad. They claimed they intended to invest in Arab building projects, including an Al-Ram strip mall. Barakat was released on February 14. He owned an ice cream parlor in the Ford City shopping mall. He had become a U.S. citizen in 1986.

Sylvia Baraldini: legal aide indicted by a Manhattan federal grand jury on November 18, 1982, for plotting a dozen crimes, including armored car holdups, attempted robberies, threats to murder federal informants, the 1979 prison escape of Joanne Chesimard, and the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck. On September 3, 1983, she was convicted of conspiracy and racketeering and sentenced to 40 years. On August 25, 2001, Baraldini, age 51, was released and flown to Rome on an Italian government jet. Leftist leaders tossed flowers and waved hammer-and-sickle flags during a rally at Rebibbia Prison, where she was to continue her internment. The Italians vowed that she would remain in jail until 2008 to complete her sentence. Baraldini refused to express remorse for her actions.

Charles Barbee: on January 26, 1997, he was one of three men arrested near Yakima, Washington, for several bank robberies. They were being investigated for links to the July 26, 1996, Olympics bombing that killed 2 and injured 111. Justice and FBI spokespeople said that the Sandpoint, Idaho, residents—Charles Barbee, age 42; Robert S. Berry, age 42; and Verne Jay Merrell, age 51—were held without bail on charges of robbing banks and bombing one of the banks, an abortion clinic, and a newspaper office. They were believed to be members of white separatist sects based in northern Idaho. The Olympics bomb went off in the AT&T Global Village; Barbee worked for AT&T in Georgia, Florida, and Idaho. In a 1995 interview with the Spokesperson-Review, he called AT&T an immoral corporation that mistreated Christian white men. “Half the people I worked with were women. They were working instead of being helpmates to their husbands, as God requires.” On April 2, 1997, a federal jury deadlocked on the bombing and robbery charges but convicted them of conspiracy, interstate transportation of stolen vehicles, and possession of hand grenades during their October 8 trip to Portland, Oregon. The sentences carried 35-year terms.

Sufyan Barhoumi: Algerian held at Guantánamo Bay who was charged on May 30, 2008, by the Pentagon with having attended al Qaeda training camps and studying bomb making. He faced a life sentence.

‘Adil ‘Abd-al-Majid ‘Abd-al-Bari: senior Egyptian Islamic Jihad member arrested by British authorities on September 27, 1998. He was sentenced to death in absentia in Egypt in connection with the Khan al-Khalili bombings. By May 2000, the United Kingdom had agreed to extradite him to the United States, and in late 2001 he had lost an appeal and was awaiting transport to the United States.

Judi Bari: one of two members of the radical Earth First! environmentalist group injured on May 24, 1990, when their bomb exploded in a white Subaru station wagon in California. The FBI was investigating their possible involvement with a pipe bomb that had exploded on May 10 outside a lumber mill in Cloverdale and with the explosion and sabotage in April of the Pacific Gas and Electric transmission lines in Santa Cruz County that had left thousands of residents without power. On July 17, prosecuting attorneys said that they would not press charges, even though they still believed that they were responsible for the bomb.

Arthur Barkley: hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 486, a B727 flying from Phoenix, Arizona, to St. Louis, Missouri, on June 4, 1970, who demanded $100 million when the plane landed in Washington, D.C. He had been fired from the Continental Baking Company and had initiated a series of lawsuits, including one against the Internal Revenue Service for back taxes. On the ground, the passengers escaped, and the crew and FBI subdued Barkley after shots were fired. On November 15, 1971, he was acquitted as a result of temporary insanity; a doctor diagnosed him with chronic paranoid schizophrenia. On August 16, 1995, he returned to Fairfax Circuit Court in Virginia to try to obtain his release; he failed.

Dhiren Barot: aliases Issa al-Hindi, Eisa Hindi, Issa al-Britani. One of 13 people arrested by British authorities on August 3, 2004. Barot, age 32, was suspected of helping to arrange—and probably traveled to the United States to participate in—the pre-9/11 surveillance of five U.S. financial services buildings that were the subject of the terrorist alert in the United States on August 1. He and other al Qaeda operatives in the United Kingdom had access to the surveillance reports. The individuals were ages 19 to 32 and were picked up in London, the neighboring towns of Luton and Watford, and Blackburn in northwestern England. Police said he and two other al Qaeda terrorists had conducted the surveillance, taken photographs, and documented security around the buildings.

Khalid Sheik Mohammed reportedly told his captors that Barot had been sent to New York to surveil Jewish targets. He said he had sent Barot in late 1999 to early 2000 to Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to meet Riduan Isamuddin (alias Hambali), al Qaeda's Southeast Asian leader.

On August 18, prosecutors charged eight British citizens alleged to be al Qaeda operatives with plotting against financial targets in New York, New Jersey, and Washington, D.C. U.S. officials said they were considering filing their own charges against Dhiren Barot and the others. The eight were accused of plotting radiation, chemical, and biological terrorist attacks against the United States. A second court appearance was scheduled for August 25. Attorney Mudassar Arani represented seven of the defendants. The detainees were identified as Dhiren Barot, age 32; Mohammed Naveed Bharti, age 24; Abdul Aziz Jalil, age 31; Omar Abdul Rehman, age 20; Junade Feroze, age 28; Zia Ul Haq, age 25; Qaisar Shaffi, age 25; and Nadeem Tarmohammed, age 26. They were charged with conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to commit a public nuisance by using “radioactive materials, toxic gases, chemicals and/or explosives to cause disruption.” Barot and Tarmohammed were charged with possessing a “reconnaissance plan” of the Prudential Financial headquarters in Newark, New Jersey, with information “likely to be useful to terrorists.” The information covered February 19, 2001, to August 2004. Barot was also charged with having information on those dates regarding the New York Stock Exchange, the Citigroup Center in Manhattan, and Washington, D.C.'s International Monetary Fund building. Shaffi was charged with having part of a terrorist guidebook containing information on preparing chemicals and explosives.

Pakistani authorities said detained Pakistani computer expert Mohammad Naeem Noor Khan, who had been held since July, would be a key witness, noting that Barot had met Khan in Pakistan in March.

The Washington Post reported on October 15 that Barot had entered the United States on a student visa and that the FBI was trying to retrace his movements. He posed as a student while conducting surveillance of financial installations that could be terrorist targets.

On April 12, 2005, the United States announced that during the previous month a federal court in Manhattan had heard the four-count indictment of the three Britons—Barot, Tarmohammed, and Shaffi—who had planned to blow up financial buildings. The trio had surveilled financial facilities between August 2000 and April 2001 and conducted video surveillance in Manhattan. The United States said it would seek extradition from the United Kingdom, where they also faced charges; the group was linked to a plan to attack London's Heathrow Airport. They faced life sentences in the United States.

On October 12, 2006, Barot pleaded guilty in a U.K. court to plotting to bomb the International Monetary Fund and other financial centers in Washington, D.C., and New York in August 2004. He also pleaded guilty to planning attacks in the United Kingdom involving radiological devices and to plotting to blow up three limousines packed with gas cylinders in underground parking garages. Prosecutors found plans for those attacks on computers owned by Mohammed Naeem Noor Khan seized in Pakistan in July 2004. Barot's seven accomplices were scheduled to be tried in 2007. On November 7, 2006, Judge Neil Butterfield sentenced Barot to life in prison with the possibility of parole in 40 years for providing al Qaeda with detailed reconnaissance and plans for attacks on the Prudential Building in New Jersey, the International Monetary Fund headquarters in Washington, D.C., and the New York Stock Exchange and Citigroup building in New York City. The sentence was later reduced to 30 years; he had not carried out the planned attacks. He was a former airliner ticket clerk and a Muslim convert who wanted to create "another memorable black day for the enemies of Islam." He planned to blow up a subway train as it passed through a tunnel under the Thames and proposed to al Qaeda financiers in Pakistan that he use a six-man team to explode gas cylinders in limos near the Savoy, the Ritz, and other London hotels. He wanted to add napalm and nails to the bombs. He had written, "Imagine the chaos that would be caused if a powerful explosion were to rip through here and actually rupture the river itself. This would cause pandemonium, what with the explosions, flooding, drowning, et cetera, that would occur." He was also wanted in Yemen on terrorism charges.

On June 15, 2007, A British judge sentenced seven men to a total of 136 years for their part in Barot's plot to blow up U.S. financial institutions and attack U.K. locations. Six had pleaded guilty to conspiring with Barot to set off bombs between 2001 and 2004 and received between 15 and 26 years.

James W. Barrett: arrested on January 15, 1984, in Texas for a series of bank robberies and bombings in Portland, Maine, by a radical group in 1975.

Haji Akhtar Mohammad Barriech: Pakistani arrested on March 20, 1995. He was initially incorrectly identified as Amal Kasi, wanted in the January 25, 1993, shooting of several Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) officers at CIA headquarters. Barriech was suspected of links with Ramzi Yusuf, mastermind of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center.

Narseale Batiste: alias Prince Manna. Member of the "Liberty City Seven" arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami, Florida, for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the Miami FBI office. Batiste was part of the Moorish Science Temple of America, which merged Islam, Christianity, and Judaism. The indictment said that circa December 16, 2005, Batiste had told an informant to obtain "boots, uniforms, machine guns, radios, vehicles," bulletproof vests, and $50,000 in cash. The group planned to "kill all the devils we can." U.S. Judge Joan A. Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants on December 13, 2007, and a second mistrial on April 16, 2008.

Jeffrey Leon Battle: served in the U.S. Army Reserves in 2000 in an Oregon military engineering unit. Battle, age 32, failed to appear for reserve duties and was discharged in 2002. On October 4, 2002, federal authorities indicted five men and one woman from Portland, Oregon—including Battle, his ex-wife October Martinique Lewis, and his associate Patrice Lumumba Ford—for conspiracy to join al Qaeda and the Taliban to wage war against the United States in Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks. None had arrived in Afghanistan, although two were still at large and believed to be overseas. They were charged with conspiracy to levy war against the United States, conspiracy to provide material support to a terrorist group, and conspiracy to contribute services to al Qaeda and the Taliban. The indictment said that in late 2001, five of them had tried to go through China, Bangladesh, or Indonesia to Afghanistan to fight American soldiers but had failed to enter Pakistan because of visa and financial problems. The indictment said Battle had enlisted in order to receive training in U.S. military tactics and weapons, which he intended to use against the United States and in support of al Qaeda and the Taliban.

A deputy sheriff in Skamania County, Washington, saw the five men in Middle Eastern clothes taking target practice in a private quarry in Washington, a fortnight after 9/11. A few weeks later, he noticed one of them on TV being arrested on weapons charges. He called the FBI about the suspect, Lebanese immigrant Ali Khaled Steitiye, a Hamas supporter who had received paramilitary training with pro-Palestinian militants in Lebanon. In October, FBI agents worked to find the four other shooters but determined that they had left days earlier for Afghanistan.

Neighbors noticed meetings in Battle's apartment building with 9 or 10 bearded men in Middle Eastern clothes. Lewis (alias Khadijah), age 25, was the first woman charged in the indictments of 18 al Qaeda supporters in the United States. She wired money to Battle and Ford when they traveled.

On October 7, Battle and Lewis pleaded not guilty in U.S. District Court in Portland to four federal counts. Federal prosecutors presented tape recordings of Battle speaking of attacking synagogues and schools, killing or injuring those inside, and articles and books from the couple's home encouraging violent jihad. On October 16, 2003, in a plea bargain, Battle and Ford admitted in federal court in Portland to one count of conspiracy to levy war against the United States. The deal required each to serve 18 years in prison. The duo faced life if convicted on the 14 other counts.

Gary Bauer: leader, age 50, of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested by federal authorities on July 1, 1996. They were planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. For the preceding two years, the group had practiced firing illegal fully automatic weapons and constructed and detonated ammonium nitrate bombs and rockets, according to a seven-count indictment. Authorities seized more than 70 unregistered assault rifles fitted for fully automatic fire, hundreds of blasting caps, eight grenades, and 650 pounds of ammonium nitrate fertilizer, along with other ingredients to produce ammonium nitrate-fuel oil explosive. The 10 men and two women were charged with conspiracy to manufacture and possess unregistered destructive devices. Six were charged with conspiracy to illegally instruct persons in the use of explosive devices to create civil disorder. Three were charged with illegal possession of machine guns.

The FBI was investigating whether the group was involved in the October 1995 derailment of an Amtrak train.

Members of the group vowed to kill infiltrators and suggested killing a juror and retaliating against a treasury agent's family. Authorities showed a videotape made in 1994 of the group's training and discussions.

On December 19, Bauer pleaded guilty to 11 federal felony charges, including conspiracy to unlawfully make and possess unregistered destructive devices, unlawful possession of unregistered machine guns, unlawful possession of other unregistered destructive devices, and furnishing instruction in the use of explosive devices, in an appearance before a U.S. magistrate in Phoenix. Bauer faced five years in prison and a $250,000 fine for each charge. On March 20, 1997, he was sentenced to 9 years and 35 months' probation and was fined $16,100.

Muhammed Bayazid: alias Abu Rida al-Suri. Syrian physicist who attended the University of Arizona in the 1980s, befriended jihadists including Wadi al-Hage, and joined Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan in the early 1990s. He developed business connections to Sudanese entities related to weapons of mass destruction. His name surfaced in al Qaeda's efforts to purchase Sudanese uranium. He listed the Benevolence International Foundation's Illinois address as his residence in obtaining a driver's license.

Ibrahim Bayoumi: Egyptian, age 27, held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in connection with their 9/11 investigations.

Rashad Baz: Brooklyn resident and cabdriver from Lebanon who on March 1, 1994, fired on a convoy of Hasidic Jewish students on Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive near the Brooklyn Bridge in New York, injuring 14 rabbinical students in a van. The next day, New York police arrested him in Brooklyn, where he had gone to a body shop to fix a shattered window on a 1978 Chevrolet Impala, believed to be the getaway car. Police found in his apartment 50 rounds of ammunition, a 12-gauge "streetsweeper" shotgun, a .38 caliber semiautomatic pistol, a stun gun, and a bulletproof vest. He was charged with 15 counts of attempted murder and held without bail; he was later charged with second-degree murder after one of the victims died. Baz told police he had opened fire after a traffic dispute. On December 1, 1994, he was found guilty of murder and of 14 counts of attempted murder. On January 18, 1995, New York Supreme Court Judge Harold Rothwax sentenced him to 141 years and 8 months on murder, attempted murder, and weapons charges.

Leon Bearden: hijacker of Continental Airlines Flight 54 on August 3, 1961.

Shawn Becker: hijacker of a helicopter on January 25, 1981, in an attempt to help her boyfriend, convicted killer and drug dealer Robert Wyler, escape from prison. She surrendered on February 9, 1981.

David Theodore Belfield: given name of Daoud Salahuddin.

Ramadan Belgasem: one of four accomplices of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. The Arlington, Virginia, resident was the cultural officer of the McLean, Virginia-based People's Committee for Libyan Students. U.S. Magistrate Leonie Brinkema set bond between $25,000 and $50,000. The group apparently was planning revenge against U.S. officials believed to have planned the April 1986 air raid against Libya in retaliation for Libyan involvement in several terrorist attacks. On July 22, he faced charges of violating his Arlington Carlyle House cooperatives' adults-only policy and faced eviction. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya.

Bansayah Belkacem: variant of Bansayah Belkacem.

Bensayah Belkacem: variant Bansayah Belkacem; alias Mejd. On October 9, 2001, Bosnian investigators were tracing al Qaeda links to the Bosnian who was arrested on a U.S. tip that he had spoken by phone with a bin Laden aide on how to obtain foreign passports. He had arrived in Bosnia in 1995. He made dozens of phone calls to Afghanistan after 9/11 to Abu Zubaydah and surveilled the U.S. Embassy.

Six men were arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001. They were accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. On January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Belkacem and five other terrorism suspects to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001.

David Belliveau: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996,

while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 31, Belliveau, age 28, pleaded guilty to three felony counts. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Ellen Belliveau: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 31, Belliveau, age 27, pleaded guilty to two felony counts. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Marie Haydee Beltran Torres: charged by federal authorities with the August 3, 1977, Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) bombing of the New York City Mobil Building. The bomb killed Charles Steinberg, a partner in an employment agency in the building, and injured eight others. A federal grand jury in Chicago on September 7, 1977, indicted Torres's husband, Carlos Alberto Torres, on conspiracy and a "variety of explosive-related charges." She was arrested by Evanston, Illinois, police on April 4, 1980, and charged with a variety of local weapons, theft, and armed robbery charges. Bond was set at $2 million. On May 22, 1980, the FALN terrorist was found guilty of planting the Mobil bomb in 1977. She was sentenced to life in prison the next day.

Mourad Benchellali: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for "criminal association with a terrorist enterprise." The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to "integrate into terrorist structures" in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but said they had not used their combat training. He was sentenced to four years in prison; three were suspended, and one year was time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The French citizens had been captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005.

Sabri Benkhala: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Benkhala was represented by attorney John A. Boneta. On July 25, Judge Brinkema ordered Benkhala freed before trial, although Benkhala's phone number was found in a cell phone directory of Ahmed Abu Ali, an admitted member of al Qaeda. On September 25, 2003, a new indictment was issued against seven defendants, including Benkhala, who was accused of supplying services to the Taliban.

On March 9, 2004, after a one-day trial, Judge Brinkema acquitted Benkhala of the charges, saying that although the prosecution had shown that he was "very interested in violent jihad," they had not proved that he had fought for the Taliban.

On February 22, 2006, Benkhala, of Falls Church, Virginia, was arraigned in U.S. District Court in Alexandria on counts of perjury and obstruction of justice. He pleaded not guilty. He was represented by attorney John Keats. U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema said the prosecution had shown he attended a terrorist camp in July 1999. Benkhala faced 20 years in prison. His trial was to begin on June 7, 2006. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

James E. Bennet: former New York policeman who hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 30 on May 28, 1971, and insisted that his wife and son meet him at its destination, LaGuardia Airport. He permitted the passengers and flight attendants to deplane. When his family did not arrive, he ordered the plane to fly to Nassau, Bahamas, where he was to be met with $500,000 and a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) representative so that he could make a donation. He was overpowered and arrested in Nassau. On May 29, 1971, the Bahamas deported him to the United States.

On December 29, 1971, he was acquitted of air piracy because of a lack of criminal responsibility. He was committed to a mental institution the next day.

Joseph T. Bennett: one of two fugitives from justice in Miami who took over a Chalk's Flying Service Grumman Goose scheduled to fly to the Bahamas on March 7, 1972, and forced the co-pilot to fly to Havana, Cuba. The duo shot and wounded the pilot, a mechanic, and a bystander. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

Noman Benotman: leader in 2000 of the Libyan Islamic Fighting Group. After 9/11, he left the group. In January 2007, Libya flew him to Tripoli to try to persuade his erstwhile comrades in jail to join peace negotiations. In November 2007, he wrote an open letter to al Qaeda deputy Ayman al-Zawahiri, criticizing the group's attacks. He now lives in London.

Lori Helen Berenson: alias Comrade Lucia. U.S. citizen, former MIT student, and daughter of two professors, Berenson was arrested on November 30, 1995, in Peru and charged with membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA). She was arrested as she was leaving the Congress building with a faked journalist credential, possibly casing the facility for a terrorist attack. She was scheduled for trial by a military court for high treason and terrorism and faced life in prison. Police believed she was part of a plan to take over Congress and kidnap lawmakers to exchange for imprisoned MRTA leaders. Lima's Expresso said she was MRTA's international liaison officer. Police found army and national police uniforms plus notes detailing MRTA weapons at her house in the San Borja district. On December 12, 1995, she admitted her link with MRTA. She said she had rented two terrorist safe houses where several were arrested in La Molina and in the San Borja district. She had lived with Panamanian citizen Pacifico Castrellon, who was also arrested. On January 4, 1996, a Peruvian court sentenced her to life in prison. On January 11, 1996, the Supreme Council of Military Justice upheld her life sentence for treason for her MRTA membership. She was to serve her sentence at the Yanamayo maximum security prison in Puno. On March 15, 1996, the Supreme Court of Military Justice affirmed her sentence.

Her release was demanded on December 17, 1996, by two dozen MRTA gunmen who took over the Japanese ambassador's residence and held hostage 700 diplomats, business leaders, and government officials.

In June 1997, Peru's highest military court rejected her appeal for a reduced sentence.

On October 13, 1998, she was in a prison hospital to recover from ailments caused by the freezing, high-altitude (121,700 feet above sea level) jail conditions. She was moved to a lower-lying common criminal jail at Socabaya near Arequipa, suffering from circulatory and throat illnesses. On October 20, 1998, she said she was a political prisoner and wanted to return to Yanamayo, a request she echoed on July 10, 1999. She began a hunger strike on January 11, 2000.

On August 28, 2000, Peru's Supreme Military Justice Commission overturned her life sentence and granted her a civilian trial. On June 20, 2001, a civil court convicted her of collaborating with an antigovernment guerrilla group and sentenced her to 20 years in prison, the maximum sentence, less 5 years for time served. The Superior Terrorism Court did not find her to be a militant member of the group. She said she would appeal. On June 26, 2001, president George W. Bush asked Peruvian president-elect Alejandro Toledo to weigh humanitarian factors in her case.

On January 22, 2002, Peru's Supreme Court began hearing her case. The court upheld her 20-year sentence on February 18, 2002, by a 4–1 vote. Berenson began a hunger strike for a repeal of antiterrorism laws. The next day, Peruvian justice minister Fernando Olivera said she would not receive a presidential pardon.

In September 2004, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in Costa Rica took up her case and was due to rule later in the month on whether she had received a fair trial. On December 2, 2004, the court upheld the sentence.

Bruce Barry Berger: on December 18, 1978, New York City police arrested Berger carrying a bomb he planned to use against the Egyptian Tourist Office in Rockefeller Center. A detained colleague identified himself as the New Jewish Defense League's (JDL) executive director.

Dr. Alan Berkman: variant Berman. New York City physician arrested in Pennsylvania on May 24, 1985, and ordered held without bail after authorities described him as a terrorist bent on overthrowing the government. He allegedly treated one of the Weather Underground robbers of a Brink's truck for gunshot wounds. On May 29, 1987, he was sentenced in Philadelphia to 10 years in federal prison for possession of explosives, weapons, and false identity cards.

He was one of seven people claiming to be members of secret communist organizations. The May 11, 1988, federal grand jury indictment said the group was engaging in "armed propaganda" for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. The indictment charged the seven with the Capitol blast near the Senate chamber in 1983 and with attacks on the Naval War College at Fort McNair in 1983; the Washington Navy Yard's computer center in 1983 and its officers club in 1984; the FBI office in Staten Island, New York, in 1983; the Israeli Aircraft Industries Building in New York in 1984; the South African Consulate in New York in 1984; and the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association in New York in 1985. They were planning attacks at seven other sites in Washington, Maryland, and Delaware, including a D.C. law firm, the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, and the Old Executive Office Building in downtown D.C. The indictment indicated that the group had hundreds of pounds of explosives, blasting caps, dynamite, detonating cords, ammunition, bulletproof body armor, high-powered handguns, and semiautomatic weapons on hand. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty, claiming to be "anti-imperialist political prisoners." Following guilty pleas by three codefendants on September 7, 1990, the government dropped charges against Berkman, who was being treated at D.C. General Hospital for a recurrence of Hodgkin's disease.

Dr. Alan Berman: variant of Dr. Alan Berkman.

John Berry: on July 17, 1971, he telephoned Aer Lingus that a bomb was on board its B747 flying from New York to Europe. He was apprehended while attempting to take the money he demanded. The plane landed in Boston; no bomb was found.

Robert S. Berry: on January 26, 1997, he was one of three men arrested on October 8, 1996, near Yakima, Washington, and held without bail for several bank robberies and bombings. He was convicted of conspiracy, interstate transportation of stolen vehicles, and possession of hand grenades. (See also Charles Barbee.)

Chaim Bieber: one of seven members of the Jewish Defense League indicted on May 13, 1971, for conspiracy to violate federal gun laws. On July 23, 1971, U.S. District Court Judge Jack B. Weinstein gave him a three-year suspended sentence, fined him $2,500, and placed him on three-year probation.

Soliman S. Biheiri: convicted on October 9, 2003, on two federal immigration charges in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia. Saudi-sponsored Islamic charities invested about $4 million in his New Jersey investment firm, BMI, Inc. It is possible that the money was funneled to terrorist groups.

Prosecutors said they would seek a longer term than the usual six months because he did business with a leader of Hamas and served as personal banker to a nephew of Osama bin Laden. On January 9, 2004, Biheiri, age 51, was sentenced to a year in prison. On October 12, 2004, a federal jury convicted Biheiri of lying about his ties to Mousa Abu Marzook, a leader of Hamas. On October 6, 2004, Biheiri pleaded guilty to illegally possessing and using a U.S. passport to enter the United States. Prosecutors requested a “terrorism enhancement” to stiffen the sentence, saying he had obstructed a federal terrorism probe. On January 13, 2005, a federal judge in Alexandria, Virginia, refused to extend his prison sentence, giving him only 13 months and 1 day.

Ahmad and Muhammad Ibrahim Bilal: brothers and two of six people from Portland, Oregon, indicted on October 4, 2002, by federal authorities for conspiracy to join al Qaeda and the Taliban to wage war against the United States in Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks. The indictment said that in late 2001, five of them—including the brothers—had tried to go through China, Bangladesh, or Indonesia to Afghanistan to fight American soldiers but had failed to enter Pakistan because of visa and financial problems. Ahmed was also indicted on charges of possessing and firing firearms in furtherance of a crime.

On October 8, Ahmed surrendered to Malaysian authorities at the International Islamic School outside Kuala Lumpur, where he had been studying since early 2002. U.S. authorities revoked his passport, giving Malaysia grounds to hold him. He was extradited to the United States the next day. Police found Muhammad in Dearborn, Michigan. He was extradited to Portland.

On October 15, Ahmed pleaded not guilty to being part of the sleeper cell. On September 18, 2003, the brothers pleaded guilty to firearms charges and of conspiring to help al Qaeda and the Taliban. In turn, the prosecution dropped the charge of conspiring to levy war against the United States. On February 9, 2004, Ahmed was sentenced to 10 years, and Muhammad was sentenced to 8 years.

Ramzi Binalshibh: alias Ramzi Omar. Yemeni, age 29, in Hamburg, Germany, who was believed to be the planned 20th 9/11 hijacker—he had even made a martyr video—but who had to scrub his mission when he could not get a visa to enter the United States. On November 14, 2001, the FBI concluded that the Yemeni economics student was meant to be the 5th hijacker on United Airlines Flight 93, but hijacker leader Muhammad Atta had failed three times to get him into the United States. The FBI concluded that Zacarias Moussaoui was not to be the 5th hijacker but may have been part of several waves of chemical and biological weapons attacks. Germany indicted Binalshibh and fugitives Said Bahaji and Zakariya Essabar, part of an al Qaeda cell that had operated in Hamburg since 1999.

Binalshibh placed a $2,200 deposit at the Flight Training Center in Venice, Florida, before being rejected for a U.S. visa because of suspected links to the USS Cole bombing. He helped find flight schools for the other hijackers, helped them enter the United States, and helped finance the attacks. He and Atta had begun a Muslim prayer group at Hamburg Technical University and worshipped at a radical mosque. Binalshibh disappeared on September 5, 2001, leaving behind four Hamburg addresses. He was frequently seen with Said Bahaji, a German citizen whose father was Moroccan. On December 1, 1998, Binalshibh, along with Bahaji and Atta, had rented a Marien Street apartment in Hamburg that served as an al Qaeda cell. Hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi lived there; Pennsylvania hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah was a frequent visitor. Bahaji, the cell’s logistics specialist, showed up in Karachi, Pakistan, on a Turkish Airlines flight in early September 2001, accompanied by individuals claiming to be Abdullah Hussainy, a Belgian of Algerian origin, and Ammar Moula, a Frenchman. Investigators determined in mid-November that they were Binalshibh and Zakariya Essabar, age 24, a Moroccan who also lived on Marien Street. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. and German governments blocked Binalshibh’s financial assets. He was also believed to be a leader of a plot to crash a plane into Heathrow Airport.

On September 5, 2002, al Jazeera televised confessions by Binalshibh and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, who said al Qaeda was claiming credit for the 9/11 attacks. Binalshibh said he was the coordinator of the attacks.

On September 10–11, 2002, Pakistani police arrested Binalshibh in an apartment in Pechs, Karachi. He was charged in Germany with more than 3,000 counts of murder. He was believed involved in the planning of the 9/11 attacks, the USS Cole bombing, and the 2002 bombing of a Tunisian synagogue.

His release was demanded on April 25, 2003, by a Lebanese man who hijacked a bus with 16 passengers in Bremen, Germany.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 “high value” detainees, including Binalshibh, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. On October 10, 2006, Binalshibh filed a legal challenge in federal court in Washington to contest his detention and requested a public defender.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals who were detained at Guantánamo and believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks, including Binalshibh. The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Binalshibh was also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. At his June 5, 2008, arraignment he said he wanted to represent himself. He was the only defendant whose legs were shackled in the court. The trial was scheduled to begin September 18, 2008. His military defense counsels were Navy Lt. Richard Federico and Navy Cdr. Suzanne Lachelier. His civilian attorney was Thomas Durkin.

Mark I. Binsky: arrested with three other members of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) on May 23, 1974, at the Lido Beach Jewish Center on Long Island while assembling bombs to be placed at the residence of the Soviet UN mission in Glen Cove, New York. They were held without bail on state and federal charges of conspiracy and bomb possession.

Gurpratap Birk: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 12–15, 1985, visit to the United States. In January 1985, Birk had solicited the assistance of an FBI undercover operative to train a group of men in the United States in the use of explosives and weapons. They would then launch a terrorist campaign in India. In the January meeting, he also told the operative of the assassination plan. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court.

Haji Bismullah: Afghan, age 28, held at the U.S. military prison in Guantánamo Bay as of February 2008. He was accused of fighting with the Taliban against the U.S. and Afghan governments.

Silas Trim Bissell: alias Terrence Peter Jackson. Founding member of the Weather Underground arrested on January 20, 1987, after 17 years on the run. The heir to the carpet-sweeping company, he worked in Eugene, Oregon, as a physical therapist and freelance artist. On June 25, 1987, he was sentenced to two years in prison for a 1970 ROTC bombing.

Christopher Black: white member, age 18, of the Lords of Chaos teen militia who along with militia leader Kevin Foster were charged on June 4, 1996, with conspiracy to commit murder by plotting to dress as Disney characters and kill black visitors to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Florida. They had planned to ambush Disney employees, steal their costumes, sneak into the park, and murder tourists. The duo was also charged with racketeering and arson against a historic Coca-Cola bottling plant. The two pleaded not guilty in May to first-degree murder in the April 30 death of

Mark Schwebes, the Riverdale High School band director in Florida.

Robert Block: resident of Bayville, New York, charged on November 25, 1981, in a Nassau County court in New York with reckless endangerment and criminal mischief for firing a dozen shots into the Glen Cove residence of Oleg Troyanovsky, the U.S.S.R. UN ambassador. The Jewish Defense League (JDL) initially claimed credit, but later the JDL chief denied responsibility.

Timothy Blunk: member of the May 19 Coalition of the United States who was sentenced in 1982 to nine months in a New York jail for rioting and resisting arrest during an antiapartheid demonstration against the South African Springboks rugby team at John F. Kennedy International Airport in 1981. He was arrested on November 29, 1984, at a Cherry Hill storage depot, where 740 pounds of dynamite, an Uzi submachine gun, an M-14 rifle, a sawed-off shotgun, and Teflon-coated “police killer” bullets were found. He and Weather Underground member Susan Lisa Rosenberg were arrested while sitting in a car after a New Jersey policeman became suspicious of their ill-fitting wigs. On March 17, 1985, he was convicted in federal court on eight charges of unlawful possession of explosives, weapons, and counterfeit identification cards. In May 1985, he was sentenced to 58 years for possession of 600 pounds of explosives and 12 guns.

He was one of seven people indicted on May 11, 1988, by a federal grand jury for the November 7, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Capitol and other attacks. The five-count indictment said the group was engaging in “armed propaganda” for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty. (See also Dr. Alan Berkman.)

Bassam Bokhowa: Ron Suskind’s The One Percent Doctrine: Deep Inside America’s Pursuit of Its Enemies since 9/11 revealed a 2003 al Qaeda plan to release hydrogen cyanide gas in the New York City subway. The plan was discovered after the February 13, 2003, arrest in Bahrain of five men attempting to cross from Saudi Arabia across the King Fahd bridge. They included two gunrunners and three jihadis. Among them was Bokhowa, age 50ish, whose computer held plans for fabricating a muftakkar—a mixing and delivery system for hydrogen cyanide. A form of the gas was Zyklon B, used by the Nazis in the extermination camps.

Ayman Bondok: arrested with Kim St. Louis on March 10, 2000, in Montreal for possessing illegal explosives. Bondok, age 23, was charged with threatening Israel in an effort to win the release of Lebanese prisoners. Police believed the two were acting on their own. On March 30, Bondok was charged with extortion and possessing explosives and was released on bail. Police believed Bondok made the threatening call to the Israeli Consulate. They also suggested that Bondok provided the tip about the explosives in the apartment of Tarek Adealy Khafagy, who was arrested on March 4.

David Lawrence Booth: high school freshman, age 14, who tried to hijack Delta Airlines Flight 670 flying from Cincinnati, Ohio, to Chicago, Illinois, on November 10, 1969. Federal authorities declined prosecution. He was found mentally incompetent and committed to a mental hospital, from which he was released on April 6, 1971.

Michael Bortin: brother-in-law of Symbionese Liberation Army member Sarah Jane Olson, née Kathleen Soliah. On February 14, 2003, he was sentenced to six to eight years in a bank robbery and murder case.

Cynthia Priscilla Boston: black member of the separatist Republic of New Africa. On November 5, 1981, conspiracy charges against her were dropped, although FBI agents had identified her as one of four people who cleaned out a Mount Vernon, New York, safe house the day after the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck. On November 22, 1982, she agreed to surrender to federal authorities.

Hadz Boudela: one of a group arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. On January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Boudela and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001.

Katherine Boudin: Weather Underground activist captured on October 20, 1981, when four terrorists attacked a Brink's truck outside a Rockland County, New York, bank, escaping with $1.6 million in a hail of shotgun and automatic weapons fire. Her car was stopped at a roadblock, and the terrorists fired on police, killing two. She was captured by an off-duty officer as she ran north on the southbound lane of a freeway. As a May 19 Coalition member, she had stayed in hiding for 11 years. She had been last seen in 1970, fleeing naked with Cathlyn Platt Wilkerson when a Greenwich Village bomb factory exploded, killing three. She was charged with 13 counts of robbery and 3 counts of murder in connection with the Brink's case. On April 26, 1984, Boudin pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and was given a concurrent term of 12 to 25 years for robbery. On May 3, 1984, Judge David S. Ritter sentenced her to 20 years to life in prison for her role in the robbery, to be eligible for parole in 17 years. Boudin apologized for the deaths of the two patrol officers. Bernadine Dohrn became the legal guardian of Boudin's daughter, Chesa, age 3.

On August 22, 2001, a New York parole board rejected her parole petition at the Bedford Hills Prison outside New York City. While in prison, Boudin earned a master's degree in adult education, won a 1999 PEN award for poetry, and developed a parenting-behind-bars program. Despite protests from police organizations, on August 20, 2003, the parole board agreed to her release on what would have been the 55th birthday of Police Officer Edward O'Grady, who was murdered in the robbery.

Lakhdar Boumediene: Bosnian detained in Bosnia by U.S. troops in January 2002 and then held at Guantánamo Bay. The U.S. military heard the case for his detention in 2004. He was one of the lead plaintiffs in a petition before the U.S. Supreme Court that challenged the constitutionality of the October 2006 Military Commissions Act. On June 12, 2008, the Court ruled 5–4 that suspected terrorists and foreign fighters incarcerated at Guantánamo Bay by the U.S. military have the right to challenge their detention in federal court.

Boussora: alias of Fakr ibn 'Abd al-Aziz Busura.

Fakr ibn 'Abd al-Aziz Busura: variant Faker ben Abdelazziz Boussora; aliases Abu Yusif al-Tunisi, Abdulaziz, Boussora, Boussoura, Fakeroun, Fakerrou, Fakir. Born in Tunisia on March 22, 1964, he resided in France and then shuttled between Montreal, Canada, and Tunisia often during the 1990s. He obtained Canadian citizenship in 1999. He attended the el-Sunna Mosque in Montreal. He received training from al Qaeda in Afghanistan and has declared that he wants to be a suicide martyr. He is an associate of Tunisian terror suspect Abderraouf Jdey, with whom he has traveled. He might have been in Turkey in early 2002 and may still be traveling in that region. The U.S. Rewards for Justice issued a reward of $5 million for his arrest. Authorities are concerned that he may attempt to return to Canada or the United States to plan or carry out a terrorist attack. As of early December 2007, he was still at large. He is believed to have a serious pituitary gland illness. He is five feet seven inches tall and weighs 165 pounds.

Boussoura: alias of Fakr ibn 'Abd al-Aziz Busura.

Viktor Bout: Tajikistan-born former Soviet air force officer and arms dealer alleged by British intelligence to have provided arms to the Taliban and al Qaeda. The U.S. government added that he made a $50 million profit from his sales to the Taliban. In 2004, the U.S. Treasury Department froze his assets under U.S. jurisdiction. In April 2005, the United States froze assets of 30 companies and four individuals linked to him. In 2007, another seven companies and three people were added to the list. He supplied weapons to conflicts or was involved in arms deals in Angola, Afghanistan, the United Arab Emirates, Bulgaria, Togo, Central African Republic, Sierra Leone, Zaire, the Republic of the Congo, and Liberia.

Bout, age 41, was arrested by Thai authorities on March 6, 2008, on a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) warrant. He was picked up in a sting in which DEA undercover agents posed as Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels who met with Bout and Andrew Smulian in the Netherlands Antilles, Denmark, and Romania. The United States charged him with conspiracy to smuggle missiles and rocket launchers to FARC rebels. Bout was the principal subject of Douglas Farah and Stephen Braun's Merchant of Death and the model for Nicholas Cage's character in Lord of War.

Richard K. Boyd: would-be hijacker of an Aloha Airlines flight on October 11, 1965. He and partner Lawrence D. Hesler were subdued by the crew. A U.S. Navy court-martial sentenced them to four years at hard labor and gave them a dishonorable discharge. Boyd was released on September 8, 1966.

James D. Brailey Jr.: resident of Olympia, Washington, age 43, charged on January 16, 2003, in U.S. District Court in Tacoma on a federal firearms charge as part of a plot to kill Governor Gary Locke. The previous day, the FBI's Seattle Joint Terrorism Task Force had found two handguns when they searched his van after he returned from an Arkansas meeting of Christian Identity, a white supremacist group. In March 2001, an informant told the FBI that Brailey had been planning the assassination since 1998 and believed that he was the true governor. Brailey hated the Chinese American governor because of his ethnicity. Brailey was also a member of the Jural Society, which believes in a "people's government" based on Christian principles and common law. The group had elected him governor of Washington in 1998. He reportedly made dry runs on the Capitol building.

Gerard Anthony Brannigan: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, taken into custody in New York City, and then indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer based in Tucson, and then shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. On November 17, 1992, the four were ordered held on a total of $6.5 million bail and ordered to Arizona to face charges.

Juan Luis Bravo: one of two Colombians, age 27, extradited to Miami, Florida, on October 28, 2002, where they appeared in federal court on a 10-count indictment that said they were part of a for-profit kidnap group that operated in the Amazon basin from 1997 to 2001. They were to face trial in U.S. District Court in Washington. This was the first time Colombia permitted its citizens to be tried in the United States on a non-drug crime. They faced life for the kidnapping and murder on October 12, 2000, in Ecuador of U.S. hostage Ron Sander, an oil rig supervisor. Some of the kidnappers had been members of the since-disbanded Popular Liberation Front.

Paul Brennan: on December 27, 1995, bail was set in the United States at $500,000 for Brennan, one of 38 prisoners who escaped from Northern Ireland's Maze Prison in 1983. He was convicted in Northern Ireland of possessing explosives. He and two other escapees were arrested in California between 1992 and 1994.

Mahmud Faruq Brent: alias Mahmud Al Mutazzim. Baltimore County resident and U.S. citizen, age 30, who on August 4, 2005, was charged by federal authorities with conspiracy to support a terrorist organization. The FBI recorded a conversation in which he mentioned attending a Lashkar-e-Taiba terrorist training camp in Pakistan. He had once worked as a paramedic in Silver Spring, Maryland, and as a Washington, D.C., cabdriver. He had spoken with Tarik Ibn Osman Shah, who told authorities that he had trained Brent in martial arts and that Brent was a jihadi. Brent was also linked to Seifullah Chapman, a member of the Virginia jihad network who had been sentenced to 65 years in prison for conspiring to support Lashkar-e-Taiba and taking part in paramilitary training. He was represented by attorneys Donald Yannella and Hassen Ibn Abdellah.

On April 2, 2007, during a hearing in a Manhattan federal court, Brent pleaded guilty to conspiring to aid Lashkar-e-Taiba by attending one of its Pakistan training camps. On February 17, 2006, Brent pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to aid terrorist groups in the Middle East between 2001 and 2005.

Michael William Brescia: one of five members of the Aryan Republican Army white separatist group indicted by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia on January 30, 1997, on charges of conspiracy to rob banks. They were accused of carrying out seven bank robberies in Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin from 1994 to 1995 and buying weapons and funding recruiting efforts with the proceeds. One of them testified that the group aimed to "commit terrorist acts against the U.S. government." Brescia was named in a private wrongful death suit brought by the mother of two of the victims of the April 19, 1995, Oklahoma City bombing.

Thomas Bernard Brigham: resident of Rochester, New York, found guilty of murder and sentenced to life in prison in the September 3, 1984, bombing of Montreal's downtown railway terminal that killed 3 French tourists and injured 47. He sent a note three days before the bombings demanding "the end of the unholy Vatican" in protest of the upcoming visit of Pope John Paul II.

Henry David Briody: arrested on August 29, 1984, after throwing an incendiary device onto the front steps of the U.S. Capitol and injuring Father Stephen Rock.

Bruce McRae Britt: attempted to hijack Pacific Airlines 327 out of Chicago on July 31, 1961. Britt was sentenced to maximum of 42 years for assault with intent to commit murder for blinding the pilot and critically wounding a ticket agent.

Tracy Brockway: alleged Project 7 militia member, age 34, indicted on May 8, 2004, for firearms conspiracy; three others were charged with plotting to kill Montana public officials. The group from the Kalispell, Montana, area had amassed machine guns, 30,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, night-vision equipment, and body armor.

Larry F. Brooks: one of three hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 121 to Miami, Florida, diverted to Cuba on January 28, 1969.

George Brown: alias Singleton. One of five Black Panther Party sympathizers who hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 841 heading for Miami, Florida, on July 31, 1972. In Miami a $1 million ransom was paid, the hostages were freed, and the plane went on to Algiers the next day. The money was returned to Delta on August 23, 1972. Four of the hijackers, including Brown, were arrested in Paris on May 28, 1976, for carrying false U.S. passports. They appealed to the French people to turn down a U.S. extradition request because they could not get a fair trial because of racial discrimination. The U.S. extradition request was turned down, and they were ordered to stand trial in France on hijacking charges.

Ralph Brown: inmate serving 8 to 16 years for theft and sexual assault who escaped from Arkansas Valley Correctional Facility in Ordway, Colorado, on August 18, 1989. His wife and another inmate's wife chartered a helicopter and forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the prison baseball field. They were spotted in a getaway U-Haul truck and were recaptured nine hours later after a shootout in Phelps County, Nebraska. On August 21, 1989, the couples were charged with attempted murder, with using a firearm to commit a felony, and with criminal attempt.

Rebecca Brown: one of two women who chartered a helicopter and forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the baseball field of the Arkansas Valley Correctional Facility in Ordway, Colorado. There they freed their husbands, Ralph Brown and Fred Gonzalez. They were spotted in a getaway U-Haul truck and all were captured nine hours later after a shootout in Phelps County, Nebraska. On August 21, 1989, the couples were charged with attempted murder, with using a firearm to commit a felony, and with criminal attempt.

Samuel Brown: one of four Weather Underground terrorists who attacked a Brink's truck outside a Rockland County, New York, bank, escaping with $1.6 million in a hail of shotgun and automatic weapons fire on October 20, 1981. Their car was stopped at a roadblock, and the terrorists fired on police, killing two. Brown escaped. On June 14, 1984, the Staten Island resident was convicted of three counts of murder and four of robbery.

Theodore Brown: on January 5, 1974, Brown, age 31, was arrested by FBI agents at Travis Air Force Base in California on charges of helping Allison Thompson, age 18, of Santa Barbara, California, smuggle guns and ammunition to the United Kingdom. She and two accomplices were detained at Heathrow Airport on December 29, 1973, while carrying five automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. On January 4, 1974, they were charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners. Thompson was cleared of all charges by a British jury.

Tracy Brown: alias William R. Smith. Seattle resident who was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an "eventual confrontation" with the U.S. government and the UN.

Gary C. Bruton: chartered a California Air twin-engine Pipe Navajo to fly to Texas on November 24, 1975, but once in the air ordered the pilot at gunpoint to fly to Mexico and land on a deserted Mazatlan beach. Fifteen accomplices unloaded the cargo of guns and set fire to the plane. The hijacker fled with his accomplices.

Howard B. Brutton Jr.: indicted on April 1, 1980, by a federal grand jury in Raleigh, North Carolina, for conspiring to export weapons illegally to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Marilyn Jean Buck: Black Liberation Army member (Buck is white) arrested on May 11, 1985, by the FBI and convicted on May 11, 1988, in the October 20, 1981, Brink's armored car robbery in which a guard and two police officers were killed.

She was also one of seven people indicted on May 11, 1988, by a federal grand jury for the November 7, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Capitol and other attacks. The five-count indictment said the group was engaging in “armed propaganda” for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty. On September 7, 1990, Buck pleaded guilty in Washington, D.C., federal court to participating in the conspiracy that planned and carried out the Capitol bombing and to the bombing itself. On November 16, 1990, she was given an additional 10 years for her role in bombing federal buildings. She faced 80 consecutive years for her crimes. (See also Dr. Alan Berkman.)

Marijam Buconic: one of three Croatian terrorists who forced their way into the Yugoslavian UN mission on June 14, 1977, wounding guard Radomir Medich. The terrorists eventually surrendered. On June 16, 1977, the United States charged them with conspiracy to kidnap Yugoslav ambassador Jaska Petric. New York State charged them with attempted murder. On October 12, 1977, they were found guilty of plotting to kidnap the ambassador. On November 17, 1977, Buconjic received seven years.

Mohammed Budeir: U.S. citizen of Syrian descent, age 20, arrested in August 2002 while taking photos of police cars in Paoli, Pennsylvania. The college student was charged with criminal trespassing and disorderly conduct. He said the photos are a hobby.

Agus Budiman: on November 19, 2001, the Indonesian, age 31, living in Alexandria, Virginia, was indicted in U.S. District Court for identification fraud in helping Mohammed Belfas, an Indonesian friend from Germany, obtain a Virginia ID card on November 4, 2000. He attended the same Hamburg mosque as 9/11 hijacker leader Muhammad Atta but claimed that he had not seen him since coming to the United States in October 2000.

Finnish banking authorities said Belfas was a bin Laden contact. Authorities interviewed Budiman on September 19 and October 1. On October 30, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) arrested him for overstaying his visa and working while using a tourist visa. The FBI testified on November 26 that Ramzi Binalshibh, the reputed 20th hijacker, twice used Budiman’s U.S. address on his two visa applications; both tries failed.

Budiman’s first attorney withdrew because it was a terrorism case; Mark Thrash was his new attorney. At the November 29 hearing, prosecutors said that hijacker Ziad Samir Jarrah had listed Budiman’s address as a possible host site on his U.S. visa application. A prosecution witness said that Budiman had helped Atta moved into a Hamburg apartment and that he had had contact with hijacker Marwan Al-Shehhi. He pleaded guilty at his March 4, 2002, arraignment to aiding the unlawful production of ID documents. He agreed to not fight deportation proceedings. On May 11, 2002, he was sentenced to seven months of time served.

Tripimir Budrovic: alias used in a death threat letter sent in 1978 to Anthony Cikoja purporting to be from the commander of the operations of the Croatian Intelligence Service. The letter demanded that $5,000 be sent to a Paraguayan address. Cikoja was killed on September 28, 1978, in a drive-by shooting in Greenburgh, New York. A Westchester man was charged the next day.

Burgess: alias of George E. Wright.

Joyce Burgess: alias Tillerson. One of five Black Panther Party sympathizers who hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 841 heading for Miami, Florida, on July 31, 1972. In Miami a $1 million ransom was paid, and the hostages were freed, and the plane went on to Algiers the next day. The money was returned to Delta on August 23, 1972. Four of the hijackers, including Burgess, were arrested in Paris on May 28, 1976, for carrying false U.S. passports. They appealed to the French people to turn down a U.S. extradition request because they could not get a fair trial because of racial discrimination. The U.S. extradition request was turned down, and they were ordered to stand trial in France on hijacking charges.

David Burgert: alleged Project 7 militia member, age 50, indicted on May 8, 2004, for firearms conspiracy; three others were charged with plotting to kill Montana public officials. The group from the Kalispell, Montana, area had amassed machine guns, 30,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, night-vision equipment, and body armor.

Evan Burke: resident of Glen Cove, New York, charged on November 25, 1981, in a Nassau County court in New York with reckless endangerment and criminal mischief for firing a dozen shots into the Glen Cove residence of Oleg Troyanovsky, the U.S.S.R. UN ambassador. The Jewish Defense League (JDL) initially claimed credit, but later the JDL chief denied responsibility.

Steven Burke: one of four members of the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee who on January 25, 1985, expressed sympathy with the Red Guerrilla Resistance bombers of the U.S. Navy Yard officer's club in April 1981, said they were not involved, and refused to answer questions from a federal grand jury.

Nathaniel Burns: alias Sekou Odinga. Black Panther arrested on October 23, 1981, after a car chase. His accomplice, Mtajori Sandiata, was killed. On September 3, 1983, he was convicted of conspiracy and racketeering. On March 28, 1984, he was convicted of trying to murder police officers in the gun battle three days after the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck.

Richard F. Burton: Burton, age 37, from Seattle, was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an "eventual confrontation" with the U.S. government and the UN.

Julienne Eden Basic: U.S.-born wife of Zvonko Basic who joined him as one of the Croatian nationalists who hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 355 on September 10, 1976. She was sentenced to life in prison on May 5, 1977, but was paroled after eight years.

Zvonko Basic: Yugoslav-born New Yorker who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines (TWA) Flight 355 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués, or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their propaganda leaflets over London, Paris, Chicago, and Europe. They surrendered in Paris and were immediately extradited to the United States. The hijackers were accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. On May 5, 1977, Basic and his wife were sentenced to life. U.S. district court judge John R. Bartels said Basic could be paroled after 10 years.

On April 17, 1987, a dummy was found in Basic's cell at the Otisville Correctional Facility. He was arrested the next day at the Village News Stand in Milford, Pennsylvania.

Fakr ibn 'Abd al-Aziz Busura: variant Faker ben Abdelaziz Boussora; aliases Fakr Abdul Aziz Bosura, Boussoura, Abdulaziz, Fakeroun, Abu Yusif al-Tunisi, Fakerrou, Yusuf al-Tunisi, Faker Boussora. Canadian citizen born in Tunisia on March 22, 1964, who was sought in connection with possible terrorist activity in the United States. He is five feet seven inches tall and weighs circa 165 pounds.

Soliman Buthe: on February 17, 2005, a federal grand jury in Eugene, Oregon, indicted the Ashland, Oregon-based al Haramain Islamic Foundation and two officers—Soliman Buthe and Prouz Sedaghaty, also known as Pete Seda—for participating in a scheme to misstate the destination of $150,000 from an Egyptian donor. The money was to go to Muslim fighters in Chechnya. The group's Internal Revenue Service form said it went toward purchasing a building for a Springfield, Missouri, mosque. The Oregon branch and its larger organization, which was shut down by Saudi Arabia, were listed by the United States as terrorist groups. Buthe was represented by attorney Tom Nelson. In February 2004, the U.S. government ordered banks to freeze the organization's accounts.

Muhammed Butt: the FBI detained the Pakistani and turned him over to the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) for deportation on September 19, 2001, after interviewing him regarding the 9/11 attacks. On October 23, Butt died of a heart attack in the Hudson County Correctional Facility in Kearney, New Jersey.

Shaheen Butt: Pakistani owner of the Manhattan Foreign Exchange, a money remittance business in New York. He was one of the individuals swept up on March 20, 2003, when federal agents in the Operation Green Quest terrorist financing task force arrested nine people and executed nine search warrants. The FBI and Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement arrested four people and seized $71,000 in an investigation of the Exchange, which had illegally moved more than $33 million to Pakistan in three years. Much of the money came from the sale of faked U.S., U.K., Pakistani, and Canadian passports. An undercover federal agent claiming to be a drug money launderer told Butt that drugs were the source of $200,000 he was giving him. An aide of Butt told the agent that he could obtain a fake driver's license, photo ID card, immigration green card, and Social Security card for $21,000. Butt was charged with money laundering, immigration fraud, and other counts.

Jamal M. Buzayan: Davis, California, resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Samuel J. Byck: would-be hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 523 scheduled to fly from Baltimore-Washington International Airport to Atlanta, Georgia, on February 22, 1974. He shot and killed police officer George N. Ramsburg in the airport terminal, forced his way onto the plane, killed copilot Fred Jones, and wounded pilot Reese Lofton. An airport policeman fired a rifle through the door's glass porthole and hit Byck twice in the chest. Byck then shot himself in the head and died. A booby-trapped incendiary bomb he had carried with him was dismantled on the runway.

C

---

Albert Charles Cadon: hijacker of Pan American World Airways Flight 501 en route from Houston, Texas, to Guatemala City on August 9, 1961. He hijacked the plane to Cuba. The Cubans found him mentally incompetent and deported him to Mexico, where he was convicted of robbery and illegal possession of firearms. He served eight years and nine months. Following the incident, President Kennedy requested special antihijacking legislation.

William Cafée Jr.: alias Kalid. Indicted for wiping down the getaway car used in the assassination of Ali Akbar Tabatabai, former press attaché of the Shah's Iranian Embassy in the United States on July 22, 1980. Cafée was a member of the Islamic Guerrillas in America, a small organization with ties to Black American Muslims.

Dennis Callahan: alias used by an individual claiming to be a member of the South Boston Defense League, an anti-busing group, who claimed credit for setting off a bomb on an Eastern Air Lines Electra II Lockheed prop jet at Boston's Logan International Airport on July 2, 1976. The blast destroyed the $500,000 plane, and one person was injured. A courthouse built in 1805 sustained $100,000 damage in another Boston blast. A National Guard truck was destroyed in a third bombing in Boston.

Auburn Calloway: off-duty Federal Express pilot who on April 7, 1994, attacked the pilot, copilot, and engineer of Federal Express Flight 705 with two claw hammers, a knife, and a spear gun, critically injuring three people, including himself. He was charged under U.S. air piracy statutes. FedEx reported that he faced a disciplinary hearing that day for lying on his employment application. On March 30, 1995, a jury rejected his insanity defense and found him guilty.

Carlos Cancio Porcel: Aero Caribbean pilot who on December 29, 1992, diverted his Antonov-26 twin-engine turboprop to Miami, Florida, where his family was among the 48 people who requested asylum. He said he had been planning this for a year.

Everett Carlson: member of the Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit indicted on July 15, 1976, for setting off a bomb on an Eastern Air Lines Electra II Lockheed prop jet at Boston's Logan International Airport on July 2, 1976. The blast destroyed the $500,000 plane, and one person was injured. A courthouse built in 1805 sustained $100,000 damage in another Boston blast. A National Guard truck was destroyed in a third bombing in Boston. Carlson was also a member of the Fred Hampton Unit of the People's Forces. On October 8, he was sentenced in U.S. District Court to 10 years for transporting explosives.

Daniel B. Carre: would-be hijacker of Airwest RW 775 flying to Portland, Oregon, on June 30, 1972. He demanded $50,000 and a parachute but was apprehended at Portland. He was committed to a mental institution on July 5, 1972.

Owen Carron: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member who was a member of the British Parliament. He succeeded Bobby Sands, the IRA terrorist who died of a prison hunger strike. On January 21, 1982, he was stopped at Niagara Falls and charged with conspiracy to smuggle himself and with giving false information to immigration officers. He claimed he had immigrant status in Canada. He was trying to get to a New York City IRA fund-raising dinner. The U.S. Consulate in Belfast had denied him a visa.

E. H. Carter: alias used by the hijacker of South-east Airlines 101 diverted from Key West to Havana, Cuba, on June 29, 1968. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

Samuel Chahrour: Dearborn, Michigan, man who bought large quantities of cigarettes in a Hizballah fund-raising scam and was sentenced to two years in prison on February 27, 2003.

Bouabide Chamchi: alias Boudjemaa Ben Ali. Algerian, age 20, with a fake French passport arrested on December 19, 1999, by Vermont police after dogs found traces of possible explosives in his car. He was accompanied by Lucia Garofalo. The duo was attempting to cross illegally from Canada into Beecher Falls, Vermont, during the night. Canadian criminal records indicated an outstanding warrant for him for an August 18, 1999, assault charge in Quebec. On January 6, 2000, they were indicted by a federal grand jury in Burlington, Vermont, on charges of alien smuggling and misuse of a passport, but not with terrorist-related crimes. Chamchi had entered Canada as a stowaway on a ship in 1997. He claimed to be employed full-time but could not remember the name of the company.

Steven Vikash Chand: Chand was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Chand reportedly had plotted to take over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and behead prime minister Stephen Harper. He was a former Canadian Army reservist who hung around Stephen Leacock Institute high school grounds to encourage Muslim students to attend mosques. He was represented by defense attorney Gary Batasar. Chand was charged with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Ali Asad Chandia: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas by aiming to aid terrorists against the Indian government and conduct attacks against U.S. troops. On May 22, 2006, prosecutors charged Chandia, age 29, with training at a terrorist camp in late 2001 or early 2002 and helping Lashkar-i-Taiba by acquiring an electronic autopilot system and video equipment for use on model airplanes. Chandia was represented by attorney Marvin Miller, who said his client taught third grade at Dar al-Huda, a Muslim school in College Park, Maryland. Police found in Chandia's College Park home materials praising the 9/11 attacks. Chandia faced four counts of providing or conspiring to provide material support to Lashkar-i-Taiba and faced a possible 60 years in prison. On June 6, 2006, a federal jury convicted Chandia on three counts of providing material support to Lashkar-i-Taiba or conspiring to do so. He was acquitted of a fourth count of supporting terrorism. He faced 45 years in prison. U.S. District Judge Claude M. Hilton sentenced Chandia to 15 years on August 25, 2006. On January 23, 2008, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld the conviction but sent the case back to the lower court for resentencing because the earlier judge had "failed to make the factual findings" that are needed for a "terrorism enhancement" of a sentence. On April 25, 2008, he was resentenced to 15 years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Seifullah Chapman: one of 11 members of the “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Chapman was accused of instructing the others in combat tactics based on his U.S. military experience.

On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, including Chapman, who was represented by John K. Zwerling. The four defendants claimed that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. On March 4, 2004, Judge Brinkema found three guilty of conspiring to aid Lashkar and on weapons charges. Defense attorneys were considering an appeal. On June 15, 2004, Judge Brinkema imposed an 85-year sentence on Chapman. On July 29, 2005, she reduced the sentence to 65 years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Adil Charkaoui: Moroccan arrested by Montreal police on May 21, 2003, after being deemed a threat to national security. He had lived in the country since 1995 and reportedly had ties to Ahmed Ressay, an Algerian who lived in Montreal in the 1990s and was convicted in the United States in April 2001 of plotting to bomb Los Angeles International Airport during millennium celebrations. Canadian authorities sought federal court approval to deport him. He was held without formal charge on a security certificate for 21 months for having trained at an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan and then was freed on bond.

Charles: U.S. citizen, age 55, arrested in a Guatemala City hotel on November 17, 1988, on suspicion of being a U.S. terrorist wanted by Interpol and the FBI. Police said explosives were found in his possession. He was suspected of having planned to use them against public buildings in the capital. He had arrived 15 days earlier.

Jean Pierre Charrette: one of two Canadian hijackers of National Airlines Flight 91 to Miami, Florida, on May 5, 1969, that was diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, he and Alain Allard remained fugitives.

Erica Chase: white supremacist, age 22, who planned to bomb Jewish and black landmarks in Boston, Massachusetts, and Washington, D.C., to set off a “racial holy war.” She was charged with conspiracy, making counterfeit bills, obstruction, and firearms and explosives violations. On July 26, 2002, the jury found her guilty of plotting to blow up the landmarks.

Ricardo Chavez-Ortiz: would-be hijacker of Frontier Airlines Flight 91 en route from Albuquerque, New Mexico, to Tucson and Phoenix, Arizona, on April 13, 1972. He surrendered to the FBI. He had earlier been diagnosed as having paranoid schizoid tendencies. He was found sane and was sentenced to life for air piracy on July 24, 1972. The sentence was later reduced to 30 years and then further reduced to 20 years.

Chen Chi-Li: alias Duck. Planned the October 15, 1984, assassination of Henry Liu in Liu’s garage in Daly City, California. Liu was a prominent Chinese American journalist who had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist Party in Taiwan. Chen was a leader of the largest criminal operation in Taiwan, the Bamboo Gang. He escaped to Taiwan following the assassination but was arrested there on November 30, 1984. On February 4, 1985, the Taiwanese Justice Ministry filed preliminary charges against him. The trial began on April 2, 1985. He was found guilty on April 9 and sentenced to life in prison. On June 4, 1985, the Taiwanese Supreme Court upheld the conviction.

Winter Cherkovisian: bomber of the Turkish Consulate General in Los Angeles. On April 11, 1983, the Egyptian National Security Organization said that the Greek-Cypriot administration had issued 225 unused and sealed passports to the Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia. Cherkovisian had used one of the passports.

Darryl Cherney: one of two members of the radical Earth First! environmentalist group injured on May 24, 1990, when their bomb exploded in a white Subaru station wagon in California. The FBI was investigating their possible involvement with a pipe bomb that had exploded on May 10 outside a lumber mill in Cloverdale and with the explosion and sabotage in April of the Pacific Gas and Electric transmission lines in Santa Cruz County that had left thousands of residents without power. On July 17, prosecuting attorneys said that they would not press charges, even though they still believed that they were responsible for the bomb.

Larry Chezem: alleged Project 7 militia member, age 53, indicted on May 8, 2004, for firearms conspiracy; three others were charged with plotting to kill Montana public officials. The group from the Kalispell, Montana, area had amassed machine guns, 30,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, night-vision equipment, and body armor.

La Chiqui: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

James Choi: variant Choe Chung-hwa. South Korean-born Canadian citizen for whom the Royal Canadian Mounted Police issued a warrant on February 24, 1982. He fled Canada after word leaked of his participation in a North Korean-backed plot to assassinate South Korean president Chon Tu-hwan. Choi allegedly paid three Canadian men $68,000 to kill Chon, probably during his expected visit to Ottawa. He was charged with conspiracy to kill Chon, conspiracy to defraud, and illegal possession of funds in connection with the crime. He was the son of former South Korean ambassador to Malaysia Choe Hong-hui, former president of the International Tae Kwon Do Federation, who had made frequent trips to North Korea. James Choi, the former Korean Army general and Canada-based dissident, had a brother living in North Korea and met with North Korean president Kim Ill-song during a September 1980 visit to the country. He was last seen in June 1982 by Austrian police, who said that he was driven into Czechoslovakia from Vienna by North Koreans in a car bearing diplomatic license plates.

Irene Christakou: Greek American woman moving to Greece from Chicago who was detained on September 27, 1980, by Athens customs officials when they found in her suitcases 2 rifles, 4 revolvers, 10 pistols, 8,300 cartridges, a large stock of powder, 2 boxes of caps, 4 hunting rifles, and a book on how to assemble weapons.

Mario Leonel del Cid Garcia: his release was demanded during the March 6, 1970, kidnapping by five armed Revolutionary Armed Forces (FAR) members of U.S. Labor Attaché Sean M. Holly. He appeared at the Costa Rican Embassy on March 8 and flew with two other prisoners to Mexico City. He told Mexican newsmen that police had often moved him to different prisons while denying knowledge of his whereabouts.

Commander Cinco: alias of Antonio Jose Navarro Wolfe.

Paul Joseph Cini: Canadian self-styled Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member who hijacked an Air Canada DC8 flying from Calgary to Toronto on November 13, 1971. He used a shotgun to take over the plane and shot a hole in a partition. The passengers deplaned in Great Falls, where he was given $50,000 of the $1.5 million he had demanded. He wanted to go to Ireland. He attempted to jump from the plane with his money, but he confused a safety belt with a parachute strap and was knocked out by the pilot as the plane was flying over Calgary. He was charged with kidnapping and extortion and was sentenced to life on April 12, 1972.

Clarita: alias of Clara Aurora Beltran Gonzalez.

Daniel Clark: hijacker of a JDJ Flying Service Bell 47GS helicopter on July 11, 1973, who forced the pilot at gunpoint to fly to Wichita Falls, Texas. He was captured and convicted of air piracy and sentenced to 20 years or until discharged by the Federal Youth Correction Divisions.

Emmett Clark: one of three members of the anti-government Montana Freeman in Billings, Montana, sentenced by a federal judge on November 6, 1998. They had been accused of organizing an assault on the U.S. banking system, partly through the circulation of falsified financial instruments. The trio was arrested after an 81-day standoff in 1996. Clark was sentenced to time served plus three years under supervision after pleading guilty to threatening to kidnap and murder U.S. District Judge Jack Shanstrom of Billings and using the U.S. mail to send the threat.

Judith Clark: Weather Underground activist captured on October 20, 1981, when four terrorists attacked a Brink's truck outside a Rockland County, New York, bank, escaping with $1.6 million in a hail of shotgun and automatic weapons fire. Her car was stopped at a roadblock, and the terrorists fired on police, killing two. Three robbers escaped, but she was captured. She was a member of the May 19 Coalition and had served time for her participation in the 1969 Days of Rage in Chicago. On October 6, 1983, a Goshen, New York, court sentenced her to 75 years to life for robbery and murder. Judge David S. Ritter of Orange County Court said she would not be eligible for parole for 75 years. Before sentencing, the defendant read a statement denouncing the United States as imperialist and predicting the inevitability of revolution.

William L. Clark: would-be hijacker of a Pan American World Airways DC6B chartered by the U.S. military to fly soldiers from Da Nang, South Vietnam, to Hong Kong on February 9, 1968. He wanted to go to Hong Kong. He was overpowered by the flight crew. He was sentenced by a U.S. Marine Corps court-martial to 18 months' hard labor and a bad conduct discharge, plus additional sentences for crimes committed while in prison. His convictions were set aside on December 3, 1969, and he received a medical discharge for schizophrenia on September 2, 1970.

Conor Claxton: Claxton, age 27, was sentenced on September 27, 2000, by U.S. Federal Judge Wilkie Ferguson to 56 months for buying and shipping weapons in a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning operation. The weapons in the 1999 plot were to be disguised as toys, VCRs, and computers going from Florida to Northern Ireland via the U.S. mail.

Eugene R. Clegg: teacher from Castle Rock, Washington, who on September 23, 1982, was ordered held until October 1 pending an investigation into charges of gunrunning and illegal possession of explosives in Islamabad, Pakistan.

Jay Cohen: New York City-based member of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) arrested by the FBI on May 8, 1987, for a series of firebombings, a pipe bombing, and a tear gas attack. On August 13, 1987, Assistant U.S. Attorney Gregory O'Connell in Brooklyn said that he was responsible for the September 3, 1986, tear gas grenade attack by the JDL of a performance by the Soviet Moiseyev Dance Company that injured 26 people and the October 20, 1986, firebombing of the Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher concert hall in New York City where the Moscow State Orchestra was to perform. He pleaded guilty to charges of racketeering and bombings aimed at Soviet citizens. He faced 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine on several terrorist charges.

Stewart Cohen: one of seven members of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) indicted on May 13, 1971, for conspiracy to violate federal gun laws. On July 23, 1971, he was given a three-year suspended sentence and fined $500.

Steen Garrett Colbern: California biochemist and acquaintance of Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber, arrested on May 12, 1995, after he pulled a loaded revolver and scuffled with U.S. marshals in an Arizona mining town. Police raiding his residence seized 4 rifles, 3 handguns, and 16,000 rounds of ammunition, including 4,000 bullets used in assault rifles. Documents suggested that the residence was used to produce methamphetamine. He had ties to the Arizona Patriots militia group.

Donald L. Coleman: would-be hijacker of American Airlines Flight 47 commandeered out of Chicago and diverted to Salt Lake City, Utah, on December 26, 1971. He demanded $200,000. He was subdued by passengers and flight attendants. Personal effects and statements made following his arrest indicated that he wanted to prove that anyone could hijack an airliner. He was convicted on June 5, 1972, and sentenced to two 10-year concurrent terms on July 28, 1973, for air piracy and interference with flight crew members. He was released on 5 years of probation on September 16, 1974.

Marshall Collins III: hijacker of Eastern Airlines 1160 that arrived at Boston's Logan Airport on September 4, 1974. He demanded that $10,000 be paid to the people of Boston's Roxbury ghetto and that he be flown to La Guardia Airport. He released everyone on the plane except the pilot, whom he severely injured. He surrendered to police and FBI agents and was charged with air piracy.

Morris Colosky: hijacker who chartered a Hi-Lift helicopter to fly him to Lansing, Michigan, on June 6, 1975. He pulled a knife and forced the pilot to land inside the walls of Southern Michigan State Prison, where a waiting prisoner boarded. The helicopter landed six miles away. The two sprayed mace in the pilot's face and escaped in waiting vehicles. The convict was apprehended the next day. Colosky was captured on June 17, 1975. He was convicted of air piracy and sentenced to 20 years on November 20, 1975.

Joshua Thomas Connole: Connole, age 25, was arrested on September 12, 2003, at his Pomona, California, home in connection with the August 21, 2003, arson attack that destroyed 20 Hummer H2s and damaged another 20 and several Chevrolet Tahoe SUVs and destroyed the warehouse at Clippinger Chevrolet in West Covina, an eastern suburb of Los Angeles. Several vehicles had been sprayed with "ELF," "Fat, Lazy Americans," "Greedy Little Pig," and "I [heart sign] pollution." In three separate attacks at dealerships in neighboring Monrovia, Arcadia, and Duarte, dozens of other vehicles were painted with anti-pollution graffiti. The Earth Liberation Front (ELF) Web site said that although the attacks were "ELF actions," they had not heard from the perpetrators. No injuries were reported.

Nathaniel Conner: Connor, age 17, and a friend were charged on March 24, 2003, in Clayton, Missouri, with second-degree arson and criminal possession of a weapon in the two firebombings in March 2003 of the Hindu Temple of St. Louis.

Warren Cooksey: phoned a San Francisco, California, airline demanding money in exchange for information on a bomb that he claimed was on board a San Francisco-Hawaii flight on July 16, 1971. He was apprehended when he was about to receive the money.

Terrell P. Coon: Coon, age 46, of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania, was one of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI's $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Clarksburg Fire Department Lt. Rogers provided photos of the center's blueprints that were sold for $50,000 to an undercover agent who the militia members thought belonged to a Middle Eastern terrorist group. The FBI said group leader Floyd Raymond Looker collected the explosives. The arrests were made in West Virginia, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

Those arrested were Clarksburg Fire Department Lt. James R. Rogers, age 56, of Jan Lew, West Virginia; Floyd Raymond Looker, age 56, of Stonewood, West Virginia; chemical engineer Jack Arland Phillips, age 57, of Fairmont, West Virginia; Edward F. Moore, age 52, of Lavalette, West Virginia; James M. Johnson, age 48, of Maple Heights, Ohio; Terrell P. Coon, age 46, of Waynesburg, Pennsylvania; and Imam A. Lewis, age 26, of Cleveland, Ohio.

The FBI had learned about the plot 16 months earlier when a militia member became disenchanted with the bomb making. O. Marshall Richards had served as the group's intelligence and security leader and made more than 200 tapes of conversations by militia members.

On October 16, a federal judge in Cleveland ordered two men extradited to West Virginia. On October 17, federal magistrates ordered four of the men held without bond.

The seven men were indicted by a federal grand jury in Wheeling, West Virginia, on November 8. They were charged with conspiracy to manufacture explosives, to transport them across state lines, and to target the FBI center. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Raul Cordova Rojas: apprehended on June 22, 1983, by a Peruvian security guard when he tried to plant a bomb at U.S. ambassador Frank Ortiz's residence in Lima.

Edwin Cortes: one of four members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) arrested in late June 1983 in connection with a plot to bomb an Army Reserve center and a Marine training center on July 4, 1983. Authorities found arms and explosives. A U.S. district court judge in Chicago found the four guilty of conspiracy. On October 4, 1985, three of the defendants were sentenced to 35 years for seditious conspiracy. A fourth received a suspended sentence and 5 years' probation. The Chicago-born Cortes was one of seven FALN members who renounced violence in accepting President Clinton's offer of clemency in August 1999.

Luis Fernando da Costa: alleged to be a Brazilian arms smuggler and drug trafficker who was arrested in April 2001 in Barrancominas, the center of Molina's operations. On March 7, 2002, he was indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., on charges of conspiracy to import cocaine into the United States. The indictment was the first time the United States had brought charges against the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC). He was deported to Brazil to face murder and drug charges.

Julio Costas: one of 120 members of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

William Jensen Cottrell: second-year graduate student in physics, age 23, at the California Institute of Technology who on March 17, 2004, was indicted on nine counts of arson and conspiracy in connection with the August 21, 2003, firebombing and vandalizing of 125 SUVs at Clippinger Chevrolet in West Covina, an eastern suburb of Los Angeles. Several vehicles had been sprayed with "ELF," "Fat, Lazy Americans," "Greedy Little Pig," and "I [heart sign] pollution." In three separate attacks at dealerships in neighboring Monrovia, Arcadia, and Duarte, dozens of other vehicles were painted with antipollution graffiti. The Earth Liberation Front (ELF) Web site said that although the attacks were "ELF actions," they had not heard from the perpetrators. Cottrell pleaded not guilty. The trial was set for October 2004. On August 21, 2004, Cottrell was linked to one SUV dealership by DNA taken from a hair found at the scene.

Johnny Coulter: alias Ayre. U.S. Navy deserter who hijacked National Airlines Flight 424 on January 24, 1969, and diverted it to Cuba to avoid going to Vietnam. He remained at large as of 1979.

Francis P. Covey: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 344 bound for Newark, New Jersey, and diverted to Cuba on April 25, 1975. He claimed to have a bomb and gun. The pilot talked him into landing at Atlanta, Georgia, to refuel. Covey allowed all passengers and all but one crew member to leave, but everyone escaped. FBI agents arrested Covey, who was unarmed. On October 17, 1975, he was sentenced to five years for conveying malicious false information regarding destruction of aircraft.

Deborah Lynn Crawford: would-be hijacker of United Airlines Flight 509 bound for San Francisco, California, on May 15, 1975. Crawford said she had a knife and did not want to land in San Francisco. She was overpowered by a crew member and returned to a state hospital in California.

Joseph C. Crawford: hijacked Continental Airlines Flight 156 on July 26, 1969, and diverted it to Cuba. He returned via Canada on November 1, 1969. On September 14, 1970, he was sentenced to 50 years for aircraft piracy and kidnapping.

Barbara Curzi: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the preceding two years in and around New York City. He was arrested in the Cleveland area in November 1984.

D

---

Ghassan Dahduli: on September 22, 2001, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) arrested the Palestinian-born Jordanian citizen, age 41, a computer technician and father of five, in Richardson, a Dallas suburb. He was deported to Jordan on November 27. He said he had been friends in the 1980s with Wadih Hage, a bin Laden associate sentenced to life in prison in November 2001 for his role in the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Hage's address book included Dahduli's name. His lawyer feared he would be tortured in Jordan. He had been in the United States for 23 years and worked for Freddie Mac, the mortgage firm. Terrorism researcher Steven Emerson said that Dahduli and Hage were close friends and members of a Tucson Islamic center that raised funds for a bin Laden group. One of the center's members was Wa'el Hamza Jalaidan, logistics chief and one of three founders of al Qaeda. Dahduli was also a leader of the Illinois-based Islamic Association for Palestine, which many believed was a Hamas front.

Kassem Daher: Lebanese Canadian citizen believed to be overseas when he was indicted on November 22, 2005, in a criminal court in Miami in the Jose Padilla case. He had been under U.S. surveillance since 1995.

Redouane Dahmani: Algerian charged on November 27, 2001, by a federal grand jury in Phoenix, Arizona, with conspiring with his apartment mate, Lotfi Raissi, to falsify an asylum claim that would permit Dahmani to stay in the United States. Dahmani was in custody in Phoenix on charges of forgery and perjury, held in lieu of a $1 million bond, and was suspected of having contacts with a senior Algerian terrorist in London. Dahmani's phone number was found on a paper in the London home of Abu Doha (aliases The Doctor, Amar Makhulif), believed to be a senior Algerian terrorist in London with links to European al Qaeda terrorist cells. He was arrested at Heathrow Airport on charges of orchestrating a foiled plot to bomb Los Angeles International Airport on December 31, 1999.

Abdelmajid Dahoumane: Dahoumane, age 32 as of December 17, 1999, was an associate of Ahmed Ressam, who was arrested on the U.S.-Canada border on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives. On December 25, 1999, the FBI interviewed Horizon Air ticket agents; one of them had sold a ticket to a man meeting his description. He had a French passport and paid in Canadian currency for his ticket from Canada to the United States. Canadian police issued an arrest warrant accusing him of illegally possessing explosives with the intent to cause damage or injury. He had stayed with Ressam in a Vancouver hotel room that reeked of a rotten egg smell, consistent with the theory that they had been making nitroglycerin. He was indicted in January 2000 on charges of conspiracy to bring explosives into the United States. He apparently accompanied Ressam on the ferry to the United States in December 1999 but eluded capture. He was arrested in Algeria on December 7, 2000, and detained for a few months for questioning about his role in massacres carried out by the Algerian Armed Islamic Group. The United States had offered a $5 million reward for information leading to his arrest. Police raided his apartment but found no explosives. On March 27, 2001, he was rearrested in Algeria in connection with the New Year's bomb plot as he was returning from an Afghanistan al Qaeda camp where he was trained in the use of weapons and explosives.

Cheri Dalton: indicted by a Manhattan federal grand jury on November 18, 1982, for plotting a dozen crimes, including armored car holdups, attempted robberies, threats to murder federal informants, the 1979 prison escape of Joanne Chesimard, and the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck.

Imam Fawaz Damra: on January 13, 2004, this leader, age 41, of Ohio's largest mosque was arrested in Cleveland and charged with lying about his ties to "terrorist organizations that advocated the persecution of Jews and others by means of violent terrorist attacks" when he applied for U.S. citizenship in the early 1990s. He was accused of not telling the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) of his links to the Alkifah Refugee Center (or the Palestinian Islamic Jihad and its Islamic Committee for Palestine). He was secretly indicted in December 2003; charges were unsealed on January 13, when he pleaded not guilty and was released on $160,000 bail. He faced five years in jail, loss of citizenship, and deportation. Trial was set for February. He was represented by attorney Joseph McGinness.

Damra was born in the occupied Palestinian territories and co-founded the Alkifah Refugee Center in Brooklyn, New York, which recruited for the Afghan struggle against the Soviet occupation. The facility later was tied to Osama bin Laden when it was taken over by Sheikh Omar Abdul Rahman.

Damra was also linked to Sami Arian, the former computer sciences professor in Florida who was indicted in February 2003 for conspiracy to commit murder through Islamic jihad suicide attacks in Israel and the Palestinian territories. Damra was identified as "unindicted co-conspirator one" in the Arian indictment.

After the 9/11 attack, a television station ran a 10-year-old video of Damra in which he called for "directing all rifles at the first and last enemy of the Islamic nation and this is the sons of monkeys and pigs, the Jews."

On June 17, 2004, he was convicted in an Akron, Ohio, courtroom of lying about his connections to terrorist organizations when he applied for U.S. citizenship in 1994. On September 20, 2004, he was sentenced to two months in federal prison and four months of house arrest. U.S. District Judge James S. Gwin turned down the prosecution's request for the maximum five-year sentence, saying that the application offense was not a terrorism issue. He was convicted of hiding ties to U.S.-designated terrorist groups. On September 24, Judge Gwin revoked his U.S. citizenship. He could be deported after a federal court heard his appeal.

The conviction was upheld in March 2005. On November 25, 2005, federal authorities in Cleveland arrested him as they began his deportation process. On January 5, 2006, he agreed to leave the United States. He could resettle in the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Sudan, Egypt, or the Palestinian territories.

Ahmed Muhammed Ahmed Haza al Darbi: Saudi, age 32, charged on December 20, 2007, by Guantánamo war crimes tribunal prosecutors with conspiracy and providing material support for terrorism in plotting with al Qaeda. He was captured at an airport in Azerbaijan, turned over to U.S. forces, and initially held in Bagram. He was accused of training in and later teaching weapons at an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan in the late 1990s. He met bin Laden in Jalalabad, Afghanistan. The charge sheet said that in 2001 and 2002, he had traveled around the Middle East looking for boats, GPS devices, and a crew for a plot to use explosives-laden vessels to blow up a ship off the Yemeni coast or in the Strait of Hormuz. Prior to the formal charges, he had been held as an enemy combatant at Guantánamo since March 2003. He is the brother-in-law by marriage of 9/11 American Airlines Flight 77 hijacker Khalid al-Mihdhar. Darbi was represented by civilian attorney Wells Dixon of the Center for Constitutional Rights and court-appointed attorney Army Lt. Col. Bryan Broyles. He received a hearing at the war crimes court on April 9, 2008, and essentially fired Broyles. He faced life in prison if convicted. His next hearing was scheduled for May 21, 2008.

Ali Hussein Darwiche: one of 18 people charged on July 21, 2000, in an FBI affidavit with smuggling cigarettes out of North Carolina to raise money for Hizballah in Lebanon. FBI agents arrested most of the suspects in raids of houses and businesses in the Charlotte area. The FBI did not disclose how much money was raised. The 18 suspects were indicted on federal charges including immigration violations, weapons offenses, money laundering, and cigarette trafficking. Three suspects were believed to have provided Hizballah with material support or resources, such as night-vision devices, global positioning systems, digital photo equipment, and computers. None were accused of participation in terrorist attacks. The group had been buying cigarettes in North Carolina, which has a tax of 5 cents per pack, and selling them in Michigan, which has a tax of 75 cents per pack. The profits had been smuggled to Hizballah since 1996. Darwiche had transported more than $1 million to Lebanon, according to an FBI informant. On August 11, 2000, 17 of the 18 defendants, including Darwiche, pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to launder money, conspiracy to traffic in contraband cigarettes, and breaking federal immigration and naturalization laws. On February 27, 2003, the Darwiche cousins were sentenced to three-plus years in prison.

Mohammed Atef Darwiche: on March 11, 2002, he pleaded guilty to racketeering conspiracy in a Charlotte, North Carolina, court. He faced 20 years in prison for funneling profits from cigarette smuggling to Hizballah. On February 27, 2003, the Darwiche cousins were sentenced to three-plus years in prison. (See also Ali Hussein Darwiche.)

Major Burton Davenport: would-be hijacker of a Continental Airlines B707 flying from Portland to Seattle on April 11, 1972. He demanded $500,000 but did not specify a place for the plane to land. He was talked out of his attempt.

Trammel Davis: arrested on August 5, 1986, by the FBI in a raid on the South Side Chicago headquarters of the El Rukn street gang. The FBI found more than 30 weapons, including an M-72-series light antitank weapon. The FBI said the group had sought out Libyan government representatives in New York, Chicago, and Texas to offer to conduct terrorist attacks in the United States for $2 million. On October 31, 1986, Davis was indicted on federal weapons charges. He was found guilty in December 1987 and sentenced.

James Riley Day: alleged Project 7 militia member, age 60, who pleaded not guilty on May 8, 2004, to federal firearms charges and to plotting to kill Montana public officials. The trio from the Kalispell, Montana, area had amassed machine guns, 30,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, night-vision equipment, and body armor.

Mohammad Hassan Dbouk: alleged in an FBI affidavit to have received in Seattle in 1994 a series of forged checks from M. Harb, a Hizballah financier, and to have then used the money to buy night-vision goggles and other items for Hizballah. The FBI wrapped up the operation, which involved smuggling cigarettes out of North Carolina, on July 21, 2000.

Khalil Deek: Jordanian Palestinian with U.S. citizenship who was extradited to Amman from Pakistan on December 16, 1999, two days after his arrest at his home in Peshawar. He was incarcerated in Kafkafa Security Prison in Jordan's northern hills. He was one of 28 suspected terrorists linked to Osama bin Laden indicted on February 16, 2000. The FBI said a CD-ROM seized from his home contained bomb-making instructions. Deek told Newsweek that he had a joint bank account with Abu Zubaydah, bin Laden's chief executive officer. (Deek may be the same person as Khalil al-Deeq.)

Khalil al-Deeq: Dual U.S.–Jordanian citizen arrested on December 18, 1999, in Pakistan and sent to Jordan. He was believed to have controlled a group planning to conduct millennium attacks in Jordan. He had been a U.S. serviceman. He was convicted and jailed in the 1993 bombings in Jordan that were financed by Osama bin Laden and Mohammed Jamal Khalifah. (Al-Deeq may be the same person as Khalil Deek.)

Russell Defreitas: naturalized U.S. citizen from Guyana, age 63, who was arrested on June 2, 2007, at the Lindenwood Diner in Brooklyn, New York, in connection with a foiled terrorist plot to bomb aviation fuel tanks and the petroleum pipelines that supply JFK International Airport in New York City. He had retired after working for several years for a small airline company based at JFK and had surveilled the airport four times in January. He was linked to the Sunni-oriented Jamaat al Muslemeen (JAM), an extremist black Muslim group that held the prime minister of Trinidad and members of its Parliament hostage in 1990. The court appointed attorney Andrew Carter to represent him.

Bozo Delava: one of several people who assaulted Yugoslav consul general M. Bulajic and his wife at a New York City party on May 3, 1975.

George DeMeo: indicted on April 1, 1980, by a federal grand jury in Raleigh, North Carolina, for conspiring to export weapons illegally to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Joshua Stephen Demmit: pleaded guilty on October 2, 2004, to arson on behalf of ecoterrorist groups. Demmit, age 18, started a fire in July at an animal husbandry building at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, causing $30,000 in damage.

Kamal Derwish: alias Ahmed Hijazi. Naturalized U.S. citizen, age 29, believed to have recruited the Lackawanna Six would-be al Qaeda supporters. He was killed in a U.S. Hellfire missile strike in Yemen on November 3, 2002, in a car carrying a group of suspected al Qaeda terrorists. He was one of two unindicted co-conspirators in the Lackawanna case. (See also Sahim Alwan.)

Rafil Dhafir: Iraqi-born U.S. citizen, age 55, and oncologist in Fayetteville, New York, who was one of five men connected to the Islamic Assembly of North America (IANA), a Saudi charity that operates out of Ann Arbor, Michigan. They were indicted by federal authorities on February 26, 2003, in connection with two money-raising and distribution efforts. He was one of four Arab men living near Syracuse accused of conspiracy to evade U.S. sanctions against Iraq by raising $2.7 million for individuals in Baghdad through Help the Needy (an IANA affiliate). The funds were placed in New York banks and then laundered through an account at the Jordan Islamic Bank in Amman before they were distributed to people in Baghdad. The four were charged with conspiracy and violation of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which makes it illegal to send money to Iraq. Two of the men could face 265 years in prison and fines of more than $14 million. The other two faced five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Dhafir had immigrated to the United States from Iraq 32 years earlier and obtained U.S. citizenship. He is a member of the Salafist sect of Islam. His trial began in mid-October 2004. More than 85 federal agents had been involved in his arrest and the search of his home. He was charged with defrauding his charity, violating U.S. sanctions by sending millions of dollars to feed children and build mosques in Saddam-era Iraq, Medicare fraud, and tax evasion. He faced at least 10 years in prison and millions of dollars in fines. He was represented by attorney Deveraux L. Cannick.

Kashmir Singh Dhillon: one of five Sikh extremists arrested in Montreal, Quebec, Canada, on May 30, 1986, for planning to blow up Air India Flight 110, which leaves New York for New Delhi daily and includes a London stopover. On December 24, 1986, Dhillon was found guilty of conspiring to blow up an airplane and sentenced to life in prison.

Mourad Dhina: MIT-trained nuclear engineer and alleged Algerian international arms dealer who founded and directed the Algerian Islamic League (AIL). AIL was believed to be connected to Lucia Garofalo, a Canadian woman arrested on December 19, 1999, in Vermont and charged with smuggling an alien into the United States. He lived in Switzerland and was connected to groups sponsoring terrorist acts in Europe and Algeria.

Armajit Singh Dhindsa: one of four individuals who shot and wounded Malkiad Singh Sidhu, an Indian Punjab cabinet minister and member of the moderate Sikh Akali Dal party, on May 26, 1986, in Vancouver, Canada. He was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and charged with attempted murder.

Mohsen Dianatkah: one of 25 members of the People's Majority, an anti-Khomeini group, who seized the Iranian Interests Section in Washington, D.C., and held six Iranian employees hostage for an hour on August 7, 1981. They were put on probation and ordered to complete 25 hours of community service.

Joseph Dibee: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower. He remained at large.

Robert Dickens: on November 28, 1972, he pulled a knife when a flight attendant insisted he fasten his seat belt. The Frontier Airlines flight from Denver to Oklahoma City returned to Denver.

Douglas Alton Dickey: would-be hijacker to Cuba of Delta Airlines Flight 918 on March 19, 1969. An FBI agent among the passengers overpowered and arrested him. Charges were dismissed due to insanity, and he was transferred to Arizona State Institution on August 14.

Mohammed Dirie: Dirie, age 22, of Markham, Ontario, was named in the case in which 17 people were arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Dirie moved to Canada from Somalia. He was charged with importing three guns and 182 rounds of ammunition intended for use in terrorist activities. He was serving time in Kingston, Canada, for trying to smuggle weapons from the United States in August 2005. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Michael Vincent Diterlizzi: Montreal resident accused of attempting to assist Kristina Katherina Berster, a suspected West German terrorist, who was arrested on July 16, 1978, as she attempted to enter Vermont from Canada using a fake Iranian passport. On August 12, 1978, a Vermont court issued a 10-count indictment against Diterlizzi. On November 3, he pleaded guilty and received an 18-month suspended sentence.

John J. DiVivo: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 1320 as it was landing at Boston's Logan Airport on March 17, 1970. He told the pilot to fly until the plane ran out of gas. When the pilot banked the plane, DiVivo shot the copilot in the chest and the pilot in the arm. The pilot grabbed the pistol and shot DiVivo twice. The copilot died of his wounds. DiVivo was arraigned for murder in Suffolk Superior Court and committed for observation to Bridgewater State Mental Hospital, where on October 31, 1970, he committed suicide.

Vladimir Dizdar: one of three Croatian terrorists who forced their way into the Yugoslavian UN mission on June 14, 1977, wounding guard Radomir Medich. The terrorists eventually surrendered. On June 16, 1977, the United States charged them with conspiracy to kidnap Yugoslav ambassador Jaska Petric. New York State charged them with attempted murder. On October 12, 1977, they were found guilty of plotting to kidnap the ambassador. On November 17, 1977, Dizdar received four years.

Naim Djemal: Canadian who hijacked a Canadian Pacific Airlines flight and, holding a knife to the flight attendant's throat, demanded to go to Cyprus. The pilot persuaded him to surrender. On February 5, 1975, Djemal was sentenced to seven years.

Robert Dobbelaer: would-be hijacker who used a gun on December 20, 1972, to wound two security officials while trying to use a food truck to get to a BWI plane about to depart from the Pan American terminal in New York. He was overpowered by guards.

Abu Doha: aliases The Doctor, Amar Makhulif. Algerian, age 37, living in London who on July 15, 2001, was arrested and charged by the U.S. Attorney's Office in New York with being the mastermind of the Los Angeles International Airport millennium bomb plot of 2000. He had moved to London in 1999 after working as a senior official at an Afghan terrorist camp and was charged with organizing attacks on the United States. He was detained in the United Kingdom and fought extradition to the United States. He faced life in prison. On August 28, 2001, a Manhattan federal grand jury indicted him on eight counts, including conspiracy to commit terrorist acts and provide material support to terrorists, stemming from charges of serving as the link between Osama bin Laden and Ahmed Ressam, who had been arrested on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives across the Canada–U.S. border. He was charged with helping camp trainees in their attempt to bomb “an airport or other large facility” in the United States. Doha spoke to Ressam at the Khalden terrorist training camp in Afghanistan about a bombing in the United States. He offered Ressam “money or means of travel to Algeria” after completion of such a bombing. The agreement was sealed in a November 8, 1999, phone conversation, according to the indictment. He was one of three Europe-based organizers for the Egyptian Anathema and Exile and the Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat. On February 4, 2002, he was implicated by Yacine Akhnouche in a plot to bomb the Strasbourg cathedral. On May 10, 2002, U.K. judge Timothy Workman ruled that he could be extradited to the United States, which had agreed not to seek the death penalty. On June 29, 2008, British officials said they would be releasing him on bail per a court order.

Joseph Patrick Thomas Doherty: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) member convicted of murdering Capt. Herbert Richard Westmacott in a shootout with a British convoy on May 2, 1980, on Antrim Road in Belfast's Catholic New Lodge district. Doherty escaped from the maximum-security Crumlin Road prison on June 10, 1981, as he awaited the verdict in his murder trial. He was convicted in absentia two days later and sentenced to life in prison. He made his way to New York, where he worked as a construction laborer and later a bartender for 16 months. On June 18, 1983, Immigration and Naturalization Service and FBI agents arrested him at an Irish pub in lower Manhattan, New York, for unlawful entry into the United States and for having a false passport. Then followed almost nine years of court cases deciding whether Doherty should be returned to Ireland, sent to the United Kingdom, or given U.S. asylum. Even after Doherty requested to be returned to Ireland, the court battles continued.

On January 15, 1992, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that he was not entitled to a new hearing on his bid to avoid deportation, reversing the decision of a federal appeals court. He was deported on February 19, 1992, flew to Belfast, and was jailed. On August 3, 1992, the U.K. top official in Northern Ireland denied Doherty credit for the almost nine years he had served in the U.S. prison system while fighting extradition.

Bernardine Dohrn: former leader of the Weather Underground. On December 3, 1980, she surrendered at Chicago's Cook County Criminal Courts Building to plead innocent to aggravated battery and other charges growing out of her participation in the Days of Rage demonstrations in October 1969. On January 13, 1981, she was sentenced to three years' probation and fined $1,500. On May 19, 1982, she was sentenced to 18 months for refusing to cooperate with the grand jury investigation of the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck. She was freed by U.S. District Judge Gerard L. Goettel on January 5, 1983.

Dominguez: alias of Severiano Fuentes.

David W. Donovan: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 945 bound for San Juan, Puerto Rico, on September 22, 1970. The federal prisoner locked himself in a lavatory and threatened to burn the plane if he was not flown to a destination of his choice, which he never specified. His two escorting U.S. marshals overpowered him, and the plane flew on to San Juan. Federal charges against him were dropped in favor of unrelated state robbery and murder charges. He was sentenced to six years for robbery and life for murder.

Amir Al Dosari: Saudi, age 32, held by U.S. authorities as of November 2001 in connection with the 9/11 investigations.

Gouled Hassan Dourad: alias of Guleed Hassan Ahmed.

Khalid Al-Draibi: Saudi arrested the evening of September 11, 2001, circa 15 miles from Dulles International Airport while carrying Arabic flight manuals and fake ID cards. He was charged with falsely claiming to be a U.S. citizen. He ultimately pleaded guilty to visa fraud in November. Assistant U.S. Attorney John T. Morton told the judge that Al-Draibi was no longer suspected in the 9/11 attacks. On January 4, 2002, he was sentenced to four months for making false statements on his February 2001 tourist visa application. He was to be deported.

James Barrett Drake: on November 6, 1987, the Fort Lauderdale, Florida, resident claimed he was being chased by the Mafia and seized an Air Canada B767 at San Francisco International Airport. He held a fire ax to the pilot's head before surrendering. He was demanding to be flown to London or Dublin and to talk to the FBI.

Duck: alias of Chen Chi-Li.

Dana Dudley: one of three members of the anti-government Montana Freeman in Billings, Montana, sentenced by a federal judge on November 6, 1998. They were accused of organizing an assault on the U.S. banking system, partly through the circulation of falsified financial instruments. The trio had been arrested after an 81-day standoff in 1996. After pleading guilty to interstate transportation of stolen property, Dudley received a year and nine months, with credit for two years and three months already served. The extra six months served were to be applied toward a sentenced imposed in Colorado for other convictions.

Andrew Duggan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

Elizabeth Duke: at-large after escaping from Philadelphia in 1985, where she was charged with possessing explosives and illegal weapons. She was one of seven people indicted on May 11, 1988, by a federal grand jury for the November 7, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Capitol and other attacks. The five-count indictment said the group was engaging in “armed propaganda” for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty. (See also Dr. Alan Berkman.)

Dumar: alias of one of six Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) members charged with murder on April 30, 2002, in the United States in connection with the 1999 killings of three Americans working in Arauca, Colombia.

Amin Mohamed Durani: variant Durrani. Durani, age 19, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada’s antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. The alumnus hung around Stephen Leacock Institute high school grounds to encourage Muslim students to attend mosques. Durani was charged with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

E

---

Ziad Abu Eain: on October 13, 1981, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review a U.S. Court of Appeals decision that permitted Eain's extradition to Israel for the May 1979 bombing that killed 2 young boys and injured 36 civilians in Tiberias. The United States extradited him to Israel on December 12, 1981. On June 17, 1982, an Israeli tribunal convicted him of murder and sabotage. He was sentenced to life and given 45 days to appeal. On May 20, 1985, he and 1,149 other prisoners were released by Israel for three Israeli soldiers held by Ahmad Jibril's organization. He was flown to Libya for asylum. On August 1, 1985, he was held without charges in administrative detention in Israel for violating the conditions of his release when he established contact with other freed prisoners.

Christopher Egged: on January 26, 2005, Egged, age 37, flying on Southwest Airlines Flight 2161 from Philadelphia to West Palm Beach, Florida, made threatening comments about the government and tried to break into the cockpit. He punched a flight attendant and was subdued by the passengers, who bound him with duct tape. The plane landed safely, and the unemployed Philadelphia resident was taken into custody.

Steven Ehrlich: one of four members of the Jewish Defense League indicted by a New York court on August 19, 1976, on 11 charges, including the attempted bombing of the Iraqi UN mission on January 12, 1976, and the firing of four rifle shots at the Soviet residential complex in New York City on February 27, 1976. On December 16, four of the defendants were sentenced to prison terms of up to six years, and the fifth received a suspended sentence.

Ibrahim Husayn Eidarous: variant Ibrahim Hussein Abd-al-Hadi Eidarous. Senior Egyptian Islamic Jihad member, then age 42, who was arrested with Adel Meguid Abd-al-Bary, age 39, by London police on extradition warrants on July 11, 1999, at the request of the United States. They appeared in court on July 12, 1999, when Arvinder Sami of the Crown Prosecution Service said that their fingerprints appeared on originals of faxes that claimed credit for the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. One fax was received at a shop in London; another was sent after the bombings from a post office. The originals were found at the London offices of the Advice and Reform Council, believed to be an al Qaeda front. Chief Magistrate Graham Parkinson ordered them held for a week, pending receipt of more evidence from the United States. Gareth Peirce served as Eidarous's attorney, who claimed that he had been released on July 9 after being held by immigration authorities for 10 months. On May 2, 2000, the Bow Street Magistrate's Court ordered his extradition to the United States. Federal prosecutors in New York indicted him. The U.K. Law Lords approved extradition on December 17, 2001.

Ibrahim Hussein Abd-al-Hadi Eidarous: variant of Ibrahim Husayn Eidarous.

Mohammad R. Elaneizi: Milwaukee, Wisconsin, resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Basman Elashi: one of five executive brothers of Infocom, a computer firm in Richardson, Texas, indicted by a federal grand jury on December 18, 2002, for conspiracy to conceal financial transactions with Mousa Abu Marzook, a leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) and designated a terrorist by the U.S. government in 1995. Infocom is tied to its Richardson neighbor, the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF), America's largest Islamic charity and suspected Hamas financier. Infocom vice president and Elashi brother Ghassan Elashi chairs HLF. Marzook, deputy chief of the Political Bureau of Hamas, was deported in 1997 and lived in Jordan and then Syria. Agents determined that Infocom's sham investment repayment was illegal because the money was going to Marzook. The five brothers were also charged with selling computers and computer parts to Libya and Syria in the late 1990s with a Commerce Department export license. They tried to hide the exports by claiming that one export was going to Malta. (See also Shukri Abu Baker.)

Bayan Elashi: one of five executive brothers of Infocom, a computer firm in Richardson, Texas, indicted by a federal grand jury on December 18, 2002, for conspiracy to conceal financial transactions with Mousa Abu Marzook, a leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) and designated a terrorist by the U.S. government in 1995. (See also Shukri Abu Baker and Basman Elashi.)

Ghassan Elashi: one of five executive brothers of Infocom, a computer firm in Richardson, Texas, indicted by a federal grand jury on December 18, 2002, for conspiracy to conceal financial transactions with Mousa Abu Marzook, a leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) and designated a terrorist by the U.S. government in 1995.

Elashi was among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development, charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. On October 22, 2007, a Dallas jury split on charges against him, and the judge declared a mistrial. (See also Shukri Abu Baker and Basman Elashi.)

Hazim Elashi: one of five executive brothers of Infocom, a computer firm in Richardson, Texas, indicted by a federal grand jury on December 18, 2002, for conspiracy to conceal financial transactions with Mousa Abu Marzook, a leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) and designated a terrorist by the U.S. government in 1995. (See also Shukri Abu Baker and Basman Elashi.)

Ihsan Elashi: one of five executive brothers of Infocom, a computer firm in Richardson, Texas, indicted by a federal grand jury on December 18, 2002, for conspiracy to conceal financial transactions with Mousa Abu Marzook, a leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) and designated a terrorist by the U.S. government in 1995. (See also Shukri Abu Baker and Basman Elashi.)

Nadia Elashi: wife of Mousa Abu Marzook. She was indicted by a federal grand jury on December 18, 2002, for conspiracy to conceal financial transactions with her husband, a leader of the Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas) who was designated a terrorist and deported by the U.S. government in 1995. Infocom is tied to its Richardson neighbor, the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF), America's largest Islamic charity and suspected Hamas financier. Infocom vice president and Nadia Elashi's cousin Ghassan Elashi chairs HLF, which the government shut down in December 2001. Infocom provided Internet services to HLF.

The indictment charged Marzook, his wife Nadia Elashi, and her five male cousins who run Infocom with making an illegal transaction. Marzook gave Infocom $150,000 in 1992; his wife gave Infocom $100,000. Agents found that Infocom had agreed to repay the entire amount to Nadia Elashi, which the government said was a sham because the money was going to Marzook., deputy chief of the Political Bureau of Hamas. (See also Shukri Abu Baker and Basman Elashi.)

Salah H. Elbakkoush: one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Jaber A. Elbaneh: aliases Jaber A. Elbanelt, Jaben A. Elbanelt, Jabor Elbaneh, Abu Jubaer, Jubaer Elbaneh, Jubair, Jabir al-Banna, Jabr Ahmad Saleh al-Bannaa. Salesman and taxi driver born on September 9, 1966, in Yemen and wanted in connection with a federal criminal complaint unsealed on May 21, 2003, in Buffalo, in the Western District of New York. He was charged with providing material support to a terrorist organization and conspiring to provide material support, specifically to al Qaeda. He was involved in the Lackawanna Six case in which six Yemeni Americans were arrested on September 13–14, 2002. He was believed to have fled the United States. U.S. Rewards for Justice offered $5 million for his apprehension. He is five feet eight inches tall and weighs 200 pounds. His uncle is Mohammed Albanna, who was arrested on December 17, 2002, and charged with the unauthorized transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. He surrendered to Yemeni authorities in December 2003. Yemen did not respond to a U.S. request for extradition.

On February 3, 2006, 23 convicted al Qaeda members, including Elbaneh, broke out of a Sana'a prison by crawling through a 140-yard-long tunnel they had dug with outsider help. On February 23, 2006, he was added to the FBI's most-wanted list. On May 22, 2007, the FBI announced that he had surrendered.

He was convicted in absentia by a Yemeni court in 2006 and sentenced to 10 years for attacks on foreign oil workers. He was believed to have been released by the Yemeni government from prison in October 2007. He walked into a Sana'a courtroom with four bodyguards on February 23, 2008, and told the judge that he was living under the personal protection of Yemeni president Ali Abdullah Saleh. A Yemeni judge ordered his detention on May 18, 2008, a day after the Washington Post ran an article on Elbaneh. On June 3, 2008, he appeared briefly in a Sana'a appeals hearing to contest a 10-year sentence.

Ismael Selim Elbarasse: Annandale, Virginia, accountant from Gaza, age 57, who on August 20, 2004, was detained in connection with the indictment of Mousa Mohammed Abu Marzook and others in a Hamas money-laundering case. Police found a vacation video that showed details of the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, such as the cables and upper supports of the main span. He was held on a material witness warrant in connection with the Marzook case in Chicago. The Maryland Transportation Authority said that the family members gave different stories regarding which beach they were coming from when they were stopped near the bridge. His wife, Boushra, apparently tried to hide the camera as officers passed the SUV. A search of his home found bank records of Marzook, who maintained a joint account with Elbarasse. FBI officials said the family might have been scouting a potential terrorist target. In 1998, the naturalized U.S. citizen was jailed for eight months after refusing to testify before a New York federal grand jury in a terrorism case. The Chicago grand jury had named Elbarasse an unindicted co-conspirator. He was represented by attorney Stanley Cohen. Elba-rasse was freed on $1 million bond on August 30 after he, one of his sons, and a northern Virginia surgeon and a schoolteacher posted their homes to make bail.

Moustafa Ali Elbishy: alias of Mustafa Mohamed Fadhil.

Osama Elfarr: Egyptian aviation mechanic in St. Louis, age 30, held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in their 9/11 investigations.

Abad Elfgeeh: on May 11, 2004, Judge Charles Sifton in New York ruled that Elfgeeh had not understood the consequences of pleading guilty in October 2003 to charges of transferring tens of thousands of dollars to bank accounts in Yemen, Switzerland, Thailand, and China. Elfgeeh had acknowledged sending money to Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan al-Moayad, who had pleaded not guilty to funding terrorist groups. The Yemeni-born owner of a Brooklyn ice cream store was convicted in 2005 of operating an unlicensed money-transmitting business that appears to have sent $22 million to overseas bank accounts of al Qaeda and Hamas. On February 3, 2006, a federal judge in New York sentenced him to nearly 16 years in prison and fined him $1.25 million. The judge also ordered the seizure of more than $22 million in assets.

Ibrahim Elgabrowni: Egyptian-born cousin of Sayyid A. Nosair, who was acquitted of the 1990 murder of Jewish Defense League founder Rabbi Meir Kahane. Police arrested him on March 4, 1993, in connection with the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. He was charged with possessing five fraudulent passports and with obstruction of justice after hitting an FBI agent during the search. He put his hands into a urine-filled toilet to prevent any testing for explosives based on uric acid. Agents found a licensed handgun, 150 rounds of ammunition, 2 stun guns, and false Nicaraguan passports for Nosair, his wife, and three children in Elgabrowni's apartment. The Brooklyn, New York, contractor held an Iraqi passport. On July 14, 1993, he was indicted for conspiracy to blow up various targets, including the UN building; the federal indictment linked WTC and bomb conspiracy cases.

His apartment was listed as the residence on the New York State driver's license of truck bomb renter Mohammed A. Salameh. He was president of the Abu Bakr mosque in Brooklyn.

On October 1, 1995, the jury found him guilty of seditious conspiracy, assault of an agent and special deputy U.S. marshal, resistance during execution of a search warrant, possession of false ID documents, and possession of false passports. He agreed to seek detonators and conspired to help Sayyid Nosair escape from prison. He was acquitted of any direct role in the plot to bomb the city landmarks. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 57 years.

Tariq M. Elgassier: Los Gatos, California, resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Oded Ellner: one of five Israeli Jews arrested in New Jersey on September 11, 2001, after it was reported that they were celebrating while taking pictures of the collapsing World Trade Center. As of November 2001, he remained in custody.

Abdel-Ilah Elmardoudi: alias Abdella. Arrested on November 5, 2002, by authorities at a bus stop in Greensboro, North Carolina, on suspicion of being the leader of a "sleeper operational combat cell" centered in Detroit, Michigan. Elmdoudi, age 36, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, was believed to be from Morocco and had lived primarily in the Chicago area in recent years. He was transferred to Michigan to face federal terrorist charges on November 14. He was alleged to have provided direction for three others who sought to purchase weapons, obtain false ID documents, and identify security holes at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. A man with a similar name (Abdel-llah Elwardoudi) had been arrested more than a year earlier and charged with stealing telephone calling card numbers by peering over people's shoulders at the Minneapolis-St. Paul airport.

The foursome were members of Salafiyya and al-Takfir Wal Hijira, with ties to al Qaeda. They were planning "violent attacks against persons and buildings within the territory of Jordan, Turkey, and the U.S.," according to an August indictment. Karim Koubriti and Ahmed Hannan had been in federal custody since an FBI raid on their Dearborn, Michigan, apartment in September 2001. Farouk Ali Haimoud was arrested with them and released but was rearrested in April. A trial for Koubriti, Hannan, and Haimoud was scheduled for January 21, 2003.

On June 3, 2003, the jury convicted Elwardoudi of conspiring to provide material support or resources to Islamic terrorists and of fraudulently obtaining documents such as government visas. On September 1, 2004, the government asked the Detroit federal judge to dismiss the convictions, saying it had uncovered prosecutorial misconduct in not sharing exculpatory evidence with the defense. U.S. District Judge Gerald Rosen threw out the terrorism charges on September 2, 2004, but said Elwardoudi must stand trial again on charges of document fraud.

Mustafa Elnore: alias Mustafa Saif. Arrested on July 7, 1999, by federal agents who announced that Mary Jo White, U.S. Attorney for the Southern District in Manhattan, had filed a 10-count indictment against Elnore, age 39, for committing perjury during a grand jury investigation into the 1993 World Trade Center bombing and other terrorist activity in the United States. The New Jersey man faced up to five years in prison. He was tied to Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, El Sayyid Nosair, and Wadiah el-Hage, held in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Nairobi and Dar es Salaam. The indictment mentioned that a poster in a New York mosque advertising military training listed Elnore's name and phone number. The indictment said that Elnore, who worshipped at the Salaam Mosque on Kennedy Boulevard in New York City, had lied about his role in recruiting and training Muslims to undergo weapons training in Connecticut, Long Island, and upstate New York. It did not charge him with involvement in a specific terrorist act.

Samuel T. Eloud: gunman of Lebanese descent who lived in Henrico County, Virginia, and who on September 14, 1988, took over a military recruiting office near Richmond, Virginia, taking 11 hostages. He demanded that his goal of promoting peace in Lebanon be broadcast on local radio stations. He also wanted to get his family to the United States from Lebanon. He surrendered to police after five hours. He was born in Texas but had lived in Beirut for his first 18 years. Virginia charged him with 11 counts of abduction and 11 counts of felonious use of a firearm. The U.S. Attorney's Office was considering pressing federal charges. A preliminary hearing on the state charges was scheduled for October 26. He was scheduled to undergo a psychological evaluation at his lawyer's request. The FBI was investigating whether the incident was terrorist-related.

James Elshafay: arrested in New York on August 27, 2004, as a co-conspirator with Shahawar Matin Siraj in a plot to blow up the New York subway, the Herald Square subway station (which runs a block from Madison Square Garden, scene of the Republican National Convention), three police stations on Staten Island, a prison, the Verrazano Narrows Bridge, and two other subway stops at 42nd Street and at Lexington Avenue. They had no explosives and apparently were not affiliated with any terrorist group. However, they had expressed anti-U.S. sentiments, and one had made anti-Semitic comments. They had been under surveillance for a year. They were arraigned in a federal court on August 28, 2004, and charged with plotting to destroy the Herald Square subway station with explosives.

Elvira: alias of Berta Ramirez Galan.

Mohamad Kamal Elzahabi: Lebanese identified by the FBI before the 9/11 attacks as part of an al Qaeda sleeper cell. He had been in the United States since 1984 and had lived in New York and Boston. On June 25, 2004, the FBI charged that Elzahabi, age 41, lied about his 1990s activities, specifically about assisting Raed Hijazi by letting him use Elzahabi's address to get a driver's license and about sending field radios costing several hundred thousand dollars to Afghanistan. Elzahabi told the government that he was a combat sniper and Khalden training camp instructor in Afghanistan from 1988 to 1995. While in Afghanistan, he was in contact with Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, Khalid Sheik Mohammed, and Abu Zubaydah. He traveled to Lebanon and provided small-arms training to an antigovernment group. He went to Chechnya to join Ibn Khattab's mujaheddin. He returned to the United States in August 2001 and went to Minneapolis, Minnesota. Even after being identified as a terrorist suspect, he was able to obtain a hazardous materials hauler's license. He faced deportation because his green card was based on a 1988 bogus marriage.

Oliver Dean Emigh: one of three Texas men, age 63, arrested on July 1, 1998, by the FBI on charges of threatening via e-mail to use biological weapons against federal agents, including the directors of the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service, and of conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. The trio was arrested at a mobile home in Olmito, Texas, and held in the county jail. It was unclear whether the trio belonged to the separatist Republic of Texas group.

Commandant Emilio: defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash. Operation White Terror began 13 months prior to the arrests with meetings with undercover FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to the United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia (AUC), a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez and Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Norward Emmanuel: individual who on January 10, 1987, handed a note to a flight attendant on New York Air Flight 681, threatening to set off explosives or hijack the plane if he was not permitted to see Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan. He was a resident of a home for the mentally ill. He surrendered and was charged with threatening to set fire to a civil aircraft.

Felix and Nestor Encina Laguna: two brothers named by a trio arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia. The detainees said the brothers were behind the murders and the attacks on the Bolivian Congress and against former U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz. On July 3, 1989, La Paz's La Red Panamericana reported that the brothers were members of the Bolivian Socialist Falange and had worked at the Defense Ministry.

Henry Engler: National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) member arrested by Uruguayan security officials on March 29, 1973, and held for ordering the murder of USAID official Daniel Mitrone, who was kidnapped by the Tupamaros on July 31, 1970.

Elizam Escobar: Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) member arrested by Evanston, Illinois, police on April 4, 1980, and charged with a variety of local weapons, theft, and armed robbery charges.

Vinicio Estrella Ruiz: arrested in New York on May 17, 1972, while trying to sneak a sawed-off shotgun aboard a National Airlines plane bound for Miami.

Linda Sue Evans: arrested on May 11, 1985, by the FBI on charges of harboring Black Liberation Army member Marilyn Jean Buck, who had been indicted in the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck in which a guard and two police officers were killed. In May 1987, Evans was sentenced to 40 years for buying guns illegally in the New Orleans area in 1983. She was already serving a 5-year sentence for two other federal convictions.

Evans was one of seven people indicted on May 11, 1988, by a federal grand jury for the November 7, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Capitol and other attacks. The five-count indictment said the group was engaging in "armed propaganda" for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty. On September 7, 1990, she pleaded guilty in a Washington, D.C., federal court to participating in the conspiracy that planned and carried out the Capitol bombing and to the bombing itself. On January 20, 2001, President Clinton pardoned her from her 40-year sentence. (See also Dr. Alan Berkman.)

F

---

Mustafa Mohamed Fadhil: variant Mustafa Muhamad Fadil; aliases Moustafa Ali Elbishy, Mustafa Mohammed, Mustafa Fazul, Hussein, Hassan Ali, Abd Al Wakil Al Masri, Abu Anis, Abu Yussrr, Nu Man, Khalid, Abu Jihad, Abu Jihad al-Nubi. Indicted in New York on December 16, 1998, for involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for conspiring to kill U.S. nationals. The court listed 238 counts in the indictment against the Egyptian, age early twenties. He met with three other conspirators in a Dar es Salaam house in late July and the first week of August 1998 to plan the bombings. He rented the house where the Tanzania bomb was prepared. He transported the bomb to the embassy in a 1987 Nissan Atlas truck that he and his associate had bought a month earlier. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He holds Egyptian and Kenyan citizenship. He claims to have been born in Cairo on June 23, 1976. He is circa five feet four inches and weighs circa 130 pounds.

Jamal Ahmad al-Fadl: testified in February 2001 in the U.S. District Court of New York in the case of the bombings on August 7, 1998, of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He said that back in 1993, he had helped Osama bin Laden in his efforts to obtain uranium in Sudan. Bin Laden was willing to pay $1.5 million. Al-Fadl was a Sudanese Muslim defector from the group. He had been a U.S. informant since 1996, having joined al Qaeda in 1989 in Afghanistan but having defected when he was caught stealing money from bin Laden. He pleaded guilty to an unspecified charge and cooperated with the government under a plea agreement. He lived and studied in the United States in the mid-1980s and attended a Brooklyn mosque where he was recruited to fight in Afghanistan against the Soviets. In 1991, he managed bin Laden's businesses, purchasing a farm north of Khartoum and a salt flat near Port Sudan for $430,000.

Khalid Fadlalla: Sudanese employee of the Muslim World League, a Saudi-based charity suspected of terrorist financing. He was charged on July 25, 2005, after the group's Falls Church, Virginia, offices were raided by FBI and Homeland Security agents, who confiscated computers, photographs, and immigration documents.

Mohammed Abdel Halim Mohammed Fahim: identified by the FBI in 1995 as one of seven men with ties to Hamas and the Islamic group who helped plan the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing.

Hadi al-Faifi: Saudi arrested in Chicago and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Abu Faisal: al Qaeda leader detained by the U.S. military in Afghanistan in December 2001.

Fathi M. Faituri: Florida resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Thomas Falvey: arrested on June 19, 1981, in Queens, New York, by the FBI during the discovery of a major Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning ring. Undercover agents were offered $16,000 in cash for 42 automatic rifles and handguns. In late July 1981, he and two others appeared in court to face grand jury indictments charging them with receiving and possessing firearms not registered to them, possessing firearms on which the serial numbers had been obliterated, and planning to export the arms to the IRA in Ireland.

Hassan Faraj: Syrian-born doctor, age 39, arrested in June 2004. FBI Joint Terrorism Task Force members found shredded blueprints for the Capital Beltway overpass at his Washington, D.C., apartment. On November 5, prosecutors alleged that he also had tried to help a suspected al Qaeda associate, Amir Abdulrazzak, enter the United States. Federal Magistrate Judge Kiyo Matsumoto refused to revoke his $100,000 bail on an immigration charge. Faraj remained under house arrest. He was represented by attorney Stanley Cohen, who said the blueprints belonged to Faraj's brother, a professor of civil engineering who had taught at a D.C.-area university.

Faraj had earlier been charged with falsely obtaining U.S. citizenship in 1993 after his arrival from Bosnia by lying to immigration authorities about his medical experience and refugee status. Faraj had worked in Croatia for an al Qaeda front charity. His duties included running foreign recruits to camps in Bosnia, according to prosecutors.

Abdulrahman Farhane: New York bookstore owner, age 51, who on February 8, 2006, pleaded not guilty to providing support to al Qaeda. He was charged with agreeing to help transfer funds for terrorists to buy weapons.

Ali Abdul-Karim and Hassan Farhat: brothers arrested on January 20, 2004, in Dearborn, Michigan, and charged in Detroit in connection with a drug ring suspected of financing Hizballah.

Iman Faris: variant Ayman Faris; alias Mohammad Rauf. On June 19, 2003, Alexandria federal court papers were unsealed that indicated that on May 1, the Columbus, Ohio, trucker, a Kashmiri-born naturalized U.S. citizen, age 34, pleaded guilty to plotting to take down the Brooklyn Bridge and launch a simultaneous attack in Washington, D.C., to derail trains. Faris had met with bin Laden, Khalid Sheik Mohammed, and other senior al Qaeda officials in Afghanistan and Pakistan during the plot. He carried cash for al Qaeda, provided information about ultralight aircraft as getaway vehicles, and scouted equipment for sabotaging railroad tracks and cutting suspension bridge cables. He ordered 2,000 lightweight sleeping bags for al Qaeda, obtained extensions for six airline tickets for al Qaeda members traveling to Yemen, and delivered cash and cell phones to Khalid Sheik Mohammed, who later fingered him to police. After researching cutting torches to use against the Brooklyn Bridge, he determined the plan would not work and reported that "the weather is too hot." Faris faced a 20-year sentence and $500,000 fine after pleading guilty to conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists and providing material support for terrorism. As part of his plea agreement, he agreed to cooperate with ongoing federal investigations of al Qaeda. He was represented by attorney J. Frederick Sinclair.

Faris had entered the United States in 1994 on a student visa and obtained citizenship in 1999. He married Geneva Bowling when he worked at H&M Auto in Columbus, Ohio, and later divorced amicably in April 2000. Faris had a contact in the United States who sent coded messages for him to a senior al Qaeda member in Pakistan between April 2002 and March 2003. On July 24, 2003, U.S. District Judge Leonie M. Brinkema delayed sentencing after the defense requested a hearing to determine mental competence. Sentencing was rescheduled for September 26. On October 28, 2003, he was sentenced to 20 years in prison after Judge Brinkema rejected his attempt to withdraw his guilty plea. He claimed he had tried to fool the FBI and was gathering material for a book. On February 3, 2006, David B. Smith, his attorney, petitioned a judge to throw out the guilty plea, saying that he was eavesdropped on without warrant. Bush administration officials credited the National Security Agency spying program with the capture of Faris. His current attorney claimed that his previous defense attorney, J. Frederick Sinclair, had given ineffective counsel. On November 10, 2006, Judge Brinkema rejected Faris's motion, upholding the guilty plea. Her ruling was sealed.

'Abd al-Latif Ibrahim Fatayer: one of the four Palestine Liberation Front hijackers on October 7, 1985, of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro, which set sail from Genoa, Italy, on a 12-day Mediterranean excursion with planned stops at Naples, Syracuse, Alexandria, Port Said, and Ashdod, Israel. The hijackers took 116 passengers and 331 crew members as hostages. They killed Leon Klinghoffer, age 69, an American confined to a wheelchair, and dumped the body overboard. The hijacking ended in Egypt. The United States requested extradition from the Egyptians, but president Hosni Mubarak told reporters that the hijackers had left for an unknown destination. U.S. fighters forced the getaway plane to land and took the four hijackers into custody. The four hijackers were formally arrested by Italian authorities; the United States planned to request extradition. On October 17, 1985, after the Craxi government resigned, murder warrants were issued in Genoa against the four hijackers.

Fatayer's trial began on November 18, 1985, on charges of arms smuggling. He was found guilty and sentenced to 4 to 5 years. On June 18, 1986, his Genoa trial began for murder and kidnapping. On July 10, 1986, he was sentenced to 24 years. On May 24, 1987, a Genoa appeals court upheld the conviction.

Hassan Fathallah: identified by the FBI in 1995 as one of seven men with ties to Hamas and the Islamic group who helped plan the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing.

Arturo Espiritu Favis: Philippine-born American living in Sacramento, California, who was arrested on November 5, 1981, by Manila International Airport police after he arrived from San Francisco with 4 handguns, a shotgun, 3,000 bullets, 200 capsules of heroin, one-eighth kilo of powdered heroin, and a half-pound box of marijuana leaves. Police believed he was a Filipino dissident organization's courier.

Khalid al-Fawaz: indicted in the United States on conspiracy to bomb the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. The United States had requested extradition from the United Kingdom. On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his financial assets.

Khalid 'Abd-al-Rahman Hamad al-Fawwaz: the U.K.-based Saudi lieutenant of Osama bin Laden arrested by British authorities on September 23, 1998. The United States requested extradition of the civil engineer who headed bin Laden's Advice and Reform Committee. He was bin Laden's Kenya representative and issued orders to one of the cells involved in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy.

On September 27, 1998, London police rearrested Fawwaz with six other fundamentalists in Operation Challenge. London police said that the U.S. request for his deportation to the United States was for "conspiring with bin Laden and others against U.S. citizens during January 1993 through September 27, 1998." On September 8, 1999, Fawwaz's lawyer, Edward Fitzgerald, claimed that his client was regularly in touch with MI-5 before and after the attacks. The next day, a British magistrate ordered Fawwaz held for extradition to the United States on conspiracy charges. By May 2000, the United Kingdom had agreed to extradite him to the United States, and in late 2001, he had lost an appeal and was awaiting transport.

Tarek Mohamed Fayad: Egyptian arrested in Los Angeles, California, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Haroun Fazil: alias Abdallah Mohammed Fad-hul. Wanted by the FBI in connection with the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi on August 7, 1998. The explosives expert was a citizen of the Comoros who had been living in Sudan. On September 2, the FBI and Comoran police raided homes belonging to his wife and parents in Moroni, Comoros, but he eluded capture. Comoros agreed to extradite him to Kenya if he is found. Investigators believe the explosives for the bombs came from the Middle East and were shipped to the Comoros. From there, they went via small boat to a landing north of Dar and trucked to Nairobi and a truck repair plant. Police believe that he rented the villa outside Nairobi that was used to build the bomb, helped plan the assault, and then drove a white pickup truck that led the truck bomb to the embassy. He was charged with 12 counts of murder, 1 count of conspiracy to commit murder, and 1 count of conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. He would face the death penalty if convicted in the United States. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York.

Leo Felton: white supremacist, age 31, who planned to bomb Jewish and black landmarks in Boston, Massachusetts, and Washington, D.C., to set off a "racial holy war." He was charged with conspiracy, making counterfeit bills, obstruction, and firearms and explosives violations. On July 26, 2002, the jury found him guilty of plotting to blow up the landmarks.

Harry F. Fergerstrom: hijacker of Hawaiian Airlines 368 who forced it back to Honolulu on August 31, 1965. He was committed to a juvenile correctional facility and paroled on November 3, 1967.

Cecil Ferguson: indicted by a Manhattan, New York, federal grand jury on November 18, 1982, for plotting a dozen crimes, including armored car holdups, attempted robberies, threats to murder federal informants, the 1979 prison escape of Joanne Chesimard, and the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground hold up of a Brink's truck. On September 3, 1983, he was convicted of an accessory charge that carried up to 12 years in prison.

Bassam Ferkh: variants Bassam al-Fark, Basim Muhammad al-Firkh. Lebanese who bragged to his friends that he had killed U.S. ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr. on June 16, 1976, in Beirut, Lebanon. Canadian authorities deported him to Lebanon in June 1980. On October 17, 1981, Beirut authorities released him for lack of evidence. He was imprisoned on drug charges in March 1993. On July 21, 1994, a Lebanese criminal court dropped charges against him in the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) murder of Meloy, First Secretary Robert Waring, and a Lebanese driver. On March 13, 1996, the Lebanese Court of Cassation acquitted him. Ferkh was not charged with the actual killing but with escorting the hostages to a Palestinian center. The court said Ferkh did not have sufficient prior knowledge that the hostages were to be murdered. The court ruled that the act fell under the 1991 amnesty law and ordered the immediate release of the former PFLP member.

Robert Ferraro: indicted on April 1, 1980, by a federal grand jury in Raleigh, North Carolina, for conspiring to export weapons illegally to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Al Amin Khalifa Fhimah: variant of Lamen Khalifa Fhimah.

Lamen Khalifa Fhimah: variants Al Amin Khalifa Fhimah, al-Amin Khalifah Fahimah, al-Amin Khalifah Fuhaymah; alias Mr. Lamin. Libyan intelligence officer charged on November 14, 1991, by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., with 193 felony counts in the bombing of Pam Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on December 21, 1988, in which 270 people were killed. He was accused of planting and detonating the bomb and was believed to be in Libya. His cover for the Jamahirya Security Organization had been station manager for Libyan Arab Airlines at Malta's Luqa Airport. He stored plastic explosive at his airport office and helped make the bomb. He and al-Megrahi allegedly obtained Air Malta luggage tags to route the bomb-rigged suitcase as unaccompanied luggage on an Air Malta flight to Frankfurt. The suitcase was transferred to Pan American World Airways Flight 103A and, on arrival in London, put on Pan Am Flight 103, which blew up 38 minutes after departing for New York.

The U.S. indictment included 189 counts for killing the 189 U.S. citizens, plus conspiracy, putting a destructive device on a U.S. civil aircraft resulting in death, destroying a U.S. civil aircraft with an explosive device, and destroying a vehicle in foreign commerce. The United Kingdom issued a similar arrest warrant. The United States and United Kingdom twice demanded his extradition from Libya, which Mu'ammarr al-Qadhafi twice refused. On December 8, 1991, Libya announced it would try Fhimah and deliver the death penalty if he was found guilty. But the Libyan foreign minister said the government did not think he was guilty. The same was true of his accomplice Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi.

On April 5, 1999, Libya turned Fhimah and al-Megrahi over to UN officials. They were charged in English and Arabic with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, and violations of international aviation security laws. On May 3, 2000, the defendants pleaded not guilty. On January 31, 2001, the court found al-Megrahi guilty but acquitted Fhimah, who was flown to a hero's welcome in Libya.

Greg Curtis Fielden: named as an unindicted co-conspirator in the kidnapping and murder of U.S. vice-consul John S. Patterson in Hermosillo, Mexico, on March 22, 1974.

Alejandro Figueroa: arrested, charged, and acquitted in New York for conspiracy in the November 24, 1968, Pan American World Airways Flight 281 hijacking to Cuba.

Andres Figueroa Cordero: Puerto Rican nationalist held since 1954 for shooting members of the U.S. House of Representatives.

Hilvan Jude Finch: also known as Abdul Hamid. Held on $50,000 bond as one of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over the B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 36 to 108 years. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980. His sentence was reduced in 1980, and he was released in 1981 because he had been rehabilitated. Between 1981 and 1985, courtroom appeals and errors led to Finch's rearrest and release several times. On October 15, 1985, Washington, D.C., Superior Court Judge Nicholas Nunzio freed him for time served, saying his original sentence was "infected with errors."

Robert E. Fine: arrested with three other members of the Jewish Defense League on May 23, 1974, at the Lido Beach Jewish Center on Long Island while assembling bombs to be placed at the residence of the Soviet UN mission in Glen Cove, New York. They were held without bail on state and federal charges of conspiracy and bomb possession.

Christopher David Fisher: one of eight members of the Fourth Reich Skin Heads, a white supremacist group, who were arrested on July 15, 1993, for planning to spark a race war by blowing up the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in Los Angeles and assassinating Rodney King. The group had planned to place pipe bombs under pews, sneak into the church as transients, and then fire machine guns at the congregation. They had also intended to kill influential black leaders across the nation. The group was the militant arm of a 50-member group associated with the White Aryan Resistance and possibly linked with the Church of the Creator based in Niceville, Florida. Fisher, age 20, from Long Beach, was charged with conspiracy to manufacture pipe bombs and obtain weapons to use against parishioners. He faced 45 years.

Frederick B. Fisher: resident of Bellingham, Washington, age 61, who was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an “eventual confrontation” with the U.S. government and the UN.

Melvin Martin Fisher: would-be hijacker of American Airlines Flight 633 to Dallas, Texas, on July 12, 1972. He demanded $550,000 and a parachute. He surrendered and was sentenced to life in prison for air piracy on September 28, 1972.

Tasmin Rebecca Fitzgerald: one of two would-be hijackers to Cuba of National Airlines Flight 11 on February 3, 1969. She and her boyfriend surrendered and were sentenced to juvenile detention. They were paroled on December 7, 1970.

Christopher Floyd: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms.

On November 18, 1997, jurors acquitted Floyd, age 22, on an explosives possession charge. They said they were hopelessly deadlocked on a related conspiracy charge. U.S. District Judge Earl Carroll declared a mistrial on the conspiracy charge. Government attorneys were not certain whether they would retry him. Floyd was the only Viper who had not been sentenced to prison. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Ibrahim Al-Forahy: Saudi, age 32, held by U.S. authorities as of November 2001 in connection with 9/11 investigations.

John Ford: one of two men charged on June 13, 1996, with conspiracy to commit murder by seeking to assassinate Long Island Republican Party officials with radium. Ford, age 47, from Bellport, Long Island, apparently intended to kill Suffolk County GOP leader Jon Powell and others by spreading radium on the seat of his car or in his food. Police found five canisters of radium in Ford's home.

Patrice Lumumba Ford: one of six people from Portland, Oregon, indicted on October 4, 2002, by federal authorities for conspiracy to join al Qaeda and the Taliban to wage war against the United States in Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks. The indictment said that in late 2001, five of them—including Ford and Jeffrey Leon Battle—had tried to go through China, Bangladesh, or Indonesia to Afghanistan to fight American soldiers but had failed to enter Pakistan because of visa and financial problems.

Ford's father, Kent, had been a member of the Black Panthers and named his son after the first Congolese president. Patrice Lumumba Ford spoke Mandarin Chinese, graduated from a local high school in 1989, and enrolled in Portland State University, studying international relations with a focus on East Asia. Ford studied martial arts as a child. In the summer of 1998 and in September 1999, he was an international relations intern for Portland Mayor Vera Katz. He had also interned for the previous mayor, Bud Clark, in 1996. He had interned in the mayor's office of Kaohsiung, Portland's sister city in Taiwan. While there, he converted to Islam and met and married a Chinese woman. He taught physical education at the Islamic School of the Muslim Education Trust near Portland. In 2001, he sent threatening messages to members of the mayor's staff, who turned them over to police.

On October 16, 2003, in a plea bargain, Ford and Battle admitted in federal court in Portland to one count of conspiracy to levy war against the United States. The deal required each to serve 18 years in prison. The duo had faced life if convicted on 14 other counts. (See also Jeffrey Leon Battle.)

Amaldo Forlani: alias of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf.

Jeff Fort: leader of the El Rukn street gang whose Chicago, Illinois, headquarters was raided by the FBI on August 5, 1986. The FBI found more than 30 weapons, including an M-72-series light anti-tank weapon. The FBI said the group had sought out Libyan government representatives in New York, Chicago, and Texas to offer to conduct terrorist attacks in the United States for $2 million. Fort was found guilty on November 24, 1987, of federal weapons charges and sentenced to 80 years in prison and fined $266,000. He was to be eligible for parole in 25 years.

Michael Fortier: resident of Kingman, Arizona, who joined Timothy McVeigh in reconnoitering the Alfred Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City a few days before McVeigh truck-bombed it on April 19, 1995, killing 169 and wounding 500. Fortier had sold one gun, apparently stolen in a November 5, 1994, robbery from a Royal, Arkansas, gun dealer, that may have funded the Oklahoma bombing; the thief in that case stole $60,000 worth of property, including firearms, precious metals, and ammunition, some of which was recovered in the home of Terry Lynn Nichols.

By August 8, 1995, Fortier had reached a tentative deal to turn state's evidence in return for not being named a principal in the case and not facing a death penalty. On May 27, 1998, U.S. District Judge G. Thomas Van Bebber sentenced him to 12 years in prison and fined him $200,000 for illegal firearms trafficking, knowledge of the bombing, and lying to federal agents. He credited him for the 34 months already served. On June 30, 1999, the three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit ordered a lower court to resentence him based on more lenient guidelines. On October 8, 1999, a federal judge sentenced him to 12 years in prison for not warning authorities about the plot. The sentence was upheld on appeal. On January 20, 2006, he was released 2 years early for good behavior. The press reported that he was put into witness protection.

Kevin Foster: white leader, age 18, of the Lords of Chaos teen militia who, along with member Christopher Black, was charged on June 4, 1996, with conspiracy to commit murder by plotting to dress as Disney characters and kill black visitors to Walt Disney World in Orlando, Florida. They had planned to ambush Disney employees, steal their costumes, sneak into the park, and murder tourists. The duo was also charged with racketeering and arson against a historic Coca-Cola bottling plant. The two pleaded not guilty in May to first-degree murder in the April 30 death of Mark Schwebes, Riverdale High School band director in Florida.

J. Foxworth: alias used by the sender of 16 letter bombs mailed to U.S. and foreign corporations on June 14, 1976. The return address was from Fort Walton Road, somewhere in Connecticut. The FBI noted that more than 200 U.S. corporations had received extortion letters from a B.A. Fox over the preceding months.

Tyrone Anthony Frazier: U.S. mailman sentenced on May 27, 1981, to two years' probation after pleading guilty to taking a $500 bribe for the use of his van by Daoud Salahuddin, who assassinated Ali Akbar Tabatabai, former press attaché of the Shah's Iranian Embassy in the United States, on July 22, 1980. He said he was given $200 down and a promise of $300 later.

Lynnette “Squeaky” Fromme: member of the Manson family who attempted on September 5, 1975, to assassinate president Gerald Ford in Sacramento. Her gun jammed. She was sentenced to life in prison. In December, she escaped from the Alderson Federal Prison for Women in West Virginia and was recaptured.

Severiano Fuentes: alias Dominguez. One of two former Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) members who claimed responsibility for the January 2, 1991, shootout of a helicopter carrying U.S. military advisors and their subsequent murder on the ground in El Salvador. The duo voluntarily surrendered on March 17, 1992. Extradition to the United States was denied. On May 24, 1993, Fuentes was freed by judicial authorities after passage of a general amnesty law.

Virgil Lee Fugua: on May 25, 1972, he kidnapped Mrs. J. Roberts in Waco, Texas, and drove to Dallas airport, where he demanded a plane to leave the country. The Braniff airline refused. He surrendered to police.

Al-Amin Khalifah Fuhaymah: variant of Lamen Khalifa Fhimah.

Anton Funjek: would-be hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 274 bound for Atlanta, Georgia, on January 6, 1970. He wanted to go to Switzerland but was overpowered by the passengers and crew. On July 7, 1970, he was sentenced to 25 years for attempted aircraft piracy.

G

---

Adam Yahiye Gadahn: aliases Azzam the American, Azzam al-Amriki, Abu Suhayb al-Amriki, Abu Suhayb, Yihya Majadin Adams, Adam Pearlman, Yayah. American sought in connection with possible terrorist threats against the United States. He often surfaced in al Qaeda videotapes. He was born on September 1, 1978, in the United States. He is 5 feet 11 inches tall and weighs 190 pounds. He was indicted in the Central District of California for treason and material support to al Qaeda, providing aid, comfort, and services to the group. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $1 million for his capture or conviction. On May 25, 2004, the FBI asked the public's assistance in finding him, noting that there were reports that al Qaeda was planning a major attack for that summer. He attended al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan and translated documents between Arabic and English for the group. He was involved in the California non-profit Charity without Borders, whose leadership included Khalil Deek (alias Joseph Adams).

FBI Director Robert Mueller said in May 2004 that Gadahn was associated with Abu Zubaydah, a now-detained al Qaeda leader in Pakistan. On October 11, 2006, Gadahn was indicted for treason, becoming the first American charged with that offense in half a century. He could be sentenced to death if convicted of the rare charge, which has been used only 30 times in U.S. history. A federal grand jury in Santa Ana said he "gave al Qaeda aid and comfort . . . with intent to betray the United States," by being videoed calling for attacks against U.S. targets. He was also charged with providing material support to terrorists. The FBI added him to its Most Wanted Terrorists list.

Charles Gagnon: three Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) members were arrested by Canadian police on June 21, 1970, for planning to kidnap U.S. consul general Harrison W. Burgess to demand the release of 13 political prisoners, including Gagnon.

Faysal Galab: one of five U.S. citizens of Yemeni origin, age 26, arrested on September 13–14, 2002, who resided in Lackawanna, New York, and were identified as an al Qaeda-trained terrorist cell on American soil. In June 2001, they attended an al Qaeda al-Farooq training camp in Afghanistan and learned how to use assault rifles, handguns, and other weapons and left the camp before the 9/11 attacks. They were charged with providing, attempting to provide, and conspiring to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist group (al Qaeda).

On January 10, 2003, Galab pleaded guilty in the Western District of New York to a reduced charge of providing "funds and services" to bin Laden and al Qaeda by attending the training camp. The plea bargain included testifying against other defendants. Galab was sentenced to seven years. (See also Sahim Alwan.)

Martin Galvin: American Irish Republican Army (IRA) sympathizer whom Belfast police failed to arrest at a rally on August 12, 1984. The publicity director of the New York-based Irish Northern Aid Committee had been barred from entering Ulster. When police stormed the speaker's platform, a riot ensued.

Earl Gant: aliases Abd Rashid, Abd Jalil. U.S. citizen arrested on June 30, 1993, in connection with the arrests of eight foreign Islamists on June 24 by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. Gant was charged with conspiracy to transport explosives in interstate commerce knowing that they were to be used to “kill, injure and intimidate individuals.” He lived in Philadelphia, where he owned a fireworks stand and had converted to Islam four years earlier. He was freed on $250,000 bail on October 18, 1993. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Lucia Garofalo: Montreal resident, age 35, arrested on December 19, 1999, by Vermont police after dogs found traces of possible explosives in her car. She was accompanied by Bouabide Chamchi. The duo was attempting to cross illegally from Canada into Beecher Falls, Vermont, during the night. They were charged in U.S. District Court in Burlington, Vermont, on December 21, 1999, with conspiring to misuse a false French passport and various immigration offenses. She was charged with smuggling an alien into the United States. On December 23, 1999, federal prosecutors claimed she had connections to a militant Algerian Islamic group. She was carrying a cell phone registered to Brahim Mahdi, age 34, an Algerian man believed to be connected to the Algerian Islamic League, and was driving a car co-registered in his name. A phone number connected with her was called several times in January 1992 from a phone associated with a person under investigation for the theft and sale of dynamite stolen in Ontario. On January 6, 2000, she and Chamchi were indicted by a federal grand jury in Burlington, Vermont, on charges of alien smuggling and passport misuse but not for terrorist-related crimes. She was also indicted for having illegally driven three foreign nationals—Mustafa Roubici, John Doe (alias Ahmed Saen), and Chamchi—into the United States between December 6 and 16, 1999.

She was married to Yasim Racheq, an Algerian who was deported from Canada in 1993 after attempting to enter the country illegally using a false French passport. In 1999, he was living in Italy.

On January 12, 2000, prosecutors noted that phone records demonstrated that she had ties with Abdel Ghani and Ahmed Ressam.

On February 15, 2000, she pleaded guilty to two immigration charges of attempting to transport an alien into the United States and conspiracy to transport aliens. On May 18, 2000, she was sentenced to the 58 days she had already served for immigration violations.

John Garang de Mabior: head of Sudanese People's Liberation Army with an economics doctorate from Iowa State University. The group conducted several kidnappings of foreigners in 1984.

Andres Garcia: Aero Caribbean copilot who with the pilot and several passengers on December 29, 1992, diverted an Antonov-26 twin-engine turbo-prop from Cuba to Miami, Florida.

Joaquin Garcia: one of three hijackers of a Colombian Avianca DC3 flying from Barranquilla to Maganque, Colombia, on September 9, 1967, who diverted it to Cuba.

Ramon Garcia: hijacker of an Avianca Airlines B727 flying from Barranquilla to Cartagena, Colombia, that was diverted to Cuba on September 22, 1968.

Eileen Garfinkle: pleaded guilty on September 26, 1972, in a New York federal court to illegal possession of dynamite. Some had found its way to a Jewish Defense League bomb that failed to explode at the Soviet Union's Glen Cover, New York, estate on June 12, 1971.

William Alberto Garrote Garcia: arrested on March 30, 1990, with three other people in connection with the March 27, 1990, kidnapping of American Gerardo Robinson Davila near the Santa Paola neighborhood in the northern part of Cali, Colombia.

Mr. Garth: alias of Charles Schwandner and Steven Pera.

Milan Gasparini: one of three Slavs who had planned to hijack an American Trans-International Airways charter DC10 flying from Cleveland to Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, and divert it to South Africa or Rhodesia, where they would demand $1 million for the safe release of 340 Slovenian and northwest Croatian emigrants and 10 crew members on the plane on August 20, 1973. A fourth hijacker was supposed to join, but the group could not locate him. On the night before their attempt, the group broke into an arms depot and stole four machine guns, a revolver, and ammunition. The plan fell apart at Brnik Airport two hours before the plane was due to land when a local citizen noticed the machine gun-carrying trio acting suspiciously and warned local officials. After being spotted, two of them escaped into the woods but were captured two hours later. Gasparini, age 19, was a machinist at the ROB bicycle factory.

Sultan Ibrahim el Gawli: U.S. Customs agents in Jersey City announced his arrest on December 18, 1985, as the Egyptian was trying to smuggle 67.5 kilograms of explosives to a Palestine Liberation Organization member in Israel.

Pierre-Paul Geoffroy: sentenced to a life term in Canada for bombings by the Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ). Three FLQ members were arrested by Canadian police on June 21, 1970, for planning to kidnap U.S. consul general Harrison W. Burgess to demand the release of 13 political prisoners, including Geoffroy.

Heinrick von George: aliases Merlyn L. St. George, W. St. George. Would-be hijacker of Mohawk Flight 452 bound for New York City on January 26, 1972. He demanded $200,000, four parachutes, and a flight to Poughkeepsie, New York. He permitted the passengers to deplane in Purchase, New York, where the money was paid. He held a flight attendant hostage for seven hours. He was killed by an FBI agent as he and the stewardess entered a car.

Chelsea Dawn Gerlach: Gerlach, age 29, of Portland, Oregon, was one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front (ELF) and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower. On May 19, 2006, Oregon indicted four environmental extremists, including Gerlach, for the 1998 ELF firebombing at a Vail ski resort that led to $12 million in damages to a mountain lodge, two restaurants, and other buildings and ski lifts. Gerlach was in custody in Oregon. Gerlach and others had been named in an earlier Oregon indictment for conspiracy for similar attacks in Oregon, California, and Wyoming. The ELF attacked Vail because it was expanding into potential habitat of the endangered lynx.

Alexander Michael Gerol: Toronto man charged with conspiracy to kill South Korean president Chon Tu-hwan as part of a North Korean-backed plot in February 1982. He was also charged with conspiracy to defraud and with illegal possession of funds in connection with the crime. He reportedly had connections with a criminal organization engaged in narcotics trafficking, arms smuggling, and contract killings. On February 17, 1984, he admitted in a county court trial that he had plotted to kill Chon. He was tried for defrauding the North Koreans who hired him and pleaded guilty. A murder charge was dismissed because of the absence of defendant Choe Chung-hwa. He was sentenced to one year. As of 1984, he was serving a six-year term for bombing a Toronto disco.

Maulavi Abdul Ghaffar: after serving eight months in Guantánamo, he was released. He became the Taliban's regional commander in Uruzgan and Helmand provinces. He was killed in September 2004 by Afghan security forces.

Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani: Tanzanian, age 24, who on December 16, 1998, was indicted by the U.S. District Court in Manhattan on 238 counts in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, on August 7, 1998. He was charged with buying and transporting the bomb-laden truck to the U.S. Embassy in Dar es Salaam. The State Department announced a $5 million reward for his capture.

On July 25, 2004, Pakistan authorities arrested him in Islamabad and seized his laptops. Police also detained his wife and five other African or Pakistani al Qaeda suspects. The terrorists were picked up after a 10-hour shootout with 240 Punjab policemen and members of the Inter-Services Intelligence agency. His laptops held maps and messages from terrorists who had surveilled U.S. financial locations, leading to a terrorist threat warning in the United States on August 1.

Ghailani was suspected in efforts to finance al Qaeda via African diamond trading. He had traveled to Liberia in March 1999 to tour diamond fields controlled by the Liberian government and their contacts in the Revolutionary United Front in Sierra Leone.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 "high value" detainees, including Ghailani, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. On March 17, 2007, Ghailani told a U.S. military tribunal in Guantánamo that he had not realized he was part of a bombing plot when he purchased TNT for a friend, thinking it was "soap for washing horses," and expressed contrition. His friend told him that they were mining diamonds in Somalia. He admitted that he had trained in al Qaeda camps in Afghanistan in the late 1990s, after the bombing, and then prepared passports for the group.

On March 31, 2008, Pentagon prosecutors charged him with capital murder in the Tanzania bombing and sought the death penalty at the military commission at Guantánamo Bay.

Ghasoub Abrash Ghalyoun: alias Abu Musab. On July 16, 2002, Spanish interior minister Angel Acebes announced that the Syrian-born Ghalyoun was "directly implicated in the financial activities of the al Qaeda cell, which has already been dismantled." Ghalyoun shot extensive videotapes of the World Trade Center towers and other U.S. landmarks during a 1997 visit to the United States. Spanish police had seized the tapes in April 2002 and found scenes of the Brooklyn Bridge, the Statue of Liberty, a New York airport, the Sears Towers in Chicago, San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge, Disneyland, and Universal Studios in California. The statement noted that "the form and type of recording go beyond touristic curiosity as shown by two of the tapes, which are entirely of different angles from different distances of the twin towers in New York." Ghalyoun was detained at his Madrid home with two other Syrian al Qaeda suspects in early 2002 but later released. He was rearrested on July 16.

Mohammed Ghanem: Yemeni immigrant, age 21, from Hamtramck, Michigan, who was arrested on September 7, 2006, by Transportation Security Administration authorities at the Detroit Metropolitan Airport after they noticed that he had "artfully concealed" a knife in a book he was carrying. He had a one-way ticket to Yemen. His attorney said Ghanem did not know where the knife came from. He was scheduled for sentencing on January 16, 2007, for trying to take the knife onto the plane.

Ahmad Mustafa Ghany: Ghany, age 21, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Ghany was charged with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi: associate of Syrian arms trafficker Monzer al-Kassar. Arrested in Romania on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars' worth in small arms, ammunition, thousands of machine guns, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, and possible surface-to-air missiles to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels "to protect their cocaine trafficking business and to attack United States interests in Colombia." Along with al-Kassar, al-Ghazi was indicted on four counts of supplying material support to a foreign terrorist group; conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, officials, and employees; and conspiracy to acquire an antiaircraft missile.

Mourad Gherabli: Algerian, age 40 as of December 15, 1999, believed to be part of a ring of thieves who stole cell phones and computers and used them to finance Islamic terrorist groups around the world. Gherabli denied the charges by observing, "I like girls. I like cocaine. I have a big, big problem with the poker machines. So I steal. But I'm not a terrorist. I don't have enough money to send to anyone." Police believed that the theft money moved from Canada via France, Belgium, Italy, Kosovo, and Pakistan and on to Algeria. He was linked to Ahmed Ressay, who was arrested on the U.S.-Canada border on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives.

George Giffe Jr.: one of two armed hijackers of a Big Brothers, Inc., general aviation charter flight bound for Atlanta, Georgia, on October 4, 1971. The duo wanted to go to the Bahamas. An FBI agent shot out the plane's tires, so Giffe killed his wife, the pilot, and himself.

David Gilbert: Weather Underground member charged on October 30, 1981, with murder and robbery in the October 20, 1981, holdup of a Brink's truck. He was also linked to the June 1981 Brink's truck robbery in the Bronx in which $300,000 was taken and a guard was killed. On October 6, 1983, a Goshen, New York, court sentenced him to 75 years to life. Judge David S.

Ritter of Orange County Court said he would not be eligible for parole for 75 years. Before sentencing, the defendant read a statement denouncing the United States as imperialist and predicting the inevitability of revolution.

Ranjit Singh Gill: Sikh arrested by the FBI at a gas station in Aberdeen, New Jersey, on May 11, 1987, in connection with the August 10, 1986, assassination in Pune, India, of Gen. A. S. Vaidya, retired commander of the Indian Army. He was wanted by the Indian government on conspiracy charges regarding the murder.

Sukhdial Singh Gill: one of four individuals who shot and wounded Malkiad Singh Sidhu, an Indian Punjab cabinet minister and member of the moderate Sikh Akali Dal Party, on May 26, 1986, in Vancouver, Canada. Gill was arrested by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and charged with attempted murder.

Ezra S. Gindi: arrested with three other members of the Jewish Defense League on May 23, 1974, at the Lido Beach Jewish Center on Long Island while assembling bombs to be placed at the residence of the Soviet UN mission in Glen Cove, New York. They were held on state and federal charges of conspiracy and bomb possession.

Lawrence Gladstone: one of two men who held 16 people hostage for eight hours before giving themselves up in New York State. He had earlier been convicted of gunrunning for the Irish Republican Army.

James Kenneth Gluck: arrested by the FBI on November 5, 1999, for threatening Colorado judges. Police found materials to make ricin. Gluck, age 53, of Tampa, Florida, had sent a 10-page note to a Colorado Court of Appeals judge in which he threatened to wage biological warfare on Colorado's Jefferson County justice center. He had mentioned one judge by name and referred to the possible use of ricin.

Yahya Goba: one of five U.S. citizens of Yemeni origin, age 25, arrested on September 13–14, 2002, who resided in Lackawanna, New York, and were identified as an al Qaeda–trained terrorist cell on American soil. In June 2001, they attended the al Qaeda al-Farooq training camp in Afghanistan and learned how to use assault rifles, handguns, and other weapons; they left the camp before the 9/11 attacks. They were charged with providing, attempting to provide, and conspiring to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist group (al Qaeda). Goba had an audiotape that called for jihad and martyrdom.

On March 25, 2003, Goba pleaded guilty, saying he had attended the al Qaeda training camp and allowed a terrorist recruiter to stay in his home through 9/11/01. He pleaded guilty to one count of providing material support to bin Laden and al Qaeda. On December 10, Goba was sentenced to 10 years. On December 14, 2007, a federal judge reduced Goba's sentence by a year because he had testified in several cases, thereby exceeding his plea agreement obligations. (See also Sahim Alwan.)

Kristi Goldstein: the spouse of Robert J. Goldstein, she was charged on October 24, 2002, with being an accomplice because she knew about his plans to destroy Islamic centers in Florida. She turned state's evidence in a plea bargain on February 24, 2003.

Robert J. Goldstein: podiatrist, age 37, from St. Petersburg, Florida, who on August 23, 2002, was charged with possession of a nonregistered destructive device and attempting to use an explosive to damage and destroy Islamic centers. Police searching his suburban home found 40 weapons; 30 explosive devices, including a 5-gallon gasoline bomb with a timer attached; a list of 50 Islamic mosques in Florida; and detailed plans to bomb an Islamic education center. He was detained when his mother phoned police. On February 24, 2003, his wife turned state's evidence in a plea bargain. On April 3, 2003, Goldstein pleaded guilty to plotting the bomb attack and received 12 years in prison.

David Gonzalez: arrested, charged, and acquitted in New York of conspiracy to hijack Pan American World Airways Flight 281, diverted to Havana on November 24, 1968.

Fred Gonzalez: inmate serving four years for robbery who escaped from Arkansas Valley Correctional Facility in Ordway, Colorado, on August 18, 1989. His wife and another inmate's wife chartered a helicopter and forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the prison baseball field. They were spotted in a getaway U-Haul truck and recaptured nine hours later after a shootout in Phelps County, Nebraska. On August 21, 1989, the couples were charged with attempted murder, with using a firearm to commit a felony, and with criminal attempt.

Patricia Gonzalez: one of two women who chartered a helicopter and forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the baseball field of the Arkansas Valley Correctional Facility in Ordway, Colorado. There they freed their husbands, Fred Gonzalez and Ralph Brown. They were spotted in a getaway U-Haul truck and all were captured nine hours later after a shootout in Phelps County, Nebraska. She had met her inmate husband while working as a prison volunteer and married him by proxy. On August 21, 1989, the couples were charged with attempted murder, with using a firearm to commit a felony, and with criminal attempt.

Ellen Good: variant Ellen Codd. U.S. citizen from New York and one of six people arrested on April 23, 1987, in Turin, Imperia, and Rome on suspicion of involvement in the assassination of Gen. Licio Giorgieri on March 20, 1987. She was believed to be a member of the Red Brigades. Italian police said she was the first U.S. citizen to be implicated in a probe of European terrorism and might have contacts with French and West German groups that she had furnished with information on NATO installations and activities in Italy. The six were charged with subversion, forming an armed group, and complicity in Giorgieri's murder.

Francis M. Goodell: hijacker of Pacific Southwest Flight 389 bound for Sacramento, California, on July 6, 1972. He used two pistols to force the pilot to land in San Diego, where he freed the passengers and was given $455,000 and a parachute. He said the money was for Middle Eastern organizations. He surrendered to the FBI. On January 17, 1973, he was convicted of aircraft piracy and committing a felony with a firearm and was sentenced to 30 years.

Alan Harry Goodman: Jewish immigrant to Israel from Baltimore, Maryland, who on April 11, 1982, while wearing an Israeli Army uniform, burst into the Dome of the Rock Mosque in Jerusalem and fired his M-16 assault rifle at random, killing 2 and wounding at least 9 persons. Another 30 people were wounded in three hours of rioting by protesting Palestinians. Goodman had immigrated to Israel two years earlier. He was initially stopped before the attack by an Israeli and an Arab policeman, whom he shot and wounded. He was captured 30 minutes later, after his ammunition ran out. The Jewish Defense League denied association but said it would provide an attorney. On September 8, 1982, he pleaded insanity; psychiatrists said he lived in a fantasy world. The court rejected the insanity defense. On April 7, 1983, Goodman was sentenced to life plus 40 years. On October 29, 1997, an Israeli parole board freed him. The Israeli Attorney General's Office had opposed the release. Goodman was deported to Baltimore.

Philip John Goodman: suspected Jewish Defense League member convicted of two felony charges related to the attempted bombing of the Heron Travel and Tourist office in Los Angeles on April 5, 1975.

Musftas S. Gorgum: one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Chisthi Goulam: Pakistani detained in the United States for carrying false documents. He told visiting Italian investigators in June 2002 of a plan to set off a bomb in St. Peter's Basilica. The plan was called off in July 2001.

Gerald Grant: alias of Garland J. Grant.

Lolita K. Graves: one of a family group that hijacked National Airlines Flight 36 bound for Miami, Florida, on January 3, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. On March 22, 1976, she received five years for smuggling.

John Gray: Seattle-based hijacker of a Pacific Southwest Airlines flight on October 30, 1979, that was diverted to Tijuana, Mexico, where he surrendered while the plane was refueling.

Jack Abbott Grebe Jr.: one of three Texas men, age 43, arrested on July 1, 1998, by the FBI on charges of threatening via e-mail to use biological weapons against federal agents, including the directors of the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service, and conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. The men were arrested at a mobile home in Olmito, five miles south of Brownsville, and were held in the Cameron County Jail. They were ordered held in custody on July 2 by U.S. Magistrate John Black, who refused to release them on bond. It was unclear whether the trio belonged to the separatist Republic of Texas group.

Ronald A. Grecula: on May 23, 2005, Houston, Texas, authorities charged the Bangor, Maine, man, age 68, with attempting to sell a bomb to undercover agents he thought were Russian mafia members with al Qaeda ties. He was indicted on June 16, 2005.

C. Green: alias of Lorenzo Edward Ervin Jr.

Michael S. Green: one of two would-be hijackers of National Airlines Flight 496 bound for New York City on July 12, 1972. The two used a pistol and a sawed-off shotgun to force the pilot to return to Philadelphia, where they demanded $600,000 and three parachutes. They released the passengers. National paid $501,600. The plane flew on to Lake Jackson, Texas, where the pilots swerved the plane, blowing the tires. The pair surrendered. Green was convicted of air piracy on June 19, 1973, and sentenced to 50 years.

Harold Wendell Greene: delivered two cases of explosives to Jordanian-born Abdul-Hafiz Mohammed Nassar in September 1981 in Phoenix, Arizona. He was named as an unindicted co-conspirator in Nassar's September 1982 trial.

William Herbert Greene III: would-be hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 952 bound for Chicago, Illinois, on April 17, 1972. He demanded to be flown to the Bahamas and be given $500,000. He was persuaded to fly to Chicago and let the passengers deplane. He was convicted of air piracy and sentenced to 20 years on September 25, 1972.

Charles Edward Gresham Jr.: Elliott City, Maryland, resident arrested on February 9, 1991, in connection with the February 4, 1991, discovery of bombs attached to a 1-million-gallon methanol tank and another tank that would have emitted poisonous fumes if breached. The tank farm is five miles from Norfolk Naval Base, the world's largest naval base. On May 9, 1991, he pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Norfolk to conspiracy, making an illegal bomb, and attempting to bomb a facility used in interstate commerce. He faced up to 25 years and a $750,000 fine.

Barry Francis Gribbon: U.S. Army veteran of Vietnam who also served in the Rhodesian civil war and lived in Miami, Florida. On November 15, 1981, he was participating in an abortive coup against the Seychelles government when he and 44 other mercenaries took over an Air India B707 that had landed after taking off from Bombay, India. The hijackers initially wanted to go to Oman or Switzerland but settled for South Africa, where they surrendered after six hours of negotiations. He was released unconditionally. However, after Western pressure, the South African government rearrested him for hijacking on January 25, 1982. On July 29, 1982, Judge Neville James, calling Gribbon "basically decent," sentenced him to five years with all but six months suspended.

Patricia Helen Gros: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the last two years in and around New York City. She was arrested in the Cleveland area in November 1984.

Alexander P. Grosser: attempted to hijack Air New England's Flight XQ911 out of Hyannis, Massachusetts, on March 2, 1975, and demanded to go to New Haven, Connecticut. Police overpowered him. He was convicted on April 9, 1976, for carrying a weapon aboard a plane.

Lenin Guardia: Chilean sentenced in September 2002 by a Chilean judge to 10 years and 300 days for sending a letter bomb to the U.S. Embassy in Chile that arrived on September 27, 2001, and another to a prominent Chilean attorney. He was the ringleader, wanting to create fear to generate business for his security consulting firm. He was charged with obstruction of justice and possession of illegal weapons.

Mario Guillen Garcia: Costa Rican member of the People's Vanguard, a Costa Rican group, and one of several members of the Carlos Aguero Echeverria Command who fired a bazooka at a van carrying U.S. Marine Guards to the U.S. Embassy in San Jose on March 17, 1981, injuring three Marines and two Costa Ricans. On April 29, 1981, police announced that he had confessed to the attack.

Edward P. Gullion: member of the Sam Melville–Jonathan Jackson Unit who was indicted on July 15, 1976, for setting off a bomb on an Eastern Air Lines Electra II Lockheed prop jet at Boston's Logan International Airport on July 2, 1976. The blast destroyed the $500,000 plane, and one person was injured. A courthouse built in 1805 sustained $100,000 damage in another Boston blast. A National Guard truck was destroyed in a third bombing in Boston. He was also a member of the Fred Hampton Unit of the People's Forces. He was additionally wanted in the attempted kidnapping of Polaroid Corporation president William J. McCune on August 12, 1976, outside a company plant in Waltham, Massachusetts.

H

---

Mahmud Haballah: arrested in Canada on August 29, 2001, for involvement with the al Qaeda bombing of U.S. embassies.

James Lester Hackford: one of four Weather Underground terrorists who attacked a Brink's truck outside a Rockland County, New York, bank, escaping with $1.6 million in a hail of shotgun and automatic weapons fire on October 20, 1981. Their car was stopped at a roadblock, and the terrorists fired on police, killing two. Hackford escaped.

Josie Hadas: variant Gushia Hadas. Jersey City woman linked to Mohammed A. Salameh who left her telephone number on the rental slip of the truck used in the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. Police found in her apartment a letter to Salameh, tools and wiring, and manuals concerning antenna, circuitry, and electromagnetic devices. A bomb-sniffing dog reacted to a closet space.

Heshem Mohamed Hadayet: Egyptian-born limousine driver, age 41, who on July 4, 2002, shot to death two people and wounded four others at the El Al ticket counter at Los Angeles International Airport. He stabbed an El Al security guard, who in turn shot the killer to death. On May 12, 2003, the Department of Justice said that the attack was an act of terrorism, although Hadayet acted alone and did not have any terrorist organization affiliation. FBI spokesperson Matthew McLaughlin said, "The investigation developed information that he openly supported the killings of civilians in order to advance the Palestinian cause."

Naji Oweida Haddad: alias of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf.

Rabih Haddad: on December 14, 2001, the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) detained Haddad, age 41, who served on the board of a group suspected of funding terrorism. Federal agents raided the offices of the Global Relief Foundation of Bridgeview, Illinois. Haddad, a Lebanese man who lives in Ann Arbor, Michigan, was held without bond or a detention hearing. He had come to the United States in 1998 on a tourist visa that then expired. He applied for permanent residency. In November 2002, an Immigration Court judge ruled that he and his family should be deported because he was a security threat. On July 16, 2003, he was deported from Detroit to Lebanon. He had spent 19 months in custody without being charged with a terrorist crime. He was suspected of al Qaeda links.

Nageeb Abdul Jabar Mohamed al-Hadi: Yemeni, age 35, arrested on September 11, 2001, hours after the 9/11 attacks, by Canadian immigration officials in Toronto when his KLM flight from Amsterdam to Detroit was diverted after the attacks. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police told reporters that he had "materials of interest, including photos and a flight jacket." One photo pictured him in front of a fake World Trade Center background wearing the flight jacket. He was carrying four Yemeni passports with different passport numbers, issue dates, and names. A travel document issued by the Palestinian Authority said al-Hadi was a Gaza aircraft maintenance engineer. His luggage, checked on an earlier flight that had landed in Chicago, had two Lufthansa crew uniforms and an identification card. On September 25, 2001, a Canadian court permitted him time to find a lawyer for his hearing on extradition to the United States. Chicago prosecutors charged him on two counts of passport fraud—making a false statement in the use and application of a passport and fraud to obtain a U.S. visa. The FBI believed he was connected to Nabil Al-Marabh, a former Boston cabbie with ties to a bin Laden associate and who had recently obtained a Michigan permit to haul hazardous waste. Yemeni ambassador to Canada Mustapha Noman noted that it is illegal to have multiple passports with different names and information and that Al-Hadi would face trial if returned there.

Wadih el-Hage: born in Lebanon to a Christian family, the Muslim convert studied urban planning in the United States and then became a U.S. citizen via marriage. In 1994, he ran Osama bin Laden's Kenyan operations. He returned to the United States in September 1997. The FBI arrested Wadih el-Hage, age 38, in 1998. He managed a Lone Star Wheels and Tires and had seven children with his American wife.

Authorities seized computer diskettes from his Arlington, Texas, home. He was charged with lying to the FBI about not knowing Odeh or Abu Ubaidah al Bانشiri. He was well known to bin Laden's top military commanders, al Bانشiri and Abu Hafis el Masry. He had told the FBI that he did not know that al Bانشiri had drowned in a Tanzanian ferry accident in Lake Victoria in May 1996, even though he had traveled to the scene with Haroun Fazil. He was bin Laden's secretary while living in Sudan until 1994 and lived and worked with Fazil while working in the gem business in Kenya until 1997. He helped Odeh obtain an identity card and sent him to Somalia in 1997 for bin Laden. The U.S. State Department announced a $2 million reward for the capture of Fazil, who was charged in the Kenya attack.

On September 21, 1998, el-Hage was indicted with eight counts of perjury, providing false passports and other assistance to bin Laden loyalists suspected of attacking U.S. and UN forces in Somali in 1993 and 1994, and providing false passports to bin Laden associates traveling to the Caucasus. During el-Hage's September 23 bail hearing in Manhattan, federal prosecutors said that he had once purchased guns in Texas for Mahmud Abouhalima, one of the 1993 World Trade Center bombers, and that he had contacts with El Sayyid Nosair, who had helped plan the World Trade Center bombing and who had killed Jewish Defense League leader Meir Kahane in 1990. Magistrate Judge Leonard Bernikow ordered el-Hage held without bail. Prosecutors believed that el Hage was associated with the suspected murderer of a radical Islamic preacher in Texas in the late 1980s. Bruce McIntyre was named el-Hage's court-appointed attorney. The indictment of el-Hage indicated that al Qaeda operates in Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Egypt, Yemen, Somalia, Eritrea, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Bosnia, Croatia, Algeria, Tunisia, Lebanon, the Philippines, Tajikistan, Chechnya, Kashmir, Azerbaijan, Kenya, and the United States. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York. He was charged with 224 counts of murder and with training the Somalis. On October 8, he pleaded not guilty.

On June 22, 1999, el-Hage sprang from his chair in the courtroom and rushed U.S. District Judge Leonard Sand, who had refused to publicly read a letter from el-Hage. El-Hage was subdued and handcuffed by U.S. marshals. Other defendants were also handcuffed. El-Hage railed against the restrictions placed on him in prison. He was held in solitary confinement, as were other defendants. El-Hage's attorney, Sam Schmidt, asked to have the letter made a part of the public record. Sand refused, saying that it could contain codes to fugitives. Sand later agreed that a paraphrased version could be approved and released by Schmidt.

El-Hage was convicted on May 29, 2001, for conspiracy in the bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He was sentenced to life in prison. On November 2, 2005, Judge Kevin Thomas Duffy of the U.S. District Court upheld the 2001 conviction. Attorney Joshua L. Dratel said he would appeal.

Abdo Mohammed Haggag: Egyptian-born New Jersey resident charged by federal authorities on July 18, 1993, with conspiracy to assassinate Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak and with colluding with Sudanese citizen Siddiq Ali and U.S. citizen Clement Rodney Hampton-El, who had been arrested on June 24, 1993, in connection with a plot to bomb New York landmarks. He had come to the United States from Cairo eight years earlier and had a wife and two small children in Egypt. He worked in the downtown Manhattan office of Prudential Securities. On November 3, 1993, he agreed to become a government witness. He was close to blind sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, living next door to him in Jersey City. On April 1, 1994, he pleaded guilty to transporting explosives across state lines. As part of his plea bargain, the Cairo native pleaded guilty to a minor insurance fraud charge unrelated to the conspiracy case.

Frederick William Hahneman: Honduran-born U.S. citizen who hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 175 bound for Miami, Florida, on May 6, 1972. He demanded $303,000, six parachutes, two bush knives, two jumpsuits, two crash helmets, and two cartons of cigarettes. He flew to New Orleans and obtained another plane. He bailed out over Yoro in the northern Honduran jungle. He surrendered on June 3 at the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa and was indicted for air piracy, kidnapping, and extortion. He claimed “a contact who came to Honduras from Panama took the money and deposited it in the Chinese Communist bank in Hong Kong.” He was sentenced to life on September 29, 1972. The money was recovered in May 1973.

Muhammad Asif Haider: alias Asif Iqbal. Haider, age 27, of New York, was arrested on August 7, 2005, by Baltimore County police. He was on a terrorist watch list. He was held after a traffic stop and detained in an indictment issued against him in the Southern District of New York that accused him and others of trafficking in faked immigration documents. He was in the country illegally.

Farouk Ali-Haimoud: Algerian bus boy, age 21 as of November 2001, arrested in a Detroit apartment. He was charged with having false documents. He lived in an apartment that once had belonged to Nabil Al-Marabh, who was suspected of having financial ties to two 9/11 hijackers.

Following the arrest on November 5, 2002, of Abdel-Ilah Elmardoudi in Greensboro, North Carolina, authorities said that the four individuals, including Elmardoudi, who were held in the case were members of Salafiyya and al-Takfir Wal Hijira, radical Islamic movements with ties to al Qaeda. They were planning “violent attacks against persons and buildings within the territory of Jordan, Turkey, and the U.S.,” according to an August 2002 indictment. A trial for Koubriti, Hannan, and Ali-Haimoud was scheduled for January 21, 2003. They were indicted by a federal grand jury as part of an Al Qaeda support cell that procured false passports, Social Security numbers, and other documents. They had been tasked with purchasing weapons and finding security breaches at Detroit Metropolitan Airport to “directly access airlines.” On September 6, 2002, Ali-Haimoud pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in Detroit to the charge of conspiracy to provide material support or resources to terrorists. His Detroit trial began on March 18, 2003. He was freed after the jury acquitted him on June 3, 2003.

Majed Hajbeh: Jordanian, age 41, arrested on June 9, 2003, by the FBI and Department of Homeland Security agents at his home in Woodbridge, Virginia. He had been convicted in absentia in Jordan in 1999 and sentenced to life for a series of Amman bombings in 1998; the nighttime explosives damaged an American school, a five-star hotel, and the cars of two former government officials. One of his codefendants was Abu Qatada. His attorney claimed that the verdicts had been overturned. He had immigrated to the United States in 1992. He faced U.S. immigration charges of falsely portraying himself as a single man to qualify for U.S. residence.

Mahmud Abu Halima: Egyptian-born former Brooklyn cabdriver who obtained German citizenship. He was a friend of Sayyid Nosair, who was acquitted of the murder of Rabbi Meir Kahane, and of Mohammed A. Salameh, who was arrested for renting the truck used in the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. By March 13, 1993, police wanted Halima for questioning in the case. He was arrested by Egyptian police on March 14 at the family home in Kafr al-Dawwar city near Alexandria. Egypt deported him to the United States on March 24, 1993. He had a U.S. green card.

He was born in January 1960. He was a student at Alexandria University's law department but dropped out in the first year. He traveled to Germany in 1980 and moved on to New Jersey in 1982. He next moved back to Munich, where he married a German woman and had four children. He was believed to be a driver for radical "blind sheik" Omar Abd-al-Rahman.

On May 26, he was named in an eight-count indictment for planning and carrying out the WTC attack. He pleaded not guilty on May 28, 1993. The trial began in September 1993. On March 4, 1994, after five days of deliberation, the jury found him guilty on all counts of conspiracy, explosives charges, and assault. On May 24, 1994, U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy sentenced him to 240 years in prison, a life term calculated by adding the life expectancy of each of the people killed in the blast, plus 30 years for two other counts.

Paul R. Hall: also known as Hassan Abujihad. A former sailor, age 31, arrested by authorities in Phoenix on March 7, 2007, on charges of providing material support for a conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals and sending classified information about a U.S. Navy battle group's movement in the Middle East to a terrorist Web site in early 2001. He was alleged to have used his position on the USS Benfold and his secret clearance to send details about the battle group's defensive capabilities and how the ships would cross the Strait of Hormuz in April 2001. He was alleged to have ordered jihadi videos on the defunct site www.azzam.com and to have had e-mail contacts with the Britons who ran the site while he was at sea. The U.S. Attorney's Office in the District of Connecticut told the press, "Abujihad described a recent force protection briefing given aboard his ship, voiced enmity toward America, praised Osama bin Laden and the mujaheddin, praised the October 2000 attack on the USS Cole—which Abujihad described as a 'martyrdom operation'—and advised the members of Azzam Publications that such tactics were working and taking their toll." In a Phoenix courtroom, he agreed to be moved to Connecticut, where there were federal charges against Azzam Web site owners Babar Ahmad and Syed Talha Ahsan, both of whom faced extradition from the United Kingdom. Hall was represented by a Phoenix public defender.

Hall had been honorably discharged in January 2002. He lived in Phoenix with Derrick Shareef, whom the FBI said later tried to obtain weapons to commit a terrorist act in a U.S. shopping mall. Hall allegedly tried to purchase two assault rifles for $2,000. On January 31, 2008, a New Haven, Connecticut, judge ruled that prosecutors can claim that Hall made coded references to terrorist plots. His trial began on February 25, 2008. He pleaded not guilty to charges of providing material support to terrorists with intent to kill U.S. citizens and disclosing classified information relating to the national defense. He faced 25 years in prison.

Moataz al-Hallak: one of 175 people watch-listed by the FBI as of September 21, 2001, for questioning in the 9/11 attacks. He worked as a fund-raiser and grant writer in College Park and Laurel, Maryland. He was suspected of funneling money to al Qaeda. He was removed as imam in Texas when his mosque's money went to people and organizations that the mosque's board did not recognize.

Mohammed Ali Hamadei: wanted for the June 14, 1985, hijacking of Trans World Airlines (TWA) Flight 847, during which U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem was shot to death and thrown onto the tarmac. On July 3, 1985, a U.S. federal court in Washington, D.C., issued an arrest warrant on murder and piracy charges. On July 12, 1985, the Lebanese government announced that the hijackers would be prosecuted, but they were not arrested. On January 13, 1987, West German customs agents detained Hamadei on his arrival at Frankfurt airport when they found him carrying three bottles of a powerful liquid explosive. He was traveling with a forged passport bearing the name Youssef Abdulkusser Rida. The U.S. government requested extradition. In January 1987, gunmen in Beirut kidnapped two West German businessmen, Rudolf Cordes and Alfred Schmidt, and threatened to kill them if Hamadei was extradited to the United States. On January 24, 1987, the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth kidnapped the last four American male professors remaining on the campus of the Beirut University College and demanded Hamadei's release. Extradition procedures were stopped, and on February 13, 1987, the West German government announced that it would try Hamadei. On June 15, 1987, U.S. victims of the TWA hijacking identified him in a West German jail. His trial began in the latter half of 1988.

On December 15, 2005, Germany freed him when a parole board gave him early release. Germany ignored a longstanding U.S. extradition request under a 1985 indictment and permitted him to fly to Lebanon. He had served almost 19 years of a life sentence for air piracy, possession of explosives, and Stethem's murder. Germany announced his release on December 20, 2005, after he had returned to Lebanon. German authorities denied that his release was related to the freeing of Susanne Osthoff, a German hostage, by Iraqi terrorists in December 2005. Lebanese officials took him into custody; the United States approached the Lebanese about sending him to the United States. The countries lack an extradition treaty. As of February 2007, Hamadei, age 42, was believed to be hiding in Lebanon and working for Hizballah. On February 12, 2007, the U.S. offered $5 million for his arrest via the U.S. Rewards for Justice. He is five feet eight inches tall and weighs 150 pounds.

Hambali: alias of Nurjaman Riduan Isamuddin.

Salim Ahmed Hamdan: Osama bin Laden's $200-per-month former driver, age 36 as of February 2008, who helped bin Laden flee after the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Africa and the 9/11 attacks. He was captured at a checkpoint in Kandahar, Afghanistan, in November 2001 with two antiaircraft rockets in his car. The Yemeni was detained at Guantánamo Bay military prison. On August 24, 2004, he was charged with conspiracy as an al Qaeda member to commit war crimes. On May 10, 2007, the Pentagon charged him with conspiracy and material support for terrorism. On April 29, 2008, he refused to appear in the military court because he wanted a civilian court trial. On May 16, 2008, Navy Capt. Keith J. Allred postponed the trial until July 21, awaiting the Supreme Court's ruling, which was expected on June 30, on whether Guantánamo Bay detainees could challenge their detention in U.S. civil courts. He was represented by Navy Lt. Cdr. Brian Mizer.

Michael John Hamdani: alias Michael Javed. Source of the one-week hunt for would-be terrorists in what turned out to be a hoax; the search was called off by the FBI on January 6, 2003. Hamdani had a long history of immigrant smuggling. He told investigators that he had been contacted months earlier by people offering $20,000 to $30,000 for each man who could sneak from Pakistan into the United States. On January 9, 2003, Hamdani was ordered held without bail in New York after he pleaded not guilty to charges in a 1996 fraud case. He was charged with trafficking in fraudulent travel and ID documents. He was also accused of giving the FBI false tips on terrorism suspects. Police found in his apartment counterfeiting equipment, traveler's checks, faked Pakistani driver's licenses, piles of passport photos, and faked immigration papers from several countries, along with fake Indian consul general documents.

Ibrahim Ahmed al-Hamdi: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. On January 16, 2004, al-Hamdi, age 26, of Alexandria, Virginia, pleaded guilty to possession of a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence and to carrying an explosive during the commission of a felony. He faced at least 15 years in prison. As part of a plea agreement, he was to cooperate with federal investigators. On April 9, 2004, he received 15 years. Judge Brinkema said he would likely be deported at the end of his sentence. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Tarik Hamdi: naturalized U.S. citizen and immigrant from Iraq, age 43, who had lived in Herndon, Virginia, but who was believed to be out of the country as of August 2005, when authorities unsealed a warrant against him. He had delivered a satellite-phone battery to Afghanistan in 1998 for Osama Bin Laden, who used the phone during the U.S. Embassy bombings in Kenya and Tanzania in August 1998. Hamdi was charged with immigration and mortgage loan fraud. A grand jury had charged him in the sealed indictment in May 2005. He faced 20 years in jail.

He had emigrated from Iraq to the United States in 1983 on a student visa and later married an American. In 1994, he was the U.S. representative for the Committee for the Defense of Legitimate Rights in Saudi Arabia, a U.K.-based organization that supports many of bin Laden's views. He had been employed by the International Institute for Islamic Thought in Herndon. Police had searched his home in March 2002.

Moinuddeen Ahmed Hameed: on August 12, 2003, federal officials in Newark, New Jersey, arrested British citizen and arms dealer Hemant Lakhani, charging him with selling Russian shoulder-fired SA-18 missiles to agents posing as al Qaeda terrorists planning to take down U.S. planes on U.S. soil. Police in New York arrested Muslim and Malaysian resident Moinuddeen Ahmed Hameed and Orthodox Jew and Manhattan jewelry dealer Yehuda Abraham, who ran a hawala that wired the funds overseas to Lakhani, who is of Indian descent, for the Grouse/Igla missiles. Lakhani had approached Russian criminals for an SA-18 as part of what would have been a longer-term deal for 50 more for $5 million and for a separate deal for tons of C-4 plastique. The Russian Federal Security Service (FSB) alerted the United States of the purchase attempt and provided an inert SA-18 for the sting operation. Hameed, charged with operating an unlicensed money-transmitting business, was brought into the deal a week before the arrests to handle a payment of $500,000 for the additional missiles.

Abdul Hamid: also known as Hilvan Jude Finch.

Siraj al-Din Yusuf Hamid: Sudanese consul in New York charged by U.S. authorities with being connected with the World Trade Center bombing of February 26, 1993, and the plans to bomb the UN building in 1993. A former Sudanese intelligence officer who claimed to have tried to assassinate Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak said that he had worked for Hamid.

'Abd-al-Hamidah: naturalized U.S. citizen from California, age 36, who on February 27, 1996, killed an Israeli woman and injured 22 others when his Fiat crashed into a crowded bus stop at the French Hill junction in Israel. Hamas claimed that he was a member of the Izzedine al Qassam Brigades. Armed civilians shot him dead when he got out of his car. Police found an Islamic Jihad leaflet in the car, which had been rented in East Jerusalem. Police said he had recently become a devout Muslim and may have had links to Hamas.

Khader Musa Hamide: Jordanian graduate student who was arrested on immigration law violations at his Glendale, California, home on January 26, 1987, by the FBI and Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and who was identified as the leader of the Southern California branch of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. He was identified by supporters as a legal U.S. resident who had applied for U.S. citizenship and who was a member of Americans for Democratic Action and the Rev. Jesse Jackson's National Rainbow Coalition. His Kenyan wife, Julie Nyangugi Mungai, was arrested with him. On February 17, 1987, Immigration Judge Roy J. Daniels released five of the defendants on their own recognizance and set bail for the others in amounts ranging from $500 to $3,000. A deportation hearing was continued to April 28, 1987. Daniels refused to hear in-chambers testimony from two government witnesses about the defendants' danger to society. On May 11, 1987, charges were dismissed by U.S. Immigration Judge Ingrid Hrycencko after INS official Gilbert Reeves, who had signed the charges, failed to appear for testimony. The next day, INS District Director Ernest Gustafson reinstituted the charges. Two Jordanians were charged with belonging to a group that advocates the destruction of property. Five other Jordanians and Mungai were charged with visa violations ranging from overstaying a temporary visa to taking too few courses to qualify for a student visa. The case lasted almost 20 years.

On September 22, 2003, the Bush administration invoked the Patriot Act in the 16-year effort to deport him. Earlier court rulings had deemed the deportation unconstitutional because the duo was not involved in terrorist activity. In the earlier cases, they were part of the LA 8 charged with violations of the McCarran-Walter Act against membership in communist organizations. On January 30, 2007, Immigration Judge Bruce J. Einhorn dismissed a 20-year effort by the U.S. government to deport Hamide and Michael Shehadeh after the FBI and Department of Homeland Security failed to turn over any potentially exculpatory information per orders in 1986, 1993, 1994, and 2005. They were represented by David Cole of the Center for Constitutional Rights, Marc Van Der Hout of the National Lawyers Guild, and Ahilan Arulanantham of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Benny Ray Hamilton: hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 54, flying from San Francisco, California, to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on December 2, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. He remained a fugitive as of 1979.

Moshabab Hamlan: Saudi who was meant to be one of the 9/11 hijackers and who obtained a U.S. visa on the same day in Jeddah as 9/11 hijacker Alnami, but who lost his nerve, according to an FBI investigator's interview in the Washington Post on June 14, 2004. Other reports said he withdrew because of family pressure.

Assem Hammoud: alias Amir Andalousli. Lebanese al Qaeda supporter and leader of a trio planning to attack Port Authority transit tunnels from New Jersey to New York City under the Hudson River. The plot was derailed before the group could come to the United States to gather intelligence and explosives. In April, the FBI asked the assistance of the Lebanese in tracking him. Hammoud, age 31, was arrested in Beirut on April 27, 2006, and later confessed to planning the attack for October–November and swearing allegiance to bin Laden. The Sunni Muslim lived in Ain al-Hilweh, a Palestinian refugee camp in Lebanon. He was grabbed before leaving for Pakistan for four months of training. Police found details of the terrorist plans, including a map of New York, on his computer. The New York Daily News reported that the group hoped to flood Lower Manhattan and the Financial District by bombing the tunnels. Authorities doubted that the plotters had the capability to carry out such an elaborate attack. The United States claimed that the leak jeopardized its cooperation with six other countries involved in the investigation.

The commander of Lebanon's Internal Security Forces said that the terrorists had traveled through Bosnia, Canada, Denmark, and the United Arab Emirates. An Iranian Kurdish suspect had not yet been arrested. One suspect had connections to al Qaeda in Iraq; Hammoud had direct contacts with the late Abu Musab al Zarqawi.

Police said Hammoud joined al Qaeda in 2003; an unnamed Syrian brought him to Ain al-Hilweh for weapons training. Hammoud attended Concordia University in Montreal from 1995 to 2002, earning a bachelor's degree in finance and international relations. He visited relatives in northern California in 2000.

Bassam Youseff Hammoud: on March 11, 2002, pleaded guilty to racketeering conspiracy in a Charlotte, North Carolina, court. He faced 20 years in prison for funneling profits from cigarette smuggling to Hizballah.

Chawki and Mohamad Youssef Hammoud: brothers who were 2 of 18 people charged on July 21, 2000, in an FBI affidavit with smuggling cigarettes out of North Carolina to raise money for Hizballah in Lebanon. They were accused of smuggling at least $7.9 million worth of cigarettes from North Carolina into Michigan. At least $3,500 of the profits was sent to senior Hizballah leaders.

On June 21, 2002, Mohamad Youssef Hammoud, age 28, and his brother, Chawki Hammoud, age 37, were found guilty by a federal jury in Charlotte, North Carolina, of running a multimillion-dollar cigarette smuggling operation to raise funds for Hizballah. Mohamed was caught on phone taps chatting with Sheik Abbas Harake, Hizballah's military leader in Lebanon, and the group's spiritual leader, Sheik Muhammed Hussein Fadlallah. Mohamad was guilty of violating a ban on material support of groups designated as terrorist organizations by the United States. The two Lebanese natives were convicted of cigarette smuggling, racketeering, and money laundering. Deke Falls, Mohamad's attorney, said he would appeal.

On November 10, federal authorities announced the discovery of a plot to kill prosecutor First Assistant U.S. Attorney Kenneth Bell or blow up the evidence against the brothers. FBI agents believed Mohamad had written a letter to an informant suggesting someone be brought in to the plot. The letter said, "His assignment is to put bullets into the skull of the arrogant . . . prosecutor or to annihilate with massive explosives the evidence against us." Prosecutors intended to introduce the evidence of the plot at the sentencing hearing. Mohamad's attorney said that the FBI had illegally obtained the evidence and that the informant had fabricated the letter because he was facing deportation.

On March 19, 2003, Mohamad received 155 years. On April 2, 2003, his wife, Angela Tsioumas, was sentenced to four months of house arrest. Chawki faced 70 years. (See also Ali Hussein Darwiche.)

Sameeh Taha Hammoudeh: former Florida graduate student who on December 6, 2005, was acquitted of all federal charges of aiding the Palestinian Islamic Jihad in the Sami al-Arian case.

Clement Rodney Hampton-El: one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. He was born in the United States and lived in Brooklyn for circa 20 years. He helped test the World Trade Center bombs and was to supply explosives for other attacks. The hospital technician was wounded in Afghanistan while serving in the 1980s as a volunteer medic for the mujaheddin fighting the Soviets.

On October 1, 1995, he was found guilty of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, and attempted bombing. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 35 years. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Rodney Curtis Hamrick: prisoner, age 40, who in October 2005, while an inmate at the U.S.

Penitentiary in Leavenworth, Kansas, mailed a letter bomb to the clerk of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in Richmond, Virginia. The letter was diverted to the basement mailroom and detonated by police, causing no injuries. A few days later, he sent a letter that contained a powdery substance labeled “anthrax.” Tests showed the substance was not anthrax. On December 18, 2006, federal prosecutors charged him with seven counts; he faced life in prison if convicted. He had a history of making threats against officials, including sending letters in 1987 from a state prison in which he threatened to kill president Ronald Reagan. While in prison for that offense, he threatened to blow up a United Airlines flight, a West Virginia courthouse, and NAACP headquarters. He later made a bomb while an inmate at a county prison in West Virginia. He mailed the bomb to William A. Kolibash, the U.S. Attorney in West Virginia. The bomb was disarmed.

Larry Handelsman: member of the Weather Underground with ties to the Symbionese Liberation Army arrested in Seattle on September 24, 1975.

Jere Wayne Haney: American Airlines mechanic, age 42, who was stopped at Dallas–Fort Worth International Airport for a traffic violation on December 27, 1999. Police found 67 airline serving-size liquor bottles in his car. Police searched his apartment in Grapevine, Texas, and found similar bottles, along with a 50-pound bag of ammonium nitrate (which can be used to form an explosive); a dozen weapons, including 4 assault-style rifles; 62 boxes of ammunition; and white supremacist and antigovernment literature that including bomb-making manuals. On December 28, he was charged with possession of bomb-making material. He was released on $5,000 bail. He was removed from his position without pay. He had worked for American since 1991. The FBI was investigating whether he had ties to extremist groups.

Hani Hanjour: pilot, age 29, for the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 77, a B757 headed from Washington’s Dulles International Airport to Los Angeles with 64 people, including 4 flight attendants and 2 pilots on board. The hijackers, armed with box cutters and knives, forced the passengers and crew to the back of the plane. The plane made a hairpin turn over Ohio and Kentucky and flew back to Washington, D.C., with its transponder turned off. It headed full throttle at the White House but made a 270-degree turn at the last minute and crashed at 9:40 A.M. into the Pentagon in northern Virginia. The plane hit the helicopter landing pad adjacent to the Pentagon and slid into the west face, cutting a 35-foot wedge through the building’s E, D, C, and B rings between corridors 4 and 5.

He was the only pilot who was not part of an al Qaeda cell in Europe. Hanjour grew up in Taif, Saudi Arabia, the middle child of seven born to a father in the food supply business. He had considered dropping out of high school to become a flight attendant. For a year in the late 1990s, he rented a house with other Middle Eastern men in Scottsdale, Arizona. Although flight instructors regarded him as a poor student, in April 1999, Hanjour received a commercial pilot’s license from the Federal Aviation Administration.

Ahmed Hannan: when federal agents raided Nabil al-Marabh’s old Norman Street, Detroit, residence on September 17, 2001, they arrested three men inside, including Karim Koubriti and Ahmed Hannan, Youssef Hmimssa’s old roommates, who denied knowing al-Marabh. Koubriti told agents there were false documents in the bedroom. Agents found a false passport and Social Security card for Michael Saisa, with Hmimssa’s photo. They also found a day planner that contained a sketch of a U.S. military base in Incirlik, Turkey, and an Arabic reference to a planned attack on former secretary of defense William Cohen. Moroccans Koubriti, Hannan, and Hmimssa remained in detention as of November 1 on charges of possession of false documents. A Detroit federal grand jury subpoenaed handwriting samples.

Following the arrest on November 5, 2002, of Abdel-llah Elmaroudi in Greensboro, North Carolina, authorities said that the four individuals, including Hannan, who were held in the case were members of Salafiyya and al-Takfir Wal Hijira, with ties to al Qaeda. They were planning “violent attacks against persons and buildings within the territory of Jordan, Turkey, and the U.S.,” according to an August indictment. Koubriti, Hannan, and Ali Haimoud were indicted by a federal grand jury as part of an al Qaeda support cell that procured false passports, Social Security numbers, and other documents. They had been tasked with purchasing weapons and finding security breaches at Detroit Metropolitan Airport to “directly access airlines.” On June 3, 2003, the jury cleared Hannan of terrorism charges but convicted him of conspiracy to engage in document fraud.

Thomas Hannan: hijacker of Frontier Airlines Flight 101, bound for Denver, Colorado, on October 20, 1977. Hannan used a sawed-off shotgun to force the pilot to fly to Atlanta, Georgia. After making demands, he had a reunion with George David Stewart, who had helped him rob a bank in September 1977; then he committed suicide.

Mokhtar Haouari: Algerian, age 31, who remained in Montreal in early 2000 while the United States sought his extradition for a trial in New York in connection with the December 15, 1999, arrest of Ahmed Ressam, who was transporting explosives over the U.S.–Canada border. He was indicted in 2000 for having conspired with Abdel Ghani Meskini since October 1997 to support members and associates of a terrorist group. Haouari allegedly provided forged ID documents. He was extradited to the United States from Canada, where he had been held since January 10, 2000. On August 14, 2000, in a New York federal court, he pleaded not guilty to charges of providing support to terrorists. On July 13, 2001, a federal jury convicted him of participating in the plot by supplying a fake Canadian driver’s license and $3,000 to Ressam. The jury rejected a count of “aiding and abetting” the plot because they were not convinced that he knew that Ressam was targeting Los Angeles International Airport. On January 16, 2002, a New York court sentenced him to 24 years in prison for planning to set off a suitcase bomb at the Los Angeles International Airport during millennium celebrations.

Abubakar Hapilon: alias of Isnilon Totoni Hapilon.

Isnilon Totoni Hapilon: aliases Abubakar Hapilon, Amah Hi Omar, Abu Omar, Abubakar, Bakkal, Abu Musab. Born on March 18, 1966, in Lantawan, Basilan, Philippines, deputy chief of the Abu Sayyaf Group. He weighs 120 pounds and is circa five feet six inches tall. There are warrants out for his arrest in connection with kidnapping. He was indicted in the District of Columbia for his involvement in terrorist acts against U.S. nationals and other foreign nationals in and around the Republic of the Philippines. On July 23, 2002, he was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for the killing of U.S. hostages taken in an attack on May 27, 2001, in the Philippines. The United States said it would seek extradition whenever they were apprehended. He was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006.

Naveed Afzal Haq: on July 28, 2006, held a gun to the head of a teenage girl to force himself into the headquarters of the Jewish Federation of Greater Seattle and then shot six employees, killing Pamela Waechter. Haq, age 30, had two semiautomatic handguns. He yelled that no one should call 911. But Dayna Klein, a pregnant woman, crawled to her office and dialed the phone. He followed her in and fired, and a bullet struck her in the arm. He told a 911 dispatcher, “These are Jews, and I’m tired of getting pushed around and our people getting pushed around by the situation in the Middle East.” After 12 minutes, he surrendered to police.

On August 2, Haq was charged with nine felony counts, including murder, first-degree kidnapping, first-degree burglary for entering a locked facility to commit a crime, and malicious harassment under the state's hate crime law. His court-appointed attorney was C. Wesley Richards. On August 15, Haq pleaded not guilty.

Ahmed Ali Harari: arrested in connection with the July 21, 2000, arrests by the FBI of 18 people charged with smuggling cigarettes out of North Carolina to raise money for Hizballah. He was alleged to have stored an arsenal with his brothers.

Sheikh Mohammed Omar al Harazi: alias of Abd-al-Rahim al-Nashiri.

Fatme Mohamad Harb: one of 18 people charged on July 21, 2000, in an FBI affidavit with smuggling cigarettes out of North Carolina to raise money for Hizballah in Lebanon. The FBI affidavit indicated that the Canadian Security Intelligence Service had provided information that detainee Harb flew from Charlotte, North Carolina, to Seattle, Washington, in 1994 to deliver a series of forged checks to Mohammad Hassan Dbouk, who used them to buy night-vision goggles and other items for Hizballah. Harb also provided money for computers and cameras.

On August 11, 2000, 17 of the 18 defendants pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to launder money, conspiracy to traffic in contraband cigarettes, and breaking federal immigration and naturalization laws. Harb, age 20, was detained by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to be arraigned later. (See also Ali Hussein Darwiche.)

Said Harb: key government witness against Mohamad Hammoud, who was convicted of aiding Hizballah in a cigarette smuggling scheme. Harb was sentenced to 41 months in prison on March 19, 2003.

Jamal Harith: one of five U.K. citizens held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban and deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. Harith, age 37, was released.

Mohamed Harkat: Algerian refugee, age 34, arrested in mid-December 2002 in Ottawa, shortly after he called suspected al Qaeda members in the United States. Harkat, born in Algeria, had lived in Canada since October 6, 1995, when he arrived on a faked Saudi passport. He claimed he was fleeing persecution by the Algerians and was granted refugee status on February 24, 1997. He applied for permanent residence on March 18, 1997. He admitted membership in the Front Islamique du Salut (FIS), which Algeria had outlawed in 1993. He was linked to Abu Zubaydah, a senior al Qaeda leader arrested in Pakistan in March 2002, who had fingered Harkat during interrogations. He also claimed membership in the Armed Islamic Group. He was held without formal charge on a security certificate, a procedure that was deemed constitutional by an Ottawa federal appeals court on December 10, 2004.

On May 11, 2007, a federal court in Ottawa prevented the government from deporting him to Algeria because the Supreme Court had struck down part of the government's antiterror law in February 2007. Harkat became entitled to a new review of allegations. He was to continue to live with his Canadian wife in Ottawa under monitoring. The Canadian Security and Intelligence Service later withdrew Zubaydah's testimony that he had operated a guest house in Peshawar, Pakistan, in the mid-1990s for mujaheddin traveling to Chechnya.

Mahmoud Harkous: one of the individuals swept up on March 20, 2003, when federal agents in the Operation Green Quest terrorist financing task force arrested nine people and executed nine search warrants. Green Quest agents in Los Angeles arrested him and executed search warrants on his tobacco shop. He was accused of illegally structuring financial deals to evade Internal Revenue Service reporting requirements. Agents intercepted more than 270 money orders worth $135,000 that were smuggled from California to residents in Beirut via private express parcels.

Bill Harris: alias General Teko. Symbionese Liberation Army member captured by the FBI in San Francisco, California, on September 18, 1975. He was one of Patricia Hearst's kidnappers. On February 14, 2003, he was sentenced to six to eight years.

Emily Harris: alias Yolanda. Symbionese Liberation Army member captured by the FBI in San Francisco, California, on September 18, 1975. She was one of Patricia Hearst's kidnappers. On February 14, 2003, she was sentenced to six to eight years.

Larry Wayne Harris: Lancaster, Ohio, microbiologist, age 46, arrested on February 19, 1998, with William Leavitt, age 47, a microbiologist and former Mormon bishop, in Las Vegas on charges of possessing anthrax for use as a weapon. Many speculated that Harris had intended to attack the New York subway system. The Army's biological lab at Fort Detrick later determined that he was carrying a harmless anthrax-based veterinary medicine instead; charges were dropped. Harris contended that biological weapons go virtually unregulated in the United States and overseas and wrote a manual on how to defend against an Iraqi biological attack. Police said Harris had inoculated Ohioans with an unknown substance. He had also looked into the Ebola virus. Harris was a sometime member of the white supremacist Aryan Nation and Christian Identity groups. He was charged on February 23 with violating probation for his 1995 conviction on federal charges of fraudulently buying bubonic plague bacteria by mail. He faced five years in prison. Harris said he had worked for the CIA in the 1980s; the CIA denied his claim.

On February 22, Leavitt said he would fast and pray until his name was cleared. The former Mormon bishop was released from a Las Vegas jail after being held for three days. He was a successful businessman who had taken in indigent children and was searching for cures for various diseases. His lawyer said he was searching for an anthrax vaccine.

An informant had told police that the duo had bragged that they had enough "military grade" anthrax hidden in their Mercedes trunk to "wipe out the city."

George Harrison: arrested on June 19, 1981, in Queens by the FBI during the discovery of a major Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning ring.

Alan G. Harvey: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Sarah Kendall Harvey: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower.

Khwaja Mahmood Hasan: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. By August 25, Hasan, age 27, had pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy and to discharging a firearm in relation to a crime of violence. On November 7, 2003, Hasan received 11 years and 3 months.

On February 24, 2006, U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema reduced Hasan's sentence to 37 months for cooperating in the investigation. Prosecutors had asked for 45 months. With time served and good behavior, Hasan was due to be released shortly after the new sentence was announced. Hasan was represented by attorney Thomas Abbenante. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Utkur Hasanov: Uzbekistani arrested in Parkin, Arkansas and later released. He testified as a grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Mohammed Hashim: On June 2, 2008, the Pentagon filed war crimes charges of spying and providing material support against the Afghan, age 31, who was being held at the Guantánamo detainee center.

Syed Hashmi: alias Fahad. U.S. citizen, age 26, wanted in the United States on charges of procuring military equipment for al Qaeda, he was arrested on June 6, 2006, by Heathrow Airport police as he attempted to board a flight to Pakistan. He was ordered held without bail in a London court, but he refused extradition. He had lived in the United Kingdom since 2003 on a now-expired student visa. He had been indicted on May 24 in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, charged with four counts of providing material support to al Qaeda in connection with a conspiracy that began in January 2004 and continued through May 2006. He provided military gear to a third group that transferred the materiel to Pakistan for al Qaeda operatives fighting U.S. troops in Afghanistan. He was extradited to the United States on May 25, 2007. He was the first terrorism suspect extradited to the United States by the United Kingdom. Arraignment was scheduled for May 30, 2007, before U.S. District Judge Loretta A. Preska. He faced 50 years in prison on the three counts.

Ahmed Attia Hassan: Egyptian arrested in Evansville, Indiana, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Tariq el-Hassan: one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. The Manhattanite had come to the United States from Sudan in 1986 and became a legal resident after marrying a U.S. citizen. He was homeless two years prior to his arrest. His attorney consented to detention at his July 1 bail hearing because she did not have a bail package prepared.

On October 1, 1995, el-Hassan was found guilty of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, and attempted bombing. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 35 years. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Mohammed Shauban Mohammed Hassanein: one of two Egyptians identified by the FBI as having ties to Hamas and the Islamic group who helped plan the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center (WTC) bombing. His fingerprints were found on manuals and magazines confiscated from WTC convict Ajaj when he was arrested at JFK Airport on September 2, 1992. Hassanein and Abdel Halim Mohammad Atim Soliman had been arrested in Denmark in April 1994 on suspicion of complicity in various arsons, attempted bombings, and plotting to disrupt a UN conference in Copenhagen but were released without charge.

Adham Amin Hassoun: leader, age 40, of the al-Iman mosque in Broward County that Jose Padilla (arrested in the 2002 “dirty bomb” case) attended in the early and mid-1990s. The Palestinian was the founder of the Florida chapter of the Benevolence International Foundation, which funds al Qaeda. Hassoun was held on an immigration violation on June 12, 2002, and was indicted on eight charges, including unlawful possession of a firearm and perjury. The computer programmer was indicted in the case of Padilla, accused of plotting to set off a radioactive device in the United States. Hassoun was believed part of a “North American support cell” that sent money, recruits, and other forms of support overseas to assist in global jihad.

On September 16, 2004, Hassoun and Mohamed Hesham Youssef, who was serving a sentence in Egypt on terrorism charges, were indicted by the U.S. District Court in Miami, Florida, for providing financial support and recruitment for al Qaeda and other terrorist groups fighting in Afghanistan, Chechnya, Kosovo, and Somalia and for helping Padilla attend Afghan terrorist training camps. The indictment said that between 1994 and 2001, Hassoun wrote more than two dozen checks totaling $53,000 to support terrorists. Many were written to the Holy Land Foundation and Global Relief Foundation charities, which funneled money to terrorists. The Padilla prosecutors said he was a fiery orator against “infidel” governments. Hassoun was represented by attorney Ken Swartz.

On August 16, 2007, the jury convicted Hassoun on one count of conspiracy to murder, kidnap, and maim overseas; one count of conspiracy to provide material support for terrorists; and one count of material support for terrorists. U.S. District Judge Marcia G. Cooke announced on January 16, 2008, that Hassoun should spend at least 30 years to life in prison.

Louis Hastings: plotted to destroy the trans-Alaska pipeline in March 1983. He was sentenced to 634 years after pleading no contest to murdering six people and wounding two others in McCarthy, Alaska, when they gathered to meet the weekly mail plane. He intended to hijack the plane and use it to sabotage the pipeline.

Mousa Hawamda: Jordanian-born owner of Manara Travel Agency in Washington, D.C., who was one of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury indictment charged the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya.

Maher “Mike” Hawash: software engineer, age 38, who had worked for Intel Corporation since 1992 and who was arrested on March 20, 2003, in connection with the case of six people from Portland indicted by federal authorities on October 4, 2002, for conspiracy to join al Qaeda and the Taliban to wage war against the United States in Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks. He was held without charge under the federal material witness statute. On April 28, 2003, he was charged in Portland with conspiring to travel to Afghanistan to fight with al Qaeda and the Taliban against American troops. He had traveled in October 2001 with five members of the Portland Six to China. A neighbor identified him as a friend of Ahmed Bilal and Habis al Saoub. Hawash was born on the West Bank and had become a U.S. citizen in 1990. Hawash pleaded not guilty on May 5. On August 6, he pleaded guilty to a federal charge of conspiring to help the Taliban. He agreed to testify against the Six when their trial was to begin in January 2004, according to his attorney, Stephen House. Federal prosecutors agreed to drop terrorism charges, which carried a sentence of 20-plus years. On February 9, 2004, Hawash was sentenced to 7 years.

Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi: Saudi al Qaeda 9/11 paymaster who shipped credit and ATM cards to Fayed Ahmed in Florida before the attack. Some prosecutors believed al-Hawsawi was Mustafa Muhammad Ahmad (alias Shaykh Saïid), bin Laden’s financial chief. He was arrested in Rawalpindi, Pakistan, on March 1, 2003, in a safe house with Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. He was an unindicted co-conspirator in the Zacarias Moussaoui case and was named in the false statements case against Ali S. Marri, a Qatari who the FBI said gathered information in his Peoria, Illinois, apartment about dangerous chemicals and the U.S. infrastructure. al-Hawsawi said at Moussaoui’s trial that he had seen him at an al Qaeda guest house in Kandahar in early 2001. When arrested, al-Hawsawi claimed to be a Somali.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees, including al-Hawsawi, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals, including al-Hawsawi, detained at Guantánamo and believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks. The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Authorities said al-Hawsawi provided the 9/11 hijackers with money, Western clothing, traveler's checks, and credit cards. At his June 5, 2008, arraignment on capital charges before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself. Maj. Jon Jackson, an Army attorney, said his client felt pressured by fellow defendant Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and asked that al-Hawsawi's case be separated. The formal opening of the trial of the five defendants was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Hamid and Umer Hayat: son and father arrested on June 5, 2005, by the FBI after Hamid, age 23, acknowledged attending an al Qaeda camp in Pakistan in 2003 and 2004 for six months, where he trained in weapons, explosives, and hand-to-hand combat and volunteered to attack U.S. supermarkets and hospitals. The Hayats were charged with making false statements to the FBI.

On May 29, 2005, Hamid had returned from Pakistan on a flight from South Korea to San Francisco. His name appeared on the no-fly list. The plane was diverted to Japan, and Hayat was interviewed by the FBI. Once he arrived in the United States, a polygraph indicated deception. A Pakistani American and Lodi, California, ice cream truck driver, Umer, age 45, admitted touring several militant camps in Pakistan and paying his son's airfare and expenses for training at the Tamal camp near Rawalpindi. The leader of the camp was a close family friend, Maulana Fazlur Rehman.

On July 15, son and father agreed to be deported to Pakistan on immigration violations; other charges were dropped. On September 22, Hamid was indicted on charges of having "intended, upon receipt of orders from other individuals, to wage jihad in the United States." He was accused of providing support and resources for carrying out terrorist acts between March 2003 and his arrest date and of making false statements when questioned. He was represented by attorney Wazhma Mojaddidi. On April 25, 2006, the federal jury in Sacramento convicted Hamid Hayat on one count of providing material support to terrorists and three counts of lying to the FBI. On September 10, 2007, Hamid was sentenced to 24 years in a federal prison.

On April 25, 2006, a separate jury deliberating on Umer's case ended in a mistrial. On May 31, 2006, Umer pleaded guilty to lying to customs agents and was sentenced to time served plus 36 months of supervised release.

Ahmed Ibrahim A. al-Haznawi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers, age 20, who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 93, a B757-200 flying from Newark International Airport to San Francisco's International Airport with 45 people, including 5 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The hijackers subdued the pilots and then forced several passengers to phone their relatives to say they were about to die. Oracle software executive Todd Beamer, a former star athlete at Wheaton College in Illinois, indicated to GTE colleague Lisa Jefferson that the passengers were about to fight the terrorists, ending his conversation with "Let's roll." The plane made a hairpin turn over Cleveland and headed for Washington, D.C. The plane then made seven sharp turns and crashed in Stony Creek Township, Pennsylvania, at 10:06 A.M., killing all on board.

Robb D. Heady: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 239 bound for San Francisco on June 2, 1972. He demanded $200,000 and jumped from the plane near Reno during the night. He was arrested when he approached his getaway car and later was sentenced to 30 years for aircraft piracy.

Lucas John Helder: junior art major in industrial design, age 21, from Pine Island, Minnesota, arrested following a car chase by undercover police on May 7, 2002, for a string of mail bombings. Helder faced federal charges in Illinois, Nebraska, and Iowa. On May 10, he was charged with using a destructive device in a crime of violence and destroying property (a mailbox) used in interstate commerce and for injuring Delores Werling, age 70, of Tipton, Iowa.

Helder said that he was attempting to make a smiley face on the U.S. map from the locations where he had planted the bombs. The Nebraska bombs made one eye; another eye could be seen in the Iowa and Illinois bombs' patterns. The Texas and Colorado bombs made the start of a smile. On June 7, an attorney entered a plea of not guilty for Helder on federal charges. Helder was ordered held for trial in September.

Luis Ralph Hernandez: Chilean who attempted to hijack a Canadian Pacific Air DC10 en route from Canada to Peru on March 19, 1986. He was subdued by passengers. During an emergency landing in Panama, he was arrested by local authorities who said they would extradite him to Chile.

Marina L. Hernandez: hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 7 on February 3, 1969, with her family and diverted it to Cuba.

Wilfredo Hernandez Garcia: hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 7 on February 3, 1969, with her family and diverted it to Cuba.

Naudimar Herrera: member of the "Liberty City Seven" arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami, Florida, for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the Miami FBI office. U.S. District Judge Joan A. Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants on December 13, 2007, and a second mistrial on April 16, 2008.

Rolando Herrera: Aero Caribbean flight engineer who, with the pilot and several passengers on December 29, 1992, diverted to Miami an Antonov-26 twin-engine turboprop scheduled to fly from Havana to Varadero Beach.

Jack Herthelot: member of the Caribbean Revolutionary Alliance who was killed on July 25, 1984, in Pointe-a-Pitre, Guadeloupe, when a bomb he was transporting exploded in his car.

Lawrence D. Hesiler: variant Heisler. Would-be hijacker of an Aloha Airlines flight on October 11, 1965. He and partner Richard K. Boyd were subdued by the crew. A U.S. Navy court-martial sentenced them to four years at hard labor and gave them a dishonorable discharge. Hesiler was released on September 12, 1966.

David M. Hicks: Australian cowboy and kangaroo skinner, age 32, who spent five and one-half years at Guantánamo military prison for Taliban connections. He was captured in Afghanistan in 2001.

On March 1, 2007, the Pentagon announced he would face two counts of providing material support for terrorism. The charges were reduced from the original conspiracy to commit murder, attempted murder, and aiding the enemy. The ninth-grade dropout was the first individual tried under the Military Commissions Act of 2006 and the first person convicted at Guantánamo. The charges indicated that he had spent 1999 through 2001 working and training with extremists in the Balkans, Pakistan, and Afghanistan before joining al Qaeda. He had joined the Kosovo Liberation Army and joined Lashkar-e-Taiba after converting to Islam, had had 20 conversations with Osama bin Laden, and had visited several al Qaeda training camps in Afghanistan. He was alleged to have collected intelligence on the U.S. Embassy in Kabul in 2001. After 9/11, he went to Kandahar, where he was given an AK-47 and where he guarded a tank, surveilled the empty U.S. Embassy, and fought U.S. forces. He later went to Kunduz and joined al Qaeda and the Taliban "on the frontline outside the city for two hours" before trying to take a taxi to Pakistan. He was represented by military attorney USMC Maj. Michael Mori and civilian Australian attorney David H.B. McLeod. A nascent Bring David Hicks Home movement put pressure on the Australian prime minister to request extradition and local trial. He had petitioned for British citizenship.

His hearing was scheduled for March 26, when he was expected to plead not guilty. Two of his attorneys—civilians Rebecca Snyder and Joshua Dratel—were barred from representing him, and his final representative, Major Mori, could not obtain a continuance to further prepare. He abided by a plea agreement, using an Alford plea to say that although he did not admit guilt, he accepted that prosecutors had enough evidence to convict him of material support of terrorism. He showed little emotion in knowing that he would serve any sentence in an Australian prison. He faced a life term, but the full military commission's jury panel would consider his plea. The commission deliberated for two hours before sentencing him to seven years in prison on top of the five he had already spent in Guantánamo.

On March 30 the presiding officer of the military commission announced that a pretrial agreement limited Hicks's sentence to nine months and that he would be sent to an Australian prison by May 29 and released on December 30, just after the Australian elections. Under terms of the plea agreement, which was negotiated without the prosecution team's input, Hicks was given a year-long gag order, would not allege illegal treatment, and waived any appeal. He arrived in Australia on May 20, 2007. He was to serve in isolation at Yatala Labor Prison, a maximum-security facility near Adelaide. On September 10, 2007, USA Today reported that he had renounced Islam, was working on a high school diploma, and was exploring attending college. He was released from prison on December 29, 2007. He was barred by Australian law from profiting from any media deal. Thirty media organizations were vying for his biography.

Abdallah Higazy: Egyptian arrested in New York City and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Gerald James Hill: hijacker of an American Airlines B727 flying from San Antonio to Los Angeles on November 24, 1979. The teen from Chester, Massachusetts, wanted to go to Iran. The plane landed at El Paso, and the former paratrooper was taken into custody and held on $500,000 bail. He had been released from the Army infantry during training because he was unable to adjust to the military.

John W. Hinckley Jr.: would-be assassin who wounded U.S. president Ronald Reagan on March 30, 1981, in Washington, D.C. Although Hinckley was judged insane, columnist Jack Anderson on December 16, 1981, suggested that he had contacts with the Islamic Guerrilla Army, an Iranian terrorist group.

Marwan Othman El-Hindi: Jordanian-born naturalized U.S. citizen, age 42, who was one of three people living in Toledo, Ohio, charged by the FBI on February 21, 2006, with planning to attack U.S. troops in Iraq by setting up a Middle Eastern terrorism training camp. Between November 2004 and August 2005, the trio learned to build bombs and shoot handguns while setting up a fraudulent non-profit organization. Formal charges included conspiracy to kill Americans abroad, providing material support to terrorists, taking weapons training, and trying to acquire or build explosives. They faced life in prison. They pleaded not guilty in federal courts in Cleveland and Toledo to charges of conspiracy to kill or maim people outside the United States. During their trial on April 23, 2008, undercover informant Darren Griffin said the trio had met only once during the two years he had investigated them. Hindi became one of three men convicted by a federal grand jury in Ohio on June 13, 2008, of plotting to kill U.S. soldiers in Iraq. A former Army Special Forces soldier posing as a radical recorded the men talking about training in explosives, guns, and sniper tactics for about two years beginning in 2004. U.S. District Judge James G. Carr did not set a sentencing date. They had been raising money for their jihad against U.S. troops.

Walter Chico Hines: hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 379 bound for Nashville, Tennessee, on February 4, 1971, which was diverted to Havana. He was apprehended on September 24, 1975, and convicted of air piracy.

Palmtree J. Hinnant Jr.: took two hostages at gunpoint on December 21, 1976, and commandeered a United Airlines plane at San Francisco International Airport. He injured his hostages, had a history of mental illness, and surrendered to two friends after a 14-plus-hour siege.

Mathia Hitwesh: Libyan graduate student at the University of Philadelphia who on May 9, 1984, met with Bashir Ali Baesho, a fellow Libyan graduate student who had purchased three .45 caliber pistols with silencers from an undercover FBI agent for $43,000. They put the guns in the trunk of their car and were arrested. He was charged with conspiracy to violate the National Firearms Act. The government suspected him of plotting the assassination of Qadhafi defectors. He was extradited to Brooklyn, New York, to stand trial.

Youssef Hmimssa: on September 17, 2001, Detroit police raided a two-story brick duplex on Norman Street, searching for bin Laden associate al-Marabh, age 34. They found a day planner that contained a sketch of a U.S. military base in Incirlik, Turkey, and an Arabic reference to a planned attack on former secretary of defense William Cohen. Chicago police arrested al-Marabh two days later at a liquor store. Nine days later, the Secret Service arrested Hmimssa, age 30, a Moroccan Chicago cabdriver; his fake ID was found in the Detroit house near the day planner.

Hmimssa had entered the United States in 1994 via Chicago's O'Hare International Airport using a fake French passport for Patrick Vuillaume. He lived in working-class Arab and immigrant neighborhoods as well as in the North Side. He developed computer expertise as well as ability to fake IDs, assuming the names of Edgardo E. Colon and Gheorghe Andreica. His March 2000 credit card scam yielded more than $150,000 in goods. He was arrested on May 23 for credit card fraud and possession of a handgun. He was released pending trial and skipped his June 5 appointment with Secret Service agents. A roommate saw him leave his West Gordon Terrace luxury condo on the North Side of Chicago at 4:00 A.M. on June 5 with four or five bags. His green Mitsubishi 2000 Eclipse was found in St. Paul, Minnesota, later that day. In June, he moved in with Ahmed Hannan and Karim Koubriti at a Dearborn, Michigan, apartment. They would often sit all night in a small black car. Hmimssa moved in August to a two-bedroom apartment in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, claiming to be Michael Saisa, a Chicago-based computer software employee.

Following the September arrests, Moroccans Koubriti, Ahmed Hannan, and Youssef Hmimssa remained in detention as of November 1, 2001, on charges of possession of false documents. They were indicted by a federal grand jury as part of an al Qaeda support cell that procured false passports, Social Security numbers, and other documents. They had been tasked with purchasing weapons and finding security breaches at Detroit Metropolitan Airport to "directly access airlines."

On April 3, 2003, he pleaded guilty to 10 federal charges of fraud and misuse of a visa in connection with indictments in Michigan, Illinois, and Iowa. He faced 46 months in prison and deportation but was expected to testify in the trial of his colleagues. He did so on April 8, saying that the four had sought his assistance in fund-raising, shipping weapons, and forging documents in a plot against U.S. civilian targets. He said the defendants were trying to purchase Stinger missiles and hoped to shoot down airplanes and drive truck bombs into stadiums.

William Hoffman: would-be hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 72 out of Los Angeles on October 27, 1982. A passenger shoved Hoffman out the door while the plane was still on the ground.

William Roger Holder: one of two hijackers of Western Airlines Flight 701, a B727 flying from Los Angeles to Seattle on June 3, 1972. He was a Vietnam vet who claimed to be a Black Panther Party member. The duo threatened to blow up the plane unless they were given $500,000. The plane landed in San Francisco, where they were given the money and transferred to a B720H, taking 36 hostages with them to New York City. They flew on to Algeria, where they asked for asylum. The Algerians placed them under house arrest and returned the money on June 28, 1972. The duo was arrested in Paris on January 24, 1975. A French court refused an extradition request on April 14, 1975, saying that the French would try them for hijacking. On May 6, 1977, Holder said in Paris that he would set a date to return to the United States to stand trial under an indictment handed down on June 6, 1972, in New York.

Eva Rose and Lili Marie Holland: sisters, ages 26 and 21, respectively, who each pleaded guilty in a Sacramento, California, courtroom on October 14, 2005, to attempted arson in ecoterrorist firebombing incidents.

Cleven Holt: aliases Clevin Raphael Holt, Kevin Holt, Isa Abdullah Ali. On January 22, 1996, the U.S. media reported that Holt was a U.S.-born suspected Hizballah terrorist in Bosnia working with local Islamic terrorists. The press said he had been arrested earlier for posing as a U.S. serviceman. He worked as groundskeeper and janitor at Howard University. He claimed to have been a gunman with Hizballah in Beirut, Lebanon, in the early 1980s. In a 1982 Washington Post interview, he claimed he was a member of Amal, the Lebanese Shi'ite militia. He was the subject of a U.S. manhunt in Bosnia in 1996 when he tried to enter a NATO compound.

Clevin Raphael Holt: alias of Cleven Holt.

Everett Leary Holt: hijacker of Northwest Flight 734 bound for Chicago on December 24, 1971. After takeoff, he demanded $300,000 and two parachutes. Holt surrendered in Chicago. Charges were dismissed on May 2, 1975, due to mental incompetence.

Kevin Holt: alias of Cleven Holt.

Josef Homolov: on December 25, 1974, this Czech-born Canadian hijacked an Air India B747 whose flight path included Rome. He attempted to force the pilot to put the plane into a sharp dive over the center of Rome. He was overpowered by the crew and arrested by Italian authorities upon landing in Rome.

Mohammed Mosharref Hossain: Hossain, age 49, who emigrated from Bangladesh in 1985 and worshipped at the Masjid al-Salam mosque in Albany, New York, was arrested with the mosque's imam on August 5, 2004. They were charged in a sting with helping a government informant who wanted to sell a shoulder-fired grenade launcher to terrorists. They were charged in U.S. District Court in Albany with concealing material support for terrorism and participating in a money-laundering conspiracy. The FBI said that over a year, the duo had agreed to launder money. The rocket-propelled grenade was to be used against a Pakistani diplomat in New York City as a punishment for Pakistan's pro-U.S. policies. A November 20 meeting with the duo was videotaped. The informant was a convicted felon working for the government who told the duo that he was working for Jaish-e-Mohammed, a Pakistani Islamic terrorist group. The duo was paid $65,000 in cash for their participation. Police said the duo had ties to Ansar al-Islam, the Iraq-based al Qaeda affiliate.

On August 24, Federal Magistrate David R. Homer set bail at $250,000 each for the duo, who faced 70 years in prison. The duo made bail the next day and were released.

Ali Houssaiky: one of two Dearborn, Michigan, residents, age 20, stopped on August 8, 2006, by police in Marietta, Ohio, on a traffic violation. Police discovered airplane passenger lists, information on airport security checkpoints, $11,000 in cash, and 12 phones. The next day, the duo was charged with money laundering in support of terrorism. On August 10, prosecutors also charged them with soliciting or providing support for acts of terrorism and with a misdemeanor count of falsification. Their attorneys said the college students were victims of discrimination. Attorney Rolf Baumgartel said, "These are all-American kids that unfortunately, in this day and age since 9/11, have names that call them into question." On August 14, Ohio authorities dropped charges against the duo for lack of evidence.

Peter Howard: on February 9, 1998, Howard, age 44, pleaded guilty to trying to blow up the Family Planning Associates abortion clinic in Bakersfield, California, in March 1997. He was sentenced to 15 years.

Gerald Vincent Hoy: resident of Easton, Pennsylvania, who was indicted on August 10, 1989, by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply surface-to-air missiles to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA). The conspiracy apparently began in 1978. He was convicted in June 1990 of violations of U.S. arms export control laws and other charges. On August 20, 1990, Hoy pleaded guilty and was sentenced to two years.

Peter Huang: Taiwanese who shot Nationalist Chinese Premier Chiang Ching-kuo as he was entering the Plaza Hotel in New York City on April 24, 1970. Huang was a member of the World United Formosans for Independence, who wanted Taiwanese freedom. He was arrested along with the organization's executive secretary for the botched assassination attempt.

Huang Wen-hsiung: tried to assassinate Chiang Ching-kuo, son of Chiang Kai-shek, in New York on April 24, 1970. He ended his exile and returned to Taiwan on May 18, 1996.

Khalid al-Hubayshi: Saudi, age 26, who was among the al Qaeda fighters with bin Laden at Tora Bora during the coalition bombing campaign following 9/11. He was captured and jailed in Guantánamo Bay and a Saudi prison. He was released in 2006 and was the subject of a Washington Post profile on March 24, 2008. He had trained in a separatist camp in the southern Philippines in 1995 and in Khost, Afghanistan, in 1997. He had been arrested at Peshawar airport in Pakistan in 1999 while making his way home to Saudi Arabia and was jailed for two months, but the Pakistanis kept his passport. He used a fake passport to get to Yemen and then entered Saudi Arabia to reclaim his utilities company job. Wanted for questioning in Saudi Arabia, he fled, with another fake passport, and returned to Afghanistan in May 2001. On the strength of his skills with remotely detonated explosives, he had a half-hour audience with bin Laden in the summer of 2001. After his stay in Guantánamo, he became disillusioned with bin Laden and wound up as a married controller at a utilities company in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, a firm where he had been working in 1995 before joining al Qaeda.

Mr. Hughes: one of two aliases used by Charles Schwandner and Steven Pera.

Ralph A. Hughes: Fort Lauderdale, Florida, man who held a knife to the neck of a steward and hijacked a Delta Airlines L-1011 after it landed at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport in Texas on February 5, 1986. He surrendered and was arrested. Passengers said he was mentally unbalanced.

Sean Hughes: Irish citizen arrested on arms smuggling charges on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when a U.S. couple took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van was carrying 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. Hughes's girlfriend, Susan May, was also arrested.

Alfred J. Hunter: mail handler who had been placed on a year's probation for assaulting his ex-wife, Elvira, in 1988. In May 1989, after shooting the pregnant Elvira to death in front of their son, age 5, he commandeered a small plane at Logan International Airport in Boston and fired a semi-automatic weapon while flying for three hours within 50 feet of motorists and buildings. Upon landing, he was captured. He pleaded not guilty to one count each of murder and armed robbery. He was sent to Bridgewater State Hospital for 20 days of psychiatric observation.

'Ali Sa'id bin 'Ali al-Huri: variants Ali Saed bin Ali al-Houri, Ali Saed bin Ali el-Hoorie. Indicted in the Eastern District of Virginia for the June 25, 1996, truck bombing of the Khobar Towers military housing complex in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia. The Saudi prepared the Khobar attack, buried explosives, and met with a Hizballah member tied to the Iranian military hours before the bombing. He was a passenger in the truck. The duo parked it next to a fence near the dormitory and then escaped in a waiting white Chevrolet Caprice. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He is charged with conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, conspiracy to murder U.S. employees, conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction against U.S. nationals, conspiracy to destroy U.S. property, conspiracy to attack national defense utilities, bombing resulting in death, use of weapons of mass destruction against U.S. nationals, murder of federal employees, and attempted murder of federal employees. He has claimed to have been born on July 10 or July 11, 1965, in Al Dibabiya, Saudi Arabia. He is five feet two inches and weighs 130 pounds.

Billy Eugene Hurst Jr.: would-be hijacker of Braniff Flight 38 bound for Dallas on January 12, 1972. He demanded $1 million, 10 parachutes, and a flight to South America. Hurst surrendered and was sentenced to 20 years for aircraft piracy.

Ellis Edward Hurst: arrested on December 26–27, 1995, in connection with a 30-gallon plastic drum packed with explosives discovered December 18, 1995, outside the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) office in Reno, Nevada. The fuse had fizzled. An anonymous caller fingered Hurst, who implicated Joseph Martin Bailie after his arrest. The IRS had attached Bailie's wages to repay a tax debt. Police ruled out militia involvement. The duo faced 20 years for the attempted destruction of a government building and a mandatory 30 years for using a destructive device.

Sami Omar al-Hussayen: Saudi doctoral candidate at the University of Idaho, age 34, who was one of five men connected to the Islamic Assembly of North America (IANA), a Saudi charity that operates out of Ann Arbor, Michigan, who were indicted by federal authorities on February 26, 2003, in connection with two money-raising and distribution efforts. He was accused of raising and distributing $300,000 through Web sites that promote terrorism and violence against the United States. The money went to pay a top IANA official and went to individuals and organizations in Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan, Egypt, and Canada. One of the sites published a fatwa by a radical sheik in June 2001 that advocated suicide attacks. Al-Hussayen was charged with 11 counts of visa fraud and making false statements on documents by misrepresenting to the Immigration and Naturalization Service that he was in the United States solely to attend school.

He pleaded guilty to an 11-count federal indictment. He was represented by defense attorney David Nevin. On March 11, the FBI announced that it had found before- and after-9/11 photographs of the World Trade Center on al-Hussayen's computer and links to two radical sheiks who support anti-U.S. violence—Saudi sheiks Salman al-Ouda and Safar al-Hawali. FBI agent Michael Gneckow said he had found thousands of photographs of planes hitting buildings, plane crashes, the Pentagon, and the Empire State Building. He said al-Hussayen had access to some classified information.

On January 9, 2004, a federal grand jury in Idaho issued a 12-count indictment that charged al-Hussayen with conspiring to help terrorist organizations wage jihad by using the Internet to raise funds, field recruits, and locate prospective U.S. military and civilian targets in the Middle East. He was charged with conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists through his control of the Web sites, through his financial support to IANA, and by signing contracts and doing Internet work for the al-Haramain Islamic Foundation, a Saudi-based charity whose Bosnia and Somalia branches have been designated terrorist organizations by the Treasury Department. His Web sites solicited for Hamas. He sent an e-mail that issued an "urgent appeal" to Muslims in the military in February 2003 to identify locations of U.S. military bases in the Middle East, residences of civilian base workers, storage facilities for weapons and ammunition, facilities of U.S. oil companies, and routes followed by oil tankers, as possible terrorist targets. The e-mail also called for an attack on a senior U.S. military officer. On January 13, 2003, he pleaded not guilty to the additional charge of supporting terrorism. He had already been held for nearly a year on visa fraud charges.

On March 4, 2004, federal prosecutors expanded the charges against al-Hussayen and said he ran more than a dozen Web sites to recruit and raise money for Islamic terrorists in Israel, Chechnya, and elsewhere. The new charges from the Idaho federal grand jury accused him of providing and concealing material support to terrorists.

On June 10, 2004, the jury acquitted al-Hussayen on providing material support to terrorism. The jury acquitted him on 3 of 11 counts of false statements and visa fraud and deadlocked on the 8 others. On June 30, 2004, the government agreed to drop the remaining charges in return for his dropping his appeal of his deportation order.

Liban Hussein: resident of Ottawa, Canada, and Dorchester, Massachusetts, listed by the United States in November 2001 as a terrorism financier. Boston police were searching for him after arresting his brother, Mohamed M. Hussein; both work for Al Barakaat. On November 12, 2001, Liban Hussein, age 31, turned himself in to Canadian authorities and was released on $8,000 bail two days later. He was ordered to surrender his passport and remain in Ottawa. The two Somali brothers, who have Canadian citizenship, said their firm helps Somalis send money back to relatives in Somalia. On June 4, Canada's Justice Department halted extradition of Liban, who was charged in the United States with operating an unlawful money-transfer business. He was freed on bail a week later. Canada said that the United States was not able to present enough information to support an extradition request. Liban had been on U.S., Canadian, and UN lists as a suspected al Qaeda associate.

Mohammed Hussein: convicted in Boston on April 30, 2002, on two charges of illegally transferring money. Hussein, age 33, worked for Barakaat North America, a franchise of the international Al Barakaat network that on November 7, 2002, was placed on a U.S. list of groups whose assets were frozen because of financial facilitation of terrorism.

Salman Hyder: Pakistani roommate, age 19, of Ahmed Nawaz Atta. As of November 2001, he was held by U.S. authorities in connection with their 9/11 investigations.

I

---

Carlos Ibarra Perez: spokesperson, age 60, for the Citizen Defense Committee activist group in Mexico who, on June 5, 2000, offered a $10,000 bounty for killing a U.S. Border Patrol agent. He claimed that too many illegal immigrants were being slain by federal agents and private landowners while sneaking into the United States. Two weeks earlier, a Border Patrol agent in Brownsville, Texas, had shot to death an illegal immigrant in a struggle on the banks of the Rio Grande.

Hilmi Ibrahim: one of three Sudanese roommates of Fares Khalafalla, who in turn was one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. Ibrahim was arrested and held on a $75,000 bond because the Immigration and Naturalization Service said that “the circumstances of their arrests indicate they may pose a threat to society.” His tourist visa had expired. He initially was not charged in the plot. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Kareem Ibrahim: Trinidadian, age 56 (or 61), who was detained in Trinidad on June 2, 2007, in connection with a foiled terrorist plot to bomb aviation fuel tanks and a small segment of the 40-mile Buckeye Partners L.P. petroleum pipelines that supply JFK International Airport in New York City. The United States requested extradition. On June 4, a Trinidad court issued a one-week continuance of the extradition hearing for Abdul Kadir and Kareem Ibrahim. Trinidad Chief Magistrate Sherman McNichols asked the United States to provide evidence by August 2. On June 29, 2007, four suspects fighting extradition in Trinidad were indicted on five counts of conspiracy to “cause death, serious bodily injury and extensive destruction” at the airport. He was one of three suspects whose extradition appeal was rejected by an appeals court in Trinidad. The trio was placed on an FBI plane on June 24, 2008. On June 26, they pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in New York on charges of conspiring to plant explosives to blow up JFK International Airport’s major jet-fuel supply tankers and pipeline. The specific charges were conspiracy to attack a public transportation system, conspiracy to destroy a building with fire and explosives, conspiracy to attack aircraft and aircraft materials, conspiracy to destroy an international airport, and conspiracy to attack a mass transportation facility. The judge denied bond. A status hearing was scheduled for August 7, 2008.

Sa’du Muhammad Ibrahim: variant Saado Mohamed Ibrahim Intissar. Lebanese Palestinian barber, age 28, who on July 26, 1996, hijacked Iberia Flight 6621 flying 218 passengers and 14 crew from Madrid, Spain, to Havana, Cuba, and forced it to land in the United States. He surrendered peacefully to FBI authorities.

Lebanese authorities announced that the hijacker was a Palestinian, not a Lebanese. He was born in the ‘Ayn al-Hulwah camp in Lebanon in 1968. He was registered with the UN Relief and Works Agency on the card of his father, Muhammad Hashim Ibrahim, under number 33016240. He carried a card bearing number 15960 and left Lebanon with travel document 088415. The Lebanese authorities denied that he had ever worked for a government agency. On April 25, 1997, a Miami jury deliberated for four hours before declaring him guilty.

Mustafa Ait Idir: one of a group arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. On January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Idir and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001.

Mohammad Osman Idris: on March 26, 2002, federal prosecutors in Alexandria, Virginia, unsealed an indictment against the Muslim U.S. citizen who had been prevented from getting into Israel for what was believed to be a plan to conduct suicide bombings. He was born and raised in northern Virginia. On December 13, 2001, he and Mohammed el-Yacoubi paid cash for their tickets and were carrying $2,000 but no baggage. The Muslims had no hotel reservations and no itinerary. Wary El Al officials refused them access to the New York-to-Tel Aviv flight. Annandale, Virginia, resident Idris was indicted for making false statements to federal authorities about how they obtained their three-day-old passports. The duo had graduated from the Islamic Saudi Academic in Alexandria, Virginia. Idris, of Eritrean origin, was released on bond.

Asif Iqbal: one of five U.K. citizens who had been held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban and who were deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. He was one of four immediately arrested on suspicion of involvement in the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was released after questioning the next day.

Donald Bruce Irwin: would-be hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 15 bound for San Francisco on September 15, 1970. He wanted to go to North Korea. He was shot and wounded by a Brinks guard on the flight. Irwin was sentenced on November 23, 1971, to more than 12 years for attempted kidnapping.

Mahmud 'Isa: Palestinian detained by Canadian authorities. On January 22, 1988, the Organization for the Defense of Palestinian Strugglers warned Ottawa not to harm or extradite him.

Nurjaman Riduan Isamuddin: usually known as Hambali, a key Jemaah Islamiyah figure in Indonesia. On January 28, 2003, Indonesian National Police Chief Dai Bachtiar said that Hambali had provided $35,000 to finance the attacks in October 2002 in Bali that killed 202 people, giving the money to Malaysian operative Wan Min Wan Mat, who forwarded the funds to Mukhlis. Hambali was arrested in Bangkok, Thailand, on August 12, 2003. The sleeping Hambali did not have time to awake and fire his handgun. He was with his Malaysian wife, Noralwizah Lee, in a $75-per-month apartment. Authorities also arrested two Malaysian lieutenants with him in Ayutthaya, 60 miles north of Bangkok. Hambali was fingered by Muslim Thais who suspected him and by a phone intercept. He had moved between Thailand, Malaysia, Cambodia, and Burma.

Hambali was brought to an unnamed country for questioning on the following:

- Plans to bomb the U.S. embassies in Manila and Singapore.
- A mid-1990s abortive plot to blow up 11 U.S. planes over the Pacific.
- The August 2000 car bombing of the Philippine ambassador's house in Jakarta, with the assistance of the Moro Islamic Liberation Front.
- Plans to bomb 11 sites in Indonesia on Christmas Eve, 2000.
- Plans for car bombings on the U.S. and Israeli embassies in Singapore in the summer of 2001.

- The 9/11 attacks. He had been videotaped at a January 2000 meeting in Malaysia with two of the hijackers. He had also arranged for flying lessons for Zacarias Moussaoui and had obtained a letter of accreditation for him to a U.S. flying school.
- The October 2002 bombings in Bali that killed 202 people.
- The August 2003 bombing of the JW Marriott Hotel in Indonesia that killed 10 people.
- His interest in recruiting pilots for terrorist operations.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees, including Hambali, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared him an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted the military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

Carroll Ishee: U.S. member of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, a rebel group's political wing, who was killed by gunfire from a Salvadoran government helicopter in August 1983.

Mohammed Ismail: four months after his release from Guantánamo, he was recaptured while attacking a U.S. military position in Kandahar, Afghanistan. He had told the press upon his release that the Guantánamo jailers "were very nice to me, giving me English lessons."

Sami Ben-'Ali Isma'il: U.S. citizen of Palestinian descent who was arrested in Israel on January 20, 1978, for Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine membership, committing a crime in Israel, maintaining contact with a foreign agent, and undergoing weapons training in August 1976 in Libya under the guidance of Taysir Quba.

Eyad Ismoil: Palestinian sentenced on April 3, 1998, to 240 years in prison without parole, fined $250,000, and ordered to pay $10 million in restitution in the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center. On April 4, 2003, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit upheld his convictions in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing and the Boyinka plot.

Abdirahman Sheikh-Ali Isse: head of the Al Barakaat branch on Beauregard Street in Alexandria, Virginia. On September 11, 2002, Isse, age 49, and his nephew Abdillah S. Abdi, age 36, were sentenced by U.S. District Judge James C. Cacheris on charges of wiring more than $7 million from their Raage Associates branch to Al Barakaat's headquarters in the United Arab Emirates over three-plus years. The amounts were always less than $10,000, the Internal Revenue Service reporting trigger on money laundering. They remained free on bond while they appealed their sentences. In November 2001, the government declared that Al Barakaat was helping to fund al Qaeda through the hawala system. The duo pleaded guilty in June 2002 to one count of conspiring to structure transactions to avoid reporting requirements. Isse was represented by attorney Kevin Byrnes and was sentenced to 18 months in prison.

Konstantinos Issoghos: phoned the Vancouver officer of CP Air and threatened to blow up planes in flight if he was not given $200,000. One bomb was found and dismantled in the airport on February 4, 1972. Three flights were delayed. The money was not paid, and he was later arrested.

Franjo Ivi: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for "resistance") arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, he was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot and for planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency and to assassinate a political opponent.

Stipe Ivkovic: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for “resistance”) arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, he was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot and for planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency and to assassinate a political opponent.

Hasan Izz-al-Din: aliases Ahmed Garbaya, Samir Salwwan, Sa'id, Samir Salwan. Shi'ite Muslim member of Lebanese Hizballah who was indicted for his role in planning and participating in the June 14, 1985, hijacking of Trans World Airlines Flight 847 that resulted in assaults on various passengers and crew members and the murder of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem. On July 3, 1985, a U.S. federal court in Washington, D.C., issued an arrest warrant on murder and piracy charges. On July 12, 1985, the Lebanese government announced that the hijackers would be prosecuted, but they were not arrested. He was fingered by Mohammed Ali Hamadi, who confessed during his trial in West Germany in 1988. Izz-al-Din is wanted for conspiracy to commit aircraft piracy, to commit hostage taking, to commit air piracy resulting in murder, to interfere with a flight crew, to place a destructive device aboard an aircraft, to have explosive devices about the person on an aircraft, and to assault passengers and crew. He claims to have been born in Lebanon in 1963. He is circa 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He was also believed by U.S. officials to have been one of the April 5, 1988, hijackers of Kuwait Airlines Flight 422, a B747 flying from Bangkok to Kuwait that was diverted to Mashhad, Iran. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his arrest and/or conviction.

J

---

Mahmoud Jaballah: Egyptian, age 37, arrested in Canada in June 2000 for making phone calls to an Egyptian Islamic Jihad group in London. He was held without formal charge on a security certificate, a procedure that was deemed constitutional by an Ottawa federal appeals court on December 10, 2004. On February 23, 2007, Canada's Supreme Court unanimously struck down the use of secret testimony to imprison and deport foreigners as possible terrorist suspects, saying it violated the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The court suspended the ruling for a year, leaving six detainees—five Arabs and one Sri Lankan—in limbo. Two were in a special prison, three were free on bond, and the last was ordered released on bond. Jaballah, accused of al Qaeda affiliation, was on a hunger strike.

Mohammed Mansour Jabarah: aliases Abu Hafsa al Kuwaiti, Sammy. Canadian Kuwaiti of Iraqi descent arrested in Oman in February 2002 on charges of organizing a plot to bomb the U.S. and Israeli embassies in Singapore. Canadian officials announced that they would hand him over to the United States. He was held in a secret location in the United States. Canada claimed that Jabarah had volunteered to go to the United States for questioning. He had apparently talked to the FBI about his al Qaeda contacts, including Hambali and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. He pleaded guilty to terrorism charges on July 30, 2002. After agreeing to cooperate, Jabarah was released but rearrested after violating the terms of his release. On January 18, 2008, Jabarah, now age 26, was sentenced to life in prison in a New York federal courtroom after federal prosecutors announced that while kept under 24-hour FBI watch in a low-security room at Fort Dix, New Jersey, he had lulled his guards and had been hiding weapons in a plan to kill them. He hid steak knives, a long piece of nylon rope, and instructions on how to make explosives. He wrote angry passages in his diary about the death of his childhood friend Anas al-Kandari, who had introduced him to al Qaeda in Kuwait, while attacking a Marine outpost in Kuwait in October 2002. He wrote a will and a hit list and wrote of martyrdom, observing, "If they release me then I will kill them until I am killed." He had attended al Qaeda terrorist training camps in Afghanistan with his brother, Abdul Rahman Jabarah. He had also worked with Faiz Bafana, who had dealt with Zacarias Moussaoui, on a 2000 plot to attack U.S. warships in Singapore. After Moussaoui obtained too many explosives, he shifted to planning operations against the U.S., U.K., and Israeli embassies and large office buildings in Singapore.

Arwah J. Jaber: University of Arkansas graduate student who on June 16, 2005, was indicted in federal court for providing material support to the Palestinian Islamic Jihad by seeking to join the organization.

Samih Jaber: Palestinian American who lived in Chicago and was arrested with his cousin, Mohammed Barakat, on February 9, 1995, as they disembarked from a plane in Tel Aviv. They were accused of funneling the $154,000 in cash and checks they carried from Chicago's Muslim community to Islamic Jihad. They claimed that they intended to invest in Arab building projects. Jaber was released on February 12. The Palos Hills resident is the chairman of the Arab-American Chamber of Commerce in Chicago.

Robert Jacks: arrested by the FBI on May 2, 1995, as a material witness in the April 19, 1995, truck bombing of the Murrah Building in Oklahoma City in which 169 were killed and 500 injured. His movements in Kingman, Arizona, and Perry, Oklahoma mirrored those of bomber Timothy McVeigh.

Terrence Peter Jackson: alias of Silas Trim Bissell.

Akbar Jamal: one of 5 to 19 names involved in a one-week hunt for would-be terrorists; the report turned out to be a hoax, and the search was called off by the FBI on January 6, 2003.

Qayyum Abdul Jamal: Jamal, age 43, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Jamal, a part-time school bus driver from Mississauga, Ontario, was to be charged with planning to set off large explosions. Jamal was charged in the explosives plot and with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Jahmaal James: James, age 23, was one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. James was charged with receiving terrorist training. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Kevin Lamar James: head of a radical Islamic prison gang, age 29, at California State Prison—Sacramento, who on August 31, 2005, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Los Angeles with three other men on charges of conspiracy to wage war against the U.S. government, conspiracy to kill service members and foreign officials, and other related crimes.

James was serving time for attempted robbery and possession of a weapon in prison. In 1997, he founded Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh. He recruited several inmates, including Levar Haney Washington, who was paroled and sent to Los Angeles with orders to recruit more followers with clean records and then acquire firearms and explosives and conduct robberies. Washington began the robberies in late May 2005 with Gregory Vernon Patterson and Hammad Riaz Samana, both former college students who had attended the same suburban mosque.

On September 26, 2005, James was charged with conspiracy to levy war against the United States through terrorism and conspiracy to possess and discharge firearms in furtherance of crimes of violence. On December 14, 2007, James and Washington pleaded guilty to seditious conspiracy charges in a Santa Ana, California, court. James was scheduled for sentencing on March 31, 2008.

Henrri Jamioy Quistial: one of two Colombians, age 27, extradited to Miami, Florida, on October 28, 2002, where they appeared in federal court on a 10-count indictment that said they were part of a for-profit kidnap group that operated in the Amazon basin from 1997 to 2001. They were to face trial in U.S. District Court in Washington. This was the first time Colombia had permitted its citizens to be tried in the United States on a nondrug crime. They faced life for the kidnapping and murder on October 12, 2000, in Ecuador of U.S. hostage Ron Sander, an oil rig supervisor. Some of the kidnappers had been members of the since-disbanded Popular Liberation Front.

Khadaffy Janjalani: leader of a faction of the Abu Sayyaf Group that has been operating from Central Mindanao since 2003. Some reports claim that he was killed on June 2, 2001, in a battle with Philippine troops, others that he died in September 2006 in a gun battle with Philippine security forces. On May 29, 2002, the United States announced a $5 million reward for his capture. On July 23, 2002, he was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for the killing of U.S. hostages taken in an attack on May 27, 2001, in the Philippines. The federal grand jury charged them with conspiracy resulting in death, hostage taking, and three counts of hostage taking resulting in death. All of the defendants were at large. The United States said it would seek extradition whenever they were apprehended.

The U.S. Treasury Department blocked his assets on December 17, 2004. Janjalani, age 30, was added to the U.S. list of Most Wanted Terrorists on February 28, 2006. On January 20, 2007, DNA tests confirmed his death in September 2006.

Ziad Samir Jarrah: variant Ziad Samir Jarrahi. One of the al Qaeda hijackers who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 93, a B757-200 flying from Newark International Airport to San Francisco's International Airport with 45 people, including 5 flight attendants and 2 pilots. At 9:31 A.M., the pilot's microphone caught screaming as two men invaded the cockpit. Thirty seconds later, an American voice yelled, "Get out of here. Get out of here." A hijacker, probably Jarrah, got on the microphone and said, "Ladies and gentlemen, it's the captain. Please sit down. Keep remaining sitting. We have a bomb aboard." A bit later, he said, "Hi, this is the captain. We'd like you all to remain seated. There is a bomb aboard. And we are going to return to the airport. And they have our demands, so please remain quiet." The hijackers subdued the pilots and then forced several passengers to phone their relatives to say they were about to die. Oracle software executive Todd Beamer, a former star athlete at Illinois' Wheaton College, indicated to GTE colleague Lisa Jefferson that the passengers were about to fight the terrorists, ending his conversation with "Let's roll." The plane made a hairpin turn over Cleveland and headed for Washington, D.C. The plane made seven sharp turns and crashed in Stony Creek Township, Pennsylvania, at 10:06 A.M., killing all on board.

Ziad Samir Jarrahi: variant of Ziad Samir Jarrah.

Ayman Jarwan: Jordanian citizen of Syracuse, New York, age 33, born in Saudi Arabia, who worked as the executive director of Help the Needy and who was one of five men connected to the Islamic Assembly of North America (IANA), a Saudi charity that operates out of Ann Arbor, Michigan, who were indicted by federal authorities on February 26, 2003, in connection with two money-raising and distribution efforts. He was one of four Arab men living near Syracuse accused of conspiracy to evade U.S. sanctions against Iraq by raising $2.7 million for individuals in Baghdad through the Help the Needy charity (an IANA affiliate). The funds were placed in New York banks and then laundered through an account at the Jordan Islamic Bank in Amman before they were distributed to people in Baghdad. The four were charged with conspiracy and violation of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which makes it illegal to send money to Iraq. Two of the men could face 265 years in prison and fines of more than $14 million. The other two faced five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Commander Javier: claimed credit on behalf of the People's Command on March 27, 1986, for the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in La Paz

Mohammed Jawad: Jawad, age 17, threw a home-made grenade into a U.S. military jeep on December 17, 2002, in Afghanistan, injuring Army Sgt. 1st Class Michael Lyons, Army Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Marti, and Afghan interpreter Asadullah Khan Omerk. He was captured and incarcerated at Guantánamo Bay. On January 31, 2008, he was formally charged with attempted murder of two U.S. soldiers and a translator.

Jawad said he was in the vicinity of the Kabul bazaar when it was attacked but denied throwing the grenade. When he was captured, he was carrying two more grenades. He faced life in prison.

Muhammad Jawad: Iraqi Mukhabarat intelligence agent named by one of 11 Iraqis and 3 Kuwaitis arrested on April 13, 1993, by Kuwaiti authorities as involved in a plot to assassinate former U.S. president George Bush with a bomb during his visit to Kuwait.

Kifah Wael Jayyousi: indicted on November 22, 2005, in the case of Jose Padilla, accused of plotting to set off a radioactive device in the United States. He was believed part of a "North American support cell" that sent money, recruits, and other forms of support overseas to assist in global jihad. The Navy veteran is a Jordanian-born U.S. citizen who holds a doctorate in civil engineering. He was a school system administrator in Detroit, Michigan, and Washington, D.C. He published the Islam Report newsletter calling for fighters to support Muslims in the Balkans, former Soviet Union, and Somalia.

On August 16, 2007, the jury convicted Jayyousi on one count of conspiracy to murder, kidnap, and maim overseas; one count of conspiracy to provide material support for terrorists; and one count of material support for terrorists. U.S. District Judge Marcia G. Cooke announced on January 16, 2008, that he should spend at least 30 years to life in prison.

A. Raouf Jdey: alias of Abderraouf Ben Habib Jdey.

Abderraouf Ben Habib Jdey: aliases Faruq al-Tunisi, Abd al-Rauf bin al-Habib bin Yousef al-Jiddi, Abderraouf Dey, A. Raouf Jdey, Abdal Ra'of bin Muhammed bin Yousef al-Jadi, Abderraouf ben Habib Jeday, Ibrahim, Mustapha, Papa, Marzouk, Farouq, Faruq al-Tunisi, Rubi'i al-Urduni. Closely linked with al Qaeda operatives and involved in plans for conducting hijackings and other terrorist operations. He is an associate of Tunisian terror suspect Faker ben Abdelazziz Boussora, with whom he travels. U.S. Rewards for Justice issued a reward of $5 million for his arrest. He left his native Tunisia in 1991 and immigrated to Montreal, obtaining Canadian citizenship in 1995. In Canada, he studied biology at the University of Montreal and attended the El-Sunna Mosque in Montreal. He left Canada in 1999 and received combat training and experience in Afghanistan through 2000. He fought against the Afghan National Alliance and wrote a suicide letter stating his intention to become a jihadi martyr. He appeared in a martyrdom video that was later found in an al Qaeda leader's house in 2001. His whereabouts since 2001 are unknown. The 9/11 Commission said that he was initially scheduled to be a 9/11 hijacker. He was possibly in Turkey in early 2002. As of early December 2007, he was still at large. He claims to have been born on May 30, 1965, in Tunisia. He is six feet tall and weighs 209 pounds.

Uwe Jensen: defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash. Operation White Terror had begun 13 months earlier with meetings with undercover FBI and DEA agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to the Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC), a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez (alias Commandant Napo) and Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization, which carry life sentences. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Zachary Jensen: Jensen, age 20, of Monroe, Washington, was one of three Earth Liberation Front members arrested by the FBI on January 13, 2006, in Auburn, 30 miles east of Sacramento, on suspicion of plotting to blow up U.S. Forest Service facilities, cell phone towers, and power generating facilities throughout northern California. A court appearance was scheduled for January 17.

Commander Jeronimo: alias of one of six Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) members charged with murder on April 30, 2002, in the United States in connection with the 1999 killings of three Americans working in Arauca, Colombia.

Ricardo Jimenez: one of seven members of the Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN), a Puerto Rican independence group, that renounced violence in accepting President Clinton's offer of clemency in August 1999.

James K. Johnson: bank robber. On May 24, 1978, Barbara Ann Oswald tried to hijack a helicopter from St. Louis to a Marion, Illinois, federal penitentiary to help three inmates escape. She was shot to death by the pilot. She had chartered the Fostaire Helicopter Company Bell 206B Jet Ranger with hopes to free Martin J. McNally and Garrett B. Trapnell, convicted hijackers, and James K. Johnson.

James M. Johnson: Johnson, age 48, of Fairmont, West Virginia, was one of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI's $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

Richard Clark Johnson: resident of Nashua, New Hampshire, and Harwich, Massachusetts, and one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters arrested on July 12, 1989, by the FBI on charges of conspiracy to injure and destroy the property of a foreign government. The group was alleged to be developing devices to set remote-controlled bombs to attack British helicopters in Northern Ireland. On August 10, 1989, the trio was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply to the IRA surface-to-air missiles. The conspiracy apparently had begun in 1978. Johnson was convicted in June 1990 of violations of U.S. arms export control laws and other charges and was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

William R. Johnson: on November 17, 1982, Johnson was arrested by Belize authorities for narcotics possession and was extradited to the United States, where he was charged with conspiracy to commit bank robbery in connection with the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck. He was identified as having removed the contents of the robbers' Mount Vernon hideout.

Shueyb Mossa Jokhan: on July 25, 2002, Jokhan, age 24, of Hollywood, Florida, pleaded guilty to a federal indictment that carried a 5- to 20-year sentence. He had hoped to destroy power stations, a National Guard armory, Jewish businesses, and Mount Rushmore. He told Judge William Dimitrouleas in Fort Lauderdale that he and a Pakistani immigrant, Imran Mandhai, 19, of Hollywood, had scouted targets in Broward and Miami-Dade counties in pursuit of their jihad. Jokhan agreed to turn state's evidence in the August 12 trial of Mandhai. On August 8, Mandhai pleaded guilty to conspiring to bomb power stations, a National Guard armory, and Jewish-owned businesses. He faced a 5- to 20-year sentence and a $250,000 fine. Jokhan received 4 years and 10 months on October 4. Mandhai was scheduled for sentencing on October 17.

Christopher B. Jones: armed with scissors, Jones, age 45, tried to take control from the pilot of a private plane on a small Chesapeake, Virginia, airfield. On November 1, 2002, Circuit Court Judge Bruce H. Kushner sentenced Jones to 10 years in prison, with all but 8 months suspended, for attempted robbery. Jones blamed alcohol and painkillers for his actions. Kushner said the suspended sentence could be revived if Jones drank again.

Jorge: alias of Freddy Ramos.

Edward Joseph: indicted by a Manhattan federal grand jury on November 18, 1982, for plotting a dozen crimes, including armored car holdups, attempted robberies, threats to murder federal informants, the 1979 prison escape of Joanne Chesimard, and the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck.

Manzoor Qadar Joyia: one of 19 men between the ages of 18 and 33 arrested on August 14, 2003, by Canadian officials who followed "a pattern of suspicious behavior." One man took multiengine commercial pilot flying lessons over the Pickering Nuclear Power Plant. Instructors said he was an "unmotivated student" who had taken lessons for three years; the normal course is one year. Police found two of the men outside the gates of the plant at 4:15 A.M. on a day in April 2002. The duo asked "that they be allowed to enter the perimeter in order to go for a walk on the beach." Some of their associates had access to nuclear gauges which could be used to make a dirty bomb. One of their associates, who lived with a suspect, worked for the Global Relief Foundation, which supports al Qaeda. Some of the men lived in two apartments that had unexplained fires. The group faced immigration charges, and the men were held as possible threats to national security. All but one had connections to the Punjab province of Pakistan. On August 27, immigration officials said that they should be detained indefinitely. They were in Canada before September 5, 2001. The Project Thread investigators said 18 suspects were Pakistani; the other was an Indian. On September 8, Immigration and Refugee Board adjudicator Ilze Decarlo ruled that Joyia should remain in jail while police continued to investigate.

K

---

Walid Nicolas Kabbani: one of three individuals arrested in Richford, Vermont, on October 23, 1987, after they illegally crossed into the United States from Canada with a terrorist bomb made from two metal canisters filled with smokeless gunpowder. A black hood found with the bomb and bomb-making equipment resembled hoods used in terrorist attacks in the Middle East. On October 28, 1987, U.S. Magistrate Jerome J. Niedermeier ordered them held without bail. They said they were Canadian citizens living in Montreal but were believed to be Lebanese. On May 17, 1988, the U.S. government reported that they were members of the Syrian Social National Party, a Syrian terrorist organization that assassinated Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel in 1982. He was found guilty by a jury of several explosives violations and an immigration violation. He could face 35 years in prison.

Theodore Kaczynski: the Unabomber, who sent numerous package bombs to various officials in the United States in the 1970s to 1990s. On October 7, 1993, the FBI put out a $1 million reward for his arrest. By that time, he was responsible for at least 14 bombings.

On May 25, 1978, one person was injured at the University of Illinois at Chicago.

On May 9, 1979, one person was injured at Northwestern University in Evanston, Illinois.

On November 15, 1979, a bomb exploded in the cargo hold of American Airlines Flight 444 as it flew from Chicago to Washington, D.C. Twelve people suffered smoke inhalation. The device was designed to explode at high altitude.

On June 10, 1980, following receipt of a letter saying that he would receive a book he needed, Percy Wood, a former president of United Airlines, received a book-sized package containing a bomb at his Chicago home.

On October 8, 1981, a bomb was disarmed in a business classroom at the University of Utah in Salt Lake City.

On May 5, 1982, one person was injured at Vanderbilt University in Nashville when a package addressed to a professor exploded.

On July 2, 1982, a professor of electrical engineering and computer science was injured in a faculty lounge at the University of California at Berkeley.

On May 8, 1985, police disarmed a bomb mailed to the Boeing Corporation in Auburn, Washington.

On May 15, 1985, John Hauser, a graduate student at the University of California at Berkeley, saw a black notebook inside a plastic container in the computer lab in which he was working alone. When he opened the container, the bomb tore off part of his right hand, ending his career as an Air Force fighter pilot.

On November 15, 1985, a secretary was injured by a package bomb mailed to a professor at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

On December 11, 1985, Hugh C. Scrutton, a Sacramento, California, businessman, was killed when he picked up a bomb disguised as a block of wood near an entrance to his computer rental store.

On February 20, 1989, a man was injured by a bomb left behind a computer store in Salt Lake City.

On June 22, 1993, a letter bomb exploded in the home office of Charles Epstein, a geneticist at the University of California at San Francisco, wounding him in the abdomen, chest, face, and hands. The bomber had identified himself as FC in two earlier letters, claiming to be part of an anarchist group.

On June 24, 1993, a package bomb exploded in the office of Yale University computer scientist David Gelernter, famed for developing the Linda computer language that had applications in publishing and animation. He lost use of a hand, and his right eye was lacerated.

On December 10, 1994, a mail bomb killed Thomas Mosser, 50, executive vice president and general manager of Young and Rubicam, Inc., one of the world's largest ad agencies.

On April 25, 1995, a package bomb mailed to the lobbying offices of the private California Forestry Association in Sacramento, California, killed Gilbert B. Murray, 47, its chief lobbyist for the timber industry. The package was postmarked from Oakland, California, and addressed to a colleague, William Dennison, former president of the association.

On June 27, 1995, the Unabomber sent a letter to the San Francisco Chronicle in which he threatened to blow up an airliner leaving Los Angeles International Airport in the next six days. The next day, he sent a lengthy manifesto to the Washington Post, Penthouse, and New York Times, demanding that one of the papers publish it as a way to halt the killings.

On August 2, 1995, the Washington Post and New York Times published excerpts from his manifesto Industrial Society and Its Future sent to them in June. On August 3, 1995, Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione published a full-page open letter in the New York Times to the Unabomber in which he offered "one or more unedited pages in Penthouse every single month" if the bomber stopped bombing.

Kaczynski was arrested by the FBI on April 3, 1996, in a one-room cabin in the hills near Lincoln, Montana. Bomb-making paraphernalia was found in the cabin, as was the typewriter that matched the fonts used in the Unabomber's manifesto. His brother David had contacted the FBI in February 1996 to say that he believed that Theodore was the Unabomber. Texts he had found in his mother's Chicago house when she was going to sell it were similar to the Unabomber's tract. A bomb blew up in Kaczynski's cabin four days after his arrest.

Kaczynski had graduated from Harvard, earned a PhD from the University of Michigan, and become a math professor at the University of California at Berkeley.

On June 18, 1996, he was indicted for the killings of Gilbert B. Murray in 1995 and Hugh C. Scrutton in 1985 and for the injuries of David Gelernter and Charles Epstein in 1993. He was charged with transporting an explosive device with intent to kill or injure and mailing the device. Conviction carried a sentence of death or life in prison. On June 21, U.S. District Court Judge Charles C. Lovell ordered his trial moved from Helena, Montana, to Sacramento, California. On June 25, Public Defender Quin Denvir entered a plea of not guilty to the charges. On June 28, 1996, Kaczynski was indicted for three more Unabomber attacks: the April 25, 1982, pipe bomb attacks against Patrick C. Fischer in Nashville; the November 12, 1985, pipe bomb attack against James V. McConnell in Ann Arbor, Michigan; and the February 20, 1987, placing of a bomb in the parking lot behind CAAMS in Salt Lake City, Utah. On October 1, 1996, a federal grand jury in New Jersey handed down a three-count indictment against him, charging him in the December 10, 1994, bombing death of Thomas J. Mosser. On December 10, he pleaded not guilty.

On November 12, 1997, jury selection began. He sought to dismiss his lawyers because they planned to introduce the issue of his mental health. On January 20, 1998, prosecutors and defense attorneys agreed that he was mentally competent to stand trial. On January 22, 1998, he pleaded guilty to all 13 federal charges as part of a plea bargain that spared him the death penalty. He was sentenced to serve life in prison without possibility of release.

He also admitted that he had placed or mailed another 11 bombs for which he was not yet charged. He agreed that he could not appeal any part of the sentence. The judge warned that he would be forced to pay restitution if he received money for his writings, mementos, or interviews. On May 4, 1998, he was sentenced to four life terms plus 30 years in prison and sent to a maximum-security cell in Colorado. On October 23, 1999, the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco agreed to review his case, finding sufficient evidence to examine his contention that his guilty plea had been coerced and that he had been inappropriately denied the right to self-representation. However, on February 12, 2001, the court rejected his request for retrial. On August 17, 2001, he lost another appeal for a hearing. On March 18, 2002, in Kaczynski v. U.S., 01-7251, the Supreme Court rejected his attempt to withdraw his 1998 guilty plea and obtain a new trial.

In August 2006, a federal judge ordered the sale of thousands of pages of writings by Kaczynski. On February 9, 2007, Kaczynski said he wanted to make his papers available to researchers and libraries, rather than have them auctioned.

Abdul Kadir: former member, age 55, of the Guyanese Parliament and former mayor of Linden, Guyana, who was detained in Trinidad on June 2, 2007, in connection with a foiled terrorist plot to bomb aviation fuel tanks and a small segment of the 40-mile Buckeye Partners L.P. petroleum pipelines that supply JFK International Airport in New York City. Kadir was detained after boarding a flight to Caracas on the Venezuelan Aeropostal airline. The United States requested extradition. On June 4, a Trinidad court issued a one-week continuance of the extradition hearing for Abdul Kadir and Kareem Ibrahim. Trinidad Chief Magistrate Sherman McNichols asked the United States to provide evidence by August 2. On June 29, 2007, four suspects fighting extradition in Trinidad were indicted on five counts of conspiracy to “cause death, serious bodily injury and extensive destruction” at the airport.

The press reported that Nur, Ibrahim, and Kadir were associates of former police officer and Jamaat al Muslimeen (JAM) leader Yasin Abu Bakr, 64, having met with him in May to discuss the plot. Authorities also believed JAM had contacts with al Qaeda and Hizballah, but no operational relationship. Although Abu Bakr denied knowing the trio, Guyana’s acting police chief told the press that Kadir, a Shi’ite cleric, and Abu Bakr had a lumber business together.

He became one of three suspects whose extradition appeal was rejected by an appeals court in Trinidad. The trio was placed on an FBI plane on June 24, 2008. On June 26, they pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in New York on charges of conspiring to plant explosives to blow up JFK International Airport’s major jet-fuel supply tankers and pipeline. Kadir was also charged with surveillance of a transportation facility. The judge denied bond. A status hearing was scheduled for August 7, 2008.

Ahmad Sa’id al-Kadr: alias Abu Abdurrahman. Egyptian-born Canadian, age 53, who ran the Afghanistan branch of Human Concern International, a Canada-headquarters charity. He was held by Pakistan for the November 1995 bombing of the Egyptian Embassy in Islamabad. Kadr was released shortly after Canadian prime minister Jean Chretien’s visit to Pakistan at which time he joined bin Laden in Afghanistan. His name was on a wanted list passed to Afghans by the coalition forces after 9/11 and the overthrow of the Taliban. On October 12, 2001, the United States ordered his U.S. assets frozen.

Binyamin Kahane: also known as Rabbi Meir Kahane.

Martin David Kahane: birth name of Meir Kahane.

Rabbi Meir Kahane: also known as Binyamin Kahane and born as Martin David Kahane, leader of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) in the 1970s.

He founded the group in 1968. The group was responsible for numerous bombings during that period. He was indicted on May 13, 1971, along with six other JDL members for conspiracy to violate federal gun laws. On July 23, 1971, he received a five-year suspended sentence, was fined $5,000, and was placed on probation in New York.

He ultimately immigrated to Israel, where the Kahane Chai, a similarly radical group, was formed. On June 27, 1974, he was convicted by a Jerusalem district court of trying to harm Israeli-U.S. relations by conspiring to bomb foreign embassies in Washington, D.C. He was sentenced to a two-year suspended sentence the next day but was acquitted of charges of conspiracy to murder and kidnap Soviet and Arab diplomats in the United States. Kahane confessed that he had urged American JDL members to bomb the Soviet and Iraqi embassies in Washington as well as New York financial institutions with Soviet ties.

On February 18, 1976, he was dragged away from the World Conference on Soviet Jewry by Belgian police after he tried to enter the conference hall in Brussels. He had been refused a request to join the U.S. delegation.

On May 13, 1980, he was arrested by Israeli police for planning to retaliate against Arabs for the attack on the West Bank two weeks earlier. He said he had nothing to do with the arms found on the roof of Yeshivat Hakotel.

On January 5, 1984, he escaped police custody while being detained for inciting violence against Arabs. He won a seat in the Israeli Knesset on July 24, 1984.

He resigned as the JDL's leader on August 16, 1985.

He renounced his U.S. citizenship in 1988 but tried to regain it in a New York court in 1990.

He was shot in the neck and killed by El Sayyid A. Nosair on November 5, 1990, while giving a lecture at the midtown Marriott Marquis East Hotel in New York City. (Reports that he and his wife were killed in an ambush in the West Bank by the Intifada Martyrs on December 31, 2000, conflict with this report.)

Hany Mahmoud Kaireldeen: Palestinian, age 30, who worked as a manager of an electronics store in Passaic, New Jersey, and who had lived in the United States since entering from Israel on a student visa in 1990. He was arrested in March 1998 by Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) officers. Although he was not charged with any crime, the INS accused him of overstaying his student visas and held him at the Mercer County Jail. On June 26, INS officials said they want to deport him because the FBI believed that he was plotting to kill attorney general Janet Reno and that he was familiar with the World Trade Center bombing conspiracy. He was a suspected member of an unnamed terrorist organization and had made a "credible threat" against Reno for her role in the conviction of the bombers. He had also met at his then-home in Nutley, New Jersey, with other individuals and Nidal Ayyad, who was convicted in the bombing. Family and friends said his ex-wife lied to the FBI. His attorney, Regis Fernandez, said he denied everything in the legal summaries. Immigration court hearings were adjourned until July 31.

In a landmark ruling, on October 20, 1999, U.S. District Judge William Walls held in Newark, New Jersey, that use in court of classified terrorism evidence against immigrants that they are not permitted to see is unconstitutional. He ordered Kaireldeen released. The use of classified evidence in some two dozen immigration cases was first authorized in 1996 by an antiterrorism bill that followed the Oklahoma City bombing. All of the cases were against Arab or Muslim immigrants.

Saeed al Kahtani: Saudi detained in the United States and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case. The 9/11 Commission said that he was initially scheduled to be a 9/11 hijacker but was denied entry into the United States by officials at Orlando Airport.

Stojilko Kajevic: leader of three members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), an anti-communist Serbian émigré group, arrested in New York City by the FBI on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges.

Ray Kajmir: Iranian-born naturalized citizen who owned a New York City boutique. He was accused of attempting to assist Kristina Katherina Berster, a suspected West German terrorist, who was arrested on July 16, 1978, as she attempted to enter Vermont from Canada using a fake Iranian passport. On August 12, 1978, a court in Burlington, Vermont issued a 10-count indictment against Kajmir. On October 28, 1978, he was found innocent of aiding and abetting Berster.

Sharak Kalanjian: suspected Syrian terrorist who was arrested in Toronto on July 31, 1984, by U.S. immigration officials as he attempted to board a flight to Los Angeles while the Olympics were in progress.

Kalid: alias of William Cafée Jr.

David F. Kamaiko: hijacker of a Wall Street general aviation Bell 206A Jet Ranger Helicopter at the 34th Street Heliport in New York City on May 23, 1974. He took the aircraft refueler hostage, forced his way on board the helicopter, and forced the pilot to fly to several locations before landing on the Pan American World Airways building. Upon landing, he shot the pilot, who was trying to escape. The hostage struggled with Kamaiko, who had demanded $2 million be delivered to him by a bikini-clad woman so that he could buy guns for the Jewish Defense League. Police rushed the helicopter and captured the hijacker. He was indicted on May 28, 1974, by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of New York, where he was charged with aircraft piracy and kidnapping. The prosecution said that a decision to prosecute would be made pending a one-year psychiatric treatment beginning on December 30, 1974. He was examined at Bellevue Hospital, where he was found competent to stand trial. He was released on $50,000 bail into the care of his parents. He next underwent an exam at St. Vincent's Hospital in Harrison, New York, where doctors were to determine his sanity during the hijacking attempt.

Amer Mohammed Kamfar: lived in Vero Beach, Florida, with Abdulrahman Omari, who was videotaped on 9/11 in Portland, Maine, boarding U.S. Airways Flight 5930 to Boston in the company of 9/11 lead hijacker Muhammad Atta. Kamfar has an Federal Aviation Administration pilot's license and is a flight engineer and mechanic. He is believed at large and armed. The name could have been stolen.

On September 14, the Washington Post reported that federal agents were searching for Amer Mohammed Kamfar, who lived next door to Adnan Bukhari and Hadi Rayani. The trio had taken flight training in Vero Beach and had told neighbors that they worked for the Saudi national airline. Saudi pilot Amer Kamfar said from his home in Mecca that he was puzzled that someone else was using his name.

An Ameer Bukhari, a student pilot, died on September 11, 2000, in a mid-air crash while trying to land a small plane at a St. Lucie County airport. Adnan Bukhari's wife returned to Saudi Arabia on August 30; the family's lease ended the next day, but he asked for a two-week extension, then for another two or three days. Bukhari bought a $1,795 living room set and asked Rooms to Go, a furniture store in Vero Beach, to ship it immediately to Saudi Arabia. Kamfar and his family put all of their belongings in the trash and disappeared from their Vero Beach home soon after 9/11.

Mohammed Kamin: Afghan detainee, circa 30, held at Guantánamo Bay and charged by U.S. military prosecutors on March 12, 2008, with planting explosives and launching missiles toward a U.S.-occupied area in Afghanistan in 2003. He was charged with a single count of providing material support to terrorism by joining al Qaeda and training at one of its camps to make and use small arms against U.S. and coalition forces. He made remote detonators for roadside bombs and transported mines, missiles, rockets, and tracking equipment to be used by the Taliban or al Qaeda against U.S. forces. He was also accused of surveilling U.S. military bases, planting two mines on a bridge, and launching missiles against U.S. troops and other coalition forces around Khost. He faced life in prison.

Irfan Kamran: one of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them on bail. The FBI said that three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Irfan Kamran and Sajjad Nasser were due to appear for an April 4 bail hearing. Prosecutors opposed their release on the grounds that they were flight risks; prosecutors had appealed their initial release, and the duo was jailed pending the hearing.

On April 8, U.S. District Judge Lewis T. Babcock ruled that “the government [had] failed to establish” that Kamran and Nasser posed any danger and ordered them released. Kamran had already posted his $30,000 bail. Federal prosecutors said that they still believed the duo was dangerous and that they might appeal the release.

Abolghsaem Karee: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On November 26, 1979, the charges were dismissed.

Brad Karger: arrested on September 1, 2004, by Watertown police for the August 26, 2004, pipe bomb explosion at Amaranth Bio in Watertown, Massachusetts, shattering windows but causing no injuries. The laboratory specializes in stem cell research. Karger, age 29, was charged in 2003 with trying to blow up the same building. He was arraigned on charges of placing an explosive device and burning a building.

Abd-al-Basit ‘Abd-al-Karim: alias of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Abdel Basit Abdel Karim: alias of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Earl Steven Karr: arrested on June 9, 1984, after a pipe bomb that he was transporting exploded in his rental car outside a restaurant in the Willowbrook Shopping Center in Mason City, Iowa, seriously injuring him. He was suspected of 24 pipe bombings that had injured six people. Notes attached to some of the bombs were from the North Central Gay Strike Force against Public and Police Oppression, although he apparently had no accomplices. He was charged under federal statute with possession of an unregistered firearm.

Youssef Karroum: Moroccan-born Canadian citizen, age 35, who crossed the Canadian border at Blaine, Washington, near Seattle on January 27, 2000, and was arrested by Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and Customs Service agents. Authorities were suspicious about his documentation; he had also been “red flagged” by the FBI as a possible associate of Ahmed Ressim, who had been arrested on December 15, 1999, while trying to cross into Washington State with bomb-making materials. Bomb-sniffing dogs reacted to traces of what might be nitroglycerin. No bomb was found. Karroum said he was an unemployed electrician. His attorney said he was not held as a suspect in the Algerian terrorist bombing conspiracy case. A U.S. magistrate ordered him held as a material witness the next day. A court appearance was set for February 1. His attorney said on February 3 that he had been cleared of any link to the case.

Amal Kasi: alias Mir Aimal Kansi. Pakistani, age 29, who shot to death two people and wounded three others outside CIA Headquarters in Langley, Virginia, on January 25, 1993. A search of his room on February 8, 1993, found 2 semiautomatic pistols, a bulletproof vest, and 550 rounds of ammunition in addition to the AK-47-type assault rifle used in the killings. On February 9, 1993, he was charged with capital murder, first-degree murder, three counts of malicious wounding, five weapons charges, and federal charges of fleeing prosecution. He had entered the United States via JFK airport on March 3, 1991, and filed an application for asylum in Arlington, Virginia, on February 3, 1992. He hailed from Baluchistan, where he went into hiding in Quetta.

Kasi was the son of a well-known Quetta building contractor who died in 1989. His father founded Pakistan Particle Board in Karachi in the early 1970s. His father's will left 20 million rupees ($500,000) for the construction of the Kasi Ward, a Medical General Ward in Civil Hospital, Quetta. His father sent him to a prestigious private grammar school. Kasi graduated from Baluchistan University in Quetta with a master's degree in English literature and inherited $100,000 after his father's death. In 1988, he became close to students affiliated with the Pashtun Students Organization, the student wing of Mahmood Khan Achakzai's Pakhtoon Khwa Awami Milli Party. Kasi fired shots during a 1989 demonstration against an American professor. He frequently carried a weapon.

On August 23, 1993, the FBI announced a $100,000 reward for information leading to his arrest. On February 18, 1995, the FBI placed him on the 10 Most Wanted List. The reward was increased to $2 million on October 2, 1995. He was captured in Pakistan on June 15, 1997.

On November 11, 1997, he was convicted of the murders of the CIA staffers. The next day, the previously unknown Aimal Secret Committee claimed credit for shooting to death four U.S. auditors for Union Texas Petroleum Holdings and their local driver in Karachi, Pakistan, and threatened to kill more Americans if Kasi was sentenced to death. On August 15, 2002, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit rejected his appeal of his death sentence. The U.S. Supreme Court and Virginia Governor Mark R. Warner rejected his appeals. He was executed by lethal injection on November 14, 2002.

Monzer al-Kassar: variant Munsir al-Qaysar. Syrian arms trafficker who sold weapons to groups in Nicaragua, Brazil, Cyprus, Bosnia, Croatia, Somalia, Iran, Iraq, and the Palestinian territories. He was connected to Mohammed Abbas (alias Abu Abbas), who was behind the Achille Lauro attack, and to Saddam Hussein's older son, Uday. On July 24, 1987, he and his brother Haytham were expelled from Spain. He was accused of being connected to two attacks on Arab citizens in Madrid.

On November 1, 1989, subpoenas issued in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., in connection with a suit against Pan American World Airways pending in federal court in Brooklyn, asked for all documents pertaining to his activities. The suit arose from the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie that killed 270 people.

On June 4, 1992, Marbella, Spain, police arrested him. He was believed to have financed the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252.

On February 24, 1993, the Spanish National Court granted his extradition to Argentina, where he was wanted for forgery. He was accused of having illegally obtained Argentine nationality.

He was acquitted in Spain in 1995 of supplying assault rifles used by the Palestinians who ship-jacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro in 1985, killing an American.

He was arrested by Spanish authorities in Madrid on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars' worth of small arms, ammunition, thousands of machine guns, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, and possible surface-to-air missiles to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels "to protect their cocaine trafficking business and to attack United States interests in Colombia.” He was living in a 15-room Renaissance palazzo near Marbella, on the Costa del Sol, where he met on February 6, 2007, with two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration informants to discuss a deal worth $7.8 million to $13.5 million, plus costs of transportation. The indictment also said al-Kassar offered “to send 1,000 men to the informants to fight with the FARC against U.S. military officers in Colombia.” He and his associates were indicted on four counts of supplying material support to a foreign terrorist group; conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, officials, and employees; and conspiracy to acquire an anti-aircraft missile. Romanian authorities arrested his codefendants, Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi and Luis Felipe Morena-Godoy. The United States requested extradition.

The Spanish government gave its final approval for extradition in early June 2008. He was held on charges of supplying millions of dollars of weapons to FARC rebels to attack U.S. forces in Colombia. The indictment charged him with conspiracy to support terrorists, conspiracy to kill U.S. soldiers, conspiracy to acquire and use anti-aircraft missiles, and money laundering. The United States agreed not to seek the death penalty or life without parole, punishments that are not available in Spanish law.

Sharon Katz: the FBI arrested the New York City-based member of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) on May 8, 1987, for a series of firebombings, a pipe bombing, and a tear gas attack. She pleaded guilty to one charge of assaulting a foreign official in connection with the September 3, 1986, tear gas grenade attack by the JDL of a performance by the Soviet Moiseyev Dance Company that injured 26 people. She faced three years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Nikola Kavaja: one of three members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), an anticommunist Serbian émigré group, arrested in New York City by the FBI on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges. Freed on $350,000 bond, he was on his way to Chicago on June 20, 1979, to be sentenced for his part in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago, for which the group had been convicted on May 24, 1979. Instead, the mechanic from Paterson, New Jersey, hijacked American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York’s La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago. He demanded the release of Rev. Stojilko Kavejic, a Serbian Orthodox priest, who, together with the hijacker and four other Serbs, was arrested in November 1978 on charges of bombing and conspiracy to murder. Kavaja initially demanded to go to Peru and later changed his desired destination to Johannesburg, South Africa. The plane eventually landed at Ireland’s Shannon Airport, where Kavaja surrendered. He was deported from Ireland on June 22 and sentenced to 20 years for the 1975 incident. On November 9, 1979, he was convicted of air piracy and bail-jumping.

Russell Kelner: one of four members of the Jewish Defense League indicted by a New York court on August 19, 1976, on 11 charges, including the attempted bombing of the Iraqi UN mission on January 12, 1976, and the firing of four rifle shots at the Soviet residential complex in New York City on February 27, 1976. On December 16, four of the defendants were sentenced to prison terms of up to six years, and the fifth received a suspended sentence.

Katherine Mary Kerkow: one of two hijackers of Western Airlines Flight 701, a B727 flying from Los Angeles to Seattle on June 3, 1972. Her partner was a Vietnam vet who claimed to be a Black Panther Party member. The duo threatened to blow up the plane unless they were given $500,000. The plane landed in San Francisco, where they were given the money and transferred to a B720H, taking 36 hostages with them to New York City. They flew on to Algiers, Algeria, where they asked for asylum. The Algerians placed them under house arrest and returned the money on June 28, 1972. On September 29, 1972, the international section of the Black Panther Party in Algiers announced that Kerkow's partner, William Roger Holder, had succeeded Pete O'Neal, who had in turn succeeded founder Eldridge Cleaver, as chief of the Panthers' international section in Algiers. The Algerian government had formally accorded the Panthers the status of a liberation movement. On March 28, 1973, the Algiers office was abandoned, and the party members apparently left Algiers. The duo was arrested in Paris on January 24, 1975. A French court refused an extradition request on April 14, 1975, saying that the French would try them for hijacking and would set a date later.

Gary Marvin Keuhnnoel: resident of Bellingham, Washington, age 47, who was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an "eventual confrontation" with the U.S. government and the UN.

Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis: born Ernest Timothy McGhee. Leader of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. Khaalis was released because of an agreement made during negotiations; however, he was arrested on March 31 and convicted of second-degree murder. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 41 to 123 years. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980.

Abdullah Ahmed Khadr: youngest son, age 24, of accused al Qaeda financier Ahmed Said Khadr. On December 17, 2005, he was arrested in his family's apartment in Toronto on a U.S. warrant. He had returned to Canada a few weeks earlier after having been in detention since October 12, 2004, when he was picked up by Pakistani intelligence in a car in Islamabad. He faced extradition to the United States for procuring weapons, including explosives, rocket-propelled grenades, mortar rounds, and other munitions, for al Qaeda for use against U.S. forces. He faced life in prison. He had conducted these activities at the behest of his father, an Egyptian-born Canadian who died in 2003 in a battle with Pakistani authorities. He was represented by attorney Dennis Edney, who claimed Khadr had been tortured by the Pakistanis. Khadr's mother, Maha Elsamnah, was briefly detained. On December 19, Khadr admitted in a Toronto court to ties to al Qaeda and to buying guns and rocket launchers for them in Afghanistan.

On February 8, 2006, Abdullah Ahmed Khadr was indicted in Boston on federal charges of providing ammunition and explosives, including machine-gun ammunition, rocket-propelled grenades, mortar rounds, and explosives used to make mines, for attacks on U.S. troops in Afghanistan. He faced life plus 30 years. He is the older brother of Omar Ahmed Khadr.

Ahmed Said Khadr: Canadian who in March 2005 was being investigated as a terrorism financier. He was suspected of sending money to the terrorist group via a charity he ran; he died in an October 2003 gun battle in Pakistan.

Omar Khadr: Canadian citizen held as an unlawful enemy combatant (UEC) at Guantánamo Bay in the 2000s. He had been captured in 2002 at age 15 by U.S. and Afghan troops during a firefight. He had thrown a grenade that killed a U.S. soldier. He faced murder and other charges in Guantánamo. On June 4, 2007, a U.S. military judge ruled that the tribunal system created by Congress did not have jurisdiction to try detainees unless they first were given the UEC status. That ruling was overturned by the U.S. Court of Military Commission Review, which said it could try him on terrorism charges. He was the younger brother of Abdullah Ahmed Khadr and son of Ahmed Said Khadr. His next hearing was scheduled for April 11, 2008. His attorneys asked that he be treated as a child soldier.

On May 23, 2008, the Canadian high court ruled 9–0 that he had a constitutional right to material directly related to interviews that Canadian intelligence officials had conducted with him during his detention at Guantánamo. He was represented by attorney Nathan Whitling.

Zaynab Khadr: daughter, age 25, of a Canadian, Ahmed Said Khadr, who was suspected of being a terrorism financier. On March 3, 2005, Royal Canadian Mounted Police seized a laptop computer from her. Police believed the computer held vital information about al Qaeda operations. Her cell phone and handwritten documents had been seized at Toronto’s Pearson International Airport when she arrived in Canada from Pakistan two weeks earlier. She was held on post-9/11 antiterrorism laws. Osama bin Laden had attended her 1999 wedding.

Tarek Adealy Khafagy: Egyptian refugee arrested on March 4, 2000, by Montreal police on charges of possessing an explosive substance without a lawful excuse and possession of counterfeit money. On March 8, his bail hearing was delayed until March 22, following a report of bomb plots against Israel’s embassy in Ottawa and its consulate in Montreal.

Ali Reza Khairghadam: one of 25 members of the People’s Majority, an anti-Khomeini group, who seized the Iranian Interests Section in Washington, D.C., and held six Iranian employees hostage for an hour on August 7, 1981. They were put on probation and ordered to complete 25 hours of community service.

Fadhil Al-Khaledy: Iraqi, age 32, who was one of 21 men in seven states indicted in October 2001 for fraudulently obtaining commercial driver’s licenses to haul hazardous materials.

Ziyad Khaleel: U.S. fund-raiser for the Islamic American Relief Agency, which was designated as a financier for bin Laden. He was alleged to have purchased a satellite phone and batteries for bin Laden in the 1990s. He was in contact with Anwar al-Aulaqi, according to government investigators.

Ridouane Khalid: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise.” The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to “integrate into terrorist structures” in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but said they had not used their combat training. Khalid was sentenced to four years in prison; three were suspended and one year was time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The French citizens were captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then were handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005.

Saad Khalid: son of a Pakistani technologist and one of 17 people arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada’s antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Khalid, age 19, had set up the Religious Awareness Club at Meadowvale Secondary School to preach Islam. His father had lived in Saudi Arabia before immigrating to Canada a decade before. Khalid spent time with Fahim Ahmad and Zakaria Amara. Khalid was charged in the explosives plot and with receiving terrorist training and was represented by attorney Arif Raza. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Mohammad Jamal Khalifa: arrested in December 1994 in Santa Rita, California, for falsifying his visa application. He was held in San Francisco without bond pending deportation. On April 24, 1995, Philippine President Ramos asked the United States to defer his deportation to the Middle East.

On June 5, 1995, the Washington Post reported that the Saudi businessman had contacts in the Philippines with Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf and that he had financed the Abu Sayyaf Group. He was hiding from Jordanian authorities to evade bombing charges. He was an in-law of Osama bin Laden. Khalifah's network had ties with extremists in Iraq, Jordan, Turkey, Russia, Malaysia, the United Arab Emirates, Pakistan, Syria, the Netherlands, Albania, Morocco, Romania, and Lebanon.

Muhammad Jamal A. Khalifah: brother-in-law of Osama bin Laden and financier of the Abu Sayyaf Group from 1991 to 1994 and the Jordan-based Islamist group Mohammed's Army. Earlier, in the late 1980s and early 1990s, Khalifah had lived in the Philippines, where he ran a Muslim religious center for several years and arranged for recruits for Afghanistan. He was sentenced in absentia to death with a group of Jordanian Afghans on December 21, 1994, by the Jordanian State Security Court for belonging to an illegal society, participating in a conspiracy to carry out terrorist acts, and possessing explosives for illegal purposes. The Muslim fundamentalists had bombed cinemas on January 26, 1994, and February 1, 1994, wounding nine people. The group considered the films to be pornographic. The group was seized in a crack-down on Muslim radicals that began in January 1994. Their trial began on August 27, 1994, when they were accused of planning to assassinate leading Jordanians, including 'Abd-al-Salam al-Majali, Jordan's former chief peace negotiator with Israel.

Khalifah was detained in San Francisco by the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service in December 1994. He had lied on his visa application, saying that there were no criminal charges pending against him anywhere in the world. He had entered the United States two weeks earlier on a visa issued by the U.S. Consulate in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. Authorities found a bomb-making manual among his possessions. He was a member of the International Islamic Relief Organization, a Saudi-financed charity that has given money to Hamas. He was deported to Jordan and retried on terrorism charges. A witness recanted, and Khalifah was freed and went to Saudi Arabia.

On January 31, 2007, Khalifah was assassinated in Madagascar.

Hassan Khalil: Lebanese immigrant and U.S. citizen, age 37, who was arrested in May 2005 by terrorist task force authorities in his home in Burke, Virginia. The cell phone technician was charged with immigration fraud; the charges were dropped on September 4 because of a mistake in his immigration records. Khalil had told the FBI that he knew members of Hizballah in Lebanon.

Lafi Khalil: arrested with two other people on July 31, 1997, when he was 22 years old, by New York police and federal agents who seized five powerful bombs after a dawn shootout in a Brooklyn apartment at 248 Fourth Avenue. The detainees had planned to blow up transportation facilities, including the subway system in New York City. As police entered the apartment, one man ran toward a bomb. Although police fired, he threw one of several detonating switches. A second man was shot while moving toward the bomb. One detainee told police how to render the bombs harmless and how they were to be used against the subway system's Atlantic Avenue station and a commuter bus. Both terrorists were hospitalized.

Khalil's parents lived near Aqaba, Jordan, after expulsion from Kuwait. He stayed for four years with an uncle in Ajjul, a village north of Ramallah. In November 1996, he obtained a visa at the U.S. Consulate in Jerusalem and moved to Brooklyn, then to California, and then back to Brooklyn. His tourist visa expired in December 1996.

On August 12, 1997, FBI investigators suggested that the duo had been setting up a hoax designed to extort money from the U.S. State Department's Heroes antiterrorism rewards program. A New York judge issued a permanent order of detention and scheduled a court hearing for August 14. Defense lawyers did not request bail. On August 29, the two were indicted by a federal grand jury in

New York for plotting to set off a pipe bomb in the subway. They faced life in prison if convicted of conspiracy to use a weapon of mass destruction. Arraignment was expected within the fortnight. The trial began on July 6, 1998. On July 23, 1998, the jury acquitted him of plotting to blow up the subway station but declared him guilty of having a fake immigration card.

Fares Khallafalla: one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. On May 27, 1993, Khallafalla tested the bomb timing device. He lived in Jersey City, drove a van for a medical supply company, and worshipped at the Jersey City storefront mosque of blind sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman. The Sudanese entered the United States on a temporary visa and married a U.S. citizen.

On October 1, 1995, he was found guilty of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, and attempted bombing. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 30 years. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Ayub Ali Khan: one of two Indian Muslims arrested on September 12, 2001, by police in Texas who pulled them from an Amtrak train. They had $5,000 in cash, hair dye, and box cutters. The Indian duo had boarded Trans World Airlines Flight 679 on September 11, which left Newark at 6:10 A.M. The plane was grounded in St. Louis after the terrorist attacks at which time the duo boarded the train. Khan had two Indian passports with different names for his parents and different addresses. Mohammed Jaweed Azmath had two passports that included fake names for his parents and different dates of birth. As of December 8, Khan was being investigated for possessing a false passport and possibly fraudulently obtaining a work permit.

Indian officials said they came from lower-middle-class families in Hyderabad. The duo lived in a Jersey City apartment, where the Wall Street Journal found stories about bioterrorism. Investigators conducted anthrax tests. The duo's former roommate, Mohammad Aslam Pervez, was indicted in mid-October on charges of lying to the FBI about financial transactions. He was held without bond. Police were investigating how the duo was able to send $64,000 to relatives. By mid-December, the government was backing away from suggesting that the duo was part of the 9/11 plot. Khan was represented in New York by attorney Lawrence Feitell. The duo faced new charges on December 13 that they ran up $470,000 on fraudulent credit cards.

Majid Khan: Guantánamo Bay detainee who the U.S. government said was selected by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed to bomb gas stations in the United States.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On April 15, 2007, in his hearing before the Combatant Status Review Tribunal, the Pakistani, age 27, who had graduated from a Baltimore area high school in 1999, said he had tried to commit suicide and had lost 30 pounds during a 27-day hunger strike. He claimed he had helped the FBI detain an illegal Pakistani immigrant in 2002. Prosecutors said he had taken orders from Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and was asked to determine how to poison U.S. reservoirs and blow up U.S. gas stations. He was also considered for membership in a team involved in an assassination attempt on Pakistani president Gen. Pervez Musharraf. Khan had been detained in March 2003 while staying with his brother in Pakistan. He was represented by attorney Gitanjali Gutierrez.

Masoud Ahmad Khan: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. No evidence existed that they intended attacks within the United States, although Khan, age 31, of Gaithersburg, Maryland, downloaded an Internet photo of FBI Headquarters. On September 25, 2003, a new indictment was issued against seven defendants, including Khan, who was charged with conspiracy to provide material support to al Qaeda and the Taliban.

On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, including Khan, who was represented by Bernard Grimm and Jonathan Shapiro, attorneys for now-convicted Washington area sniper John Allen Muhammad. The four defendants claimed that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. In a bench trial on March 4, 2004, Judge Leonie Brinkema found three of the four defendants guilty of conspiring to aid Lashkar and on weapons charges. She rejected the charge against Khan that he conspired to provide material support to al Qaeda. Khan was the only defendant convicted of conspiracy to wage war against the United States and to assist the Taliban. He faced more than 100 years. On June 15, 2004, Judge Brinkema imposed a life sentence on Khan. On July 29, 2005, Judge Brinkema dropped his sentence by 20 years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Mohammed Ajmal Khan: Briton who was serving a prison term in the United Kingdom for terrorist offenses when he was indicted in the United States on May 22, 2006, in connection with the "Virginia Jihad Network" case.

Dr. Mohammed Khan: wanted by the FBI for questioning regarding terrorism. He claims to have been born in Pakistan on March 4, 1970. He is considered armed and dangerous.

Mohammed Sher Mohammad Khan: the FBI announced on February 7, 2003, that it wanted to question the Pakistani in connection with terrorist threats against the United States. He may have entered the United States illegally after 9/11. The FBI said his name and birth date could be fictitious.

Mufti Mohammed Khan: bin Laden associate from Pakistan who was arrested on September 11, 2001, hours after the 9/11 attacks when he arrived at London's Heathrow Airport from New York. The Sunday Telegraph said he was to meet with bin Laden allies in London and Birmingham. The Telegraph claimed he was sent back to New York for questioning by the FBI.

Omar Khan: threw a grenade that killed a U.S. Army medic in Afghanistan and was the youngest person held in Guantánamo Bay. Khan, age 19 as of 2005, is the brother of Abdullah Khan.

Joseb Kharabdze: one of 18 people arrested and charged on March 15, 2005, who attempted to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices, and 13 others were charged with weapons trafficking.

Ahmad Naveed Khawaja: Canadian who was one of nine family members arrested by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized

U.S. citizen was a former resident of Florida. On March 5, 2003, he remained in jail awaiting trial. On May 31, 2003, the three-judge panel of the Lahore bench of the Supreme Court ordered his release. The decision cannot be appealed. The decision came a few days after the duo was found not guilty of the last charges against them; prosecutors had sought to hold the two men despite their acquittal.

Mohammed Momin Khawaja: the first person charged under Canada's Anti-Terrorism Act. On October 24, 2006, a judge struck down a portion of the act, ruling that the definition of terrorism violated Canada's bill of rights. On April 2, 2008, the Canadian Supreme Court said it would not hear the 29-year-old software developer's challenge to the Canada Evidence Act that blocks defendants from seeing secret intelligence on their case. He was accused of joining an al Qaeda-inspired cell that had plotting bombings in the United Kingdom in 2004. He was represented by attorney Lawrence Greenspon. Khawaja faced seven charges, including participating in or contributing to the activities of a terrorist group and facilitating a terrorist activity. Six colleagues were convicted in London in 2007; he was named in connection with the plot. A trial was set for May 20, 2008.

Omar Karar Khawaja: variant Umar Karar Khawaja. One of nine family members arrested by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. The naturalized U.S. citizen was a former resident of Florida. On March 5, 2003, the Lahore High Court ordered his release.

Umar Karar Khawaja: variant of Omar Karar Khawaja.

Usman Ali Khawaja: Canadian arrested with eight other family members by Lahore, Pakistan, police on December 19, 2002, on suspicion of being al Qaeda operatives. On March 5, 2003, the Lahore High Court ordered his release.

Ahmed Abou El-Kheir: Egyptian arrested in College Park, Maryland, and held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in their 9/11 investigations. He was later released and did not testify.

Andri Khoshaba: former driver for Iraq's UN mission who was arrested on February 17, 1990, and was indicted on April 5, 1990, in Sacramento, California, for planning to murder two dissidents. A senior Iraqi diplomat had allegedly offered to pay him $50,000 to murder the duo, who lived near Ceres, California. One of the two targets was the leader of the Ceres-based group Bet Nahrain, which calls for an independent homeland for Iraqi Assyrians. The Iraqi mission said Khoshaba was fired as a doorman in 1989. He had spent the last year working part-time as a painter in Modesto. He traveled to New York City on February 9 and February 15 to meet with the Iraqi diplomat, who asked him to kill Bet Nahrain founder Sargon Dadesho and a Kurdish leader. Khoshaba was held in Stanislaus County jail and then taken to a federal court in Fresno for arraignment. He was released for lack of evidence and was believed to have fled the country.

Attallah Fuad Khoury: Palestinian, age 28, held in Houston as of November 2001 on charges of making false statements to purchase weapons. He was held as part of federal investigations into the 9/11 attacks.

James William Kilgore: former member of the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) who went underground in 1977. Some observers believed, incorrectly, that he was the Unabomber. He was arrested in Cape Town, South Africa, on November 8, 2002. He faced extradition to the United States on federal charges that he had left a bomb in an SLA safe house and murdered Myrna Opsahl during a bank robbery in 1975. On April 26, 2004, he was sentenced to four and one-half years for passport fraud and possession of a pipe bomb.

Richard Kiri Kim: member of the California-based anticommunist Cambodian Freedom Fighters, which on November 24, 2000, claimed credit for a midnight shootout at a police station and government buildings in Phnom Penh in which seven died and a dozen were wounded. On June 22, 2001, a Cambodian court accused him of being a key planner of the attack. The Oregon resident, age 51, was the only American citizen in custody.

Steve Kim: Korean American, age 57, who in protesting against North Korea, on October 3, 2002, fired seven shots from a .357 pistol in front of the United Nations headquarters, hitting several offices but causing no injuries. The naturalized U.S. citizen, who worked at a U.S. post office in Des Plaines, Illinois, was born in 1945, apparently in Korea. At the time of the shooting, the UN Security Council was meeting on Iraq. U.S. Secret Service agents, in the area to protect Cyprus president Glafcos Clerides, grabbed Kim just outside the building. Kim threw anti-North Korean leaflets in the area. He was expected to be arraigned in federal court in Manhattan for violation of the Protection of Foreign Officials Act. On April 3, 2003, he pleaded guilty to a single charge of making a violent attack on foreign officials. He said he did not intend to hurt anyone. He faced three years in prison. Sentencing was set for July 22, 2003.

John Wilmot Kimball: minister who claimed that someone planned to hijack a Delta plane in Dayton, Ohio, on November 14, 1969, but said not to worry because he was carrying a gun. He was disarmed by the FBI.

John Kirk: resident of Tukwila, Washington, age 55, who was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an “eventual confrontation” with the U.S. government and the UN. He was married to Judy C. Kirk, 54, also arrested.

Judy C. Kirk: resident of Tukwila, Washington, age 54, who was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an “eventual confrontation” with the U.S. government and the UN. She was married to John Kirk, 55, also arrested.

John Kivlen: would-be hijacker of a National Airlines DC8 flying from Los Angeles to Miami on May 3, 1969. He told a flight attendant he wanted to go to Havana but then meekly returned to his seat. Prosecution was declined.

Nathan Israel Klegerman: Toronto man for whom the Royal Canadian Mounted Police issued a warrant on February 24, 1982. He fled Canada after word leaked of his participation in a North Korean-backed plot to assassinate South Korean president Chon Tu-hwan. He was charged with illegal possession of funds in connection with the crime. He reportedly had connections with a criminal organization engaged in narcotics trafficking, arms smuggling, and contract killings.

Honza Klugar: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Alan Knox: arrested on August 5, 1986, by the FBI in a raid on the South Side of Chicago headquarters of the El Rukn street gang. The FBI found more than 30 weapons, including an M-72-series light antitank weapon. The FBI said the group had sought out Libyan government representatives in New York, Chicago, and Texas to offer to conduct terrorist attacks in the United States for $2 million. On October 31, 1986, Knox was indicted on federal weapons charges. He was found guilty in December 1987 and sentenced.

Mike Kodzoman: one of two armed Croatians who seized the West German Consulate in Chicago on August 17, 1978, and demanded that the government prevent the extradition of Stjepan Bilandzic to Yugoslavia. In a phone conversation, Bilandzic urged the duo to surrender, which they did. They were held in a federal prison in lieu of $1 million cash bond each. On December 1, 1978, the two were acquitted of kidnapping and conspiracy charges but convicted of imprisoning a West German diplomat with a deadly weapon. They faced a maximum sentence of 10 years. Kodzoman was a distant relative of Bilandzic.

Joseph Konopka: alias Dr. Chaos. Konopka, age 25, was arrested on March 9, 2002, by University of Illinois–Chicago police with an accomplice, age 15, on suspicion of trespassing in a steam tunnel under the school's education building during the night. On March 11, Konopka was charged with storing powdered cyanide in an underground passage that is part of the Chicago Transit Authority's facilities. He apparently had broken into the storage room, where he had then hidden sodium cyanide and potassium cyanide. He was charged with possession of a chemical weapon and was held pending a hearing on March 13. He faced a maximum fine of $250,000 and a jail sentence. The unemployed man, a former systems administrator, had lived in the Chicago subway system for several weeks. He was wanted in Wisconsin for skipping out on charges of vandalizing power stations in Door County. He had attacked a television station transmitter, electric power stations, and a natural gas pipeline. In June, he failed to appear in court to face charges of burglary, theft, and criminal damage to communications towers. The Door County district attorney said he was a self-described anarchist, involved in the group The Realm of Chaos.

On December 20, 2002, Konopka pleaded guilty to causing power outages in Wisconsin. On March 13, 2003, he was sentenced to 13 years in prison. On April 12, 2003, Konopka said he wanted to withdraw his guilty pleas to separate out the federal charges.

Karim Koubriti: roommate of Youssef Hmimssa in Dearborn, Michigan, and one of several individuals arrested in late 2001 in connection with the discovery by Detroit police of a day planner that contained a sketch of a U.S. military base in Incirlik, Turkey, and an Arabic reference to a planned attack on former secretary of defense William Cohen. He was in contact with individuals who had financial dealings with two 9/11 Boston hijackers. Moroccans Koubriti, Ahmed Hannan, and Youssef Hmimssa remained in detention as of November 1, 2001, on charges of possession of false documents.

Following the arrest on November 5, 2002, of Abdel-Ilah Elmardoudi in Greensboro, North Carolina, authorities said that the foursome were members of Salafiyya and al-Takfir Wal Hijira, radical Islamist movements with ties to al Qaeda. They were planning "violent attacks against persons and buildings within the territory of Jordan, Turkey, and the U.S.," according to an August indictment. A trial for Koubriti, Hannan, and Ali Haimoud was scheduled for January 21, 2003. They were indicted by a federal grand jury as part of an al Qaeda support cell that procured false passports, Social Security numbers, and other documents. They had been tasked with purchasing weapons and finding security breaches at Detroit Metropolitan Airport to "directly access airlines." On September 6, 2002, he pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in Detroit to the charge of conspiracy to provide material support or resources to terrorists. His Detroit trial began on March 18, 2003. On June 3, 2003, the jury convicted him of conspiring to provide material support or resources to Islamic terrorists and to fraudulently obtaining documents such as government visas. On September 1, 2004, the government asked the Detroit federal judge to dismiss the convictions, saying it had uncovered prosecutorial misconduct in not sharing exculpatory evidence with the defense. U.S. District Judge Gerald Rosen threw out the terrorism charges on September 2, 2004, but said Koubriti must stand trial again on charges of document fraud. His trial on insurance and mail fraud began on December 15, 2004.

Dimitrios Koundanis: Greek American convicted with nine other people in an Athens court on June 1, 1979, for forming a right-wing terrorist organization and participating in 34 bombings. Koundanis, who had worked at a U.S. Navy communications base in Greece, received three and one-half years for possessing arms and participating in a terrorist group.

Mahmoud Youssef Kourani: Lebanese living in Dearborn, Michigan, age 32, who pleaded innocent on January 15, 2004, to charges of fighting, recruiting, and raising money for Hizballah. Prosecutors said he had conspired with his brother, Hizballah's chief of military security for southern Lebanon. A bail hearing was set for January 20. He faced 15 years in prison.

Rudi Siegfried Kuno Kreitlow: alias Charles Frank Metel. Unemployed chauffeur who on August 25, 1978, threatened to blow up Trans World Airlines Flight 830, a B707 flying from New York to Geneva, if Sirhan Sirhan, Rudolph Hess, and five Croatian prisoners were not released. He claimed to belong to the United Revolutionary Soldiers of the Council of Reciprocal Relief Alliance for Peace, Justice, and Freedom Everywhere. Police later arrested him after all passengers had left the plane. On February 24, 1979, he was convicted of threatening to blow up the plane. He faced a maximum fine of $10,000 and 20 years in jail.

Robert B. Krejcik: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Earl Leslie Krugel: on December 11, 2001, Los Angeles police arrested Krugel, age 59, and detained Irving David Rubin, age 56, as the two leaders of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) were assembling bombs to set off against the San Clemente offices of Representative Darrell Issa (R-California), a grandson of Lebanese immigrants, and against one of the city's largest mosques. The duo was charged with conspiracy to manufacture and detonate bombs at Arab and Muslim buildings. Krugel was picked up at his Reseda home as a police informant was handing him five pounds of gunpowder. Police found two drilled foot-long pipes, end caps, fuses, and a dozen rifles and handguns. The FBI had received a tip in October and had used wiretaps between the informant and the duo. The tapes recorded Krugel as saying that Arabs needed a wakeup call and that the JDL needed to do something to one of their "filthy" mosques. Rubin was grabbed while driving near his home after meeting with Krugel and the informant at Jerry's Famous Deli in Encino. Rubin was represented by attorney Peter Morris. The duo faced 30 years in prison. Potential targets discussed by the JDL included the King Fahd Mosque in Culver City, the offices of the Muslim Public Affairs Council on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles, and Issa's offices. On January 10, 2002, a federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Rubin and Krugel on charges of plotting to bomb the Muslim Public Affairs Council in Los Angeles, the King Fahd Mosque in Culver City, and a field office of Representative Darrel Issa. The charges carried life sentences.

Muharem Kurbegovic: arrested for the August 6, 1974, bombing of a terminal at Los Angeles International Airport that killed 3 and injured 35. He also threatened to assassinate a U.S. president with nerve gas and to explode a nerve gas device in the Capitol.

L

---

Jaan Karl Laaman: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the preceding two years in and around New York City. He was arrested in the Cleveland area in November 1984. On March 7, 1986, a federal court jury convicted him of the December 1983 bombing of a Navy recruiting office.

Osama bin Laden: variant Usama bin Ladin; aliases Usama bin Muhammadbin Awad bin Ladin, Shaykh Usama bin Ladin, The Prince, The Emir, Abu Abdallah, Mujahid Shaykh, Hajj, The Director, The Teacher. Founder of al Qaeda and member of a Saudi family that made its millions in construction. He studied at King 'Abd-al-Aziz University, where he was influenced by two members of the Muslim Brotherhood: 'Abdallah 'Azzam, a Jordanian Palestinian, and Muhammad Qutb, brother of the Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood's most extremist militant, Sayyid Qutb, who was executed by Egypt in 1966. He was born on July 30, 1957, in Saudi Arabia. He is left-handed and walks with a cane. He is circa six feet five inches and circa 160 pounds. He said on November 27, 1996, that his followers were responsible for the June 25, 1996, truck bombing of the U.S. military's compound at Khobar Towers near Dhahran that killed 19 U.S. airmen and wounded 547 others. On February 24, 1998, he issued a fatwa that allows attacks on Americans worldwide. He was placed on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List in June 1999. U.S. Rewards for Justice offered up to $25 million for his apprehension; the U.S. Senate voted 87–1 on July 13, 2007, to double it to $50 million. An additional $2 million is available via the Air Transport Association and Airlines Pilots Association.

As of October 2001, his cells were believed to be operating in the United States, Canada, Ecuador, Uruguay, Mauritania, Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Sudan, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Somalia, Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, Qatar, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan, Jordan, Lebanon, Azerbaijan, Chechnya, Albania, Bosnia, Germany, the United Kingdom, Spain, France, Italy, Bangladesh, Malaysia, and the Philippines.

Shaykh Usama bin Ladin: variant of Osama bin Laden.

Usama bin Muhammad bin Ladin: variant of Osama bin Laden.

Paul Laird: Laird, age 17, was one of two charged on March 24, 2003, in Clayton, Missouri, with second-degree arson and criminal possession of a weapon in the two firebombings in the first week of March 2003 of the Hindu Temple of St. Louis.

Hemant Lakhani: British arms dealer, age 68, arrested on August 12, 2003, by federal officials in Newark, New Jersey, who charged him with selling Russian shoulder-fired SA-18 missiles to agents posing as al Qaeda terrorists planning to take down U.S. planes on U.S. soil. Police in New York arrested Muslim and Malaysian resident Moinuddeen Ahmed Hameed and Orthodox Jew and Manhattan jewelry dealer Yehuda Abraham, 76, who ran a hawala that wired funds overseas to Lakhani, who is of Indian descent, for the Grouse/Igla missiles. Lakhani had approached Russian criminals for an SA-18 as part of what would have been a longer-term deal for 50 more for $5 million and for a separate deal for tons of C-4 plastic. The Russian Federal Security Service (FSB) alerted the United States of the purchase attempt and provided an inert SA-18 for the sting operation. The trio was initially held without bail. Lakhani was charged with providing material support to terrorists and illegal weapons dealing. The FBI taped 150 conversations Lakhani had with their undercover agents, including his praise of bin Laden and the 9/11 attacks. In January 2002, when an FBI informant claiming to be part of a Somali group seeking antiaircraft guns and missiles talked to Lakhani, the arms dealer said bin Laden "straightened them all out" and "did a good thing." In April 2002, the informant said he represented a buyer who needed missiles for jihad against planes; Lakhani observed, "The Americans are bastards."

On September 4, Lakhani's bail hearing was postponed to September 11 so that prosecutors could present a witness to bolster its case.

On December 18, prosecutors said Lakhani also had offered to deliver tanks, antiaircraft guns, and a radioactive dirty bomb. He was represented by attorney Henry E. Klingeman, who said his client was not a terrorist and had no history of illegal arms trafficking.

On April 27, 2005, a federal jury in Newark, New Jersey, convicted Lakhani, 69, of five counts of trying to sell shoulder-launched missiles to what he believed was a terrorist group planning to down airliners. He was convicted of attempting to provide material support to terrorists, money laundering, and other charges. On September 12, 2005, he was sentenced to 47 years in prison.

Boumediene Lakhdar: one of a group arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. On January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Lakhdar and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001.

Leslie Lamirande: one of three juveniles who used sharpened toothbrushes to hijack a Transair-Midwest Airlines Piper Navajo flying between Dauphin and Winnipeg, Canada, on April 13, 1971. The trio wanted to go to Yorkton, Saskatchewan, but the pilot used cloud cover to foil the youths and landed in Winnipeg, where the trio was taken into custody.

Christine Lamont: one of two Canadians convicted in the kidnapping of Brazilian supermarket mogul Abilio Diniz, who was freed in 1989 after police captured 10 suspects with links to the Chilean and Argentinian Revolutionary Left Movements (MIR). They were suspected of having ties with the Popular Revolutionary Forces. On November 20, 1998, Brazilian authorities placed Lamont and David Spencer on a Canadian airliner. They were to be eligible to apply for parole on December 28, 1998.

François Lanctot: one of three Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) members arrested by Canadian police on June 21, 1970. Lanctot, age 21, was planning to kidnap U.S. consul general Harrison W. Burgess.

Gary Alan Land: arrested by the FBI on May 2, 1995, as a material witness in the April 19, 1995, truck bombing of the Murrah Building in Oklahoma City in which 169 were killed and 500 injured. His movements in Kingman, Arizona, and Perry, Oklahoma, mirrored those of bomber Timothy McVeigh.

Paul T. Landers: would-be hijacker of an out-of-service National Airlines B727 at Pensacola Municipal Airport in Florida on January 3, 1975. Carrying a .22 caliber rifle, he hopped a fence, boarded the plane, and told the cleaning crew he was hijacking the plane. The cleaners overpowered him. On January 14, 1975, a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Florida indicted him. He apparently had hoped to attract attention to himself. He was convicted of air piracy on January 20, 1975, and committed suicide by hanging himself in prison three days later.

Russell Dean Landers: one of three members of the antigovernment Montana Freeman in Billings sentenced by a federal judge on November 6, 1998. They had been accused of organizing an assault on the U.S. banking system, partly through the circulation of falsified financial instruments. The trio had been arrested after an 81-day standoff in 1996. Landers received 11 years and 3 months for conspiracy, bank fraud, threatening a federal judge, and being a fugitive in possession of a firearm.

Bruce Alan Landy: would-be hijacker of an Air Florida B737 flying from Miami to Washington on October 16, 1980. He was overpowered by two passengers. He was charged with interfering with the duties of an Air Florida flight crew and faced 20 years in prison if convicted.

Peter Kevin Langan: alias Commander Pedro. One of five members of the Aryan Republican Army white separatist group indicted by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia on January 30, 1997, on charges of conspiracy to rob banks. They were accused of carrying out seven bank robberies in Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin from 1994 to 1995 and buying weapons and funding recruiting efforts with the proceeds. One of them testified that the group aimed to “commit terrorist acts against the U.S. government.”

Bashir bin Lap: alias Lillie; variant Lillie. A senior associate of Jemaah Islamiyah leader Hambali who provided information that led to the capture of Hambali in Thailand. On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

Richard Charles LaPoint: would-be hijacker of Hughes Airwest Flight 800, a DC9 flying from Las Vegas to Reno on January 20, 1972. The Denver salesman had been a helicopter gunner in Vietnam. He carried a fake bomb and demanded $50,000 and two parachutes. He permitted the passengers and flight attendants off the plane. He parachuted in daylight outside Denver, spraining an ankle upon landing. He was spotted by the pilot of a BAC111, who led patrolmen to the field with a set of locator beacons of the type used to find downed Vietnam pilots. LaPoint was sentenced to 40 years for aircraft piracy on May 25, 1972.

Jose Maria Larrechea: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Abdul Latif: also known as Carl E. Roper. Held on $75,000 bond as one of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. Latif was convicted in 1966 and given probation for possession of a dangerous weapon and grand larceny. He was found not guilty by reason of insanity in a bank robbery in 1966. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 36 to 108 years. The D.C.

Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980.

Gary Rex Lauck: alias Gerhard Lauck. Lincoln, Nebraska, right-wing extremist, age 43, known as the Farm Belt Fuehrer who on August 22, 1996, was found guilty in a German court of distributing neo-Nazi propaganda materials and inciting racial hatred. He was sentenced to four years in prison after a four-month trial in Hamburg. He claimed that he was wrongfully arrested in Denmark in March 1995 and extradited to Germany in August 1995. He also claimed that he was merely conducting a mail-order business from the United States, where his actions were legal. He published the newspaper NS-Kampfruf (National Socialist-Battle Cry) by his National Socialist German Workers' Party-Overseas Organization. His attorney said he would appeal.

William Leavitt: microbiologist and former Mormon bishop, age 47, arrested in Las Vegas on February 19, 1998, with Larry Wayne Harris, age 46, a Lancaster, Ohio, microbiologist, on charges of possessing anthrax for use as a weapon. Many speculated that Harris had intended to attack the New York subway system. The Army's biological lab at Fort Detrick later determined that he was carrying a harmless anthrax-based veterinary medicine instead; charges were dropped. He contended that biological weapons go virtually unregulated in the United States and overseas and wrote a manual on how to defend against an Iraqi biological attack. Police said Harris had inoculated Ohioans with an unknown substance. He had also looked into the Ebola virus. Harris was a sometime member of the white supremacist Aryan Nation and Christian Identity groups. He was charged on February 23 with violating probation for his 1995 conviction on federal charges of fraudulently buying bubonic plague bacteria by mail. He faced five years in prison.

On February 22, Leavitt said he would fast and pray until his name was cleared. The former Mormon bishop was released from a Las Vegas jail after being held for three days. He was a successful businessman who had taken in indigent children and was searching for cures for various diseases. His lawyer said he was searching for an anthrax vaccine.

An informant had told police that the duo had bragged that they had enough "military grade" anthrax hidden in their Mercedes trunk to "wipe out the city."

Josh D. Lee: one of eight members of the Fourth Reich Skin Heads white supremacist group arrested on July 15, 1993, for planning to spark a race war by blowing up the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in south central Los Angeles and assassinating Rodney King. The group had planned to sneak into the church as transients and then fire machine guns at the congregation and to place pipe bombs under pews. They also intended to kill influential black leaders across the nation. The group was the militant arm of a 50-member group associated with the White Aryan Resistance and was possibly linked with the Church of the Creator based in Niceville, Florida. Lee was a resident of Costa Mesa, age 23, and faced charges of weapons violations, including possession of several machine guns and silencers. He faced a 20-year sentence. He was held without bond.

August McCormick Lehman: American who was arrested on September 23, 1972, and charged with working with three Filipino opponents of president Ferdinand Marcos after admitting to plotting to kill Marcos and take over the government. On February 10, 1977, he was sentenced to six years in prison and fined $1,333.

Matthew Leibowitz: one of four American Jews who opened fire with M-16 rifles at a bus near Ramallah that was carrying Palestinians to work on March 4, 1984. The four fled in a Subaru but were captured later that day by Israeli security forces. Terror against Terror claimed credit. He confessed and was sentenced to three years and three months.

Craig Leitner: one of four American Jews who opened fire with M-16 rifles at a bus near Ramallah that was carrying Palestinians to work on March 4, 1984. The four fled in a Subaru but were captured later that day by Israeli security forces. Terror against Terror claimed credit. He was released when he agreed to turn state's evidence. He fled to the United States, where he was apprehended at Pace University's White Plains campus by a U.S. marshal.

Patricia Levasseur: wife of Raymond Luc Levasseur who was released from prison on November 29, 1989, after serving three and one-half years of a five-year federal term for harboring a fugitive—her husband.

Raymond Luc Levasseur: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the preceding two years in and around New York City. He was arrested in the Cleveland area in November 1984. On March 7, 1986, a federal court jury convicted him of the December 1983 bombing of a Navy recruiting office. On November 29, 1989, a jury in Springfield, Massachusetts cleared him and two other defendants on federal charges of trying to overthrow the government by force and were deadlocked on whether alleged bombings constituted racketeering. Two days later, the government said it would not seek a retrial. Levasseur was already serving a 45-year sentence on New York federal convictions for some of the bombings. The case had begun in May 1986 with an indictment against eight people on charges of seditious conspiracy, racketeering, and racketeering conspiracy. Each count carried a maximum term of 20 years and $20,000 in fines. The trial began in January 1989 against only three of the original defendants. Prosecutors said notebooks written in code detailed strategy of an underground group that bombed courthouses and other facilities and robbed banks from 1976 to 1984. Estimates of the trial costs reached $10 million, mostly for U.S. marshals to maintain security.

Brother Levi: alias of Lyglenson Lemorin.

David Levine: arrested with three other members of the Jewish Defense League on May 23, 1974, at the Lido Beach Jewish Center on Long Island while assembling bombs to be placed at the residence of the Soviet UN mission in Glen Cove, New York. They were held without bail on state and federal charges of conspiracy and bomb possession.

Imam A. Lewis: Lewis, age 26, of Cleveland, Ohio, was one of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI's $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

Ryan Daniel Lewis: Lewis, age 22, pleaded guilty on October 14, 2005, in a Sacramento, California, courtroom to attempted arson and arson in ecoterrorist firebombing incidents.

October Martinique Lewis: alias Khadijah. One of six people from Portland, Oregon, indicted on October 4, 2002, by federal authorities for conspiracy to join al Qaeda and the Taliban to wage war against the United States in Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks. Her ex-husband, Jeffrey Leon Battle, was also indicted. Lewis, age 25, was the first woman charged in the indictments of 18 al Qaeda supporters in the United States. She wired money several times to the co-conspirators when they traveled.

On October 7, Lewis pleaded not guilty in U.S. District Court in Portland to four federal counts. On October 10, Federal Magistrate Janice Stewart ordered Lewis freed on bail, subject to review the next day by a federal judge. (See also Jeffrey Leon Battle.)

Dennis Leyne: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, taken into custody in New York City, and then indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly had acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer based in Tucson, and then shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. On November 17, 1992, the four were ordered held on a total of $6.5 million bail and were ordered to Arizona to face charges.

Manuel Osvaldo Leyva Osorio: one of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Abu Faraj Farj al-Libi: variant al-Liby; alias Dr. Taufeeq. Third in command of al Qaeda. On April 30, 2005 (some reports say May 2), Pakistani authorities, with the assistance of U.S. intelligence, arrested the Libyan citizen, 42, who was wanted for the two assassination attempts against Musharraf and was also believed to have been a key planner of the 9/11 attacks. Pakistan said it would try him for the assassination attempts rather than hand him over to the United States. Pakistan had offered a $350,000 reward for his capture. He was arrested in the town of Mardan in the North-West Frontier Province with three other men following a shootout. He ran from his hideout and jumped over a cemetery wall and into a guest house, where he was found hiding. Police fired tear gas into the building, and al-Liby emerged. In follow-up raids, Pakistani authorities grabbed more than 20 other suspects, including at least 8 in Lahore on May 4. Among them were 3 Uzbeks, an Afghan, and 7 Pakistanis. He was also linked to terrorist plans to conduct attacks before the 2004 U.S. elections. In 2003, he had succeeded the arrested Khalid Sheikh Mohammed as al Qaeda's operational planner. On May 11, 2005, Pakistani's interior minister said that al-Liby was also involved in a plot to kill prime minister Shaukat Aziz, subject of a suicide bombing in July 30, 2004, near Islamabad. The suicide bomber killed eight other people, including Aziz's driver. On June 6, 2005, Pakistan said it had handed al-Liby to the Americans a few days earlier.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

Abu Anas al-Liby: variant Anas al-Libi; aliases Anas al-Sabai, Nazih al-Raghie, Nazih Abdul Hamed al-Ragie. Libyan indicted in 2000 in New York in connection with the August 7, 1988, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and for conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, to destroy buildings and property of the United States, and to destroy the national defense infrastructure of the United States. He faced life in prison without parole on various conspiracy charges. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He has claimed to have been born on March 30, 1964, and May 14, 1964, in Tripoli, Libya. He is circa six feet tall. He joined al Qaeda in the 1980s or early 1990s. The computer specialist was a member of the group's ruling council, the shura. He left Sudan before Osama bin Laden left in 1996 for Afghanistan and showed up in Qatar and then Manchester, United Kingdom, where he was given political asylum. In 2000, U.K. arresting authorities found that he had fled, leaving a 180-page terrorist manual on a computer disk. He apparently led the early al Qaeda resistance to U.S. operations in Afghanistan following the 9/11 attacks and then fled to Sudan. He is a member of an extremist Islamic group opposed to Muammar Qadhafi. He is between 5 feet 10 inches and 6 feet 2 inches.

On March 18, 2002, the United States announced his capture in Sudan the previous month. However, on March 19, 2002, the administration said that the individual in custody was not this Liby, but a person with a sound-alike name who was a “moderately high up” al Qaeda member wanted by a country other than the United States.

Lilie: variant Lillie; alias of Bashir bin Lap.

Preston Lit: arrested at his Philadelphia home and turned over to the FBI, who charged him with threatening to use explosive devices in connection with the package bomb that had been found on May 13, 2002, in a U.S. Postal Service mailbox in Philadelphia, with an attached note that mentioned al Qaeda and said “Free Palestine Now.” A police bomb squad detonated the bomb with a water cannon. Lit, age 53, had no known link to terrorist groups.

Luis Maria Lizarralde Izaguirre: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. A Uruguayan lower court granted extradition, but the decision was appealed before a higher court.

Pedro Maria Lizarralde Izaguirre: one of 14 members of the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992.

They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Although Spain requested extradition, he was released.

Jose Antonio Llama: on October 27, 1997, U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico and arrested four Cuban exiles apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Margarita Island off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group’s executive board. The duo was summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. They all were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted Llama and six other Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that the seven and others had begun plotting in 1995 to kill Castro. They had obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama had obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He then accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a hill-point stakeout that overlooked the airport. He recorded its location and an offshore spot into satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro. Llama was represented by attorney Jose Quinon.

On December 8, 1999, the jury found the five Cuban exiles not guilty of plotting to assassinate Castro. This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. The U.S. District Court jury deliberated for eight hours over two days before declaring not guilty on all charges Angel Alfonso, 59; Angel Hernandez Rojo, 62; Francisco Secundino Cordova, 51; Jose Rodriguez Sosa, 59; and Jose Antonio Llama, 67. Charges against another defendant had been dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Carlos Londono: hijacker of an Avianca Airlines DC4 flying from Barranquilla to Santa Marta, Colombia, and diverted to Cuba on September 22, 1968.

Floyd Raymond Looker: leader of the seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI's $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. The FBI said Looker had collected the explosives. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

On August 8, 1997, following a four-day federal trial, Looker was convicted of conspiracy to engage in manufacturing and dealing in explosives without a license. On August 13, Looker pleaded guilty to selling blueprints of the FBI's fingerprint complex in Clarksburg to what he believed was a terrorist group. He was sentenced to 18 years in prison. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

Cesar Lopez: alias Commandant Napo. Defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash. Operation White Terror had begun 13 months earlier with meetings with undercover FBI and DEA agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to the Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC), a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez and Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization, which carry life sentences. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Daniel Lopez del Abad: hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 1, a B727 flying from Newark to Miami on February 16, 1970, that was diverted to Havana. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury on July 1, 1970, in the district of New Jersey.

George E. Lopez: hijacker of National Airlines 28, a DC8 flying the San Francisco–Las Vegas–New Orleans–Tampa–Miami run on July 1, 1970, that was diverted to Havana. As of 1979, Lopez was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of Louisiana on December 18, 1970. Some reports named him as Bob Serra.

J. Lopez: alias for Miguel Montesino Sanchez.

Mireyz Lopez: Chilean exile wife of Marino Perez Rojas, an exiled Dominican student who on November 8, 1982, occupied the Peruvian Embassy in the Dominican Republic and took a hostage. He wanted either for the government to find him work or for Peru to grant him political asylum. The couple surrendered peacefully, and Perez was arrested. He had been exiled from the Dominican Republic during the government of Joaquin Balaguer, who was president from 1966 to 1978.

Oscar Lopez Riviera: indicted by a federal grand jury on September 7, 1977, on conspiracy and a variety of explosives-related charges following the August 3, 1977, bombing by the Armed Front for National Liberation (FALN) of the Mobil Building and another building that houses Defense Department security personnel in New York City. The Mobil bomb killed Charles Steinberg, a partner in an employment agency in the building, and injured eight others. On July 24, 1981, he was found guilty in the Chicago U.S. District Court of seditious conspiracy, armed robbery and weapons violations, and interstate transportation of stolen vehicles, for which he faced a maximum penalty of 70 years in prison. On July 3, 1986, three alleged FALN members were arrested for plotting to set off bombs at the Leavenworth, Kansas, federal prison to create a diversion so that the men could land a helicopter in the prison yard to free Lopez. The FBI objected to President Clinton's August 1999 offer of clemency to him and 15 other FALN members if they renounced violence, saying they still considered him a violent prisoner. Lopez rejected the clemency offer.

Samantha Dorinda Lopez: girlfriend of Ronald J. McIntosh, a Vietnam combat pilot who on November 5, 1986, landed a hijacked Aris Helicopter, Ltd. helicopter in the yard of a minimum-security federal correctional institution in Pleasanton/Dublin, 72 kilometers east of San Francisco, and flew off with Lopez. She was serving 50 years for bank robbery and kidnapping in Jacksonville, Florida. The duo was captured on November 15, 1986, while trying to pick up his wedding ring in Citrus Heights, California. On July 17, 1987, she was sentenced to five years.

Roberto Lopez: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army (ELN) guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum.

Victor M. Lopez-Flores: sentenced on February 1, 2002, to 27 months for helping Abdul Aziz Alomari and Ahmed Saleh Alghamdi, two of the 9/11 hijackers, illegally obtain Virginia ID cards.

Bernard Lortie: he was arrested on November 6, 1970, by Montreal and Quebec police and confessed at a coroner's hearing the next day to participating in the Front for the Liberation of Quebec (FLQ) kidnapping of Quebec minister for labor and immigration Pierre LaPorte on October 10, 1970. LaPorte was found dead on October 18. Lortie denied involvement in the murder or in the FLQ kidnapping of British Trade Commissioner James Cross on October 10, 1970. On November 2, 1971, he was sentenced to 20 years for kidnapping.

Hernan Ricardo Losano: Venezuelan detained on October 8, 1976, in Barbados and returned to Trinidad the same night. On October 18, 1976, he claimed to have placed the bomb that exploded on October 6, 1976, on Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. He was accompanied by Freddy Lugo. He was an employee of a Caracas detective agency run by Luis Posada Carriles, who was also held.

On October 22, 1976, Losano attempted suicide by slashing his wrist. On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted him on qualified murder charges, which carried a maximum penalty of 30 years. On September 17, 1980, a military prosecutor withdrew charges against the Carriles Publications cameraman. The prosecutor said investigative evidence against Losano had been refuted by a Scotland Yard report, which indicated that the explosion had occurred in the plane's cargo compartment, to which the accused did not have access. On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved him of charges of homicide and high treason in the bombing. However, he was not released, pending Supreme Court ratification of the verdict. On August 8, 1982, he escaped from the San Carlos Prison in central Caracas and fled to the Chilean Embassy, where he requested political asylum. He returned to his cell on August 11, 1982, when Chile turned down the asylum request.

On October 21, 1976, El Condor threatened to bomb a West Indies Airways plane in Trinidad and Tobago if Losano was not released.

Dang Y. Lu: Chinese immigrant, 28, of Brooklyn, New York, who tried to hijack American Eagle Flight 4959 on January 10, 2004, as it left New York's La Guardia Airport. He wanted to go to Australia. The plane landed safely at Dulles Airport, where he surrendered to the FBI. On January 12, he was arraigned before Magistrate Judge Theresa Carroll Buchanan in federal court in Alexandria, Virginia, on charges of air piracy. Court documents said he had been treated for mental illness. He faced 20 years if convicted on the charge of trying to take control of an aircraft in the "special aircraft jurisdiction" around Washington.

Zvonko Luburic: one of several people who assaulted Yugoslav consul general M. Bulajic and his wife at a New York City party on May 3, 1975.

Freddy Lugo: accompanied Hernan Ricardo Losano, a Venezuelan detained on October 8, 1976, in Barbados and returned to Trinidad the same night. On October 18, 1976, he claimed to have placed the bomb that exploded on October 6, 1976, on Cubana Airlines 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit.

On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted him on qualified murder charges, which carried a maximum penalty of 30 years. On September 17, 1980, a military prosecutor withdrew charges against the Carriles Publications cameraman. The prosecutor said investigative evidence against Lugo had been refuted by a Scotland Yard report, which indicated that the explosion had occurred in the plane's cargo compartment, to which the accused did not have access. On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved him of charges of homicide and high treason in the bombing.

On October 21, 1976, El Condor threatened to bomb a West Indies Airways plane in Trinidad and Tobago if Lugo was not released.

His homicide conviction in the October 1976 Cubana sabotage was upheld by a three-judge Venezuelan panel on August 4, 1987. The court agreed with a lower court's sentencing of 20 years in prison. His acquittal on treason charges was upheld.

Ivan Lukic: one of several people who assaulted Yugoslav consul general M. Bulajic and his wife at a New York City party on May 3, 1975.

M

---

Jesse Maali: Palestinian American involved in a federal immigration and money laundering case. On January 5, 2003, an acid bomb was used outside the apartment of John Reedy, a friend of an informer in the case. Maali's nephew was charged with assaulting Reedy.

Amer el-Maati: aliases Amro Badr Eldin Abou el-Maati, Amro Badr Abouelmaati. Canadian wanted for questioning by the FBI in connection with possible terrorist threats in the United States. He claims to have been born in Kuwait on May 25, 1963. He is six feet tall and weighs 209 pounds. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension and/or conviction.

Amro Badr Eldin Abou el-Maati: alias of Amer el-Maati.

Vato Machitidze: one of 18 people arrested and charged on March 15, 2005, who attempted to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices, and 13 others were charged with weapons trafficking.

Sheryl MacIntosh: wife of Thomas MacIntosh, and herself named as an unindicted co-conspirator by a New York court on August 19, 1976, on 11 charges, including the attempted bombing of the Iraqi UN mission on January 12, 1976, and the firing of four rifle shots at the Soviet residential complex in New York City on February 27, 1976. On December 16, four defendants were sentenced to prison terms of up to six years, and the fifth received a suspended sentence.

Thomas MacIntosh: one of four members of the Jewish Defense League indicted by a New York court on August 19, 1976, on 11 charges, including the attempted bombing of the Iraqi UN mission on January 12, 1976, and the firing of four rifle shots at the Soviet residential complex in New York City on February 27, 1976. On December 16, four of the defendants were sentenced to prison terms of up to six years, and the fifth received a suspended sentence.

Marlin L. Mack: resident, age 23, of Bellingham, Washington, who was one of several people arrested on June 27, 1996, and charged with conspiracy to make pipe bombs. They pleaded not guilty in a Seattle court on August 15. They were accused by the FBI of preparing for an “eventual confrontation” with the U.S. government and the UN.

Mohammed Maddy: Egyptian, age 44, charged in New York with sneaking his wife and children past airport security. As of November 2001, he was in federal custody in connection with Immigration and Naturalization Service and FBI investigations of the 9/11 attacks.

Haitham Maghawri: executive director of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF)—the nation’s largest Muslim charity—which raised $13 million from U.S. residents in 2000. Maghawri told the Immigration and Naturalization Service that he was once arrested for planting a car bomb in a foreign country. President Bush ordered HLF’s assets seized on December 4, 2001, saying some monies were used to fund Hamas efforts to “recruit suicide bombers and to support their families.” HLF aided the family of a Hamas terrorist jailed for killing a Canadian Jewish tourist in Tel Aviv, Israel. The FBI and Treasury Department raided offices and froze $1.9 million in HLF funds in five U.S. banks.

Maghawri was among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against the HLF, charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. Maghawri had already left the country. (See also Shukri Abu Baker.)

Peter Eaman Maguire: Dublin, Ireland, resident who was indicted on August 10, 1989, by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) surface-to-air missiles. The conspiracy apparently had begun in 1978. On April 21, 1994, Maguire, the admitted mastermind of the plot to provide the IRA with weaponry to destroy helicopters in Northern Ireland, pleaded guilty in Boston to violations of the U.S. Armed Export Control Act. He faced 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Thomas Oliver Maguire: one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, taken into custody in New York City, and then indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer based in Tucson, and then shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. On November 17, 1992, the four were ordered held on a total of $6.5 million bail and were ordered to Arizona to face charges.

Mohammed Zeki Mahjoub: store clerk, age 40, arrested in Canada in 2000 and accused of membership in a radical splinter group of the Egyptian Islamic Jihad organization, of working on a Sudanese farm run by bin Laden, of staying briefly with a senior al Qaeda member, and of lying about the visit when he entered Canada in 1995. He was held without formal charge on a security certificate, a procedure that was deemed constitutional by the Ottawa Federal Appeals Court on December 10, 2004. On February 23, 2007, Canada’s Supreme Court unanimously struck down the use of secret testimony to imprison and deport foreigners as possible terrorist suspects, saying it violated the Charter of Rights and Freedoms. The court suspended the ruling for a year, leaving six detainees—five Arabs and one Sri Lankan—in limbo. Two were in a special prison, three were free on bond, and the last was ordered released on bond. In mid-February 2007, a federal court ordered Mahjoub moved to house arrest.

Suzy K. Mahseredjian: Armenian American from Canoga Park, California, who was injured when a bomb she and a colleague were fabricating exploded in their Geneva, Switzerland, hotel room on October 3, 1980. She was acquitted of an explosives charge. The Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia had threatened reprisals against the United States for an FBI interrogation of her. The arrests provoked bombing reprisals in Beirut and four European cities by the October 3 Group.

Abdullah Mahsud: variant Mehsud. After his release in March 2004 from Guantánamo, he kidnapped two Chinese engineers in Pakistan in October 2004. One of them died during a rescue operation. Mahsud blew himself up in July 2007 when Pakistani police tried to arrest him.

Musa Abdul Majid: alias Derrick Pritchett. Takoma Park, Maryland, cabdriver accused by the FBI on January 3, 1981, of furnishing the gun and ammunition used by Daoud Salahuddin, assassin of Ali Akbar Tabatabai, former press attaché of the Shah's Iranian Embassy in the United States, on July 22, 1980. Majid apparently fled the country. U.S. District Court Judge Oren R. Lewis sentenced him to consecutive three-year terms on each of three counts of fraudulent weapons purchases.

Victor Malasaukas: unemployed aerospace engineer who smuggled a gun through Los Angeles International Airport security on March 5, 1981, and took over a Continental Airlines B727 on the ground. After all of his hostages left the plane, he ended his standoff and dropped his $3 million ransom demand. On August 10, 1981, he was sentenced to life in prison. The judge ordered him to undergo a 90-day evaluation, after which the sentence would be reviewed.

Daniel Joseph Maldonado: alias Daniel Aljughafi. Maldonado, age 28, was arrested by Kenyan police on January 21, 2007, and flown to the United States on February 12, 2007. On February 13, 2007, he appeared before Magistrate Judge Calvin Botley in Houston, accused of joining al Qaeda in Somalia to fight the internationally recognized government there and establish an Islamic state. He was ordered held without bail on federal charges of undergoing military training with a terrorist organization and conspiracy to use a destructive device. He was the first U.S. citizen to be prosecuted on suspicion of joining terrorists in Somalia. The complaint said that he had flown from Houston to Cairo in November 2005. In November 2006, he flew to Mogadishu and joined the Islamic courts and elements of al Qaeda. He said he was given an AK-47 assault rifle, fatigues, and combat boots and attended military training camps with al Qaeda members. A bomb maker taught him assembly techniques. He wanted to go into combat but contracted malaria. On February 21, Judge Botley ordered Maldonado jailed without bail. On April 20, 2007, Maldonado pleaded guilty to training with al Qaeda.

Mohammad Abass Malik: Pakistani arrested on August 18, 2000, by the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Los Angeles for being in the United States without proper documentation. He was wanted for questioning in the bombings of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires in 1992 and the Argentine-Israel Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in 1994.

Ripudaman Singh Malik: Sikh, age 54, captured on October 27, 2000, in connection with the June 23, 1985, bombing of Air India Flight 182 in Canada that killed 329 people. The millionaire ran a Vancouver radio station. He faced eight charges, including first-degree murder, conspiracy, and attempted murder. He was also charged with the attempted murder of the passengers and crew of Air India Flight 301, in which two baggage handlers were killed in a bombing in 1991 at Tokyo's Narita Airport. On April 28, 2003, his trial began. On March 16, 2005, British Columbia Supreme Court Justice Ian Josephson acquitted Indian-born Canadian Sikhs Malik and Ajaib Singh Bagri of murder and other charges in the bombing of Air India Flight 182, a B747 flying from Montreal to London that crashed off Ireland. They were also acquitted of the bombing at Tokyo's Narita Airport in baggage intended for an Air India flight. The judge said the key witnesses—former girlfriends, paid informants, and former business partners—were not credible. Prosecutors had claimed that the bombings were revenge by Sikh separatists for a 1984 raid by Indian forces at the Golden Temple at Amritsar, a holy site to Sikhs.

Sayed Abdul Malike: New York cabdriver, age 43, arrested by the FBI on May 22, 2003. He allegedly attempted to buy enough explosives “to blow up a mountain.” He also allegedly surveilled bridges and cruise ships in Miami and lied to the FBI about his activities. U.S. Magistrate Judge Rosanne L. Mann ordered him held without bail after Assistant U.S. Attorney Catherine Friesen said that he could be a terrorist and that she would prove that he tried to buy explosives in Queens. She warned that he might not have acted alone and was expecting Pakistani-based financing. Malike is a U.S. resident from Afghanistan. He was held on charges of unlawful possession of Valium and lying to law enforcement officers.

Imran Mandhai: Pakistani immigrant, age 19, of Hollywood, Florida. His accomplice, Shueyb Mossa Jokhan, of Hollywood, Florida, pleaded guilty on July 25, 2002, to a federal indictment that carried a 5- to 20-year sentence. He had hoped to destroy power stations, a National Guard armory, Jewish businesses, and Mount Rushmore. He told Judge William Dimitrouleas in Fort Lauderdale that they had scouted targets in Broward and Miami-Dade counties in pursuit of their jihad. Jokhan agreed to turn state's evidence in the August 12 trial of Mandhai. On August 8, Mandhai pleaded guilty to conspiring to bomb power stations, a National Guard armory, and Jewish-owned businesses. He faced a 5- to 20-year sentence and a $250,000 fine. Jokhan received 4 years and 10 months on October 4. Mandhai was scheduled for sentencing on October 17.

Ali Abdul-Mani: alias Lee Curtis Manning. Indicted on July 16, 1981, for renting the vehicle used for the escape in the assassination of Ali Akbar Tabatabai, former press attaché of the Shah's Iranian Embassy in the United States, on July 22, 1980. On December 3, 1981, a D.C. Superior Court jury found him guilty in the case. On February 18, 1982, Judge Fred B. Ugast sentenced him to 5 to 18 years for making a false stolen car report as part of the cover-up a week after the assassination. He had lent the rental car to the assassin, who used it to escape after the shooting. Abdul-Mani was also sentenced to 15 months to 7 years for lying to a grand jury when he testified that he had never lent the car to the assassin. He was a member of the Islamic Guerrillas in America, a small organization with ties to black American Muslims.

Prince Manna: alias of Narseale Batiste.

Carol Ann Manning: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the preceding two years in and around New York City. She remained at large.

Robert S. Manning: Jewish Defense League member and fugitive in Israel who in July 1988 was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of aiding and abetting in the sending of a letter bomb to the Manhattan Beach offices of Prowest Computers owner Brenda Couthamel on July 17, 1980. The bomb killed her secretary, Patricia Wilkerson. Manning had been solicited to send the bomb by William Ross. He faced a life sentence.

Rochelle Ida Manning: wife of Robert S. Manning and indicted on charges of aiding and abetting in the sending of a letter bomb to the Manhattan Beach offices of Prowest Computers owner Brenda Couthamel on July 17, 1980. The bomb killed her secretary, Patricia Wilkerson. Manning's husband had been solicited to send the bomb by William Ross. She faced a life sentence. She was in custody awaiting a November 1, 1988, trial.

Thomas William Manning: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the last preceding years in and around New York City. He remained at large. On March 7, 1986, a federal court jury convicted him of the December 1983 bombing of a Navy recruiting office.

Ali M. Mansour: Hattiesburg, Mississippi, resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Manuel: alias of Jose Yamil Ramos Riano.

Ali Maqtari: Yemeni detained by the United States in October 2001 in connection with the 9/11 investigation.

Nabil al-Marabh: on September 17, 2001, Detroit police raided a two-story brick duplex on Norman Street, searching for the Kuwaiti bin Laden associate who had once lived there. They found a day planner that contained a sketch of a U.S. military base in Incirlik, Turkey, and an Arabic reference to a planned attack on former secretary of defense William Cohen. Chicago police arrested al-Marabh, age 34, two days later at a liquor store. Nine days later, the Secret Service arrested Youssef Hmimssa, 30, a Moroccan Chicago cabdriver whose fake ID appeared in the same bedroom as the day planner. Al-Marabh had financial dealings with Boston hijackers Ahmed Alghamdi and Satam Al Suqami and was a close friend of Raed Hijazi, a former Boston cabbie on trial in Jordan for his role in an aborted plot to bomb Jordanian hotels and tourist sites filled with Americans and Israelis celebrating the millennium. Hijazi told American and Jordanian authorities that al-Marabh was a bin Laden agent. Boston cabdriver al-Marabh moved between Canada, Boston, and Detroit before his arrest. Canadian Mounties raided three houses and a business in Toronto on September 26, searching for information in connection with al-Marabh.

In June 2001, al-Marabh was then wanted for failing to visit his parole officer after receiving a six-month suspended sentence in Boston for stabbing a roommate during an argument. In June, the Immigration and Naturalization Service caught him in the back of a tractor-trailer, carrying fake Canadian documents and trying to sneak into the United States at Niagara Falls. He was turned over to Canadian authorities, who released him on bond into the custody of his uncle. His uncle worked for a religious school in Canada run by a terrorist, according to news accounts. Al-Marabh went back to a new address in Dearborn, obtaining a duplicate license in Detroit in August. When federal agents raided al-Marabh's old Norman Street residence on September 17, they arrested three men inside, including Karim Koubriti and Ahmed Hannan, Youssef Hmimssa's old roommates, who denied knowing al-Marabh. Koubriti told agents there were false documents in the bedroom. Agents found a false passport and Social Security card for Michael Saisa, with Hmimssa's photo. They also found the day planner. Moroccans Koubriti, Hannan, and Hmimssa remained in detention as of November 1 on charges of possession of false documents. A Detroit federal grand jury subpoenaed handwriting samples.

In July 2002, al-Marabh agreed to a plea bargain, admitting to conspiring to enter the United States illegally. He was freed for eight months of time served and ordered to be deported to Syria.

Mariela: alias of Cecilia Maria Garcia Henao.

J. Marin: alias of Wilfred Roman Oquendo.

Ivan Marino: on July 7, 1980, Panama said it would consider the extradition request for him. He was somehow involved in the April 19 Movement of Colombia takeover of the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, in Colombia.

John Gerard Marques: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 14 bound for New York on June 25, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, he was still a fugitive.

Ali Saleh Khalah al-Marri: alias Abdullakareem A. Almuslam. Believed to be al Qaeda's senior operative in the United States following the 9/11 attacks. The Qatari was believed linked to Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, Abu Khabab al-Masri, and Dhiren Barot.

He arrived in the United States at age 17 in 1982, bouncing around at several colleges. He obtained a business degree from Bradley University in Peoria, Illinois, in 1991. In 1996, he left Qatar and moved to Afghanistan, where he trained for 15 to 19 months in al Qaeda camps, learning about poisons and toxins from Abu Khabab al-Masri. In the summer of 2001, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, or KSM, introduced him to Osama bin Laden in Afghanistan, where he was told to go to the United States before 9/11. In August, he went to the United Arab Emirates, where Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, the 9/11 paymaster, gave him $13,000 in cash. He enrolled at Bradley University on September 11, 2001, to earn his master's in computer science. On December 12, 2001, the FBI arrested him at his home. Searches of his computer records included research on purchasing large quantities of chemicals used to manufacture hydrogen cyanide. He was later charged with credit card fraud; he held more than 1,000 stolen credit card numbers. On December 23, 2002, he was charged with lying to federal agents about his phone calls to al-Hawsawi and travel. On March 1, 2003, KSM and Hawsawi were captured in Pakistan. KSM went on to give information about al-Marri. Al-Marri's case moved from New York to Illinois on May 12, 2003. On June 23, 2003, President Bush named him an enemy combatant, the only foreigner arrested in the United States to be so named. The president said that he was planning attacks against water reservoirs, the New York Stock Exchange, and U.S. military academies. Al-Marri was held in a Navy brig in Charleston, South Carolina. In August 2005, his lawyers sued the government, saying he was kept in "complete isolation from the world" and denied care for physical and mental ailments. On April 5, 2006, the Pentagon told a court that he "currently possesses information of high intelligence value, including information about personnel and activities of al Qaeda." His case became a cause celebre for human rights activists.

His younger brother, Jarallah, had been in an al Qaeda camp, had met with KSM in the late summer of 2001, and was held as an enemy combatant at Guantánamo Bay.

On August 23, 2007, the Richmond-based U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit granted a federal request that the full 10-member court review the 2–1 ruling of June 11, 2007, that said the government could not hold him indefinitely without being charged. He was held in a Navy brig near Charleston, South Carolina. On April 8, 2008, defense attorney Jonathan Hafetz told the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in Richmond that a 2003 Justice Department memo on military interrogations proved that his detention was illegal.

Thomas Kelly Marston: would-be hijacker, age 16, of National Airlines Flight 745, a B727 flying the Mobile–Pensacola–New Orleans route on March 8, 1971. He pulled a .38 while the plane was loading for departure from New Orleans and demanded to go to Montreal. While flying over Knoxville, Tennessee, the crew persuaded him to surrender. He was taken into custody by the FBI when the plane landed in Miami. He was released to his father's custody and was sentenced on November 8, 1971, to an indeterminate term under the youth corrections act for interference with a flight crew member.

Martha: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

Michael Martin: alleged to be involved in the attempted purchase in 1990 of a Stinger missile for the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Florida. He avoided arrest by fleeing to the United Kingdom but was caught and spent eight months in prison. The Irish citizen was extradited to the United States in December 1991. He was sentenced on June 9, 1995, to one year and four months in prison for his role and was not to receive credit for his eight months in the U.K. jail. However, in August 1995, officials at the federal corrections institution in Oakdale, Louisiana, mistakenly gave him credit for time served in the United Kingdom and released him into the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service. The error was discovered on September 7, just hours before he was to be taken to Atlanta for a flight to Ireland. A court issued an emergency stay. He was to be given credit for six months, part of the time he had spent in prison in the United States before being sentenced. He was expected to be eligible for parole in January or February 1996.

Walter Reed Martindale III: one of two men indicted in the United States on July 26, 1984, on charges of planning to assassinate Mohammad Fassi, a Saudi sheik living in London. Martindale, the chief of American International Trade Group, Inc., was offered $50,000 to assassinate Fassi. Martindale, who had worked for the U.S. Agency for International Development from 1971 to 1981, had visited London in April 1983 and October 1983 to plan the murder. He was arrested on October 26, 1983, at Gatwick Airport for carrying a semiautomatic gun and fined $2,400. On August 11, 1984, he pleaded not guilty to the assassination charge in the United States. Trial was set for October 9.

Angel Martinez: one of two Mariel refugees who on July 2, 1983, hijacked Pan American World Airways Flight 378 en route from Miami to Orlando and diverted it to Havana, where they were arrested.

Carlos Martinez: unemployed Spaniard who on August 16, 1983, held four hostages, including the consul general, for 10 hours at the Spanish Consulate in Los Angeles.

Larry Martz: associate of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI's $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia.

During the trial in the U.S. District Court in Wheeling on June 12, 1997, Martz, an Ohio militia member not charged in the plot, was quoted in FBI affidavits as indicating that the militia had considered killing Senator John D. "Jay" Rockefeller IV and Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan and their families in a "holy war" against the federal government. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

Dr. Mousa Muhammad Abu Marzook: variant Musa Abu-Marzuq. Head of the Hamas Political Bureau and its representative in Damascus, Syria, in December 1994. On July 25, 1995, he was arrested by Immigration and Naturalization Service officers at JFK International Airport when the name of the former resident of Falls Church, Virginia, appeared on a terrorist lookout database. Israel believed he oversaw Hamas's terrorist campaign and requested that he be sent to Israel. He had lived in the United States for 14 years and had been given permanent resident alien status in 1990. He was returning from the United Arab Emirates via the United Kingdom at the time of his arrest.

He was born in Gaza in 1951. He began graduate studies in engineering at Louisiana State University in 1973 and earned an engineering doctorate in the 1980s. He left the United States five months prior to his arrest for Jordan, where he was expelled in June 1995 after taking public credit for attacks on Israeli soldiers and citizens. Israel linked him to 13 terrorist attacks beginning in March 1988, leading to the deaths of at least 79 Israeli and foreign civilians and 40 military or security personnel. Israel said that in 1989, he transferred $100,000 to Hamas in Gaza and gave it another $100,000 in 1992 to finance "military operations." His release was demanded on November 13, 1995, by the group that set off a car bomb in a parking lot of a building belonging to the Saudi National Guard in Riyadh, killing five American military trainers and wounding 60 others. On May 8, 1996, New York U.S. District Court Judge Kevin Duffy said Marzook could be extradited to Israel. The United States released him on May 5, 1997, sending him to Jordan, where he pledged to continue working for the political wing of Hamas. He agreed to surrender his U.S. residency and not to contest terrorism accusations that had prompted his initial detention. On August 30, 1999, Jordanian police issued an arrest warrant for him. He was deported to Iran on September 22, 1999. On August 22, 2003, President Bush froze his assets and called on allies to join him by cutting off European sources of donations to Hamas.

On August 20, 2004, the Justice Department unsealed the indictments of Marzook; former Howard University professor Abelhaleem Hasan Abdelraziq Ashqar of Fairfax County, Virginia; and Muhammad Hamid Khalil Salah, 51, of suburban Chicago, who was arrested on August 19. They were charged in a 15-year racketeering conspiracy to funnel money to Hamas, which was deemed a "criminal enterprise." The indictment said that beginning in 1988, the trio conspired with 20 others to use bank accounts in Mississippi, Ohio, Virginia, Wisconsin, and other states to launder millions to Hamas. The money was used to pay for false passports, kidnappings, murders, and other crimes in Israel. U.S. officials planned to seize $2.7 million.

Antonio Mas Mas: Spanish student who joined the Tupamaros at Montevideo University and was arrested by Uruguayan security officials on March 29, 1973. He was held for murdering USAID official Daniel Mitrone, who was kidnapped by the Tupamaros on July 31, 1970. He was sentenced on February 16, 1977, to 30 years in prison and 12 years of additional unspecified security measures, the maximum punishment provided by the penal code. He was also charged with murdering Pereira Garay, a police agent, and Ruben Zambrano, a guard, in collaboration with other terrorists, and with the shooting of police officer Hector Moran Charquero. He was also believed to have been an accessory in the kidnapping of Uruguayan political Ulysses Pereira Reverbel and U.K. ambassador Sir Geoffrey Jackson.

Noble B. Mason: one of three hijackers of Eastern Airlines 121, a DC8 flying from Atlanta to Miami on January 28, 1969, and diverted to Havana. A complaint was filed on March 29, 1974, in the middle district of Florida.

Abu Hamza al-Masri: born Mustafa Kamel Mustafa. A London resident and member of the Islamic Army of Aden, which claimed credit for the USS Cole bombing. On April 19, 2002, the United States froze his assets.

On May 27, 2004, at U.S. request, a U.K. anti-terrorist squad arrested Masri, 47, a Muslim cleric whose Finsbury, London, mosque was a focal point for radical Islamists. Police had earlier closed his mosque. U.S. officials unsealed a federal indictment charging him with planning terrorist acts in Oregon, Afghanistan, and Yemen. He was accused of planning a military training camp for jihadists in rural Bly, Oregon, in 1999 with James Ujaama (who had turned state's evidence) and of leading a plot by the Islamic Army of Aden to take 16 Western tourists hostage in Yemen in December 1998 (the group kidnapped 12 Britons and 2 Americans in Yemen). The indictment said he had provided a satellite phone to the Islamic Army of Aden and received three calls in London from them the day before the kidnapping. He offered to serve as an intermediary, speaking to the kidnapping leader. The indictment was handed up on April 19 by a federal grand jury in New York.

The Egyptian had become a U.K. citizen in 1981. He had earlier worked as a nightclub bouncer. He lost both hands and an eye while fighting the Soviets in Afghanistan. He often praised bin Laden and blamed the Jews for 9/11. U.K. authorities believed he had recruited Richard Reid, the would-be shoe bomber of December 2001, and Zacarias Moussaoui, the would-be 20th 9/11 hijacker. In 2003, the United Kingdom declared Masri a threat to national security and moved to strip him of his U.K. citizenship. He was represented by attorney Maddrassar Arani. He was eligible for the death penalty for the kidnapping plot; however, the United Kingdom has no death penalty. The United States requested extradition. He was also wanted in Yemen, which does not have an extradition treaty with the United Kingdom. Yemen said police had arrested a carload of 10 radicals, including Masri's son, around the time of the kidnapping. The group was carrying explosives and planning to attack a British Consulate and two churches.

On August 26, 2004, British police arrested him on suspicion of involvement in "the commission, preparation or instigation or acts of terrorism," holding him at London's high-security Belmarsh prison. On August 27, antiterror police were given until September 2 to question him. He had been held at Belmarsh since May 2004, pending extradition to the United States. In April 2004, a federal grand jury in New York indicted him on charges of seeking to establish a military training camp for Muslim terrorists in Bly, Oregon, and aiding the kidnapping of 16 Western tourists in Yemen in 1998.

On October 19, 2004, British prosecutors charged him with 10 counts of soliciting others to murder nonbelievers, including Jews; 5 counts of "using threatening, abusive or insulting words or behavior with the intention of stirring up racial hatred"; and 1 count of possessing a terrorist document. The charges could lead to a life sentence. Observers believed that this would add years to the U.S. extradition request. He remained in London's Belmarsh Prison. In February 2006, he was sentenced in the United Kingdom to seven years in prison for incitement to kill non-Muslims.

On February 7, 2008, the British Home Office approved his extradition to the United States to face charges in connection with the Oregon terror camp case. He had 14 days to appeal, which he did on February 20, 2008.

On June 20, 2008, a London court quashed the Egyptian-born radical cleric's attempt to block his extradition to the United States to face terrorist charges for setting up a terrorist training camp in Bly, Oregon, in 1999–2000 and for plotting the seizing of 16 Western hostages in Yemen in 1998.

Petar Matavick: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines (TWA) Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 that dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived, and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn. The U.S. court of appeals restored two air piracy counts that had been dismissed by a U.S. district court on a motion by the hijackers, accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. He was convicted on May 5, 1977, of air piracy and conspiracy and sentenced to 30 years on July 21.

Adolfo Matos: one of seven members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) who renounced violence in accepting President Clinton's offer of clemency in August 1999.

Dr. Plinio Matos Moquete: Dominican Republic communist lawyer accused of being the leader of a band of leftist guerrillas who robbed the Royal Bank of Canada of $50,000 in November 1971. On January 12, 1972, a daylong battle with a group of suspects resulted in police using bazookas and mortars, with eight policemen and four guerrillas dying in the firefight. Matos escaped and was promised an impartial trial by president Joaquín Balaguer if he surrendered. The release from prison of the leader of the 12th of January Liberation Movement in the Dominican Republic was demanded by the kidnappers of Barbara Hutchison, U.S. Information Service director in Santo Domingo, which group then took over the Venezuelan Consulate on September 27, 1974. By 1976, he was jailed in Vias Vinas on charges of robberies and other criminal actions. His release was to be demanded by 30 persons, most of them Dominicans, who were arrested on October 21, 1976, in a plot to kidnap the Dominican ambassador to Venezuela, Pedro Padilla Tonos.

Susan May: arrested on arms smuggling charges on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when a U.S. couple took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van was carrying 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. May's Irish boyfriend, Sean Hughes, was arrested on the same charges.

Melvin Mayes: member of the El Rukn street gang whose Chicago headquarters was raided by the FBI on August 5, 1986. The FBI found more than 30 weapons, including an M-72-series light antitank weapon. The FBI said the group had sought out Libyan government representatives in New York, Chicago, and Texas to offer to conduct terrorist attacks in the United States for $2 million. On October 31, 1986, Mayes was indicted on federal weapons charges. He was found guilty in December 1987 and sentenced. He remained at large.

Ornetta Mays: would-be hijacker of a Pan American World Airways B727 at Hopkins International Airport in Cleveland, Ohio, on January 4, 1985. She demanded to be flown to Rio de Janeiro. She was critically wounded when the FBI stormed the plane.

Wassim I. Mazloum: legal permanent resident alien, age 24, who came to the United States from Lebanon in 2000 and who was one of three people living in Toledo, Ohio, charged by the FBI on February 21, 2006, with planning to attack U.S. troops in Iraq by setting up a Middle Eastern terrorism training camp. Between November 2004 and August 2005, the trio learned to build bombs and shoot handguns while setting up a fraudulent nonprofit organization. Formal charges included conspiracy to kill Americans abroad, providing material support to terrorists, taking weapons training, and trying to acquire or build explosives. They pleaded not guilty in federal courts in Cleveland and Toledo to charges of conspiracy to kill or maim people outside the United States. During their trial on April 23, 2008, undercover informant Darren Griffin said the trio had met only once during the two years he had investigated them. A former Army Special Forces soldier posing as a radical recorded the men talking about training in explosives, guns, and sniper tactics for about two years beginning in 2004. Mazloum co-owned a Toledo auto dealership with his brother.

The three defendants were convicted by a federal grand jury in Ohio on June 13, 2008, of plotting to kill U.S. soldiers in Iraq. U.S. District Judge James G. Carr did not set a sentencing date. The trio faced life in prison.

Luis Mazo Arango: arrested on March 30, 1990, with three other people in connection with the March 27, 1990, kidnapping of American Gerardo Robinson Davila near the Santa Paola neighborhood in the northern part of Cali, Colombia.

Joseph Mazzachelli: resident of Manorville, New York, age 42, and one of two men charged on June 13, 1996, with conspiracy to commit murder by seeking to assassinate Long Island Republican Party officials with radium. His fellow defendant, John Ford, apparently intended to kill Suffolk County GOP leader Jon Powell by spreading radium on the seat of his car or in his food. Republican county legislator Fred Towle and Brookhaven Public Safety Director Anthony Gazzola were also to be killed. Police found five canisters of radium in the home of Ford, a former court officer who had once led a UFO group. Police also confiscated weapons, ammunition, a mine detector, a gas mask, and militia literature.

Sean John McCann: Canadian arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempted to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines. On October 4, 1990, a federal judge in Fort Lauderdale dismissed all charges against McCann after federal agents admitted they had erred when they said in sworn affidavits that the Toronto resident had been a lookout during a meeting between undercover agents and the alleged smugglers to set up the weapons deal. He was more than 1,000 miles away in Texas at the time.

John C. McCarthy: Specialist 4 would-be hijacker who took a ticket agent hostage at McGhee Tyson Airport in Knoxville, Tennessee, on May 19, 1978. McCarthy surrendered to the FBI. He was AWOL from Fort A. P. Hill near Fredericksburg, Virginia. He told his roommate that he intended to hijack an airplane. He was armed with an M-16, a .45 caliber pistol, a large supply of ammunition, a bayonet, a parachute, and a gas mask.

Kevin William McCarthy: resident of Philadelphia who was one of five members of the Aryan Republican Army white separatist group indicted by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia on January 30, 1997, on charges of conspiracy to rob banks. They were accused of carrying out seven bank robberies in Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin from 1994 to 1995 and buying weapons and funding recruiting efforts with the proceeds. One of them testified that the group aimed to “commit terrorist acts against the U.S. government.”

Joseph McColgan: Irish citizen arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempting to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines.

Richard Floyd McCoy: student majoring in law enforcement at Brigham Young University who used two guns, a hand grenade, and plastic explosives to hijack United Airlines Flight 885, a B727 flying from New York to Los Angeles on April 7, 1972. He demanded $500,000 and six parachutes and diverted the plane to San Francisco, where the passengers deplaned. He flew on to Salt Lake City to pick up the money. He jumped in the vicinity of Provo, Utah. He was arrested at his home by the FBI on April 10. During his trial, he feigned illness and escaped via the restroom into the street but was captured three blocks away. On July 10, 1972, he was sentenced to 45 years for air piracy. He escaped on August 10, 1974, and was killed while resisting capture in a shootout on November 10, 1974. He and a friend had talked about parajacking after Richard Charles LaPoint had received $50,000 in January 1972.

William James McCranie Jr.: plumber from Crawford County, Georgia, age 30, who on April 26, 1996, was arrested by Treasury agents as one of two members of the 112th Volunteer Battalion of the Militia at Large of the Republic of Georgia near Macon, Georgia. They were planning to make dozens of pipe bombs over the weekend in preparation for a “war” against the UN and the New World Order. The duo was arraigned before federal magistrates in Columbus and Macon. On November 2, 1996, McCranie was indicted in U.S. District Court on two counts of conspiring to use a destructive device and one count of possession of such a device. He was charged with threatening the life of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) supervisor in Macon. He faced a life sentence.

After deliberating for 23 hours, a federal jury announced on November 6, 1996, that it had found him guilty on two of the five counts of conspiracy to use a destructive weapon in a violent crime and possession of illegal explosives. He was acquitted of a second conspiracy count. He was found not guilty of threatening the ATF supervisor. Sentencing was expected to take place within two months. Observers believed that he would receive a maximum of 17 to 22 years. Defense lawyers said they would appeal.

John McCullogh: head of a local roofers union and Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter with close ties to local organized crime who was murdered in December 1980, reportedly by Philadelphia crime boss Philip Testa, who himself died of a pipe bomb in March 1981, probably at the hands of the IRA.

Eric Taylor McDavid: McDavid, age 28, of Foresthill, near Auburn, was one of three Earth Liberation Front members arrested by the FBI on January 13, 2006, in Auburn, 30 miles east of Sacramento, on suspicion of plotting to blow up U.S. Forest Service facilities, cell phone towers, and power-generating facilities throughout northern California. A court appearance was scheduled for January 17.

Harold Eugene McDowell: international businessman who was selling communication equipment to the Palestine Liberation Organization in the early 1980s. He was placed on probation after pleading guilty to one count of conspiring to illegally possess and transport explosives across state lines. Reporters suggested that the material had been intended for the assassination of president Ronald Reagan and Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin during the latter's visit to the White House in September 1981. The explosives were placed in a locker the day before Begin arrived. He was listed as an unindicted co-conspirator in the trial of Jordanian-born Abdul-Hafiz Mohammed Nassar.

Ernest Timothy McGhee: birth name of Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis.

Nancy McGovern: see Nancy Hershovitz.

Daniel McGowan: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower.

Ronald J. McIntosh: Vietnam combat pilot who on November 5, 1986, landed a hijacked Aris Helicopter, Ltd. helicopter in the yard of a minimum-security federal correctional institution in Pleasanton/Dublin, 72 kilometers east of San Francisco, and flew off with Samantha Dorinda Lopez, his girlfriend who was serving 50 years for bank robbery and kidnapping in Jacksonville, Florida. McIntosh had been given a bus ticket for a transfer to another prison but just walked away. He rented the helicopter but once in the air pulled a gun on the pilot. The duo was captured on November 15, 1986, while trying to pick up his wedding ring in Citrus Heights, California. On July 17, 1987, he was sentenced to 25 years.

Edmond M. McKee Jr.: would-be hijacker of National Airlines Flight 67, a B727 flying from Tampa to Miami and Melbourne, Florida, on March 7, 1972. The hijacker, born in the Panama Canal Zone, demanded to go to Sweden. The captain talked him out of this, and he was overpowered by a federal marshal. Charges against him were dismissed on July 25, 1973, and he was placed under state supervision. No charges were brought against him by the state.

Kevin Joseph McKinley: arrested on October 12, 1984, and held in West Palm Beach, Florida, for trying to buy a Stinger antiaircraft missile. He said his group of Provisional Irish Republican Army

(IRA) terrorists “was responsible for many bombings without being caught and was responsible for an attempt to assassinate Margaret Thatcher at Brighton.” He and three other IRA members were charged with conspiracy and arms export violations.

In other reports, he was arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other IRA members for attempting to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines.

McKinley was also indicted in a case in which four people were arrested on November 11, 1992, taken into custody in New York City, and then indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson, Arizona, on August 26, 1992. In November 1989, they allegedly had acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer based in Tucson, and then shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the IRA in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. On November 17, 1992, the four were ordered held on a total of $6.5 million bail and ordered to Arizona to face charges.

Irene McKinney: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 8, a B747 flying from Los Angeles to New York City on January 28, 1979. She handed the flight attendant a note saying she was “willing to die for the cause, but I don’t know what the cause is.” She demanded that Charlton Heston, Jack Lemmon, or Lindsay Wagner go to a Trans World Airlines ticket counter in the Los Angeles airport terminal and read a message hidden there on national television. The plane landed at JFK, and she was disarmed by the FBI the next day. She was recently divorced and was distraught over losing custody of her two children.

Peter Gabriel McMullen: former member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army who was denied political asylum by the Ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on April 26, 1986. He had become a U.K. and U.S. informer after allegedly engaging in terrorist activities during the 1970s. On December 16, 1986, he was arrested by Salt Lake City police in a parking lot outside his suburban apartment. He was deported to Ireland on December 23, 1986, on charges stemming from explosions at British Army barracks in Belfast in 1972 and North Yorkshire in 1974. The former British Army paratrooper and explosives expert was also wanted for the 1979 assassination of Lord Louis Mountbatten.

Jean McNair: one of five Black Panther Party sympathizers who hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 841 heading for Miami, Florida, on July 31, 1972. In Miami a $1 million ransom was paid, and the hostages were freed, and the plane went on to Algiers the next day. The money was returned to Delta on August 23, 1972. Four of the hijackers, including McNair, were arrested in Paris on May 28, 1976, for carrying false U.S. passports. They appealed to the French people to turn down a U.S. extradition request because they could not get a fair trial because of racial discrimination. The U.S. extradition request was turned down, and they were ordered to stand trial in France on hijacking charges.

Melvin McNair: one of five Black Panther Party sympathizers who hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 841 heading for Miami, Florida, on July 31, 1972. In Miami a $1 million ransom was paid, and the hostages were freed, and the plane went on to Algiers the next day. The money was returned to Delta on August 23, 1972. Four of the hijackers, including McNair, were arrested in Paris on May 28, 1976, for carrying false U.S. passports. They appealed to the French people to turn down a U.S. extradition request because they could not get a fair trial because of racial discrimination. The U.S. extradition request was turned down, and they were ordered to stand trial in France on hijacking charges.

Martin Joseph McNally: hijacker of American Airlines Flight 119, a B727 flying the New York–St. Louis–Tulsa route on June 23, 1972. He carried a machine gun and forced the captain back to St. Louis, where he allowed most of the passengers to depart. While circling St. Louis, he demanded $502,200, plus parachutes and a shovel. The hijacker transferred planes and demanded that the captain fly him to Toronto. En route, he bailed out over Peru, Indiana, but lost the money in the slipstream. He was arrested in Detroit on June 28, 1972. A Polish-born accomplice, Walter J. Petlikowsky, was arrested two days later. McNally was sentenced to two concurrent life terms for aircraft piracy on December 14, 1972.

On May 24, 1978, Barbara Ann Oswald tried to hijack a helicopter from St. Louis to a Marion, Illinois, federal penitentiary to help three inmates escape. She was shot to death by the pilot. She had chartered the Fostaire Helicopter Company Bell 206B Jet Ranger, hoping to free Martin J. McNally and Garrett B. Trapnell, convicted hijackers, and James K. Johnson, a bank robber.

Kenneth Carl McPeck: would-be hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 297, a CV880 flying from Detroit to Miami on January 13, 1969. The former mental patient, who was traveling with his ailing son, age 3, was arrested before he could get the plane to Havana.

Justice McQueen: one of 18 people arrested and charged on March 15, 2005, who attempted to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices, and 13 others were charged with weapons trafficking.

Nelson McQueen Jr.: also known as Abdul Razzaq.

Megan McRee: American who was deported from Russia, accused of communicating with Islamic extremists and proposing attacks on Hollywood. FBI agents interviewed and released her on January 30, 2003.

Timothy James McVeigh: on April 19, 1995, set off a truck bomb at the Alfred P. Murrah Building in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, killing 169 people and injuring more than 500. Damage estimates ranged from $750 million to $1 billion. He was arrested on April 21, 1995. He was a member of the right-wing Michigan Militia, which views the U.S. government as the enemy of the common man. He was carrying political documents, including a copy of the Declaration of Independence; material on the raid on the Branch Davidian compound in Waco, Texas two years earlier; material on the battles of Lexington and Concord; an antigovernment leaflet; and quotations from political philosophers. He had served in the Army and was decorated for his service as a gunner on a Bradley fighting vehicle in Desert Storm. After returning from the Gulf War, an injury prevented him from successfully competing for a position with the Green Berets. He was discharged as a sergeant on December 31, 1991. He supported himself buying and selling guns as T. Tuttle.

On August 15, 1995, he was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Ronald L. Howland. He pleaded not guilty to an 11-count indictment that charges he carried out a terrorist attack. A grand jury formally accused him on August 10, 1995. On June 2, 1996, the jury found him guilty on all 11 counts of murder, conspiracy, and using a weapon of mass destruction in the bombing. The jury recommended execution on June 13, 1996. The judge sentenced him to death on August 14, 1996.

On June 18, 1996, the Senate voted 98–0 that he not receive military honors at a veterans cemetery.

McVeigh's attorneys appealed on January 16, 1998. On September 8, 1998, the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, in a 3–0 ruling, upheld his conviction and death sentence.

On June 11, 2001, an unrepentant McVeigh was executed by chemical injection in front of 24 witnesses and several government officials at the federal penitentiary in Terre Haute, Indiana.

Yahia Meddah: Algerian asylum-seeker, age 27, arrested in August 1996 by Immigration and Naturalization Service agents on suspicion of involvement in terrorism. Meddah had settled in West Virginia after entering the United States on a false French passport 10 months earlier. He requested political asylum, claiming he faced persecution from Algerian opposition forces, whom he claimed had kidnapped his father and sister and killed many of his relatives.

Human Rights Watch used his case to criticize U.S. treatment of immigration detainees, citing two suicide attempts on his part.

In 1997, an immigration judge denied his asylum request and attempt to stop a deportation order. The judge based his decision in part of secret evidence that he said showed Meddah's "connection with international terrorism."

On October 2, 1998, Meddah climbed over an eight-foot fence in a recreation area of Miami's Windmoor psychiatric hospital and fled to Canada.

La Medica: alias of Ivon Consuelo Izquierdo.

Tehar Medjadi: alias of Ahmed Ressam.

Colum Meehan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

Eamon Meehan: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

Youssef Samir Megahed: one of two Egyptian students, age 21, from the University of South Florida in Tampa who on August 4, 2007, were stopped for speeding in their 2000 Toyota Camry near a Navy base in Goose Creek, South Carolina. They were jailed after authorities discovered explosives in the car's trunk. The matériel included a mixture of fertilizer, kitty litter, and sugar; 20 feet of fuse cord; and a box of .22 caliber bullets. On August 31, they were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of carrying explosive materials across state lines. One of them faced terrorist-related charges of demonstrating how to use pipe bomb explosives, including the use of remote-controlled toys, to the other. The duo claimed they were going to the beach with fireworks purchased from Wal-Mart. With federal charges in place, state charges were expected to be dismissed as of September 4.

Authorities later determined that Ahmed Abdellatif Sherif Mohamed, the second student, had posted on YouTube a 12-minute video on how to use a remote-controlled toy car to set off a bomb. His computer had bomb-making files in a folder called "Bomb Shock."

On December 1, 2007, Mohamed said in a defense filing that the explosives were cheap "sugar rocket" fireworks he had made that would travel only a few feet. On January 31, 2008, the FBI announced that the items were low-grade fireworks.

But prosecutors countered on February 5, 2008, that the FBI report had been mischaracterized and that the items met the U.S. legal definition of explosives.

On June 13, 2008, driver Mohamed agreed to plead guilty to a federal charge of providing material support to terrorists. Prosecutors agreed to drop the other charges. Megahed still faced charges of illegally transporting explosives and possession of a destructive device.

Gabriel Megahey: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporter who on July 22, 1983, was sentenced to two to seven years for plotting to smuggle guns, explosives, and surface-to-air missiles from New York to the IRA in Northern Ireland. The contraband was seized in May 1982 before its planned shipment.

‘Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi: variants Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi, Abd al Basset al Megrahi; aliases Abdelbaset Ali Mohamed, Mr. Baset, Ahmed Khalifa Abdusamad. Libyan intelligence officer charged on November 14, 1991, by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., with 193 felony counts in the bombing of Pam Am 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, on December 21, 1988, in which 270 people were killed. He was accused of planting and detonating the bomb and was believed to be in Libya. On December 7, 1988, he had bought clothing and an umbrella and put them in a suitcase. He and Fhimah allegedly obtained Air Malta luggage tags to route the bomb-rigged suitcase as unaccompanied luggage on an Air Malta flight to Frankfurt. The suitcase was transferred to Pan American World Airways Flight 103A and, on arrival in London, was put on Pan Am Flight 103, which blew up 38 minutes after departing for New York.

The U.S. indictment included 189 counts for killing the 189 U.S. citizens, plus conspiracy, putting a destructive device on a U.S. civil aircraft resulting in death, destroying a U.S. civil aircraft with an explosive device, and destroying a vehicle in foreign commerce. The United Kingdom issued a similar arrest warrant. The United States and

United Kingdom twice demanded his extradition from Libya, which Mu’ammarr al-Qadhafi twice refused. On December 8, 1991, Libya announced it would try al-Megrahi and deliver the death penalty if he was found guilty. But the Libyan foreign minister said the government did not think he was guilty. The same was true of his accomplice Lamen Khalifa Fhimah.

On April 5, 1999, Libya turned al-Megrahi and Fhimah over to UN officials. They were charged in English and Arabic with murder, conspiracy to commit murder, and violations of international aviation security laws. On May 3, 2000, the defendants pleaded not guilty. On January 31, 2001, the court found al-Megrahi guilty but acquitted Fhimah. He was sentenced to life in prison with the possibility of parole after 20 years. He lost an appeal on March 14, 2002. On June 28, 2007, the Scottish Criminal Cases Review Commission announced that he may have “suffered a miscarriage of justice” in being convicted for the bombing and granted his request for an appeal before a panel of five appellate judges in Edinburgh.

Abd al Basset al Megrahi: variant of ‘Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi.

Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi: variant of Abd al-Baset al-Megrahi.

Felix Melgar Antel: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army (ELN) occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Julio Lazaro Mena Perez: one of two hijackers of Northeast Airlines Flight 43, a B727 flying from Boston to Miami on August 14, 1969, and diverted to Havana. As of 1979, the duo remained fugitives from a Massachusetts federal grand jury indictment handed down on November 14, 1969.

Fred Mendez: Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) member who was arrested by Evanston, Illinois, police on April 4, 1980, and charged with a variety of local weapons, theft, and armed robbery charges. Bond was set at $2 million.

Radhames Mendez Vargas: spokesperson for the 12th of January Liberation Movement kidnappers of Barbara Hutchison, U.S. Information Service director in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, on September 27, 1974. The group then seized the Venezuelan Consulate, holding seven more hostages. Mendez demanded $1 million from the United States and the release of 38 political prisoners. Mendez was a convicted hijacker who had been released from prison in 1974.

Mujahid Abdulqaadir Menepta: American arrested in Norman, Oklahoma, and held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Omar Merida: one of two Mariel refugees who on July 2, 1983, hijacked Pan American World Airways Flight 378 en route from Miami to Orlando and diverted it to Havana, where they were arrested.

Jose Elbert Merino: on July 7, 1980, Panama said it would consider the extradition request for him. He was somehow involved in the April 19 Movement of Colombia takeover of the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, in Colombia.

Verne Jay Merrell: one of three men arrested on October 8, 1996, near Yakima, Washington, and held without bail for several bank robberies and bombings. He was convicted of conspiracy, interstate transportation of stolen vehicles, and possession of hand grenades. (See also Charles Barbee.)

Akram Meshal: variant Akram Mishal. Former project and grants director of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF)—

the nation's largest Muslim charity—and cousin of Khalid Meshal, Hamas political bureau leader. Meshal was among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against HLF, charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. (See also Shukri Abu Baker.)

Abdel Ghani Meskini: alias Eduardo Rocha. On March 18, 2000, prosecutors charged him, age 31, with aiding Ahmed Ressam's foiled December 15, 1999, attempt to smuggle explosives into the United States from Canada. He was arrested in Brooklyn on December 30, 1999, when police found Ressam's phone number in his pocket. The New York resident pleaded not guilty in January 2000 to charges of providing and concealing support for Ressam. He was indicted in 2000 for conspiring with Mokhtar Haouari since October 1997 to support members and associates of a terrorist group. The six-count indictment charged that they provided and concealed material support to terrorists, transferred fraudulent ID documents, and trafficked in and used fraudulent bank and charge cards. A federal judge set an April 17, 2001, trial date. On March 7, 2001, he pleaded guilty in a Manhattan court to charges that he had aided the effort to smuggle explosives into the United States and agreed to testify against other suspects. He faced 105 years in prison.

Charles Frank Metel: alias of Rudi Siegfried Kuno Kreitlow.

Alice Louise Metzinger: alias of Katherine Ann Power.

Stanislas Meyerhoff: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front (ELF) and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower. On May 19, 2006, Oregon indicted four environmental extremists, including Meyerhoff, age 28, of Charlottesville, for the 1998 Earth Liberation Front firebombing at a Vail ski resort that led to $12 million in damages to a mountain lodge, two restaurants, and other buildings and ski lifts. Meyerhoff was in custody in Oregon. Meyerhoff and others had been named in an earlier Oregon indictment for conspiracy for similar attacks in Oregon, California, and Wyoming. The ELF had attacked Vail because it was expanding into potential habitat of the endangered lynx.

Lawrence David Meyers: self-employed publisher, age 56, arrested by the Secret Service on August 14, 2000, at his Santa Monica, California, apartment. He was believed to have phoned in bomb threats to the Democratic National Convention and a newspaper. He claimed he had placed bombs at Staples Center and the Record-Gazette newspaper office in Banning, California. No bombs were found. Meyers claimed membership in the American Revolutionary Party. He was arraigned in federal court on August 18 on two felony counts of maliciously making a telephonic threat to damage or destroy property by explosive. U.S. Magistrate Judge Carla Woehrle permitted Meyers to be freed on $100,000 bond provided he wear an electronic monitoring device until his September 11 hearing.

Mohammad El-Mezain: first chairman and later endowment director of the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF)—the nation's largest Muslim charity—and cousin of Mousa Abu Marzook, Hamas political bureau chief. El-Mezain was among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against HLF, charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates in the West Bank and Gaza. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. On October 22, 2007, Dallas jurors acquitted him of most charges and deadlocked on the rest. The judge declared a mistrial. (See also Shukri Abu Baker.)

Gazi Ibrahim Abu Mezer: variant Gazhi Ibrahim Abu Maizar. Arrested with two other people on July 31, 1997, by New York police and federal agents who seized five powerful bombs after a dawn shootout in a Brooklyn apartment at 248 Fourth Avenue. The detainees had planned to blow up transportation facilities, including the subway system in New York City. As police entered the apartment, one man ran toward a bomb. Although police fired, he threw one of several detonating switches. A second man was shot while moving toward the bomb. Abu Mezer, age 23, told police how to render the bombs harmless and how they were to be used against the subway system's Atlantic Avenue station and a commuter bus. Both terrorists were hospitalized.

Investigators discovered papers in which Abu Mezer identified himself in an application for political asylum, claiming that he had been arrested in Israel for "being a member of a known terrorist organization." His relatives in Hebron, West Bank, said he had been arrested once during the 1987–1993 intifada after a clash between teen stone throwers and Israeli soldiers. He was released without charges after a few days. His brother claimed that he had served on the Palestinian negotiating team that reached the last major accord with Israel in September 1995. He claimed that his brother supported the peace process and admired the United States.

On August 12, 1997, FBI investigators suggested that the duo was setting up a hoax designed to extort money from the U.S. State Department's Heroes antiterrorism rewards program. A New York judge issued a permanent order of detention and scheduled a court hearing for August 14. Defense lawyers did not request bail. On August 29, the two were indicted by a federal grand jury in New York for plotting to set off a pipe bomb in the subway. They faced life in prison if convicted of conspiracy to use a weapon of mass destruction. Arraignment was expected within the fortnight. The trial began on July 6, 1998. On July 23, 1998, the jury found him guilty of plotting to blow up the subway station.

Khalid al-Midhar: variant of Khalid Almihdhar.

Guillermo Miguel: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate; with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba; and with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Samuel Ignatius Millar: undocumented immigrant from Ireland with Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) ties arrested on November 12, 1993, on charges of possession of stolen property—350 pounds of cash, half of the $7.4 million stolen from a Brink's armored car depot in Rochester, New York, on January 5, 1993, by masked gunmen suspected of being IRA supporters. He had spent six years in prison in the 1970s and 1980s for explosives and firearms convictions in Ireland. In 1984, he was refused a U.S. visa because of his criminal background but was smuggled into the United States by fellow detainee Thomas F. O'Connor. Millar drove a van whose tire tracks corresponded with those found at the scene of the crime. He faced three counts of possession of stolen property. On September 18, 2003, long after the statute of limitations had run out, the IRA veteran wrote in his memoir On the Brinks that he had been involved in the Brinks robbery.

Jerry Richard Mills: hijacker of a Western Airlines B707 flying from Honolulu to Denver on August 20, 1977, and diverted to Salt Lake City. He demanded to be met by police and was held pending an appearance before a magistrate. The FBI considered the incident a hijacking.

Raphael Minichiello: Italian-born lance corporal and high school dropout who had served in 28 combat missions in Vietnam with the Second Battalion, 9th Marines of the 3rd Division, where he was awarded the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry. He hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 85, a B707 on the Baltimore–St. Louis–Kansas City–Los Angeles–San Francisco run on November 1, 1969, diverting it to Italy. He was AWOL from Camp Pendleton, where he was facing charges of theft from the post exchange. He eventually was arrested at the Sanctuary of Divine Love 10 miles south of Rome. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of New York on November 7, 1969, on charges that could result in life in prison. He was sentenced in an Italian court to seven and one-half years, later reduced to three and one-half years with two years commuted. He was released on May 1, 1971. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive from U.S. justice.

Zahed Ahmed Mir: roommate in Fairfax, Virginia, of Amal Kasi, a Pakistani who shot to death two people and wounded three others outside CIA Headquarters in Langley, Virginia, on January 25, 1993. Mir had a temporary work permit and had planned to leave the United States the week of February 10, 1993, but changed his ticket to February 9, leading police to suspect that he was planning to flee the United States. That night a General District Court judge held a hearing; Mir was required to surrender his passport, stay in Virginia, and be monitored through an electronic device.

Mir had worked at airport newsstands for two years. Late in 1992, he began working as a security guard at Dulles Airport, handling metal detectors and X-ray video screens for Argent Bright International Services. Kasi had used Mir's credit card to buy via mail order a bulletproof vest. Mir had used a fake name of Zahed Mohamood Khawaja. He had also accompanied Kasi to purchase an AK-47. Federal prosecutors in Alexandria filed a criminal complaint charging Mir with a single count of filing a fraudulent resident application and lying to Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) officials about his identity and U.S. work history. He was held under a rarely used Virginia law that allows police to detain material witnesses if it is impossible to ensure their appearance in court. On April 26, 1993, he was convicted in Alexandria, Virginia, of perjury and filing false statements when he lied to INS officials to obtain residence and work permits in 1988.

On January 24, 1994, he requested political asylum in the United States.

Patrick E. Miranda: would-be hijacker of a Trans World Airlines B707 flying from New York to Denver on January 10, 1971. It was unclear where he wanted to go; some reports said Las Vegas. A flight attendant talked him out of his attempt, and he was arrested upon landing in Denver. He was sentenced to life in prison pending a mental exam.

Mohammed Mirmehdi: one of four Iranian brothers who had worked in real estate in Los Angeles and who were arrested on October 2, 2001, as security risks.. They had been released in 2000 but were rearrested in 2001. On August 24, 2004, the U.S. Board of Immigration Appeals ruled that their ties to the Mujaheddin-e Khalq Iranian terrorist group was inconclusive. Two immigration judges had said that the brothers would be persecuted if forced to return to Iran. But they did not qualify for political asylum because they had lied on their applications in 1999. The government sought to deport them to a third country for other violations. In February 2005, the Immigration and Customs Enforcement offered to free them if they agreed not to travel more than 35 miles from home or talk to anyone with a criminal or terrorist background. They balked, citing the First Amendment. On March 17, 2005, the United States released the four Mirmehdi brothers. The government agreed to ease restrictions on their movements in Los Angeles. The four—Mohammed, 34; Mohsen, 37; Mojtaba, 41; and Mostafa, 45—had been held in the Terminal Island jail near Long Beach. They were represented by attorney Marc Van Der Hout.

Mohsen Mirmehdi: one of four Iranian brothers arrested on October 2, 2001. On August 24, 2004, the U.S. Board of Immigration Appeals ruled that ties to the Mujaheddin-e Khalq Iranian terrorist group were inconclusive. Two immigration judges said the brothers would be persecuted if forced to return to Iran, but they did not qualify for political asylum because they had lied on their applications in 1999. (See also Mohammed Mirmehdi.)

Mojtaba Mirmehdi: one of four Iranian brothers arrested on October 2, 2001. On August 24, 2004, the U.S. Board of Immigration Appeals ruled that ties to the Mujaheddin-e Khalq Iranian terrorist group were inconclusive. Two immigration judges said the brothers would be persecuted if forced to return to Iran, but they did not qualify for political asylum because they had lied on their applications in 1999. (See also Mohammed Mirmehdi.)

Mostafa Mirmehdi: one of four Iranian brothers arrested on October 2, 2001. This brother was in federal custody as of November 2001 in connection with the FBI's investigation of the 9/11 attacks. On August 24, 2004, the U.S. Board of Immigration Appeals ruled that ties to the Mujaheddin-e Khalq Iranian terrorist group were inconclusive. Two immigration judges said the brothers would be persecuted if forced to return to Iran, but they did not qualify for political asylum because they had lied on their applications in 1999. (See also Mohammed Mirmehdi.)

M. Yaqub Mirza: financier with a doctorate in physics from the University of Texas who led the SAAR Foundation in Herndon, Virginia, which was raided on March 20, 2002, by federal agents from 10 agencies who swooped down on 14 sites across northern Virginia, including Herndon, Falls Church, and Leesburg, at 10:30 A.M., seizing boxes of documents in Operation Green Quest, an investigation of terrorist funding led by the Treasury Department. Most of the sites had links to the Middle East, and numerous Arab and Islamic groups complained of discrimination. No arrests were made, and none of the businesses were closed down.

Goran Mise: one of three Slavs who had planned to hijack an American Trans-International Airways charter DC10 flying from Cleveland to Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, on August 20, 1973, and divert it to South Africa or Rhodesia, where they then planned to demand $1 million for the safe release of 340 Slovenian and northwest Croatian emigrants and 10 crew members on the plane. The plan fell apart at Brnik Airport two hours before the plane even landed so the trio could board it. A local citizen noticed the machine gun-carrying trio acting suspiciously and warned local officials. A fourth hijacker was supposed to join the trio, but the group could not locate him. On the night before their attempt, the group had broken into an arms depot and stolen four machineguns, a revolver, and ammunition. After being spotted, two of them escaped into the woods but were captured two hours later.

Khalid Al-Mitari: Kuwaiti held as of November 2001 by U.S. authorities in connection with their 9/11 investigations.

Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan Moayad: variant of Mouyad.

Hendrik Moebus: convicted neo-Nazi fugitive, age 24, arrested on August 26, 2000, by U.S. marshals in Lewisburg, West Virginia, 20 miles from the 200-acre property of white separatist William Pierce, author of The Turner Diaries, which had inspired Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh. As a minor, Moebus had been convicted in Germany in 1994 with two accomplices for luring and strangling a “non-Aryan” teen. He violated the terms of his 1998 parole by giving Nazi salutes, attending right-wing meetings, and suggesting that the kidnapping and murder he was convicted of were not really crimes. He entered the United States through Seattle using his real name in December 1999, while a German arrest warrant was pending. He began using an alias and had assistance from several people. He visited Richmond, Virginia, and parts of Ohio, and landed in West Virginia, where he lived in a building on the Pierce compound; Pierce founded the National Alliance White supremacist group. Moebus was arrested after having been driven out of the Pierce compound. No weapons were found in the vehicle.

Otoman A. Mohamad: Milwaukee, Wisconsin, resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Abdulla Hassan Mohamed: Mohamed, age 31, was one of six men arrested in the Detroit area on December 18, 2002, for the unlicensed transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. Police seized five bank accounts in Detroit and Dearborn, Michigan. On January 8, 2003, federal officials dropped the charges; Mohamed was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. Assistant Agent-in-Charge James Dinkins said the Customs Service would file new charges soon.

Ahmad Yusuf Mohamed: Sudanese UN diplomat whose expulsion was demanded by the United States on April 10, 1996, for his involvement with the World Trade Center bombing on February 26, 1993, as well as the group that was arrested on June 24, 1993, for plotting to bomb several New York City landmarks, including the UN building, and for planning to assassinate Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak during a visit to the United States.

Ahmed Abdellatif Sherif Mohamed: variant Mohamed Ahmed. One of two Egyptian students, age 24, from the University of South Florida in Tampa who on August 4, 2007, were stopped for speeding in their 2000 Toyota Camry near a Navy base in Goose Creek, South Carolina. They were jailed after authorities discovered explosives in the car's trunk. The matériel included a mixture of fertilizer, kitty litter, and sugar; 20 feet of fuse cord; and a box of .22 caliber bullets. On August 31, they were indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of carrying explosive materials across state lines. One of them faced terrorist-related charges of demonstrating how to use pipe bomb explosives, including the use of remote-controlled toys, to the other. The duo claimed they were going to the beach with fireworks purchased from Wal-Mart. With federal charges in place, state charges were expected to be dismissed as of September 4.

Authorities later determined that Mohamed had posted on YouTube a 12-minute video on how to use a remote-controlled toy car to set off a bomb. His computer had bomb-making files in a folder called "Bomb Shock."

On December 1, 2007, Mohamed said in a defense filing that the explosives were cheap "sugar rocket" fireworks he had made that would travel only a few feet. On January 31, 2008, the FBI announced that the items were low-grade fireworks. But prosecutors countered on February 5, 2008, that the FBI report had been mischaracterized and that the items met the U.S. legal definition of explosives. On June 13, 2008, Mohamed agreed to plead guilty to a federal charge of providing material support to terrorists. Prosecutors agreed to drop the other charges. The fellow former student with whom he had been arrested, Youssef Samir Megahed, still faced charges of illegally transporting explosives and possession of a destructive device. On June 18, 2008, Mohamed pleaded guilty. He faced up to 15 years when his sentencing came up in September 2008.

Ali A. Mohamed: alias Abu Omar. On October 30, 1998, the New York Times reported that on September 11, 1998, federal prosecutors had filed sealed charges against the former Army sergeant, age 46 and a native of Egypt, who was in custody at the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York. Mohamed had served for three years at the U.S. Army's Special Forces base in Fort Bragg, North Carolina and was a former major in the Egyptian Army.

He had been granted a visa to the United States in 1985 and eventually became a U.S. citizen. He joined the U.S. Army in 1986 and traveled frequently to New York, where he trained Islamic militants in basic military techniques. Some members of the group were later convicted of the New York subway bombing conspiracy and the World Trade Center bombing. He also made at least two trips to Afghanistan to train rebel commanders in military tactics. He established ties with bin Laden's organization in 1991 and obtained false documents for the group. He assisted with logistical tasks, including bin Laden's 1991 move to Sudan. He was honorably discharged in 1989 and lived for much of the 1990s in California. He was represented by attorney James Roth.

A witness at the 1995 New York subway bomb plot trial testified that Mohamed had traveled to New York while on active duty to provide military training to Muslims preparing to fight Soviets in Afghanistan. Students included El Sayyid A. Nosair, who killed Meir Kahane. Sometime in the 1990s, Mohamed became involved in the al Qaeda group. On May 19, 1999, federal officials indicted Mohamed on charges of training bin Laden's terrorists and Islamic militants implicated in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing.

On October 20, 2000, he pleaded guilty in a New York federal court to conspiring with bin Laden in the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. He pleaded guilty to five criminal felony counts, including conspiracy to murder, kidnap, and maim Americans in connection with terrorist acts, and to conspiracy to destroy U.S. defense facilities. He had been scheduled to go on trial in January 2001.

He told U.S. District Judge Leonard B. Sand that in 1993 he had briefed bin Laden after scouting possible U.S., U.K., French, and Israeli terrorist targets in Kenya. He had put together a study replete with sketches and photos. The U.S. Embassy in Nairobi was included. He trained members of al Qaeda in the early 1990s. He also arranged a meeting in Sudan between bin Laden and the leader of Hizballah. He said he was involved with the Egyptian Islamic Jihad before he joined the army. He taught Muslim culture at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. He faced a life sentence but could get substantial time off for his cooperation.

Binyam Mohamed: Ethiopian detainee and U.K. resident held at Guantánamo who was believed part of a “North American support cell” that sent money, recruits, and other forms of support overseas to assist in a global jihad. Mohamed had lived in the United States as a teen for a few years before moving to the United Kingdom in 1994. In May 2001, unemployed, he turned up in Afghanistan, hoping that the Taliban’s antidrug policy would help him get off his drug habit. Prosecutors said he trained at al Qaeda camps. He was detained at Karachi’s airport in Pakistan in April 2002, planning on flying back to the United Kingdom on a false U.K. passport. At his hearing in 2004 before the Combatant Status Review Tribunal in Guantánamo, he said he had received paramilitary training in Afghanistan on how to falsify documents and encode phone numbers in preparation for going to fight in Chechnya. Prosecutors said he agreed to rent apartments inside large buildings in the United States, fill them with natural gas, and set them off with timers. He was also alleged to have been trained, along with Jose Padilla, by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed in how to spray nightclubs with cyanide. In December 2005, he was referred to the military commission in Guantánamo on accusation of conspiring with Jose Padilla to set off a radioactive device in the United States. The charge sheet said he and Padilla had met in Pakistan after 9/11 to study how to build a dirty bomb at which time they discussed such an attack with al Qaeda leaders and agreed to blow up buildings. The charges were dismissed after the June 2006

Supreme Court ruling that the current system of military commissions was unconstitutional. Pentagon prosecutors linked him to Abu Zubaydah and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. In 2008, he was 29. On June 5, 2008, a U.K. judge ordered a hearing as to whether the British government had to turn over evidence to the defense, led by attorney Clive Stafford Smith.

Foad Hussain Mohamed: Mohamed, age 25, was one of six men arrested in the Detroit area on December 18, 2002, for the unlicensed transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. Police seized five bank accounts in Detroit and Dearborn, Michigan. On January 8, 2003, federal officials dropped the charges; he was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. Assistant Agent-in-Charge James Dinkins said the Customs Service would file new charges soon.

Hussein Ahmed Mohamed: Mohamed, age 65, was one of six men arrested in the Detroit area on December 18, 2002, for the unlicensed transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. Police seized five bank accounts in Detroit and Dearborn, Michigan. On January 8, 2003, federal officials dropped the charges; he was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. Assistant Agent-in-Charge James Dinkins said the Customs Service would file new charges soon.

Khalfan Khamis Mohamed: alias Zahran Nasser Maulid. Once-fugitive Tanzanian, 24, against whom, on December 16, 1998, the U.S. District Court in Manhattan issued a 238-count indictment in the August 7, 1998, truck bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya. Mohamed had met with three co-conspirators in a Dar es Salaam house in late July and the first week of August 1998 to plan for the bombing, and he took photos of the embassy from a nearby Suzuki Samurai after the bombing. The charges carried the death penalty. The State Department announced a $5 million reward for his capture, similar to the $5 million reward for bin Laden’s arrest, and circulated posters printed in English, Arabic, French, Dhari, and Baluchi at all of its diplomatic facilities. The State Department also announced that it would advertise the reward on the Internet.

On October 8, 1999, Mohamed, whose house was used as a bomb factory, and who had been arrested in South Africa on October 5, 1999, was charged in federal court in New York on charges of murder and conspiracy in the two bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998. He pleaded not guilty. He had been living in Cape Town since a few days after the bombs went off. Mary Jo White, U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of New York, said that he was the first person in custody believed to have had “direct operational responsibility” in the Tanzanian bombing. He had rented a house in Dar es Salaam that was used as the bomb factory and base of operations. He was also charged with purchasing the white Suzuki Samurai that was used as a utility vehicle by the killers. The alias that Mohamed used in South Africa, Zahran Nassor Maulid, was the same alias he used to apply for a Tanzanian passport in May 1998.

On November 2, 2000, he and Mamdouh Mahmud Salim stabbed a guard’s eye with a sharp object at the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in New York. The guard lost his eye, and the implement penetrated the guard’s brain.

On May 29, 2001, the jury found the defendants in the Tanzanian bombing case guilty of all 302 counts against him. He was found guilty of conspiracy and murder and faced the death penalty.

Manhal Ben Mohamed: one of four accomplices of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. The Falls Church, Virginia, resident was a Manara travel agent. U.S. Magistrate Leonie Brinkema set bond between $25,000 and $50,000 for the Moroccan citizen. The group apparently was planning revenge against U.S. officials believed to have planned the April 1986 air raid against Libya in retaliation for Libyan involvement in several terrorist attacks. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya.

Samir Ait Mohamed: Algerian, age 32, accused of helping Ahmed Ressay, who had been arrested on December 15, 1999, while transporting explosives across the Canada–U.S. border. On November 15, 2001, U.S. authorities served an extradition warrant for Mohamed, who had been held in Canadian custody in Vancouver since July 28, 2001, for immigration violations. Charges against him had been sealed in October. A criminal complaint was made public on November 15, accusing him of trying to get two hand grenades and a machine gun with a suppressor so that Ressay could raise money for a Los Angeles attack via bank robberies. He was also accused of working with Mokhtar Haouari to obtain a “credit card with an alias for Ressay’s use in connection with his planned terrorist operation and jihad work,” according to the indictment. Court papers said that Mohamed provided Ressay with a 9-mm semiautomatic pistol with a suppressor, knowing Ressay planned to conduct a terrorist attack in the United States. He was charged with two counts of conspiracy to commit international terrorism and faced a life sentence. On November 29, 2001, the FBI released a document in Canada that said that he had aimed to get “genuine” Canadian passports to permit a “team of terrorists” to enter the United States. He was to have obtained passports from “an individual working inside” the passport agency. In 1999, he sent four passports to Germany. The recipients had all trained with Ressay at a camp in Afghanistan. Mohamed used a fake French passport in 1991 to move from Algeria to Germany, where he requested political asylum. He was indicted on December 12, 2001, in New York on charges of getting weapons for Ressay.

Yasim Abdi Mohamed: Mohamed, age 24, of Toronto, was named in the case in which 17 people were arrested in a Toronto sting operation on June 2, 2006. They were charged under Canada's antiterrorism laws with belonging to a terrorist group, running training camps, and smuggling guns and ammunition across the border. Mohamed had moved to Canada from Somalia. He was charged with importing 3 guns and 182 rounds of ammunition intended for use in terrorist activities. He was serving time in Kingston, Canada, for trying to smuggle weapons from the United States in August 2005. (See also Shareef Abdelhaleen.)

Ali Mohammed: in 2000, the Egyptian Islamic Jihad member told a U.S. court he had surveilled and photographed the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi at the direction of Osama bin Laden, who used one of the photos to determine where the truck bomb should go on August 7, 1998.

Ashraf Mohammed: arrested on July 22, 1993, in connection with the plot broken up by the FBI on June 24, 1993, of individuals charged with planning to bomb the UN headquarters building in Manhattan; 26 Federal Plaza, which includes the local FBI headquarters and other agencies; the 47th Street diamond district, which is run principally by Orthodox Jews; and the Lincoln and Holland tunnels connecting Manhattan and New Jersey; they were also charged with planning to assassinate Senator Alfonse M. D'Amato (R-NY); Assemblyman Dov Hiking, an Orthodox Jewish legislator from Brooklyn; UN secretary general Boutros Boutros-Ghali; and Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak. On July 22, 1993, Mohammed was arrested at the Wildwood, New Jersey, beach-front Sea Wolf Inn and charged with harboring a fugitive, Matarawy Mohammed Said Saleh, his longtime friend. They were ordered held without bail. His wife had registered for the room under an assumed Hispanic name.

Azam Mohammed: alias of Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf.

Benjamin Ahmed Mohammed: associate of Jose Padilla who was arrested in Pakistan in May 2002.

He and Padilla were fingered in April by al Qaeda detainee Abu Zubayda. (See also Jose Padilla.)

Fazul Abdullah Mohammed: alias Fouad Mohammed. Mohamed, a Comoran in his late twenties as of October 2001, circa five feet four inches and 130 pounds, trained with bin Laden in Afghanistan and leader al Qaeda branch in Kenya. He was charged with planning the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya. He was listed in October 2001 as one of the FBI's 22 Most Wanted Terrorists. He was linked to four people charged on June 23, 2003, by the Kenyan government in the November 28, 2002, suicide bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Kenya in which 16 died and 80 were injured. He speaks French, Arabic, and English. He carries a Kenyan passport. He taught at an Islamic school in Lamu, Kenya, under the alias Abdul Karim. He is married to Mohamed Kubwa's half-sister, Amina. Kubwa was charged in the November 28, 2002, attacks. Mohammad was believed to have been killed on January 8, 2007, when the United States conducted an air strike on Badmadow island off southern Somalia.

Fouad Mohammed: alias of Fazul Abdallah Muhammad.

Hilal Mohammed: Jordanian living in Brooklyn detained as an accomplice of Rashad Baz, a Brooklyn resident who on March 1, 1994, fired on a convoy of Hasidic Jewish students on Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive near the Brooklyn Bridge in New York, injuring 14 rabbinical students in a van. Officials said Mohammed had helped Baz dispose of the guns and the car. He worked at a Brooklyn taxi service that employed Baz. Bail was set at $20,000. He pleaded not guilty on March 29.

Mazen Mokhtar: Egyptian-born imam and political activist who operated two Web sites in 2004 described by the Justice Department as "more operational" than scholarly. Mokhtar is the imam at the Masjid al-Huda mosque in New Brunswick,

New Jersey. His lawyer denied that his client was a terrorist.

Patrick Moley: of New York and one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, and taken into custody in New York City and then indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson on August 26, 1992. They allegedly, in November 1989, had acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer based in Tucson and then shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. On November 17, 1992, the four were ordered held on a total of $6.5 million bail and ordered to Arizona to face charges. His bail was set at $1 million. He faced 55 years in prison. His brother, Seamus, was also indicted but was already serving time in prison in connection with another conspiracy.

Seamus Moley: Irishman arrested on January 12, 1990, in West Palm Beach with four other Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members for attempted to buy a Stinger for $50,000 from undercover agents. The four were charged with conspiracy to possess destructive arms, possession of a destructive device, and violations of the Neutrality Law and Arms Export Control Act. They faced 25 years in prison and $750,000 in fines. He was alleged to have paid the money for the Stinger. He was the brother of Patrick Moley, one of four people arrested on November 11, 1992, and taken into custody in New York City and then indicted by a federal grand jury in Tucson on August 26, 1992. In November 1989 the four allegedly had acquired 2,900 detonators from Ireco, Inc., a federally licensed explosives manufacturer based in Tucson, and then shipped them in a cardboard box by Greyhound bus to New York. One individual took the boxes on to Toronto, where they were mailed on December 13, 1989, to the IRA in Northern Ireland. Some of the detonators were used in bombings in Northern Ireland between January 1991 and June 1992. On November 17, 1992, the four were ordered held on a total of $6.5 million bail and ordered to Arizona to face charges. Seamus was also indicted in the case.

Reverend Patrick Moloney: Melchite priest, age 61, arrested on November 12, 1993, on charges of possession of stolen property—350 pounds of cash, half of the $7.4 million stolen from a Brink's armored car depot in Rochester, New York, on January 5, 1993, by masked gunmen suspected of being Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters. He was born in Ireland and ordained in 1977 in the Eastern Church under papal authority. He had founded a halfway house on Manhattan's Lower East Side. He believed in the "theology of action." He and his brother John were arrested in 1980 when they attempted to smuggle weapons into Ireland from the United States. The brother was convicted; the priest was not prosecuted. His father had fought for Irish independence at the beginning of the century. He was jailed for five days during a visit to Ireland 10 years prior to his arrest on suspicion of smuggling arms to the IRA. No charges were filed. He frequently attended U.S. meetings of Sinn Féin, the IRA's political arm. He baptized the children of Samuel Ignatius Millar, who was also arrested.

On November 17, 1993, a federal magistrate ruled that he could be freed on $1 million bail, which was paid on November 20. He faced three counts of possession of stolen property. On February 28, 1995, a federal judge in Rochester sentenced him to four years in jail—he could have received five years—for his role in the robbery.

Yousef Magied Molqi: Palestinian convicted of killing Leon Klinghoffer, 69, a wheelchair-bound Jewish American who was murdered and thrown overboard in the takeover of the Achille Lauro cruise ship on October 7, 1985, in Greece. On February 25, 1996, Molqi, 34, disappeared during a prison furlough at a church-run shelter in Prato, near Florence, Italy. He was scheduled to return to Rebibbia Prison in Rome at the end of his 12-day pass. He was serving a 30-year term but had been permitted release four times earlier. On March 13, 1996, Italy offered a “substantial” reward for his arrest. The U.S. Department of State offered a $2 million reward and resettlement in the United States for informants and their families.

On March 22, 1996, Spanish Civil Guard detectives, aided by Italian police, arrested him in Estepona. On December 4, 1996, Spain extradited him to Italy, which put him back in a Rome prison cell.

Samir al-Monla: Former Care International president, age 50, who was one of three former leaders of the organization convicted on January 11, 2008, in Boston on federal tax and fraud charges for using tax exemption to hide support for religious militants and overseas terrorists since the organization’s creation in 1993. The trio was charged with making false statements and with tax code violations and conspiracy to defraud the government. He faced 10 to 19 years. The prosecution noted Monla’s meetings with Afghan warlord Gulbadeen Hekmatyar, who had been designated by the State Department to be a global terrorist. The group had been deemed the successor to the al-Kifah Refugee Center, which allegedly was tied to the bombers of the World Trade Center in February 1993.

Said Monsour: Moroccan identified by the FBI in 1995 as one of seven men with ties to Hamas and the Islamic group that helped plan the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center bombing. He had lived in Denmark since 1984 and had hosted blind radical sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman when he visited Denmark in 1990. He was believed to be a European organizer for the Islamic Group, whose spiritual leader is Sheik Rahman.

Walter Leroy Moody Jr.: he was questioned in the December 16, 1989, package bomb death of U.S. Appeals Court Judge Robert S. Vance, former head of the Alabama Democratic Party. On July 10, 1990, the self-employed mail-order consultant from Rex, Georgia, and his wife were held on conspiracy, obstruction of justice, subornation of perjury, bribery of a witness, and tampering with a witness. On November 7, 1990, a federal grand jury in Atlanta handed down a 70-count indictment, charging him with sending the package bomb that killed Vance and the one that killed Savannah, Georgia, Alderman Robert E. Robinson on December 18, 1989. He was also charged with sending two identical bombs to the NAACP offices in Jacksonville, Florida, and to the U.S. courthouse in Atlanta and with sending letters threatening to assassinate 17 other federal judges, to murder two other NAACP leaders, and to release a “high concentration” of poisonous chemical compounds over densely populated areas. He was also charged with sending a tear gas bomb to the NAACP Atlanta offices in August 1989 and, in the death of Robinson, with transporting explosive material with intent to kill. If convicted on all counts, he faced seven life terms, plus 385 years in prison and $16.9 million in fines.

Moody had attended John Marshall School of Law in Atlanta in the late 1960s. In 1972, he was convicted of possessing a pipe bomb that went off in his home and injured his ex-wife. He served two years of a five-year prison sentence. He filed three motions of appeal of his conviction that were denied by the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, the court on which Vance sat.

On November 8, 1990, he refused to enter a plea in the bombing case. In December 1990, he was convicted on 13 counts of obstruction of justice, perjury, and witness tampering and was awaiting sentencing. On January 4, 1991, he pleaded not guilty in his second arraignment before a federal magistrate. On January 28, 1991, the Justice Department announced the return of a superseding indictment, handed up by a federal grand jury in Atlanta, that added interstate transportation of firearms and obstruction of justice to the previous 70 counts. He was convicted in 1991 on obstruction of justice. On June 27, 1991, the jury found him guilty on all 71 remaining counts. On August 20, 1991, U.S. District Judge Edward Evitt sentenced him to seven life terms plus 400 years with no possibility of parole. Moody was also ordered to pay $4,254 as restitution to Vance's estate and $6,916 to Robinson's estate, with smaller amounts to the two NAACP branches. He was also to pay $3,550 to a crime victims' fund. On November 5, 1996, a state court jury convicted him in the mail-bomb death of U.S. Appeals Court Judge Robert S. Vance. The jury called for the death penalty for Moody, who was already serving seven life sentences without parole. On February 10, 1997, Judge William Rhea announced at the Jefferson County Circuit Court that he had sentenced Moody to die in the electric chair. Moody accused the judge of being part of a conspiracy against him. An appeal was automatic under Alabama law.

Bagher Moomeney: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. Moomeney was to take the weapons to Iran. On February 25, 1980, Moomeney pleaded guilty to placing guns on a common carrier. On April 10, 1980, a federal judge gave him a suspended sentence and told him to leave the country "with reasonable haste."

Edward F. Moore: Moore, age 52, of Lavalette, West Virginia, was one of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI's $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

On May 29, 1997, he pleaded guilty to possession of a bomb he had made during a March 24, 1996, militia training session. He had made the bomb using ammonium nitrate and nitromethane racing fuel. Prosecutors dropped the charge of conspiracy to manufacture explosives. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

Sara Jane Moore: fired a pistol at president Gerald Ford as he was entering his limo in San Francisco, California, on September 22, 1975.

Majed Moqed: one of the al Qaeda hijackers, age 22, who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 77, a B757 headed from Washington's Dulles International Airport to Los Angeles with 64 people, including 4 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The hijackers, armed with box cutters and knives, forced the passengers and crew to the back of the plane. The plane made a hairpin turn over Ohio and Kentucky and flew back to Washington, D.C., with its transponder turned off. It headed full throttle toward the White House but made a 270-degree turn at the last minute and crashed at 9:40 A.M. into the Pentagon in northern Virginia. The plane hit the helicopter landing pad adjacent to the Pentagon and slid into the west face, cutting a 35-foot wedge through the building's E, D, C, and B rings between corridors 4 and 5.

Ricardo "Monkey" Morales: anti-Castro Cuban exile who was shot dead from behind with a .32 pistol fired by a patron at the Cherries bar in Key Biscayne, Florida, on December 20, 1982. Morales claimed that he had helped plan and carry out the 1976 bombing of a Cubana airliner in which 73 people died near Barbados and that he had been an officer of the Venezuelan DISIP intelligence service when he provided the C-4 explosive used in the blast. He said he had built and planted bombs for anti-Castro activists in Miami.

William Morales: on July 12, 1978, a bomb exploded in a Queens, New York, apartment being used as a Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) bomb factory, blowing off both hands and part of the face of Morales, the bomb maker. Police suggested he might have been the same William Morales who in 1975 had been a member of the National Commission on Hispanic Affairs of the Protestant Episcopal Church, an organization that may have had links to the FALN. He was later sentenced to 99 years on state and federal explosives and weapons charges but escaped the next year from New York's Bellevue Hospital, where he was being fitted for artificial hands. Two New York policemen died while trying to apprehend him. When captured in 1983, Morales confessed that he had been planning to bomb a conference of U.S. and Mexican congressmen in Puebla. On June 25, 1988, ignoring a long-pending U.S. extradition request, Mexican Foreign Secretary Bernardo Sepulveda allowed his release after he had served five years of an eight-year sentence for the May 28, 1983, murder of a policeman in a shootout in Puebla. On June 27, 1988, he was sent to Cuba. The United States recalled ambassador Charles J. Pilliod Jr. for consultations, noting that Morales was implicated in more than 50 bombings.

William Moravcik: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Claude Morency: one of three Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) members arrested by Canadian police on June 21, 1970. They were planning to kidnap U.S. consul general Harrison W. Burgess. The Place Fleury laborer, 19, faced 20 charges, including intending to explode bombs and kidnap Burgess.

Jose Roberto Moreno Canjura: on January 8, 1988, a Salvadoran judge denied the request for amnesty by the former Guardsman convicted of murdering four U.S. female clerics on December 2, 1980. He was serving 30 years for aggravated homicide and robbery.

Steven N. Morey: alleged Project 7 militia member, age 44, who pleaded not guilty with two others on May 8, 2004, to federal firearms charges and plotting to kill Montana public officials. The trio from the Kalispell, Montana, area had amassed machine guns, 30,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, night-vision equipment, and body armor.

Danny Morrison: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) director of public relations. He was arrested on January 21, 1982, at the Peace Bridge in Buffalo, New York, for presenting immigration officers with a Canadian citizenship certificate that did not belong to him. He was trying to get to a New York City IRA fund-raising dinner. The U.S. Consulate in Belfast had denied him a visa.

Seyed Abraham Mosavi: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. Mosavi had purchased the rifles for more than $1,000 cash and spoken to a gun dealer about purchasing machine guns, pistols, a 12-gauge riot control shotgun, and a Heckler and Koch assault rifle. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On March 5, 1980, jurors acquitted Mosavi.

Safal Mosed: college student and marketer, age 24, who was one of five U.S. citizens of Yemeni origin residing in Lackawanna, New York, arrested on September 13–14, 2002, and identified as an al Qaeda-trained terrorist cell on American soil. In June 2001, they attended the al Qaeda al-Farooq training camp in Afghanistan and learned how to use assault rifles, handguns, and other weapons; they left the camp before the 9/11 attacks. They were charged with providing, attempting to provide, and conspiring to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist group (al Qaeda).

At the September 19 bail hearing, attorney Patrick J. Brown, representing Mosed, said, "If Mr. Alwan is the head of a sleeper cell, he is not to be trusted. There was no proof that Mosed was there." Prosecutors noted that Mosed had spent $89,000 at the Casino Niagara in Canada within the year. Mosed also had 2 different Social Security cards and 11 credit cards for six different names.

On March 24, 2003, Mosed pleaded guilty in federal court in Buffalo to providing "material support" to al Qaeda by attending the al Farooq camp, a stronger charge than Galab's "funds and services." Brown said, "He is ashamed that he went. He absolutely does not buy into that, the al Qaeda party line." This was the first time someone had been convicted of providing material support to al Qaeda. Brown said Mosed agreed to the plea because he feared the government would tack on more serious charges, including treason and serving as an enemy combatant. On December 9, Mosed was sentenced to 8 instead of 10 years because of his cooperation. (See also Sahim Alwan.)

Israel Motta da Silva: one of two assassins of Delorme Mehu, Haiti's ambassador to Brazil, who was gunned down in Salvador, Brazil, on July 3, 1977. The assassins claimed that they were hired by the Haitian Embassy's first secretary, Louis Robert Mackenzie, who denied their charges.

Walid Majibd: one of three individuals arrested in Richford, Vermont, on October 23, 1987, after they illegally crossed into the United States from Canada with a terrorist bomb made from two metal canisters filled with smokeless gunpowder. A black hood found with the bomb and bomb-making equipment resembled hoods used in terrorist attacks in the Middle East. On October 28, 1987, U.S. Magistrate Jerome J. Niedermeier ordered them held without bail. They said they were Canadian citizens living in Montreal but were believed to be Lebanese. On January 26, 1988, Majibd pleaded guilty to conspiring to transport explosives and to an immigration violation, for which he faced 10 years in prison. On May 17, 1988, the U.S. government reported that they were members of the Syrian Social National Party, a Syrian terrorist organization that assassinated Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel in 1982.

Mehdi Hachem Moussaoui: on March 11, 2002, he pleaded guilty to racketeering conspiracy in a Charlotte, North Carolina, court. He faced 20 years in prison for funneling profits from cigarette smuggling to Hizballah.

Zacarias Moussaoui: French Moroccan, age 34, arrested on August 11, 2001, on immigration charges in Eagen, Minnesota, and later suspected of being the missing 20th 9/11 hijacker. He offered $8,000 in cash to a flight training school to teach him how to steer a jetliner, but not how to land or take off. On September 1, according to the Washington Post, French intelligence reported that Moussaoui was linked to "radical Islamic extremists" and that he had spent two months in Pakistan and possibly in Afghan training camps. Police found information in his computers on jetliners, crop dusters, wind patterns, and the way chemicals can be dispersed from airplanes, similar to research conducted by Atta. The FBI temporarily grounded all crop dusters in the United States. The German magazine Stern reported that two large sums of money were sent to Moussaoui from Duesseldorf and Hamburg on August 1 and 3. Police later suspected that Moussaoui was sent as a replacement 20th hijacker when Ramzi Binalshibh, 29, a Yemeni fugitive in Hamburg, could not get a visa to enter the United States. Moussaoui became the first person indicted in the attacks when on December 11 a federal grand jury in Alexandria charged him on six counts of criminal conspiracy, including involvement in the murder of federal employees and committing terrorist acts; four charges carried the death penalty, the others, life. On December 19, 2001, Moussaoui was ordered by U.S. Magistrate Judge Thomas R. Jones Jr. in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, to be held without bond until his arraignment on conspiracy charges, set for January 2, 2002, before U.S. District Judge Leonie M. Brinkema. He was charged with conspiracy to commit international terrorism, conspiracy to use airplanes as weapons of mass destruction, and other charges. Ahmed Ressay linked Moussaoui to al Qaeda, claiming he recognized him from photographs because they both had attended the Khalden al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan in 1998. Moussaoui was represented by Donald DuBoulay; Gerald Zerkin, 52, a senior litigator with the Federal Public Defender's office; Federal Public Defender Frank W. Dunham Jr.; and Edward MacMahon, 41. Moussaoui's family was represented by Isabelle Coutant Peyre, fiancée and attorney of Illich Ramirez Sanchez, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorist also known as Carlos the Jackal, who was serving a life term with parole in a French prison.

On January 10, 2005, attorneys for Zacarias Moussaoui asked the U.S. Supreme Court to prevent the government from seeking the death penalty and from presenting evidence related to the 9/11 attacks. On March 21, 2005, the U.S. Supreme Court declined to hear Moussaoui's request to review a lower court ruling that denied him access to al Qaeda detainees Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and Ramzi Binalshibh. On April 22, 2005, Moussaoui pleaded guilty to taking part in an al Qaeda conspiracy that led to 9/11; he said that he was to conduct a follow-up plane attack on the White House. U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema said he was competent to enter the plea and began deliberations on setting up a jury trial regarding a death penalty. The penalty phase of the trial began on February 6, 2006, with the selection of jurors. He was thrown out of court four times after yelling, "I am al Qaeda"; he fired his lawyers; and he said he would testify. Opening statements were scheduled for March 6. He was in and out of court throughout February for his antics.

Judge Brinkema halted the trial on March 13 and said she was considering removing the death penalty after Carla J. Martin, a Transportation Security Administration lawyer, improperly shared testimony and coached seven witnesses, all of them current and former federal aviation employees, via e-mails. The judge had earlier ruled that witnesses could not attend or follow the trial or read transcripts. The judge ordered the prosecution to not use those witnesses. On March 17, she relented slightly, letting the prosecution use other, untainted aviation witnesses, and said she would also let the government pursue the death sentence.

Moussaoui testified on March 27 that he was to lead a five-man team, which included convicted shoe bomber Richard Reid, that was to have hijacked a fifth 9/11 plane and crash it into the White House. He did not indicate what had happened to the other three would-be hijackers. He also claimed that he knew only about the World Trade Center (WTC) planes and claimed that he had lied earlier to investigators.

On March 28, the testimony of two al Qaeda operatives was read to the jury. Sayf al-Adl, a senior member of the group's military committee, said that the defendant was "a confirmed jihadist but was absolutely not going to take part in the September 11, 2001, mission." Waleed bin Attah, alias Khallad, mastermind of the USS Cole bombing and an early 9/11 planner, said he knew of no part that Moussaoui was to play in the 9/11 attack. Khallad had been captured in April 2003. Testimony by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed indicated that Moussaoui was to be used for a post-9/11 wave of attacks.

The prosecution team argued that Moussaoui was telling the truth and thus deserved the death penalty. Moussaoui had offered to testify for the prosecution so that he could be heard but was told that he had a constitutional right to testify. The defense team argued that he was lying. On April 3, 2006, the jury found Moussaoui eligible for the death penalty. Later that week, the final phase of the penalty hearing began, with the prosecution putting on the stand former New York City mayor Rudolph W. Giuliani and nearly 40 family members of victims and survivors, running videos of people jumping from the doomed buildings, and releasing some of the 911 tapes from the WTC and 32 minutes of cockpit recordings from Flight 93.

On April 13, 2006, Moussaoui took the stand, mocked the victims and their families, said that he regretted that more Americans hadn't died, and claimed that Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh was "the greatest American." The next day, Judge Brinkema vacated her earlier order that the federal government produce Richard Reid to testify. The jury deliberated for 41 hours over 7 days and then rejected the death sentence on May 3. The next day, the judge sentenced him to life. As Prisoner 51427-054, he would be in solitary for 23 hours per day in a maximum-security prison. He tried, but failed, to withdraw his guilty plea and spark a new trial.

On February 15, 2008, the court papers were unsealed, revealing that his attorneys had asked the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to overturn the guilty plea and life prison sentence because he could not choose his own counsel or learn much of the evidence against him.

Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan al Mouyad:

variant Moayad. Aide, age 54, of Abd al Rahim al-Nashiri, chief of al Qaeda operations in the Persian Gulf (he was arrested in the United Arab Emirates in October 2002), who was arrested on January 10, 2003, with his assistant, Mohammed Moshen Yaya Zayed, 29, both Yemenis, at an airport hotel in Frankfurt. Mouyad had been an imam at a large mosque in Sana'a, Yemen, and was an al Qaeda financier. The Germans believed the duo could have been transiting through Frankfurt to an undisclosed location. The Germans considered an extradition request from the United States to send him to New York to face federal charges of providing material support to a terrorist organization. Mouyad was represented by attorney Achim Schlott-Kotschote.

The Washington Post later reported details of the sting operation. A man claiming to be a Muslim from New York named Mohammed Aansi (variant Alanssi) had approached Mouyad in Yemen and attempted to get him to come to the United States to meet with a financier. When Mouyad balked, the man suggested Germany as a safe place to meet. Mouyad flew from Yemen and was met at the airport and driven in a Mercedes to the airport's Sheraton to meet a wealthy American Muslim from New York who wanted to donate to Mouyad's Middle Eastern charities. The man claimed to be a U.S.-born Muslim convert, Said Sharif bin Turi. For three days, the duo met to discuss monthly $50,000 tranches, not all for charity, some for bin Laden. Mouyad claimed he was one of bin Laden's spiritual advisors and had been involved in fund-raising and recruiting for al Qaeda. On January 5, 2003, a federal judge in the Eastern District of New York issued a sealed warrant for his arrest, and German police arrested him the morning of January 10.

He was believed to be a major funder of al Qaeda and the Palestinian Islamic Resistance Movement (Hamas). Yemeni diplomats said that Mouyad in 1998 had co-founded Sana'a's Al Ehsan Mosque and Community Center, which feeds 9,000 poor families each day and provides free education and medical care. He is a senior member of Islah, an Islamic opposition political party. The FBI said he had collected money for several years from individuals and a Brooklyn mosque and sent the money to al Qaeda.

On March 4, 2003, the U.S. Attorney General indicted al Mouyad and Zayed for fund-raising for al Qaeda in Brooklyn's al Farouq mosque and for hosting a service for suicide bombers. The FBI had taped meetings with five Brooklynites regarding money for al Qaeda. Mouyad had bragged of delivering $20 million to bin Laden before the 9/11 attacks. The United States requested extradition from Germany and was given 30 days to provide enough evidence. The duo faced possible life sentences. The al Farouq mosque had previously been used by Egyptian cleric Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, who was later convicted for the 1993 World Trade Center bombing. An FBI informant said he had attended a wedding hosted by Mouyad in September 2002 in Yemen in which a senior Hamas official said that they would read about an operation the next day. That day a suicide bomber blew up a Tel Aviv bus, killing 5 and injuring 50.

On July 21, a Frankfurt court approved extradition of Mouyad and Zayed to the United States, which had guaranteed that they would not be tried by a military or other special court. The German government administration had the final say on whether to extradite. On November 16, 2003, the duo was extradited to the United States, arriving at John F. Kennedy International Airport. Mouyad was arraigned in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn on November 18 on charges of supplying arms, recruits, and more than $20 million to al Qaeda and Hamas. Mouyad faced 60 years in prison; Zayed faced 30 years. Court papers filed on December 6, 2004, indicated that when he arrived in New York, Mouyad told FBI agents that "Allah will bring storms" to the United States because of his arrest, undercutting defense claims that Mouyad did not speak English. "Allah is with me. I am Mohammed al Mouyad. Allah will bring storms to Germany and America."

On May 11, 2004, Judge Charles Sifton in New York ruled that Yemeni-born ice cream shop owner Abad Elfgeeh did not understand the consequences of pleading guilty in October 2003 to charges of transferring tens of thousands of dollars to bank accounts in Yemen, Switzerland, Thailand, and China. Elfgeeh had acknowledged sending money to Mouyad, who had pleaded not guilty to funding terrorist groups.

On November 15, 2004, at 2:05 p.m., Yemeni-born informant Mohamed Alanssi, alias Mohamed Alhadrami, 52, of Falls Church, Virginia, asked the security detail outside the White House to deliver a message to President Bush and then set himself on fire, critically injuring himself. He had also sent a note to the Washington Post and to FBI agent Robert Fuller indicating that he intended to torch himself. Alanssi had been charged in federal court in Brooklyn, New York, with felony bank fraud for writing bad checks in May 2004 and had acted as a translator between the FBI operative and Mouyad. Alanssi was apparently distraught over his role as a witness and claimed that the FBI had mishandled his case. He claimed that he had not been permitted to travel to Yemen to visit his seriously ill wife and their six children because the FBI held his passport. He also claimed he had yet to receive U.S. residency papers and a million dollars (he said the FBI had paid him $100,000). Two days later, he remained in serious condition at Washington Hospital Center, with burns over 30 percent of his body. The defense had claimed that Alanssi had ineptly translated comments by Mouyad, making embellishments.

On March 10, 2005, Mouyad was convicted of conspiracy, providing material support to Hamas, and attempting to support al Qaeda but was acquitted of providing support to al Qaeda. Defense attorneys said they would appeal. On July 28, 2005, Mouyad was sentenced to 75 years, the maximum allowed. As of 2007, he was held in the Florence supermax prison in Colorado.

Christopher N. Mrozowski: resident of Bethesda, Maryland, age 34, who on September 1996, along with a Polish woman and an Iranian man, was arrested by the Turkish government on charges of aiding Kurdish rebels. Mrozowski was hiking in Turkey after finishing a summer job teaching Peace Corps volunteers in Warsaw. The trio was taken off a bus in eastern Turkey. The trio denied the charges. They were released on October 10, 1996, pending trial for assisting the rebels. No trial date was set.

Fahid Mohammed Ali Msalam: variant Fahid Mohammed Ally Msalam; aliases Fahid Muhammad 'Alim Salam, Fahid Mohammed Ally, Fahid Mohammed Ali Musalaam, Usama al-Kini. Fugitive Kenyan who, on December 16, 1998, was indicted by the U.S. District Court in Manhattan on 238 counts in the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi, Kenya, on August 7, 1998. The charges carried the death penalty. The State Department announced a $5 million reward for his capture, similar to the $5 million reward for bin Laden's arrest, and circulated posters printed in English, Arabic, French, Dhari, and Baluchi at all of its diplomatic facilities. The State Department also announced that it would advertise the reward on the Internet. Msalam had met with three other conspirators in a Dar es Salaam house in late July and the first week of August 1998, to plan the bombing. He was charged with helping to buy the truck used in the Tanzania bombing, along with Mustafa Mohamed Fadhil and others. He had packed it with explosives and transported it to the embassy. Charges included murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States; conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States; and attack on a federal facility resulting in death. He is circa five feet seven inches, circa 185 pounds. He was born in Mombasa, Kenya, on February 19, 1976. He speaks Swahili, Arabic, and English. He has worked as a clothing vendor.

Fahid Mohammed Ally Msalam: variant of Fahid Mohammed Ali Msalam.

Muhammed Mubayyid: former treasurer, age 42, of Care International who was indicted on May 12, 2005, on federal charges accusing him of lying to officials investigating the defunct charity's ties to terrorist organizations. He had been arrested the previous day on charges of concealing information from federal agencies, conspiring to defraud the United States, and making false statements to the FBI. He was one of three former leaders of the organization convicted on January 11, 2008, in Boston on federal tax and fraud charges for using tax exemption to hide support for religious militants and overseas terrorists since the organization's creation in 1993. The trio was charged with making false statements and with tax code violations and conspiracy to defraud the government. He faced 10 to 19 years.

Mohammad Mubeen: Pakistani, age 28, who renewed his driver's license 23 minutes before a suspected 9/11 hijacker at the same Florida Department of Motor Vehicles outlet. As of November 2001, he was held in federal custody in connection with the FBI's and Immigration and Naturalization Service's investigation of the 9/11 attacks.

Qusine E. Muftah: Milwaukee, Wisconsin, resident and one of a dozen masked, club-wielding Libyan students who took over the Libyan student aid office in McLean, Virginia, with hostages on December 22, 1982. On March 4, 1983, Judge Barnard F. Jennings sentenced the 12 to one year in jail. On September 9, 1983, a Fairfax County judge released 10 protestors after they presented proof of college enrollment.

Ahmad Ibrahim al-Mughassil: alias Abu Omran. Saudi leader of Saudi Hizballah's military wing, indicted in the Eastern District of Virginia for the June 25, 1996, bombing of the Khobar Towers military housing complex in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia. He drove the tanker truck bomb and was overall coordinator of the Khobar bombing. As of September 18, 2010, he was wanted on multiple conspiracy charges against U.S. nationals and property, including murder, conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, conspiracy to murder U.S. employees, conspiracy and use of weapons of mass destruction against U.S. nationals, conspiracy to destroy U.S. property, conspiracy to attack national defense utilities, bombing resulting in death, murder while using a destructive device during a crime of violence, and murder and attempted murder of federal employees. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He has claimed to have been born on June 26, 1967, in Qatif-Bab al Shamal, Saudi Arabia. He is five feet four inches tall and weighs 145 pounds. On April 4, 1997, the Saudis claimed that the Syrians had refused to help them capture him—he was with Hizballah in Lebanon—because they did not want to risk a clash with Hizballah. The New York Times reported on May 1, 1997, that Iran was harboring him.

'Imad Fayiz Mughniyah: variants Imad Fayeze Mughniyah, Imad Fa'iz Mughniyah, Imad Mughniyeh; aliases Imad Fayiz, Imad Fa'iz, Jahh, Haj, al-Haj, Haji Rudwan, The Fox, Muqniyah. Head of the security apparatus for Lebanese Hizballah. He was indicted for his role in planning and participating in the June 14, 1985, hijacking of a Trans World

Airlines (TWA) commercial airliner that resulted in assaults on various passengers and crew members and the murder of one U.S. citizen. Before his death in 2008, he was wanted for conspiracy to commit aircraft piracy, to commit hostage taking, to commit air piracy resulting in murder, to interfere with a flight crew, to place a destructive device aboard an aircraft, to have explosive devices about the person on an aircraft, and to assault passengers and crew.

He claimed to have been born in Tir Dibba in southern Lebanon in 1962. He is circa five feet seven inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He studied engineering briefly at the American University of Beirut. He joined Fatah in his teens, serving in Yasser Arafat's Force 17 security unit. He joined several Shi'ite radical groups in Lebanon, helping to form the Islamic Jihad Organization, a terrorist wing of Hizballah. He may have had contacts with Osama bin Laden, meeting him once in the 1990s.

He was involved in the kidnapping of U.S. hostages in Lebanon in the 1980s, the 1983 bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut in which 63 people died, and the 1984 kidnapping and murder of Chief of Station-Beirut William Buckley. An Iranian intelligence defector told the Germans that Mughniyah had joined Iranian diplomats in organizing the July 1994 bombing of a Jewish community center in Buenos Aires that killed 85 people. The Argentines wanted him for the March 17, 1992, bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires in which 23 died. He was believed behind the 1983 bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut that killed 241 U.S. soldiers and the kidnappings of six Americans and five French citizens. He was believed behind the June 17, 1987, kidnapping in Beirut of Charles Glass, a former ABC Television News and Newsweek reporter; 'Ali 'Usayran, son of defense minister Adel 'Usayran; and their driver, police officer Ali Sulayman. U.S. officials believed he was one of the April 5, 1988, hijackers of Kuwait Airlines Flight 422, a B747 flying from Bangkok to Kuwait that was diverted to Mashhad, Iran.

He was taken into German custody on November 16, 1992. On April 19, 1993, his trial began at the 29th Grand Criminal bench of the Berlin Regional Court regarding the bombing of the West Berlin La Belle Disco on April 5, 1986. The stateless Palestinian pleaded not guilty to charges of planning attacks on members of the U.S. military.

On April 7, 1995, the FBI went to Saudi Arabia to arrest him for the 1983 truck bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks in Lebanon that killed 241 servicemen; for the 1985 TWA hijacking; and for numerous kidnappings and bombings against Westerners in the 1980s. However, the Saudis did not permit his Middle East Airlines B707 to land for a scheduled stopover in Jeddah on its way from Khartoum—where he was attending an Islamic conference—to Beirut.

His brother-in-law, Mustafa Badreddin, was one of 17 prisoners held for years in Kuwaiti prisons for a series of 1983 bombings and was believed to have been the explosives expert involved in the 1983 Marine barracks bombing. U.S. hostages were abducted in Lebanon to obtain the prisoners' release after Badreddin was sentenced to death. He was freed during the 1990 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Mughniyah was one of 10 Shi'ite Muslims identified in November 17, 1992, by the Lebanese newspaper Nida' al-Watan as suspected of instigating the kidnappings of U.S. hostages William Buckley, William Higgins, and Peter Kilburn.

On September 2, 1999, Argentina's Supreme Court issued an arrest warrant for Mughniyah for planning the March 17, 1992, bombing of the Israeli Embassy. Evidence backing the warrant included handwriting from Hizballah representatives on documents associated with the purchase of the truck used in the bombing.

In mid-February, Israel claimed that he had purchased the arms carried by the Karine, a cargo ship that was boarded by Israeli navy commanders on January 3, 2002, in the Red Sea. They found 50 tons of weapons, including Katyusha rockets, anti-tank missiles, mortars, mines, and sniper rifles, believed to have originated in Iran and to be headed for the Palestinian Authority. The weapons were in quantities banned by the 1993 Oslo peace agreement. Israel said interrogation of the 13 crewmen determined that the arms smuggling had been coordinated by Lebanese Hizballah.

U.S. Rewards for Justice offered $5 million for his arrest and/or conviction.

In January 2006, he had allegedly traveled with Iranian president Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to Damascus to meet with Hassan Nasrallah, Hizballah's secretary general; Palestinian Islamic Jihad leader Ramadan Abdullah Shallah; Hamas leader Kahled Meshaal; and Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command leader Ahmed Jibril. He might have organized the kidnapping of an Israeli soldier that led to the Israel-Hizballah war in the summer of 2006.

He was killed in an explosion in a Mitsubishi Pajero in Tantheem Kafer Souseh, an upscale residential section of Damascus, Syria, on February 12, 2008. Israel denied responsibility.

Imad Mughniyeh: variant of Imad Fayiz Mughniyah.

Emdad Muhammad: alias Carlos the Iranian. Identified by "Witness A," an Iranian citizen who testified on December 28, 1994, in the investigation of the New York City Argentine-Israel Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) bombing, as the mastermind of the attack.

Fazul Abdallah Muhammad: variant Fazul Abdallah Mohammed; aliases Abdallah Fazul, Abdalla Fazul, Abdallah Mohammed Fazul, Fazul Abdilahi Mohammed, Fazul Abdallah, Fazul Abdalla, Fazul Mohammed, Haroon, Harun, Haroon Fazul, Harun Fazul, Fadil Abdallah Muhammad, Fadhil Haroun, Abu Seif al Sudani, Abu Aisha, Abu Luqman, Fadel Abdallah Mohammed Ali, Fouad Mohammed, Abu al Fazul al-Qamari, 'Abdallah Fazul, Abu Sayf al-Sudani. Indicted on September 17, 1998, in the Southern District of New York for involvement in the bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania on August 7, 1998, and involvement in the attacks on Mombasa, Kenya, on

November 28, 2002. He was wanted for murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States, conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, and attack on a federal facility resulting in death. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He has used August 25, 1972, and December 25, 1974, as his date of birth and claims to have been born in Moroni on the Comoros Islands. He is circa five feet four inches tall and weighs between 120 and 140 pounds. He claims Comoran and Kenyan citizenship.

On May 14, 2003, he was reported to be in Kenya and was seen in Mogadishu after the bombing of the Paradise Hotel in Mombasa. On May 15, the United Kingdom suspended flights to and from Kenya. The U.K. government warned of a "clear terrorist threat" in Uganda, Ethiopia, Tanzania, Somalia, Eritrea, and Djibouti. On May 16, U.S. and U.K. Marines searched the borders with Somalia and Sudan during heightened fears of an al Qaeda attack.

Khamal Muhammad: Pakistani, age 23, arrested in San Francisco in January 2004 for overstaying his visa by eight months. He was deported to Pakistan in mid-May 2005. He told authorities he was an armed guard and cook for Harakat ul-Mujahidin, which is on the State Department's terrorist group list.

Yahya Abu Ubaidah Muhammad: alias Karl Dexter Taylor. Charged on February 21, 1995, in an unsealed three-count indictment with conspiring with others to violate federal firearms acts by transporting firearms across state lines. It was charged that in 1992 he asked a co-conspirator who had a firearms license to buy rifles in Virginia to be used for paramilitary training. His name had appeared on a government list of 172 possible unindicted co-conspirators in the ongoing blind sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman conspiracy trial.

Awad Muhareb: of Mesquite, cousin of Adham and Louai Othman. The trio was stopped on August 10, 2006, by police in Caro, Michigan. Police found in their van nearly 1,000 phones, most of them prepaid TracFones; a laptop computer; and a bag of receipts. They had just purchased 80 prepaid mobile phones from a Wal-Mart. The trio was charged with soliciting or providing material support for terrorism and obtaining information on a vulnerable target for the purposes of terrorism. They were arraigned on August 12. Prosecutors believed they were targeting the five-mile-long Mackinaw Bridge connecting Michigan's two peninsulas, but two of the trio said they had planned to sell the phones at a profit. On August 14, the FBI and Michigan State Police said they had no indication that they were terrorists, although Michigan officials kept the trio in jail. On September 5, a federal judge threw out the conspiracy and money laundering charges against the trio, ruling there was not enough evidence to prosecute.

Martin Mullan: Mullan, age 30, was sentenced on September 27, 2000, in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, to three years for buying and shipping weapons in a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gun-running operation. The weapons in the 1999 plot were to be disguised as toys, VCRs, and computers going from Florida to Northern Ireland via the U.S. mail.

Patrick Mullin: arrested on June 19, 1981, in Queens by the FBI during the discovery of a major Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gunrunning ring. Undercover agents were offered $16,000 in cash for 42 automatic rifles and handguns. In late July 1981, Mullin and two others appeared in court to face grand jury indictments charging them with receiving and possessing firearms not registered to them, possessing firearms on which the serial numbers had been obliterated, and planning to export the arms to the IRA in Ireland.

Mohammad Munaf: a panel of the Washington, D.C., Circuit ruled that the Iraqi American had no right to U.S. courts. He had traveled to Iraq in 2005 to serve as a guide to a group of Romanian journalists, who soon were kidnapped. Authorities believed he was involved in the kidnapping. U.S. authorities said he confessed but recanted when tried in Iraq. He was convicted by the Iraqi Central Criminal Court and sentenced to death. In December 2007, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear the case of Munaf v. Geren. Arguments were scheduled for March 2008, the same month that an Iraqi appeals court overturned the conviction. On June 12, 2008, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously ruled that he could not use U.S. courts to challenge his transfer into foreign custody.

Julie Nyangugi Mungai: Kenyan wife of Khader Musa Hamide and one of nine members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine arrested on January 26, 1987, by the FBI and Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) on immigration law violations. On February 17, 1987, Immigration Judge Roy J. Daniels released five of the defendants on their own recognizance and set bail for the others in amounts ranging from $500 to $3,000. A deportation hearing was continued to April 28, 1987. He refused to hear in-chambers testimony from two government witnesses about the defendants' danger to society. On May 11, 1987, charges were dismissed by U.S. Immigration Judge Ingrid Hrycencko after INS official Gilbert Reeves, who had signed the charges, failed to appear for testimony. The next day, INS District Director Ernest Gustafson reinstituted the charges. Two Jordanians were charged with belonging to a group that advocates the destruction of property. Five other Jordanians and Mungai were charged with visa violations ranging from overstaying a temporary visa to taking too few courses to qualify for a student visa. The case lasted almost 20 years.

Pilar Munos Ramos: one of two hijackers of a Mexicana de Aviacion DC6 flying the Mexico City–Minatitlan–Veracruz–Villahermosa–Tabasco run on July 26, 1969, that was diverted to Havana.

Emadeddin Muntasser: Care International's founder, age 43, indicted on May 12, 2005, on federal charges accusing him of lying to officials investigating the defunct charity's ties to terrorist organizations. He had been arrested the previous day on charges of concealing information from federal agencies, conspiring to defraud the United States, and making false statements to the FBI. He was one of three former leaders of the organization convicted on January 11, 2008, in Boston on federal tax and fraud charges for using tax exemption to hide support for religious militants and overseas terrorists since its creation in 1993. The trio was charged with making false statements, tax code violations, and conspiracy to defraud the government. He faced 10 to 19 years.

Tawfiq Musa: one of four members of the Abu Nidal group jailed on April 1, 1993, by St. Louis police for planning to blow up the Israeli Embassy and murder Jews. Musa, age 45, from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was listed in the indictment as having discussed blowing up the Israeli Embassy. He ordered that all records of the meeting be destroyed. In July 1994, he pleaded guilty to federal racketeering charges of smuggling money and information, buying weapons, recruiting members, illegally obtaining passports, and obstructing investigations and helping plot terrorist attacks. On November 22, 1994, U.S. District Judge Donald Stohr sentenced him to 21 months in prison. With credit for time served, he was due to be released in January 1995. Jewish groups protested, noting that he was eligible for 20 years and a $250,000 fine.

Khaled ben Mustafa: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for "criminal association with a terrorist enterprise." The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to "integrate into terrorist structures" in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but said they had not used their combat training. Mustafa was sentenced to four years in prison; three were suspended, and one year was time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The French citizens were captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005.

Abdul Muzikir: one of two Hanafi Muslims who took over the Washington, D.C., City Council offices on March 9, 1977, taking several hostages. He was convicted of murder in the second degree and assault with intent to kill. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping that arose from the episode in which he participated and was acquitted of the attacks in which he was not present. He received a sentence of 78 years to life. In October 1979, the D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the convictions of the 12 defendants, saying that the government's evidence was overwhelming. On February 19, 1980, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the convictions of eight Hanafis for conspiracy, armed kidnapping, and other charges.

N

---

Chris Nadal: one of eight members of the Fourth Reich Skin Heads white supremacist group arrested on July 15, 1993, for planning to spark a race war by blowing up the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in south central Los Angeles and assassinating Rodney King. The group planned to sneak into the church as transients and then fire machine guns at the congregation, as well as place pipe bombs under pews. They also intended to kill influential black leaders across the nation. The group was the militant arm of a 50-member group associated with the White Aryan Resistance and possibly linked with the Church of the Creator based in Niceville, Florida. The resident of Sepulveda, age 35, faced charges of weapons violations, including possession of several machine guns and silencers.

Doris Nadal: one of eight members of the Fourth Reich Skin Heads white supremacist group arrested on July 15, 1993, for planning to spark a race war by blowing up the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in Los Angeles and assassinating Rodney King. The group planned to sneak into the church as transients and fire machine guns at the congregation, as well as place pipe bombs under pews. They also intended to kill influential black leaders across the nation. The group was the militant arm of a 50-member group associated with the White Aryan Resistance and possibly linked with the Church of the Creator based in Niceville, Florida. The resident of Sepulveda, age 43, faced charges of weapons violations, including possession of several machine guns and silencers.

Nikush Nadirashvili: one of 18 people arrested and charged on March 15, 2005, who attempted to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices, and 13 others were charged with weapons trafficking.

Basheer Nafi: Palestinian, 43, arrested on June 27, 1996, in Herndon, Virginia, and deported to London on July 1 on charges of violating his immigration status. He was believed to be a leader of Islamic Jihad. He worked as a researcher and editor at the International Institute of Islamic Thought (IIT) in Herndon. His Irish wife, Imelda Ryan, said that he was going to leave the United States permanently anyway, having resigned from the IIT and booked a flight to London. Nafi had last entered the United States in August 1994. Nafi admitted knowing Fathi Shiqaqi, the assassinated leader of Islamic Jihad. The two had attended a university in Cairo in the 1970s. Nafi had earlier worked for the Tampa-based World and Islam Studies Enterprise, whose former administrator, Ramadan Abdullah Shallah, 37, succeeded Shiqaqi as the Islamic Jihad leader.

Gamil Manea Ahmed al-Najar: al-Najar, age 26, was one of six men arrested in the Detroit area on December 18, 2002, for the unlicensed transfer of $50 million to Yemen via hawalas. Police seized five bank accounts in Detroit and Dearborn, Michigan. On January 8, 2003, federal officials dropped the charges; he was released on a $10,000 unsecured bond. Assistant Agent-in-Charge James Dinkins said the Customs Service would file new charges soon.

Mazen A. al-Najjar: in 1997, the U.S. Justice Department and the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) said that the former professor of Arabic, age 43, at the University of South Florida in Tampa had ties to the Syria-based Palestinian Islamic Jihad (PIJ). The Palestinian born in Gaza and raised in Saudi Arabia was linked to two groups that laundered PIJ money. One was the now-defunct World and Islam Studies Enterprise, based in Tampa, which employed Ramadan Abdullah Shallah, who became the PIJ leader in 1995. al-Najjar was ordered deported when his visa expired in 1997. He was jailed after the INS presented secret evidence under the 1996 Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act.

U.S. District Judge Joan Lenard ruled in Miami in May 2000 that al-Najjar must be told enough about the evidence to have a fair chance of responding. If freed, he and his wife, Fedaa, faced deportation hearings. Their three daughters were U.S. citizens. On December 12, 2000, attorney general Janet Reno blocked the release of al-Najjar, who had been jailed for more than three years without criminal charges on secret evidence. Reno said she would review the evidence. The previous week, Immigration Judge R. Kevin McHugh had ordered al-Najjar freed on $8,000 bond. Reno released al-Najjar on December 15, 2000. Deportation hearings were set for January 9, 2001. He sought political asylum as a stateless Palestinian. The INS wanted to send him to the United Arab Emirates, where he had resided for two years before entering the United States in 1981.

Eyad Mahmoud Ismoil Najim: variants Eyad Ismail Najim, Iyad Mahmud Isma'il Najm. Kuwaiti-born Palestinian who carried a Jordanian passport and who was arrested in Jordan on August 1, 1995. He was flown to the United States the next day. He had gone to school in Kuwait with Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf. On August 3, 1995, he was charged in a New York federal court with planning and executing the 1993 World Trade Center bombing. He was held without bail for a hearing on August 16. He faced a life sentence without parole. Investigators said he was with Yusuf when he gassed up the bomb vehicle and drove the Ryder van into a garage beneath the towers. He had entered the United States on a student visa in 1989. He last reported to the Immigration and Naturalization Service in 1990, when he was granted a student work permit. His mother claimed he had studied languages and computer science at a Kansas university and then moved to Dallas. He had been charged in a sealed indictment in September 1994.

Iyad Mahmud Isma'il Najm: variant of Eyad Mahmoud Ismoil Najim.

Mohamed Suleiman Nalfi: Sudanese who was arrested on March 22, 2001, by the FBI when he was lured from his home with a false job offer in Amsterdam. He was detained by the FBI when he changed planes. He was indicted in New York for having links to bin Laden and was charged in federal court with forming and leading a Sudanese jihad group, following bin Laden's al Qaeda organization, and helping bin Laden start an investment business in Sudan. He was added to the list of 22 defendants in the bin Laden conspiracy, which included the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania.

On January 31, 2003, Nalfi, 40, admitted he had worked for bin Laden in Sudan in the early 1990s and pleaded guilty to conspiring to destroy national defense materials, which carried a maximum 10-year sentence. He said he had created a jihad group in Sudan in 1989 and had helped to build businesses there that aided al Qaeda, which used the firms as fronts to procure explosives, chemicals, and weapons. In 1990, Nalfi and others traveled to Egypt in a camel caravan to establish an al Qaeda weapons smuggling route. Nalfi told U.S. District Judge Kevin Thomas Duffy in New York that in 1992, he had attended a meeting in which al Qaeda leaders discussed how to oust U.S. and UN forces from Somalia and Saudi Arabia. Nalfi had been arrested in 2000 in a conspiracy case involving the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. The government agreed to a lesser charge.

Julie Nalibov: one of four members of the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee who on January 25, 1985, expressed sympathy with the Red Guerrilla Resistance bombers of the U.S. Navy Yard officer's club in April 1981 but said they were not involved and refused to answer questions from a federal grand jury.

Said Namouh: member, age 34, of the Global Islamic Media Front, an Internet propaganda arm of al Qaeda, who was planning to detonate a car bomb. Canadian authorities arrested him in Quebec on September 12, 2007, and charged him with conspiracy.

Mustafa Setmariam Nasar: variant Mustafa Sitmaryan Nassar; aliases Abu Musab al-Suri, Umar Abd al-Hakim. Spanish citizen who might also have Syrian citizenship and who is a leading al Qaeda ideologue. While a member of the Syrian Muslim Brotherhood, he fled Syria in the 1980s, roaming through the Middle East and North Africa, where he became associated with the Algeria Islamic Group. He settled in Madrid in 1987 and married a Spaniard, obtaining Spanish citizenship. In Spain, he wrote inflammatory essays under the pen name Umar Abd al-Hakim. In 1995, he moved to the United Kingdom, serving as a European contact for al Qaeda. He roamed throughout Europe and Afghanistan through the late 1990s. He moved his family to Afghanistan in 1998. He was a trainer at the Derunta and al-Bhuraba terrorist camps in Afghanistan, working closely with Midhat Mursi al-Sayid 'Umar, alias Abu Khabab al-Masri, training extremists in poisons and chemicals. Following the 9/11 attacks, he swore loyalty to Osama bin Laden as an al Qaeda member. The United States announced a $5 million reward for his arrest.

He was indicted in Spain in September 2003 for terrorist activities of al Qaeda and was linked to Imad Yarkas, a Syrian-born Spaniard who ran the group's Spanish cell. He was suspected of having a role in the 3/11 Madrid train bombings in 2004. British authorities wanted to question him in connection with the 7/7 multiple bombings of the London subway system on in 2005. He was captured by Pakistani forces in a Quetta shop that serves as an office of an Islamic charity tied to a radical group, near the Afghan border, on November 4, 2005, and was transferred to Syrian custody.

He claims to have been born on October 26, 1958, in Aleppo, Syria. Nasar had written a 1,600-page tome on how to attack Islam's enemies. He had traveled to Sudan, Afghanistan, Iran, Iraq, Syria, and two European capitals. UPI reported on October 19, 2006, that he was in U.S. custody.

Nagi Nashal: Yemeni-born naturalized U.S. citizen, age 53, who ran a Manhattan newsstand, who on May 21, 2005, was arrested on charges of threatening to blow up the New York Post's offices for publishing photographs of Saddam Hussein in his underwear. He was denied bail.

Magdy Mahmoud Nashar: biochemist who studied at North Carolina State University for a semester in 2000. He was arrested on July 15, 2005, by police in Cairo, Egypt. He allegedly had helped rent the Leeds townhouse for the 7/7 London subway terrorists in 2005. He was freed on August 9 after being in custody for questioning for three weeks. He said he knew bombers Germaine Lindsay and Hasib Hussain casually.

Sheikh Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri: aliases Abu Asim al Makki, Sheik Mohammed Omar al Harazi. Worked with Walid bin Attash in planning the October 12, 2000, bombing in Yemen of the USS Cole. He was believed to have given the order to three Saudi members of al Qaeda who planned to attack U.S. and British warships in the Strait of Gibraltar in May 2002. He was mentioned by some of the defendants as having obtained funds for the October 6, 2002, al Qaeda bombing of the Limburg, a French supertanker, in the Arabian Sea five miles off the coast of Yemen. The news media reported that the Mecca-born Nashiri was arrested in November 2002. He had fought against the Russians in Afghanistan and had spent time in Yemen, where he owned Al Mur Honey, a terrorist money laundry. He was detained in Saudi Arabia in 1998 and deported the next year. He may have trained terrorists for the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. On July 7, 2004, a Yemeni court charged him and five other Yemenis in the USS Cole bombing. On September 29, 2004, Yemeni Judge Najib al-Qaderi sentenced him to death.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On March 14, 2007, al-Nashiri told the military Combatant Status Review Tribunal in Guantánamo that he had been coerced into making false confessions about the USS Cole bombing and the August 7, 1998, attacks on the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He had been sentenced in absentia to death in Yemen for his role in the USS Cole case. He said that he was merely involved in a fishing business with the USS Cole bombers. He claimed to have become a millionaire at age 19 and to have met with bin Laden several times in Afghanistan.

On June 30, 2008, he was charged on eight counts, including conspiracy to violate laws of war, treachery, destruction of property, intentionally causing serious bodily injury, murder, and terrorism, for the October 12, 2000, bombing of the USS Cole in a port in Yemen in which 17 U.S. sailors were killed and 47 wounded. He was also charged in the failed attack on the USS The Sulivans in Aden in January 2000 and the attack on the French supertanker SS Limburg in the Gulf of Aden in October 2002. Five charges carried the death penalty. He had been in U.S. custody since November 2002. He was to be represented by civilian attorneys Theresa Duncan and Nancy Hollander, of Albuquerque.

'Abd al-Karim Husayn Muhammad al-Nasir: variant Abdelkarim Hussein Mohamed al-Nasser Saudi. Leader of Saudi Hizballah indicted in the Eastern District of Virginia for the June 25, 1996, bombing of the Khobar Towers military housing complex in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He is wanted for conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, conspiracy to murder U.S. employees, conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction against U.S. nationals, conspiracy to destroy U.S. property, conspiracy to attack national defense utilities, bombing resulting in death, use of weapons of mass destruction against U.S. nationals, murder of federal employees, and attempted murder of federal employees. He was born in Al Ihsa, Saudi Arabia. He is five feet eight inches tall and weighs 170 pounds. He was born circa 1942 to 1952 five years in prison after pleading guilty to one count of conspiring to illegally possess and transport explosives across state lines. He had placed explosives and electronic gear in a storage locker in Alexandria, Virginia. Reporters suggested that the material had been intended for the assassination of president Ronald Reagan and Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin during the latter's visit to the White House in September 1981. The explosives were placed in the locker the day before Begin arrived. Nasser was indicated by a grand jury on firearms and conspiracy charges on October 19, 1982. He was held in a Washington, D.C., jail in lieu of $750,000 bond. He had made four trips to Beirut in the previous 19 months and might have been planning to smuggle the explosives into Lebanon.

Abdul-Hafiz Mohammed Nassar: Jordanian active in Palestinian affairs who was sentenced to

Sajjad Nasser: variant Sajjad Naseer. One of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them, including Nasser, on bail. The FBI said that three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Irfan Kamran and Sajjad Nasser were due to appear for an April 4 bail hearing. Prosecutors opposed their release on the grounds that they were flight risks. Prosecutors had appealed their initial release, and the duo was jailed pending the hearing.

On April 8, U.S. District Judge Lewis T. Babcock ruled that "the government [had] failed to establish" that Kamran and Nasser posed any danger and ordered them released. Kamran had already posted his $30,000 bail. Nasser was released on $100,000 bail but was detained by the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement on a separate charge. Federal prosecutors said that they still believed the duo was dangerous and that they might appeal the release. The FBI had reported that Nasser had gone to a camp in Pakistan in the summer of 2001. The camp was run by the Army of Mohammed, which the U.S. lists as a terrorist organization. Nasser said he left after four or five days because he did not like the strenuous physical training. The FBI said Nasser "also attended rallies in support of al Qaeda and Osama bin Laden," which amounts "to providing material support for a foreign terrorist organization."

Antonio Navarro Payano: Dominican Republic-born hijacker of Eastern Airlines 9, a DC8 flying from New York to Miami on January 19, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. He was living in the Dominican Republic on May 9, 1970, and was scheduled to stand trial there. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of New York on June 16, 1970.

Mohammed Naydi: senior Libyan intelligence official. U.S. authorities said in 1991 that they were preparing a case against him in connection with the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan American World Airways Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, that killed 270. The Pan Am 103 bomb detonator matched photos of timers seized from Naydi when he was arrested in February 1988 in Dakar, Senegal. He was also in N'Djamena, Chad, on March 10, 1984, when Union des Transports Aériens Flight 772 exploded on the runway, injuring 24 people.

Mohamed Nechle: one of a group arrested by Bosnian authorities in October 2001. He was accused of plotting to blow up the U.S. Embassy in Sarajevo and conduct other attacks on Americans in Bosnia. On January 18, 2002, U.S. troops brought Nechle and five other terrorism suspects out of the country to Guantánamo after a local court ruled on January 17 that it had too little evidence to press charges. Five of the men were naturalized Bosnians; Bosnia stripped them of their citizenship in November 2001.

Gerardo Necuze: Miami resident who pleaded guilty in 1981 in the U.S. District Court in Fort Lauderdale of conspiracy in two bombings and three bomb attempts.

Not Coded La Negra: alias of Amparo Afanador Soto.

C. K. Neilson: would-be hijacker of a Pacific Western Airlines Convair turboprop scheduled to fly from Vancouver International Airport to Penticton and Castlegar on January 4, 1973. He threatened to blow up the plane if he did not receive $2 million and a flight to North Vietnam. He released the passengers. Police boarded the plane and overpowered him. He was ordered to undergo a mental exam.

Ivo Nelson: in November 1977, he served in Denver as the spokesperson for the U.S. chapter of Ananda Marg.

Kay Nelson: in November 1977, she served as the spokesperson for the Washington, D.C., chapter of the Ananda Marg.

Randy Nelson: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On March 20, 1997, Nelson was given a 70-month sentence and was fined. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Gale William Nettles: convicted counterfeiter, age 66, who was arrested on August 5, 2004, as he was driving a pickup truck containing 1,500 pounds of fertilizer that he reportedly thought was volatile ammonium nitrate, which had been used by Timothy McVeigh in the Oklahoma City bombing. He was charged with plotting to blow up a federal courthouse. He had planned to sell the chemical to terrorists who would attack the Dirksen Federal Building in Chicago. However, all of his contacts, including those who sold him the fertilizer and the “terrorists,” were federal agents and cooperating witnesses. He was detained while meeting undercover agents. A detention hearing was scheduled for August 10. No plea was entered by defense attorney John Theis. Although he was not working with any other groups, Nettles had asked the cooperating witnesses about contacting al Qaeda and Hamas.

Rayfran das Neves Sales: confessed on February 22, 2005, to shooting Sister Dorothy Stang, 74, an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary from the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur; she was shot to death by two gunmen in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para state, Brazil, on February 12, 2005. Neves named others in the contract killing. On February 24, he reenacted the crime for police. On June 22, 2005, a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., indicted Rayfran das Neves Sales and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista for Stang’s murder, for conspiracy to murder a U.S. citizen outside the United States, and for using a firearm in commission of a crime. On December 9, 2005, Rayfran das Neves Sales told the jury in Brazil that he had acted in self-defense, thinking that Stang’s Bible was a gun. He and Stang had argued over who owned the land he was working, and Neves reported that Stang said she would “finish him off” with the help of 150 people living in the sustainable development reserve. Prosecutors said rancher Vitalmiro Moura offered Neves and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista $25,000 to kill Stang. On December 10, Neves and Batista were convicted of killing Stang. Neves was sentenced to 27 years; accomplice Batista received 17 years. During his October 22, 2007, retrial for the shooting of Stang, defendant Rayfran das Neves Sales said he shot her out of fear and rage. Brazil permits a retrial for sentences longer than 20 years. Two ranchers had hired him to kill her in a dispute over forest they wanted to clear-cut for pasture.

James Douglas Nichols: brother of Terry Lynn Nichols, both of whom were charged on April 25, 1995, by federal authorities with conspiring with Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh to build explosives at their farm in Michigan. On May 22, 1995, he was freed without bond by U.S.

District Judge Paul Borman in Detroit. Unrelated explosives charges were dropped.

Terry Lynn Nichols: brother of James Douglas Nichols, both of whom were charged on April 25, 1995, by federal authorities with conspiring with Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh to build explosives at their farm in Michigan. Nichols was charged with involvement in the April 19, 1995, Oklahoma City bombing, in which 169 were killed and 500 injured, on May 9, 1995. On August 15, 1995, he was arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Ronald L. Howland. He pleaded not guilty to an 11-count indictment that charged he had carried out a terrorist attack. A grand jury formally accused him on August 10, 1995. On December 24, 1996, the jury acquitted him of first-degree murder and actually committing the bombing but convicted him on all eight counts of involuntary manslaughter and conspiring to blow up the building by using a weapon of mass destruction. The jury announced on January 7, 1998, that it could not agree on sentencing him to death and left it up to the judge, who by law could not impose the death sentence. On June 4, 1998, Judge Matsch sentenced him to life in prison without parole for conspiring to use a weapon of mass destruction and to eight six-year concurrent terms for eight counts of involuntary manslaughter. On February 26, 1999, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the conviction and life sentence. Nichols re-appealed his conviction in April 2000, which was denied on December 18, 2000, by the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

On March 29, 1999, Nichols was charged with 163 Oklahoma state counts of murder and conspiracy, exposing him to a possible death sentence. He was charged with 160 deaths of nonfederal workers, plus 1 count of first-degree manslaughter in the death of an unborn child, 1 count of conspiracy to commit murder, and 1 count of helping to place the bomb near a public building. On September 5, 2001, Oklahoma City District Attorney C. Wesley Lane announced that the state would seek the death penalty. The trial began on March 1, 2004. The jury found him guilty on May 25 of all 161 counts of murder and sentenced him to life in prison without the possibility of parole for the murder of the fetus. He was given 35 years and a $25,000 fine for arson. He was given 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine for conspiracy. On June 11, 2004, the jury reported that it could not agree on a punishment and left the decision up to the judge. The death penalty came off the table because the jury had not recommended it. On August 9, 2004, Nichols received 161 consecutive life sentences with no possibility of parole. He was also sentenced to 10 years and fined $5,000 for conspiracy; sentenced to 35 years and fined $25,000 for first-degree arson; and fined $5 million in restitution, $10,000 per count to a victims' compensation fund, and legal fees.

Luis Nieves Falcon: on December 11, 1999, members of the House of Representatives condemned the Clinton administration for negotiating with Nieves, whom they identified as a member of the Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN), a Puerto Rican independence group, that was responsible for a string of terrorist attacks.

Saif Nijmeh: one of four members of the Abu Nidal group jailed on April 1, 1993, by St. Louis police for planning to blow up the Israeli Embassy and murder Jews. He was listed in the indictment as discussing a rocket-propelled grenade launcher he had obtained. He had received his instructions in Mexico in 1987. His brother, Luie, was held on similar charges. In July 1994, he pleaded guilty to federal racketeering charges of smuggling money and information, buying weapons, recruiting members, illegally obtaining passports, and obstructing investigations and helping plot terrorist attacks. On November 22, 1994, U.S. District Judge Donald Stohr sentenced him to 21 months in prison. With credit for time served, he was due to be released in January 1995. Jewish groups protested, noting that he was eligible for 20 years and a $250,000 fine.

Maria Nivense: name used to purchase tickets by one of the members of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front who hijacked a Honduran Air Services (SAHSA) B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, and diverted the plane to Managua. The hijackers requested political asylum in Cuba.

Raul Nivense: name used to purchase tickets by one of the members of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front who hijacked a Honduran Air Services (SAHSA) B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, and diverted it to Managua. The hijackers requested political asylum in Cuba.

Ramez Noaman: Yemeni, age 27, detained on September 19, 2001, in Rowland Heights, California. The California Polytechnic University student was held in New York as a material witness in the 9/11 attacks until his October 2 release. He lived in the same house as the hijackers after they moved out.

Shahrzad S. Nobari: name used on a passport by Kristina Katherina Berster, a suspected West German terrorist who attempted to enter Vermont from Canada on July 16, 1978. The passport was one of a group of passports that were stolen when radical Iranian students took over the Iranian Consulate in Geneva in June 1976. The real Nobari, an Iranian who lived in Hamburg, West Germany, had visited Los Angeles in December 1977 using a reissued passport.

Issaya Nombo: Tanzanian, age 44, whose name was found in a computer printout in a cave in Afghanistan. On April 15, 2002, Immigration and Naturalization Service officials charged him with an immigration violation after U.S. intelligence reported the discovery. He was living in North Carolina on an expired visa. His name was on a public Web site for Voyager Aviation of Titusville, Florida, where he had received a commercial pilot's license. The home page said, "Congratulations Issaya Nombo on completing your ATP" (airline transport pilot license).

Benni Antoine Norris: alias of Ahmed Ressam.

Christopher Norris: charged with conspiracy and with possessing and making pipe bombs after Norris, age 25, and two other members of the racist neo-Nazi National Alliance were arrested on May 8, 1998, on charges of having fully assembled 14 pipe bombs that they planned to plant across Orlando, Florida, as diversions for two bank robberies.

Mr. and Mrs. William Norton: Los Angeles couple arrested on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when they took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van was carrying 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. The couple was planning to drive the van to Ireland.

El Sayyid A. Nosair: variants Noseir, Nosir, Nasser, El Sayyid Abdulaziz El Sayyid. Nosair shot in the neck and killed Rabbi Meir Kahane, founder of the Jewish Defense League and head of the Israeli Kach movement, on November 5, 1990, at the Marriott Marquis East Hotel in New York City. While attempting to commandeer a taxi at gunpoint, he traded gunfire with a local police officer; both were wounded. Nosair was critically wounded in the chin.

Nosair was born in Egypt and left Cairo for the United States in 1981. He obtained U.S. citizenship in 1989. The maintenance worker was not a member of any terrorist organization. He had lived in Cliffside Park, New Jersey, but also used a Brooklyn address. He was married to American-born Caren Ann Mills, a convert to Islam who had met her husband in a Pittsburgh mosque. They had three children.

He was a deeply religious man who prayed several times during the workday. He had been displaced as a teen from his Sinai Peninsula home after the Israeli occupation. He was fired as a diamond setter in Pittsburgh because his efforts to convert coworkers to Islam interfered with his work. He lied on his employment application about his residence because the city hires only residents. When arrested, he was carrying three driver's licenses with three different addresses. He was on sick leave from his job at the time of the attack.

He was charged with second-degree murder, attempted murder in the second degree, aggravated assault of a police officer, second-degree assault, reckless endangerment, coercion, three counts of weapons possession, and unlawful imprisonment (for commandeering the taxi). The murder charge carried a maximum sentence of 25 years to life.

On November 13, 1990, he appeared in Manhattan Criminal Court for a hearing on murder charges. On November 20, 1990, a New York grand jury indicted him for murder, to which he pleaded not guilty the next day.

On November 30, 1990, the FBI in a search of his home found a list of six prominent New Yorkers, including a member of Congress and two federal judges, and warned that they could be terrorist targets. On December 11, 1990, police searching his home found ammunition and literature on bomb making.

On December 18, 1990, New York State Supreme Court Justice Alvin Schlesinger revoked Nosair's $300,000 bail. He said that a passport in a different name indicated that Nosair might flee.

The trial began on November 19, 1991. The jury began deliberations on December 18, 1991. On December 20, 1991, Nosair was acquitted of the murder charge regarding Kahane and the attempted murder charge for shooting a postal worker during his escape. He was convicted of assaulting the postal worker and another man, of gun possession, and of coercing the cabdriver by pointing his gun at his head. Nosair faced jail terms of 2 to 7 years for each assault charge and the coercion charge and 5 to 15 years for the weapons charge, and he was held without bail. On January 29, 1992, Manhattan Judge Alvin Schlesinger said that the jury's not-guilty verdict defied the evidence and imposed the maximum allowable sentence of 7 to 22 years.

Nosair was the cousin of Egyptian-born Ibrahim Elgabrowni, who was arrested on March 4, 1993, in connection with the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded.

In March 1993, FBI agents seized documents from Nosair's prison cell in Attica state prison. He was believed to be corresponding with Mohammed A. Salameh, who had been arrested for renting the truck used in the World Trade Center bombing.

On January 13, 1995, federal prosecutors said that he had carried out the bombing of a popular Manhattan gay bar on April 28, 1990, in which three people were injured, and that he had plotted to murder Soviet president Mikhail Gorbachev.

On October 1, 1995, a jury found him guilty of seditious conspiracy, which carries a life term. He was also convicted of assault on Irving Franklin, who was at the Kahane shooting; of attempted murder and assault of postal police officer Carlos Acosta; and of numerous other charges involving possession and use of firearms. He was acquitted of any direct role in the plot to bomb the city landmarks.

On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to life plus 75 years.

El Sayyid A. Noseir: variant of El Sayyid A. Nosair.

El Sayyid A. Nosir: variant of El Sayyid A. Nosair.

Akbar Nouchedeheh: one of 25 members of the People's Majority, an anti-Khomeini group, who seized the Iranian Interests Section in Washington, D.C., and held six Iranian employees hostage for an hour on August 7, 1981. They were put on probation and ordered to complete 25 hours of community service. He was also charged with carrying a pistol without a license in the wounding of Iranian employee Mohammed Shamirza.

Guillermo and Ignacio Novo Sampol: two Cuban American brothers whom Orlando Bosch, leader of the Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations, claimed had placed a bomb that exploded in Washington, D.C., on September 21, 1976, killing Orlando Letelier, who was the Chilean ambassador to the United States during Salvador Allende's administration, and Ronni Karpen Moffitt, an administrative assistant at the Trans National Institute, a division of the Institute for Policy Studies. Bosch said the Novos planted the bomb as a favor to the Chilean junta. On September 15, 1980, the U.S. Court of Appeals overturned their convictions in the Letelier case, ordering new trials for the two men convicted of murder. On May 30, 1981, a federal appeals court acquitted Guillermo of charges of murder and conspiracy in the Letelier case but convicted him of two counts of making false declarations to a federal grand jury. On April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced Guillermo to seven years for endangering public safety in connection with the November 2000 plot to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro in Panama City.

Commander Nueve: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

Abdul Nuh: one of two Hanafi Muslims who took over the Washington, D.C., City Council offices on March 9, 1977, taking several hostages. He was convicted of murder in the second degree and assault with intent to kill. Nuh held a BS degree and had no previous record of convictions. He was employed as a substitute teacher in the public school system. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping that arose from the episode in which he participated and was acquitted of the attacks in which he was not present. He received a sentence of 58 years to life. In October 1979, the D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the convictions of the 12 defendants who had taken over several D.C. facilities, including the City Council, on March 9, 1977, saying that the government's evidence was overwhelming. On February 19, 1980, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the convictions of eight Hanafis for conspiracy, armed kidnapping, and other charges.

Abdel Nur: Guyanese citizen of Pakistani descent, age 57, who remained at large after the June 2, 2007, announcement of the foiling of a terrorist plot to bomb aviation fuel tanks and a small segment of the 40-mile Buckeye Partners L.P. petroleum pipelines that supply JFK International Airport in New York City. The FBI had monitored the plotters for 18 months. The group had no apparent ties to al Qaeda but was linked to the Sunni-oriented Jamaat al Muslimeen (JAM), an extremist black Muslim group that held the prime minister of Trinidad and members of its Parliament hostage in 1990.

Nur was five feet seven, with salt and pepper hair, and was born on March 24, 1960, as Compton Eversley. He converted to Islam. He arrived in Trinidad from Guyana on May 20, 2007. He had been deported from the United States in the late 1980s following a drug violation.

The press reported that Nur, Ibrahim, and Kadir were associates of former police officer and JAM leader Yasin Abu Bakr, 64, having met with him in May to discuss the plot. Authorities also believed JAM had contacts with al Qaeda and Hizballah, but no operational relationship. Although Abu Bakr denied knowing the trio, Guyana's acting police chief told the press that Kadir, a Shi'ite cleric, and Abu Bakr had a lumber business together.

Nur surrendered to police in Trinidad on June 5. On June 29, 2007, four suspects fighting extradition in Trinidad were indicted on five counts of conspiracy to "cause death, serious bodily injury and extensive destruction" at the airport.

Nur became one of three suspects whose extradition appeal was rejected by an appeals court in Trinidad. The trio was placed on an FBI plane on June 24, 2008. On June 26, they pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in New York on charges of conspiring to plant explosives to blow up JFK International Airport's major jet-fuel supply tankers and pipeline. The specific charges were conspiracy to attack a public transportation system, conspiracy to destroy a building with fire and explosives, conspiracy to attack aircraft and aircraft materials, conspiracy to destroy an international airport, and conspiracy to attack a mass transportation facility. The judge denied bond. A status hearing was scheduled for August 7, 2008.

O

---

Robin Oban: U.S. citizen, age 25, who was deported to the United States on January 6, 1974, after three days of police questioning that did not result in formal charges. She was held after the arrest of three individuals on December 29, 1973, in Heathrow Airport. They were carrying five automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. The trio was charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners.

Richard A. Obergfell: hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 335, a B727 flying on the New York–Chicago–Los Angeles run on July 23, 1971. He wanted to be flown to Milan, Italy, was told he needed a larger plane, and took a stewardess hostage to force the plane back to LaGuardia Airport. He drove to JFK Airport in a maintenance van while still holding the hostage and was shot by FBI marksmen while waiting for a TWA B707 to be prepared. He died 25 minutes later. He was the first U.S. hijacker to be killed on U.S. soil during a hijacking attempt.

Not Coded Sean O’Cealleagh: on April 23, 2004, U.S. Immigration Judge Rose Peters ruled that the Northern Irish immigrant should not be expelled from the United States because his aid in killing two U.K. soldiers in 1988 was a “purely political” action.

Thomas F. O’Connor: former Rochester police detective, age 54, arrested at his home on November 12, 1993, on charges of possession of stolen property—350 pounds of cash, half of the $7.4 million stolen from a Brink’s armored car depot in Rochester, New York, on January 5, 1993, by masked gunmen suspected of being Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters. He retired after 20 years on the force in July 1982. He worked as a security guard for Genesee Brewing Company. In 1990, he began working as a security guard for Brink’s. Federal agents believed that the holdup was an inside job. In the 1980s, he became active in Irish Northern Aid, which helps families of prisoners in Northern Ireland. He faced three counts of possession of stolen property and two other counts related to the robbery.

Abdulrahman Odeh: among those indicted on July 27, 2004, when the Justice Department in Dallas unsealed a 42-count indictment against the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF)—the nation’s largest Muslim charity—charging its seven senior officials with funneling $12.4 million over six years to Hamas associates. The charges included providing material support for terrorism, money laundering, and income tax offenses. On October 22, 2007, a Dallas jury found little evidence against him, and the judge declared a mistrial. (See also Shukri Abu Baker.)

Mohammed Sadiq Odeh: variants Mohammed Saddiq Odeh, Howeida. Pakistani engineer (other reports say he is a Jordanian-born Palestinian), age 33, arrested on August 7, 1998, at Karachi Airport in connection with the al Qaeda bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Kenya on August 7, 1998.

He was returned to Kenya on August 14 for traveling on a false Yemeni passport with a fake visa, using the name Abdull Bast Awadah. An immigration official noted that the photograph in his passport was not of him.

Odeh's Yemeni passport, No. 0011061, was stamped for entry into Mombasa, Kenya, on August 3. He apparently had taken a 10-hour bus ride to the capital. He then flew to Pakistan on August 6 on a Pakistan International Airways Flight 943, departing Nairobi at 10:00 P.M. and arriving in Karachi at 8:25 A.M., the day of the blast. He said that his spiritual guide was bin Laden and that he was attempting to seek refuge with him in Afghanistan. He claimed that the bomb contained 1,760 pounds of TNT and was assembled over several days at the hotel under his direction. Kenyan television claimed that he was married to a Kenyan. Police held three other people in connection with the attack. Two were identified as Mohammed Saleh and Abdullah. Odeh also claimed that his group had taken part in the October 3–4, 1993, attack on U.S. forces in Mogadishu, Somalia, which killed 18 Americans. Former ambassador Robert Oakley and several journalists who had covered the attack said that they were unaware of any foreign involvement in the Somalia killings. Islamabad's The News claimed that Odeh had confessed to conducting other missions for bin Laden in the Philippines, Cairo, and Jordan.

On August 27, 1998, Odeh was brought out of Nairobi and arrived in New York City the next day to be arraigned. In the affidavit, federal prosecutors accused bin Laden's al Qaeda group of bombing the embassy in Kenya. Odeh was charged with 12 counts of murder, 1 count of murder conspiracy, and 1 count of conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. His court-appointed attorney, Jack Sachs, said that Odeh lived in Jordan with his wife and one girl and was last employed making and selling furniture. The affidavit said that Odeh joined al Qaeda in 1992 and received explosives training at bin Laden's camps. Odeh later trained other Islamic radicals opposed to the UN humanitarian mission in Somalia. In 1994, he moved to Mombasa, Kenya, where he used al Qaeda money to establish a fishing business, whose profits supported al Qaeda members in Kenya. He met with senior al Qaeda commanders and was shown TNT and detonators obtained in Tanzania. On August 2, he met with al Qaeda members, including an explosives expert who ran the Kenyan cell. On August 4, the group, minus Odeh, surveilled the U.S. Embassy. On August 6, all but one member of the group left Nairobi. Odeh was told that al Qaeda members in Afghanistan were also moving "to avoid retaliation from the U.S."

He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York. He was charged with 224 counts of murder and with training the Somalis. On October 8, he pleaded not guilty.

He was convicted on May 29, 2001, for conspiracy in the bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania and was sentenced to life in prison.

Ruslan Odizhev: former Taliban-linked detainee at Guantánamo killed on June 27, 2007, by Russian security service agents who were trying to arrest him and another man in Kabardino-Balkariya, near Chechnya. He was suspected in the 1999 bombings of apartment buildings in Moscow and Volgograd and had participated in a 2005 attack on police and government facilities in Nalchik, Kabardino-Balkariya. The attack had been led by Shamil Basayev, who was killed in the shootout. Russian authorities found three homemade bombs on Odizhev's body. He had been captured in Afghanistan and released from Guantánamo in 2004.

Robert Wayne O'Ferrell: Enterprise, Alabama, junk dealer questioned in the mail-bomb deaths of Savannah, Georgia, Alderman Robert E. Robinson, a black official who died on December 18, 1989, and U.S. Appeals Court Judge Robert S. Vance, former head of the Alabama Democratic Party, on December 16, 1989. O'Ferrell flunked a polygraph. The FBI was searching for a typewriter that reportedly linked typewritten court correspondence he filed in 1988 with typed material sent by the mail bomber. His business was known as the New and Old Surplus store.

Uriel A. Ojeda Perez: would-be hijacker of Pinnair Flight 179, a DH114 general aviation flight from Ponce to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on April 16, 1972. He was overpowered by a boarding passenger and a mechanic at the ramp and was charged with air piracy. On August 18, 1972, he was sentenced to two years for conveying false information concerning an attempt to commit air piracy and was released on January 10, 1974.

Thomas Okusane-Martinez: Mexican and one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, while plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany. Swedish police claimed that the group had arrived from Cuba and intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson. Okusane-Martinez was one of three Latin Americans sent to Cuba. He reportedly had participated in a 1972 hijacking.

Sara Jane Olson: alias of Kathleen Soliah.

Hossein Shyrh Olya: Iranian armed with a sub-machine gun who hijacked a U.S. commuter plane in Killeen, Texas, and demanded to be flown to Cuba on February 15, 1983. He forced the pilot to land in Nuevo Laredo, where he turned himself in to the Federal Security Directorate after being promised safe passage. He was flown to Mexico City, where he was indicted on March 4, 1983, for hijacking and hostage taking. The United States requested extradition.

Mullah Omar: led the Taliban regime in Afghanistan that sheltered al Qaeda. He sustained a wound from shrapnel to his right eye. He was born circa 1966 in Uruzgan Province, Afghanistan. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $10 million for his arrest and/or conviction.

Ramzi Omar: alias of Ramzi Binalshibh.

Shawqi Omar: U.S. citizen suspected of being a senior al Qaeda operative. On April 27, 2006, police in Utah and California arrested five of his relatives on charges of defrauding banks through bad mortgages and car loans. They were questioned on whether they were funding terrorism.

Shawqi Ahmad Omar: Jordanian American arrested in Baghdad in October 2004 for sheltering an Iraqi insurgent and four Jordanian jihadis in his residence, which contained explosives, and for aiding Abu Musab al-Zarqawi's terrorist network. The Iraqi government said he was planning to kidnap foreigners. Coalition forces wanted to turn him over to the Central Criminal Court of Iraq for prosecution. The Washington, D.C., district court blocked his transfer. A panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit upheld the decision, saying the court had jurisdiction to hear his claim to the writ of habeas corpus. In December 2007, the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear the case of Geren v. Omar. Arguments were scheduled for March 2008. On June 12, 2008, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously ruled that he could not use U.S. courts to challenge his transfer into foreign custody.

Tarek Eid Omar: Egyptian arrested in Evansville, Indiana, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Abdulrahman Omari: resident of Vero Beach, Florida, who was videotaped with 9/11 lead hijacker Muhammad Atta at the Portland, Maine, jetport at 5:53 A.M. on September 11, 2001, boarding the U.S. Airways Flight 5930 to Boston. The duo apparently had taken a ferry from Nova Scotia to Portland. Omari lived with Amer Mohammed Kamfar in Vero Beach for several months, and they used the Saudi maintenance control center at JFK Airport as an address.

Abu Omran: alias of Ahmad Ibrahim al-Mughassil.

Joseph Wayne Openshaw: St. Johns, Arizona, resident arrested on February 8, 1991, in connection with the February 4, 1991, discovery of bombs attached to a 1-million gallon methanol tank and another tank that would have emitted poisonous fumes if breached. The tank farm is five miles from Norfolk Naval Base, the world's largest naval base. He was held without bond. He was charged with conspiracy to use explosive devices to commit arson, mail fraud, and wire fraud.

Guillermo Arsenio Oporta Reyes: one of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. As part of a deal that freed the hostages, he arrived on March 22, 1993, in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, where he was taken in National Department of Investigations (DNI) vehicles to DNI Headquarters. The Dominican government had granted him a provisional visa so that he could remain in the country under DNI protection. President Joaquin Balaguer granted him asylum.

Michael O'Rourke: on October 30, 1979, he was arrested by officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service while being questioned at FBI headquarters in Philadelphia. He was wanted for questioning in the 1976 murder of a policeman. He had blasted out of an Irish prison earlier in 1976. He was living under the name Patrick Manion and apparently had violated U.S. immigration laws. He was listed as Ireland's Public Enemy Number One after being linked to the July 21, 1976, detonation of a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) land mine under the limousine of the new U.K. ambassador, Christopher Ewart-Biggs, and Judith Cook, his secretary. Two others riding in the car were injured. He had confessed to being an explosives expert with the IRA. On February 22, 1984, he was granted a five-week delay in his deportation by a New York appeals court. He was scheduled to serve on March 17, 1984, as the honorary grand marshal for the St. Patrick's Day Parade in New York City. On June 20, 1984, he appeared before the antiterrorist Special Criminal Court in Dublin after his arrest at the Dublin Airport following deportation from the United States. He was the first IRA member deported from the United States. He was ordered held until his next court appearance on July 4, 1984, on charges of prison escape and planting explosives.

Pedro Orozco Guzman: gunman wounded by police in a shootout on December 24, 1973. Before he died of his wounds, he confessed to participating in the kidnappings by the People's Revolutionary Armed Forces of Mexico of U.K. Honorary Consul Anthony Duncan Williams on October 10, 1973; Mexican industrialist Fernando Aranguren on October 12, 1973; and U.S. consul general to Guadalajara Terrence G. Leonhardy on May 4, 1973.

Enrique Ortega: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army (ELN) occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Stewart Orth: alias of Willis Jessie.

Carlos Alberto Ortiz: member of Los Julupeсты, a group of alleged members of the Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrests followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California; a Venezuelan official; and a Mexican businessman.

Jairo Ortiz Acosta: one of three National Liberation Army (ELN) hijackers of an Avianca DC4 flying from Riohacha to Barranquilla, Colombia, on March 5, 1968. They diverted the plane to Cuba.

Amar Sherin Osman: on April 8, 1986, the Egyptian said he had a bomb in his briefcase on Eastern Airlines Flight 119 en route from New York's La Guardia Airport to Atlanta, Georgia. After an emergency landing in Philadelphia, it was determined to be a hoax. He was charged with providing false information and interfering with a flight crew.

Haniffa Bin Osman: Singaporean, age 55, arrested on September 29, 2006, by the FBI for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State's Attorneys' Office announced that he and others were charged with conspiracy to export weapons and munitions, four of them to the LTTE. The four with LTTE links were believed to have conspired to launder money to the group in addition to trying to ship the weapons. He was held in federal custody in Guam and was expected to be transferred to Maryland. Osman had traveled to Baltimore in July to meet with undercover agents at the Inner Harbor. He test-fired some of the weapons at a range in Havre de Grace, Maryland.

Semi Osman: Lebanese imam, age 32, who was arrested in May 2002 by the Puget Sound Joint Terrorist Task Force at Seattle's Dar-us-Salaam (Ta'qwa) mosque and charged with immigration fraud and illegal possession of a semiautomatic .40 caliber handgun with its serial numbers removed. Police seized from his residence additional firearms, military field manuals, instructions on poisoning water supplies, a visa application to Yemen, various items associated with Islamic radicalism, and papers by London-based Muslim radical Sheik Abu Hamzi al-Masri, who had publicly supported the 9/11 attacks. British citizen Osman was an active-duty U.S. Navy reservist and a former Army enlistee who lived in Tacoma. Osman had lived for a time on a ranch in Blye, Oregon, which was raided in June 2002 by FBI agents investigating reports of a 1999 "jihad training camp," conducted by al-Masri. Others who visited Osman's mosque included "9/11 20th hijacker" Zacarias Moussaoui and would-be shoe bomber Richard Reid.

Police were also investigating mosque members James and Mustafa Ujaama, brothers who had grown up in Seattle and converted to Islam. Police believed that James had posted radical Islamic teachings on a Web site for al-Masri's London mosque and had escorted two representatives from the mosque to the Oregon ranch.

On August 2, 2002, Semi Osman, of Tacoma, pleaded guilty to a weapons violation in exchange for immigration charges being dropped. Prosecutors had stated that Osman "was committed to facilitate an act of international terrorism," which defense attorney Robert Leen denied. On April 25, 2003, a Seattle judge sentenced Osman to 11 months in prison.

Adham Othman: Othman, age 21, of Dallas, was stopped with his brother Louai Othman and cousin Awad Muhareb on August 10, 2006, by police in Caro, Michigan. Police found in their van nearly 1,000 phones, most of them prepaid TracFones; a laptop computer; and a bag of receipts. They had just purchased 80 prepaid mobile phones from a Wal-Mart. The trio was charged with soliciting or providing material support for terrorism and obtaining information on a vulnerable target for the purposes of terrorism. They were arraigned on August 12. Prosecutors believed they were targeting the five-mile-long Mackinaw Bridge connecting Michigan's two peninsulas, but two of the trio said they had planned to sell the phones at a profit. On August 14, the FBI and Michigan State Police said they had no indication that they were terrorists, although Michigan officials kept the trio in jail. On September 5, a federal judge threw out the conspiracy and money laundering charges against the trio, ruling there was not enough evidence to prosecute.

Louai Othman: Othman, age 23, of Mesquite, was stopped with his brother Adham Othman and cousin Awad Muhareb on August 10, 2006, by police in Caro, Michigan. Police found in their van nearly 1,000 phones, most of them prepaid TracFones; a laptop computer; and a bag of receipts. They had just purchased 80 prepaid mobile phones from a Wal-Mart. The trio was charged with soliciting or providing material support for terrorism and obtaining information on a vulnerable target for the purposes of terrorism. They were arraigned on August 12. Prosecutors believed they were targeting the five-mile-long Mackinaw Bridge connecting Michigan's two peninsulas, but two of the trio said they had planned to sell the phones at a profit. On August 14, the FBI and Michigan State Police said they had no indication that they were terrorists, although Michigan officials kept the trio in jail. On September 5, a federal judge threw out the conspiracy and money laundering charges against the trio, ruling there was not enough evidence to prosecute.

Diana Oughton: Weather Underground member who died in a New York City Weather bomb factory in the 1960s. On October 8, 1970, the Quarter Moon Society bombed a Navy Reserve Officers Training Corps facility in Seattle, Washington, to commemorate her.

Josephine Sunshine Overaker: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, when she was age 31, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front (ELF) and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower. She remained at large. On May 19, 2006, Oregon indicted four environmental extremists, including Overaker, for the 1998 ELF firebombing at a Vail ski resort that led to $12 million in damages to a mountain lodge, two restaurants, and other buildings and ski lifts. Overaker and others had been named in an earlier Oregon indictment for conspiracy for similar attacks in Oregon, California, and Wyoming. The ELF had attacked Vail because it was expanding into potential habitat of the endangered lynx.

Henry Overturf: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 27, Overturf changed his not-guilty plea to guilty on one count each of conspiring to illegally make and possess unregistered destructive devices. Overturf was sentenced to 12 to 18 months. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Mustafa Khan Owasi: one of 5 to 19 names involved in a one-week hunt for would-be terrorists following a report that turned out to be a hoax; the search was called off by the FBI on January 6, 2003.

Mohamed Rashed Daoud al-Owhali: alias Khalid Salim Saleh bin Rashed. Yemeni who traveled from Lahore, Pakistan, to Nairobi, Kenya, on July 31, 1998; rode on the truck in the August 7, 1998, bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Nairobi; and threw the grenade at the embassy guard. He expected to die but was hospitalized with injuries to his hands, face, and back. He was questioned by Kenyan police two days later. On August 12, he initially told the FBI that he had been standing in a bank near the embassy when the bomb went off and claimed he was wearing the same clothing as on August 7. The affidavit doubted this claim because “his clothes bore no traces of blood.” He later admitted lying. On August 20, al-Owhali confessed to the FBI, saying he had been trained in explosives, hijacking, and kidnapping in Afghan camps. Some were affiliated with al Qaeda, which, according to the affidavit, was “an international terrorist group led by Osama bin Laden, dedicated to opposing non-Islamic governments with force and violence.” He was aware that bin Laden had issued a fatwa calling for the killing of Americans. Nairobi hospital staff found padlock keys and bullets connected with the bombing that al-Owhali had discarded. He was arrested; flown to the United States on August 26, 1998; and arraigned the next day in a Manhattan courthouse on 12 counts of murder, 1 count of conspiracy, and 1 count of using weapons of mass destruction. He was ordered held without bail pending a September 28 court appearance. Al-Owhali applied for free legal services, saying he was single and unemployed and had received $12,000 from his father in the past year. His only asset was a 1992 Chevrolet Caprice.

P

---

Rosemberg Pabon Pabon: identified by the government as Commander Uno, one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. The gunmen ultimately obtained safe haven in Cuba. On July 7, 1980, Panama said it would consider the extradition request for him. On March 19, 1981, Colombia announced the capture after a pitched gun battle of Pabon.

Argonauta Pacheco da Silva: Brazilian labor leader and former São Paulo legislator. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group turned up later in Cuba.

Ivan Padilla: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Jose Padilla: alias Abdullah al Muhajir. U.S. citizen and former Hispanic gang member, age 31, arrested on May 8, 2002, on suspicion of planning a dirty bomb radiological attack in the United States for al Qaeda. Padilla was arrested entering the United States at Chicago's O'Hare International Airport on a flight from Pakistan.

The al Qaeda associate was accused of conspiracy to build and detonate a dirty bomb—a bomb consisting of normal explosives plus radioactive material. Padilla had studied how to build such a bomb in Afghanistan and was scouting possible U.S. targets.

At the Chicago airport, U.S. Customs officers discovered that he was carrying $10,526 in undeclared currency. He was transferred to a brig in the Charleston Naval Weapons Station in South Carolina on June 9 after the president designated him an “enemy combatant,” not subject to civil trial. Authorities wanted him to testify before a New York grand jury investigating terrorism, but he refused to cooperate. He was turned over to the military. On June 13, administration officials said he would not be tried by a military tribunal but could be held until the president declared the war over. He was represented by attorney Donna R. Newman, who petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus by federal Judge Michael B. Mukasey, saying Padilla's constitutional rights had been violated.

Benjamin Ahmed Mohammed, an associate in the plot, was arrested in Pakistan. Padilla and his friend in Pakistan were fingered in April by al Qaeda detainee Abu Zubayda, who gave vague references to an individual involved in such a plot. Authorities quizzed other al Qaeda detainees, checked travel and criminal records, and developed enough clues to identify the duo.

Padilla had been a Latin Kings and Maniac Latin Disciples street gang member in Brooklyn and was well known to the local jail system. He had been involved in a killing at age 13 (other sources say age 15). He was arrested five times in Chicago for assault and other crimes between 1985 and 1991 and was sent to prison in Florida following a road-rage shooting on October 8, 1991. The Puerto Rican may have converted to Islam in a prison substance-abuse course. He married an Egyptian and left the United States. He visited Lahore and Karachi, Pakistan, where he discussed the dirty bomb plan. He met with senior al Qaeda officials in March regarding the plot. Authorities believed he intended to return to Pakistan with the results of his reconnaissance. He traveled to Zurich and then Cairo, where he spent a month with his wife and two children.

On June 12, 2002, the South Florida Joint Terrorism Task Force arrested Adham Hassoun, a leader of the al-Iman mosque in Broward County that Padilla had attended in the early and mid-1990s. Hassoun had founded the Florida chapter of the Benevolence International Foundation, which has funded al Qaeda. Hassoun was held on an immigration violation.

In an affidavit filed on August 27 in a federal court in New York, the government said that while in Afghanistan and Pakistan in 2001 and 2002, Padilla met several times with al Qaeda leaders and discussed “detonation of explosive devices in hotel rooms and gas stations.”

On October 24, the Associated Press reported that defense lawyers Donna Newman and Andrew Patel had complained that prosecutors refused to show them evidence that prosecutors said would harm ongoing investigations and national security.

On December 4, Chief Judge Michael B. Mukasey of New York’s Southern District stated in a 102-page decision that Padilla could have access to an attorney to challenge his detention as an enemy combatant. He rejected the Bush administration’s claim that access to an attorney would impede intelligence gathering and jeopardize national security but upheld the government’s right to designate enemy combatants, including U.S. citizens, in the war on terrorism. On March 11, 2003, Judge Mukasey ruled that Padilla must be allowed access to his lawyers, rejecting a government plea to reverse his December decision.

On April 9, 2003, Judge Mukasey asked the U.S. Second Circuit Court of Appeals to determine whether President Bush could hold Padilla as an enemy combatant until the conflict with al Qaeda ended. On July 30, 2003, the Cato Institute, People For the American Way, and four other groups filed a brief challenging Padilla’s detention.

On November 17, 2003, a three-judge federal U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit considered whether the president had sole authority to declare a U.S. citizen an enemy combatant. As of the hearing, Padilla had not been charged for 18 months and had been held in a naval brig in South Carolina sans access to family, friends, or an attorney. The panel included judges Rosemary S. Pooler, Richard C. Wesley, and Barrington D. Parker. Padilla was represented by Donna Newman and Jenny S. Martinez, a law professor at Stanford. On December 18, 2003, the court ruled 2–1 that the president did not have the power to declare a U.S. citizen seized on U.S. soil an “enemy combatant” to be held indefinitely in military custody and gave the United States 30 days to release Padilla, declare him a material witness, or charge him. On January 22, 2004, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit granted the Bush administration’s request for a stay of the order to free Padilla.

On February 11, 2004, the Pentagon said that Padilla would be permitted to consult with an attorney but that this access “is not required by domestic or international law and should not be treated as a precedent.” Padilla met with attorney Donna Newman on March 3, 2004.

On February 20, 2004, the U.S. Supreme Court said it would rule on Rumsfeld v. Padilla regarding the president’s assertion of authority to declare U.S. citizens captured on U.S. soil “enemy combatants” who could be detained indefinitely without charges or access to counsel. The court heard oral arguments on April 28, 2004.

On June 1, 2004, the government announced in its seven-page case summary that Padilla had met with Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, mastermind of the 9/11 attacks, as well as al Qaeda leaders

Muhammad Atef, Abu Zubayda, and Ramzi Binalshibh. Padilla was told to try to blow up 20 apartment buildings by sealing them, letting them fill with natural gas, and setting off timed explosions. Targets were to be in New York, Washington, Florida, and Chicago. A Padilla accomplice was in custody. Padilla was to conduct attacks with Adnan G. El Shukrijumah, but they clashed and the project was scrapped.

On June 28, 2004, the Supreme Court ruled 5–4 that Padilla’s attorney had filed his habeas corpus request in the wrong court. It had been filed in a New York court, whereas Padilla was being held in South Carolina. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing the opinion of the Supreme Court, said, “We confront two questions: First, did Padilla properly file his habeas petition in the Southern District of New York; and second, did the President possess authority to detain Padilla militarily. We answer the threshold question in the negative and thus do not reach the second question presented.”

On February 28, 2005, U.S. District Judge Henry Floyd in Spartanburg, South Carolina, ordered the Bush administration to either charge or free terrorism suspect Padilla. In his 23-page opinion, Floyd said, “The court finds that the President has no power, neither express nor implied, neither constitutional nor statutory, to hold petitioner as an enemy combatant,” and gave the administration 45 days to comply. He had been held without charge for two and one-half years.

On September 9, 2005, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit ruled that the president did have the power to indefinitely detain a U.S. citizen captured on U.S. soil without any criminal charges during wartime. The opinion was written by Judge J. Michael Luttig, who was joined by judges William B. Traxler Jr. and M. Blane Michael.

President Bush released an order on November 20 that said, “I hereby determine that it is in the best interest of the United States that Jose Padilla be released from detention by the Secretary of Defense and transferred to the control of the Attorney General for the purpose of criminal proceedings against him.” On November 22, 2005, the administration charged Padilla in a Miami, Florida, criminal court with being part of a North American support cell that worked to support jihad in Afghanistan and elsewhere overseas from 1993 to 2001. The indictment charged him with conspiracy to murder, kidnap, and maim individuals overseas and provide support for terrorists and named four other defendants: Lebanese-born Adham Amin Hassoun (who had lived in Broward County, Florida) and Jordanian-born U.S. citizen Kifah Wael Jayyousi, who were in federal custody in Florida; Mohamed Hesham Youssef, an Egyptian who had lived in Broward County and was now in prison in Egypt on unrelated terrorism convictions; and Lebanese Canadian citizen Kassem Daher, believed to be overseas. The indictment said that Jayyousi, Hassoun, and Daher had run a terrorist network since 1993 into which Padilla was recruited. The cell raised money and identified operatives to go to Afghanistan, Bosnia, Kosovo, Chechnya, Egypt, Somalia, and elsewhere. The group members were linked to Sheikh Omar Abd-al-Rahman, “the blind sheik” imprisoned for the New York City landmarks conspiracy, and Mohamed Zaky, a founder of Islamic charities who was killed in Chechnya in 1995.

On November 30, the Richmond-based U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit ordered the government to explain why the bombing plots were not mentioned in the new indictment of Padilla and declined to authorize his transfer to the Justice Department. On December 21, the Fourth Circuit refused to permit the United States to transfer Padilla from military to civilian custody to face new criminal charges. The government had not included charges in the civilian case that it had initially used to detain him as an enemy combatant and was silent on the dirty bomb accusation. The Supreme Court on January 4, 2006, overruled the circuit’s ruling and allowed federal prosecutors to take over the case. Padilla made his first court appearance the next day. On January 12, 2006, he pleaded not guilty to criminal charges of being part of a secret network that supported Muslim terrorists. U.S. Magistrate Judge Barry Garber refused to set bail. On April 3, 2006, the U.S. Supreme Court by a 6–3 vote rejected Padilla's appeal of his indefinite detention, saying it would not hear the case because the administration had granted his request to be tried in a civilian court.

On July 5, 2006, U.S. District Judge Marcia G. Cooke issued an order that permitted Padilla to view 32 classified Department of Defense documents related to his trial. On August 2, 2006, Judge Cooke postponed the trial after defense lawyers said that they needed a continuance to plow through summaries of 50,000 intercepted phone calls, including 827 transcripts translated from Arabic.

On August 21, 2006, Judge Cooke ruled that the government had brought overlapping and redundant charges against Padilla and two others and dismissed one charge. On January 30, 2007, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 11th Circuit reinstated the charge.

On October 6, 2006, Padilla's lawyers sought dismissal of all charges because of "outrageous government conduct." They said Padilla had spent 1,307 days in a nine-by-seven-foot cell and claimed that he had been tortured, a charge the prosecution denied.

Jury selection was scheduled for mid-November, with a pool of 3,000.

Prosecutors announced on November 16, 2006, that one of their key witnesses who had led to the capture of Padilla was al Qaeda detainee Abu Zubayda.

On February 28, after several months of disagreement among court-ordered psychiatric assessments, Judge Cook ruled that Padilla was competent to stand trial.

On August 16, 2007, the jury convicted Padilla on one count of conspiracy to murder, kidnap, and maim overseas; one count of conspiracy to provide material support for terrorists; and one count of material support for terrorists. Judge Cooke announced on January 16, 2008, that Padilla should spend at least 30 years to life in prison.

Dylcia Noemi Pagan: Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) member who was arrested by Evanston, Illinois, police on April 4, 1980, and charged with a variety of local weapons, theft, and armed robbery charges. Bond was set at $2 million.

Ghousror Abdallah Pahhouli: one of five Iranian diplomats arrested in Turkey on October 25, 1988, for planning to kidnap Said Abu Hassan Mochhadezade, an anti-Khomeini engineer working in Erzincan who reportedly was a member of the People's Mujahideen. They were to be tried by a state security court in Istanbul State. The press reported that two of them were members of the Savama Iranian secret police; the other three were members of the embassy's bodyguard team.

Wladimir Palmeira: former president, age 24, of the Metropolitan Student Union in Rio, arrested in 1968 and sentenced in August 1969 to three years in prison for leading student demonstrations against the government. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group turned up later in Cuba.

Ricardo Palmera: alias Simon Trinidad. Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) commander, age 54, who was arrested on January 2, 2004, by Colombian and Ecuadoran authorities while he was being treated in Quito for leishmaniasis, a parasitic, flesh-eating disease spread by sand flies in Colombian jungles, according to Colombian police. However, Ecuadoran authorities said he was arrested on a Quito street. Palmera, or Trinidad, had been a negotiator in FARC–government talks. He was helicoptered to the border and handed over to Colombian authorities, who had offered an $820,000 reward for his capture.

He was the son of a prominent Colombian lawyer, had done graduate work at Harvard, and had been the manager of Banco del Comercio in north-eastern Colombia. But in 1987, he had left his wife and two sons behind to join the FARC, taking several hundred thousand dollars of the bank's money with him. Palmera became the nominal head of the Caribbean Bloc, which kidnapped and murdered Consuelo Araujo in September 2001—she was the matriarch of a prominent Cesar Province family and a popular former minister of culture. His sister is married to her brother. Palmera was a leader of FARC political ideologists, who were losing leadership to the military wing. On December 17, 2004, Colombian president Alvaro Uribe signed extradition orders after obtaining Supreme Court approval to send him to New York to face cocaine trafficking charges. President Uribe said he would revoke the decision if the FARC released 63 hostages, including the three Americans captured on February 14, 2003, and a German, before December 30, 2004. Palmera did not make the deadline, and on December 31, 2004, the former banker was sent to the United States to face drug and kidnapping charges.

On November 7, 2006, Palmera told a court that he had never seen the three U.S. hostages he was accused of helping to hold. He said the FARC was noble and peaceful. He faced federal charges of providing material support to a terrorist group, conspiracy, and hostage taking. On November 21, 2006, U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan declared a mistrial after the jury said a third time that they were deadlocked after five weeks of testimony but only a day of deliberations. The prosecution said it would retry the case. Palmera also faced federal drug charges. On July 9, 2007, Palmera was convicted in a U.S. federal court of helping to hold the hostages. The U.S. district court jurors found him guilty of conspiracy to commit hostage taking but were split over convicting him on supporting terrorism. The federal judge asked them to keep deliberating on that charge and three counts of hostage taking. Palmera faced 30 years in the hostage case plus a trial on drug charges. However, on July 10, 2007, a mistrial was declared after the jury deadlocked on the hostage-taking charges and the terrorism support charge after five days of deliberations. On January 28, 2008, he was sentenced to 60 years in prison. The judge called him a terrorist. On May 6, 2008, U.S. prosecutors asked the judge to dismiss cocaine charges.

Uzair Paracha: Pakistani, age 23, detained on March 31, 2003, by federal authorities as a material witness in the offices of a New York clothing import firm owned by his father, Saifullah Paracha. He had ties to the shipping industry and senior al Qaeda leaders. Investigators said the family business might have been used to smuggle al Qaeda terrorists or weapons into the United States. His father owns a Pakistani textile company that shipped large containers of clothes and other goods into Newark. He was arrested by Karachi police while trying to board an airplane in Karachi in July; he was held incommunicado. Uzair Paracha was fingered by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, a senior jailed al Qaeda member. Uzair Paracha was also linked to Ohio truck driver Iyman Faris, who pleaded guilty on May 1 to providing material support to a terrorist organization.

On August 8, federal authorities in Manhattan filed terrorism charges against him, including conspiracy to provide material support to terrorists, which entails a 15-year sentence. The indictment said that for a $200,000 business investment, the younger Paracha had agreed to pose as an unnamed al Qaeda associate (later revealed to be Majid Khan) while in the United States to secure immigration documents for him. During a March interview with the FBI and New York Police Department, Paracha admitted to possession of a Maryland driver's license, an ATM card, a key to a post office box, and documents linked to the al Qaeda member. Prosecutors had earlier said that he could also be charged with helping to obtain weapons of mass destruction and conspiracy. His attorney, Anthony Ricco of New York, denied the allegations.

On November 7, 2005, U.S. District Judge Sidney H. Stein ruled that Uzair Paracha could present statements made by captive al Qaeda operatives Majid Khan and Ammar Baluchi in his defense; he had met the duo abroad. The judge ruled that he could not use information from Khalid Sheikh Mohammed or from Paracha's father, Saifullah Paracha, who was held in Guantánamo Bay prison. The trial began on November 8. On November 23, a federal jury in New York convicted Paracha on five counts of conspiracy and providing material and financial support to al Qaeda. He faced 75 years in prison. Sentencing was scheduled for March 3, 2006. Paracha had posed for Khan, a former Baltimore resident, in getting immigration documents to sneak into the United States. Khan planned a series of bombings at gas stations.

Saifullah Paracha: father of Uzair Paracha. Saifullah was held at Guantánamo Bay prison. He owns a New York clothing import firm. Investigators said the family business might have been used to smuggle al Qaeda terrorists or weapons into the United States. He owns a Pakistani textile company that shipped large containers of clothes and other goods into Newark.

Hazaifa Parhat: variant of Hozaiifa Parhat.

Hozaiifa Parhat: variants Huzaifa, Hazaifa. Chinese national held for six years on terrorism charges at the U.S. military prison in Guantánamo Bay as of February 2008. The Muslim of Uighur descent was accused of attending a terrorist training camp in Afghanistan during the 9/11 attacks. The apparent affiliate of the East Turkestan Islamic Movement was captured in Afghanistan. On June 20, 2008, a federal court of appeals in Washington ruled that he was improperly labeled an "enemy combatant" by the Pentagon, the first time a Guantánamo Bay detainee was given an opportunity to seek his release via a civilian court hearing. The court ordered military officials to either "release or transfer Parhat, or to expeditiously hold a new {military} tribunal." He was represented by attorney Susan Baker Manning.

Huzaifa Parhat: variant of Hozaiifa Parhat.

Roger Allen Pastorcich: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines 224, a DC9 flying from Mobile to Chicago on November 2, 1968. He wanted to go to Saigon but was overpowered by the crew on the ground in Birmingham, Alabama. The juvenile was placed on probation on July 18, 1969, after being in juvenile detention. He was placed under psychiatric care and eventually was released on December 23, 1970.

Oldrich Pastorek: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

J. Patino Hormaza: one of four hijackers of an Avianca DC3 flying from Yopal to Sogamoso en Boyaca, Colombia, on May 21, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Charles Lloyd Patterson Sr.: on April 9, 1992, while on a five-day family visit furlough from an Arkansas prison, he hijacked a charter plane and flew it to a different town to rob a former business associate. He was serving 40 years for criminal solicitation to commit murder, threatening terrorism, theft, and burglary. Patterson had threatened two lawyers who represented his wife during their divorce. He had been in prison since 1988 for paying $25,000 to kill one of the lawyers. He was arrested at a motel in Odessa, Texas, on June 19, 1992, after hijacking another plane on June 9. He was charged with two counts of air piracy and escape.

Gregory Vernon Patterson: arrested in July 2005 in Los Angeles in an investigation of a series of 10 gas station holdups. Investigators found contacts to a possible terrorist plot and connections to the radical Islamic group Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh (Assembly of Authentic Islam), which has a presence in the state prison where one of the suspects in the gas station holdups had been recently held. A search of the home of a robbery suspect yielded jihadist literature, documents referring to 9/11, bulletproof vests, and a list of addresses of Southland area synagogues, the Israeli Consulate, National Guard centers, the ticket counter for El Al Israel Airlines at LA International Airport, and other sites. He and Levar Haney Washington were charged with nine counts of robbery and one count of attempted robbery.

Patterson, age 21, worked at a duty-free shop in the Los Angeles Airport's international terminal for several months until early 2005. He was represented by attorney Winston McKessom. Patterson attended California State University at Northridge and met Washington while studying Islam.

Kevin Lamar James was serving time for attempted robbery and possession of a weapon in prison. In 1997, he founded Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh. He recruited several inmates, including Washington, who was paroled and sent to Los Angeles with orders to recruit more followers with clean records and then acquire firearms and explosives. Washington began the robberies in late May with Patterson and Hammad Riaz Samana, both former college students who had attended the same suburban mosque. Meanwhile, Patterson searched the Internet for mentions of the offices of El Al at LAX and the Yom Kippur events in Los Angeles that fall.

On September 12, Patterson and Washington pleaded not guilty in Santa Ana to federal terrorism charges.

Patterson was expected to plead guilty on December 17, 2007.

Christopher Paul: Ohio man, age 43, indicted on April 12, 2007, by a federal grand jury in Columbus, Ohio, on charges that he provided explosives training to al Qaeda members in Germany and had plotted to bomb European resorts and U.S. government offices overseas. The grand jury said he had studied terrorist tactics in the early 1990s in Afghanistan and then recruited others in Germany and trained Americans to “fight violent jihad outside the United States.” The 14-page indictment did not charge him with specific violent acts but noted that he had researched remote-controlled boats and flight simulator computer programs. In 1990 or 1991, he stayed in a Peshawar, Pakistan, guest house and arranged to train in an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan, learning about assault rifles, grenades, and rocket-propelled grenades. He later received advanced training in map reading, climbing, rappelling, military history, and explosive devices. He was then tasked with obtaining document forging equipment, including a currency verifier and a flat-bed scanner. As of January 2000, he was planning to bomb European resorts used by Americans, U.S. government buildings, and military bases. In 2004–2005, he had obtained a night-vision scope, a balaclava hood, a laser range finder, and a fax containing names and phone numbers of key al Qaeda leaders.

He once roomed with Iyman Faris, the Ohio truck driver who pleaded guilty in 2003 to supporting a plan to destroy the Brooklyn Bridge and attack Washington, D.C. Prosecutors asked that he be held without bond.

Paul's birth name was Paul Kenyatta Laws. He twice changed his name.

On June 3, 2008, he pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to use a weapon of mass destruction in terrorist attacks as part of a plea deal that called for a 20-year prison term.

Jonathan Christopher Mark Paul: one of 11 people indicted by the U.S. Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower.

Adam Pearlman: alias of Adam Yahye Gadahn.

Larry Pearson: student, age 18, at Louis Brandeis High School who was arrested for the September 20, 1971, bombing of the entrance of Zaire's UN mission in New York City for the Black Revolutionary Assault Team. While trying to flee in a taxi, Pearson was found with 50 rounds of ammunition and an incriminating note. He was charged in criminal court with arson, possession of a bomb and a loaded weapon, and criminal mischief.

Manuel Pena: secretary general of the Union of Slum Dwellers who had been arrested on the southern highway at the entrance of the San Francisco neighborhood on July 3, 1980. His release from prison was demanded by the Committee of Rural Dwellers of the Marxist Popular League of February 28 who led 115 illiterate peasants in the occupation of the Costa Rican Embassy in San Salvador on July 11, 1980.

Michael Anthony Peparo: one of two would-be hijackers of National Airlines Flight 11 bound for Miami, Florida, on February 3, 1969. His girlfriend wanted to go to Cuba. They surrendered in Miami. On May 7, 1969, they were sentenced to indeterminate terms in juvenile detention. They were paroled on December 7, 1970.

Perez: alias used by Agustin Esquivel-Medrano.

David Perez: arrested on August 4, 1977, by New York police for illegal possession of a shotgun, a revolver, and 100 rounds of ammunition. His roommate, Vincent Alba, was also questioned. The arrest came a day after the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) bombing of a building that houses Defense Department security personnel and the Mobil Building in New York City.

Marino Perez Rojas: exiled Dominican student who was joined by his Chilean exile wife, Mireyz Lopez, and their three children on November 8, 1982, when he occupied the Peruvian Embassy in the Dominican Republic and took a hostage. He wanted either for the government to find him work or for Peru to grant him political asylum. They surrendered peacefully, and Perez was arrested. He had been exiled from the Dominican Republic during the government of Joaquin Balaguer, who was president from 1966 to 1978.

Dr. William Perl: psychologist and founder of the Washington, D.C., branch of the Jewish Defense League. He was arrested on June 29, 1976, by the FBI on charges of conspiracy in connection with two shots being fired at a Hyattsville, Maryland, apartment rented by two second secretaries of the Soviet Embassy. He had contracted with an individual who turned out to be an FBI agent to fire at the apartment. On November 24, 1976, Perl, who had negotiated with Adolf Eichmann in the late 1930s for the release of thousands of German Jews, was convicted of conspiracy to shoot out the widows and of obtaining a .22 caliber rifle without a license. He was found innocent of using a stolen rifle.

Adil Pervez: one of 5 to 19 names involved in a one-week hunt for would-be terrorists following a report that turned out to be a hoax; the search was called off by the FBI on January 6, 2003.

Frane Pesut: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines (TWA) Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 that dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived, and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn. The U.S. court of appeals restored two air piracy counts that had been dismissed by a U.S. district court on a motion by the hijackers, who were accused of kidnapping, air piracy, and second-degree murder. Pesut was convicted on May 5, 1977, of air piracy and conspiracy and was sentenced to 30 years on July 21.

Walter J. Petlikowsky: Polish-born accomplice of Martin Joseph McNally, hijacker of American Airlines Flight 119, a B727 flying the New York–St. Louis–Tulsa route on June 23, 1972. Petlikowsky was arrested on June 30, 1972. He was sentenced to 10 years on May 18, 1973, for aiding and assisting someone sought for air piracy.

Stanley Grant Phanor: alias Brother Sunni. Member of the “Liberty City Seven” arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami, Florida, for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the Miami FBI office. He claimed to be a practicing Roman Catholic and was held on a firearms charge. U.S. District Judge Joan A. Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants on December 13, 2007, and a second mistrial on April 16, 2008.

Michael Philippe: flight attendant, age 25, arrested by federal authorities on March 28, 2002. On January 20, 2002, a bomb threat scrawled in soap on a restroom mirror diverted to Keflavik, Iceland, a Virgin Atlantic Airways B747 flight from London to Orlando with 322 passengers and 18 crew members. The crew found anti-American messages and asked passengers for handwriting samples. Police found no explosives on board. Philippe was arrested for falsely reporting that he had found the note “Bin Laden is the best Americans must die there is a bomb on board Al Quaida” written on an air sickness bag in the plane’s restroom. No bomb was found. Philippe faced 20 years for interference with and intimidating a flight crew. On May 16, a federal grand jury indicted him; he could face life in prison on the new charges of threatening to use a weapon of mass destruction against U.S. citizens, communicating false information and so endangering the safety of a flight, intimidating flight crew members, and lying to an FBI agent. The charges carried maximum respective sentences of life in prison, 20 years, 20 years, and 5 years.

Jack Arland Phillips: chemical engineer Phillips, age 57, of Fairmont, West Virginia, was one of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI’s $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Phillips pleaded guilty. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

Richard J. Picariello: member of the Sam Melville–Jonathan Jackson Unit who was indicted on July 15, 1976, for setting off a bomb on an Eastern Air Lines Electra II Lockheed prop jet at Boston’s Logan International Airport on July 2, 1976. The blast destroyed the $500,000 plane, and one person was injured. A courthouse built in 1805 sustained $100,000 damage in another Boston blast. A National Guard truck was destroyed in a third bombing in Boston. He was also a member of the Fred Hampton Unit of the People’s Forces. He was additionally wanted in the attempted kidnapping of Polaroid Corporation president William J. McCune on August 12, 1976, outside a company plant in Waltham, Massachusetts.

Brian Pickett: Tampa bank security guard, age 38, charged with bank robbery and conspiracy after he and two other members of the racist neo-Nazi National Alliance were arrested on May 8, 1998, on charges of having fully assembled 14 pipe bombs that they planned to plant across Orlando, Florida, as diversions for two bank robberies.

Francesco Pieperno: on June 2, 1982, Judge Paul Martineau of the Superior Court of Quebec released the Italian physicist because of a total “lack of evidence” that he was in collusion with the Italian Red Brigades.

William Pierce: leader of the racist neo-Nazi National Alliance. The Hillsboro, West Virginia, resident wrote The Turner Diaries, which inspired Timothy McVeigh in the Oklahoma City bombing.

Vincente Rafael Pierre: resident of Charlotte County, Virginia, age 44, who was arrested on September 20, 2001, on allegations that he had had his wife, Traci Upshur, buy guns for him two years earlier. As a convicted felon, he was forbidden to own weapons. He was arrested at the Muslims of America compound in the rural Red House area of northern Charlotte County, Virginia, and had a box cutter in his pocket. Upshur also faced charges. Pierre was linked to a violent black Muslim group called Al-Fuqra (Arabic for "impoverished"). The group was connected to numerous murders and bombings, targeting Hindus and Jews as well as Muslims with whom they disagreed. In the early 1990s, Pierre and colleagues were indicted in Colorado after a search of a storage locker found firearms, explosives, and plans for an attack. Pierre was sentenced to four years' probation on a fraud conviction.

Pinana: alias of Freddy Ramos.

Christine Pinter: alias Fatima. Named as an accomplice on June 3, 1997, in a nine-count indictment of her husband, Mohammed Rashid, in a Washington, D.C., court on charges of conspiracy to murder, assault, and aircraft sabotage in connection with the August 11, 1982, bombing of a Pan American World Airways flight from Tokyo to the United States that killed a Japanese teen and wounded 15 other people. She remains at large.

Onofre Pinto: former Brazilian Air Force sergeant charged in the October 12, 1968, machine-gun attack on U.S. Army Capt. Charles R. Chandler in Brazil by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard. He and 14 other prisoners were freed in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick. He was flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group turned up later in Cuba.

Dean Pleasant: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 31, he pleaded guilty to three felony counts although he was not part of the plea bargain. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Barbara H. Pliskow: would-be hijacker of American Airlines Flight 124, a B727 flying from Detroit to New York City on September 24, 1971. The White Panther carried a diaper bag with dynamite onto the plane, but because of a tip, everyone was deplaned prior to takeoff. She was apprehended in the terminal after threatening to shoot the arresting officer with her pistol and to blow up the explosives. She had intended to demand the release of two imprisoned Black Panthers and join them on a flight to Algeria. She was released on bond on October 18, 1973. She was given two years' probation for assaulting a federal officer on July 23, 1974. Some reports indicated that she was accompanied by a male White Panther.

Porfirio: alias of German Arevalo Hernandez.

Luis Posada Carriles: arrested on October 14, 1976, by Venezuelan authorities. He was the employer of Hernan Ricardo Losano, a Venezuelan detained on October 8, 1976, in Barbados and returned to Trinidad the same night. On October 18, 1976, Losano claimed to have placed the bomb that exploded on October 6, 1976, on Cubana Airlines 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. Posada was a Cuban who had headed the Venezuelan secret police, DISIP. On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted him on qualified murder charges, which carried a maximum penalty of 30 years.

On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved Losano of charges of homicide and high treason in the bombing. However, he was not released, pending Supreme Court ratification of the verdict. On August 8, 1982, he escaped from the San Carlos Prison in central Caracas and fled to the Chilean Embassy, where he requested political asylum. He returned to his cell on August 11, 1982, when Chile turned down the asylum request. He escaped from jail on August 19, 1985. On August 4, 1987, a three-judge Venezuelan panel acquitted him of the Cubana attack.

On August 9, 1998, the Miami Herald reported that he had planned to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro on a August 20–26, 1998, visit to the Dominican Republic.

On April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced him to eight years for endangering public safety and falsifying documents. Panama freed him on August 26, 2004.

On April 12, 2005, he applied for political asylum in the United States. He was in hiding somewhere in the United States. On May 17, the United States arrested him in Miami after he conducted public interviews with local reporters. On May 19, 2005, the United States charged him with entering the United States illegally. He faced a June 13 hearing before an immigration judge in El Paso. On May 21, 2005, Venezuela made a provisional arrest request—just short of extradition—while thousands throughout the country demonstrated for his return. The United States denied the request on May 27, 2005. A judge ruled on June 20, 2005, that the trial would remain in El Paso and not be moved to Florida. In the fall of 2005, a federal judge ruled that he could not be deported to Cuba or Venezuela. On March 22, 2006, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement said that he would not be released, but efforts to deport him to a willing country would continue. On January 11, 2007, Posada was indicted on one count of naturalization fraud and six counts of making false statements in a naturalization proceeding in 2005 and 2006. On April 6, 2007, U.S. District Judge Kathleen Cardone in El Paso ordered Posada freed on bail pending charges that he had lied in his U.S. citizenship statement. The prosecutor requested that he stay in jail while it determined whether it could appeal. Posada was represented by attorney Felipe D.J. Milan, who requested that he merely post a $250,000 cash or corporate surety bond. Posada's wife and adult children were ordered to post a $100,000 appearance and compliance signature bond when he was released. Posada was also ordered to live with his wife in Miami under a 24-hour home confinement and to agree to electronic monitoring. An appeals court rejected the government's appeal on April 17, and Posada was freed on April 19, 2007, after posting $250,000 bond. Judge Cardone threw out the immigration fraud charges against Posada on May 8, 2007, saying that the government's Spanish-English interpretation of his April 2006 interview "is so inaccurate as to render it unreliable as evidence of defendant's actual statement."

Nathan Chandler Powell: on June 4, 2003, Powell, age 40, admitted that he had killed and dismembered Afghan filmmaker Jawed Wassel in New York, on October 3, 2001, in anger over the 9/11 attacks. He pleaded guilty to manslaughter. On August 18, 2003, he was sentenced to 25 years.

Katherine Ann Power: one of the last remaining Vietnam War-era radical fugitives, who surrendered to police on September 15, 1993, at age 44. She had suffered clinical depression since childhood and decided to give herself up to relieve some of the pressure. She had spent most of her time in the Corvallis, Oregon, area as a mother and restaurateur using the alias Alice Louise Metzinger. She pleaded guilty in a Suffolk County Superior Court to charges of manslaughter, armed robbery, and robbery stemming from a September 23, 1970, holdup of the State Street Bank and Trust Company in the Brighton section of Boston. Police Officer Walter Schroeder was shot to death in the robbery. She drove the getaway car.

She appeared before Federal Magistrate Lawrence P. Cohen on charges of unlawful flight and theft of government property in the September 20, 1970, break-in at the National Guard armory in Newburyport, Massachusetts. In a plea bargain, the government dropped the flight charge in return for a guilty plea to the theft charge. On September 24, 1993, she pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to federal charges of raiding the government armory and stealing a truck, radios, 400 rounds of .30 caliber ammunition, blasting caps, and detonators. The government recommended that she serve only 5 of a normal 10-year maximum sentence. On October 6, 1993, the Suffolk County Superior Court sentenced her to 8 to 12 years for driving the getaway car and gave her 20 years' probation on the condition that she not profit from the sale of her story. Any parole violation could result in a life sentence. On November 24, 1993, U.S. District Judge Nathaniel Gorton accepted the plea bargain and let her term of 5 years run concurrently with the 8- to 12-year term. The judge also fined her $10,000. On May 18, 1995, the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled that Power and her family could not profit from her story.

She had been on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List for more than 14 years.

The Prince: alias of Osama bin Laden.

Q

---

Yasin Al-Qadi: alias Shaykh Yassin Kadi. From Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, head of the Muwafaq Foundation, an al Qaeda front funded by wealthy Saudi businessmen. His U.S. assets were ordered frozen on October 12, 2001. His defunct Muwafaq (Blessed Relief) Foundation was listed as “an al Qaeda front that receives funding from wealthy Saudi businessmen” and was used for “transferring millions of dollars to bin Laden.” He was named in August 19, 2003, as a major investor in BMI, Inc., an Islamic investment company in New Jersey that passed the money to terrorist groups, according to a federal affidavit.

Ahmad Sayyid Qadir: Al-Musawwar reported on March 29, 1996, that the Canadian government had asked the Pakistanis to release the Canadian of Egyptian descent, who was believed involved in the November 19, 1995, truck bombing at the Egyptian Embassy in Pakistan that killed 19 and wounded more than 80.

Abdullah Hamid al Muslih al Qahtani: Saudi held at Guantánamo as of January 2004.

Jabran Said bin al-Qahtani: Saudi held at Guantánamo Bay who was charged on May 30, 2008, by the Pentagon with having attended al Qaeda training camps and studying bomb making. He faced a life sentence.

Mohammed al-Qahtani: on February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals, including al-Qahtani, detained at Guantánamo and believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks. The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Al-Qahtani was often described as the 20th hijacker who was to have been on United Airlines Flight 93 that crashed into the Pennsylvania countryside. He was denied entry into the United States by immigration agents at Orlando Airport on August 4, 2001. He allegedly provided cash to the 9/11 hijackers. His civilian attorney was Gitanjali Gutierrez of the New York Center for Constitutional Rights. On May 13, 2008, Susan Crawford, the legal officer supervising the trials, dismissed the capital charges against him.

Abdul Qawee: also known as Samuel L. Young, one of three Hanafi Muslims held on $50,000 bond for the March 9, 1977, takeover of the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. They were brothers. On March 21, they were jailed in lieu of bond because the judge had received testimony that they would follow the orders of the leader of the triple attack, Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, and that two hostages in the Center had been injured. On September 6, 1977, Qawee was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping that arose from the episode in which he participated and was acquitted of the attacks in which he was not present. He received a sentence of 24 to 72 years for the Islamic Center attack. On October 1979, the D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the convictions of the 12 defendants, saying that the government’s evidence was overwhelming. On February 19, 1980, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the convictions of eight Hanafis for conspiracy, armed kidnapping, and other charges.

Abdul Qayyum: one of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them on bail. The FBI said that three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. He was freed on $10,000 bail.

Ibrahim Ahmed Mahmoud al Qosi: Khartoum-born Sudanese who was one of two bin Laden bodyguards detained at the Guantánamo Bay military prison and charged on February 24, 2004, by the United States with conspiracy to commit war crimes, terrorism, attacking civilians, murder, and destruction of property. They became the first detainees to stand trial before the special military tribunals established after 9/11. Military prosecutors would not seek the death penalty.

Qosi was a key al Qaeda accountant. He wore an explosive belt to thwart assassination attempts against bin Laden. He joined al Qaeda at its 1989 founding. In the early 1990s, he was an al Qaeda courier in Sudan. He completed military training at an al Qaeda terrorist camp in Afghanistan and served as an al Qaeda accountant in Pakistan, eventually becoming a top financial officer. He managed and distributed money via Muslim charities and helped run Taba Investment Company. He signed checks for bin Laden and exchanged money on the black market. He moved explosives and ammunition around Sudan for the terrorist group. In 1994, after a failed assassination attempt, he was chosen to be a bodyguard. He often was bin Laden's driver. He served in an al Qaeda mortar crew from 1998 to 2001. He also ran the kitchen at bin Laden's Star of Jihad compound in Jalalabad. He was one of 40 al Qaeda members captured by Pakistani forces in December 2001 near Tora Bora. He was represented by attorney Air Force Lt. Col. Sharon Shaffer.

On August 27, 2004, he appeared before a military commission and was formally charged with conspiring to commit terrorism, which carries a life sentence. He did not enter a plea.

On February 9, 2008, a new congressionally approved military commission charged Qosi, age 47, with being an al Qaeda conspirator. He was accused of helping bin Laden's family flee Kandahar to Kabul, then to Jalalabad, and then to Tora Bora around the 9/11 attacks. The Pentagon said it would seek life in prison. On March 6, 2008, the Pentagon added charges of war crimes, material support for terrorism, and conspiring with bin Laden. His arraignment was scheduled for April 10, 2008.

Ahmed Hassan Quaily: Iraqi, age 33, arrested in October 2004 by the FBI in a sting operation in which he tried to buy machine guns and hand grenades from undercover agents. He threatened to "go jihad" against the United States. On May 31, 2005, he pleaded guilty to federal weapons charges in Nashville, Tennessee.

Cid de Queiroz Benjamin: student accused in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. His release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of Action for National Liberation (ALN) and the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum.

William J. Quinn: U.S. national suspected of being a member of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) Balcome Street Four, which was involved in 58 bombings, shootings, and kidnappings in 1974 and 1975. He was arrested on September 30, 1981, in San Francisco. He was imprisoned for a year in Ireland for IRA activities. On October 20, 1986, he was extradited to the United Kingdom on charges of killing Stephen Tibble, a London constable, in 1975. On February 16, 1988, he was sentenced by Judge Christopher Rose in London to life in prison after a jury declared him guilty. Quinn refused to say anything during the trial.

Martin Peter Quigley: Irish citizen living since April 1989 in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, and one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters arrested on July 12, 1989, by the FBI on charges of conspiracy to injure and destroy the property of a foreign government. The group was alleged to be developing devices to set remote-controlled bombs to attack British helicopters in Northern Ireland. On August 10, 1989, the trio was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply to the IRA surface-to-air missiles. The conspiracy apparently had begun in 1978. On August 22, 1989, he pleaded not guilty. He was convicted in June 1990 of violations of U.S. arms export control laws and other charges. On August 20, 1990, a federal judge sentenced the native of Dundalk, Ireland, to eight years in prison. On December 24, 1991, the First U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld his conviction on charges of conspiracy to violate the federal Arms Export Control Act, holding that the First Amendment does not protect someone who possesses documents or other materials if they are intended for use in a crime.

Fahd Mohammed Ahmed al-Quso: variant Fahad al-Quso; aliases Fahd Mohammed Ahmed al-Awlaqi, Abu Huthaifah, Abu Huthaifah al-Yemeni, Abu Huthaifah Al-Adani, Abu al-Bara. Indicted with Jamal al-Badawi by the United States in 2003 following Badawi's confession to the FBI in January 2001 that he had been recruited by al Qaeda to lead a terrorist attack. He was born in Aden, Yemen, on November 12, 1974, and has Saudi citizenship. He is five feet six inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He is wanted in connection with the October 12, 2000, bombing of the USS Cole. He was being held by Yemeni authorities for the USS Cole attack when he escaped from prison in April 2003. He was indicted on May 15, 2003, by a federal grand jury on 50 counts, including murder and conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals and U.S. military personnel; conspiracy to use and using a weapon of mass destruction; damaging and destroying government property and defense facilities; and providing material support to a terrorist organization. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his arrest and/or conviction. He was convicted in a Yemeni court for involvement in the USS Cole attack. He was released from prison in May 2007.

R

---

Bosko Radonjic: one of three members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), an anti-communist Serbian émigré group, arrested in New York City by the FBI on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges. Radonjic was found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago. He had pleaded guilty and was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

Caliph Basha Ibn Abdur-Raheem: on February 20, 2004, Judge Leonie Brinkema threw out the case against Abdur-Raheem, who had been named in the June 25, 2003, federal indictment along with the 11 members of the “Virginia jihad network” accused of training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, including Abdur-Raheem (no relation to Hammad Abdur-Raheem), who was represented by Christopher Amolsch. The four defendants claimed that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. At Abdur-Raheem's bench trial, Judge Brinkema said that prosecutors failed to present any evidence that he was involved in a conspiracy to train for jihadist combat abroad. She noted that he had fallen asleep at one of the meetings of the alleged co-conspirators. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Hammad Abdur-Raheem: Gulf War veteran who was one of 11 members of the “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. He was accused of instructing the others in combat tactics based on his U.S. military experience.

On January 27, 2004, four defendants waived their right to a jury trial, including Abdur-Raheem, who was represented by William B. Cummings. They claimed that a northern Virginia jury could not be impartial in considering terrorism charges against Muslim men. In a bench trial on March 4, 2004, Judge Leonie Brinkema found three, including Abdur-Raheem, guilty of conspiring to aid Lashkar and on weapons charges. He did not attend the training camp but was accused of training his friends in the United States. Defense attorneys were considering an appeal. On June 15, 2004, Judge Brinkema imposed a 97-month sentence on Abdur-Raheem. On July 29, 2005, she reduced the sentence to 52 months. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Abdul Rahim: also known as Philip Alvin Young, one of three Hanafi Muslims held on $50,000 bond for the March 9, 1977, takeover of the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. They were brothers. On March 21, they were jailed in lieu of bond because the judge had received testimony that they would follow the orders of the leader of the triple attack, Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, and that two hostages in the Center had been injured. Rahim had attended Federal City College and received a journalism degree from Goddard College. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping that arose from the episode in which he participated and was acquitted of the attacks for which he was not present. He received a sentence of 28 to 84 years. On October 1979, the D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the convictions of the 12 defendants, saying that the government's evidence was overwhelming. On February 19, 1980, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the convictions of eight Hanafis for conspiracy, armed kidnapping, and other charges.

Muhammed Rahim: Afghan al Qaeda associate of Osama bin Laden who was turned over to the U.S. military at Guantánamo Bay on March 14, 2008. The "high value detainee" was captured in Pakistan in the summer of 2007. He had helped bin Laden to escape from Tora Bora, Afghanistan, in 2001. He had served bin Laden as a courier, personal facilitator, and translator. He sought chemicals for an attack against U.S. forces in Afghanistan and tried to recruit people who could get onto U.S. bases.

Abdul Rahman: also known as Clyde Cleman Young, one of three Hanafi Muslims held on $50,000 bond for the March 9, 1977, takeover of the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. They were brothers. On March 21, they were jailed in lieu of bond because the judge had received testimony that they would follow the orders of the leader of the triple attack, Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, and that two hostages in the Center had been injured. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping that arose from the episode in which he participated and was acquitted of the attacks in which he was not present. He received a sentence of 28 to 84 years. On October 1979, the D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the convictions of the 12 defendants in the Hanafis' takeover of several D.C. locations on March 9, 1977, including the Islamic Center, saying that the government's evidence was overwhelming. On February 19, 1980, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the convictions of eight Hanafis for conspiracy, armed kidnapping, and other charges.

Sheikh Omar Ahmed Abdel Rahman: the "blind sheikh" leader of an al Qaeda-linked Islamist faction in the United States that bombed the World Trade Center in New York City on February 26, 1993.

On July 1, 1993, attorney general Janet Reno authorized federal agents to detain him in connection with the arrests of eight foreign Islamists on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. (See Amir Zaid Abdelghani.) Authorities revoked his immigration parole status that permitted him to remain at large while appealing his deportation. He surrendered to police on July 2 after a 20-hour standoff between police and his followers. His release was demanded in numerous terrorist threats and by the hijacker on August 15, 1993, of a Dutch KLM B747-400 in Tunisia.

On April 28, 1994, Egypt sentenced him in absentia to seven years' hard labor for inciting a riot and attempting to kill two policemen in 1989. He was acquitted on the charges in 1989, but President Mubarak cancelled the verdict in January 1994 and ordered a retrial.

On August 25, 1994, a federal grand jury in Manhattan issued a 20-count indictment against Rahman and 14 others on terrorist conspiracy charges, linking him and his followers to the 1990 murder of Rabbi Meir Kahane and to "murder in aid of racketeering."

On January 23, 1995, U.S. president Bill Clinton ordered an immediate freeze on his U.S. assets because his actions constituted a terrorist threat to the Middle East peace process.

He was convicted on October 1, 1995, for a plot to blow up landmarks in New York City, including the UN building. He called on his followers to conduct terrorist activities upon his death. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to life without parole plus 65 years. He was held at the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Missouri, starting in September 2003 because of diabetes and other problems. In early December 2006, he was rushed to a Missouri hospital for a blood transfusion.

On November 12, 1981, he had been indicted for saying "it is God's will" when told about the assassination plot that led to the murder of Egyptian president Anwar Sadat on October 6, 1981. Rahman was a theology professor from Cairo's Al Zahar University and had taught at Asyut. He was acquitted of the Sadat charges on March 6, 1982. The Egyptian Gama'at intended to obtain his release in the November 17, 1997, attack in Luxor at the Hatshepsut Temple that killed 58 foreign tourists and 4 Egyptians and wounded 26 other tourists. His release was demanded on November 13, 1995, by the group that set off a car bomb in a parking lot of a building belonging to the Saudi National Guard in Riyadh, killing 5 American military trainers and wounding 60 others.

He was named as an unindicted co-conspirator on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York for his role in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and Nairobi, Kenya.

On August 16, 1999, a three-judge panel of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals upheld his seditious conspiracy conviction.

His release was demanded on March 20, 2000, by the Abu Sayyaf rebels who took 70-plus hostages, including many children, from two Philippine schools.

Lotfi Raissi: on September 21, 2001, London police arrested the Algerian pilot, age 27, who was believed to be the flight instructor for the four 9/11 pilot-hijackers. He was held without bond. On October 10, 2001, he was indicted in Arizona for providing false information on a Federal Aviation Administration form to obtain a commercial pilot's license. The United States was seeking extradition. Raissi was believed to have links to a suspected Algerian wing of al Qaeda. On November 27, a federal grand jury in Phoenix added conspiracy charges against him. The indictment said he had conspired with his Phoenix apartment mate, Redouane Dahmani, an Algerian, to falsify an asylum claim that would permit Dahmani to stay in the United States. Dahmani was in custody in Phoenix on charges of forgery and perjury, held in lieu of a $1 million bond, and was suspected of having contacts with a senior Algerian terrorist in London. He had listed his address as a Phoenix apartment on N. 23rd Avenue, the address Raissi had given in June when he was stopped for speeding in Yarnell, Arizona. Dahmani's phone number was found on a paper in the London home of Abu Doha, age 36, alias The Doctor, alias Amar Makhulif, believed to be a senior Algerian terrorist in London with links to European al Qaeda terrorist cells. Raissi was arrested at Heathrow Airport on charges of orchestrating a foiled plot to bomb Los Angeles International Airport on December 31, 1999. London prosecutors said that they had seized a video of Raissi in an aircraft with 9/11 hijack pilot Hani Hanjour. Raissi trained on 30 aircraft at four flight schools. He was represented by Hugo Keith and Richard Egan. Magistrate Timothy Workman denied a bail hearing for the second time on December 14. The next court date was set for January 11, 2002. Investigators backed off from initial claims that he was in contact with three of the hijackers.

Raissi bought a fake ID in the name of Fabrice Vincent Algiers to get a job as a short-order cook. In 1993, he was arrested for stealing a briefcase at Heathrow Airport; he pleaded guilty, was not jailed, and then returned to Algeria. In 1996, Italian police arrested him in Rome when he was carrying faked French ID papers; he was expelled with his French girlfriend. In 1998, he trained on the same flight simulator with Hani Hanjour five times. In January 1999, he received a U.S. commercial pilot's license for flying B737s. On November 18, 2000, he married Sonia Dermolis, a French Catholic and aspiring dancer. He was ticketed for speeding from Las Vegas to Phoenix on June 18, 2001. On June 23, 2001, he and Hanjour enrolled at Sawyer Aviation on the same day. Raissi trained at the simulator for seven days; Hanjour continued his training through July 29. On September 21, Raissi, his wife, and his brother Mohammed were arrested.

On February 12, 2002, ignoring U.S. protests, Judge Timothy Workman at Belmarsh Magistrate's Court in southeastern London released him on $15,000 bail. Police kept his passport. On April 24, 2002, Judge Workman dismissed the extradition case and freed him. On September 16, 2003, Raissi sued the FBI and U.S. Department of Justice for $10 million.

On March 1, 2002, Italian police who arrested six al Qaeda sympathizers found a letter with his address.

On February 14, 2008, a British appeals court said that he had been "completely exonerated" and could seek compensation from the U.K. government for wrongful arrest and detention.

Arif Rajan: on July 8, 2002, the FBI and Immigration and Naturalization Service announced that in June, they had raided 75 jewelry stores and kiosks, most of them called Intrigue Jewelers, in shopping malls in eight states as part of an investigation into al Qaeda money laundering. A dozen men, mostly Pakistanis, were taken into custody on immigration charges. Authorities also seized documents, computer records, and other evidence against the Orlando, Florida-based company Gold Concept, Inc., owned by naturalized U.S. citizen Arif Rajan of Ocoee, Florida. The press had reported that in the weeks after 9/11, authorities had raided an Intrigue Jewelers in Allentown, Pennsylvania. The operators had come under suspicion after developing World Trade Center photographs; one fled the United States, and another was charged with immigration violations.

Saleh al-Rajhi: former member of the McLean, Virginia-based People's Committee for Libyan Students and one of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. He reportedly gathered information in June 1987 "concerning the identities, home addresses and phone numbers of government officials" working in U.S. intelligence agencies and sent the data to Mohamed Madjoub, a top intelligence officer in Libya. U.S. Magistrate Leonie Brinkema ordered him held without bond, given that he was an illegal alien and would probably flee. He had entered the United States in 1976 and was a graduate student at George Washington University. The group apparently was planning revenge against U.S. officials believed to have planned the April 1986 air raid against Libya in retaliation for Libyan involvement in several terrorist attacks. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya. He allegedly had prepared a document including the names and addresses of "over 1,000 federal employees" in military and intelligence agencies.

Tariq Ramadan: on August 24, 2004, the U.S. Department of State revoked the work visa of the Swiss citizen and Muslim scholar who was scheduled to teach as Luce Professor of Religion, Conflict and Peacebuilding at Notre Dame's Joan B. Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies in the fall semester. Ramada is a professor the College of Geneva and the University of Fribourg in Switzerland. A Homeland Security spokesperson cited the Patriot Act statute applying to aliens who have used "a position of prominent within any country to endorse or espouse terrorist activity."

Ramirez Ramirez: alias on a passport used in December 2006 by James Ramirez, a Seattle man who pleaded guilty to conspiracy to assist the Taliban.

Abdul Rasheed: Syrian, age 27, held in federal custody as of November 2001 in connection with the FBI's investigation of the 9/11 attacks.

Saud Abdulaziz Saud Al-Rasheed: variant al-Rashid. On August 20, 2002, the FBI issued a worldwide alert for the arrest of Al-Rasheed, age 21, who was believed to have ties with the 9/11 hijackers and who was considered "armed and dangerous." The information on him came from material recovered overseas, including an image of a Saudi passport issued to him in May 2000 in Riyadh, which was found on a CD-ROM that included some of the hijackers. He surrendered to Saudi Interior Ministry officials in Riyadh on August 22 and was being questioned. His family doubted that he had connections to the attackers, claiming that he had spent a year working in Afghanistan on humanitarian projects, returning to Saudi Arabia four months before the attacks. Al-Rasheed was on vacation in Egypt when he saw his photo on CNN. He had trained in Afghanistan.

Abd Rashid: alias of Earl Gant.

Haroon Rashid: one of six Denver-area residents, age 32, indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them on bail but ordered the jailing of the Pakistani citizen pending trial. On March 31, FBI agent Michael Castro told a U.S. magistrate at a bail hearing that Rashid had been trained at a terrorist camp in Pakistan shortly after 9/11 and wanted to take part in a jihad against the United States. A pawn shop owner said that Rashid had shopped for a rifle with a scope equipped for night firing. Rashid had been convicted of murder in Pakistan but was freed on appeal. The FBI said that three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. Rashid was represented by attorney Anthony Joseph. U.S. Magistrate Michael Watanabe ordered Rashid held without bail on the immigration charge. Irfan Kamran and Sajjad Nasser were due to appear for an April 4 bail hearing. Prosecutors opposed their release on the same grounds and considered them flight risks. Prosecutors had appealed their initial release, and the duo was jailed pending the hearing. The other three were Abdul Qayyum, Rashid's wife Saima Saima, and Chris Marie Warren, who were free on $10,000 bail.

On April 8, U.S. District Judge Lewis T. Babcock ruled that "the government [had] failed to establish" that Kamran and Naseer posed any danger and ordered them released. Kamran had already posted his $30,000 bail. Naseer was released on $100,000 bail but was detained by the Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement on a separate charge. Federal prosecutors said that they still believed the duo was dangerous and that they might appeal the release. The FBI had reported that Naseer had gone to a camp in Pakistan in the summer of 2001. The camp was run by the Army of Mohammed, which the U.S. lists as a terrorist organization. Naseer said he left after four or five days because he did not like the strenuous physical training. The FBI said Naseer "also attended rallies in support of al Qaeda and Osama bin Laden," which amounts "to providing material support for a foreign terrorist organization."

Mohammed Rashid: was arrested in 1973 for smuggling hashish in Greece and served three years of a six-year term. He was arrested by Greece on May 30, 1988, while entering the country on a forged Syrian passport under the name of Mohammed Hamdan. On June 13, 1988, the United States requested extradition in connection with charges stemming from the August 11, 1982, explosion on board Pan American World Airways Flight 830 from Honolulu to Tokyo that killed a Japanese teen and wounded 15 other passengers.

He was also suspected of planting a bomb on a Trans World Airlines flight from Rome to Athens in April 1986 that killed four Americans. Greece denied the extradition request for that incident on June 6, 1988.

On July 14, 1988, the Palestinian was sentenced by the First Magistrates Court in Athens to seven months in Koridhallos Prison on the passport charge. He was believed to be a member of the Abu Nidal group, or a group run by Mohammed Abdel Ali Labib, alias Colonel Hawari. On August 3, 1988, the Supreme Court Council in Athens rejected his appeal of his seven-month sentence. On October 10, 1988, the Appeals Court announced that the council had ruled in favor of extradition to the United States. On October 28, 1988, during the extradition hearing, the Direct Revolutionary Action for the Liberation of Palestine told Reuters, "We warn the Greek government against continuing to hold our struggling brother Mohammed Rashid and extraditing him to the American authorities. All Greek governmental, civilian, and diplomatic institutions in Greece as well as outside will be the target of attacks." On November 16, 1988, the Supreme Court requested more evidence from the United States regarding his identity. On March 28, 1989, the Court of Appeals in Piraeus sentenced him to eight months for possession of arms inside the prison where he was being detained. On September 13, 1990, deputy prime minister Athanasios Kanellopoulos announced that he would not be extradited but would be tried in Greece. On September 18, 1990, the Athens prosecutor brought criminal charges of premeditated manslaughter, provocation, and illegal capture of an aircraft against Rashid. The trial began on October 7, 1991, with charges of premeditated manslaughter, seizing an airplane, and planting a bomb on an airplane.

On January 7, 1992, a three-member Greek criminal court sentenced him to 18 years in prison for premeditated manslaughter and damaging an airplane. The court ordered that he be deprived of his civil rights for 5 years and be deported after completion of his sentence. The 43 months he had already served were to be subtracted from his sentence. Two of the three judges found him guilty of voluntary homicide, but the third declared him innocent because of lack of proof of identity. He was found innocent of charges of an act of violence against an aircraft and of actually placing the bomb. On November 21, 1992, his trial in Greece was adjourned. On March 3, 1993, a five-member court began hearings in Koridhallos, western Athens's top security prison, on his bid to overturn his 18-year sentence. His appeal had been postponed several times because of a lawyers' strike. On June 18, 1993, a Greek appeals court cut his sentence to 15 years. On December 9, 1994, the Supreme Court rejected his application to overturn the verdict by the Athens appeals court that had sentenced him in June 1994 to 15 years for premeditated manslaughter and causing damage to an airplane.

On December 4, 1996, a Greek court released him from Athens's Korydallos Prison. He was then deported to Tunisia. Greece had rejected a U.S. extradition request. The United States pointed out that Rashid was the ringleader of a prison riot and that his cell had been found full of contraband and weapons. Rashid was arrested apparently in Egypt, on June 2, 1997, and flown to the United States. On June 3, 1997, he was arraigned in a U.S. court in Washington, D.C., on a nine-count indictment for conspiracy to murder, assault, and aircraft sabotage. He pleaded not guilty and claimed he was being subjected to double jeopardy because the Greek court had convicted him in 1992. U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson ordered him held for a hearing. The indictment also named as an accomplice Rashid's wife, Christine Pinter, alias Fatima, who remained at large. U.S. officials had earlier accused him of planting a bomb, which did not explode, on a Pan American World Airways plane in Brazil in 1982 and of setting off a bomb on a Trans World Airlines airliner approaching Athens in 1986 that killed four Americans. He said it was a case of mistaken identity, claiming to be Rashid Salah Mohammed Alzaghary of Palestine. He was believed to be a member of the Iraq-based May 15 terrorist group. The prosecution said it would seek life in prison. In December 2002, he secretly pleaded guilty to conspiracy and murder charges.

On March 24, 2006, he was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Royce C. Lamberth to seven years for setting off a bomb on Pan American World Airways Flight 830. He also was detained for two years in Egypt. He was due to be released in 2013 and deported.

Shafiq Rasul: one of five U.K. citizens who had been held by the United States at Guantánamo Bay on suspicion of terrorism and support to the Taliban. They were deported to the United Kingdom on March 9, 2004. He was one of four immediately arrested on suspicion of involvement in the commission, preparation, or instigation of acts of terrorism. He was released after questioning the next day.

Ahmed Rauf: alias Horace Butler. Washington carpenter accused of aiding Daoud Salahuddin, who assassinated Ali Akbar Tabatabai, the former press attaché of the Shah's Iranian Embassy in the United States, on July 22, 1980. Rauf was arraigned on December 16, 1980, in the District of Columbia Superior Court on charges of conspiracy within the District to commit a crime outside the District. He was held on $50,000 bond. On July 16, 1981, Rauf was indicted for helping to obtain the truck and dispose of the murder weapon. On December 3, 1981, a D.C. Superior Court jury found him guilty. On February 18, 1982, Judge Fred B. Ugast sentenced him to serve 8 to 80 years in prison with a minimum of 6 years for being an accessory after the fact to the murder and to serve at least 2 years for grand larceny of the vehicle. He was a member of the Islamic Guerrillas in America, a small organization with ties to black American Muslims.

Ibrahim Rawaf: one of two men indicted in the United States on July 26, 1984, on charges of planning to assassinate Mohammad Fassi, a Saudi sheik living in London. Rawaf offered Martindale, the chief of American International Trade Group, Inc., $50,000 to assassinate Fassi. As of August 1984, Rawaf was a fugitive in Lebanon from a U.S. arrest warrant.

Abdul Razzaq: also known as Nelson McQueen Jr. Held on $50,000 bond as one of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 40 to 120 years. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying that the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980.

Ron Rearick: on July 3, 1984, he received a plaque as the first passenger purchasing a ticket on American Airlines' inaugural flight from Harrisburg. After the ceremony, he claimed that he had served three years in prison for extorting $1 million from United Airlines when he hijacked a plane and threatened to destroy it.

Eric Reed: Philadelphian who on July 8, 1986, attempted to force his way into the cockpit of a United Airlines DC10 flying to Los Angeles from Honolulu. He was restrained by crew members and passengers and was arrested upon arrival.

Janyce Reed: alias Mrs. Bob Sands. One of two hijackers of a Tortugas Airways Cessna 206, a general aviation plane chartered to fly five persons from Key West to Dry Tortugas on March 19, 1972, and diverted to Havana Harbor. As of 1979, they were fugitives from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida on June 5, 1972.

Mohammed Refai: Syrian, age 40, held in federal custody as of November 2001 in connection with the FBI's investigation of the 9/11 attacks.

Roman Regman: on August 31, 1996, police stopped the Romanian seminarian, age 21, as he was boarding a flight at Tampa International Airport when they found explosives and weapons in his luggage. Among his stash were 5 handmade explosive devices, 2 hand grenades, bomb-making materials, a 9-mm pistol, 180 rounds of ammunition, and 6 military-style knives. He was charged with seven counts of carrying explosive devices, six counts of carrying weapons, and one count of carrying a concealed firearm. He was held without bail at the Hillsborough County jail. He had entered the United States four years earlier and was now a legal resident, living with his mother in Brooksville, Florida. He had a roundtrip ticket to Wilkes Barre/Scranton via Pittsburgh. He claimed he was returning to St. Tikhons Seminar in South Canaan near Scranton.

Christina Leigh Reid: resident of Sunnyvale, California, and one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) supporters arrested on July 12, 1989, by the FBI on charges of conspiracy to injure and destroy the property of a foreign government. The group was alleged to be developing devices to set remote-controlled bombs to attack British helicopters in Northern Ireland. On August 10, 1989, the trio was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to design, build, and supply to the IRA surface-to-air missiles. The conspiracy apparently had begun in 1978. She was convicted in June 1990 of violations of U.S. arms export control laws and other charges. On August 20, 1990, a federal judge sentenced the courier for the plotters to three years and five months. On December 24, 1991, the First U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston upheld the conviction.

Daniel de Arao Reis Fillio: student leader accused in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. His release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation (ALN) and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum.

Ahmed Ressam: aliases Tehar Medjadi, Benni Antoine Norris. Algerian who attempted to enter Port Angeles, Washington, as he arrived by ferry from Canada and who was arrested on December 15, 1999, by Washington State Police and customs officials. He was transporting two 22-ounce bottles of nitroglycerin, more than 100 pounds of urea, and homemade timers in his rental car. The detonating device consisted of circuit boards linked to a Casio watch and a 9-volt battery, similar to one used early by bin Laden associates. He carried a fake Canadian passport, 54 kilograms of nitroglycerin, and detonators. He was born in Algeria in 1967 and had been arrested and jailed for 15 months for arms trafficking with terrorists. He and his associates in Canada were members of Algeria's Armed Islamic Group and were believed to be working for Osama bin Laden. In March 1998, he attended an al Qaeda camp in Afghanistan.

Ressam attempted to flee after being questioned and asked to step out of his Chrysler 300, the last car off the ferry at Port Angeles. Customs inspector Diana M. Dean asked him to step out of his car. Inspector Carmon Clem removed the trunk floor board and discovered suspicious packages. Customs agents found 118 pounds of a fine white powder used to manufacture explosives, 14 pounds of a sulfate, two jars of nitroglycerine, and four small, black boxes believed to be detonators. Senior inspector Mark Johnson patted down Ressam for weapons and felt something in a jacket pocket. Ressam slipped out of his jacket and started running. He was chased down six blocks away from the ferry customs port. He was carrying a false Canadian passport and driver's license with two different names. Witnesses said they saw a possible accomplice walk off the Coho Ferry as Ressam was being arrested.

On December 22, 1999, Ressay appeared before U.S. Magistrate David Wilson and was charged in a Seattle federal court with knowingly transporting explosives across the Canadian border, having false identification papers, and making false statement to U.S. Customs Service officials. He was represented by court-appointed attorney Tom Hillier, who pleaded not guilty for his client.

Ressay speaks French and Arabic and had planned to stay at the Best Western Loyal hotel in Seattle, close to a variety of holiday events. He had a reservation on an American Airlines flight from Seattle to New York via Chicago and a ticket for a connecting British Airways flight to London. The Seattle hotel had a reservation made on December 14 for "Benni Norris," the name on the faked passport. A van parked near his apartment was registered to a Benni Antoine Norris. The individual who used a Best Western national 800 number left a credit card number and a contact telephone number in Quebec.

He had arrived in Canada on February 20, 1994, requesting refugee status, which was denied because of his links to the Algerian Armed Islamic Group (GIA). He was earlier arrested in Canada and served a brief sentence for stealing computers and car phones. He claimed the Algerian police had arrested him in 1992 on charges of selling guns to the rebels. He said he was held in prison for 15 months and tortured until he signed a false confession. Upon release, he fled to Morocco, Spain, and France, before arriving in Canada. His French passport was for Tehar Medjadi, but he soon admitted that the document and his Catholic birth certificate were faked. In 1995, he failed to show up for a hearing and was detained, but the court let him go free. An arrest warrant was issued on February 8, 1998, in the theft of a computer from a parked car, a charge for which he served two weeks in jail. Around that time, a deportation order was issued, on the basis of three outstanding criminal arrest warrants, two involving thefts from cars and one from a breaking and entering. In May 1998, a nationwide immigration arrest warrant was issued, but Canadian officials were unable to find him. He was held without bail pending his trial, scheduled for February 22, 2000. He could be sentenced to 40 years in prison if convicted of the five counts in the indictment, which did not contain conspiracy charges.

The Canadian Globe and Mail claimed that U.S. counterintelligence agents had alerted the Mounties about Ressay in Vancouver. The Mounties had him under surveillance for three weeks at the 2400 Motel in Vancouver.

A spokesperson for the Montreal police said that Ressay lived for a time with Karim Said Atmani, who was extradited by Canada to France on charges that he participated in the 1995 Paris subway bombing that killed 4 and injured 86. Montreal police announced that they had arrested 11 men, mostly Algerians, during the preceding four months for thefts during the previous two years of 5,000 items, such as computers, cell phones, passports, and credit cards. Some were believed to be aiding Islamic radicals.

French officials said Ressay was linked to Fateh Kamel, an Algerian veteran of the Afghan war, who was tied to the 1996 bombers in Paris who left one bystander and several Islamic radicals dead. French officials sent a team to Canada in October 1999 to interview Ressay and Atmani, but neither could be located.

On December 18, 1999, the Customs Service put all 301 ports of entry on high alert. U.S. authorities searched for an accomplice who had been with Ressay at British Columbia's 2400 Motel in Vancouver for three weeks. Ressay had paid cash for the $325/week suit of two rooms, kitchen, and bath. Mounties raided Ressay's apartment house at 1250 Fort Street, in Montreal's East End. Breaking in a window, the police found a .357 Magnum pistol and instructions for making bombs.

Police were searching for three possible accomplices of Ressay, two of whom were men with whom he shared a motel room in Vancouver and another who may have been on the ferry with him.

On December 19, Montreal police found an orange van registered to Benni Norris, the alias on Ressam's passport. A bomb squad searched the 1989 GMC and a house.

Montreal police suggested that Ressam had ties with Mourad Gherabli, 40, an Algerian believed to be part of the ring of thieves who had stolen cell phones and computers and used them to finance Islamic terrorist groups around the world. Gherabli denied the charges by observing "I like girls. I like cocaine. I have a big, big problem with the poker machines. So I steal. But I'm not a terrorist. I don't have enough money to send to anyone." Police believed that the theft money moved from Canada via France, Belgium, Italy, Kosovo, and Pakistan and on to Algeria.

Ressam reportedly had been seen in training camps used in the 1980s by Islamic militants fighting the Russians in Afghanistan; he allegedly also trained in Pakistan. Ressam had told Canadian immigration officials that he had been wrongly accused in Algeria of being an Islamic radical. Ressam reportedly had fought in Muslim military units in Bosnia against Croatian and Serbian militias. French sources said he was suspected of involvement in the 1996 bombing of the Paris subway that killed 4 and injured 91, as well as holdups near Lille.

Police were searching for Ressam associate Abdelmajed Dahoumane, 32, as of December 17. On December 25, the FBI interviewed Horizon Air ticket agents; one of them had sold a ticket to a man meeting his description. He had a French passport and had paid in Canadian currency for a ticket from Bellingham, 90 miles north of Seattle, to Seattle, with a connecting flight to Las Vegas. Canadian police had issued an arrest warrant accusing him of illegally possessing explosives with the intent to cause damage or injury. He had stayed with Ressam in the Vancouver hotel room, which investigators discovered reeked of a rotten egg smell, consistent with the theory that they had been making nitroglycerin.

Ressam used a 9-mm semiautomatic pistol supplied by Samir Ait Mohamed in an August 1999 holdup attempt at a Montreal currency exchange.

On December 28, 1999, Seattle Mayor Paul Schell announced the cancellation of Seattle's millennium party at the Space Needle because of fears of a terrorist attack.

Authorities announced on December 29 that Ressam was carrying not nitroglycerine, but the more deadly RDX (cyclotrimethylene trinitramine), one of the world's most powerful explosives, often used by military services for demolitions. It can be combined with PETN to form Semtex, a plastic explosive.

Ressam's attorneys asked for a change of venue on January 22, 2000, claiming that media coverage had harmed his chances for a fair trial. They requested a move to San Francisco or Los Angeles. Assistant U.S. Attorney Harold Malkin opposed the change.

Ressam was arraigned on January 27, 2000, in federal court in Seattle on four new counts. U.S. District Judge John Coughenour moved the trial date from February 28 to July 10. On March 3, 2000, the judge moved the trial to Los Angeles. His trial began on March 12, 2001, in Los Angeles. He was convicted on April 7, 2001, in the New Year's Day 2000 bomb plot. The jury found him guilty on nine criminal counts, including terrorism and assorted charges involving transporting explosives, smuggling, and using false passports, and Ressam faced up to 130 years in prison. The same day, he was convicted in absentia by a Paris court for belonging to a terrorist group of Islamic militants; he was sentenced to five years. Judge Coughenour delayed sentencing as long as Ressam proved useful as an intelligence source. On May 25, he offered to testify in the July 2001 trial of Mokhtar Haouari in New York. On July 3, 2001, he told a federal jury in U.S. District Court in Manhattan that his group had planned to set off a huge bomb at the Los Angeles International Airport.

On July 27, 2005, U.S. District Judge John C. Coughenour sentenced Ressam, 38, to 22 years in prison for planning to blow up the Los Angeles airport. The Algerian had cooperated with international investigators regarding Afghan terrorist training camps but stopped talking in 2003. Prosecutors hoped that he would testify against co-conspirators Samir Ait Mohamed and Abu Doha, who were awaiting extradition from Canada and the United Kingdom. On August 26, 2005, prosecutors said they would appeal the sentence, which was shorter than the 35 years they had requested and less than the 65 years to life that was the standard sentencing range. With credit for time served and 3 years for good behavior, he could be released in 14 years and then be deported or sent to France, where he had been convicted in absentia of other terrorism-related crimes. Judge Coughenour had also taken the opportunity to criticize the Bush administration's handling of terrorist suspects. "We did not need to use a secret military tribunal, detain the defendant indefinitely as an enemy combatant or deny the defendant the right to counsel. The message to the world from today's sentencing is that our courts have not abandoned our commitment to the ideals that set our nation apart." On January 16, 2007, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit reversed Ressam's conviction on one of nine charges and threw out the sentence. The court sent the case back to the lower court for a new sentence.

On March 25, 2008, attorney general Michael B. Mukasey made his first argument before the U.S. Supreme Court in asking them to reinstate the 22-year term given to Ressam. The Ninth Circuit had claimed that the statute used for the one count was too open-ended, calling for a 10-year mandatory term for anyone who "carries any explosive during the commission of any felony." On May 19, 2008, the Supreme Court on an 8–1 decision upheld his conviction on a federal explosives charge that increased his sentence.

Inderjit Singh Reyat: Canadian citizen and Sikh bomb maker arrested on February 5, 1988, by police in Coventry, United Kingdom, on a Canadian warrant. Canada requested extradition. He was charged with manslaughter in the deaths of the two baggage handlers and with six weapons charges, including the manufacture and acquisition of explosive substances. On May 10, 1991, he was convicted on two counts of manslaughter and four explosives offenses. On June 10, 1991, Justice Raymond Paris of Canada's British Columbia Supreme Court sentenced the former auto electrician to 10 years in prison. He was a devout Sikh who had aided members of the militant Babbar Khalsa, a Sikh nationalist organization. He was next charged on June 6, 2001, in Canada with involvement in the June 23, 1985, Air India bombing that killed two workers in Japan. He was jailed in Japan.

On February 10, 2003, he pleaded guilty to manslaughter in the Air India Flight 182 bombing on June 23, 1985, that killed all 329 people on the B747 when it crashed off the Atlantic coast of Ireland. He was sentenced to five years for helping acquire the materials used to make the bomb. Prosecutors said he did not know who made the bomb and thought the material would be used for bombs in India. The surprise plea came less than two months before he and two other men were to stand trial on murder charges in the case. Prosecutors lowered the charge in a plea bargain.

Bassam Reyati: Jordanian living in Brooklyn detained as an accomplice of Rashad Baz, a Brooklyn resident who on March 1, 1994, fired on a convoy of Hasidic Jewish students on Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive near the Brooklyn Bridge in New York, injuring 14 rabbinical students in a van. Reyati was charged with hindering prosecution and weapons possession. Officials said he had helped Baz dispose of the guns and the car. Reyati owned the Brooklyn taxi service that employed Baz and another accomplice. Bail was set at $20,000. He pleaded not guilty on March 29.

Michael Curtis Reynolds: unemployed man from Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, age 47, who was accused by the FBI on February 10, 2006, of trying to conspire with al Qaeda to bomb major U.S. oil and gas pipelines in order to disrupt the U.S. government, change its foreign policy, turn the public against the war in Iraq, and wreck the U.S. economy. He had been held since December 5, 2005, in a Pennsylvania jail on the unrelated charge of possession of a hand grenade. He fell for an FBI sting operation in Idaho in December in which he met with a person who he thought was with al Qaeda but who was actually Shannen Rossmiller, a Montana judge who monitors extremists' Web sites. Reynolds was to receive $40,000 to finance a plan to bomb sections of the transcontinental natural gas pipeline from the Gulf Coast to New York City via Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The plot included setting alight propane trucks along the Alaska pipeline and bombing oil refineries in New Jersey and Wyoming. He told prosecutors he was trying to trap al Qaeda operatives.

His trial began on July 9, 2007, in Scranton, Pennsylvania, on federal charges of offering to help al Qaeda destroy pipelines and refineries in three states. He thought his actions would help end the war in Iraq because U.S. troops would have to be recalled to the United States to help guard infrastructure. Reynolds had earlier brought attention to himself in the courts by trying to blow up his parents' house. On July 13, 2007, he was convicted by a federal jury of providing material support to terrorists and other charges. In 2005, he had posted an on Internet site a request for help to "do something" about the U.S. war in Iraq. On November 6, 2007, he was sentenced to 30 years in federal prison. He had claimed he was trying to root out terrorists via the Internet.

Craig Richter: one of four American Jews who opened fire with M-16 rifles at a bus near Ramallah that was carrying Palestinians to work on March 4, 1984. The four fled in a Subaru but were captured later that day by Israeli security forces. Terror against Terror claimed credit. He confessed and was sentenced to five years.

Christine Rico: one of four members of the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee who on January 25, 1985, expressed sympathy with the Red Guerrilla Resistance bombers of the U.S. Navy Yard officer's club in April 1981 but who said they were not involved and refused to answer questions from a federal grand jury.

Gordon Rider: see Avraham Hershovitz.

Glen Elmo Riggs: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 796, a B737 flying from Charleston, West Virginia, to Newark, New Jersey, on June 4, 1971. He wanted to go to Israel but permitted the pilot to land at Washington Dulles to refuel. He permitted the passengers and two flight attendants to deplane and asked for a larger plane. While getting a drink of water, he left his pistol on his seat. The crew overpowered him, and he was taken into custody. He was convicted on November 29, 1971, and sentenced on January 7, 1972, to two concurrent 20-year terms for aircraft piracy and interference with a flight crew member.

Ronald Rimerman: biochemist from Portland, Oregon, who hijacked United Airlines Flight 320 flying from Denver to Omaha on July 20, 1979. He wanted to go to Havana. The plane landed in Omaha, where he was overpowered by FBI agents.

Tyrone Rison: key court witness in the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground hold up of a Brink's truck. On December 17, 1983, he was sentenced to 12 years for the June 1981 Bronx Brink's truck holdup in which $300,000 was taking and a guard killed.

Edgar Rivas: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate; with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives; and with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba.

Iliana Robinson: acquitted in the Federal District Court in Manhattan, New York, on September 3, 1983, for the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck.

Thomas Harvey Robinson: would-be hijacker of National Airlines Flight 30, a DC8 flying from Houston to Melbourne, Florida, on November 17, 1965. Fired the first shots ever fired by a skyjacker on a U.S. airliner while in flight. A passenger disarmed him. He was indicted by a federal grand jury on counts of piracy, assault, intimidation, threatening a stewardess, and intimidating and interfering with the pilot. He was declared a juvenile delinquent and sentenced to an indeterminate term in a correctional facility on the assault charge. He was paroled on June 8, 1967. The conviction was set aside on September 24, 1969.

Tyrone "Double R" Robinson: on August 22, 1989, he shot to death Huey P. Newton, co-founder of the Black Panther Party, in Oakland, California, as a way to advance in the Black Guerrilla Family, a narcotics distribution gang operating in California's maximum-security prisons.

William C. Rodgers: named as an unindicted co-conspirator on January 20, 2006, when the Justice Department announced the indictment of 11 people for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower. Rodgers, age 40, committed suicide in December 2005, shortly after his arrest in Arizona on related arson charges.

Alberto Rodriguez: one of four members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) arrested in late June 1983 in connection with a plot to bomb an Army Reserve center and a Marine training center on July 4, 1983. Authorities found arms and explosives. A U.S. District Court judge in Chicago found the four guilty of conspiracy. On October 4, 1985, three of the defendants were sentenced to 35 years for seditious conspiracy. A fourth received a suspended sentence and five years' probation.

Edward E. Rodriguez: one of two men who chartered a Sawyer Aviation Cessna 310 to fly from Phoenix to Tucson on March 6, 1975. They forced the pilot to fly to Nogales, Mexico. The hijackers turned the plane and pilot over to a group that met the plane. The pilot escaped the next day and notified the authorities of the hijacking. Rodriguez was captured in Las Vegas on March 21, 1975. He was sentenced to six years in prison for kidnapping on July 17, 1975.

Ida Luz Rodriguez: Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) member who was arrested by Evanston, Illinois, police on April 4, 1980, and charged with a variety of local weapons, theft, and armed robbery charges. Bond was set at $2 million. She was one of seven FALN members who renounced violence in accepting President Clinton's offer of clemency in August 1999.

Jose Luis Rodriguez: one of four members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) arrested in late June 1983 in connection with a plot to bomb an Army Reserve center and a Marine training center on July 4, 1983. Authorities found arms and explosives. A U.S. District Court judge in Chicago found the four guilty of conspiracy. On October 4, 1985, three of the defendants were sentenced to 35 years for seditious conspiracy. A fourth received a suspended sentence and five years' probation.

Justo Rodriguez: Miami resident who pleaded guilty in 1981 in the U.S. District Court in Fort Lauderdale to conspiracy in two bombings and three bomb attempts.

Mary Rodriguez: member of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) who was sentenced on August 4, 1980, in Cook County Circuit Court to 30 years for conspiracy and armed robbery. Rodriguez also received three consecutive 6-month terms for contempt of court stemming from outbursts during the trial.

James R. “Rich” Rogers: Clarksburg Fire Department Lt. Rogers, age 56, of Jan Lew, West Virginia, was one of seven members of the Virginia Mountaineer Militia arrested by the FBI on October 11, 1996, and charged with attempting to collect and transport explosives and planning to destroy the FBI’s $200 million Criminal Justice Information Services Division, a fingerprint installation in Clarksburg, West Virginia. Rogers provided photos of the center’s blueprints that were sold for $50,000 to an undercover agent who the militia members thought was a Middle Eastern terrorist group member. Conviction on the individual counts entailed a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. (See also Terrell P. Coon.)

On August 25, 1997, jurors deliberated for three days before declaring him guilty of taking 34 photos of the blueprints of the FBI facility and storing them in the fire hall basement. He faced 10 years. He was acquitted of a conspiracy charge. He was the first to be convicted under the 1994 antiterrorism law that makes it a crime to knowingly provide resources to someone planning a terrorist attack. Attorney Gary Zimmerman said he would appeal the verdict.

Fermina Rojas: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army (ELN) guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum.

Jose M. Rojas Tapia: one of five prisoners who on December 30, 2002, broke out of a maximum-security prison after two confederates diverted a helicopter they had rented from Caribbean Helicorp in San Juan, claiming they needed to inspect construction work in Ponce. The renters forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the roof of Las Cucharas prison during morning recreation. The prisoners flew on to a remote area in the central mountains and escaped. The five had been serving sentences in excess of 100 years for murder and other crimes. Corrections Secretary Miguel Periera said it was possible that prison guards had helped the escapees. By January 3, 2003, four of the prisoners and two of the hijackers were back in custody. Police were searching for the fifth prisoner, who might have been killed.

Gabino Rojas: arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia.

Sandra Gayle Roland: one of four members of the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee who on January 25, 1985, expressed sympathy with the Red Guerrilla Resistance bombers of the U.S. Navy Yard officer’s club in April 1981 but who said they were not involved and refused to answer questions from a federal grand jury.

Zachary J. Rolnik: pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Boston on June 6, 2002, to making threatening calls to James J. Zogby, president of the Arab American Institute. Rolnik left a voice mail on September 12, 2001, threatening to kill Zogby and his children because of Zogby’s role in encouraging political participation. Rolnik, age 40, of Hanover, Massachusetts, faced a year in prison.

Carlos Ali Romero Varela: defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash.

Operation White Terror had begun 13 months earlier with meetings with undercover FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to the Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC), a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez, alias Commandant Napo, and Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization, which carry life sentences. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Gary Ipa Romriell: Los Angeles, California, resident whom the Philippines police believed was a U.S. assassin who had entered the country May 9–13, 1990, having been hired to kill President Aquino between May 15 and 20, 1990.

Carl E. Roper: also known as Abdul Latif.

Frank Roque: aircraft machinist, age 42, charged in the September 15, 2001, hate crime attack on Balbir Singh Sodhi, 49, an Indian Sikh immigrant gas station owner, who was shot to death in Mesa, Arizona, at 2:45 P.M. The gas station was not robbed. A Lebanese American clerk was shot at but not injured at another Mesa gas station 20 minutes later. Shots were fired at the Mesa home of an Afghan family, causing no injuries. Roque was charged with one count of first-degree murder and two counts of attempted murder.

Roque's bond was set at $1 million. On October 5, Roque pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder and nine other charges in what prosecutors called hate crimes. They said Sodhi was "apparently killed for no other reason than because he was dark-skinned, bearded and wore a turban." Roque was held without bail until a November court date. Roque was convicted of first-degree murder, drive-by shooting, and endangerment in early October 2003 and was sentenced to death by lethal injection on October 9, 2003.

Luis Rosa: member of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) who was sentenced on August 4, 1980, in Cook County Circuit Court to 30 years for conspiracy and armed robbery. Rosa also received two consecutive six-month terms for contempt of court stemming from outbursts during the trial.

Eve Rosahn: on November 5, 1981, she was charged with rioting at Kennedy International Airport against the touring South African Springboks and supplying two cars for the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck.

Ismael Rosani: one of two brothers denied visas to the United States who then threw Molotov cocktails at the U.S. Consulate in São Paulo, Brazil, on September 15, 1983.

Paulo Jacobo Rosani: one of two brothers denied visas to the United States who then threw Molotov cocktails at the U.S. Consulate in São Paulo, Brazil, on September 15, 1983.

Jacques Rose: brother of Paul Rose, one of the kidnappers of Pierre Laporte on October 10, 1970. The brothers were captured on December 28, 1970, by Canadian authorities. The duo surrendered at a St. Luc farmhouse, 30 miles from the U.S. border. On December 9, 1972, he was acquitted of kidnapping, and on February 22, 1973, he was acquitted of murdering Laporte.

Paul Rose: one of the kidnappers of Pierre Laporte, the Quebec minister of labor, who was kidnapped by the Quebec Liberation Front on October 10, 1970. Laporte's body was found in a car trunk on October 18. Seven kidnappers of Laporte and James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec, who was taken on October 5, 1970, were permitted safe passage. Rose was captured on December 28, 1970. He was later tried in Montreal, charged with Laporte's murder. On March 13, 1971, he was sentenced to life for capital murder. On November 20, 1971, he received a second life term for kidnapping Laporte.

Susan Lisa Rosenberg: fugitive indicted by a Manhattan federal grand jury on November 18, 1982, for plotting a dozen crimes, including armored car holdups, attempted robberies, threats to murder federal informants, and the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck and for being the getaway car driver in the 1979 prison escape of Joanne Chesimard. She was arrested on November 29, 1984, at a Cherry Hill storage depot, where 740 pounds of dynamite, an Uzi submachine gun, an M-14 rifle, a sawed-off shotgun, and Teflon-coated "police killer" bullets were found. She and May 19 Coalition member Timothy Blunk were arrested while sitting in a car after a New Jersey policeman became suspicious of their ill-fitting wigs. On March 17, 1985, she was convicted in federal court on eight charges of unlawful possession of explosives, weapons, and counterfeit identification cards. In May 1985, she was sentenced to 58 years for possession of 600 pounds of explosives and 12 guns.

She was one of seven people indicted on May 11, 1988, by a federal grand jury for the November 7, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Capitol and other attacks. The five-count indictment said the group was engaging in "armed propaganda" for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty. On January 20, 2001, President Clinton pardoned her. (See also Dr. Alan Berkman.)

Alvin Ross Diaz: he was jailed in the September 1976 car bombing in the United States of Chilean Orlando Letelier. His conviction was overturned, and in a new trial, a federal appeals court acquitted him on May 30, 1981.

Cecil Howard Ross: Glendale, Arizona, resident arrested on February 9, 1991, in connection with the February 4, 1991, discovery of bombs attached to a 1-million gallon methanol tank and another tank that would have emitted poisonous fumes if breached. The tank farm is five miles from Norfolk Naval Base, the world's largest naval base. He was held without bond. He was charged with conspiracy to use explosive devices to commit arson, mail fraud, and wire fraud.

William Ross: west Los Angeles real estate broker who on August 12, 1988, was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of aiding and abetting in the sending of a letter bomb to the Manhattan Beach offices of Prowest Computers owner Brenda Couthamel on July 17, 1980. The bomb killed her secretary, Patricia Wilkerson. The previous month, the jury had indicted Robert S. Manning, a Jewish Defense League member and fugitive in Israel whom Ross solicited to send the bomb, and Manning's wife. All three defendants faced possible life sentences.

Freedom Rostami: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On February 22, 1980, he pleaded guilty to lesser crimes in exchange for agreeing to leave the United States at the end of the semester in civil engineering at the Community College of Baltimore.

Edwin Claude Rowell: prisoner who was being transported in an Air Charter Piper Comanche from Alexandria, Louisiana, to Angola, Louisiana, in the custody of a deputy sheriff on June 26, 1974. Rowell pulled a pistol and diverted the plane to Hammond, Louisiana. He fled to a wooded area after handcuffing the deputy and the pilot to a tree. He was captured an hour later a mile from the plane. He allegedly had received his weapon from his girlfriend at his trial. He was sentenced by the state on April 14, 1975, to 10 years for aggravated kidnapping. The sentence was to be served in addition to 34 years for previous crimes.

Andre Roy: one of three Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) members arrested by Canadian police on June 21, 1970. They were planning to kidnap U.S. consul general Harrison W. Burgess. The unemployed taxi driver, age 23, who lived on Morgan Boulevard in the Laurentians, faced a dozen charges.

Randall Todd Royer: one of 11 members of the “Virginia jihad network” named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Royer, age 30, of Falls Church, Virginia, and another defendant were alleged to have fired at Indian positions in Kashmir after training at a Lashkar camp in Pakistan.

On July 11, Judge Brinkema ruled that Royer should remain in jail, saying she was not satisfied with his explanation of why he had an AK-47-style rifle and more than 200 rounds of ammunition in his car two weeks after 9/11.

On September 25, 2003, a new indictment was issued against seven defendants, including Royer. Royer was charged with conspiracy to provide material support to al Qaeda and the Taliban.

On January 16, 2004, Royer pleaded guilty to one count of using and discharging a firearm during and in relation to a crime of violence and to carrying an explosive during the commission of a felony. He denied he intended to harm Americans. He said he and his colleagues had intended to fight in Muslim causes abroad. The government dropped charges that he had conspired to provide material support to the Taliban and al Qaeda. On April 9, 2004, Royer was sentenced to two consecutive 10-year sentences. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Irving David Rubin: succeeded Meir Kahane in 1985 as chief of the Jewish Defense League (JDL) when the group splintered into the Los Angeles-based JDL and New York-based Jewish Defense Organization. He was arrested on March 7, 1992, in an alleged murder-for-hire plot. He was held without bail.

On December 11, 2001, Los Angeles police arrested Rubin, then 56, and Earl Leslie Krugel, 59, two JDL leaders, as they were assembling bombs to set off against both the San Clemente offices of Representative Darrell Issa (R-California), a grandson of Lebanese immigrants, and one of the city's largest mosques. The duo was charged with conspiracy to manufacture and detonate bombs at Arab and Muslim buildings. Krugel was picked up at his Reseda home as a police informant was handing him five pounds of gunpowder. Police found two drilled foot-long pipes, end caps, fuses, and a dozen rifles and handguns. The FBI had received a tip in October and had used wiretaps between the informant and the duo. The tapes recorded Krugel as saying that Arabs needed a wakeup call and that the JDL needed to do something to one of their “filthy” mosques. Rubin was grabbed while driving near his home after meeting with Krugel and the informant at Jerry's Famous Deli in Encino. Rubin was represented by attorney Peter Morris. The duo faced 30 years in prison. Potential targets discussed by the JDL included the King Fahd Mosque in Culver City, the offices of the Muslim Public Affairs Council on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles, and Issa's offices.

On January 10, 2002, a federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Rubin and Krugel on charges of plotting to bomb the Muslim Public Affairs Council in Los Angeles, the King Fahd Mosque in Culver City, and a field office of Representative Darrel Issa. The charges carried life sentences. Rubin, 57, was in critical condition after a suicide attempt on November 4, 2002, suffering stab wounds to his neck and severe head injuries.

Rebecca Rubin: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front (ELF) and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower. She remained at large. On May 19, 2006, Oregon indicted four environmental extremists, including Rubin, for the 1998 ELF firebombing at a Vail ski resort that led to $12 million in damages to a mountain lodge, two restaurants, and other buildings and ski lifts. Rubin and others had been named in an earlier Oregon indictment for conspiracy for similar attacks in Oregon, California, and Wyoming. ELF had attacked Vail because it was expanding into potential habitat of the endangered lynx.

Mark Rudd: Weather Underground member.

Mario Rudela: one of two Croatian nationalists killed on May 23, 1979, when a pipe bomb they were transporting accidentally exploded in their pickup truck in San Pedro, Los Angeles, United States.

Eric Robert Rudolph: on May 5, 1998, the FBI offered a $1 million reward for help in arresting Rudolph, then 31, who was charged in the January 29, 1998, fatal bombing of the New Woman All Women Health Care Center, a Birmingham, Alabama, abortion clinic. For the first time, the FBI linked him to the July 27, 1996, Olympics bombing (although he was not officially a suspect) that had killed 2 and wounded 111, saying that the bombs were similar. The FBI later increased the $100,000 reward to $1 million and placed him on the 10 Most Wanted Fugitives list. Rudolph had last been seen on January 30, 1998, near his home in the mountains of western North Carolina. He abandoned his pickup truck and disappeared. Hundreds of federal and local agents searched the area for what FBI Director Louis Freeh called “an accomplished hiker, a backwoods person, a survivalist.”

On October 14, 1998, attorney general Janet Reno and FBI Director Louis Freeh announced that Rudolph was charged with three unsolved bombings—the Olympics attack and the 1997 bombings of a gay bar in Atlanta and an abortion clinic in Sandy Springs. The duo described him as a terrorist inspired not by politics or religion, but by indiscriminate hate.

On November 12, 1998, at 8 P.M., an FBI agent’s head was grazed by a bullet fired into an Andrews, North Carolina, warehouse serving as the FBI command post coordinating the search for Rudolph.

On May 31, 2003, police announced his arrest in Murphy, North Carolina. He gave the alias of Jerry Wilson.

On August 13, 2003, nurse Emily Lyons won a $115 million lawsuit against him for the injuries she had suffered in the 1998 abortion clinic bombing. On September 24, 2003, Judge Helen Shores Lee refused to overturn the judgment. On August 17, 2004, the Alabama Supreme Court upheld the ruling.

On December 11, 2003, prosecutors said they would seek the death penalty.

On April 8, 2005, the Justice Department announced that Rudolph, 38, would plead guilty later in the week to four terrorist bombings, including the July 1996 bombing at the Olympics in Atlanta, Georgia. He would be sentenced to four consecutive life sentences without the possibility of parole but would avoid the death penalty. Rudolph pleaded guilty on April 12, 2005, saying he was trying to force the government to stop legal abortions. The bombings killed 2 people and injured more than 150 people from 1996 to 1998 in Atlanta and Birmingham. The agents found one fully assembled 25-pound bomb near homes and businesses and 250-plus pounds of secreted dynamite and bomb components. He pleaded guilty to the following attacks:

- July 27, 1996, bombing of the Centennial Olympic Park in Atlanta that killed Alice Hawthorne and injured 111.
- January 16, 1997, setting off of two bombs at an office building housing an abortion clinic in Sandy Springs, an Atlanta suburb, that injured six.
- February 21, 1997, nail bombing of the Otherside Lounge, a gay nightclub in Atlanta, that injured five.
- January 29, 1998, bombing at a Birmingham abortion clinic that killed off-duty policeman Robert Sanderson and injured nurse Emily Lyons.

Rudolph, represented by attorney William Bowen, was sentenced to two life sentences on July 18, 2005, and was ordered to pay $1 million in restitution to the victims. Some of the money, plus $200 in court fees, would come from the $1,600 in cash found in his trailer after he disappeared into the forest in 1998. Rudolph told the court that “what they did was participate in the murder and dismemberment of upward of 50 children a week. I believe that deadly force is indeed justified in an attempt to stop it.” On August 22, 2005, Rudolph was ordered to serve life without parole—four consecutive life sentences plus 120 years—and ordered to pay $2.3 million in restitution for the three Atlanta bombings. He apologized for killing Alice Hawthorne and hurting the civilians among the 111 injured in the Olympics bombing. His apology did not mention the other 11 injured in the attack at the gay nightclub and the Atlanta abortion clinic. He was to be held at the maximum-security federal prison in Florence, Colorado.

Gary G. Rusk: one of three juveniles who used sharpened toothbrushes to hijack a Transair-Midwest Airlines Piper Navajo flying between Dauphin and Winnipeg, Canada, on April 13, 1971. The trio wanted to go to Yorkton, Saskatchewan, but the pilot used cloud cover to foil the youths and landed in Winnipeg, where the trio was taken into custody.

S

---

Rafiq Abdus Sabir: Boca Raton, Florida, physician, age 50, who was arrested on May 28, 2005, by the FBI, which held him at Palm Beach County Jail. Authorities also arrested Tarik Ibn Osman Shah, 42, a New York martial arts expert and jazz musician. The two U.S. citizens had conspired to treat and train al Qaeda terrorists, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York. Sabir had agreed to treat jihadis in Saudi Arabia. Shah had agreed to train them in hand-to-hand combat. Prosecutors mentioned a sting operation from 2003 to 2005 in which the duo took an oath pledging loyalty to al Qaeda. They also pledged allegiance to al Qaeda at a May 20 meeting in the Bronx. They faced 15 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

In the sting operation, Shah and an FBI informant went to a Long Island warehouse—which was videotaped by the FBI—to determine whether it could be used to train jihadis in using swords and machetes. He also wanted to open a machine shop to fabricate weapons. In January 2004, the informant told Shah he was going to take him to Plattsburgh, New York, to introduce him to a Middle Eastern recruiter (who was an FBI agent). Shah also wanted to start a Muslim-only martial arts school and wanted training in chemicals, explosives, firearms, AK-47s, and hand grenades. Shah also mentioned martyrdom.

The duo shared an address on Adam Clayton Powell Jr. Boulevard in Harlem. In 1993, Shah opened the Expansion of Knowledge Center in Harlem. He listed the address as his home in the late 1980s and early 1990s. They were expelled from a Bronx mosque where Sabir had served as an assistant imam. Sabir had taken Shah and another person to the mosque to teach urban warfare.

Arraignment took place on May 31. Sabir appeared in Fort Pierce, Florida, where he was held without bail. He had not hired an attorney. Shah appeared in Manhattan; a preliminary hearing was set for June. They were both charged with one count of conspiring to provide material support to a terrorist organization.

The duo pleaded not guilty at their June 28 arraignment in New York.

On August 4, federal authorities charged U.S. citizen Mahmud Faruq Brent, 30, alias Mahmud Al Mutazzim, a Baltimore County resident, with conspiracy to support a terrorist organization. The FBI recorded a conversation in which he mentioned attending a Lashkar-e-Taiba terrorist training camp in Pakistan. He had once worked as a paramedic in Silver Spring, Maryland, and as a Washington, D.C., cabdriver. He was arrested in Newark on August 4 and was charged the same day in Manhattan federal court. He had spoken with Shah, who told authorities that he had trained Brent in martial arts and that Brent was a jihadi. Brent was also linked to Seifullah Chapman, a member of the Virginia jihad network who had been sentenced to 65 years in prison for conspiring to support Lashkar-e-Taiba and taking part in paramilitary training. Brent had filed a letter from Chapman written in support of an application for an expedited passport. Brent was licensed as a taxi and ambulance driver, employed by LifeStar Response Corporation. He was represented by attorneys Donald Yannella and Hassen

Ibn Abdellah. On April 2, 2007, during a hearing in a Manhattan federal court, Brent pleaded guilty to conspiring to aid Lashkar-e-Taiba by attending one of its Pakistan training camps. He had been scheduled to go on trial on April 24. Sentencing was set for July 10, 2007. He faced a maximum 15-year sentence because of the plea bargain; he would have faced 20 years if tried.

On February 17, 2006, the trio pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to aid terrorist groups in the Middle East between 2001 and 2005.

On November 7, 2007, Tarik Shah was sentenced to 15 years in prison by a federal judge who said it was irrelevant that no one from al Qaeda was involved in the case.

Marwan al-Sadafi: variant Safadi; aliases Marwan Adib Adam Kadi, alias Ibrahim Mahmood Awethe. Lebanese, age 40, arrested on November 7, 1996, by Paraguayan authorities on suspicion of involvement with Hizballah. He was extradited to New York the next day. He was placed in a Chicago jail on November 9 on charges of passport fraud. He was later extradited to Canada, where he had escaped while serving a nine-year prison sentence for drug trafficking.

He was linked to an alleged plan to bomb the U.S. Embassy on the anniversary of the November 1995 bombing of a U.S. military facility in Saudi Arabia. He apparently had conducted surveillance of the area. Argentine officials apparently told the Paraguayans about his Hizballah connections. Sadafi was arrested along with another Arab man—who was later released—at a hotel (or apartment house) in Ciudad del Este, on the Argentine–Brazil–Paraguay border. He was picked up during a raid against smugglers during which police discovered double-barreled shotguns, revolvers, pistols, and Canadian passports.

U.S. officials later said that Sadafi's nationality was unclear. He had obtained a valid U.S. passport in Chicago by using a fake driver's license and birth certificate for Ibrahim Mahmood Awethe.

Ehsanul Islam Sadequee: Bangladeshi American, age 19, based in Atlanta who in March 2005 joined Syed Haris Ahmed in a meeting in Toronto with Canadian extremists to explore attacks on military bases and oil refineries. In April 2005, the duo drove Ahmed's pickup to Washington, D.C., where they videotaped the U.S. Capitol, World Bank headquarters, a Metro station, a hazardous materials vehicle, and fuel storage tanks. The videos went to al Qaeda Internet leader Younis Tsouli and Abid Hussain Khan, who faced terrorism charges in the United Kingdom. Bangladesh returned Sadequee to U.S. authorities, and he was arrested on April 21, 2006, on charges of conspiracy and providing material support to a terrorist group. Sadequee and Ahmed faced 60 years in prison.

Marvin Sadler: also known as Abdul Shaheed.

Sheik Omar Saeed: alias Ahmad Omar Saeed Sheik. Named on February 6, 2002, by Pakistani police as a key suspect in the kidnapping and murder on January 23, 2002, of Wall Street Journal reporter Danny Pearl. Saeed, age 27, was freed from an Indian prison in 1999 during the hijacking of an Indian Airlines flight to Afghanistan. Several Saeed family members were detained. Saeed was born in London and has U.K. citizenship. He attended the London School of Economics and Politics. He went to Bosnia on a charity mission in 1993. He then received military training in Khost, Afghanistan, and has ties to the banned Islamic radical groups Harkat ul-Mujaheddin and Jaish-i-Muhammad. In 1994, he kidnapped four Western tourists in Indian Kashmir and then was captured after being wounded in a shootout.

Saeed spoke with his aunt over a cell phone on February 5, 2002, at which time she told him she was in police custody and asked him to turn himself in. She and one of her three sons were later released. The next day, police said e-mails recovered on the hard drive seized with the trio were linked to Saeed. The e-mails were traced to an Internet service provider in a Karachi apartment complex. The laptop computer belonged to Farhad Naseem, who admitted receiving the e-mails from Saeed, who remained at large.

Saeed surrendered to Lahore police just before dawn on February 12 (although later reports said February 5). He said that Pearl was alive and admitted to involvement in the kidnapping. He insisted he did not know the victim's whereabouts. On February 14, a judge ordered him held for two more weeks on kidnapping charges. There were no plans to extradite him to the United States.

Saeed told his interrogators that although he was involved in planning the kidnapping, another group had provided the safe house. He also backed off from saying that Pearl was alive and soon told a Karachi court that he was dead, shot while trying to escape around January 31. He had called his accomplices to tell them to release Pearl on February 5, saying, "Shift the patient to the doctor," but was told, "Dad has expired." Saeed said his partner was Hyder, known to Pearl as Imtiaz Siddique and whom police identified as Mansur Hasnain, who was involved in the Indian air hijacking. Police raided the Hasnain residence in Punjab's Toba Tek Singh town and detained some of his relatives.

A federal grand jury in U.S. District Court in Trenton, New Jersey, indicted Saeed on March 14, 2002, with conspiracy to commit hostage taking that resulted in Pearl's death and hostage taking that resulted in his death; both are capital crimes. The indictment said he used the alias Chaudrey Bashir to send e-mails to Pearl offering to set up a meeting with a prominent radical cleric; the meeting was a ruse, and Pearl was kidnapped. Prosecutors also unsealed a secret indictment filed in November 2001 in a Washington, D.C., federal court that said he had participated in the 1994 kidnapping of U.S. tourist Bela J. Nuss in India for 11 days.

On March 22, 2002, Pakistan charged him with murder, kidnapping for ransom, and terrorism in the Pearl case. On July 15, 2002, he was convicted and sentenced to hang.

On February 24, 2005, a Karachi court began hearing the appeals of four terrorists, including Saeed, convicted of the kidnap/murder of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl.

Zayd Hassan Abd al-Latif Masud al-Safarini:

Kuwaiti-born Jordanian, age 39, arrested on September 28, 2001, after his release from a Pakistani prison where he had served 14 years for membership in the Abu Nidal organization and for the September 5, 1986, hijacking of Pan American World Airways Flight 73 on the ground in Karachi in which 22 passengers were killed; he shot U.S. passenger Rajesh N. Kumar in the head. He was rendered to justice in September 2001. On October 1, 2001, the United States charged him with murder. He was arraigned in U.S. District Court on charges contained in a 126-count indictment issued in 1991. On July 31, 2002, he appeared in federal court in Washington, D.C., for serving as the ringleader of the hijackers. Charges included murder, conspiracy, and air piracy. Prosecutors said he gave the orders to the other gunmen to shoot at the passengers and throw grenades at them. Prosecutors sought the death penalty. On November 12, 2003, he pleaded guilty to the 95 counts of murder, air piracy, and terrorism to avoid a death penalty. On December 16, 2003, U.S. District Judge Emmet G. Sullivan sentenced him to life in prison. On May 13, 2004, Safarini was given three consecutive life sentences plus 25 years as part of a plea agreement approved by the judge, who said he would recommend that Safarini never be paroled and be sent to a super-maximum-security prison in Florence, Colorado.

Saima Saima: wife of Haroon Rashid, two of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them on bail. The FBI said that three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. She was freed on $10,000 bail.

Merlyn L. St. George: aliases Heinrick von George, W. St. George. Would-be hijacker of Mohawk Flight 452 bound for New York City on January 26, 1972. He demanded $200,000, four parachutes, and a flight to Poughkeepsie, New York. He permitted the passengers to deplane in Purchase, New York, where the money was paid. He held a flight attendant hostage for seven hours. He was killed by an FBI agent as he and the stewardess entered a car.

Kim St. Louis: arrested with Ayman Bondok on March 10, 2000, in Montreal for possessing illegal explosives. He was charged with threatening Israel in an effort to win the release of Lebanese prisoners. Police believed the two were acting on their own, rather than in concert with any terrorist groups. On March 30, Bondok was charged with extortion and possessing explosives. St. Louis, age 31, was charged with the latter offense but was released on bail. Police believed Bondok had made a threatening call to the Israeli Consulate. They also suggested that Bondok had provided the tip about the explosives in the apartment of Tarek Adealy Khafagy, who was arrested on March 4.

Michael Saisa: alias of Youssef Hmimssa.

Abdul Salaam: also known as Clarence White. Held on $75,000 bond as one of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. He had prior convictions for grand larceny, burglary, and possession of a deadly weapon. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 40 to 120 years. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980.

Muhammad al-Hamid Khalil Salah: U.S. citizen and used car dealer from Chicago who made several trips to Israel to deliver money from Abu Marzook to Hamas leaders. Israeli police arrested him in January 1993 as he entered Israel. He confessed to funding gunrunning and was sentenced to five years in prison. He returned to the United States in November 1997 after serving most of his sentence. On June 9, 1998, federal authorities in Chicago seized $1.4 million in cash and property that was believed part of a Hamas money-laundering operation that had begun in 1989. The money was moved from Europe and the Middle East to a U.S. network of Hamas supporters who aided the group in Israel and Palestine. Through the use of civil asset forfeiture for the first time in a terrorism case, some $1.2 million in cash was seized from Mohammad Salah and his wife, Azita, in Bridgeview, a Chicago suburb. The government also moved to claim their home and a van owned by the Quranic Literacy Institute. The FBI affidavit said that Salah had given money to Hamas, who used it to buy weapons used in attacks that killed Israeli soldiers.

On August 20, 2004, the Justice Department unsealed the indictment of Marzook; former Howard University professor Abelhaleem Hasan Abdelraziq Ashqar of Fairfax County, Virginia; and Salah, age 51, of suburban Chicago, who was arrested on August 19. They were charged in a 15-year racketeering conspiracy to funnel money to Hamas, which was deemed a "criminal enterprise." The indictment said that beginning in 1988, the trio had conspired with 20 others to use bank accounts in Mississippi, Ohio, Virginia, Wisconsin, and other states to launder millions to Hamas. The money was used to pay for false passports, kidnappings, murders, and other crimes in Israel. U.S. officials planned to seize $2.7 million. Salah pleaded not guilty in Chicago.

On September 22, 2006, federal prosecutors in Chicago dropped a charge against Salah of providing material support to Hamas. The prosecutors left in place charges of racketeering conspiracy and lying about being a Hamas member.

On January 8, 2007, prosecutors presented their closing arguments in the racketeering cases against Ashqar and Salah, two alleged Hamas militants charged with providing funds and recruits to spread “death, destruction, fear, and terror.” On February 1, 2007, a federal jury in Chicago acquitted Ashqar and Salah of racketeering charges. They would have faced life sentences if convicted. However, Salah was guilty of criminal contempt and obstruction for giving false answers in a civil lawsuit. Salah was represented by Michael Deutsch. On November 21, 2007, U.S. District Judge Amy St. Eve sentenced him to 22 months for lying under oath in a legal document.

Daoud Salahuddin: alias of David Belfield. Assassin of Ali Akbar Tabatabai, former press attaché of the Shah’s Iranian Embassy in the United States, on July 22, 1980. Salahuddin had worked as a security guard at the Iranian Embassy and later in the Iranian Interests Section of the Algerian Embassy. After the assassination, he fled to New York City, was driven to Montreal, and then fled to Geneva and on to Iran. He was charged with a federal civil rights violation and a state charge of murder. He had been previously detained on November 4, 1979—the day Iranian students took over the U.S. Embassy in Tehran—after taking over the Statue of Liberty in an anti-Shah rally. He later appeared in a January 2002 movie, Kandahar, under the name Hassan Tantai.

Sirous Salahvarzi: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On February 22, 1980, he pleaded guilty to lesser crimes in exchange for agreeing to leave the United States at the end of the semester in civil engineering at the Community College of Baltimore.

Fahid Muhammad ‘Alim Salam: variant of Fahid Mohammed Ali Msalam.

Amin Salamah: leader of four al Saiqa terrorists arrested by Amsterdam police detectives on September 5, 1975, while planning to take over the daily 0836 D-train from Moscow at Amersfoort station the next day. They intended to kidnap immigrating Russian Jews and demand a plane to fly them and their hostages out of the country. Three days later, they were sentenced to 18 months. Salamah said that the group had been trained in 1972 in a village outside Moscow. Their preliminary six-month course had covered the use of arms and explosives, as well as propaganda and interrogation survival techniques.

Irma Salazar: arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia.

Rodolfo Saldana: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army (ELN) occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Matarawy Mohammed Said Saleh: aliases Wahid, Wahid Saleh. Identified on July 7, 1993, by federal prosecutors as a 10th suspect in the plot broken up by the FBI on June 24, 1993, of individuals charged with planning to bomb the UN headquarters building in Manhattan; 26 Federal Plaza, which includes the local FBI headquarters and other agencies; the 47th Street diamond district, which is run principally by Orthodox Jews; and the Lincoln and Holland tunnels connecting Manhattan and New Jersey; they were also charged with planning to assassinate Senator Alfonse M. D’Amato (R-NY);

Assemblyman Dov Hiking, an Orthodox Jewish legislator from Brooklyn; UN secretary general Boutros Boutros-Ghali; and Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak. On July 22, 1993, the Egyptian-born detainee was arrested at the Wildwood, New Jersey, beachfront Sea Wolf Inn, along with his longtime friend Ashraf Mohammed, who was charged with harboring a fugitive. They were ordered held without bail.

Prosecutors said he had brokered a shipment of rocket-propelled grenade launchers from Jordan to Egypt, was involved in counterfeiting and international transportation of stolen cars, and had been convicted for heroin trafficking.

In August 1995, he pleaded guilty to a bomb conspiracy count. He had tried to turn state's evidence, and the government dropped a charge of attempted bombing. On December 19, 1995, he was sentenced to the 29 months he had already served in jail and was placed on 3 years' probation.

Mohammad Saleh: one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in New York. The Palestinian was accused of providing the 255 gallons of diesel oil needed for the bomb and found in the safe house from his Gulf gas station in Yonkers and of directing his employees to destroy records of the transaction. He was held without bail.

On October 1, 1995, he was found guilty of seditious conspiracy, bombing conspiracy, and attempted bombing. On January 17, 1996, U.S. District Judge Michael B. Mukasey sentenced him to 35 years. (See also Amir Zaid Abdulghani.)

Hesham Salem: Egyptian arrested in Evansville, Indiana, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Mohammed A. Salameh: alias Kamal Ibrahim. Jordanian-born Palestinian living in Jersey City who on March 4, 1993, was charged by the FBI with aiding and abetting the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in which 7 people were killed and more than 1,000 wounded. The handyman was arrested after investigators determined that he had rented the bomb-carrying Ford Econoline E-350 van on February 23. Police searching his apartment found bomb-making equipment and explosives residue. He had given the apartment's address on the van rental slip found at the Ryder truck rental agency. Several hours after the bombing, he returned to the agency with a companion in a red GM sedan and reported that the Econoline had been stolen from a nearby grocery store parking lot. He also went to a Jersey City police station to report the theft. The rental documents had traces of chemical nitrates, which are often found in explosives. When he returned to the agency with the police documents confirming that the van had been stolen, he asked for return of the $400 security deposit. The FBI arrested him as he walked to a nearby bus stop.

He was born in Biddya, in the Nabulus sub-district, on September 1, 1967. His father was a Jordanian of Palestinian origin. He had no criminal record in Jordan. He was the eldest of his mother's 11 children. He had a degree from the Islamic studies faculty of the University of Jordan and wanted to obtain an MBA in the United States. He had entered the United States on February 17, 1988, on a six-month tourist visa and had apparently been in the United States illegally since its expiration.

On May 26, he was named in an eight-count indictment for planning and carrying out the WTC attack. He pleaded not guilty on May 28, 1993. The trial began in September 1993. On March 4, 1994, after five days of deliberation, the jury found him guilty on all counts of conspiracy, explosives charges, and assault. On May 24, 1994, U.S. District Judge Kevin Duffy sentenced him to 240 years in prison, a life term calculated by adding the life expectancy of each of the people killed in the blast, plus 30 years for two other counts.

He went on a hunger strike on August 22, 1993, that lasted for at least five days.

Janinal Antel Sali Jr.: alias Abu Sulaiman. Abu Sayyaf commander who on July 23, 2002, was one of five Abu Sayyaf members indicted in Washington, D.C., for the killing of U.S. hostages taken in an attack on May 27, 2001, in the Philippines. The federal grand jury charged them with conspiracy resulting in death, with hostage taking, and with three counts of hostage-taking resulting in death. All of the defendants were at large. The United States said it would seek extradition whenever they were apprehended. He was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006. On January 16, 2007, he died in a gun battle with Philippine Army special forces during a raid on Jolo Island.

Krikor (KoKo) Saliba: Lebanese Armenian immigrant wanted for questioning in the January 28, 1982, Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide assassination in Los Angeles of Turkish consul general Kemal Arikan.

Mamdouh Mahmoud Salim: alias Abu Hajir al-Iraqi. Born to Iraqi parents in Sudan, he studied electrical engineering in Baghdad and was an Iraqi army communications officer from 1981 to 1983. After deserting, he moved to Pakistan. In 1986, he met Osama bin Laden in Peshawar, trained in an al Qaeda weapons camp, and became the group's purchaser of communications gear and weapons, including chemical, biological, radiological, and nuclear materials. He was arrested at age 40 on September 16, 1998, by German authorities. The al Qaeda member was described as a major financial operative who also procured weapons. A sealed warrant seeking his arrest had been filed in Manhattan. He carried a Sudanese passport and claimed to have been born in Khartoum. Some believed he was of Iraqi descent. He was arrested while visiting a friend near Freising in Bavaria. His plane ticket would have taken him to Turkey. He told investigators that he was planning to purchase 20 used cars in Germany but was not carrying a large amount of money.

Federal prosecutors in New York unsealed the criminal complaint against Salim on September 25. The complaint charged Salim with conspiracy to commit murder and use weapons of mass destruction. It said that Salim had helped bin Laden to found al Qaeda and that he sat on the group's majlis al shura, the advisory council that approves military attacks, and on the fatwa committee, which issued Islamic edicts promoting attacks on Americans. It noted that Salim had worked for al Qaeda in Sudan, Afghanistan, Malaysia, the Philippines, and Pakistan. He obtained communications equipment and "electronic items necessary for the detonation of explosives." The complaint indicated that bin Laden, in conjunction with the governments of Iran and Sudan, sent individuals around the world in the early 1990s to obtain nuclear weapons. The prosecutors charged that Salim had met with Iranian officials in Tehran and Khartoum to arrange for al Qaeda members to receive explosives training in Lebanon from Hizballah. The complaint mentioned attempts in 1993 to purchase enriched uranium to fabricate a nuclear bomb. On September 29, federal prosecutors in Manhattan expanded the charges against him, saying that between 1992 and 1998 he had taken part in a conspiracy to attack U.S. military sites abroad and had conspired to transport explosives. They said that they would seek his extradition from Germany. On October 6, the Delhi, India, Pioneer reported that Indian intelligence was investigating Salim. He was indicted on 238 counts on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York.

On November 30, a Munich court approved Salim's extradition to the United States to face charges in the U.S. District Court in New York of murder conspiracy and use of weapons of mass destruction in an international plot to kill U.S. citizens. Germany's highest court approved the extradition on December 11, 1998. By December 19, Bavarian regional justice authorities and the Foreign Ministry had agreed to hand him over to the United States. He was turned over to U.S. officials the next day, flying from Munich Airport to the United States on a U.S. government plane. He was held without bail after appearing in a New York City court and was charged with murder, conspiracy, and use of weapons of mass destruction in an international plot to kill U.S. citizens. His court-appointed lawyer, Paul J. McAllister, said that the charges were vague.

On November 2, 2000, he and Khalfan Khamis Mohamed stabbed Louis Pepe, a guard, in the eye with a comb filed down to a point at the Metropolitan Correctional Facility in New York. The guard lost his eye, and the implement penetrated the guard's brain. On December 20, 2000, Salim was indicted by a federal grand jury in New York on charges including conspiracy to escape, possession of dangerous weapons in a prison, hostage taking, conspiracy to murder, and attempted murder for the attack on the guard.

German authorities said he was connected to Aldy Attar, an Egyptian surgeon in Neu-Ulm.

On April 3, 2002, he pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy to murder and attempted murder in the stabbing of the guard. On May 3, 2004, he was sentenced to 32 years in prison for the stabbing of Pepe, who was permanently brain-damaged, partially paralyzed, and blinded.

Faisal Michael al Salmi: on October 12, 2001, federal officials in Phoenix unsealed an indictment against al Salmi, 34, a Tempe, Arizona, resident accused of giving false statements to the FBI about 9/11 Pentagon hijacker Hani Hanjour. He had denied knowing Hanjour, but the FBI said they had talked several times, including once "when they spoke of a mutual interest in aviation." On February 14, 2002, he was convicted of lying to the FBI. On March 14, he was sentenced to six months. He had come to the United States from Saudi Arabia on a student visa in 1997. He was detained on September 21, 2001. Salmi and Hanjour were registered at the same time to use a public flight simulator at a Phoenix flight school.

Yazeed Al-Salmi: Saudi, age 23, picked up at a San Diego mosque in late September 2001 and held as a material witness in New York for two weeks. The Grossmont Community College student was released on October 9. He briefly lived with Abdussattar Shaikh, who had rented an apartment to two 9/11 hijackers, Nawaf Alhamzi and Khalid Almihdhar. He shared a car insurance policy with Alhamzi to save money.

Fred Saloman: on September 15, 1975, he commandeered a vehicle, took a hostage, and armed with a knife and pistol, attempted to secure a plane and pilot. Unsuccessful, he took another hostage and drove to the San Jose municipal airport, where he and his hostages climbed over a fence and boarded a parked out-of-service Continental Airlines B727. He took as hostages two engineers on the plane. Two of the hostages escaped, another was shot and seriously wounded. After agreeing to surrender, Saloman, using his final hostage as a shield, appeared at the top of the boarding stairway and pointed his pistol at a policeman on the ground. He was fatally shot by a police marksman.

Hammad Riaz Samana: Pakistani, age 21, who lived in southern Los Angeles who was arrested on August 15, 2005, in Los Angeles in connection with an investigation of a series of 10 gas station holdups. They found contacts to a possible terrorist plot and connections to the radical Islamic group Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh (Assembly of Authentic Islam) which has a presence in the state prison where one of the suspects had been recently held. A search of the home of a suspect yielded jihadist literature, documents referring to 9/11, bulletproof vests, and a list of addresses of Southland area synagogues, the Israeli Consulate, National Guard centers, the ticket counter for El Al Israel Airlines at LA International Airport, and other sites.

Samana was later found to be unfit to stand trial and was remanded to psychiatric care at a federal prison facility. The former college student had attended a suburban mosque with another suspect. Samana researched the Israeli Consulate and military recruiting offices. On September 6, Samana pleaded not guilty to terrorism charges.

Maitham and Qassim Abdulla Jaber Samar: on March 20, 2003, Samar, age 39, and his brother Qassim Abdulla Jaber Samar were swept up in the Operation Green Quest terrorist-financing task force when federal agents arrested nine people and executed nine search warrants. The two Iraqi brothers were arrested in Denver for operating an unlicensed money-transferring business that had sent more than $7 million to Iraq in two and one-half years. Maitham did business as Alrafden Transactions.

Thong Samien: member of the California-based anticommunist Cambodian Freedom Fighters, which on November 24, 2000, claimed credit for a midnight shootout at a police station and government buildings in Phnom Penh in which seven died and a dozen were wounded. On June 22, 2001, a Cambodian court convicted the Long Beach, California, travel agent of handling logistics for the attack.

William Sampson: Canadian sentenced to death on July 28, 2002, by a Saudi court in the murder of U.K. citizen Christopher Rodway, who died in a November 17, 2000, bomb blast in Riyadh that also slightly injured his wife. Sampson attacked his jailers when his father visited on March 4, 2003. After ordering his father to leave his prison hospital room, he threw objects at everyone in the area, including the Canadian ambassador. Sampson had earlier injured himself in a suicide attempt. The Saudis freed and deported him on August 8, 2003.

Mtajori Sandiata: alias of Samuel Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Sands: aliases of John H. Jennings and Janyce Reed.

Walter Sanville: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 27, Sanville, age 37, changed his plea to guilty to charges of conspiring to illegally make and possess unregistered destructive devices and to two counts of unlawful possession of machine-gun parts. He was sentenced to 37 to 46 months. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Nabil Sarama: Palestinian who was arrested circa November 2001 near an Orlando pay phone that had been used to make bomb threats. His suitcase contained fake IDs and box cutters. He was charged with making false statements to obtain a residency card.

Nizar Sassi: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for “criminal association with a terrorist enterprise.” The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to “integrate into terrorist structures” in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but said they had not used their combat training. He was sentenced to four years in prison; three were suspended, and one year was time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The French citizens were captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then were handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005.

Hampig Sassounian: Armenian immigrant who lived in Pasadena. A jury deliberated from November 28, 1983, to early 1984 before finding him guilty of first-degree murder for the January 28, 1982, assassination in Los Angeles of Turkish consul general Kemal Arikan. The Superior Court sentenced him to life without possibility of parole on June 16, 1984.

Harout Sassounian: brother of Harry Sassounian. Harout’s trial for the 1980 firebombing of the Los Angeles residence of Turkish consul general Kemal Arikan ended in a mistrial in May 1982 because of publicity about Armenian assassinations. The next month, he was convicted of the firebombing. On February 3, 1995, the California Supreme Court upheld his life sentence for assassinating Consul General Arikan in Los Angeles on January 28, 1992.

Harry M. Sassounian: Armenian immigrant to the United States who was arrested in Los Angeles on January 28, 1982, for shooting to death Turkish consul general Kemal Arikan a few hours earlier. The Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide claimed credit. He pleaded innocent to murder charges on February 1, 1982.

Ahmed Abd-al Sattar: paralegal, age 42, who worked for Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman's legal team and who was indicted with three others, including attorney Lynne Stewart, on April 9, 2002, by attorney general John Ashcroft for helping to pass unlawful messages between an Egyptian terrorist organization and blind sheik Abd-al-Rahman, who was serving a life sentence for plotting to blow up the World Trade Center and United Nations buildings in 1993. The four-some were also charged with providing "material support and resources" to the Egyptian Islamic Group. Sattar was in frequent contact with fellow defendant Yasser Sirri. Translator Mohammed Yousry and Sattar were also accused of relaying a 2000 fatwa in which the blind sheik called on Muslims everywhere "to fight the Jews and kill them wherever they are."

On November 19, 2003, a federal grand jury indicted attorney Lynne Stewart and Arabic translator Mohammed Yousry for their roles in a conspiracy led by imprisoned Egyptian cleric Omar Abd-al-Rahman to kill and kidnap people overseas. The duo was accused of helping Abd-al-Rahman issue fatwas and other messages to Sattar, a State Island postal worker, who then circulated the messages around the world. Sattar was indicted for conspiring with Rahman and others to kill and kidnap people abroad; he posted on the Internet the "Fatwah Mandating the Killing of Israelis Everywhere." Stewart and Yousry were freed on bond; Sattar remained in custody.

On July 22, 2003, U.S. District Judge John G. Koeltl dismissed similar charges against Stewart and Yousry. The new charges provided more details and cited a different legal statute.

On October 13, 2004, testimony was postponed until October 18 amid reports that Sattar had suffered a mild heart attack and was hospitalized.

On February 10, 2005, Sattar was convicted of conspiracy for "plotting to kill and kidnap persons in a foreign country" by publishing papers calling for the murder of Jews.

Habis Abdallah al-Sa'ub: variant Habis Abdulla al Saoub; aliases Habis Abdulla al-Saub, Abu Tariq, Abu Tarek, Samarkand, Habisabdulla al-Saub. Former anti-Soviet mujaheddin who fought in Afghanistan and then resided in Peshawar, Pakistan, until 1993, when he immigrated to the United States. He is a permanent U.S. resident alien and a radical fundamentalist Sunni. He departed the United States on October 17, 2001, intending to enter Afghanistan to fight alongside al Qaeda and the Taliban against coalition forces. He was accompanied by four U.S. citizens apprehended on October 4, 2002. They were all indicted on charges of conspiracy to levy war against the United States, provide material support and resources to foreign terrorist organizations, and contribute services to al Qaeda and the Taliban. He was last seen on May 23, 2002, when he departed mainland China. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He is six feet three inches tall and weighs 210 pounds. He was born on November 19, 1965, in Jordan.

William Saupe: hijacker with history of mental illness who demanded that Trans World Airlines Flight 700 bound for London on January 11, 1977, be flown to Uganda. He was subdued by other passengers and jailed in London.

Zivotije Savic: Freedom for the Serbia Fatherland (SOPO) terrorist found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago. He had pleaded guilty. On June 20, 1979, his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293.

Suzanne Nicole “India” Savoie: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower.

Abdulrab Muhammad Muhammad Ali al-Sayfi: Yemeni believed by the FBI on February 11, 2002, to be planning a terrorist attack in the United States or on U.S. interests in Yemen.

Jill Scarborough: one of eight members of the Fourth Reich Skin Heads white supremacist group arrested on July 15, 1993, for planning to spark a race war by blowing up the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in south central Los Angeles and assassinating Rodney King. The group planned to sneak into the church as transients and then fire machineguns at the congregation, as well as place pipe bombs under pews. They also intended to kill influential black leaders across the nation. The group was the militant arm of a 50-member group associated with the White Aryan Resistance and was possibly linked with the Church of the Creator based in Niceville, Florida. The resident of Orange County faced charges of weapons violations, including possession of several machine guns and silencers. She faced a 20-year sentence. She was not detained but was ordered to appear in court on August 12, 1993.

Michael Scarpitti: alias Tre Arrow. Suspected Earth Liberation Front member whose extradition to the United States was ordered on July 7, 2005, by a Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, court to face charges in the 2001 firebombing of logging and cement trucks in Oregon.

Todd Michael Schwartz: also known as Tuvia Michale Schwartz. In January 1975, he set fire to a car belonging to John Artukovich, whose brother, Andrea, was a Croatian Nazi leader sentenced to death in absentia in Yugoslavia for the murder of 800,000 people. The arsonist said he was unable to get to the brother. He jumped a $10,000 bail in Los Angeles and arrived in Israel as a tourist in February 1976. He became an Israeli citizen in April 1976 and joined the Israeli armed forces. On June 16, 1976, members of the Israeli Knesset attempted to prevent his extradition to the United States.

Francisco Secundino Cordova: on October 27, 1997, U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico and arrested four Cuban exiles apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Margarita Island off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group’s executive board. The duo was summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. They all were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act and with illegal weapons possession and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted seven Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that in 1995 the seven and others had begun plotting to kill Castro. They had obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama had obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He then accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a hill-point stakeout that overlooked the airport. He recorded its location and an offshore spot into satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro.

On December 8, 1999, the jury found the five Cuban exiles not guilty of plotting to assassinate Castro. This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. The U.S. District Court jury deliberated for eight hours over two days before declaring not guilty on all charges Angel Alfonso, 59; Angel Hernandez Rojo, 62; Francisco Secundino Cordova, 51; Jose Rodriguez Sosa, 59; and Jose Antonio Llama, 67. Charges against another defendant had been dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Pete Seda: alias of Prouz Sedaghaty.

Prouz Sedaghaty: alias Pete Seda. On February 17, 2005, a federal grand jury in Eugene, Oregon, indicted the Ashland, Oregon-based al Haramain Islamic Foundation and two officers (Soliman Buthe and Sedaghaty) for participating in a scheme to misstate the destination of $150,000 from an Egyptian donor. The money was to go to Muslim fighters in Chechnya. The group's Internal Revenue Service form said it went toward purchasing a building for a Springfield, Missouri, mosque. The Oregon branch and its larger organization, which was shut down by Saudi Arabia, had been listed by the United States as terrorist groups. Seda was represented by attorney Lawrence Matasar. Some of the money-laundering events occurred in 2000; there is a five-year statute of limitations on some of the offenses. In February 2004, the U.S. government ordered banks to freeze the organization's accounts.

Malek Mohammed Seif: on October 25, 2001, Phoenix police arrested, Seif, 36, a Djibouti (or French) citizen who trained at two Arizona flight schools in the 1990s but failed instrument tests for his commuter pilot's license. He remained in Arizona trying to change his immigration status. He left the country for a new home in France before 9/11 but was asked to return to the United States voluntarily for questioning. He alleged that investigators said they would not arrest him. But an indictment was filed under seal the day before he returned, and he was detained by the FBI when he arrived in Arizona and was arrested shortly thereafter. He began a hunger strike in the Maricopa County jail on October 28 and by December 7 had lost 35 pounds. He dropped the hunger strike on December 10. He told the FBI that he had met 9/11 hijacker Hani Hanjour at a Tucson dinner party and had seen him at a local mosque. Seif faced 41 counts of using a false ID to obtain a Social Security number that he had used to apply for jobs, bank accounts, credit cards, and a driver's license. California prosecutors planned to file additional charges for lying on an asylum application. He was represented by attorney Thomas Hoidal. Seif was to undergo a psychiatric exam to determine whether he was competent to stand trial in January 2002.

Adel Senossi: Denver man arrested in conjunction with the July 20, 1988, arrest by the FBI of two Libyan intelligence officers on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya. He was charged with using the People's Committee for Libyan Students to acquire information about North.

Bob Serra: some reports named him as George E. Lopez. Hijacker of National Airlines Flight 28 bound for Miami on July 1, 1970, and diverted to Havana. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

Mohamed A. Shabata: former student at Weber State College who was arrested in Chicago on July 17, 1981, a few hours after the bullet-riddled body of Nibail A. Mansour, a Libyan student, was found stuffed in the trunk of his car, parked in front of the Ogden, Utah, apartment of Shabata. Shabata was carrying a large amount of cash and tickets to Tripoli, Libya, via London. He was convicted of second-degree murder on November 25, 1981, and was sentenced to five years to life on December 2, 1981.

James El Shafay: American citizen, age 19, living on Staten Island and one of two people who on August 27, 2004, were arrested by New York City police and the FBI for planning to blow up the New York subway, the Herald Square subway station (which runs underneath a Midtown shopping area a block from Madison Square Garden, scene of the Republican National Convention), three police stations on State Island, a prison, the Verrazano Narrows Bridge, and two other subway stops at 42nd Street and at Lexington Avenue. They had no explosives and apparently were not affiliated with any terrorist group. However, they had expressed anti-U.S. sentiments; one had made anti-Semitic comments. They had been under surveillance for a year. They were arraigned in a federal court on August 28 and charged with plotting to destroy the Herald Square subway station with explosives.

Qaisar Shaffi: one of 13 people, age 25, arrested on August 3, 2004, in the United Kingdom in connection with discovery of an al Qaeda cell. On August 18, 2004, he was one of eight British citizens charged with being al Qaeda operatives and plotting against financial targets in New York, New Jersey, and Washington, D.C. The eight were charged with conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to commit a public nuisance by using "radioactive materials, toxic gases, chemicals and/or explosives to cause disruption." Shaffi was charged with having part of a terrorist guidebook containing information on preparing chemicals and explosives.

On April 12, 2005, the United States announced it would seek extradition from the United Kingdom of three Britons, including Shaffi, for planning to blow up financial buildings in Washington, D.C., New York, and New Jersey. On June 15, 2007, a British judge convicted Shaffi of conspiracy to murder and sentenced him to 15 years. (See also Dhire Barot.)

Syed Maaz Shah: former Pakistani engineering student, age 20, at the University of Texas at Dallas who on May 24, 2007, was convicted by a federal court in Houston of illegally firing an assault rifle during two camping trips in 2006. The charges were connected to paramilitary training that prepared Muslim men to fight American troops overseas. Federal law prohibits non-immigrants with student visas from possessing firearms or ammunition.

Syed Mustajab Shah: one of three people arrested by Hong Kong authorities while attempting to buy four Stinger missiles from undercover FBI agents during a September 20, 2002, meeting in a Hong Kong hotel. Shah, age 54, from Peshawar, Pakistan, was extradited to the United States. On March 8, 2003, the trio pleaded guilty in a San Diego court. (See also Muhammed Abid Afridi.)

Tarik Ibn Osman Shah: New York martial arts expert and jazz musician, age 42, who was arrested on May 28, 2005. Authorities also arrested Rafiq Abdus Sabir, 50, a Boca Raton, Florida, physician. The two U.S. citizens had conspired to treat and train al Qaeda terrorists, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York. Sabir had agreed to treat jihadis in Saudi Arabia. Shah had agreed to train them in hand-to-hand combat. Prosecutors mentioned a sting operation from 2003 to 2005 in which the duo took an oath pledging loyalty to al Qaeda. They also pledged allegiance to al Qaeda at a

May 20 meeting in the Bronx. They faced 15 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

In the sting operation, Shah and an FBI informant went to a Long Island warehouse—which was videotaped by the FBI—to determine whether it could be used to train jihadis in using swords and machetes. He also wanted to open a machine shop to fabricate weapons. In January 2004, the informant told Shah he was going to take him to Plattsburgh, New York, to introduce him to a Middle Eastern recruiter (who was an FBI agent). She also wanted to start a Muslim-only martial arts school and wanted training in chemicals, explosives, firearms, AK-47s, and hand grenades. Shah also mentioned martyrdom.

The duo shared an address on Adam Clayton Powell Jr. Boulevard in Harlem. In 1993, Shah opened the Expansion of Knowledge Center in Harlem. He listed the address as his home in the late 1980s and early 1990s. They were expelled from a Bronx mosque where Sabir had served as an assistant imam. Sabir had taken Shah and another person to the mosque to teach urban warfare.

Arraignment took place on May 31. Sabir appeared in Fort Pierce, Florida, where he was being held without bail. He had not hired an attorney. Shah appeared in Manhattan; a preliminary hearing was set for June. Shah's attorney is Anthony Ricco. They were both charged with one count of conspiring to provide material support to a terrorist organization.

The duo pleaded not guilty at their June 28 arraignment in New York.

On August 4, federal authorities charged U.S. citizen Mahmud Faruq Brent, 30, alias Mahmud Al Mutazzim, a Baltimore County resident, with conspiracy to support a terrorist organization. The FBI recorded a conversation in which he mentioned attending a Lashkar-e-Taiba terrorist training camp in Pakistan. He had once worked as a paramedic in Silver Spring, Maryland, and as a Washington, D.C., cabdriver. He was arrested in Newark on August 4 and was charged the same day in Manhattan federal court. He had spoken with Shah, who told authorities that he had trained Brent in martial arts and that Brent was a jihadi. Brent was also linked to Seifullah Chapman, a member of the Virginia jihad network who had been sentenced to 65 years in prison for conspiring to support Lashkar-e-Taiba and for taking part in paramilitary training. Brent had filed a letter from Chapman written in support of an application for an expedited passport. Brent was licensed as a taxi and ambulance driver, employed by LifeStar Response Corporation. He was represented by attorneys Donald Yannella and Hassen Ibn Abdellah. On April 2, 2007, during a hearing in a Manhattan federal court, Brent pleaded guilty to conspiring to aid Lashkar-e-Taiba by attending one of its Pakistan training camps. He had been scheduled to go on trial on April 24. Sentencing was set for July 10, 2007. He faced a maximum 15-year sentence because of the plea bargain; he would have faced 20 years if tried.

On February 17, 2006, the trio pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to aid terrorist groups in the Middle East between 2001 and 2005.

On November 7, 2007, Tarik Shah was sentenced to 15 years in prison by a federal judge who said it was irrelevant that no one from al Qaeda was involved in the case.

Abdul Shaheed: also known as Marvin Sadler. Held on $50,000 bond as one of seven Hanafi Muslims who on March 9, 1977, took over B'nai B'rith national headquarters in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. On September 6, 1977, he was convicted of eight counts of kidnapping and sentenced to 36 to 108 years. The D.C. Court of Appeals upheld the conviction in 1979, saying the government's evidence was overwhelming. The U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction in 1980.

Yasser Shahin: Egyptian arrested in Evansville, Indiana, and later released. He was initially held as a possible grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Rasul Ali Shakar: alias Russell Chappelle. Detroit bus driver who attempted to hijack Republic

Airlines Flight 275 bound for Chicago. He demanded to talk to Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson. A crew member subdued him, and he was arrested by federal agents.

Mutulu Shakur: indicted by a Manhattan federal grand jury on November 18, 1982, for plotting a dozen crimes, including armored car holdups, attempted robberies, threats to murder federal informants, the 1979 prison escape of Joanne Chesimard, and the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck. He was believed to be the mastermind of the Brink's heist.

Dr. Ramadan Abdullah Mohammad Shallah: aliases Rashad, Mohamad el-Fatih, Mahmoud, Radwan, al-Shaer, Abu Abdullah, Ramadan Abdullah. Founder and secretary general of Palestinian Islamic Jihad (PIJ), a terrorist front with headquarters in Damascus. The Western-educated Gazan was a professor of political science and economics. He was elected secretary general of the organization in 1995, two days after the assassination in Malta of Fathi Shaqaqi, the group's leader. He had been employed by the now-defunct World and Islam Studies Enterprise, based in Tampa, Florida. He is wanted for conspiracy to conduct the affairs of the PIJ through a pattern of racketeering activities such as bombings, murder, extortion, and money laundering. He was listed as a "specially designated terrorist" under U.S. law on November 27, 1995, and was indicted on 53 charges in the U.S. District Court, Middle District of Florida, in 2003. He was also named in the February 20, 2003, indictment of his friend, Sami Amin al-Arian, in Tampa, Florida, for conspiracy to commit murder via suicide attacks in Israel and the Palestinian territories, operating a criminal racketeering enterprise since 1984 that supports the PIJ terrorist organization, conspiracy to kill and maim people abroad, conspiracy to provide material support to the group, extortion, visa fraud, perjury, money laundering, and other charges. The United States added him to its Most Wanted Terrorists List on February 28, 2006. On February 12, 2007, the U.S. Rewards for Justice offered $5 million for the arrest of Shallah, then 49. The FBI said he had planned and conducted numerous bombings, murders, extortions, and acts of racketeering. The Palestinian carries an Egyptian passport. He was born on January 1, 1958. He is six feet one inch tall and weighs 225 pounds.

Ghassan Abdulah al-Sharbi: Saudi held at Guantánamo Bay who was charged on May 30, 2008, by the Pentagon with having attended al Qaeda training camps and studied bomb making. He faced a life sentence.

Derrick Shareef: arrested on December 6, 2006, in Rockford, Illinois, 90 miles west of Chicago, after meeting with an undercover federal agent in a store parking lot and trading stereo speakers for four hand grenades, a 9-mm pistol, and ammunition. The weapons were inoperative. Shareef, age 22, was charged on December 8 with planning to set off the grenades in trash bins in Rockford's CherryVale Mall as part of a "violent jihad" against U.S. targets; the specific charges were attempting to damage or destroy a building by fire or explosion and attempting to use a weapon of mass destruction. He had made a martyrdom videotape in which he observed that "the time for jihad is now" and that he was "ready to give [his] life." Authorities said he appeared to be acting alone. The FBI had been tipped off about him in September, when Shareef talked about his interest in violent jihad. He initially thought about attacking government buildings, looking at a city hall and courthouses—he was interested in "smoking a judge"—and also considered synagogues.

The Islamic convert on November 28, 2007, pleaded guilty and faced 30 years to life when sentencing was to take place on March 14, 2007.

The informant was a former gang member with a felony criminal record who was supporting three wives and nine children. The informant also helped the FBI in the case of Hassan Abujihaad, a former Navy sailor charged with tipping terrorists to the location of Navy ships and ways to attack them. Abujihaad and Shareef also had examined for possible attack a military base in San Diego and a recruiting station in Phoenix. Shareef had met Abujihaad in 2003 at a mosque in Phoenix and lived with him for seven months in 2003–2004. Abujihaad's trial was scheduled for February 2008.

Michael Shanley: Manhattan resident who on January 21, 1988, while waving a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) flag, screamed “Murderers!” and rushed at the Duchess of York, the former Sarah Ferguson, in front of her midtown Manhattan hotel. He was held without bail at the federal Metropolitan Correctional Center and charged with assault and attempt to assault with a deadly weapon “a foreign official, official guest, and internationally protected person” and assault of State Department security officers. Conviction would carry a 20-year prison sentence and $500,000 fine. His lawyer said Shanley was an unemployed waiter who attended the College for Human Services but was not registered for the current semester.

Rasmi al Shannaq: Jordanian, age 27, arrested by the FBI, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the State Department on June 25, 2002, in Baltimore for overstaying his visa. He had lived with American Airlines Flight 77 9/11 Pentagon hijackers Nawaf Alhazmi and Hani Hanjour for two months in the summer of 2001 at a northern Virginia apartment. On July 9, 2002, authorities detained 31 people, including Shannaq, who had entered the United States using phony visas that they had purchased for $10,000 each from a Jordanian employee of the U.S. Embassy in Qatar in 2000 and 2001.

Harry Shapiro: Jewish resident of Jacksonville, Florida, who worked as a gas station cashier. He was charged on February 25 with placing a destructive device and making a bomb threat. On February 13, 1997, a bomb threat was phoned in before the address of former Israeli prime minister Shimon Peres to an audience at the Jacksonville, Florida, Jewish Center. On February 22, three children tried to open a pipe bomb they found in a hallway behind the temple's sanctuary. An adult grabbed the device and turned it over to police. Shapiro, a former kosher butcher, was taken to the hospital because he was having “some physical or emotional difficulty,” according to police.

Bashir Ali Nasser Al-Sharari: born in Yemen in 1970, the Yemeni was believed by the FBI on February 11, 2002, to be planning a terrorist attack in the United States or on U.S. interests in Yemen.

Abu Bakr Zaid Sharrieff: alias Al Fletcher Hunter. Named on July 6, 1981, as an unindicted co-conspirator in the July 22, 1980, assassination of Ali Akbar Tabatabai, former press attaché of the Shah's Iranian Embassy in the United States.

Mujahid Shaykh: alias of Osama bin Laden.

Allan Creighton Sheffield: hijacked National Airlines Flight 44 bound for Miami on January 31, 1969, and diverted it to Havana. On October 8, 1976, Sweden returned him to the United States to be charged with air piracy.

Michael Shehadeh: on September 22, 2003, the Bush administration invoked the Patriot Act in the 16-year effort to deport him and Khader Hamide, two Palestinians who allegedly distributed magazines and raised funds in California for Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. Earlier court rulings had deemed the deportation unconstitutional because the duo was not involved in terrorist activity. In the earlier cases, they were part of the LA Eight charged with violations of the McCarran-Walter Act against membership in communist organizations. On January 30, 2007, Immigration Judge Bruce J. Einhorn dismissed a 20-year effort by the U.S. government to deport the two Palestinians after the FBI and Department of Homeland Security failed to turn over any potentially exculpatory information per orders in 1986, 1993, 1994, and 2005. They were represented by David Cole of the Center for Constitutional Rights, Marc Van Der Hout of the National Lawyers Guild, and Ahilan Arulanantham of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Marwan Al-Shehhi: one of the al Qaeda hijackers, age 23, of the United Arab Emirates, who on September 11, 2001, took over United Airlines Flight 175, a B767 flying from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport with 65 people, including 7 flight attendants and 2 pilots. The plane was diverted across New Jersey and pulled sharply right, and it just missed crashing into two other airliners as it descended toward Manhattan. They crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center South Tower at 9:05 A.M. Al-Shehhi resided in a Hamburg apartment with Muhammad Atta and was enrolled in the local Technical University.

Fahad Shehri: arrested on March 18, 1997, by Canadian immigration officials. The Saudi had arrived in Canada in December 1996 and claimed refugee status. He said he was wanted for questioning in Saudi Arabia for the June 25, 1996, truck bombing of the U.S. military's compound at Khobar Towers near Dhahran that killed 19 U.S. airmen and wounded 547 others. He claimed he feared for his life. The United States and Riyadh said he was not a suspect. The Canadian government charged him with being a terrorist on March 26, 1997. Some reports indicated that he had bought weapons for Central Asian Muslim fighters. He was held in the Ottawa Detention Center.

Osman el-Sheikh: one of three Sudanese roommates of Fares Khalafalla, who was one of eight foreign Islamists arrested on June 24, 1993, by the FBI for bombing and assassination plans in

New York. El-Sheikh was arrested and held on a $75,000 bond because the Immigration and Naturalization Service said that "the circumstances of their arrests indicate they may pose a threat to society." His tourist visa had expired. He initially was not charged in the plot. (See also Amir Zaid Abdelghani.)

Victoria Sheppard: Maryland resident sentenced to 10 to 17 years in prison on May 25, 1978, on charges of attempted murder. The Ananda Margi was ordered to pay $13,333 to Jyoti Sarup Vaid, personal secretary to the Indian Embassy charge d'affaires, whom she had stabbed on February 7, 1978, in the Philippines.

Scott Shero: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 27, Shero, age 30, changed his not guilty plea to guilty on one count each of conspiring to illegally make and possess unregistered destructive devices. Shero was sentenced to 24 to 30 months in jail. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Milad Shibani: one of four accomplices of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. The Arlington, Virginia, resident was the chair of the McLean, Virginia-based People's Committee for Libyan Students. U.S. Magistrate Leonie Brinkema set bond between $25,000 and $50,000. The group apparently was planning revenge against U.S. officials believed to have planned the April 1986 air raid against Libya in retaliation for Libyan involvement in several terrorist attacks. On July 22, he faced charges of violating his Arlington Carlyle House cooperatives' adults-only policy for living with his spouse and children and faced eviction. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya.

Omar Shishani: arrested on July 17, 2002, by U.S. Customs agents when they discovered that the Jordanian-born man, age 47, was carrying $12 million in false cashiers' checks as he arrived at Detroit Metropolitan Airport from Indonesia. He appeared on a watch list of people trained in Afghanistan by al Qaeda; his name had turned up in captured documents in Afghanistan. Shishani was carrying a U.S. passport and claimed to be a naturalized citizen. Investigators searching his bags found nine cashier's checks—two for $5 million each, two for $500,000 each, and five for $200,000 each. Six checks were posted for June, one for September 2002. The faked checks were supposedly issued by the Pomona, California, branch of West America bank (which does not have a Pomona branch). The checks had the words "cashier's check" on them; the bank uses the term "official check."

On July 23, a federal grand jury indicted Shishani on charges of possession of counterfeit security and smuggling merchandise into the United States. On July 24, U.S. District Court Magistrate Judge Donald A. Scheer ordered Shishani held without bond after prosecutors said he had acknowledged that Baharuddin Masse, who was listed on six of the checks, could be part of al Qaeda and that he had made "pro al Qaeda statements" and had named his daughter "al Qaeda." Shishani was carrying a photocopy of Masse's passport.

Shishani had previously lived in San Francisco and Napa, California. He claimed to be a salesman who had earned no commissions that year. He said his wife was a resident alien from Japan who worked for Northwest Airlines. His family is from Chechnya. One source said he had served with the Jordanian army. He had claimed to come from a powerful Jordanian family with close relations to the king and the military. He claimed that he had served in the Jordanian intelligence service from 1974 to 1976 and that his brother was commander of the Jordanian Special Forces. He had lived in the United States since 1979 and became a U.S. citizen in 1989, according to his lawyer. His attorney said he was merely a broker, carrying the checks for a client. He had no apparent source of income.

Members of the U.S. Joint Terrorism Task Force in Detroit searched Shishani's Dearborn, Michigan, apartment the next day. Authorities found several financial documents, including a December 2000 net-worth statement indicating $38.5 million in assets. His lawyer said he did not even own his home; authorities said the document could be fakes to be used in a scam.

A U.S. Secret Service agent was later suspended for writing an anti-Islam epithet on a Muslim prayer calendar in Shishani's home.

Mohamad Ibrahim Shnewer: U.S. citizen born in Jordan, age 22, living in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, and working as a taxi driver in Philadelphia. Shnewer was one of six men arrested on May 27, 2007, by the FBI for planning an attack on Fort Dix to kill 100 soldiers with assault rifles and grenades. The FBI described the cell as a leaderless homegrown group without apparent ties to al Qaeda, although other reports claimed Shnewer was the de facto leader. He was the brother-in-law of the Duka brothers, also arrested. He was represented by attorney Rocco Cipparone. The six were ordered held without bail on May 11; only Shnewer requested bail. He was charged with conspiring to kill military personnel, which carries a life sentence. (See also Agron Abdullahu.)

Mohamed Shorbagi: imam, age 42, of a northern Georgia mosque who pleaded guilty in federal court in Rome, Georgia, on October 13, 2006, to providing material support to Hamas. Prosecutors said that between 1997 and 2001, Shorbagi provided financial support to Hamas via the Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development and conspired with others to provide material support to the group. Shorbagi agreed to a maximum of 15 years in prison. On February 27, 2007, he was sentenced to 7-plus years in prison. After 9/11 he had reached out to Christian and Jewish groups.

Adnan G. El Shukrijumah: variant Adnan G. el Shukri Jumah; aliases Abu Arif, Ja'far al-Tayar, Jaffar al-Tayyar, Jafar Tayar, Jaafar al-Tayyar. Saudi born on August 4, 1975, in Medina, Saudi Arabia, and wanted in connection with possible terrorist threats against the United States. He carries a Guyanese passport but is also believed to carry Saudi, Canadian, and Trinidadian passports. He is circa five feet four inches tall and weighs 132 pounds. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his capture. On March 25, 2003, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia issued a material witness warrant for his arrest. He was believed possibly involved with al Qaeda terrorist activities.

A law enforcement spokesperson said in March 2003 that he could be an organizer similar to Mohammad Atta, the 9/11 orchestrator. El Shukrijumah's name came up often in interrogations of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, the operations chief of al Qaeda. He was believed to have a connection to Jose Padilla, who was arrested in May 2002 on suspicion of planning to set off a radiological bomb in the United States. The alias was also linked to the Oklahoma flight school where Zacarias Moussaoui studied aviation. The suspect could be traveling on passports from Guyana, Trinidad, Canada, or Saudi Arabia. He last entered the United States before 9/11 and left later in 2001. Some authorities believed he was in Morocco or had reentered the United States illegally.

The family had moved to Miramar, north of Miami, Florida, in 1995. His father is a prominent Muslim leader in that suburb and leads a prayer center, Masjid al Hijrah, next door to his home, which was searched by FBI agents. One week after the worldwide terror alert, El Shukrijumah's father was asked to leave his position at the mosque. El Shukrijumah's father had earlier been one of Clement Rodney Hampton-el's character witnesses. Hampton-el was sentenced in 1996 to 35 years in connection with the 1993 World Trade Center bombing. He was a member of El Shukrijumah's father's mosque in New York.

One of the suspect's addresses was a house in Pembroke Pines, Florida, where Padilla attended a mosque. The FBI said he had taken the battle name Ja'far al-Tayar (Ja'far the Pilot), had used the alias Abu Arif, and had conferred with Ramzi Binalshibh, a 9/11 coordinator; field commander Abu Zubayda; and Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, al Qaeda operations chief. He attended an al Qaeda explosives training camp in 2000, according to investigators.

The FBI rescinded a February alert issued against Mohammed Sher Mohammed Khan, an alias of El Shukrijumah.

On March 25, 2003, the FBI's Baltimore office said it wanted to question a Pakistani couple, Aafia Siddiqui, age 31, and her husband, Mohammed Khan, age 33, about possible terrorist activities and their ties to El Shukrijumah. She resided in the Boston area and had visited Gaithersburg, Maryland, in late December or January. She has a doctorate in neurological science and has studied at MIT and Brandeis University, as well as in Houston, Texas. She listed her home as in Karachi. At MIT, she wrote a paper on how to set up a Muslim student organization. The wife and husband are officers of the Institute of Islamic Research and Teaching, Inc., of Roxbury, Massachusetts.

El Shukrijumah had also been suspected in a plot by Imran Mandhai, who had been sentenced to 11 years after pleading guilty to conspiracy on charges of planning a "jihad cell" of 30 men that would target electrical substations, an armory, Jewish institutions, and Mount Rushmore. An FBI informant bugged Mandhai, who was heard naming El Shukrijumah as an accomplice. In spring 2001, El Shukrijumah refused to be an FBI informant. He left the country in May 2001.

On September 5, 2003, the FBI put out a worldwide alert for Shukrijumah, Abderraouf

Jdey, Zubayr Al-Rimi, and Karim El Mejjati, believed to be engaged in planning for terrorist attacks, according to information provided by Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, al Qaeda's operations chief. On May 25, 2004, the FBI put out another alert for him, saying that al Qaeda was believed to be planning a major attack for the summer.

Frank M. Sibley Jr.: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 877 bound for San Francisco on August 18, 1972. Armed with a rifle, he demanded $2 million, 15 pounds of gold, and a flight to Vancouver. The money and gold were paid, but he was shot and captured by the FBI in Seattle. He was convicted of aircraft piracy on October 18, 1972, and on February 28, 1973, was sentenced to 30 years.

Aafia Siddiqui: suspected senior al Qaeda operative wanted for questioning by the FBI regarding terrorism. She claims to have been born in Pakistan on March 2, 1972, and is considered armed and dangerous. Siddiqui is married to Mohammed Khan, 33 as of 2009. She studied at Brandeis. The Pakistani American also earned a doctorate in neuroscience at MIT and worked in the United States before disappearing in Pakistan in 2003. She is five feet four inches tall and weighs 110 pounds. The FBI issued a request on May 25, 2004, for the public's help in finding her, citing reports that al Qaeda had operatives in the United States planning to conduct a major attack during the summer.

Sheldon Siegel: convicted of conspiracy in the Jewish Defense League (JDL) bombing on April 22, 1971, of the New York City offices of AMTORG, the Soviet Trading Corporation. On September 26, 1972, he pleaded guilty in a New York federal court to involvement in two anti-Soviet bombings. A faulty timing device had prevented a JDL bomb from exploding at the Soviet Union's estate in Glen Cove, New York, on June 12, 1971.

A., D., and M. Silva Mahecha: three of four hijackers of an Avianca DC3 flying from Yopal to Sogamoso en Boyaca, Colombia, on May 21, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Frank Silva Roque: convicted of shooting to death an Indian immigrant, Balbir Singh Sodhi, on September 15, 2001. The victim was a Mesa, Arizona, gas station owner. On August 14, 2006, the Arizona Supreme Court unanimously overturned the death sentence of Silva. The court instead gave him life in prison without parole, citing his low IQ and expert testimony that he was either insane or suffering mental disorders when he pulled the trigger.

Joao Leonardo da Silva Rocha: São Paulo lawyer whose release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group turned up later in Cuba.

Zvonko Simac: one of two Croatian nationalists killed on May 23, 1979, when a pipe bomb they were transporting accidentally exploded in their pickup truck in San Pedro, Los Angeles, United States.

Francis Simard: captured on December 28, 1970, by Canadian authorities with Jacques and Paul Rose, the latter being one of the Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) kidnappers of Pierre Laporte on October 10, 1970. They surrendered at a St. Luc farmhouse, 30 miles from the U.S. border. Simard admitted that Laporte had cut himself on a broken window while trying to escape, and "we decided to strangle him with the [religious] chain he had been wearing since his kidnapping." On May 20, 1971, he was convicted of noncapital murder and received a mandatory life sentence.

Annand Singh: one of two Sikh extremists who remained at large after five of their colleagues were arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 12–15, 1985, visit to the United States. Four of them were also planning to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian. They were also planning to blow up a nuclear plant in India and destroy other infrastructure. On February 26, 1986, a judicial inquiry in New Delhi concluded that Singh was involved in planting a suitcase bomb that exploded on June 23, 1985, on Air India Flight 182, a B747 en route from Toronto to Bombay with intermediate stops in Montreal, London, and New Delhi, killing 329 people. He and his brother Lal Singh had booked tickets on the flight and checked luggage but did not board. The report also implicated the brothers in an explosion at the Tokyo airport. On June 20, 1985, they booked tickets on the Canadian Pacific Airlines Flight 003 to Tokyo. They were scheduled to transfer to air India Flight 301, the flight for which the suitcase bomb had been intended. The bomb exploded after the suitcase was unloaded at Tokyo's Narita International Airport, killing two baggage handlers and injuring four other airport employees. The Singh brothers had attended a mercenary training camp in Birmingham, Alabama, in early 1985.

Lal Singh: one of two Sikh extremists who remained at large after five Indian Sikh extremists were arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 12–15, 1985, visit to the United States. Four of them were also planning to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian. They were also planning to blow up a nuclear plant in India and destroy other infrastructure. On February 26, 1986, a judicial inquiry in New Delhi concluded that Singh was involved in planting a suitcase bomb that exploded on June 23, 1985, on Air India Flight 182, a B747 en route from Toronto to Bombay with intermediate stops in Montreal, London, and New Delhi, killing 329 people. He and his brother Annand Singh had booked tickets on the flight and checked luggage but did not board. The report also implicated the brothers in an explosion at the Tokyo airport. On June 20, 1985, they booked tickets on the Canadian Pacific Airlines Flight 003 to Tokyo. They were scheduled to transfer to air India Flight 301, the flight for which the suitcase bomb had been intended. The bomb exploded after the suitcase was unloaded at Tokyo's Narita International Airport, killing two baggage handlers and injuring four other airport employees. The Singh brothers had attended a mercenary training camp in Birmingham, Alabama, in early 1985.

Sukhvinder Singh: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 12–15, 1985, visit to the United States. Four of them were also planning to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian. They were also planning to blow up a nuclear plant in India and destroy other infrastructure. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges.

Virender Singh: one of five Indian Sikh extremists arrested by the FBI in May 1985 for plotting to assassinate Indian prime minister Rajiv Gandhi during his June 12–15, 1985, visit to the United States. Four of them were also planning to assassinate Bhajan Lal, an Indian. They were also planning to blow up a nuclear plant in India and destroy other infrastructure. On May 16, 1985, the five Sikhs pleaded not guilty in a New Orleans court to the assassination charges.

Singleton: alias of George Brown.

Shahawar Matin Siraj: Pakistani immigrant and Queens resident, age 21, who was one of two people arrested on August 27, 2004, by New York City police and the FBI for planning to blow up the New York subway, the Herald Square subway station (which runs underneath a Midtown shopping area a block from Madison Square Garden, scene of the Republican National Convention), three police stations on State Island, a prison, the Verrazano Narrows Bridge, and two other subway stops at 42nd Street and at Lexington Avenue. They had no explosives and apparently were not affiliated with any terrorist group. However, they had expressed anti-U.S. sentiments; one had made anti-Semitic comments. They had been under surveillance for a year. They were arraigned in a federal court on August 28 and charged with plotting to destroy the Herald Square subway station with explosives.

On April 24, 2006, the New York trial began of Siraj, who allegedly had plotted the bombing to teach America "a good lesson" regarding the war in Iraq and the Abu Ghraib prison scandal. He and co-conspirator James Elshafay drew diagrams of the subway station before they were arrested in 2004. Siraj was represented by attorney Martin Stolar, who said his client had been entrapped by an NYPD informant. The attorney said Siraj had told Elshafay and the informer that before he could go forward, "I have to check with my mother." Siraj was convicted on May 24 after the jury had deliberated for two days. On January 8, 2007, Siraj was sentenced to 30 years. Two days later, Immigrations and Customs Enforcement detained his parents and sister at the family home in Jackson Heights, Queens. The family had lived in the United States since 1999 and had been seeking asylum since 2003.

Nikola Sivovic: one of two members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), an anticomunist Serbian émigré group, arrested by Chicago police on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges.

Mohamedou Ould Slahi: Mauritanian citizen arrested by the Bureau of Mauritanian Security on January 26, 2000, after leaving Senegal, in conjunction with the Algerian terrorist bomb plot against the United States. He reportedly is a brother-in-law of a lieutenant of Osama bin Laden, Khaled Shanquiti (alias The Mauritanian), who was involved in the bombing of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Slahi had been living in Canada, which he left after the Canadian investigation of him started. He was often seen at the Assunna Mosque in Montreal. Slahi had been detained for a few hours at the Dakar, Senegal, airport after arriving from Paris. After being questioned, he was permitted to travel to Nouakchott, Mauritania. Senegal appeared unwilling to hold him without specific charges. His name was on an Interpol international watch list. Slahi had constant communications with a construction company in Khartoum, Sudan, that was owned by bin Laden and used as a front for al Qaeda. Slahi had recently lived in Germany but had arrived in Canada the previous fall. He worked closely with Mokhtar Haouari, an Algerian charged with being involved in the logistics of the plot. The United States was preparing an extradition request. Authorities were not sure whether he was the mastermind or a messenger in the plot. Mauritania freed Slahi on February 20, 2000. FBI agents had been permitted to submit questions during his incarceration and interrogation. He did not admit a role in the bomb plot.

On September 29, 2000, Mauritanian police arrested the former student of electrical engineering at Gerhard-Mercator University in Duisburg, Germany. He had lived in Germany from the mid-1990s to September 1999, during which time he visited bin Laden camps in Afghanistan twice. In 1999, Ould Slahi moved to Canada, where he visited a Montreal mosque frequented by Islamic radicals plotting the millennium attacks in the United States. They included Ahmed Ressam. Ould Slahi might have activated the Canadian cell.

He is related through marriage to bin Laden associate Mahfouz Ould Walid, also known as Abu Hafs, whose assets were ordered frozen by President Bush. Investigators believed Ould Slahi could have been directly involved in the 9/11 suicide hijacking plot.

He was rearrested in Nouakchott, Mauritania, in November 2001 on suspicion of involvement with al Qaeda. The Washington Post said that he was held for eight months in Jordan and claimed that as of December 2007, he was free in Mauritania.

John W. Slatter: alleged Project 7 militia member, age 53, who pleaded guilty with two others on May 8, 2004, to federal firearms charges and plotting to kill Montana public officials. The trio from the Kalispell, Montana, area had amassed machine guns, 30,000 rounds of ammunition, explosives, night-vision equipment, and body armor.

Charles E. Smith: entered a parked empty American Airlines B707 at Buffalo's airport on July 5, 1972, and demanded to be flown out of the United States. He had just stabbed his wife and a friend before arriving at the airport and held his daughter at knifepoint for three hours before surrendering. He was convicted of custodial interference, a state kidnapping statute, on June 6, 1973, and was sentenced to five years probation on July 18, 1973.

Ernest E. Smith: on March 30, 1974, armed with a shotgun and holding two hostages, he forced his way on board a parked National Airlines B727 at Sarasota, Florida. An airline maintenance man wrestled the shotgun away from him. The hijacker fled but was arrested by police four hours later. On September 16, 1974, he was sentenced on state charges of kidnapping to 15 years; he was also convicted of two counts of aggravated assault and sentenced to two concurrent terms of 5 years.

George W. Smith: also known as Abdul Adam.

Kelvin E. Smith: employee, age 42, of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in New Bloomfield, Pennsylvania. On February 27, 1996, a federal court in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, issued a four-count indictment against him for lying to the FBI about the paramilitary training he had given to 10 terrorists during four weekends between January 8 and February 7, 1993. The terrorists were involved with those who plotted the 1993 World Trade Center bombing. He also hid his purchase of semiautomatic handguns and rifles and ammunition for the terrorists. Five of the individuals mentioned were convicted in 1995 of the June 1993 plot to assassinate Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak and to bomb the Lincoln and Holland Tunnels, the George Washington Bridge, and the UN building. He said he thought they were training to be mercenaries to help Bosnian Muslims. He pleaded guilty on September 29, 1998, to lying to the FBI and hiding evidence by dumping the rifles into the Delaware River. The guns were never found. Sentencing was set for January 18, 1999.

Kenneth L. Smith: would-be hijacker of Alaskan Flight AS-1861 bound for Annette Island, Alaska, on April 17, 1972. He demanded to be flown to Cairo, Egypt. He was captured and committed to a mental institution on May 4, 1972. He was released on July 10, 1973.

Dr. Richard Smith: alias of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf.

Samuel Smith: alias Mtajori Sandiata. Weather Underground member killed by police officer in a car chase and shootout three days after the October 20, 1981, Brink's truck holdup.

William R. Smith: alias of Tracy Brown.

Anthony Smyth: Smyth, age 43, was sentenced on September 27, 2000, in Fort Lauderdale to three years for buying and shipping weapons in a Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) gun-running operation. The weapons in the 1999 plot were to be disguised as toys, VCRs, and computers going from Florida to Northern Ireland via the U.S. mail.

Jimmy Smyth: Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) bomber who was one of 38 inmates who escaped from the Maze Prison outside Belfast. He was serving a 20-year sentence for the attempted murder of an off-duty Northern Ireland prison guard in 1983. In 1992, he was arrested in San Francisco and fought U.K. demands for his extradition. On August 18, 1996, he was extradited from San Francisco to Belfast to serve the rest of his 15-year term in Maghaberry Jail near Lisburn.

Abu Solaiman: on May 29, 2002, the United States announced a $5 million reward for his capture. He was believed involved in the May 27, 2001, Abu Sayyaf kidnapping of three Americans in the Philippines.

Franklin M. Solesby: hijacker of a chartered Royal American Flyers Cessna 210 bound for Houston on May 13, 1976. His .22 caliber pistol jammed. A pilot overpowered him, and he was taken into custody. Prosecution was declined on June 7, 1976.

Kathleen Soliah: alias Sara Jane Olson. Member of the Symbionese Liberation Army involved in the September 18, 1975, kidnapping of Patricia Hearst. On June 15, 1999, she was arrested near her home in St. Paul, Minnesota. She had married a physician, and she had three children, was involved in local Democratic politics, and acted in community theater. She was charged with planting pipe bombs under two Los Angeles Police Department cars in 1975. On October 31, 2001, she pleaded guilty but told reporters that she was innocent and could not get a fair trial after the 9/11 attacks. On January 18, 2002, she was sentenced to 20 years. After a number of appeals, on April 14, 2007, a California appeals court ruled that Soliah had to serve 14 years for trying to bomb police cars.

Her friends encouraged her to write a cookbook called Serving Time: America's Most Wanted Recipes.

On March 17, 2008, Soliah, age 61, was paroled, a move denounced by the Los Angeles Police Protective League. She was arrested again on March 22 when corrections officials said that in 2004 they had miscalculated her eligibility for release by a year. Soliah was stopped at Los Angeles International Airport and rearrested the next day. She was not eligible for release until March 17, 2009. She was represented by attorney Shawn Chapman Holley.

Stephen Soliah: Symbionese Liberation Army member captured in 1975.

Abdel Halim Mohammad Atim Soliman: one of two Egyptians identified by the FBI as having ties to Hamas and the Islamic group that helped plan the February 26, 1993, World Trade Center (WTC) bombing. His fingerprints were found on manuals and magazines confiscated from WTC convict Ajaj when he was arrested at JFK Airport on September 2, 1992. They had been arrested in Denmark in April 1994 on suspicion of complicity in various arsons, attempted bombings, and plotting to disrupt a UN conference in Copenhagen but were released without charge.

Artur Solomonyan: Armenian living in New York and Los Angeles who was arrested in Manhattan on March 14, 2005, after finalizing plans to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices, and 13 others were charged with weapons trafficking. He faced 30 years in prison.

D. Romulo de Souza: hijacker of a Brazilian Varig B707 flying from Santiago, Chile, to London, United Kingdom, via Buenos Aires on March 12, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Nejelko Sovulj: one of four Croatian members of Otpor (Serbian for “resistance”) arrested on March 29, 1980, in New York for plotting to bomb a Yugoslavian Independence Day celebration when more than 100 foreign diplomats would be on hand. Police found 14 sticks of dynamite, a machine gun, 2 military rifles, and several hand grenades in a hideout. On May 12, 1981, he was sentenced to 20 to 35 years for the plot, for planning to bomb a Bronx travel agency, and for planning to assassinate a political opponent.

Troy Spain: construction worker, age 29, who on November 2, 1996, was named in U.S. District Court in Georgia as being one of three members of the 112th Volunteer Battalion of the Militia at Large of the Republic of Georgia near Macon, Georgia. They were planning to make dozens of pipe bombs over the weekend in preparation for a “war” against the UN and the New World Order. After deliberating for 23 hours, a federal jury announced on November 6, 1996, that it had found him guilty on two of the five counts of conspiracy to use a destructive weapon in a violent crime and possession of illegal explosives. He was acquitted of a second conspiracy count. Observers believed he would receive the maximum 17- to 22-year sentence.

Stanley H. Speck: would-be hijacker of Pacific Southwest Flight 942 bound for San Diego on April 9, 1972. He demanded $500,000, four parachutes, and a flight to Miami. He was overpowered by FBI agents. He was charged with hijacking but was committed to a state mental institution on December 19, 1972. He was discharged on June 14, 1973.

David Spencer: one of two Canadians convicted in the kidnapping of Brazilian supermarket mogul Abilio Diniz, who was freed in 1989 after police captured 10 suspects with links to the Chilean and Argentinian Revolutionary Left Movements (MIR). They were suspected of having ties with the Popular Revolutionary Forces. On November 20, 1998, Brazilian authorities placed him and Christine Lamont on a Canadian airliner. They were to be eligible to apply for parole on December 28, 1998.

Christiaan Dewet Spies: South African living in New York who was arrested in Manhattan on March 14, 2005, after finalizing plans to smuggle grenade launchers, shoulder-fired missiles, and other Russian military weapons into the United States for sale to an FBI informant posing as an al Qaeda arms buyer. Investigators tapped and intercepted more than 15,000 calls and visited South Africa, Armenia, and the Georgian republic during the case. The informant, an explosives expert, warned the FBI that he had been approached by a man who claimed to have access to weapons from the former Soviet Union. The ring included people from Armenia and South Africa who provided digital photos of the weapons for sale. Seventeen of the people were arrested in New York, Los Angeles, or Florida while preparing to import the weapons into the United States from Eastern Europe. The FBI was working with Armenia and Russia to secure the weapons. The men were charged in the U.S. District Court in Manhattan; five were charged with conspiring to transport destructive devices, and 13 others were charged with weapons trafficking. He faced 30 years in prison.

Larry Maxwell Stanford: hijacked a Quebecair plane bound for Montreal on December 14, 1972. He surrendered after 10 hours when his father, a psychiatrist, arrived and persuaded him to give his gun to a stewardess. He was ordered to undergo mental tests but was convicted on April 26, 1973.

Robert Starr: electrician, age 34, who on April 26, 1996, was arrested by Treasury agents as one of two members of the 112th Volunteer Battalion of the Militia at Large of the Republic of Georgia near Macon, Georgia. They were planning to make dozens of pipe bombs over the weekend in preparation for a “war” against the UN and the New World Order. The duo was arraigned before federal magistrates in Columbus and Macon. On November 2, 1996, he was indicted in U.S. District Court on two counts of conspiring to use a destructive device and one count of possession of such a device. He was charged with threatening the life of the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms (ATF) supervisor in Macon. He was also charged with possession of an assault rifle. He faced a life sentence. After deliberating for 23 hours, a federal jury announced on November 6, 1996, that it had found him guilty on two of the five counts of conspiracy to use a destructive weapon in a violent crime and possession of illegal explosives. He was acquitted of a second conspiracy count. He was found not guilty of threatening the ATF supervisor and was acquitted of possessing an assault rifle. Sentencing was expected to take place within two months. Observers believed that he would receive a maximum of 17 to 22 years. Defense lawyers said they would appeal.

Scott Anthony Stedeford: resident of Ardmore, Pennsylvania, who was one of five members of the Aryan Republican Army white separatist group indicted by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia on January 30, 1997, on charges of conspiracy to rob banks. They were accused of carrying out seven bank robberies in Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin from 1994 to 1995 and of buying weapons and funding recruiting efforts with the proceeds. One of them testified that the group aimed to “commit terrorist acts against the U.S. government.”

Ali Khaled Steitiye: Lebanese, age 39, who became a U.S. citizen—possibly fraudulently—in 2000. He was arrested in late October 2001 by Portland, Oregon, police. He had used several Social Security numbers, according to police. He had a handgun tucked into his waistband. Police found a machete, 1,000 rounds of ammunition, fake credit cards, phony citizenship documents, and $20,000 in his apartment and car. September 11 was circled on his calendar. He has ties to Hamas and admitted to receiving firearms training in Lebanese camps several years earlier. He claimed to have lived mostly in the United States for the preceding two decades. He was held without bail, and a court in early December rejected his request for release. On December 12, he was charged with felony weapons violations for lying about his several felony convictions when he tried to purchase an assault rifle in August.

He became the key to the indictments on October 4, 2002, of six people from Portland, Oregon, including a former U.S. Army reservist, for conspiracy to join al Qaeda and the Taliban to wage war against the United States in Afghanistan after the 9/11 attacks. None had arrived in Afghanistan, although two were still at large and believed to be overseas. The five men and one woman were charged with conspiracy to levy war against the United States, conspiracy to provide material support to a terrorist group, and conspiracy to contribute services to al Qaeda and the Taliban. The indictment said that in late 2001, five of them had tried to go through China, Bangladesh, or Indonesia to Afghanistan to fight American soldiers but had failed to enter Pakistan because of visa and financial problems.

The case began a fortnight after 9/11, when Mark Mercer, a deputy sheriff in Skamania County, Washington, saw five men in Middle Eastern clothes taking target practice with a shotgun, a Chinese assault rifle, and a semiautomatic pistol in a private quarry in Washougal, Washington. A few weeks later, he noticed one of them on television being arrested on weapons charges. He called the FBI about Steitiye, a Hamas supporter who had received paramilitary training with pro-Palestinian militants in Lebanon. In October, FBI agents worked to find the four other shooters but determined that they had left days earlier for Afghanistan.

Steitiye was named an unindicted co-conspirator who lied in August 2001 to an Oregon gun dealer about a number of previous arrests and a felony conviction while purchasing an assault rifle. In September 2002, he was sentenced to two and one-half years in prison on gun and fraud charges. Sheikh Mohamed Kariye, the imam of his mosque, the Islamic Center of Portland, had been indicted on charges of committing Social Security fraud during 1983–1995. Kariye had co-founded the Global Relief Foundation, which was under investigation for al Qaeda ties.

Rados Stevlic: one of two members of Freedom for the Serbian Fatherland (SOPO), an anticommunist Serbian émigré group, arrested by Chicago police on November 23, 1978, on charges of planning to bomb a Yugoslav reception. They were also indicted for conspiring to assassinate Yugoslav President Tito during his March 7–9 visit to Washington. In February 1979, federal authorities dropped one of the charges. The SOPO terrorist was found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago. He was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293, a B727 that had taken off from New York's La Guardia Airport en route to Chicago.

George David Stewart: his release from prison was demanded by Thomas Hannan, hijacker of Frontier Airlines Flight 101, a B737 scheduled to fly from Grand Island to Denver with stops in Lincoln and Omaha on October 20, 1977.

Lynne Stewart: attorney, age 62, indicted with three others on April 9, 2002, by attorney general John Ashcroft for helping to pass unlawful messages between an Egyptian terrorist organization and Sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, who was serving a life sentence for plotting to blow up the World Trade Center and United Nations buildings in 1993. The foursome were also charged with providing “material support and resources” to the Egyptian Islamic Group. Stewart pleaded not guilty and was released on $500,000 bond with the stipulation that she not contact Abd-al-Rahman. Stewart, represented by attorney Susan Tipograph, faced a 40-year sentence.

On November 19, 2003, a federal grand jury indicted Stewart and an Arabic translator, Mohammed Yousry, for their roles in a conspiracy led by imprisoned Egyptian cleric Omar Abd-al-Rahman to kill and kidnap people overseas. The duo was accused of helping Abd-al-Rahman issue fatwas and other messages to Ahmed Abdel Sattar, a State Island postal worker, who then circulated the messages around the world. Sattar was indicted for conspiring with Rahman and others to kill and kidnap people abroad; he posted on the Internet the “Fatwah Mandating the Killing of Israelis Everywhere.” Stewart and Yousry were freed on bond; Sattar remained in custody.

On July 22, 2003, U.S. District Judge John G. Koeltl dismissed similar charges against Stewart and Yousry. The new charges provided more details and cited a different legal statute.

On October 13, 2004, testimony was postponed until October 18 amid reports that Sattar had suffered a mild heart attack and was hospitalized.

After a seven-month New York trial, jury deliberation began on January 12, 2005.

On February 10, 2005, the jury found Stewart guilty of material support to terrorists. U.S. postal worker Ahmed Abdel Sattar was convicted of conspiracy for “plotting to kill and kidnap persons in a foreign country” by publishing papers calling for the murder of Jews. Mohammed Yousry, an Arabic interpreter, was guilty of providing material support to terrorism. Stewart faced 26 years. Sentencing was set for July 15. She said she would appeal. On October 16, 2006, Stewart was sentenced to 28 months in prison—not the 30 years requested by the prosecution. On April 24, 2007, the New York State Supreme Court's Appellate Division disbarred Stewart, saying she had failed to abide by the U.S. Bureau of Prisons' restriction on Rahman. She was free pending appeal of her prison sentence.

Mark Stroman: convicted by a Dallas jury on April 2, 2002, of shooting and killing naturalized U.S. citizen Vasudev Patel in October 2001 because he thought the Indian gas station owner looked Middle Eastern, and he wanted vengeance for the 9/11 attacks. Stroman, age 32, confessed to police. He was also charged with killing Waquar Hassan, a Dallas-area convenience store clerk, on September 15, 2001, and was a suspect in the shooting injury of store clerk Rais Uddin.

James and Michael Ray Stubbs: alias Jamil Daud Mujahid, for James. Brothers who were arrested on December 13, 2003, in the Philippines for possible links to the Moro Islamic Liberation Front and the Abu Sayyaf. James is on a U.S. watch list for al Qaeda links. Michael worked as a heating and air conditioning technician for 10 years until 2000 at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL) near San Francisco. LLNL is a state-run, high-security nuclear and biological research facility. The Islamic men are of Middle Eastern origin and are married to Filipinas. On December 30, the Philippine government said it would deport the duo to the United States. Immigration Commissioner Andrea Domingo said that James had met with members of Abu Sayyaf and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front. The duo had arrived in the Philippines on tourist visas, but their documents indicated they were soliciting funds for the construction of mosques and Muslim schools. James had left his job as a teacher in California to study Arabic in Sudan. He met in May 2003 with charity groups that are believed to be al Qaeda fronts.

Jose Dionisio Suarez y Esquivel: Cuban exile fugitive charged with the September 1976 car bombing of former Chilean ambassador Orlando Letelier. The FBI on March 27, 1979, said it wanted to question him about the bombings in New York and New Jersey on March 24, 1979, by Omega-7, an anti-Castro Cuban exile group. On April 11, 1990, he was arrested in St. Petersburg, Florida. On April 18, 1990, he pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in Washington. He was to appear in May before U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr., who was to set a trial date. Suarez had been released in 1978 after serving 11-plus months in a D.C. jail on a contempt charge for refusing to testify before a grand jury on the case despite a grant of immunity. Suarez said he had fled Cuba in October 1960 and lived in the United States for most of the time. He divorced his first wife in 1979 and married his second wife in Puerto Rico in 1981. He lived for three years at his wife's St. Petersburg home, where he was arrested, and had lived in the area for six years. He and his wife, the administrator of a medical office, had a 15-month-old son. The FBI said Suarez had helped buy bomb components. On November 15, 1990, he was sentenced to 12 years per terms of a plea bargain.

Jahi Subanidi: Indonesian, age 69, arrested on September 29, 2006, by the FBI for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State Attorney's Office announced that he and others were charged with conspiracy to export weapons and munitions, four of them to the LTTE. The four with LTTE links were believed to have conspired to launder money to the group in addition to trying to ship the weapons. He was held in federal custody in Guam and was expected to be transferred to Maryland.

Abu Suhayb: alias of Adam Yahye Gadahn.

Ibrahim Ahmad Suleiman: convicted in January 1997 of two counts of perjury for lying to the grand jury investigating the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center. On November 24, 1998, U.S. District Court Judge Whitman Knapp passed a lighter sentence, amounting to time served of 10 months. Suleiman faced immigration fraud charges in Texas. Suleiman denied traveling with Ahmad Ajaj despite extensive evidence to the contrary. He also denied handling a bombing manual even though his fingerprints were on it.

Satam M.A. Al Suqami: one of the al Qaeda hijackers, age 25, who on September 11, 2001, took over American Airlines Flight 11, a B767 carrying 92 people, including 9 flight attendants and 2 pilots from Boston's Logan International Airport to Los Angeles International Airport. The plane was diverted over New York and crashed into New York City's 110-story World Trade Center North Tower at 8:45 A.M., killing all on board.

Abu Rida al-Suri: alias of Muhammed Bayazid.

Donald Thomas Surratt: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. Surratt, age 30, was accused of instructing the others in combat tactics based on his U.S. military experience. On August 22, Surratt pleaded guilty to conspiracy and illegal transportation of a firearm in interstate commerce. By August 25, he had pleaded guilty to conspiracy and gun charges. On November 7, 2003, he received less than four years. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Susana: alias of Maria Clemencia Sandoval Garcia.

Shaykh Ahmad Salim Suwaydan: variant Sheikh Ahmed Salim Swedan; aliases Sheikh Ahmad Salem Suweidan, Sheikh Ahmed Salem Swedan, Sheikh Swedan, Sheikh Bahamadi, Ahmed Ally, Bahamad, Sheikh Bahamad, Ahmed the Tall, Admadal-Tawil. Kenyan indicted on December 16, 1998, in the Southern District of New York for his involvement in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania; for conspiring to kill U.S. nationals; for murder of U.S. nationals outside the United States; for conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside of the United States; and for an attack on a federal facility resulting in death. He was believed to have brought the vehicles, including the 1987 Nissan Atlas truck that carried the bomb, as well as oxygen and acetylene tanks used in the Dar es Salaam attack. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He is between five feet eight inches and six feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. He has claimed to have been born in Mombasa, Kenya, on April 9, 1960, and April 9, 1969.

Stavros Sykopetrides: New York City hotel cashier who was wrestled to the ground by security guards after he lunged at former Turkish prime minister Bulent Ecevit during a protest demonstration on July 26, 1976. The Cypriot was indicted for assault and held on $100,000 bail.

T

---

Eugne Aloys Tafoya: former Green Beret arrested by the FBI in Truth or Consequences, New Mexico, on April 23, 1981, and charged with shooting Faisal Abdulaze Zagallai, an exiled Libyan critic of the Qadhafi regime and a sociology student at Colorado State University, on October 15, 1980. The Libyan government had claimed credit for the attack, in which Zagallai lost an eye. On January 5, 1982, Tafoya was sentenced to two years for misdemeanor assault and conspiracy but was acquitted of attempted first-degree murder.

Ahmed Refai Taha: Egyptian al-Gamaat leader who was named as an unindicted co-conspirator on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York for his role in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and Nairobi, Kenya.

Hasein Taher: variants Yasein Taher, Hasein Ther. One of five U.S. citizens of Yemeni origin arrested on September 13–14, 2002, who resided in Lackawanna, New York, and were identified as an al Qaeda–trained terrorist cell on American soil. In June 2001, they attended the al Qaeda al-Farooq training camp in Afghanistan and learned how to use assault rifles, handguns, and other weapons; they left the camp before the 9/11 attacks. They were charged with providing, attempting to provide, and conspiring to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist group (al Qaeda).

At the September 19 bail hearing, Taher was represented by Rodney Persnuius (or Personius), who said that there was no proof his client was at the camp but that he had not stayed long anyway. On September 25, authorities searching Taher's apartment found a document explaining martyrdom.

On May 12, Taher pleaded guilty to supporting terrorism and admitted to learning to fire guns and grenade launchers at the camp. He acted against his attorney's advice. On December 4, Taher was sentenced to eight years. He said, "I'd just like to apologize to the court, my family, the community and most important my country. I know I've let a lot of people down." (See also Sahim Alwan.)

Mohammed Reza Taheri-azar: a December 2005 University of North Carolina graduate from Iran, age 22, who on March 3, 2006, drove an SUV through The Pit, a popular campus watering hole, injuring nine people. He told police he did it "to avenge the deaths of Muslims around the world." In a 911 call, he said he aimed to "punish the government of the United States for their actions around the world." He appeared in Orange County District Court, charged with nine counts of attempted murder and nine counts of assault. Bail was set at $5.5 million. He was assigned a public defender. He said at the hearing that he was "thankful for the opportunity to spread the will of Allah." The psychology and philosophy major had spent most of his life in the United States.

Judson Dean Talley: mental patient who on November 29, 1984, hijacked an Eastern Metro Express flight en route from Augusta to Atlanta, Georgia. He surrendered at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta after talking to his girlfriend.

Sulejman Talovic: on February 12, 2007, while yelling, "Allah akbar," the Bosnian Muslim immigrant, age 18, fired a .38 caliber pistol and shot-gun at shoppers in Salt Lake City's Trolley Square shopping mall, killing five people and injuring another four before an off-duty policeman from Ogden shot him to death.

Hassan Tantai: movie screen name of Daoud Salahuddin, given name David Belfield.

Nadeem Tarmohammed: one of 13 people, age 25, arrested on August 3, 2004, in the United Kingdom in connection with discovery of an al Qaeda cell. On August 18, 2004, he was one of eight British citizens charged with being al Qaeda operatives and plotting against financial targets in New York, New Jersey, and Washington, D.C. The eight were charged with conspiracy to commit murder and conspiracy to commit a public nuisance by using "radioactive materials, toxic gases, chemicals and/or explosives to cause disruption." Tarmohammed was charged with possessing a "reconnaissance plan" of the Prudential Financial headquarters in Newark with information "likely to be useful to terrorists."

On April 12, 2005, the United States announced it would seek extradition from the United Kingdom of three Britons, including Tarmohammed, for planning to blow up financial buildings in Washington, D.C., New York, and New Jersey. On April 25, 2007, Tarmohammed pleaded guilty in a London court to charges of conspiring with Dhiren Barot to attack U.S. and U.K. targets. On June 15, 2007, a British judge sentenced him to between 15 and 26 years. (See also Dhiren Barot.)

Serdar Tatar: Tatar, age 23, born in Turkey and legally residing in Philadelphia, was one of six people arrested on May 7, 2007, by the FBI in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, for planning an attack on Fort Dix to kill 100 soldiers with assault rifles and grenades. Tatar had worked at a 7-11. He had been recruited by the Duka brothers, also arrested, at the South Jersey Islamic Center. The group had considered other locations but picked Fort Dix because Tatar had delivered pizzas there from his family-owned Super Mario Pizza and had a map of the base. He was charged with conspiring to kill military personnel, which carries a life sentence. (See also Agron Abdullahu.)

Edward Taylor Jr.: member, age 34, of the True Knights of the Ku Klux Klan in north Texas who was one of four would-be terrorists arrested on April 22, 1997, by the Dallas Joint Terrorism Task Force in a raid on a safe house in rural Wise County. They were planning to stage attacks and rob an armored car in Chico of $2 million on May 1. His wife, Catherine Dee Adams, was also held. (See also Catherine Dee Adams.)

Lulseged Tesfa: Ethiopian and one of two would-be hijackers of National Airlines Flight 496 bound for New York City on July 12, 1972. They demanded $600,000 and three parachutes. They surrendered in Lake Jackson, Texas, after the pilots scuttled the plane. Tesfa was sentenced on December 2, 1974, to 60 years for air piracy.

William Edward Tesscher: name on a U.S. passport held by one of two suspected pro-Iraqi terrorists detained on February 17, 1991, by Philippine immigration police as the duo was about to board a Philippine Air Lines flight to Tokyo's Narita Airport. He had a Pakistani passport in his luggage stamped by Baghdad immigration authorities. Pictures found in his luggage showed him posing with weapons at an undisclosed place. They were put under "custodial investigation" in Cebu on suspicion of planning to link up with the Japanese Red Army.

Ahmad Thiab: Iraqi holding a doctorate in political science and the 10th man sought by police in Roanoke, Virginia, after the arrest on March 5, 1997, of 9 men suspected of laundering hundreds of thousands of dollars to Middle Eastern terrorist front organizations during the previous seven years. Thiab faced charges that could lead to life in prison. (See also Abed Jamil Abdeljalil.)

Douglas B. Thomas: threatened to blow up a Metroliner commuter flight out of Portland, Oregon, on May 3, 1986. He surrendered after slashing his wrists.

Mark Thomas: one of five members of the Aryan Republican Army white separatist group indicted by a federal grand jury in Philadelphia on January 30, 1997, on charges of conspiracy to rob banks. They were accused of carrying out seven bank robberies in Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin from 1994 to 1995 and buying weapons and funding recruiting efforts with the proceeds. One of them testified that the group aimed to “commit terrorist acts against the U.S. government.”

Allison Thompson: Thompson, age 18, from Santa Barbara, California, was arrested by Heathrow police on December 29, 1973, with two other individuals for carrying 5 automatic pistols and more than 150 rounds of ammunition. On July 16, 1974, a U.S. federal prosecutor in Los Angeles dropped charges against her of violating the Neutrality and the Firearms and Control Assistance Acts. However, on January 4, 1974, she and her accomplices were charged in the United Kingdom with arms conspiracy in a plot to kidnap a high French official and hold him for the release of 30 Moroccan political prisoners. She was cleared of all charges by a British jury.

James Earnest Thompson: alias of James Ujaama.

Fahad al Thumairy: upon arriving in Los Angeles from Frankfurt on May 6, 2003, the Saudi consular official, age 31, was informed that his visa had been revoked in March. He was barred from returning to the United States for five years and put on an international flight two days later. He was suspected of having links to a terrorist group. He had been at the Saudi Consulate in Los Angeles since 1996, working in the Islamic and cultural affairs section.

Darren Todd Thurston: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower.

Aldam Tilao: alias Abu Sabaya (Bearer of Captives). Member of the Moro National Liberation Front/Abu Sayyaf kidnappers who attacked Americans in the Philippines on May 27, 2001. He had studied criminology at Zamboanga College in Mindanao, where he was expelled. He spent some time in an al Qaeda training camp in the 1990s. He nicknamed himself DJ, given that he was often on Mindanao radio. The Philippine government offered a $100,000 reward for his capture; the United States offered $5 million after Tilao beheaded an American hostage. He escaped the Philippine military’s rescue operation on June 7, 2002. He was believed to have died in an ocean gun battle with Philippine Marines on June 20, 2002, although his body was never found.

Tillerson: alias of Joyce Burgess.

Ali al-Timimi: Islamic spiritual leader, age 40, who on September 23, 2004, was indicted on charges that his preaching inspired the “Virginia jihad network” to train for violent jihad overseas. The Fairfax County resident was a frequent lecturer at the Center for Islamic Information and Education (Dar al-Arqam) in Falls Church, Virginia. Al-Timimi was initially represented by attorney Martin F. McMahon. The grand jury in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, charged that on September 16, 2001, al-Timimi told his followers at a Fairfax meeting that “the time had come” to join the violent jihad in Afghanistan and that U.S. troops were legitimate targets. He was to be charged with conspiracy and attempting to contribute services to the Taliban and on firearms and explosives counts. He was not accused of firing weapons but of inciting others who illegally fired guns and rocket-propelled grenades at the terrorist training camp.

Al-Timimi was five weeks from receiving his doctorate in cancer gene research at George Mason University.

On April 26, 2005, a jury in the U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, convicted al-Timimi of inciting his followers to train overseas for violent jihad against the United States. He was sentenced to life on July 13, 2005, for soliciting treason. In November 2007, his attorney, Jonathan Urley, noted that Judge Leonie Brinkema had said in the post-trial hearing that she was suspicious of the government's integrity because incarcerated terrorist suspects' interrogations tapes were not made available to the defense in the Moussaoui case. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Zineddine Tirouda: Algerian, age 37, born in the United States. An arrest warrant was issued on November 2, 2001. He was freed on bond but charged with conspiring to illegally obtain U.S. passports and residency. The California Department of Transportation engineer once lived in the same apartment complex as Al-Bayoumi, who had contacts with some of the 9/11 hijackers, but he claimed to have never met him.

Abdel Hakim Tizegha: arrested on December 24, 1999, by Bellevue, Washington, police who charged him with illegally entering the country and eluding federal officers at the Canadian border. Tizegha, age 29, was scheduled to appear before a federal magistrate on January 5, 2000. Press reports linked him to Ahmed Ressam and Abdel Ghani. Some observers believed that he was involved in a splinter group of the Algerian Armed Islamic Group (GIA) that broke with the GIA over a dispute regarding the targeting of fellow Muslims. On March 16, 2000, he pleaded guilty to illegal reentry and faced up to two years in prison and a $250,000 fine. On June 2, 2000, he reportedly was to be handed over to immigration authorities for probable deportation. He was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Barbara Rothstein to the time he had served since his arrest.

Adel Tobbichi: Algerian arrested on June 21, 2002, in Montreal following a Dutch extradition request on charges of altering passports and other documents and providing them to terrorists planning to bomb the U.S. Embassy in Paris. He was extradited in July 2002. Dutch authorities had earlier arrested two French citizens in the plot. Rotterdam prosecutors said that wiretaps linked Jerome Courtailler and Mohammed Berkous, both 27, to Nizar Trabelsi, the would-be suicide bomber, who was under arrest in Belgium. Tobbichi was acquitted on December 18, 2002, by a Rotterdam court on charges of planning attacks on the U.S. Embassy in Paris but was turned over to immigration authorities.

Mohammad S. Tofighi: one of eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. The group was charged with dealing in firearms without a license, placing firearms on an interstate commercial airliner without notifying the carrier, and conspiracy. On November 26, 1979, charges were dismissed against Tofighi and his wife, Shahla Amenli.

Patrick Toledo: one of six members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) who hijacked an Avensa Convair Twin Engine CV440 en route from Ciudad Bolivar to Caracas, Venezuela, on November 28, 1963. The group dropped anti-election leaflets over the city and then diverted the plane to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they were arrested. The six were extradited.

Mohammad Toolabi: variant of Mohammad Reza Bahadoritoolabi.

Noordin Mohammed Top: variants Noordin Muh Top, Noordin Mat Top, Noordin Din Moch Top. Senior leader of the Indonesian Jemaah

Islamiyah (JI). He was born on August 11, 1968, in Johor, Malaysia. He is wanted in connection with many of the suicide attacks in Indonesia, including the October 2005 bombings in Bali that injured several Americans. He is believed to have been involved in the October 12, 2002, bombing in Bali that killed 202 people and injured 209; the August 5, 2003, Jakarta Marriott Hotel bombing; and the bombing of the Australian Embassy in Jakarta on September 9, 2004, that killed several people and injured more than 140. He ordered JI members to surveil a large foreign-owned power plant southeast of Surabaya. He reportedly had been detained by Indonesian officials in mid-2005. In January 2006, he announced the formation of Tanzim Qaedat al-Jihad. He had been designated by the U.S. Department of the Treasury and the UN Security Council as a terrorist financier. He was added to the U.S. Most Wanted Terrorists list on February 28, 2006.

Alajendrina Torres: one of four members of Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) arrested in late June 1983 in connection with a plot to bomb an Army Reserve center and a Marine training center on July 4, 1983. Authorities found arms and explosives. A U.S. District Court judge in Chicago found the four guilty of conspiracy. On October 4, 1985, three of the defendants were sentenced to 35 years for seditious conspiracy. A fourth received a suspended sentence and 5 years' probation. Torres was offered clemency by President Clinton in August 1999. An FBI surveillance video showed her making a letter bomb in 1983.

Carlos Alberto Torres: charged by federal authorities with the August 3, 1977, Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) bombing of the New York City Mobil Building. The bomb killed Charles Steinberg, a partner in an employment agency in the building, and injured eight others. A federal grand jury in Chicago on September 7, 1977, indicted Torres on conspiracy and a "variety of explosive-related charges." He was arrested by Evanston, Illinois, police on April 4, 1980, and charged with a variety of local weapons, theft, and armed robbery charges. Bond was set at $2 million. On August 26, 1980, a Chicago Circuit Court judge sentenced him and seven other FALN members to eight-year prison terms for possession of sawed-off shotguns and conspiracy to commit armed robbery. His wife, Marie Haydee Beltran Torres, received a life sentence for placing the bomb in the Mobil Building.

Carlos Julio Torres Angel: attorney and deputy from Chia who was a member of a group that attacked the residence of U.S. ambassador to Colombia Arthur McNamara on July 5, 1989, shooting a U.S. Marine in the shoulder. An arrest warrant had earlier been issued against Torres by the municipal court in Chipaque on charges of forgery. Police found emeralds valued at 80 million pesos, 1 million pesos in cash, and propaganda of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia at the scene.

Claudio Torres de Silva: sentenced to 10 years in December 1969 for his part in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick.

Domingo Torres-Diaz: one of two hijackers of Northeast Airlines Flight 43, a B727 flying from Boston to Miami on August 14, 1969, and diverted to Havana. As of 1979, the duo remained fugitives from a Massachusetts federal grand jury indictment handed down on November 14, 1969.

Hugo Torres: one of two hijackers of a CMA DC6 flying from Merida to Mexico City and diverted to Cuba on November 18, 1968.

Griselio Torresola: Puerto Rican nationalist who attempted to shoot into Washington's Blair House on November 1, 1950, in an assassination attempt against President Truman. Torresola and a guard were killed.

Larry Tractman: California businessman accused by the Philippine government of providing equipment to three Filipino opponents of president Ferdinand Marcos who admitted on February 11, 1977, to plotting to kill Marcos and take over the government.

Garrett Brock Trapnell: former mental patient who tried to hijack Trans World Airlines Flight 2, a B707 flying from Los Angeles to New York, on January 29, 1972. He hid an automatic pistol in a false plastic cast on his arm. He changed his demands several times, calling for a flight to Dallas and then Europe, for $306,800, and for the release of Angela Davis and a friend from jail. An FBI agent posing as a crewman shot and captured Trapnell in New York City. Trapnell was ordered to undergo mental tests before arraignment on air piracy charges. During his trial, he claimed that his evil alter ego Gregg Ross was responsible. During the first trial, a juror believed him to be insane, necessitating a retrial. On July 20, 1973, he was sentenced to concurrent terms of 20 years, 10 years, and life for unlawful interference with the crew, possession of a gun, and aerial piracy.

On May 24, 1978, Barbara Ann Oswald tried to hijack a helicopter from St. Louis to a Marion, Illinois, federal penitentiary to help three inmates escape. She was shot to death by the pilot. She had chartered the Fostaire Helicopter Company Bell 206B Jet Ranger with hopes of freeing Trapnell and Martin J. McNally, both convicted hijackers, and James K. Johnson, a bank robber. On December 22, 1978, Trapnell was convicted in Benton, Illinois, for conspiracy in Oswald's attempt.

Luis Travassos: former National Student Union president who was also active in the radical movement of the Roman Catholic Church in Brazil. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group turned up later in Cuba.

Treebeard: Internet name (no doubt taken from J.R.R. Tolkien's The Lord of the Rings) of an individual who took credit for the November 20, 2005, Earth Liberation Front arson that caused $300,000 damage to four unoccupied Hagers Crossing townhouses in Hagerstown, Maryland. The fire destroyed a townhouse and damaged the other three.

Commander Tres: alias of Luis Francisco Otero Cifuentes.

Commander Tres: alias of Fernando Gonzalez.

Simon Trinidad: alias of Ricardo Palmera.

Glenn K. Tripp: hijacker of a Northwest Airlines DC727 at Seattle-Tacoma International Airport on July 11, 1980. Claiming to be a professional assassin, he demanded that his boss be killed. He also demanded $600,000, two parachutes, and a single-engine Cessna. He was taken into custody after 10 hours and later put on 20 years' probation. He later surfaced on January 20, 1983, when he tried to hijack to Afghanistan Northwest Orient Airlines 608, a B727-200 carrying 41 people from Seattle to Portland. He claimed he had a bomb in a shoe box. The crew lured him to an empty first-class area, away from the passengers. The FBI shot and killed him.

Angela Tsioumas: one of 18 people charged on July 21, 2000, in an FBI affidavit with smuggling cigarettes out of North Carolina to raise money for Hizballah in Lebanon. On August 11, 2000, Tsioumas pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to launder money, conspiracy to traffic in contraband cigarettes, and breaking federal immigration and naturalization laws. On April 2, 2003, she was sentenced to four months of house arrest. Her husband, Mohamad Youssef Hammoud, had been sentenced on March 19, 2003, to 155 years. (See also Ali Hussein Darwiche.)

Kevin Tubbs: one of 11 people indicted by the Justice Department on January 20, 2006, for a 1996–2001 series of 17 arson and sabotage attacks by the Earth Liberation Front and the Animal Liberation Front that caused $23 million in damage to lumber companies, a ski resort, meat plants, federal ranger stations, and a high-voltage electric tower.

Bryce M. Tuller: one of four hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 496, a B727 flying from Houston to Atlanta, on October 30, 1972. On November 29, 1984, Bryce escaped from the Bland Correctional Center near Roanoke, Virginia, but was captured two days later. (See Charles A. Tuller entry.)

Jonathan R. Tuller: one of four hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 496, a B727 flying from Houston to Atlanta, on October 30, 1972 (see Charles A. Tuller entry).

Tung Kuei-sen: one of two bicyclists who on October 15, 1984, assassinated Henry Liu in his Daly City, California, garage; Liu was a prominent Chinese American journalist who had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan. On September 26, 1985, at the request of the United States, Brazilian authorities arrested Tung Kuei-sen. He had earlier been in the Philippines and Japan. He was extradited to the United States. He was convicted on April 1988 after confessing. On May 11, 1988, a Redwood City, California, court sentenced the Taiwanese gangster, a member of the United Bamboo Gang, to 27 years to life for the murder. He claimed the assassination had been ordered by senior Taiwanese military officials. He said he was duped by Taiwan into believing it was a patriotic act.

Zakariya Mahmud al-Tuni: U.S. national of Egyptian origin who was arrested on June 25, 1993, by police in Al-Fayyum, south of Cairo, while in possession of 15 firearms, including automatic rifles, pistols, and a large quantity of ammunition. He was charged with inciting debauchery and obscenity for pornographic videotapes that were found in his possession. He had entered Egypt in 1989. Security authorities believed he was associated with blind sheik Omar Abd-al-Rahman, who lived in the United States and had been accused of several terrorist plots.

Abu Nasr al-Tunisi: believed by the FBI on February 11, 2002, to be planning a terrorist attack in the United States or on U.S. interests in Yemen.

Rejean Turpin: threatened on January 14, 1972, to sabotage an Air Canada flight from Montreal to Barbados if one of the passengers did not repay him some money. His call was traced, and he was arrested and later sentenced to three years in the penitentiary.

Tim Tuttle: alias of Timothy James McVeigh.

Kamolakham Tuychieva: one of four Uzbeks, age 41, arrested in a van in Parkin, Arkansas, and questioned by the FBI regarding possible connections to terrorism. As of November 2001, he remained in federal custody in connection with the FBI's investigation of the 9/11 attacks. By November 2002, he had been released.

U

---

James Ujaama: alias James Earnest Thompson. In May 2002, Seattle police were investigating Seattle's Dar-us-Salaam (Taqwa) mosque members James and Mustafa Ujaama, brothers who had grown up in Seattle and converted to Islam. Police believed James had posted radical Islamic teachings on a Web site for al-Masri's London mosque and had escorted two representatives from the mosque to the Bly, Oregon, ranch that was to be used for al Qaeda terrorism training.

On July 22, 2002, authorities in Denver arrested James Ujaama, 36, of Seattle, as a material witness to terrorist activities. Authorities believe the American Muslim activist had trained at an al Qaeda terrorist camp in Afghanistan. He was flown to Virginia. The terrorist activity was not related to September 11. A federal official said he may have supplied terrorists in Afghanistan with computer equipment. He was indicted on August 28, 2002, for attempting to set up an al Qaeda training camp at a farm in Bly, Oregon. He had faxed a proposal to militant Muslim cleric Abu Hamza al-Masri in London, noting the farm's availability as a safe house that could be used for weapons storage. The two-count indictment said he provided "training, facilities, computer services, safe houses, and personnel" to al Qaeda. On April 14, 2003, as part of a deal with prosecutors that could lead to criminal charges against al-Masri, he admitted in federal court in Seattle that he had conspired to aid the Taliban.

The Seattle man later was sentenced to two years after admitting to providing computers, cash, and fighters to the Taliban government before 9/11. He was arrested as a fugitive outside a mosque in Belize on December 18, 2006, after violating his parole and fleeing the United States. One police officer suffered minor injuries in a scuffle. Ujaama faced eight years in prison. He had traveled on a Mexican passport made out to Ramirez Ramirez and had arrived in Belize circa December 8, 2006.

Mustafa Ujaama: in May 2002, Seattle police were investigating Seattle's Dar-us-Salaam (Taqwa) mosque members James and Mustafa Ujaama, brothers who had grown up in Seattle and converted to Islam. James had a long record of Islamist radical activity.

Commander Uno: one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. The gunmen ultimately obtained safe haven in Cuba. Press reports identified him as Carlos Jaime Bateman; or lawyer Everth Bustamante Garcia; or Ernesto Charry Montealegre, educator and founder of the Trotskyite Worker's Self Defense Movement (Mao). The government claimed he was Rosenberg Pabon Pabon.

Ahmed Hassan al-Uqaily: arrested on October 7, 2004, by police in Nashville, Tennessee, on illegal weapons charges during a sting operation set up after he threatened to "go jihad." The Iraqi-born man, age 33, was putting into his car two disassembled machine guns, four disassembled hand grenades, and hundreds of rounds of ammunition he had purchased for $1,000 from an undercover agent. He had said that he was angry about what was going on in Iraq and intended to “go jihad” and blow up something.

Urbano: alias used by a Tupamaros spokesperson in an interview with Havana’s Tricontinental Bulletin during the kidnapping of USAID public safety advisor Daniel Mitrione, which began on July 31, 1970.

Jose Manuel Urbina Lara: leader of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. He was a lawyer who had recently obtained Costa Rican citizenship. In 1984, he was the law student who took over the Costa Rican Embassy in Managua, pressuring both governments until he was granted asylum. He was a Nicaraguan by birth and a deserter from the Sandinista People’s Army. As part of a deal that freed the hostages, he arrived on March 22, 1993, in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, where he was taken in National Department of Investigations (DNI) vehicles to DNI Headquarters. The Dominican government had granted him a provisional visa so that he could remain in the country under DNI protection. President Joaquin Balaguer granted him asylum. On March 24, the Nicaraguan government said it would request extradition. On March 26, Costa Rica’s Supreme Court of Justice requested his extradition. On April 6, 1993, Costa Rican foreign minister Bernd Niehaus called such extradition a “closed case” for his country because the Dominican government had granted Urbina Lara asylum.

V

---

Orlando Valdes Cartagena: one of five prisoners who on December 30, 2002, broke out of a maximum-security prison after two confederates diverted a helicopter they had rented from Caribbean Helicorp in San Juan, claiming they needed to inspect construction work in Ponce. The renters forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the roof of Las Cucharas prison during morning recreation. The prisoners flew on to a remote area in the central mountains and escaped. The five had been serving sentences in excess of 100 years for murder and other crimes. Corrections Secretary Miguel Periera said it was possible that prison guards had helped the escapees. By January 3, 2003, four of the prisoners and two of the hijackers were back in custody. Police were searching for the fifth prisoner, who might have been killed.

Carfmen Valentin: one of seven members of the Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN), a Puerto Rican independence group, who renounced violence in accepting President Clinton's offer of clemency in August 1999.

Pierre Valieres: three Quebec Liberation Front members were arrested by Canadian police on June 21, 1970, for planning to kidnap U.S. consul general Harrison W. Burgess to demand the release of 13 political prisoners, including Valieres. He was out on bail at the time.

Leonel M. Valladares: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN) members who hijacked a Lancia BAC111 flying from San Salvador to Managua and Miami on December 12, 1971. The trio took over the plane out of Managua and demanded to go to Cuba. When the plane landed at San Jose, Costa Rica, for refueling, more than 200 civil guards stormed the plane. One hijacker was fatally shot; a passenger and another hijacker were wounded. Several passengers were injured when they jumped from the plane as it burst into flames. The two captured hijackers were returned to Nicaragua, but they escaped custody during the Nicaraguan earthquake of December 23, 1972. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Pierre Vallières: leftist journalist who led the Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ), which conducted numerous bombings and kidnappings in the 1960s. In 1966, he conducted a hunger strike at the United Nations building in New York City, was arrested and imprisoned for four years because of his FLQ membership, and was then deported to Canada. While in prison he wrote the book Nègres blancs d'Amérique, published in 1998, about the downtrodden French Canadians. In 1971, he renounced violence. In 1980, he abandoned support for Quebec independence, saying that Quebec was doomed to remain within Canada. He died at age 60 at a Montreal, Canada, hospital after a heart attack on December 22, 1998.

Abbott Van Backer: one of eight men charged on July 27, 1983, by federal authorities in Manhattan for conspiring to sell $2 billion of sophisticated weapons to Iran and $15 million of machine guns to the Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA).

Todd Vanbiber: white supremacist, age 29 in 1998, who was injured in 1997 as he was assembling a pipe bomb. In 1998, he was serving a sentence of six and one-half years in federal prison on a guilty plea to possession of explosives. He had planned to set off 14 pipe bombs in the Orlando, Florida, area as diversions for two planned bank robberies to take place on April 19, 1997, the second anniversary of the Oklahoma City bombing, but he changed his mind. He had worked with three other members of the racist neo-Nazi National Alliance.

Victor Vancier: arrested by the FBI on May 8, 1987, for a series of firebombings, a pipe bombing, and a tear gas attack. On August 13, 1987, Assistant U.S. Attorney Gregory O'Connell in Brooklyn said that Vancier, age 30, was responsible for the September 3, 1986, tear gas grenade attack by the Jewish Defense League against a performance by the Soviet Moiseyev Dance Company that injured 26 people and for the October 20, 1986, firebombing of the Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher concert hall in New York City, where the Moscow State Orchestra was to perform. He pleaded guilty to charges of racketeering and bombings aimed at Soviet citizens, including the Lincoln Center attack. He faced 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine on several terrorist charges.

Victor G. Vancier: arrested on December 18, 1978, by New York City police for planning to bomb the Egyptian Tourist Office in Rockefeller Center. He identified himself as the New Jewish Defense League's executive director.

Pedro Varas Flores: hijacker, age 16, of a LAN Caravelle flying from Santiago, Chile, to Puerto Montt on November 12, 1969. He and his friend Patricio Fernando Degach Vergue, age 15, said they wanted to go to Cuba. After a refueling, the crew disarmed the hijackers.

Thirunavukarusu Varatharasa: Sri Lankan, age 35, arrested on September 29, 2006, by the FBI for trying to buy 10 SA-18 shoulder-fired surface-to-air missiles, 500 AK-47 assault rifles, and other military equipment for the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE). The Maryland State's Attorneys' Office announced that he and others were charged with conspiracy to export weapons and munitions, four of them to the LTTE. The four with LTTE links were believed to have conspired to launder money to the group in addition to trying to ship the weapons. Varatharasa was held in federal custody in Guam and was expected to be transferred to Maryland.

Mariela Vargas: spokesperson on December 21, 1989, for the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPF), who said that the group would attack any U.S. objective in Chile in retaliation for the U.S. raid on Panama.

Nelson Vargas Rueda: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrilla commander arrested on March 23, 2000, by police on suspicion of ordering the murder of three U.S. activists kidnapped on February 25, 1999. On April 30, 2002, U.S. attorney general John D. Ashcroft announced murder charges against him. On May 7, 2003, Colombia's president ordered his extradition to the United States. He was turned over to the United States on May 28, 2003.

Vega: would-be hijacker of an Avianca plane flying from Los Angeles to Bogotá on April 29, 1971. He tried to divert the plane to Cuba, but the plane landed in Panama, where he was arrested.

Dr. Paul Vijay: alias of Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf.

Adelaido Villafranco Contreras: Puerto Rican who was killed on May 26, 1983, in a raid in Cholula, Mexico, during investigation of a plot to attack the interparliamentary meeting between U.S. and Mexican legislators scheduled to be held in Puebla in June 1983. One of those arrested was wanted for a string of Armed Front for National Liberation (FALN) bombings.

Herbert Villalobos: sentenced on February 1, 2002, to four months for helping Abdul Aziz Alomari and Ahmed Saleh Alghamdi, two of the 9/11 hijackers, illegally obtain Virginia ID cards.

Mark Vlasic: Yugoslavian-born U.S. citizen who was one of six Croatian National Liberation Forces and the Fighters for a Free Croatia who hijacked Trans World Airlines (TWA) Flight 355, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago, on September 10, 1976. They demanded publication of their communiqués or a bomb would go off in Manhattan; the newspapers agreed, and TWA dropped their leaflets over London, Paris, and Chicago. The plane refueled in Iceland, accompanied by a B707 that dropped propaganda leaflets in Europe. They surrendered in Paris. Formal extradition procedures were waived, and they were immediately returned to the United States. After several jurisdictional battles between U.S. courts, the federal appeals court ruled on January 27, 1977, that the trial would take place in Brooklyn. On May 12, 1977, a New York Supreme Court justice sentenced Vlasic to a minimum of 6 and maximum of 30 years in prison after he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of attempted kidnapping.

Jeremy C. Von Rineman: one of eight members of the Fourth Reich Skin Heads white supremacist group arrested on July 15, 1993, for planning to spark a race war by blowing up the First African Methodist Episcopal Church in south central Los Angeles and assassinating Rodney King. The group planned to sneak into the church as transients and then fire machine guns at the congregation, as well as place pipe bombs under pews. They also intended to kill influential black leaders across the nation. The group was the militant arm of a 50-member group associated with the White Aryan Resistance and possibly was linked with the Church of the Creator based in Niceville, Florida. The Orange County resident faced charges of weapons violations, including possession of several machine guns and silencers. He faced a 20-year sentence. He was not detained but was ordered to appear in court on August 12, 1993.

W

---

Alyan Muhammad Ali al-Wa'eli: born in Yemen in 1970, the Yemeni was believed by the FBI on February 11, 2002, to be planning a terrorist attack in the United States or on U.S. interests in Yemen.

Ammar Abadah Nasser al-Wa'eli: born in Yemen in 1977, the Yemeni was believed by the FBI on February 11, 2002, to be planning a terrorist attack in the United States or on U.S. interests in Yemen.

Michael Wagner: claimed to have knowledge of al Qaeda and Taliban plans to shoot up trains in San Diego, California, when he was detained on an Iowa highway in July 2004. His SUV contained three bulletproof vests, a night-vision scope for a rifle, a telescope, a 9-mm semiautomatic pistol, a bag of ammunition, flight training manuals, Arabic documents, and night-vision goggles. Wagner, age 44, of San Diego pleaded not guilty in U.S. District Court on July 27 to being a felon in possession of body armor and weapons.

Joseph A. Wagstaff: would-be hijacker of North Central 945, a DC9 picking up passengers in Pellston, Michigan, on its way from Detroit to Sault Sainte Marie on April 23, 1970. He had hijacked a bus from Petoskey, Michigan. The passengers left the plane and, state police overpowered him. He was later committed. He had wanted to go to Detroit.

Osameh al-Wahaidy: Jordanian, age 41, of Fayetteville, employed as a spiritual leader at the Auburn Correctional Facility and as a math instructor at the State University of New York at Oswego. He was one of five men connected to the Islamic Assembly of North America (IANA), a Saudi charity that operates out of Ann Arbor, Michigan, who were indicted by federal authorities on February 26, 2003, in connection with two money-raising and distribution efforts. He was one of four Arab men living near Syracuse accused of conspiracy to evade U.S. sanctions against Iraq by raising $2.7 million for individuals in Baghdad through the Help the Needy charity (an IANA affiliate). The funds were placed in New York banks and then laundered through an account at the Jordan Islamic Bank in Amman before they were distributed to people in Baghdad. The four were charged with conspiracy and violation of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which makes it illegal to send money to Iraq. Two of the men could face 265 years in prison and fines of more than $14 million. The other two faced 5 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Wahid: alias of Matarawy Mohammed Said Saleh.

Finis Walker: one of a dozen members of the Viper Militia in Arizona arrested on July 1, 1996, while planning to attack government buildings in Phoenix, including the Internal Revenue Service, the U.S. Secret Service, and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms. On December 31, Walker, age 42, pleaded guilty to three felony counts. On March 20, 1997, he was sentenced to 70 months and fined. (See also Gary Bauer.)

Bobby Wayne Wallace: one of two armed hijackers of a Big Brothers, Inc., general aviation charter flight bound for Atlanta, Georgia, on October 4, 1971. The duo wanted to go to the Bahamas. An FBI agent shot out the plane's tires, so Wallace's fellow hijacker, George Giffe Jr., killed his wife, the pilot, and himself. The copilot and Wallace were unharmed. Wallace was later charged with piracy and kidnapping but was acquitted on June 22, 1972.

Paul Louis Waltz: arrested on December 20, 1985, and charged with making bomb threats on December 4, 1985, against 24 Washington, D.C., locations.

Wang Bing-Zhang: U.S. green card holder and New York resident, age 55, who on February 10, 2003, was jailed for life by a Chinese court for "organizing and leading a terrorist group." China said that the democracy activist had ordered an assassination in 1999, had planned to bomb the Chinese Embassy in Bangkok during visits in 2001, had planned to bomb Chinese mainland roads and bridges, and had made preparations to build a terrorist training base in northern Thailand. Rights activists said Chinese security agents kidnapped him in June 2002 from Hanoi, Vietnam, after he had met with Chinese labor activists there. Chinese police said he was arrested on July 3 when he was found in a temple in southern China while they were investigating a kidnapping. The Guangdong Provincial High People's Court upheld the life term on February 27, 2003.

Deena Wanzie: Wanzie, age 46, of Orlando, Florida, was charged with conspiracy and destruction of property after she and two other members of the racist neo-Nazi National Alliance were arrested on May 8, 1998, on charges of possessing 14 fully assembled pipe bombs that they planned to plant across Orlando, Florida, as diversions for two bank robberies.

Jamal Warrayat: Palestinian from Jordan and a naturalized U.S. citizen who on April 16, 1991, was convicted in U.S. District Court in Newark, New Jersey, of making a threat against U.S. president George Bush. He had phoned the Iraqi Embassy and offered to kill Bush. The embassy was unresponsive.

Chris Marie Warren: one of six Denver-area residents indicted in late March 2003 on charges of harboring an illegal immigrant from Pakistan. A federal magistrate released five of them on bail. The FBI said that three of the Denver-area men had been trained in terrorist techniques and posed a danger to the community. He was freed on $10,000 bail.

Mohammed Abdullah Warsame: alias Abu Maryam. Canadian citizen of Somali descent, age 30, who was detained on December 9, 2003, as a material witness in Minneapolis. He said he knew Zacarias Moussaoui, the "20th 9/11 hijacker." Warsame was under investigation for other possible links to al Qaeda. He had attended an al Qaeda training camp in Afghanistan with Moussaoui and lived with him. Warsame was studying computer programming at Minneapolis Community Technical College.

A similar name—Mohamed Warsama—was on a Kenyan business card seized in 1997 from Wadih el-Hage, a Lebanese and naturalized U.S. citizen who worked for several years as bin Laden's private secretary. El-Hage was convicted in 2001 in New York for his role in the August 7, 1998, bombings in Kenya and Nairobi of U.S. embassies.

Warsame was scheduled to have a hearing on December 16, 2003, regarding an extradition request from the Southern District of New York. The case was sealed.

On January 21, 2004, Warsame was accused in an unsealed federal indictment in Minnesota of one count of conspiring to provide material support to al Qaeda from March 2000 until his arrest. He was represented by the public defender's office. On February 9, he was ordered held without bail after prosecutors said he was a flight risk. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of providing support to a terrorist organization. An FBI affidavit said that he had trained in martial arts and with weapons and had taught English to al Qaeda members.

Carl J. Wascom Jr.: plumber's helper from Boyd, Texas, age 34, who was arrested at work on April 22, 1997, by the Dallas Joint Terrorism Task Force, which detained four would-be terrorists planning to stage attacks and rob an armored car in Chico of $2 million on May 1. They were charged with conspiracy to commit a robbery affecting interstate commerce, which carries a maximum 20-year sentence. (See also Catherine Dee Adams.)

Levar Haney Washington: arrested in July 2005 in Los Angeles in an investigation of a series of 10 gas station holdups. Investigators found contacts to a possible terrorist plot and connections to the radical Islamic group Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh (Assembly of Authentic Islam), which has a presence in the state prison where one of the suspects had been recently held. A dropped cell phone by an accomplice at a crime scene led investigators to search the home of a suspect. The search yielded jihadist literature; documents referring to 9/11; bulletproof vests; and a list of addresses of Southland area synagogues, the Israeli Consulate, National Guard centers, the ticket counter for El Al Israel Airlines at the Los Angeles International Airport, and other sites. Washington and Gregory Vernon Patterson were charged with nine counts of robbery and one count of attempted robbery.

Washington had served time for assault and robbery at Folsom State Prison.

On August 31, a federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted Kevin Lamar James, age 29, the head of a radical Islamic prison gang at California State Prison—Sacramento, and three other men on charges of conspiracy to wage war against the U.S. government, conspiracy to kill service members and foreign officials, and other related crimes. James was serving time for attempted robbery and possession of a weapon in prison. In 1997, he had founded Jamiyyat Ul Islam Is-Saheeh and recruited several inmates, including Washington. After being paroled, Washington was ordered to purchase firearms and explosives in Los Angeles using new followers with no police records. Washington, Patterson, and Hammad Riaz Samana started robbing gas stations together in May 2005. They knew each other through the mosque they attended.

On December 14, 2007, James and Washington pleaded guilty to seditious conspiracy charges—conspiring to levy war against the United States—in a Santa Ana, California, court. Washington pleaded guilty to using a firearm to further the conspiracy. He faced 25 years in prison. Washington was scheduled to be sentenced on April 28, 2008.

Donald Weems: alias Kuwasi Balagoon. On October 6, 1983, a Goshen, New York, court sentenced him to 75 years to life for robbery and murder in connection with the October 20, 1981, Weather Underground holdup of a Brink's truck. Judge David S. Ritter of Orange County Court said he would not be eligible for parole for 75 years. Before sentencing, the defendant read a statement denouncing the United States as imperialist and predicting the inevitability of revolution. In 1984, the New Afrikan Freedom Fighters intended to spring Weems from prison.

Robert F. Weiler Jr.: Prince George's County, Maryland, man, age 25, who was arrested on June 8, 2006, after he had stolen $3,400 from his parents and bragged to friends that he was going to conduct antiabortion attacks. He was charged with making a pipe bomb that partially detonated at 3:45 A.M. inside the closet of a friend's home at 5723 67th Street in Riverdale Heights when police tried to defuse it. No injuries were reported, and the fire was contained in a bedroom. He had planned to set it off at the Metropolitan Family Planning Institute, an abortion clinic at 5915 Greenbelt Avenue in Greenbelt, and to shoot doctors who perform abortions.

The convicted felon phoned police saying that he wanted to surrender and met them at the Youghiogheny Overlook Welcome Center, a rest stop on Interstate 68 in Garrett County in western Maryland, six miles from the West Virginia border. He was held for unlawful possession of a pipe bomb and other offenses. Police found a gun with an ammunition clip in the glove compartment of his car. Weiler said he had stolen the loaded Smith & Wesson .40 caliber pistol from a friend and was going to use it to shoot abortion doctors. He appeared before the U.S. District Court in Greenbelt. Weiler previously had been convicted of obstructing police and sentenced to 60 days in Utah in 2003; he had refused to pay for gas he pumped and had led a 21-mile police chase. In 2002, he had been charged with a concealed weapons offense and accepted probation before judgment. Weiler lived with his parents on Maygreen Avenue in Forestville.

Weiler appeared on June 12 before U.S. Magistrate Judge Charles B. Day. Assistant Public Defender Michael Citara Manis waived Weiler's right to a detention hearing. A preliminary hearing was set for June 22; Weiler remained in custody, charged with four federal weapons offenses that each carried a 10-year sentence. He told investigators that he had acquired black powder, galvanized pipe, end caps, nails, and a seven-foot fuse. On October 27, Weiler pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court in Greenbelt to charges of possessing a pipe bomb, being a felon in possession of a firearm, and attempting to destroy or damage an abortion clinic. The plea agreement called for him to be sentenced to 5 years.

Lauren Weiner: Weiner, age 20, of Philadelphia, was one of three Earth Liberation Front members arrested by the FBI on January 13, 2006, in Auburn, 30 miles east of Sacramento, on suspicion of plotting to blow up U.S. Forest Service facilities, cell phone towers, and power-generating facilities throughout northern California. A court appearance was scheduled for January 17.

Jeffrey Weingarten: one of four members of the Jewish Defense League indicted by a New York court on August 19, 1976, on 11 charges, including the attempted bombing of the Iraqi UN mission on January 12, 1976, and the firing of four rifle shots at the Soviet residential complex in New York City on February 27, 1976. On December 16, four of the defendants were sentenced to prison terms of up to six years, and the fifth received a suspended sentence.

Jacob Weisel: on September 26, 1972, he pleaded guilty in a New York federal court to illegal possession of dynamite, some of which had been used when a faulty timing device prevented a Jewish Defense League bomb from exploding at the Soviet Union's estate in Glen Cove, New York, on June 12, 1971.

Charles A. Wenige: would-be hijacker of Piedmont Airlines Flight 928 bound for Baltimore, Maryland, on January 2, 1973. He wanted a flight to Toronto. He was persuaded by a church cardinal and his own psychiatrist to surrender to federal agents. He pleaded guilty to charges of assaulting a federal officer and interstate transportation of a stolen weapon and was sentenced to 20 years on February 16, 1973.

Clarence White: see entry for Abdul Salaam.

Everett L. White: one of three hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 121 bound for Miami, Florida, and diverted to Havana, Cuba, on January 28, 1969. He was apprehended in Cleveland on April 30, 1976. On September 24, 1976, he was given a 10-year suspended sentence for interference with a flight crew member.

Gregory L. White: hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 358 bound for New York City on June 12, 1971. After a gun battle with an FBI agent, White surrendered. He was charged with air piracy and murder but was found incompetent to stand trial and was committed to a mental institution on October 7, 1971.

Laura Whitehorn: one of seven people indicted on May 11, 1988, by a federal grand jury for the November 7, 1983, bombing of the U.S. Capitol and other attacks. The five-count indictment said the group was engaging in "armed propaganda" for the Revolutionary Fighting Group, Armed Resistance Unit, and Red Guerrilla Resistance. On May 25, 1988, they pleaded not guilty. Whitehorn earlier had been convicted of making and possessing false IDs and weapons possession. On September 7, 1990, she pleaded guilty in a Washington, D.C., federal court to participating in the conspiracy that planned and carried out the Capitol bombing and to the bombing itself. Whitehorn was sentenced on December 6, 1990, to 20 years; she was released on parole after serving 14. (See also Dr. Alan Berkman.)

Viktor Widera: hijacker of an Air Canada flight bound for Toronto on November 24, 1972. The gunman demanded the release of a Czech being held by West Germany for hijacking a plane and other prisoners. A police marksman killed him.

Cathlyn Platt Wilkerson: Weather Underground leader who surrendered in Chicago on December 19, 1980, for the Days of Rage demonstration in 1969. She had last been seen in 1970, fleeing naked with Katherine Boudin when a Greenwich Village bomb factory exploded, killing three. On January 6, 1981, she was sentenced to nine months; on January 15, she began a three-year prison term for building bombs in 1970.

Bill Wilkinson: Imperial Wizard of the Ku Klux Klan in 1977.

William: alias of Guillermo Elbecio Ruiz Gomez.

Cathlyn Platt Wilkerson: Weather Underground founder who surrendered on July 8, 1980, and pleaded guilty to possession of dynamite.

Michael James Will: unemployed commercial pilot who on December 30, 1982, tried to hijack a United Airlines plane to Washington State. He was talked out of it by the crew. He was charged with endangering the lives of others and making terrorist threats.

Londell Williams: unemployed carpenter arrested and held without bail on May 17, 1988, with his wife, Tammy, of Washington, Missouri, on charges of conspiring to kill Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, threatening an informer, and possessing a stolen AR-15 Colt rigged to be a fully automatic rifle. Secret Service agents had taped a conversation on May 10 in which Williams said the white supremacist Order of the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord was planning to assassinate Jackson on July 4, 1988. On May 19, Williams, who said he is prejudiced "against anything that isn't white," was indicted by a federal grand jury in St. Louis. He pleaded not guilty on May 23. The trial was set for July 18. On October 31, he was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $100.

Richard Charles Williams: one of seven people indicted in New York on March 12, 1985, for 10 terrorist bombings by the United Freedom Front over the preceding two years in and around New York City. He was arrested in the Cleveland area in November 1984. On March 7, 1986, a federal court jury convicted him of the December 1983 bombing of a Navy recruiting office and the September 1984 bombing of a Union Carbide plant. On November 29, 1989, a jury in Springfield, Massachusetts, cleared him and two other defendants on federal charges of trying to overthrow the government by force but remained deadlocked on whether alleged bombings constituted racketeering. Two days later, the government said it would not seek a retrial. Williams was already serving a 45-year sentence on New York federal convictions for some of the bombings. The case had begun in May 1986 with an indictment against eight people on charges of seditious conspiracy, racketeering, and racketeering conspiracy. The trial began in January 1989 against only three of the original defendants. Prosecutors said notebooks written in code detailed the strategy of an underground group that bombed courthouses and other facilities and robbed banks from 1976 to 1984. Estimates of the trial costs reached $10 million, mostly for U.S. marshals to maintain security.

Tammy Williams: arrested and held without bail by the FBI on May 17, 1988, with her husband, Londell Williams, of Washington, Missouri, an unemployed carpenter, on charges of conspiring to kill Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson, threatening an informer, and possessing a stolen AR-15 Colt rigged to be a fully automatic rifle.

Jerry Wilson: alias of Eric Robert Rudolph.

Johnnie Wise: one of three Texas men, age 72, arrested on July 1, 1998, by the FBI on charges of threatening via e-mail to use biological weapons against federal agents, including the directors of the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service, and conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction. The men were arrested at a mobile home in Olmito and were held in the Cameron County Jail. They were ordered held in custody on July 2 by U.S. Magistrate John Black, who refused to release them on bond. It was unclear whether the trio belonged to the separatist Republic of Texas group.

Richard Duwayne Witt: hijacker of Allegheny Airlines Flight 730 bound for Boston on September 19, 1970. He demanded to go to Cairo but settled for Havana. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

George E. Wright: alias Burgess. One of five Black Panther Party sympathizers who hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 841 heading for Miami, Florida, on July 31, 1972. In Miami a $1 million ransom was paid, and the hostages were freed, and the plane went on to Algiers the next day. The money was returned to Delta on August 23, 1972.

James Thomas Wright: on May 16, 1980, he took over a Chalk's International Airlines Grumman Mallard amphibian and demanded to go to South Africa. The plane was being readied for its flight from Miami to the Bahamas. He claimed he had been cheated out of $3,000 in welfare payments by Georgia officials. He surrendered after eight hours.

Wu Tun: one of two bicyclists who on October 15, 1984, assassinated prominent Chinese American journalist Henry Liu in his Daly City, California, garage. Liu had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan. Wu was the leader of the Bamboo Gang, one of the largest criminal operations in Taiwan. He escaped to Taiwan but was arrested there on November 30, 1984. On February 4, 1985, the Taiwanese Justice Ministry filed preliminary charges against him. He was found guilty on April 9 and was sentenced to life in prison. On June 4, 1985, the Taiwanese Supreme Court upheld the conviction.

Robert Wyler: convicted killer and drug dealer whose release was sought by the hijackers of a helicopter in New York City on January 25, 1981.

X

---

Haxi Hassan Xhaferi: Albanian who hijacked Pan American World Airways Flight 119, a B707 flying from Beirut to New York with a stopover in Rome, on June 22, 1970, and diverted it to Cairo. He said he was against U.S. imperialism in Vietnam and was seeking asylum (he was a U.S. resident). He also claimed to be a supporter of the Palestinian cause. Cairo police briefly detained him. On February 15, 1973, he was arrested in Los Angeles, California. He was tried and sentenced on June 8, 1973, to 15 years for interference with a flight crew member.

Y

---

Charles Yacoub: Montreal resident of Lebanese descent who on April 7, 1989, hijacked a New York-bound Greyhound bus carrying 11 passengers from Montreal and ordered its driver to drive onto the grounds of the Canadian Parliament in Ottawa, 100 miles west. He wanted to draw attention to his demands that Syrian troops leave Lebanon and release Lebanese prisoners. He surrendered to the Mounties.

Mohammed el-Yacoubi: American arrested in New York City and later released after testifying as a grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Abdalmuhssin el-Yacoubi: American arrested in Virginia and later released after testifying as a grand jury witness in the 9/11 case.

Viken Yacoubian: Armenian convicted of a 1982 plot to blow up the office of a Turkish diplomat. On September 30, 2002, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Ninth Circuit (San Francisco) ruled that he could be deported because a judge lacked the jurisdiction to naturalize him. The decision quashed a federal judge's earlier granting of citizenship after the Immigration and Naturalization Service refused his application.

Brahim Yadel: one of five former inmates of Guantánamo Bay sentenced by a French court on December 19, 2007, for "criminal association with a terrorist enterprise." The prosecution said they had used false IDs and visas to "integrate into terrorist structures" in Afghanistan. They admitted to being in the military camps but said they had not used their combat training. Yadel was sentenced to five years in prison; four were suspended, and one year was time served. His attorney said he would appeal. The French citizens were captured in or near Afghanistan by the United States in 2001 following 9/11. They were held for two years at Guantánamo and then were handed over to Paris in 2004 and 2005.

Gourgen M. Yanikian: assassin of Turkish consul general Mehmet Baydar and deputy consul general Bahadır Demir in Los Angeles at the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel on January 27, 1973. Yanikian surrendered to authorities and claimed that members of his Armenian family had been killed in attacks by Turkey in 1915.

Ibrahim Salih Muhammad al-Yaqub: variant Ibrahim Salih Mohammed al-Yacoub. Indicted in Virginia for the June 25, 1996, bombing of the Khobar Towers military housing complex in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia. He is wanted on multiple conspiracy charges against U.S. nationals and property, including conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, conspiracy to murder U.S. employees, conspiracy and use of weapons of mass destruction against U.S. nationals, conspiracy to destroy U.S. property, conspiracy to attack national defense utilities, bombing resulting in death, murder while using a destructive device during a crime of violence, and murder and attempted murder of federal employees. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He claims to have been born on October 16, 1966, in Tarut, Saudi Arabia. He is five feet four inches tall and weighs 150 pounds.

'Abd al-Rahman Said Yasin: variant Abdul Rahman Yasin; aliases Aboud Yasin, Abdul Rahman S. Taha, Abdul Rahman S. Täher. Wanted for participating in the terrorist bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) in New York City on February 26, 1993, which resulted in 6 deaths, the wounding of 1,000 others, and significant destruction of property and commerce. He is wanted for damage by means of fire or explosives, damage by means of fire or an explosive to U.S. property, transport in interstate commerce of an explosive, destruction of motor vehicles or motor vehicle facilities, conspiracy to commit offenses against or defraud the United States, aiding and abetting, assault of a federal officer in the line of duty, and commission of a crime of violence through the use of a deadly weapon or device. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $5 million for his apprehension. He has claimed to have been born in Saudi Arabia on April 10, 1960. He also has claimed to have been born in Bloomington, Indiana. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 180 pounds.

The Jersey City resident was indicted on August 4, 1993, charged with mixing the chemicals, including the nitroglycerin, for the WTC bomb. Seven days after the bombing, he boarded a flight to Amman, Jordan. He was also suspected of involvement in Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf's Boyinka plot to bomb 11 U.S. airliners flying from the Philippines to the United States.

The Iraqi American was a graduate student in engineering. The FBI interviewed him within six days of the 1993 WTC bombing. He was the roommate of Mohammed Salameh, the Jordanian who parked the bomb-laden van in the underground parking garage. Yasin helped mix the explosives in a storage locker in Jersey City. He left for Jordan and ended up in Iraq, where he worked for the Saddam Hussein government. He refused to return to New York for trial as a co-conspirator.

He might have a chemical burn on his right thigh. He takes medication for epilepsy.

Alireza Yeganeh: seaman arrested in conjunction with eight Iranian students arrested in the United States on November 15, 1979, for attempting to smuggle 3 disassembled Winchester rifles, matching scopes, 15 boxes of ammunition, and a street map of Washington, D.C., with certain embassies marked. He was held for conspiracy and dealing in firearms without a license.

Yolanda: alias of Emily Harris.

Yong Ki Kwon: one of 11 members of the "Virginia jihad network" named in a June 25, 2003, federal indictment for training to work with Muslim terrorists overseas. On August 25, Kwon, age 27, pleaded guilty to conspiracy, to transfer of a firearm for use in a crime of violence, and to discharge of a firearm in relation to a crime of violence. He admitted to training with firearms in northern Virginia to prepare for jihad abroad and to training in Pakistan at a Lashkar-i-Taiba camp. He said he had fired machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades. On November 7, 2003, he was sentenced to 11-plus years for his larger role in the conspiracy.

On February 24, 2006, U.S. District Judge Leonie Brinkema reduced Kwon's sentence to 38 months for cooperating in the investigation. Prosecutors had asked for 41 months. With time served and good behavior, Kwon was due to be released shortly after the new sentence was announced. (See also Mohammed Aatique.)

Chaim Ben Yosef: the FBI arrested the New York City-based leader of the Jewish Defense League on May 8, 1987, for a series of firebombings, a pipe bombing, and a tear gas attack.

Wendy Yoshimura: Symbionese Liberation Army member captured by the FBI in San Francisco, California, on September 18, 1975. She was one of Patricia Hearst's kidnappers.

Georges Fouad Nicolas Younan: one of three individuals arrested in Richford, Vermont, on October 23, 1987, after they illegally crossed into the United States from Canada with a terrorist bomb made from two metal canisters filled with smokeless gunpowder. A black hood found with the bomb and bomb-making equipment resembled hoods used in terrorist attacks in the Middle East. They said they were Canadian citizens living in Montreal but were believed to be Lebanese. On May 17, 1988, the U.S. government reported that they were members of the Syrian Social National Party, a Syrian terrorist organization that assassinated Lebanese president-elect Bashir Gemayel in 1982. Younan was found guilty by a jury of several explosives violations and an immigration violation. He could face 35 years in prison.

Clyde Cleman Young: also known as Abdul Rahman. One of three Hanafi Muslims held on $50,000 bond for the March 9, 1977, takeover of the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. They were brothers. On March 21, they were jailed in lieu of the bond because the judge had received testimony that they would follow the orders of the leader of the triple attack, Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, and that two hostages in the Center had been injured.

Murray Young: on August 13, 1987, Assistant U.S. Attorney Gregory O'Connell in Brooklyn said that he was responsible for the September 3, 1986, tear gas grenade attack by the Jewish Defense League of a performance by the Soviet Moiseyev Dance Company that injured 26 people and for the October 20, 1986, firebombing of the Lincoln Center's Avery Fisher concert hall in New York City, where the Moscow State Orchestra was to perform. He pleaded guilty to charges of racketeering and bombings aimed at Soviet citizens, including the Lincoln Center attack. He faced 20 years in prison and a $25,000 fine on several terrorist charges.

Philip Alvin Young: also known as Abdul Rahim. One of three Hanafi Muslims held on $50,000 bond for the March 9, 1977, takeover of the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. They were brothers. On March 21, they were jailed in lieu of the bond because the judge had received testimony that they would follow the orders of the leader of the triple attack, Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, and that two hostages in the Center had been injured. Young had attended Federal City College and received a journalism degree from Goddard College.

Samuel L. Young: also known as Abdul Qawee. One of three Hanafi Muslims held on $50,000 bond for the March 9, 1977, takeover of the Islamic Center in Washington, D.C., in a coordinated takeover of three facilities that day. They were brothers. On March 21, they were jailed in lieu of the bond because the judge had received testimony that they would follow the orders of the leader of the triple attack, Khalifa Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, and that two hostages in the Center had been injured.

Fawaz Younis: variants Yunis, Rida Yunus; alias Nazeeh. Leader of the six Brigades of the Marches of Lebanese Resistance hijackers who took over Royal Jordanian Airlines Flight 402, a B727 boarding passengers at Beirut International Airport, on June 11, 1985. The plane hopscotched through Europe and the Middle East. The hijackers escaped after setting off a bomb on the plane in Beirut. On September 13, 1987, the FBI arrested the Lebanese Shi'ite, who was believed to have been the spokesperson identified as Nazih. At the time of his arrest, Younis had been lured onto the Skunk Kilo yacht off the Cyprus coast by a friend, in hopes of buying drugs. He was taken to a U.S. Navy vessel that headed west for a rendezvous off Corsica with the U.S. aircraft carrier Saratoga. He was then flown to Andrews Air Force Base and held at Quantico Marine Base.

He pleaded not guilty on September 17, 1987, in a 10-minute hearing before U.S. Magistrate Jean F. Dwyer in Washington, D.C., to a five-count indictment of conspiracy, destruction of an aircraft, and hostage taking, the latter count of which carried a life term. On October 7, 1987, he was arraigned in a federal court on charges of air piracy, placing a destructive device aboard an aircraft, committing violence aboard an aircraft, and aiding and abetting a hijacking. On March 14, 1989, the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., convicted him of air piracy and the taking of hostages. He was found not guilty on three counts of blowing up the aircraft and threatening or harming the passengers. On October 4, 1989, he was sentenced to 30 years in prison. On January 29, 1991, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia upheld the conviction. On March 29, 1993, the Jabal Lubnan Public Prosecution Office indicted him for hijacking the Jordanian plane and blowing it up. His attorney requested extradition.

On March 28, 2005, the United States deported him to Lebanon. He served almost 16 years in prison. He was released from federal prison in Petersburg, Virginia, in February 2005 and was deported to Lebanon for being an illegal immigrant.

Salah Saeed Mohammed bin Yousaf: alias of Walid Muhammad Salih Mubarak bin Attash.

Ramzi Ahmed Youssef: variant of Yusuf.

Siraj Yousif: Sudanese UN diplomat who left the United States in July 1995. He was suspected of involvement in the World Trade Center bombing on February 26, 1993, as well as involvement with the group that was arrested on June 24, 1993, for plotting to bomb several New York City landmarks, including the UN building, and for planning to assassinate Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak during a visit to the United States.

Mohammed Yousry: translator, age 46, who was indicted with three others, including attorney Lynne Stewart, on April 9, 2002, by attorney general John Ashcroft for helping to pass unlawful messages between an Egyptian terrorist organization and blind sheik Abd-al-Rahman, who was serving a life sentence for plotting to blow up the World Trade Center and United Nations buildings in 1993. The foursome were also charged with providing “material support and resources” to the Egyptian Islamic Group. Yousry and fellow defendant Ahmed Abd-al Sattar were also accused of relaying a 2000 fatwa in which the blind sheik called on Muslims everywhere “to fight the Jews and kill them wherever they are.”

On November 19, 2003, a federal grand jury indicted Stewart and Yousry for their roles in a conspiracy led by imprisoned Egyptian cleric Omar Abd-al-Rahman to kill and kidnap people overseas. The duo was accused of helping Abd-al-Rahman issue fatwas and other messages to Ahmed Abdel Sattar, a State Island postal worker, who then circulated the messages around the world. Sattar was indicted for conspiring with Rahman and others to kill and kidnap people abroad; he posted on the Internet the “Fatwah Mandating the Killing of Israelis Everywhere.” Stewart and Yousry were freed on bond; Sattar remained in custody.

On July 22, 2003, U.S. District Judge John G. Koeltl dismissed similar charges against Stewart and Yousry. The new charges provided more details and cited a different legal statute.

On February 10, 2005, the jury found Yousry guilty of providing material support to terrorism.

Mohamed Hesham Youssef: while serving a sentence in Egypt on terrorism charges, Youssef was indicted in Florida on September 16, 2004, with Adham Amin Hassoun, for providing financial support and recruitment for al Qaeda and other terrorist groups fighting in Afghanistan, Chechnya, Kosovo, and Somalia and for helping Jose Padilla (arrested in the 2002 “dirty bomb” case) to attend Afghan terrorist training camps. The U.S. District Court in Miami charged them each with two counts of providing material support to terrorists. The indictment said that between 1994 and 2001, Hassoun wrote more than two dozen checks totaling $53,000 to support terrorists. Many were written to the Holy Land Foundation and Global Relief Foundation charities, which funneled money to terrorists.

David Yu: allegedly drove the getaway car for two bicyclists who on October 15, 1984, assassinated Henry Liu, a prominent Chinese American journalist who had authored several recent articles critical of the ruling Nationalist party in Taiwan, in his Daly City, California, garage. He was arrested in San Gabriel, California, shortly after the murder but was released because of insufficient evidence.

Constantino Yubra: arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia.

Ramzi Ahmed Yusuf: variant Yousef; aliases Abdul Basit, Naji Oweida Haddad, Abdul Basit Mahmood, Abdul Karim, Dr. Richard Smith, Dr. Paul Vijay, Adam Ali Qasim, Amaldo Forlani (he had 21 aliases). Kuwaiti-born planner of the February 26, 1993, bombing of the World Trade Center (WTC) who plotted to set off bombs in a dozen U.S.-destined planes. He also planned to crash a hijacked plane into the McLean, Virginia, headquarters of the Central Intelligence Agency. On March 31, 1993, federal prosecutors in Manhattan indicted him. He was believed to have escaped to Egypt. He had resided at the same Jersey City address once occupied by Mohammed A. Salameh, who had rented the truck used in the WTC bombing. In August 1993, the U.S. offered a $2 million reward for his arrest, and he was indicted for the WTC blast.

The Islamabad-based Pakistan paper claimed that he had planned to set off bombs at the Israeli Consulate in Bombay and the Israeli Embassy in New Delhi. It said he was involved in the bombings of the Israeli embassies in London and Buenos Aires and had contacts with the Afghan mujaheddin and Kashmiri nationalists. A Pakistani, Abdul Shakoor, implicated him in a bombing in Mashad, Iran, on June 20, 1994, in which 25 died and 70 were injured. Pakistani police said he intended to kill Prime Minister Bhutto on December 24, 1993, when she was in the Nursery Area in Karachi. Bhutto had earlier claimed that Yusuf tried to kill her in September 1993 when he drove a car with explosives toward the Bilawal House in Karachi. He accidentally detonated the bomb that he had intended to place under a manhole cover near her home in Karachi. He was treated for injuries to his hands and released.

Yusuf escaped from his Manila apartment on January 6, 1995, when fire broke out as he and associate Said Ahmed were mixing explosive chemicals in the kitchen sink as part of a plot to assassinate the pope.

Yusuf was arrested in the Sokawa rest house in Islamabad, Pakistan, on February 7, 1995, and was extradited to the United States the next day. He had been identified by Ishtiaque (variant Is-tiayaak) Parker, a South African Muslim who lived across from his rooming house. He pleaded not guilty to 11 felony charges in the WTC bombing. On April 1, 1995, Philippine authorities indicted him on charges of plotting to assassinate the pope and bombing the Philippine Airlines B747 in December. On April 13, 1995, U.S. prosecutors indicted him for the bombing of an airliner on December 11, 1994, that killed Japanese passenger Haruki Ikegami and injured 10 people and for planning to bomb other U.S. airliners in the Bojinka plot. The bombing charge carried the death penalty. He was believed to have boarded the plane in Manila, placed a bomb under a seat in a life-vest holder, and then deplaned at Cebu before it left for Tokyo.

On April 2, 1995, Pakistani authorities charged him with illegal possession of explosives.

Yusuf used numerous aliases. After a bomb exploded in his hands, he had been taken to the Civil Hospital under the name Khalid Ali and then had moved to Aga Khan Hospital under the name Adam Baluch.

In an interview with London's al Hayat on April 11, 1995, he said that his real name was Abdul Basit Balouchi and that he was born and raised in Kuwait. He had used the name Abdel Basit Abdel Karim when he obtained a Pakistani passport in New York in 1992. He had used 20 other aliases as well. When he arrived at JFK International Airport on September 1, 1992, his airline ticket was for Azam Mohammed, and his picture ID card was for Kharram Kahn. He said his father was from Pakistan and his mother was Palestinian. His grandmother lived in Haifa, Israel. He claimed he had graduated from the Swansea Institute in the United Kingdom in 1989 with a degree in electrical engineering.

In a prison interview with London's al-Majallah, he claimed that he had used the aliases Ahmad Rashid, Ibrahim Kamal, 'Abd-al-Basit 'Abd-al-Karim, and Abd-al-Basit-al-Balushi. He had been reported as being Kuwaiti, Pakistani, Iraqi, and Palestinian. He claimed to speak Arabic, English, Urdu, and Baluchi.

On October 5, 1995, federal prosecutors in New York City charged that he possessed a letter threatening to kill Philippine president Fidel Ramos and poison the Philippine water supply. The letter demanded the release from a Philippine jail of his colleague, Abdal Hakim Murad, who had been arrested in January in a raid in Manila.

His release was demanded on November 13, 1995, by the group that set off a car bomb in a parking lot of a building belonging to the Saudi National Guard in Riyadh, killing 5 American military trainers and wounding 60 others.

On February 23, 1996, he was indicted for the December 1, 1994, bombing of the Greenbelt Theater in Manila, Philippines, that injured several moviegoers.

On September 5, 1996, he was found guilty on all seven counts in the conspiracy to set off the airplane bombs. Defense attorneys said they would appeal.

He was sentenced to life in prison in 1997.

His release was demanded on March 20, 2000, by the Abu Sayyaf rebels who took more than 70 hostages, many of them children, from two Philippine schools.

On April 4, 2003, the U.S. Court of Appeals of the Second Circuit upheld his convictions in the 1993 World Trade Center and the Boyinka plot.

Z

---

Salam Ibrahim El-Zaatari: Lebanese arrested on October 28, 2001, by Pittsburgh police as he was attempting to board a Northwest Airlines flight bound for Beirut by way of Detroit and Amsterdam. He was carrying a retractable knife. He said he was unaware that the 9/11 hijackers had carried similar box cutters, even though his luggage had several news clippings about the attacks.

Maher Zagha: Jordanian, age 34, who attended college in New York. He was one of five men connected to the Islamic Assembly of North America (IANA), a Saudi charity that operates out of Ann Arbor, Michigan, who were indicted by federal authorities on February 26, 2003, in connection with two money-raising and distribution efforts. He was one of four Arab men living near Syracuse accused of conspiracy to evade U.S. sanctions against Iraq by raising $2.7 million for individuals in Baghdad through the Help the Needy charity (an IANA affiliate). The funds were placed in New York banks and then laundered through an account at the Jordan Islamic Bank in Amman before they were distributed to people in Baghdad. The four were charged with conspiracy and violation of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, which makes it illegal to send money to Iraq. Two of the men could face 265 years in prison and fines of more than $14 million. The other two faced five years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Jorge Enrique Zapporoli: American arrested on March 2, 1983, with four other Salvadorans when handguns and a shortwave radio were found in a car in which they were riding. The next day, he was cleared in El Salvador of all charges that he belonged to the Popular Liberation Front.

Abu Mus'ab al-Zarqawi: most common alias of Ahmad Fadil Nazzai al-Khalaylah, variant Ahmad Fadil al-Khalailah, alias Abu Ahmad, alias Abu Muhammad, alias Sakr Abu Suwayd.

Jordanian-born leader of al Qaeda in Iraq. Zarqawi was wanted for his role in a plot to bomb hotels in Amman and Europe in December 1999.

Two gunmen in the October 28, 2002, assassination of Laurence Foley, a USAID employee in Amman, said they were acting on the orders of the Jordanian al Qaeda lieutenant they had met in Afghanistan when the trio was training in camps. Al Zarqawi provided $10,000 for the attack, along with another $32,000 for additional attacks. On April 6, 2004, a Jordanian court sentenced him to death for the Foley murder.

Moroccan authorities said on June 2, 2003, that he was behind the five May 16, 2003, suicide bombings in Casablanca that killed 45 and wounded more than 100. He obtained $50,000 to $70,000 from al Qaeda for the attacks.

He was responsible for planning and participating in scores of bombings, assassinations, beheadings, and other terrorist attacks during the coalition occupation of Iraq in 2005–2006. The radical Sunni was believed to be al Qaeda's chemical weapons chief. On October 17, 2004, Jordan's military prosecutor indicted al-Zarqawi and 12 other Muslim militants in the plot broken up in March 2004 that Jordanian authorities said involved a chemical-weapons attack that could have killed 80,000.

On February 14, 2005, the Iraqi government named him one of its 29 Most Wanted Insurgents. He called for an “all out war” against Shi’ite Muslims in September 2005. On March 20, 2005, a Jordanian military court sentenced him to 15 years in prison for planning an attack on the Jordanian Embassy in Baghdad and other sites.

On February 15, 2006, a Jordanian court sentenced to death al-Zarqawi and eight other men for plotting chemical attacks against sites in Jordan in 2004. Zarqawi and three others remained at large.

He was killed by coalition forces in an air strike on June 7, 2006. U.S. Rewards for Justice had offered $25 million for his apprehension.

Dr. Ayman Muhammad Rabi al-Zawahiri: aliases Abu Muhammad, Abu Fatima, Muhammad Ibrahim, Abu Abdallah, Abu al-Mu’iz, The Doctor, The Teacher, Nur, Ustaz, Abu Mohammed, Abu Mohammed Nur al-Deen, Abdel Muaz. Deputy to Osama bin Laden of al Qaeda. A physician and religious/ideological leader of al Qaeda who founded the Egyptian Gamaat. His military trial in absentia in Haekstep, Egypt, began on February 1, 1999. The military court sentenced him to death on April 18, 1999. He earlier had spent time in Egyptian jails for radical fundamentalist activities. He issued frequent audio and video to the Internet and al Jazeera following al-Zawahiri and bin Laden’s fleeing Afghanistan after the September 11, 2001, attacks in the United States. He was born in Egypt on June 19, 1951. He was named as an unindicted co-conspirator on October 7, 1998, by a federal grand jury in New York for his role in the August 7, 1998, bombings of the U.S. embassies in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania, and Nairobi, Kenya. He has also been charged with the murder of Americans outside the United States, conspiracy to murder U.S. nationals outside the United States, and an attack on a federal facility resulting in death. U.S. Rewards for Justice has offered $25 million for his apprehension.

‘ali Zaydan: alias Haytham. Monzer al-Kassar’s brother, identified by Doha’s al-Sharq on March 19, 1993, as a member of the Abu Nidal Group’s Central Committee and an officer in the intelligence administration.

Mohammed Mohsen Yahya Zayed: one of two Yemenis arrested in Germany and extradited to the United States, where they were prosecuted in 2005 for conspiracy to send money from Brooklyn to Hamas and al Qaeda. His colleague, Sheik Mohammed Ali Hassan al-Moayad, claimed to have sent millions to the groups. Evidence included documents obtained in Afghanistan, Yemen, and Croatia; sources in the United Kingdom and Israel; and electronic surveillance of their hotel room in Germany where they had stayed in 2003. On March 10, 2005, Zayed was convicted of conspiring to funnel money to al Qaeda and Hamas. Zayed was convicted of attempting to provide material support to Hamas but was acquitted of attempting to aid al Qaeda. Defense attorneys said they would appeal. Zayed was represented by Jonathan Marks. On September 1, 2005, Zayed was sentenced to 45 years. As of 2007, he was being held in the Florence supermax prison in Colorado.

Shaykh Mubarak Salih Mashan al-Zayidi: chief of the Yemeni Jahm tribe that on November 25, 1993, kidnapped Haynes R. Mahoney, director of the U.S. Information Service in Yemen, from his jeep as he drove to a Sanaa hotel. Al-Zayidi was an ex-army officer and former leader of a pro-Iraqi political group.

Leon Zelwanski: man who sought additional restitution for the deaths of 250 relatives in World War II by firing four shots on August 18, 1970, at two attachés in the West German Consulate in New York City. He was arrested.

Ronald Zen: American “self-employed artist” living illegally in the United Kingdom who was arrested on June 1, 1981, when he tried to reenter the United Kingdom from France. He was held in connection with the May 6, 1981, receipt of a padded package with a hoax bomb that was sent to Queen Elizabeth II while death threats were made against Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer.

Nikola Zivovic: Freedom for the Serbia Fatherland (SEPO) terrorist found guilty on May 24, 1979, of bombing and conspiracy charges in the 1975 bombing of the Yugoslav Consulate in Chicago. He was awaiting sentencing on June 20, 1979, when his release was demanded by the hijacker of American Airlines Flight 293.

Khalil Ziyad: arrested in Jordan on December 29, 1999. The FBI said he was a Florida-based procurement agent for Osama bin Laden, specializing in computers, satellite telephones, and covert surveillance equipment. Jordan did not publicly reveal the arrest and later released him. However, Time magazine reported that he was cooperating with the FBI and providing information about bin Laden's U.S. operations.

Zayn Abidin Muhammed Hussein Abu Zubaida: more commonly known as Abu Zubaydah.

Mohammed Farik bin Amin Zubair: Thai Malaysian Jemaah Islamiyah and al Qaeda member suspected of laundering al Qaeda funds through front companies, nonprofit organizations, and orphanages. He was one of four Jemaah Islamiyah terrorists—one Singaporean and three Thais—arrested on June 10, 2003, by Thai authorities, who announced that the suspects were planning attacks on five Western embassies, including those of the United States, Singapore, United Kingdom, and Australia, and Thai beach resorts popular with Western tourists, including Pattaya and Phuket. The Thais were arrested in Narathiwat Province near the Malaysian border.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees, including Zubair, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. During hearings on March 13 and 17, 2007, the U.S. military accused Zubair of transporting $50,000 used in the JW Marriott Hotel bombing in Jakarta.

Mohammed Abu Zubayda: variant of Abu Zubaydah.

Abu Zubaydah: variant Mohammed Abu Zubayda; aliases Zayn al-Abidin Muhammad Husayn, variant Mohammed Hussein Zeinal-Abideen, variant Zayn Abidin Muhammed Hussein Abu Zubaida. Head of al Qaeda logistics and smuggling operations. He was linked to a host of al Qaeda terrorists, including Khalil Deek, with whom he had a $3,000 joint bank account. Jordanian officials told the press on February 29, 2000, that they believed he was a key member of a plot to attack Israelis, Americans, and other Christian tourists. He was among 14 plotters who remained at large.

He was born in 1973 and went to Afghanistan as a teen, where he met bin Laden. The Gaza Strip resident was believed to be a member of bin Laden's inner circle. He fled to Afghanistan after directing the plot to attack Israelis, Americans, and other Christian tourists from Pakistan. He was believed to be in contact with the Algerians charged in a separate attempt to bomb targets in the United States. Some believed he was communications chief and coordinator of al Qaeda operations outside Afghanistan. He also served as a gatekeeper for bin Laden's training camps in Afghanistan.

On September 24, 2001, President Bush ordered his U.S. assets frozen.

He was arrested in Pakistan on March 27, 2002.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees, including Zubaydah, would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. On March 27, 2007, during his hearing before the military combatant status review tribunal at Guantánamo Bay, he denied membership in al Qaeda and said he differed with al Qaeda on its approach to jihad. The Pentagon charged that he was the administrative director of the Khaldan training camp in Afghanistan and that he had forged documents and was the travel facilitator for al Qaeda. He had helped Abu Musab al-Zarqawi sneak into Iraq from Afghanistan in November 2001.

On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared him an enemy combatant, a legal status that permitted the military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

Salem Omar Zubeidy: Libyan from either Denver or Ann Arbor who was charged as an accomplice of two Libyan intelligence officers arrested by the FBI on July 20, 1988, on charges of plotting to assassinate former National Security Council aide Marine Col. Oliver L. North. He was a former chair of the McLean, Virginia-based People's Committee for Libyan Students. U.S. Magistrate Leonie Brinkema set bond between $25,000 and $50,000. The group apparently was planning revenge against U.S. officials believed to have planned the April 1986 air raid against Libya in retaliation for Libyan involvement in several terrorist attacks. On July 28, 1988, a federal grand jury handed down a 40-count indictment, charging the group with conspiracy, money laundering, and violations of U.S. trade sanctions against Libya.

SELECTED READINGS

---

For incident descriptions, see chronology references in the Introduction (detailed in the following entries), and for a more thorough bibliographical treatment, see Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons, Terrorism, 2002–2004: Chronology, 3 vols. (Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2006).

- Alpert, Jane. "I Bombed the Federal Building." Rolling Stone 348 (July 23, 1981): 20–23, 62–63.
- Atkins, Stephen E. Encyclopedia of Modern Worldwide Extremists and Extremist Groups. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2004.
- Ayers, Bill. Fugitive Days. New York: Beacon, 2001.
- Beck, Gabriel, and Sara Jess. John Walker Lindh: American Taliban. San Jose: University Press of California, 2002.
- Bell, Stewart. The Martyr's Oath: The Apprenticeship of a Homegrown Terrorist. New York: Wiley, 2006.
- Brent, William Lee. Long Time Gone: A Black Panther's True-Life Story of His Hijacking and Twenty-Five Years in Cuba. New York: Times, 1995.
- Castano, Carlos. My Confession. Bogotá: Oveja Negra, 2001.
- Castellucci, John. The Big Dance: The Untold Story of Weatherman Kathy Boudin and the Terrorist Family That Committed the Brink's Robbery Murders. New York: Dodd Mead, 1986.
- Chase, Alston. Harvard and the Unabomber. New York: Norton, 2003.
- Chesimard, Joanne. Assata: An Autobiography. Westport, CT: Lawrence Hill, 1988.
- Cohen, David. Requiem for the Heartland: The Oklahoma City Bombing. San Francisco: Collins, 1996.
- Dobson, Christopher, and Ronald Payne. The Terrorists: Their Weapons, Leaders and Tactics. New York: Facts on File, 1982.
- Dohrn, Bernardine, Bill Ayers, and Jeff Jones, eds. Sing a Battle Song: The Revolutionary Poetry, Statements, and Communiqués of the Weather Underground, 1970–1974. New York: Seven Stories Press, 2006.
- Follain, John. Jackal: The Complete Story of the Legendary Terrorist, Carlos the Jackal. New York: Arcade, 1998.
- Gorriti, Gustavo. The Shining Path: A History of the Millenarian War in Peru. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1999.
- Hearst, Patricia Campbell, with Alvin Moscow. Every Secret Thing. New York: Doubleday, 1981.
- Hoffman, Bruce. Inside Terrorism. New York: Columbia University Press, 1998.
- Hunter, Stephen, and John Bainbridge, Jr. American Gunfight: The Plot to Kill Harry Truman—and the Shoot-Out That Stopped It. New York: Simon and Schuster, 2005.
- Lara, Patricia. Siembra Vientos y Recogenas Tempestades. Bogotá: Editorial Planeta, 1982.
- Michel, Lou, and Dan Herbeck. American Terrorist: Timothy McVeigh and the Oklahoma City Bombing. New York: Regan, 2001.

- Mickolus, Edward. International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events, 1968–1977. ITERATE 2 Data Codebook. Ann Arbor, MI: Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, 1982.
- Mickolus, Edward. The Literature of Terrorism: A Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1980.
- Mickolus, Edward. Terrorism, 1988–1991: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Bibliographies and Indexes in Military Studies, No. 6. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1993.
- Mickolus, Edward. Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2008.
- Mickolus, Edward, with Peter Flemming. Terrorism, 1980–1987: A Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1988.
- Mickolus, Edward, Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: A Chronology, Volume 1: 1980–1983. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1988.
- Mickolus, Edward, Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: A Chronology, Volume 2: 1984–1987. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1989.
- Mickolus, Edward, with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1992–1995: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1997.
- Mickolus, Edward, with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1996–2001: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. 2 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002.
- Mickolus, Edward, and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology. 3 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2005.
- Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2008–2010: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, in press.
- Nash, Jay Robert. Terrorism in the 20th Century: A Narrative Encyclopedia from the Anarchists, through the Weathermen, to the Unabomber. New York: Evans, 1998.
- Post, Jerrold. The Mind of the Terrorist: The Psychology of Terrorism from the IRA to al-Qaeda. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
- Shanty, Frank, and Raymond Picquet, eds. Encyclopedia of World Terrorism. Santa Barbara: M.E. Sharpe, 2003.
- Simard, Francis. The Last Word on October. Montreal: Editions Stanke, 1982.
- Smith, Colin. Carlos: Portrait of a Terrorist. New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1976.
- Stern, Susan. With the Weathermen: The Personal Journey of a Revolutionary Woman. New Brunswick: Rutgers University Press, 2007.
- Strong, Simon. Shining Path: The World's Deadliest Revolutionary Force. London: Harper-Collins, 1992.
- Suskind, Ron. The One Percent Doctrine: Deep Inside America's Pursuit of Its Enemies since 9/11. New York: Simon and Schuster, 2006.
- Temple-Raston, Dina, and Marguerite Gavin. The Jihad Next Door: The Lackawanna Six and Rough Justice in the Age of Terror. New York: Public Affairs, 2007.
- Tenet, George J., with Bill Harlow. At the Center of the Storm: My Years at the CIA. New York: HarperCollins, 2007.
- Tinnin, David B. Hit Team. Boston: Little, Brown, 1976.
- U.S. Department of Justice, Office of the Inspector General. Report by the Inspector General on Data Management by the Terrorist Screening Center. September 2007. Web. Retrieved March 15, 2010, from <http://www.usdoj.gov/oig/reports/FBI/a0741/final.pdf>.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. Counterterrorism Calendar 2008: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods and Tactics. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2007.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2006 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2005.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2007 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: NCTC, 2006.

- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2003 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2002.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2004 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2003.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2005 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: TTIC, 2004.
- Wilkerson, Cathy. Flying Close to the Sun: My Life and Times as a Weatherman. New York: Seven Stories Press, 1970.
- Yallop, David A. Tracking the Jackal: The Search for Carlos, the World's Most Wanted Man. New York: Random House, 1993.

INDEX

---

- Abu Khubayb, 8
Abu Nidal Group. See Fatah-
Revolutionary Council
Abu Sayyaf Group, 99, 117, 132,
266, 270
Action for National Liberation
(ALN), 218
Afghan Hezb e Islami, 22
Afghan jihad, 10
AIL. See Algerian Islamic League
Algerian Armed Islamic Group (GIA),
58–59, 228, 271
Algerian Islamic Group, 82
Algerian Islamic League (AIL), 62,
82
Algerian Salafist Group for Preaching and Combat, 63
Alkifah Refugee Center, 59
Al Mur Honey, 190
ALN. See Action for National Liberation
American Irish Republican Army, 81
American Muslim Council, 11
American Muslim Foundation, 11
American Revolutionary Party, 166
Ananda Marg, 192
Animal Liberation Front, 62, 101,
165, 203, 211, 237, 249, 270, 274
Ansar al-Islam (Followers of Islam),
20
April 6 Liberation Movement, 29
Arizona Patriots militia, 55
Armed Forces of National Liberation
(FALN), 193, 277
Armed Front for National Liberation
(FALN), 147, 278
Armed Islamic Group (GIA), 227
Armed Resistance Unit, 39, 42, 47,
65, 72, 235, 284
Armenian Secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia, 52–53, 151
Army of Mohammed, 191
Aryan Nation, 101, 142
Aryan Republican Army, 45, 141,
159, 264, 270
AUC. See Autodefensas Unidas de
Colombia
Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia
(AUC), 71, 119, 146, 234
Babbar Khalsa, 230
Bamboo Gang, 52, 285. See also
United Bamboo Gang
Al Barakaat, 3
Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA),
22, 141, 201
Benevolence International Foundation, 22, 102, 206
Bet Nahrain, 135
Black Guerrilla Family, 232
Black Liberation Army, 46, 72
Black Panther Party, 10, 45, 47, 48,
78, 129, 130, 161, 214, 232
Black Revolutionary Assault Team,
211
Bolivian Socialist Falange, 56
Brigade of the Marches of Lebanese
Resistance, 289
Cambodian Freedom Fighters, 135,
247
Care International, 175, 182, 185
Caribbean Revolutionary Alliance,
105
Central Asia Muslim fighters, 255
Charitable Society for Social Welfare,
26
Chilean and Argentinian Revolutionary Left Movements (MIR), 140,
263
Christian Identity, 44, 101, 142
Church of Creator, 249
Cinchonero National Liberation Front, 194
Citizen Defense Committee, 112
Committee of Rural Dwellers of Marxist Popular League of February 28, 212
Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations, 147, 196, 214
Croatian National Liberation Forces and Fighters for Free Croatia, 48, 157, 212, 279
Days of Rage, 54, 64
Democratic Revolutionary Front, 114
Earth First!, 32, 53
Earth Liberation Front (ELF), 55, 56,
62, 83, 101, 120, 160, 165, 203,
211, 237, 249, 270, 273, 274, 283
Egyptian Anathema and Exile, 63
Egyptian Gama'at, 294
Egyptian Islamic Group, 248, 265,
290
Egyptian Islamic Jihad (EIJ), 30, 32,
150
EIJ. See Egyptian Islamic Jihad
El Condor, 147, 148, 214
ELF. See Earth Liberation Front
ELN. See National Liberation Army
El Poder Cubano, 167, 231
ETA. See Basque Nation and Liberty;
Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty
FALN. See Armed Forces of National Liberation; Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation
FAR. See Revolutionary Armed Forces
Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN), 20, 80
FARC. See Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia

- al-Farooq, Qaeda, 268
 Fatah-Revolutionary Council (Abu Nidal Group), 8–9, 193, 241, 294
 FLQ. See Front for Liberation of Quebec; Quebec Liberation Front
 FMLN. See Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front
 Followers of Islam. See Ansar al-Islam
 Fourth Reich Skin Heads, 76–77, 142, 187, 249, 279
 Fred Hampton Unit of People's Forces, 7, 50, 89, 213
 Freedom for Serbian Fatherland (SEPO), 125, 129, 249, 260, 265, 295
 Front for Liberation of Quebec (FLQ), 147
 Al-Fuqra, 214
- GIA. See Algerian Armed Islamic Group; Armed Islamic Group
 Global Islamic Media Front, 189
 Global Relief Foundation, 103, 120, 121, 265
- Hamas (Islamic Resistance Movement), 3, 6, 11–12, 23, 30, 31, 35, 39, 40, 58, 67, 68, 73, 75, 95, 98, 102, 156, 166, 175, 180, 192, 242, 256, 262
 Hamas Political Bureau, 155
 Harakar ul-Mujahidin, 184
 Haramain Islamic Foundation, 49, 250
 al-Haramain Islamic Foundation, 111
 Harkat ul-Mujaheddin, 240
 Help the Needy, 280
 Hizballah, 19, 23, 30, 51, 60, 74, 94, 97, 100, 108, 110, 124, 138, 171, 178, 240, 273. See also Lebanese Hizballah; Saudi Hizballah
 HLF. See Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development
 Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development (HLF), 6, 30, 67, 103, 150, 165, 166, 198, 256
- IANA. See Islamic Assembly of North America
 IJ. See Islamic Jihad
 IJO. See Islamic Jihad Organization
 International Islamic Relief Organization, 132
 IRA. See Irish Republican Army; Provisional Irish Republican Army
- Iranian Liberation Army, 16
 Irish National Liberation Army, 110, 194
 Irish Republican Army (IRA), 85, 198. See also Provisional Irish Republican Army
 Islamic Army of Aden, 156
 Islamic Assembly of North America (IANA), 61, 110, 118, 280, 293
 Islamic Association for Palestine, 58
 Islamic Guerrilla Army, 106
 Islamic Guerrillas in America, 50, 152, 226
 Islamic Jihad (IJ), 31, 187
 Islamic Jihad Organization (IJO), 183
 Islamic Resistance Movement. See Hamas
 Israeli Kach movement, 194
 Italian Red Brigades, 213
- Jaish-e-Mohammed, 20, 108
 Jaish-i-Muhammad, 240
 JAM. See Jamaat al Muslimeen
 Jamaat al Muslimeen (JAM), 30, 61, 124, 196
 Jamiyyat UI Islam Is-Saheeh, 117, 210, 211, 246, 282
 Japanese Red Army, 269
 JDL. See Jewish Defense League
 Jemaah Islamiyah, 295
 Jewish Defense League (JDL), 15, 39, 41, 42, 48, 54, 66, 69, 76, 82, 85, 87, 91, 124–25, 126, 129, 138, 143, 149, 152, 153, 194, 212, 235, 236, 258, 278, 283, 288, 289 al-Jihad, 4. See also Afghan jihad; Egyptian Islamic Jihad; Islamic Jihad; Islamic Jihad Organization; Palestinian Islamic Jihad; Sudanese Jihad; Virginia jihad network al-Jihad, Tanzim Qaedat, 272
 Jihad training, 5
 John Brown Anti-Klan Committee, 233
 Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of Action for National Liberation, 218, 227
 Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide, 248
- Khaldan training camp, 295–96
 al-Kifah Refugee Center, 175
 Kosovo Liberation Army, 105
 Ku Klux Klan, 269
- Lashkar-e-Taiba, 45, 105, 240, 252
 Lashkar-i-Taiba, 1, 51
 Lebanese Hizballah, 115, 132, 182, 184
 Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE), 202, 266, 278
 Liberty City Seven, 25, 34, 213
 Libyan Islamic Fighting Group, 38
 Lords of Chaos teen militia, 41, 79
 LTTE. See Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam
- Manson family, 80
 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPE), 278
 Mawafaq Foundation, 217
 May 19 Coalition of United States, 42, 54, 235
 Michigan Militia, 162
 MIR. See Chilean and Argentinian Revolutionary Left Movements
 Montana Freeman, 54, 64, 141
 Moro Islamic Liberation Front, 266
 Moro National Liberation Front/Abu Sayyaf, 270
 Movement of Colombia, 20, 153, 165, 205, 275
 MRPE. See Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front
 MRTA. See Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement
 Mujaheddin-e Khalq, 168
 Muslim World League, 16, 73
- National Alliance white supremacist group, 169, 278, 281
 National Commission on Hispanic Affairs of Protestant Episcopal Church, 177
 National Liberation Army (ELN), 147, 164, 201, 202, 233, 243
 National Liberation Movement, 72
 National Socialist German Workers' Party-Overseas Organization, 142
 Nation of Islam, 71
 Neo-Nazi National Alliance, 194, 213
 North Central Gay Strike Force against Public and Police Oppression, 127
- Omega-7, 22, 266
 112 Volunteer Battalion of Militia at Large of Republic of Georgia, 159, 263, 264
 Operation White Terror, 146

- Order of the Covenant, Sword and Arm of Lord, 284
- Organization for Defense of Palestinian Strugglers, 113
- Organization of Oppressed on Earth, 94
- Otpor, 114, 115, 263
- Palestine Liberation Army, 5
- Palestine Liberation Front (PLF), 75
- Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), 9, 24, 83, 160
- Palestinian Islamic Jihad (PIJ), 10, 11, 21, 26, 31, 59, 97, 116, 188, 253
- Pashtun Students Organization, 128
- People's Command, 118
- People's Committee for Libyan Students, 6, 36, 223, 250, 255, 296
- People's Majority, 7, 20, 62, 131, 195
- People's Mujahideen, 208
- People's Revolutionary Armed Forces of Mexico, 201
- People's Vanguard, 88
- PFLP. See Popular Front for Liberation of Palestine
- PIJ. See Palestinian Islamic Jihad
- PLF. See Palestine Liberation Front
- PLO. See Palestine Liberation Organization
- Popular Front for Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), 76, 96, 114, 185, 254
- Popular Liberation Front, 44, 117, 293
- Popular Revolutionary Forces, 140
- Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR), 214, 218, 227
- Project 7 militia, 48, 53, 60, 177, 261
- Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), 37, 44, 50, 63, 64, 74, 101, 109, 120, 136, 138, 144, 150, 153, 159, 160–61, 163, 164, 167, 174, 177, 185, 201, 210, 218, 219, 227, 254, 261, 262, 277
- Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN), 12, 37, 56, 72, 157, 165, 176–77, 208, 212, 232, 233, 234, 271, 272
- al-Qaeda, 2, 3, 6, 8, 9–11, 13–19, 21–31, 33–36, 40–44, 52, 58, 59, 61, 66–71, 73, 74, 78, 81, 84, 86, 87, 90, 92, 94–96, 98–100, 102–5, 107–9, 114, 116, 118, 119, 121, 124, 126–27, 130, 131, 134, 135, 137, 139, 143–45, 148, 150, 151, 153, 162, 170, 171, 173, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 184, 187–92, 198–200, 204–6, 208–10, 217–19, 221–24, 227, 231, 239, 240, 245, 248, 251–53, 255–58, 260, 262, 263–70, 275, 280–82, 290, 293–95; Shura Council, 30
- al-Qaeda, Afghan, 221
- al Qassam Brigades, Izzedine, 95
- Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ), 81, 83, 140, 177, 235, 236, 258, 277
- Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos, 205
- Realm of Chaos, 137
- Red Brigades, 86. See also Italian Red Brigades
- Red Guerrilla Resistance, 39, 42, 47, 48, 72, 233, 235, 284
- Republic of New Africa, 42
- Republic of Texas, 71
- Ressam, 23
- Revolutionary Armed Forces (FAR), 53
- Revolutionary Armed Forces of Columbia (FARC), 44, 56, 65, 85, 120, 128–29, 208, 209, 272
- Revolutionary Fighting Group, 39, 42, 48, 65, 72, 235, 284
- Revolutionary United Front, 84
- SAAR Foundation, 2, 168
- al-Saiqui, 243
- Salafiyya, 70, 137
- Sam Melville-Jonathan Jackson Unit, 7, 89, 213
- Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN), 277
- Sandinista People's Army, 276
- Saudi Hizballah, 182, 190
- SEPO. See Freedom for Serbian Fatherland
- South Boston Defense League, 50
- Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), 145
- Sudanese Jihad, 188
- Sudanese People's Liberation Army, 82
- Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA), 5, 42, 98, 101, 135, 262, 288
- Syrian Nationalist Social Party of Lebanon, 289
- Syrian Social National Party, 122, 178
- al-Takfir Wal Hijira, 69, 70, 137
- Taliban, 8, 10, 14, 34, 35, 37, 40, 41, 44, 78, 103, 105, 113, 127, 143, 171, 198, 199, 200, 224, 248, 264, 270, 275
- Terror against Terror, 143, 231
- Thai Malaysian Jemaah Islamiyah, 295
- True Knights of Ku Klux Klan, 269
- Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA), 38
- Tupamaros, 156
- Twelfth of January Liberation Movement, 158, 165
- United Bamboo Gang, 274
- United Freedom Front, 57, 143, 152, 284
- United Revolutionary Organizations, 148
- United Revolutionary Soldiers of Council of Reciprocal Relief Alliance for Peace, Justice, and Freedom Everywhere, 138
- United Self-Defense Forces of Columbia. See Autodefensas
- Unidas de Colombia
- Viper Militia, 35, 36, 37, 78, 192, 203, 214, 247, 255, 280
- Virginia jihad network, 1, 37, 51, 52, 95, 101, 133, 134, 220, 236, 252, 267, 270, 288
- Virginia Mountaineer Militia, 55, 120, 143, 146, 155, 176, 213, 233
- VPR. See Popular Revolutionary Vanguard
- Wan Min Wan Mat, 113
- Weathermen, 27
- Weather Underground, 28, 31, 32, 41, 42, 43, 46, 48, 54, 59, 64, 72, 76, 85, 90, 98, 120, 121, 203, 231, 232, 234, 235, 252, 261, 282, 284
- White Aryan Resistance, 142, 249
- World United Formosans for Independence, 109
- Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia, 71–72, 233, 291

About the Authors

DR. EDWARD F. MICKOLUS wrote the first doctoral dissertation on international terrorism while earning a PhD from Yale University. He then served in analytical, operational, management, and staff positions in the Central Intelligence Agency for 33 years, where he was CIA's first full-time analyst on international terrorism; analyzed African political, economic, social, military, and leadership issues; wrote political-psychological assessments of world leaders; and managed collection, counterintelligence, and covert action programs against terrorists, drug traffickers, weapons proliferators, and hostile espionage services. He founded Vinyard Software, Inc., whose products include ITERATE (International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events) text and numeric datasets and DOTS (Data on Terrorist Suspects). Clients include 150 universities in 21 countries. His 20 books include a series of multivolume chronologies and annotated bibliographies on international terrorism; 12 book chapters; 100 articles and reviews in refereed scholarly journals and newspapers and presentations to professional societies; and 14 humorous publications. Recent publications include Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology; Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.); The Terrorist List: The Middle East; and International Terrorism in the 1980's: A Chronology of Events, Volumes 1 and 2.

SUSAN L. SIMMONS is an independent writer, editor, and writing coach. She works with faculty to publish and achieve tenure; graduate students to complete dissertations; new fiction and nonfiction writers to complete manuscripts, prepare proposals, and find venues and agents; and businesses to prepare sensitive letters and documents and to research and write reports for venture capital firms. She specializes in the fields of international relations, art history, education, psychology, and business. Simmons holds a master's degree in English literature from the University of Minnesota and has worked in the field of terrorism since 1993. She coauthored Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.).

THE TERRORIST LIST

THE TERRORIST LIST

---

Volume 5

South America

Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

PRAEGER SECURITY INTERNATIONAL

AN IMPRINT OF ABC-CLIO, LLC
Santa Barbara, California • Denver, Colorado • Oxford, England

Copyright 2011 by Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise, except for the inclusion of brief quotations in a review, without prior permission in writing from the publisher.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Mickolus, Edward F.

The terrorist list / Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons.

v. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Contents: v. 1. Asia, Pacific, and Sub-Saharan Africa — v. 2. Western Europe — v. 3. Eastern Europe — v. 4. North America — v. 5. South America.

ISBN 978-0-313-37471-5 (alk. paper) — ISBN 978-0-313-37472-2 (ebook)

1. Terrorists—Biography. 2. Terrorism. I. Simmons, Susan L. II. Title.

HV6430.A1M53 2011

363.325092'2—dc22 2010033700

ISBN: 978-0-313-37471-5

EISBN: 978-0-313-37472-2

15 14 13 12 11 1 2 3 4 5

This book is also available on the World Wide Web as an eBook.

Visit www.abc-clio.com for details.

Praeger

An Imprint of ABC-CLIO, LLC

ABC-CLIO, LLC

130 Cremona Drive, P.O. Box 1911

Santa Barbara, California 93116-1911

This book is printed on acid-free paper

Manufactured in the United States of America

Our endless gratitude to Susan, Ciana, and P. B.

CONTENTS

---

INTRODUCTION	ix
THE TERRORIST LIST	1
SELECTED READINGS	219
INDEX	223

INTRODUCTION

---

The following list includes the names of individuals who have appeared in my previous chronologies of international terrorism and individuals who have been named in open sources as somehow involved in terrorist attacks or organizations. The list is designed to serve as a directory of leaders, perpetrators, financiers, defendants, detainees, persons of interest, conspirators, and aliases in the regions of South America, including Central American and Mexico, from 1950 to 2008. It includes individuals with a nationality of a country in the regions, whose operations were generally considered to have been conducted in the regions, who were detained in the regions, who were wanted for trial in the regions, against whom an arrest warrant had been issued in the regions, and/or whose cases were tried on the soil of the regions. Aliases, nicknames, and kunya, when known, are included.

This list does not purport to be globally comprehensive—it is limited solely to international incidents or other incidents of sufficient import to be included in previous chronologies. Then again, inclusion does not mean the individual is a terrorist. Many of the individuals listed were later determined by a court to be innocent of any involvement in the incidents or organizations or there was not sufficient evidence to proceed to trial. Others were prisoners who had their release demanded in hostage negotiations. Still others were involved in nonterrorist hijackings or nonpolitical criminal activities similar to attacks conducted for political motives and are included to give the flavor of the security environment that existed during this period. Some of those included acted in the prehistory of modern terrorism but served as models for those whose motivations in later years were more in line with terrorism as we now know it.

I have attempted to include major cases of domestic terrorism or cases that have been tried under national antiterrorism statutes. This should not be interpreted as indicating that I consider the individuals to be terrorists, nor does it indicate any position on the underlying motivations of the individuals named or the merits of their causes. In some cases, individuals so accused have gone on to become government leaders.

The list uses the same definitions as my earlier books. International terrorism is the use or threat of use of anxiety-inducing extranormal violence for political purposes by any individual or group, whether acting for or in opposition to established governmental authority, when such action is intended to influence the attitudes and behavior of a target group wider than the immediate victims and when—through the nationality or foreign ties of its perpetrators, its location, the nature of its institutional or human victims, or the mechanics of its resolution—its ramifications transcend national boundaries. I also included incidents that were initially treated by security authorities as terrorist or quasi-terrorist, such as hijackings later determined to be the work of mentally unstable individuals or individuals seeking nontraditional modes of transportation but who did not have terrorist motives.

Due to the criminal nature of terrorism, its perpetrators often use aliases and “also known as” names to mask their identities and increase the propaganda value of their actions. I have attempted to link aliases to the perpetrators’ principal names.

Names are listed alphabetically by surname but are shown with first name first to prevent confusion in reading Arabic names. Several transliteration systems are in use for Arabic names. I have tried to include the major variants, again keyed to the principal name. Arabic names are alphabetized without regard to name fragments such as al-, bin, and Abd-al. The last main element is used for alphabetization. For further thoughts on the difficulty of establishing consistency in transliterations, see my article on the topic.<sup>1</sup> Hispanic names are alphabetized according to the individual’s patronymic.

Date and place of birth are included when reported, except for nonpolitical, nonterrorist hijackers. Such information is often available in the chronologies.

This list, although including tens of thousands of names, is not intended to be used as a terrorist watch list or supplant those used by law enforcement, homeland security, and other authorities around the world. The Justice Department’s FBI Terrorist Screening Center’s database, for example, had 754,960 records per the Government Accountability Office’s May 2007 report and was adding 20,000 records each month. This list is not aimed at such exhaustive coverage. The intention behind this list is to give students of the discipline a starting point for understanding the phenomenon of terrorism, as well as to give the blognoscenti and members of the commentariat—who believe that merely “connecting the dots” is child’s play—some appreciation for the amount of dots that exist and the difficulty experienced daily by those attempting to protect us from the depredations of terrorists.

A popular sound bite for books such as this is a top 10 list of the worst terrorists of all time. Criteria for devising such a list could include the most events masterminded over a career, the most deaths perpetrated, or involvement in a single dramatic event. In no particular order, individuals who should be considered in the hall-of-shame conversation are the following:

- Osama bin Laden, leader of al Qaeda
- Wadi Haddad, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- George Habash, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—Special Operations
- Ilyich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos the Jackal
- Fusako Shigenobu, leader of the Japanese Red Army
- Abimael Guzman, leader of the Peruvian Shining Path
- Khalid Sheikh Mohammad, architect of numerous al Qaeda attacks, including 9/11
- Velupillai Prabhakaran, leader of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam in Sri Lanka
- Ramzi Ahmad Yusuf, mastermind of numerous attacks around the world
- Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber
- Theodore Kaczynski, alias the Unabomber
- Shoko Asahara, leader of Aum Shin Rikyo
- Sabri al-Banna, alias Abu Nidal, leader of the Abu Nidal Group
- Muhammad Atta, leader of the 9/11 hijackers

- Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, leader of al Qaeda in Iraq
- FNU LNU (name unknown), mailer of anthrax envelopes

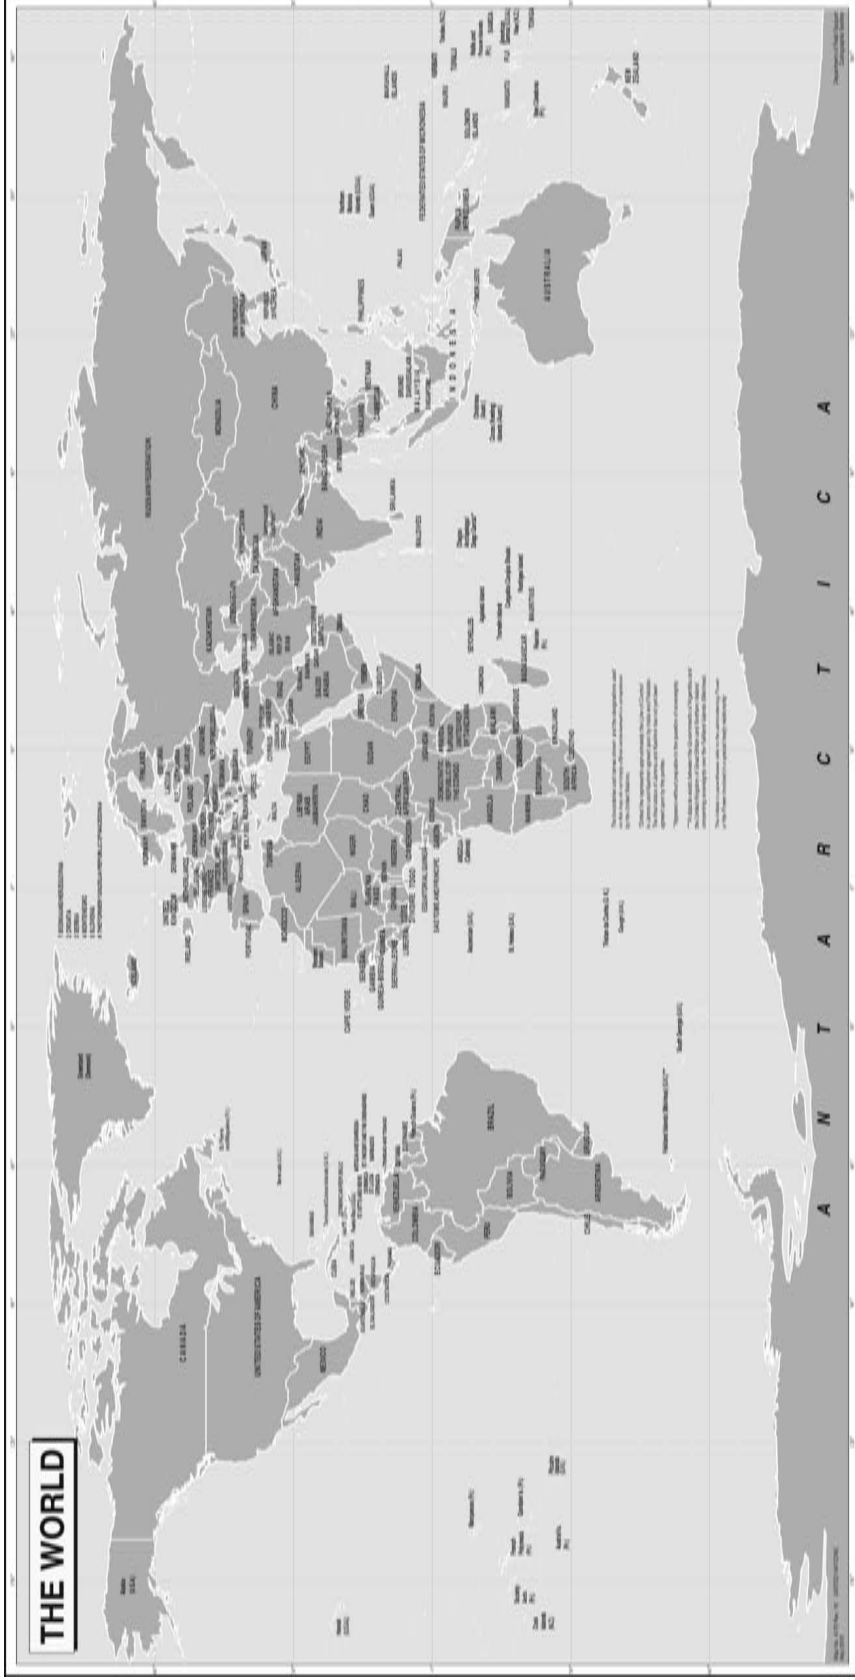

For more detailed information on the terrorist incidents themselves, please consult my chronologies of events and annotated bibliographies covering 1968 to the present and published by Greenwood Press and Iowa State University Press. Also helpful are the National Counterterrorism Center's annual Counterterrorism: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods, and Tactics, published since the mid-1990s, with an interactive online version since 2007. The Terrorist List: South America is available as the Data on Terrorists (DOTS) database from Vinyard Software, Inc., 2305 Sandburg Street, Dunn Loring, VA 22027-1124 USA or vinyardsoftware@hotmail.com.

The fates of many terrorists go unreported by the media, but numerous perpetrators have been subject to the rule of law years, even decades, after their attacks. This list demonstrates that no matter how long it may take, terrorists can be tracked down and brought to justice by like-minded governments.

Edward Mickolus
President of Vinyard Software, Inc.

NOTE

1. Edward F. Mickolus, "Sidesteps towards an Error-Compensated Method of Computing the Probability of Accuracy in Orthographic Biography," Journal of Irreproducible Results 29, no. 2 (1984): 29.

The World. (No. 4170 Rev. 9. UN Cartographic Section.)

A

---

Ali Balesh Abadi: on March 8, 2003, Argentine judge Juan Jose Galeano issued a 400-page indictment against four Iranian diplomats, including the former Iranian Embassy spokesperson in Argentina, accusing them of the 1994 bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society community center that killed 85 people.

Ahmat Abass: alleged member of a Libyan-sponsored Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hit team targeting President Reagan and other senior government officials in November 1981. Some reports located the assassins in Mexico or Canada.

Roberto Abauza Gutierrez: one of the six Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who, on October 29, 1981, hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11. During the hijacking, he referred to himself as “number one.” He had lived in Costa Rica as a political exile. He was arrested on October 30, 1981, in El Salvador, pending extradition. El Salvador agreed to extradition on November 2, but the court system denied extradition on November 16 due to incorrect filing of the extradition request by Costa Rica.

Gabriel Abay: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate. The members were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Hashem Abboud: name used by one of three terrorists reported by Paraguay’s Noticias on August 31, 1994, to have entered the country on August 27, 1994, to conduct a bombing against the Jewish community in Buenos Aires, Argentina. They were to travel from Barcelona, Spain, via Hungary and Germany, then to Rio de Janeiro or São Paulo, then to Foz do Iguacu or Asuncion, then to Ciudad del Este, then onward with their explosives to Buenos Aires for a September 3 attack. He was born between 1959 and 1962, was dark skinned, bearded, and 1.72 meters tall.

Muhammad ‘Abd al-Rahman ‘Abid: aliases Mu’tasim Qasim, Mu’tasim. Egyptian among three Abu Nidal members arrested by Peruvian police on July 16, 1988, for the EgyptAir hijacking of November 24, 1986, as well as the December 1986 Rome and Vienna airport attacks. The trio was trying to form links with Shining Path. Interpol said they had planned the three raids and also planned to attack the Jewish Synagogue of Peru, the Israeli Embassy in Lima, the U.S. Consulate, the Shalom Travel Agency, and national and international maritime transportation companies. Peruvian police planned to expel the trio in early August 1988 for breaking immigration laws.

Patrick Abraham: member of the “Liberty City Seven” arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the FBI office in Miami. On December 13, 2007, U.S. District Judge Joan A. Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants. He was a Haitian who had been held by immigration officials for overstaying his visa. On April 16, 2008, following 13 days of deliberation by a Miami jury, Judge Lenard declared a second mistrial.

Jesus Abrisketa: Basque Nation and Liberty member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Mario Aburto Martinez: alias The Killer. Assassinated Luis Donaldo Colosio, presidential candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party as he was campaigning in Tijuana, Mexico, on March 23, 1994. He was a former member of the Federal Judicial Police. On October 31, 1994, the first district judge in Toluca sentenced him to 42 years for the murder. The Federal Attorney General’s Office said it would appeal because it wanted 50 years. Defense lawyers said they would request eight years.

Ines Paola Acasigüe: Bolivian arrested on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca Cola company, who was abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz. The kidnappers killed their hostage.

Sebastian Acasigüe: Bolivian arrested on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca Cola company, who was abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz. The kidnappers killed their hostage

Antolin Acevedo: one of four Cubans from the Freedom Flotilla arrested by Tampa police on August 15, 1980, as they were attempting to board Eastern Airlines Flight 116 to Miami carrying bottles filled with flammable liquid. There had been a spate of hijackings to Cuba that month.

Aurelio Acevedo: one of four Cubans from the Freedom Flotilla arrested by Tampa police on August 15, 1980, as they were attempting to board Eastern Airlines Flight 116 to Miami carrying bottles filled with flammable liquid. There had been a spate of hijackings to Cuba that month.

Oscar I. Acevedo: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate. The members were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Acheme: alias of Antonio Perera Carvalho.

Ivan Acost: variant Acosta. One of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate. The members were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Miguel Acosta: pilot who diverted his Cubana plane to the United States on July 5, 1960.

Richard Golden Adams: on November 20, 1971, Adams told an Eastern Airlines flight attendant that he “might want to go to Cuba.” He was arrested when a gun was found in his hand luggage.

Juan Adega-Fresneda: one of two Cuban refugees who claimed to be “tired of all the robbing and killing” in New York City and hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 470, a B727 flying from Atlanta, Georgia, to Charleston, South Carolina, on September 17, 1980, and diverted it to Havana. Cuban authorities arrested the duo and returned them to the United States the next day, the first time that Cuba had returned Cuban hijackers to the United States. (See Robert J. LaBadie with similar claim in 1970.) They were indicted on air piracy charges in October 1980. In January 1981, they pleaded guilty and were sentenced to 40 years in jail.

Siamac Adjitchac: one of six Iranian Hizballah members detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252. They had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing but would be deported to Iran through Bogota and Caracas. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Amparo Afanador Soto: alias La Negra. One of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Carlos A. Afraytes: hijacker of a Cruzeiro do Sol YS11 flying from Belem to Macapa, Brazil, on July 4, 1979. The flight was diverted to Cuba after refueling stops in French Guyana and Guyana.

Geronimo Agapito Martinez: Released on July 18, 1995, for lack of evidence in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Carmen Aguapara Benalillo: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Carlos Aguerero Echeverria: Costa Rican leader of the Sandinista National Liberation Front. Aguerero died in Nicaragua circa 1977.

Jose Fernando Aguilar Rivera: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Miguel Rodolfo Aguilar Flores: resident of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, who died on April 16, 1989, when a Chinese-made bomb he was trying to throw from a passing motorcycle at the U.S. Embassy warehouse exploded.

Jose Hector Aguilera Zuazo: one of four armed members of the Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement who, on January 16, 1984, scaled a wall of the Apostolic Nunciature in Santiago and requested asylum. They were wanted in connection with the August 30, 1983, assassination of General Urzua and his two escorts. The two men and two women were armed with three submachine guns, five pistols, a bomb, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Mario Rolando Aguinado Carranza: secretary-general of the National Democratic Union of El Salvador whose release was demanded by 15 armed members of the January 28 Popular Leagues when they took over the Spanish Embassy in San Salvador and seized 10 hostages on February 5, 1980. The government released most of the prisoners; one escaped.

Alejandro Aguirre Carlos: alias of Humberto Villa Macias.

Alejandro Aguirre Ceras: alias of Humberto Villa Macias.

Jose Antonio Aguirre Monzon: intermediary between the Guatemalan Rebel Armed Forces (FAR) and the government in the February 27, 1970, kidnapping of foreign minister Alberto Fuentes Mohr. Aguirre was arrested on March 4. Two days later, five armed FAR members kidnapped U.S. labor attaché Sean M. Holly and demanded the release of Aguirre and three others. He was released on March 8 and flew with two other prisoners to Mexico City.

Miren Agutzane: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Spain protested his nonextradition on November 27, 1993.

Lohamad Ahmad: name on the passport of one of three Lebanese arrested on July 28, 1994, by Costa Rican police in David when they tried to cross the Panama–Costa Rica border with false passports. They were suspected of involvement in the suicide bombing of ALAS Flight HP-1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer on July 19, 1994, that killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen, shortly after the plane left Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit. They reportedly were freed in August 1994.

Naqi Abu-Bakr Ahmad: alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

Farida Goolam Mohamed Ahmed: South African woman, age 48, detained on July 19, 2004, by police at McAllen Airport in Texas after she allegedly entered the country by walking or swimming across the Mexican border. Some of her associates and relatives were suspected of having Pakistani terrorist ties. She was carrying an altered South African passport that had no exit or entry stamps or other visa endorsements, and six pages had been torn out. She also had thousands of dollars in cash. She had taken plane trips around the world before walking into Texas. She was about to board a flight to JFK International Airport in New York via Houston. She appeared on a terrorist watch list. She told two border patrol agents that she left her U.S. entry visa in New York. She was taken into custody for illegal entry and possible deportation proceedings. Her plane tickets included an Emirates Airlines flight on July 8 from Johannesburg, South Africa, to London's Gatwick Airport via Dubai, United Arab Emirates. She had taken a British Airways flight on July 14 from London's Heathrow Airport to Mexico City.

At a hearing for Ahmed on July 27, FBI agent Gary Simmons said that she was carrying $7,300 in currency, including $6,000 in U.S. dollars, a South African Krugerrand gold coin worth $400, and some British pounds and Mexican pesos. She had a valid visa in 1996 and had visited a friend in McAllen before. The government had 30 days to present the case to a grand jury.

On August 19, 2004, a federal grand jury indicted her for illegal entry into the United States, altering a passport, and lying to a federal officer. She was arraigned on August 20, when she pleaded not guilty to charges that carried a sentence of more than 15 years in prison. On September 27, she pleaded guilty to illegally entering the United States, using an altered passport, and making a false statement to a federal agent. She faced a 10-year sentence.

Franklin Aisalla: Ecuadoran member of Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) who was killed in a Colombian military missile attack on a FARC camp in Ecuador that killed 25 rebels.

Mohamed Jalal Akbar: alias of Gerald Leland Merity.

Carlos Alarcon Herrera: one of four Chilean Socialists, three of them brothers, who, on July 5, 1977, hijacked a Ladeco B727 flying from Arica, Chile, on a domestic flight. They diverted it to Lima, Peru. They demanded the release of two Chilean socialists from a Santiago military jail. After five hours of negotiations, they settled for asylum in the Venezuelan Embassy. They had requested clearance to fly to Venezuela and then on to Paris. On July 9, 1977, they were granted asylum in Cuba.

Patricio Alarcon Herrera: one of four Chilean Socialists, three of them brothers, who, on July 5, 1977, hijacked a Ladeco B727 flying from Arica, Chile, on a domestic flight. They diverted it to Lima, Peru. They demanded the release of two Chilean socialists from a Santiago military jail. After five hours of negotiations, they settled for asylum in the Venezuelan Embassy. They had requested clearance to fly to Venezuela and then on to Paris. On July 9, 1977, they were granted asylum in Cuba.

Patricio Alarcon Rojas: student member, age 23, of the Maoist Leftist Revolutionary Movement of Chile who hijacked a LAN B727 flying from Santiago, Chile, to Asuncion, Paraguay, and diverted it to Cuba on December 19, 1969. Believed to be the same person as Patricio Alarcon Herrera.

Willibaldo Alarcon Herrera: one of four Chilean Socialists, three of them brothers, who, on July 5, 1977, hijacked a Ladeco B727 flying from Arica, Chile, on a domestic flight. They diverted it to Lima, Peru. They demanded the release of two Chilean socialists from a Santiago military jail. After five hours of negotiations, they settled for asylum in the Venezuelan Embassy. They had requested clearance to fly to Venezuela and then on to Paris. On July 9, 1977, they were granted asylum in Cuba.

Mohammed Hassan Alayan: one of six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252. He was also suspected of the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society facility in Buenos Aires. He was arrested on January 30, 1995, in Paraguay. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River. Extradition was approved on July 14, 1995.

Fermin Jurado Alborno: one of the variants of Jurado Alborno.

Germin Alborno: one of the variants of Jurado Alborno.

Jurado Alborno: would-be hijacker of an Aerolineas Argentina B737 flying from Salta to Buenos Aires on July 28, 1970. He wanted to go to Cuba. After two refueling stops, an Andean snowstorm forced the plane back to Cordoba. After a 14-hour wait, he surrendered.

Lorenzo Hermin Jurado Alborno: one of the variants of Jurado Alborno.

Miguel Angel Aldana Barrena: Basque Nation and Liberty member who was in Venezuela after being deported. His wife, Ana Maria Petralanda, was arrested in the French Basque country on May 4, 1992.

Damia Alegria: former Farabundo Marti National Liberation commander who said on December 19, 1992, that reports that the group was selling weapons to the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Unit were part of a government disinformation campaign.

Florencio Nina Alex: student and suspected Peruvian terrorist who died in a clash with Chilean police on October 11, 1986.

Alvaro Alfaro Orellan: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Angel Alfonso: one of four Cuban exiles arrested on October 27, 1997, when U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico. The exiles were apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero–American summit in November on Isla Margarita off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group’s executive board. Hernandez and Llama were summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. All were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted seven Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that in 1995, the seven and others began plotting to kill Castro. They obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a hill-point stakeout that overlooked the airport. He noted its location and an offshore spot into satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro.

On December 8, 1999, the jury found the five Cuban exiles not guilty of plotting to assassinate Castro. This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. The U.S. District Court jury deliberated for eight hours over two days before declaring not guilty on all charges Angel Alfonso, age 59, Angel Hernandez Rojo, age 62, Francisco Secundino Cordova, age 51, Jose Rodriguez Sosa, age 59, and Jose Antonio Llama, age 67. Charges against another defendant were dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Daniel Alfaro Bassano: one of three Chilean members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested by Argentine border police on May 24, 1991, in El Breal Township. Two of the members were among the inmates that had escaped from the Santiago prison in Chile and had been tried for smuggling weapons into the country through Carrizal and for involvement in several terrorist attacks. They told the arresting officers that they were coming from Petorca, Chile, and traveling to the interior along the Los Patos River. On May 30, they were handed over to Chilean Carabineros in Paso Las Cuevas, Punta de Vaca.

Ahmad Omar Abu Ali: the United States asked the Saudis to arrest him in the May 12, 2003, triple truck bombing of a Riyadh residential facility that killed 34 and injured 190. His family’s residence in Falls Church, Virginia, was searched by the FBI. He was represented by attorney Ashraf Nubani, who also represented some of the defendants in the June 25, 2003, arrests in northern Virginia against Lashkar-i-Taiba.

On January 28–29, 2005, the U.S. Department of State asked the Saudi government to either indict or return Ali, age 23, to the United States. Ali had been held without charges in Saudi Arabia since June 16, 2003, in connection with the Riyadh bombings. He was studying at the University of Medina when he was picked up with 19 other men suspected of involvement with the bombers of three Western residential compounds that killed 23 people. They were believed to be a jihadist cell in training, led by Ali Abd Rahman Faqasi Ghamdi, who turned himself in to Saudi authorities shortly after the arrests.

Prosecutors indicted Abu Ali on a terrorism warrant on February 22, 2005, calling him a menace to society and requesting no bail. He was represented by attorneys Ashraf Nubani and Edward B. MacMahon Jr. Ali was charged with six counts—including conspiracy to provide material support to al Qaeda, providing material support to al Qaeda, conspiracy to provide support to terrorists, providing material support to terrorists, and contributing service to al Qaeda—and faced a maximum of 80 years in prison. The indictment was returned by a federal grand jury on February 3. He claimed he was tortured in Saudi Arabia.

After his return to the United States, on February 23, 2005, the Justice Department announced that a suspected al Qaeda member had talked with Ali in 2002 or 2003 about assassinating President Bush either via shooting him or setting off a car bomb. The al Qaeda member was killed by Saudi authorities in a shootout in September 2003 in a gun battle with terrorists involved in the May bombings. Ali's contacts were linked to a northern Virginia group that held paramilitary training in support of radical Islamist causes.

Ali graduated as the valedictorian from the Islamic Saudi Academy, a school in northern Virginia, in 1999.

On March 1, 2005, Ali appeared in U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia, facing the burden of proof that he was no danger or flight risk, according to a provision of the 2004 Intelligence Reform Act. He was represented by attorneys Ashraf Nubani and John K. Zwerling. FBI counterterrorism agent Barry Cole told the judge that Ali and other al Qaeda cell members in Saudi Arabia planned to hijack planes overseas and crash them into East Coast targets, kill members of Congress, blow up ships in U.S. ports and aircraft at U.S. military bases, and free terrorists at Guantánamo Bay. Federal magistrate judge Liam O'Grady ruled Ali a flight risk and danger to the public, and ordered Ali to stay in jail pending trial. On March 15, his trial was scheduled for August 22. He had pleaded innocent the previous day. Federal judge Gerald Bruce Lee said that the classified information and foreign witnesses expected to be needed in the trial justified setting a trial date after the May deadline of the speedy trial law.

On September 8, 2005, Ali's indictment was expanded by a federal grand jury in Alexandria, Virginia, with nine charges including planning to kill President Bush by using multiple snipers or to blow him up via suicide bombers, hijacking planes, and bringing al Qaeda members into the United States through Mexico. He now faced life in prison.

On November 22, 2005, after deliberating for three days, a federal grand jury in the U.S. District Court in Alexandria convicted Ali of all nine counts, including conspiracy to assassinate the president, conspiracy to commit aircraft piracy, and providing material support to al Qaeda activities, including kidnapping members of Congress. He faced 20 years to life upon sentencing, which was scheduled for February 17, 2006. Defense attorney Khurruhm Wahid said he would appeal. On March 29, 2006, Ali was sentenced to 30 years in prison with 30 more years of supervised release.

On June 6, 2008, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit upheld his conviction and said that U.S. district judge Gerald Bruce Lee had miscalculated his sentence, sending Ali back to the lower court for resentencing. The prosecution had argued that the 30-year sentence was too lenient.

Andres Almarales Manga: one of three leaders of the 50 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) who, on November 6, 1985, stormed the Palace of Justice in downtown Bogota, Colombia, and killed 10 Supreme Court justices. He was a founder of M-19. He died in a government rescue attempt.

Lucia de Fatima Almeida Santos: medical doctor who, on December 15, 1995, fired small lead shots at the U.S. Consulate General on Padre Joao Manuel Street in São Paulo, Brazil, breaking windows. She lived in Cajamar, São Paulo, and worked in the cabinetmakers union. She said she was against the U.S. government. The Amazon Region Surveillance System was “the straw that broke the camel’s back.”

Patricio Almeida Torres: one of two Ecuadorans arrested on October 10, 1992, after holding up a supermarket in Pasto, Colombia, and taking 21 hostages before surrendering after eight hours. They worked with members of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. He was born in Quito and was a member of the Free Homeland Montoneras Movement. He was wanted for placing propaganda bombs and the May 1986 kidnapping of Enrique Cheverria Gavilanes, who was the Executive Branch representative at the Constitutional Guarantees Court. Police arrested him for that attack and released him in 1987.

Juan Carlos Almiron: released on July 18, 1995, for lack of evidence in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Alonso: spokesperson for the Colombian National Liberation Army hijackers of Avianca Flight 9463 on April 12, 1999.

Andres Ernesto Alsina Bea: Argentine People’s Revolutionary Army (ERP) member arrested in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by ERP’s Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The “people’s prison” was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro. Alsina Bea, a La Opinion journalist, claimed in a May 12 press conference that he had been tortured in Buenos Aires jails; specifically, he was kicked severely, and electric shock was applied to his genitals and mouth.

Segundo Nemesio Alva Marin: Peruvian convicted on January 7, 1994, in Peru of membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement. He was sentenced by a military court to life in prison and fined $50 million. On March 21, 1994, the Special Military Court of the Peruvian Air Force, serving as an appellate court, confirmed the life sentence on charges of high treason. He was involved in the kidnapping of Peruvian entrepreneur Raul Hiraoka Torres and other crimes.

Julio Cesar Alvarado Rivera: member of the Panamanian 20 December Movement (M-20) and one of the suspects in the June 10, 1992, shooting in Panama of U.S. Southern Command Corporal Zak A. Hernandez, who was killed, and Sgt. Ronald Marshall, who died the next day of his wounds. He was a Democratic Revolutionary Party community representative who was charged with embezzlement. On October 28, 1995, the prosecutor dismissed all charges against him.

Pedro D. Alvarado Rivera: engineering student and member of the People’s (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador who confessed, on September 1, 1983, to Salvadoran Treasury Police that he was responsible for the May 25, 1983, assassination of Navy Lt. Cdr. Albert A.

Schaufelberger, the deputy commander of U.S. military advisors in El Salvador. The U.S. government said his confession was forced, and he was innocent.

Jorge Jaime Alvarado: Colombian member of the Colombian narcoguerrilla group Simon Bolivar Guerrilla Coordinating Board who was killed in a clash with Venezuelan authorities on June 11, 1988, in northern Tachira State at the San Felipe farm, Boca de Grita, Garcia Evia municipality, while planning to kidnap a Venezuelan cattle rancher. He was part of a group that had recently held up two buses south of Lake Maracaibo.

Jesus Adolfo Alvarez: arrested by Colombian police for allegedly planning the kidnapping and murder of Fidel Lillo Shifhno, an Italian executive of General American Pipe on June 2, 1988, and Jacobo Gambini, president of the Latin American division of General American Pipe, on June 3, 1988.

Julian Alvarez: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum.

Nelson Alvarez Lopez: one of two would-be hijackers of a Cubana IL14 flying from Havana to Cienfuegos, Cuba, on July 11, 1971. The duo threatened the pilot with guns and grenades but was overpowered by the crew. A grenade exploded, killing a passenger and wounding three others. The hijackers, who did not specify a destination, were handed over to authorities in Havana.

Pedro Pablo Alvarez-DeQuesada: hijacker of Eastern Airlines 950, a DC8 flying from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami, Florida, on February 10, 1969, that was diverted to Cuba. He was indicted on September 24, 1970, by a federal grand jury in the district of Puerto Rico.

Raul Eduardo Alvarez: arrested in Costa Rica on September 27, 1992, for narcotics trafficking and money laundering. His release was demanded on April 26, 1993, by five gunmen who took hostage 19 of 22 Supreme Court justices in San Jose.

Santiago Alvarez: charged on January 11, 2007, after he refused to testify before the grand jury in the terrorism case of Luis Posada Carriles in Venezuela.

Aderval Alves Coqueiro: his release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation (ALN) and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers where they were granted political asylum. Alves was killed by Brazilian police on February 6, 1971, while resisting arrest. He had secretly returned to Brazil.

Jose Alzate Cardona: one of two Colombian subversives arrested on April 16, 1989, by the Antiterrorist Directorate of the Peruvian Police (DIRCOTE) following an armed attack on the police post at Uchiza in which 10 policemen were killed.

Emanuel Amador: Nicaraguan who was one of 120 guerrillas killed in El Salvador in December 1982 during a two-week period.

Luz Amparo Tamayo: pregnant Colombian guerrilla who joined her husband, Carlos Jimenez Millan, in seeking asylum in the Austrian Embassy in Bogota on August 19, 1986. They left 10 hours later, when they discovered that the embassy did not have the power to grant them asylum in Austria.

Commandante Ana: Shining Path member sentenced to 25 years in prison in Peru on August 10, 1998.

Commander Ana Mari: alias of Melinda Anaya Montes.

J. Anaya: would-be hijacker of an Avianca DC4 flying from Monteria to Medellin, Colombia, on June 21, 1971. He wanted to go to Cuba but was overpowered and disarmed by the crew.

Jesus R. Anaya Roseque: Ecuadoran hijacker of a Peruvian ASPA CV990 flying from Buenos Aires, Argentina, to Miami on January 12, 1969, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. Anaya had a Mexican passport. He was returned to Mexico, where he was sentenced to 25 years. On May 6, 1973, he was released and flew to Cuba with 29 other prisoners that Mexico released to secure the release of kidnapped U.S. consul general Terrence Leonhardy.

Melinda Anaya Montes: alias Commander Ana Maria. Anaya was assassinated on April 6, 1983, by members of her Salvadoran rebel group, People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces.

Jose Luis Andrade Maciel: São Paulo dentist arrested on October 14, 1968, by Brazilian police on suspicion of planning the October 12, 1968, machine-gun attack on U.S. Army Capt. Charles R. Chandler in Brazil by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard on October 12, 1968.

Miguel Angel: alias of Jose Rigoberto Valdivia Mora.

Otavio Angelo: Brazilian mechanic arrested on December 20, 1969, in what the local government called a raid on a terrorist arms factory. He was one of five political prisoners whose release was demanded by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard kidnappers of Japanese consul general Nobuo Okuchi in São Paulo on March 11, 1970. He was freed and flew with other released prisoners to Cuba on March 27.

Angelica: armed woman who on September 27, 2007, hijacked a small plane in Puerto Principe, Colombia, and diverted it to Villavicencio, Colombia, to defect from the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia and start a normal life.

Commander Anibal: alias of Carlos Rafael Rodriguez Lanz.

Maximo Anosa: operations planner of the Peruvian Shining Path who was arrested on April 24, 1998.

Bert Ankier Ansen: Swiss citizen arrested as an accomplice by Honduran police in the bombing on March 9, 1985, at Le Volcanic Discotheque on Morazan Boulevard in downtown Tegucigalpa.

Jose Luis Ansola Larranaga: alias Peio el Viejo. Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) military leader arrested by French police in a gunfight in St. Jean de Luz on November 9, 1982. A Madrid newspaper had reported that ETA planned to assassinate the pope during his visit to Spain. He was expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba. On May 4, 1992, he was arrested by police in Brest, Brittany, France.

Comrade Ante: alias of Antedoro Quispe Camayo.

German Antelo: one of 120 members of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

Raymond L. Anthony, Sr.: hijacker of Eastern Airlines 173, a B727 on the Baltimore–Tampa–Miami run on June 28, 1969, that was diverted to Cuba. The unemployed Baltimore auto salesman had a history of drinking. He was indicted by a Baltimore grand jury on August 5, 1969. He returned to the United States via Canada with several other hijackers on November 1, 1969. On October 6, 1970, he was sentenced to 155 years for interference with a flight crew member. He was released on April 23, 1973.

Antonio: alias of Carlos Alberto Marroquin.

Commander Aparicio: alias of Severiano Fuentes.

Alfonso Aparicio: Spanish photographer arrested by Honduran police as an accomplice in the bombing on March 9, 1985, at Le Volcanic Discotheque on Morazan Boulevard in downtown Tegucigalpa.

Nigma Aparicio Ortega: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Mario Apaza: one of three members of the Tapaj Katari Guerrilla Army (EGTK) of Bolivia turned over to the court system on August 21, 1992, for planning to attack the Spain and U.S. embassies in La Paz on October 12 and for planning to conduct five other attacks against Bolivian politicians. He was a bodyguard for EGTK leader Felipe Quispe Huanca. They planned to set off a dynamite charge on Columbus Day outside the Spanish Embassy, then later attack the home of the U.S. ambassador, attack two high tension towers and a telephone plant, and attack the homes of five political leaders of the Bolivian government.

Cristina Apazo: narcoterrorist arrested on July 12, 1985, by Arequipa, Peru, police who raided a cocaine processing facility and seized dynamite and subversive literature. The gang was believed to have ties to the Maoist Shining Path.

Jose Apolinar Sanchez: Colombian National Liberation Army kidnapper arrested on January 12, 1984, by F-2 secret police who rescued Lithuanian businessman Algis Mantas Disibiles. The businessman was being held for a $20 million ransom. The six killed or detained were also implicated in the 1983 kidnapping of Jaime Betancur Cuartas, brother of president Belisario Betancur.

Pompilio Aragon Zamora: alias Pomponio. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Roberto Americo Aragon Aragon: alias of Angel Alberto Salguera Nunez.

Maria Asuncion Arana Altuna: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Raoul Arana Irias: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front members who hijacked a Lancia BAC111 flying from San Salvador, El Salvador, to Managua, Nicaragua, to Miami, Florida, on December 12, 1971. The trio took over the plane out of Managua and demanded to go to Cuba. Upon landing at San Jose, Costa Rica, for refueling, over 200 civil guards stormed the plane. One hijacker was fatally shot; a passenger and another hijacker were wounded. Several passengers were injured when they jumped from the plane as it burst into flames. The two captured hijackers were returned to Nicaragua but escaped custody during the Nicaraguan earthquake of December 23, 1972. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Amaya Araquistain Unamuno: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. An Uruguayan lower court denied his extradition. The decision was appealed before a higher court. The Appeals Court upheld the denial on March 16, 1994, and released him, although he was still charged with use of false documents.

Silvia de Araujo Magalhaes: her release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers where they were granted political asylum. The member of the Brazilian Revolutionary Movement of the 8th claimed in late June 1970 from Algiers that she was involved in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, the U.S. ambassador to Brazil.

Marin Arango: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia commander whose e-mail appeared in a computer file that was seized by Colombian authorities on March 1, 2008. On January 20, 2007, he wrote of how Venezuelan generals Carvajal and Alcala provided 85-mm antitank rockets, which some observers identified as grenade launchers.

Luis Arce Borja: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad who were sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993. They were fined up to 1 billion soles.

Oscar Arce Tapia: one of five individuals arrested on March 16, 1987, by Melipeuco authorities in Chile for holding up a Brink's car carrying arms into Argentina. They were also arrested in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack on the Chilean presidential motorcade by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen armed with grenades and automatic weapons. The gunmen killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts in the motorcade as it was traveling to Santiago, Chile.

Alejandro Arcila: Colombian People's Liberation Army member killed in Bogota on November 20, 1985, by gunmen on a motorcycle.

Miguel Angel Ardana: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members who took refuge at the Apostolic Nunciature in Panama on December 20, 1989. On February 19, 1990, the Venezuelan government announced that they had been granted asylum in Venezuela as of February 10, 1990. The four were living in San Cristobal, the capitol of Tachira State, Venezuela, located 800 kilometers south of Caracas and 40 kilometers from the Colombian border. The government prohibited them from participating in any political activity. Asylum was granted under Article 116 of the Venezuelan Constitution. The four ETA members had been living in Panama for several years as a result of an agreement between the Spanish and Panamanian governments. They took refuge in the Nunciature a few hours after the U.S. military raid into Panama.

Gerardo Ardilla Serrano: leader of a April 19 Movement guerilla column reported on October 10, 1985, by El Tiempo as traveling from Colombia into Venezuela.

Hernan Arenas Bejas: arrested by police in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack on the Chilean presidential motorcade by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen armed with grenades and automatic weapons. The gunmen killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts in the motorcade as it was traveling to Santiago, Chile. His brother, Mauricio Favio Arenas Bejas, was arrested in connection with the same attack on February 19, 1987.

Jacobo Arenas: ideological leader of the Colombian Rebel Armed Forces in May 1988.

Mauricio Favio Arenas Bejas: arrested on February 19, 1987, in a shootout in Santiago, Chile, with National Intelligence Center agents. He was wanted in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack on the Chilean presidential motorcade by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen armed with grenades and automatic weapons.

The gunmen killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts in the motorcade as it was traveling to Santiago, Chile. He was charged with killing the bodyguards by firing a light anti-armor weapon rocket at their car. His brother, Hernan Arenas Bejas, was arrested in connection with the same attack a few days earlier.

Eugenio Areu-Del Campo: one of four Cubans from the Freedom Flotilla arrested by Tampa police on August 15, 1980, as they were attempting to board Eastern Airlines Flight 116 to Miami, Florida, carrying bottles filled with flammable liquid. There had been a spate of hijackings to Cuba that month.

German Arevalo Hernandez: alias Porfirio. One of two former Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front members who claimed responsibility for shooting down a U.S. UH-1 Huey military transport helicopter carrying U.S. military advisors (and perhaps a missile) on January 2, 1991. The helicopter was brought down near the village of Lolotique, El Salvador. The advisors were subsequently murdered on the ground in El Salvador. (Three American crewmen may also have been killed in the shootdown.) Arevalo was believed to have been the triggerman.

On July 30, 1991, the FBI office in Miami issued an arrest warrant charging Arevalo with two counts of first degree murder of an American outside the United States and two counts of using a machine gun in a violent crime. He faced a life sentence. The duo voluntarily surrendered on March 17, 1992. Their defense lawyer requested that they be included in the amnesty decree promulgated by the government with the end of the guerrilla war. They faced 30 years if found guilty in El Salvador. Extradition to the United States was denied. On May 24, 1993, Arevalo was freed by judicial authorities after passage of a general amnesty law.

Maria Argota Hernandez: member of the People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador

(FPL) who was arrested for her involvement in FPL's April 6, 1983, assassination of Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, the group's leader. The assassination took place in Nicaragua. The murder weapon and blood-stained clothing were found in FPL possession.

Patrick Joseph Arguello: alias Enrico Rene Diaz. Member of the Sandinista National Liberation Front who was to meet up with three Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) hijackers. They planned to hijack El Al 291 en route from Tel Aviv to New York with a stopover in Amsterdam on September 7, 1970, as part of the multiple hijackings of that week. Two of the hijackers were denied boarding and hijacked another plane, leaving Arguello and his partner, Leila Khaled, to their own devices in taking over the plane. As Prof. Enrico Rene Diaz, Arguello used a grenade and a pistol to take over the plane, but a steward seized his gun arm and shot him in the chest. Arguello threw his grenade, but the fuse was improperly set. Arguello and Khaled were overpowered by Israeli security men and passengers. After the plane landed in London, Arguello died under an oxygen mask in an ambulance.

Information about Arguello's past conflicts. Some say he was born in San Francisco on March 30, 1943, and lived in Nicaragua as a child. Others say his father was a Nicaraguan physician who married an Irish American woman and settled in Los Angeles. In 1966, he graduated from University of California, Los Angeles. Two years later, he traveled through Mexico to the National Autonomous University of Nicaragua for an MA in sociology, where he might have been recruited by PFLP. Some reports said he was studying in Chile on a Fulbright scholarship.

The Japanese Red Army (JRA) terrorists who attacked Lod Airport on May 30, 1972, named themselves the Squad of the Martyr Patrick Arguello.

Carlos Argueta: leader of 50 members of the Popular League of February 28 (LP-28) who took over the Panamanian Embassy in San Salvador on January 11, 1980, taking several hostages. They demanded the release of 15 political prisoners.

Argueta also joined 15 armed LP-28 members later that year on February 5, 1980, when they took over the Spanish Embassy in San Salvador and seized 10 hostages. They demanded the release of four of their members plus several members of the United Popular Action Front and the secretary-general of the National Democratic Union.

Eleodoro Argueyo Fonseca: one of a group of kidnappers who kidnapped Juan Nicolas Escobar Soto, manager of the Texas Petroleum Company, in Bogota, Colombia, on May 29, 1978. Escobar's body was found on January 3, 1979, when Colombian troops raided a terrorist hideout. Colombian troops shot to death four terrorists, although some sources said that two guerrillas committed suicide in the shootout with authorities and a third kidnapper may have been shot by his comrades while taking refuge in the tunnel leading from their safe house. Argueyo was among the dead terrorists.

Alvenis Arias Isquierdo: Cuban, age 24, who was one of six attackers who hijacked a Cuban Aero Taxi DC3 en route from the Isle of Youth to Havana on March 19, 2003, and diverted it to Key West, Florida. The group broke down the cockpit door and tied up four crew members with tape and rope. Five of the hijackers had knives. The U.S. military scrambled jet fighters and a U.S. Customs Department Black Hawk helicopter to escort the plane. No injuries were reported. The plane landed at Key West International Airport at 8:06 P.M., and the hijackers surrendered. The six were arraigned on air piracy charges and faced 20 years to life in prison if convicted. The 25 passengers and 6 crew members were held at an immigration detention center near Miami. Three days later, 16 passengers returned to Cuba; the others opted to stay in the United States. Cuba demanded the return of the plane, its crew, and all of the passengers, saying it was an "act of terrorism." Cuba later said U.S. prosecution would be acceptable. Reports were unclear as to the nationality of the passengers. One report said no passengers were Cuban and that one was Italian.

On August 7, 2003, U.S. magistrate Judge John O'Sullivan said confessions by Neudis Infantes Hernandez and Yainer Olivares Samon should not be used at trial because the FBI did not give them their Miranda warnings immediately. Edited summaries of the confessions of their four colleagues could be used in the September trial. Prosecutors were given 10 days to respond to his ruling.

On December 11, 2003, the six Cuban defendants were convicted after jurors were not persuaded that the hijacking was a "freedom flight" undertaken with the crew's cooperation. Conviction entailed a mandatory 20 years in prison, with a possible life sentence. On April 21, 2004, four hijackers were sentenced to 20 years in prison; the leader and his brother received 24 years.

Gustavo Arias Londono: number two leader of the April 19 Movement of Colombia killed on July 24, 1986, during an attack on the police garrison in Caldas, Colombia.

Jacinto Arias Cruz: on December 22, 1997, one hundred gunmen wearing blue uniforms gunned down Acteal, Mexico, villagers using .22 caliber rifles and AK-47s in a nine-hour slaughter that began after a 9:00 A.M. church service. The victims included 14 children, 1 infant, 9 men, and 21 women; 4 were pregnant. Some were hacked to death. Most of the victims were members of the peasant group Las Abejas (The Bees), who support the goals—but not the violence—of the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN). EZLN rebelled in January 1994 to demand rights for Chiapas State's impoverished Tzotzil Indians. The state police visited the town once, perhaps twice, during the incident, but apparently did nothing to stop it, saying that they heard no gunshots. On December 27, authorities charged Jacinto Arias Cruz, the mayor of Acteal, with providing the weapons used to kill the 45 people in his Mayan village. He and 23 supporters from nearby villages were charged with homicide, causing injuries, and illegal association. They were imprisoned in Tuxtla Gutierrez, the Chiapas state capital. Many were members of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI).

Juan Jose Aristizabal Kortajarena: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member deported by Panama to France in 1984. His wife, Jone Idigoras Santana, was one of five ETA members arrested in Biarritz, France, on March 18, 1991.

Jail el-Arja: France claimed that Jail el-Arja, age 39, was in charge of South American activities for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) and was one of the PFLP hijackers of Air France 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976. The hijackers diverted the flight to Entebbe, Uganda.

Antonio Arias: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aerial Postal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Juan Jose Aritizaga: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty members who took refuge at the Apostolic Nunciature in Panama on December 20, 1989. On February 19, 1990, the Venezuelan government announced that they had been granted asylum in Venezuela as of February 10, 1990. The four were living in San Cristobal, the capitol of Tachira State, Venezuela, located 800 kilometers south of Caracas and 40 kilometers from the Colombian border. The government prohibited them from participating in any political activity. Asylum was granted under Article 116 of the Venezuelan Constitution. The four ETA members had been living in Panama for several years as a result of an agreement between the Spanish and Panamanian governments. They took refuge in the Nunciature a few hours after the U.S. military raid into Panama.

Pier Giorgio Armanni: one of several Italian fugitives, some of whom belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs, whose extradition was requested of Paraguay on July 5, 1986, by the Italian Justice Ministry.

Raul Armendariz Guadarama: one of two hijackers of an Aeromexico DC9 on May 16, 1978, that they diverted to Mexico City. The duo had been fired in a labor dispute on the Chihuahua Pacific Railroad in the north and had sought publicity and justice.

Jesus Armenteros: one of three Cuban exiles who hijacked National Airlines Flight 28, a DC8 traveling between Tampa and Miami, Florida, on March 12, 1968, that was diverted to Cuba. The trio was indicted on October 14, 1969, by a federal grand jury in Florida. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Carmen Armanica: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty, arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrest followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Eduardo Arocena Omar: alleged Omega-7 leader arrested in the Little Havana district of Miami on July 22, 1983. On December 29, 1983, Arocena was indicted on 14 bombing or attempted bombing charges, with other indictments pending. As of February 21, 1984, he was awaiting trial on charges of attempted murder in the March 25, 1980, discovery of explosives under the car of Cuban United Nations representative Raul Roa Kouri in New York City. On September 13, 1984, he admitted to introducing dengue fever, a disease transmitted by mosquito, to Cuba in 1980. In 1981 the disease killed 158 Cubans, including 101 children. The admission came during his New York trial for the machine-gun killing of Cuban diplomat Felix García Rodríguez in 1980. On September 22, 1984, he was convicted of planning the Queens murder of García, conspiracy in more than a dozen terrorist bombings, racketeering, perjury, weapons charges, and the attempted murder of a second Cuban diplomat. On November 9, 1984, he was sentenced by the U.S. District Court to life plus 35 years in prison. He still faced charges for the bombings of the Mexican and Venezuelan consulates two years earlier.

Cirila Arredondo Vda de Arguedas: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Sybila Arrendondo: Chilean widow of writer Jose Maria Arguedas. In 1988, she was exonerated of subversion charges in Peru. She was believed to be a coordinator between Shining Path and other organizations. She was one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Juan Carlos Arrioran: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members who took refuge at the Apostolic Nunciature in Panama on December 20, 1989. On February 19, 1990, the Venezuelan government announced that they had been granted asylum in Venezuela as of February 10, 1990. The four were living in San Cristobal, the capitol of Tachira State, Venezuela, located 800 kilometers south of Caracas and 40 kilometers from the Colombian border. The government prohibited them from participating in any political activity. Asylum was granted under Article 116 of the Venezuelan Constitution. The four ETA members had been living in Panama for several years as a result of an agreement between the Spanish and Panamanian governments. They took refuge in the Nunciature a few hours after the U.S. military raid into Panama.

Norma Arrostito: Argentine Montonero shot dead on December 3, 1977, when 30 security agents raided a guerrilla hideout in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

On December 15, 1976, the Norma Arrostito Commando of the Montoneros set off a bomb at a Defense Ministry building in Buenos Aires, killing 15 and injuring 30.

Miguel Arroyave: on September 19, 2004, a gun battle between factions of the United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia in Meta Province led to the death of Arroyave and four of his bodyguards. He had participated in peace talks with the government.

Alberto Arroyo Quintero: one of five Cuban hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 73, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, and diverted to Cuba on November 23, 1968. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and three small children believed related to one of the hijackers. The group was indicted on March 10, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the Western District of Kentucky. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Jose Arrue-Martinez: one of three hijackers of Trans-Caribbean Airlines Flight 401, a DC8 flying from Newark to San Juan on August 19, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, the trio was fugitives from an indictment handed down on March 25, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the state of New Jersey.

Jose Miguel Arrugaeta: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

Norma Arteaga Meza: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Comrade Artemio: self-proclaimed leader of Peru's Shining Path in August 2005.

Fadi Assad: one of three Hizballah terrorists reported by the Argentine Foreign Ministry on November 4, 1994, as planning terrorist attacks and on their way to Argentina. He was traveling on a Jordanian passport.

Alajandro Astorga Valdez: one of four Chileans arrested in Peru on October 14, 1993, on suspicion of involvement in terrorist acts. On January 7, 1994, they were convicted in Peru of membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement.

Dr. Nora Astorga de Jenkins: alleged to be one of the Sandinista National Liberation Front's leaders during the seizure of the national palace in Managua, Nicaragua, on August 22, 1978.

Atomic Dog: alias of James Charles Kopp.

Mohamad Ali Attar: Lebanese terrorist, as alleged by Madrid's Agencia EFE news service, who entered Brazil on June 13, 1992, possibly planning to attack the Earth Summit. Interpol claimed that three months earlier Attar had coordinated the terrorist bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina. He was believed to be a member of the Fatah Revolutionary Council. He was married to a Brazilian woman.

Ali Husayn Audi: Lebanese arrested on September 10, 1994, by Argentine police in the Puerto Iguaza area in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was sent to Argentine Judge Galeano on September 14, 1994. He was released by the judge on September, 19, 1994.

Linda J. Austin: one of two hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 401, a DC8 flying from New York to Miami, Florida, on January 2, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. She was carrying her baby and was joined by her husband, Tyrone Ellington Austin. The duo was indicted by a federal grand jury on March 25, 1969, in the Eastern District of New York. As of 1979, she remained at large.

Tyrone Ellington Austin: one of two hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 401, a DC8 flying from New York to Miami, Florida, on January 2, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. He was joined by his wife, Linda J. Austin, who was carrying their baby. He yelled "Black Power" and put a gun to the head of a two-year-old. Austin was wanted for shooting a policeman in April 1968. The duo was indicted by a federal grand jury on March 25, 1969, in the Eastern District of New York. He returned to the United States and was killed by a New York City patrolman after stealing $6,000 from the Manhattan branch of the Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company.

Antonio Avelino Agüero: ordered on July 18, 1995, into preventive detention for being responsible for a coverup in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Hugo Avellaneda Valdez: one of the founders of the Peruvian Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA). Avellaneda was among the 10 MRTA members detained in Bolivia on December 11, 1995. The group coordinated their activities with Bolivia's Revolutionary Left Movement.

Jorge E. Avila Campos: one of three hijackers of an Avianca B727 flying from Pereira to Bogota, Colombia, on May 11, 1974. The plane landed in Bogota, where the gunmen released 26 passengers. The plane flew to Cali, to Pereira, and back to Bogota. The hijackers demanded to go to Cuba and wanted 8 million pesos ($317,300) but were rebuffed. Police stormed the plane at El Dorado Airport, killing one hijacker and capturing the other two, one of whom was wounded in the leg.

Nelly Avila Moreno: alias Karina. Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia's most prominent female military commander, age 45, ended 24 years with the rebels by surrendering with her lover to the authorities on May 18, 2008. She had lost an eye in combat.

Salim Hussein Sami Awadalla: one of three National Liberation Army hijackers of an Avianca DC4 flying from Riohacha to Barranquilla, Colombia, on March 5, 1968. They diverted the plane to Cuba.

Alfredo Ayala: Cuban national who attempted to hijack Pan American Airlines Flight 925, a B727 en route from Miami, Florida, to Houston, Texas, on August 2, 1983, and divert it to Cuba. Passengers subdued him and turned him over to marshals in Houston, where he was charged with felony air piracy and felony interference with a flight crew.

Alfonso Ayub: Costa Rican believed to be the ringleader of a group planning to kill president Rodrigo Carazo Odio with four sticks of dynamite. The group included three Nicaraguans, one Chilean, and one Costa Rican. They were arrested in Costa Rica on April 16, 1980.

Mohammed Azam: one of four Pakistanis suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252. They were arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges had not been dropped.

Dr. Murad Shakir 'Aziz: alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

Blanca Alicia Azocar Marty: Chilean and Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPF) member whose extradition was requested by Chile of Peru on April 19, 1987, and again on May 1, 1987, under terms of Article 7 of the 1932 extradition treaty. Extradition was requested in connection with the September 7, 1986, MRPF attack on the Chilean presidential motorcade by 21 gunmen armed with grenades and automatic weapons. The gunmen killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts in the motorcade as it was traveling to Santiago, Chile.

B

---

Johnny Moraes Baalbaki: one of six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252. They were also suspected of the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli facility in Buenos Aires. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. The Lebanese with Brazilian citizenship were arrested on January 30, 1995, in Paraguay. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. Baalbaki was carrying a false birth certificate and illegal identity card. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River delta. The group was extradited from Paraguay on July 23, 1995, in connection with the discovery of an arsenal near Buenos Aires. They were released on July 27, 1995, in Argentina.

Tomas Aristedes Baez Perez: Dominican who lunged twice at the pilot of a Lear jet that was taking him from New York City to Santo Domingo on October 20, 1977. The pilot landed in Richmond, Virginia. On October 28, 1977, U.S. magistrate David C. Lowe dismissed charges of violating the federal Crime Aboard Aircraft statute regarding interference with a flight crew. Baez had been suffering from psychological problems, and his doctor was scheduled to meet him in the Dominican Republic.

Ajaib Singh Bagri: Sikh sawmill worker from Kamloops, British Columbia, captured on October 27, 2000, in connection with the June 23, 1985, bombing of Air India Flight 182, originating in Canada, that killed 329 people. The B747 was flying from Montreal to London and crashed off Ireland. He faced eight charges, including first degree murder, conspiracy, and attempted murder. He was also charged with the attempted murder of the passengers and crew of Air India Flight 301, in which two baggage handlers were killed in a bombing in 1991 at Tokyo's Narita Airport. The bomb went off in baggage intended for the Air India flight.

On April 28, 2003, his trial began. On March 16, 2005, after a four-year trial, British Columbia Supreme Court Justice Ian Josephson acquitted Indian-born Canadian Sikhs Ripudaman Singh Malik, age 58 (a millionaire businessman), and Bagri, age 55, of murder and other charges in the bombing of Air India Flight 182. They were also acquitted of Tokyo's Narita Airport bombing. The judge said the key witnesses—former girlfriends, paid informants, and former business partners—were not credible. Prosecutors claimed that the bombings were revenge by Sikh separatists for a 1984 raid by Indian forces at the Golden Temple at Amritsar, Punjab State, India, a holy site to Sikhs.

J.V. Baguero Cornejo: would-be hijacker of an Empress Ecuatoriana de Aviacion DC6B Electra turboprop flying from Quito to Guayaquil, Ecuador, on May 23, 1972. He threatened to blow up the plane unless provided with $39,000 and two parachutes. He was killed by two air force men.

Carlos Benigno Balbuena: deputy federal police inspector accused by the Argentine government on March 30, 1970, of being one of four armed members of the right-wing Argentina National Organization Movement who ambushed two Soviet Embassy officials in a commercial garage on March 29, 1970. He was one of three would-be kidnappers captured following a gun battle with police.

Alfredo Bruno Baldra: one of six suspected members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested and charged with arms smuggling on August 11, 1986, in connection with the discovery of a huge arms cache in Corral Bay near El Carrizal Bajo, Chile. The cache included 338 U.S. M-16 rifles used in the Vietnam War, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades, 315 Katyusha rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kilograms of U.S. and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, and 124 kilograms of plastic explosives.

Alejandro Baldu: called a “fugitive from justice” by the Argentina government, the Armed Forces of Liberation (FAL) of Argentina demanded the release of Baldu and a second political prisoner in exchange for kidnapped Joaquin Waldemar Sanchez, Paraguay’s consul in Buenos Aires. The consul was kidnapped on March 24, 1970, and was ultimately released by FAL without the prisoner exchange.

Juan Ballen Garzon: arrested on March 29, 1983, by Colombian Army troops in Morelia. He was a leader of the Finance Committee of the 10th Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia.

Jose Maria Ballestas: Colombian National Liberation Army member arrested on March 19, 2001, in a shopping mall in Caracas, Venezuela, for hijacking Avianca Flight 9463 on April 12, 1999. In December 2001, Venezuela extradited him to Colombia.

Oscar Ballesteros: Rebel Armed Forces (FAR) of Guatemala member whose release was demanded on July 18, 1979, by the FAR kidnappers of vice foreign minister Alfonso Lima.

A. Bappa: one of 100 members of the Liberation Front of Suriname who seized the Afobaka Dam on March 21, 1994, and took 30 workers hostage. The dam is located 100 kilometers south of Paramaribo, Suriname.

Patricio Baquerizo: alias Commander Rolando. Jailed leader of a dissident wing of Alfaro Lives, Damn It of Ecuador. His release was demanded on September 4, 1991, when eight armed members of the group occupied the U.K. Embassy in Quito. He had been on a 16-day hunger strike. The group left peacefully after the Supreme Court of Justice committed itself to speeding up the penal process for him. The occupiers included his brother.

‘Abdallah Barakat: alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

Assad Ahmad Barakat: Brazil-based Lebanese businessman, age 34, suspected of opening two businesses in Chile as cover to move money clandestinely to Lebanese Hizballah. He was an associate of Sobhi Fayad, a Paraguay-based fund-raiser for Hizballah. Brazilian police arrested him in June 2002 in Foz do Iguacu, Parana State, Brazil, in the Tri-border area. Paraguay requested extradition on criminal charges. Barakat was a naturalized Paraguayan who had lived in the Tri-border area for seven years. The Supreme Court ordered his extradition to Paraguay in December 2002. His lawyers applied for refugee status in Brazil; he was to remain in detention in Brazil while his refugee case was considered. The Chilean government opened an investigation in the northern port city of Iquique, Chile. He no longer has significant holdings in Chile, and his partners in Saleh Trading, Ltd., located in Iquique, severed ties with him in 2002. Barakat and his brother still owned an import-export firm in Iquique, but the Chilean government reported that it was inactive. Barakat was extradited to Paraguay on November 17, 2003.

Leandro Barozzi: Italian suspected of membership in the Red Brigades (BR). In a February 1, 1982, interview with El Espectador in Colombia, he said that he was only a friend of Antonio Negri and would present himself to police to deny charges that he shared BR membership with Negri. Italy requested his extradition. Barozzi was a professor of engineering at the Universidad del Valle in Cali, Colombia. On January 15, 1983, he received a visa to remain in Colombia after the Supreme Court determined that the extradition request was improper and the crimes were political.

Diego Barreda: former police inspector who testified on July 14, 1996, to Argentine federal judge Juan Jose Galeano regarding the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in Buenos Aires. He and three other police officers allegedly sold the car bomb used in the attack on the AIMA, in which 86 people were killed and 231 or more injured. He was discharged from duty in 1996 for links with Carlos Telledin, the only person indicted in the case up to that date.

Mario Barreiro: former police inspector who testified on July 14, 1996, to Argentine federal judge Juan Jose Galeano regarding the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in Buenos Aires. He and three other police officers allegedly sold the car bomb used in the attack on the AIMA in which 86 people were killed and 231 or more injured. He was discharged from duty in 1996 for links with Carlos Telledin, the only person indicted in the case up to that date. On September 24, 2001, his trial began; he was charged with helping deliver the van.

Jose Barrera: one of five members of a Shining Path “annihilation squad” led by Rosa Ramos Campos. They were arrested on March 4, 1989, by the Antiterrorist Directorate of the Peruvian Police in Tacna, near the Chilean border, in connection with the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement.

Fausto Basantes Borjia: deputy commander of the Alfaro Lives, Damn It group. Basantes was killed on January 4, 1986, near Ecuador’s Mariscal Sucre Airport while resisting arrest.

Dr. Orlando Bosch: a leader of El Poder Cubano and the Coordination of the United Revolutionary Organizations (CORU) who was convicted on November 15, 1968, of the September 16, 1968, rifle attack (some reports say bazooka) against the Polish freighter Polanika in Miami and of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. He was sentenced to four years. On December 13, 1968, he was convicted of sending threatening telegrams to the heads of state of Spain, Mexico, and the United Kingdom and sentenced to 10 years. He violated his parole and fled to Venezuela on a false passport.

On October 14, 1976, he was arrested by Venezuelan authorities in connection with the October 6, 1976, bombing of Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. CORU and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit.

Bosch had entered the country on a false Costa Rican passport with a tourist visa and also carried a set of false Nicaraguan documents. The U.S. government tried to extradite him. On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted him on qualified murder charges, which carry a maximum penalty of 30 years. On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved him of charges of homicide and high treason in the bombing. On August 4, 1987, a three-judge Venezuelan panel acquitted him of the Cubana attack due to evidence problems.

On February 17, 1988, U.S. marshals arrested him upon his arrival from Caracas, Venezuela, on a parole violation charge stemming from his conviction in the Polanika attack. He had served four years of a 10-year sentence in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for the attack. On March 1, 1988, U.S. district court Judge Kenneth L. Ryskamp ordered him released from federal custody, ruling that a parole commissioner's decision to arrest him was "totally arbitrary and capricious." The government appealed the ruling to the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta. On March 22, 1988, two federal parole examiners recommended Bosch's release on May 16, after he had completed a three-month sentence for parole violation. On May 17, 1988, the Immigration and Naturalization Service issued a temporary exclusion order and began legal preparations to deport him. A bond hearing was set for later that week.

On July 17, 1990, the United States released Bosch from federal prison after he served 14 years in U.S. and South American jails. He was given house arrest and allowed to live with his wife, Adriana, and 14-year-old daughter in West Miami near Little Havana. The United States hoped to deport him, but 32 nations turned down the offer. He was required to stay home 21 hours per day and wear an electronic tracking bracelet.

Vitalmiro Bastos de Moura: variant of Vitalmiro Moura.

Carlos Jaime Bateman Cayon: identified by press reports as Commander Uno, one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. The gunmen ultimately obtained safe haven in Cuba. On July 7, 1980, Panama said it would consider the extradition request for Bateman. The leader of M-19 died in an airplane accident in northwest Colombia, near the Panama border, on April 28, 1983. The plane crash was due to a mechanical failure during bad weather. He and his companions were en route to a meeting in Apartado, Colombia, with leaders of the Maoist People's Liberation Army in an effort to unite Colombian guerrillas.

Clodoaldo Carlos Batista: arrested by Brazilian soldiers on February 22, 2005, as he was trying to get on a ferry 50 miles from Altamira, Colombia. He was held in the February 12, 2005, killing of U.S. nun Dorothy Stang, age 73. Stang was an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary from the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. She was shot to death by two gunmen in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para State, Brazil. On June 22, 2005, a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., indicted Batista and Rayfran das Neves Sales for Stang's murder, conspiracy to murder a U.S. citizen outside the United States, and using a firearm in commission of a crime. Prosecutors said rancher Vitalmiro Moura offered Batista and Neves $25,000 to kill Stang. On December 10, Batista and Neves were convicted of killing Stang. Neves was sentenced to 27 years; accomplice Batista received 17 years.

Daniel Batista: alias of Amado Sanchez Ortega.

Eduardo Bautista: arrested by Colombian police and then confessed to the June 2, 1988, kidnapping and murder of Fidel Lillo Shifihnnno, an Italian executive of General American Pipe, and the June 3, 1988, kidnapping and murder of Jacobo Gambini, president of the Latin American division of General American Pipe.

Jose Joe Baxter: Argentine People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) member arrested in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by ERP's Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo

Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The “people’s prison” was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro. Baxter began his guerrilla career in the 1960s with the ultra-right Tacuara Movement.

Fausto Bazantes: leader of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It who died in 1986 in clashes with police.

Rogelio A. Bazzaglio Recinos: member of the central command of the People’s (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador (FPL) who was suspected of plotting the assassination of Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, on April 6, 1983, by members of the FPL. He and five other FPL members were later arrested. The murder weapon and blood-stained clothing were found in their possession.

Charles Lavern Beasley: U.S. citizen hijacker of an Air Canada Viscount flying from St. John to Toronto and diverted to Cuba on September 11, 1968. He claimed to be a member of a U.S. Black Power group. He was sentenced to concurrent 10-year and 5-year terms for bank robbery and a related offense on August 19, 1968. He was sentenced to a Montreal prison for six years on December 10, 1968. He was deported to the United States on March 25, 1971.

Gabriel Beinstein: Chilean acquitted in Argentina on July 28, 1988, of illegal weapons possession; five other Chilean and Argentine leaders and militants named in the case remained at large.

Clara Aurora Beltran Gonzalez: alias Clarita. One of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Luis Beltran Catalan: arrested by Chilean police in connection with the September 1, 1987, kidnapping by the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chilean Army Col. Carlos Carreno in front of his home in Santiago. He was believed to have entered Chile with Juan Carlos Cansino after attending guerrilla training courses in Cuba.

Pablo Beltran: member of the high command of the Colombian National Liberation Army (ELN), the country’s second largest rebel group. On June 28, 1998, ELN agreed to meet with the new government of president Andres Pastrana.

Alfonso Benavides Esteban: April 19 Movement of Colombia terrorist who participated in the Ecuadoran leftist Alfaro Lives, Damn It kidnapping on August 7, 1985, of Nahim Isaías Barquet, an Ecuadoran banker in Quito, Ecuador. On September 11, 1985, Benavides was gunned down while being transferred by the national police from the penitentiary to the Modelo Barracks where he was to await sentencing for the kidnapping and murder.

Roger Benavides Castellon: variant Venevides. Nicaraguan whose release from Costa Rican prison was demanded by the five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981. He was arrested in El Salvador for attacks against Radio Noticias del Continente.

Leonard S. Bendicks: hijacker of an Island City Flying Service Cessna 210, a charter flying from Key West to Miami, Florida, on July 12, 1968, but diverted to Cuba. He was deported to the United States in September 1968 and apprehended by U.S. authorities on September 24, 1968, at Champlain, New York. He was sentenced to 10 years for kidnapping on March 4, 1971. He was granted a three-year parole on June 27, 1972.

Lori Helen Berenson: alias Comrade Lucia. U.S. citizen, former MIT student, and daughter of two professors, Berenson was arrested on November 30, 1995, in Peru and charged with membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA). She was arrested as she was leaving the Congress building with a faked journalist credential, possibly casing the facility for a terrorist attack. She was scheduled for trial by a military court for high treason and terrorism and faced life in prison. Police believed she was part of a plan to take over Congress and kidnap lawmakers to exchange for imprisoned MRTA leaders. Lima's Expresso said she was MRTA's international liaison officer. Police found army and national police uniforms plus notes detailing MRTA weapons at her house in San Borja district. On December 12, 1995, she admitted her link with MRTA. She said she had rented two terrorist safe houses where several were arrested in La Molina and in San Borja district. She had lived with Panamanian citizen Pacifico Castrellon, who was also arrested. On January 4, 1996, a Peruvian court sentenced her to life in prison. On January 11, 1996, the Supreme Council of Military Justice upheld her life sentence for treason for her MRTA membership. She was to serve her sentence at Yanamayo maximum security prison in Puno. On March 15, 1996, the Supreme Court of Military Justice affirmed her sentence.

Her release was demanded on December 17, 1996, by two dozen MRTA gunmen who took over the Japanese ambassador's residence and held hostage 700 diplomats, business leaders, and government officials.

In June 1997, Peru's highest military court rejected her appeal for a reduced sentence.

On October 13, 1998, she was in a prison hospital to recover from ailments caused by the freezing, high-altitude (121,700 feet above sea level) jail conditions. She was moved to a lower-lying common criminal jail at Socabaya near Arequipa, suffering from circulatory and throat illnesses. On October 20, 1998, she said she was a political prisoner and wanted to return to Yanamayo, a request she echoed on July 10, 1999. She began a hunger strike on January 11, 2000.

On August 28, 2000, Peru's Supreme Military Justice Commission overturned her life sentence and granted her a civilian trial. On June 20, 2001, a civil court convicted her of collaborating with an anti-government guerrilla group and sentenced her to 20 years in prison, the maximum sentence, less five years for time served. The Superior Terrorism Court did not find her to be a militant member of the group. She said she would appeal. On June 26, 2001, president George W. Bush asked Peruvian president-elect Alejandro Toledo to weigh humanitarian factors in her case.

On January 22, 2002, the Peruvian Supreme Court began hearing her case. The court upheld her 20-year sentence on February 18, 2002, by a 4 to 1 vote. Berenson began a hunger strike for a repeal of antiterrorism laws. The next day, Peruvian justice minister Fernando Olivera said she would not receive a presidential pardon.

In September 2004, the Inter-American Court of Human Rights in Costa Rica took up her case and was due to rule later in the month on whether she had received a fair trial. On December 2, 2004, the court upheld the sentence.

Arturo Berganza Bocaletti: claimed by Guatemalan police to have aided in the murder of U.S. ambassador John Gordon Mein in 1968. On June 19, 1977, he was one of four would-be kidnappers of Roberto Rischer Sandhoff, age 17, who died of a bullet wound he received when they attacked him in Guatemala City. He was the son of Roberto Fischer Saravia, a Ford dealer and director of the El Dorado Americana Hotel. Berganza died in the attack. Police said he had been in North Korea, Cuba, and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Olga Berghilz: variants Miryam Bergholz Maguire, Miryam Berholz Maguire. Nurse arrested on January 20, 1987, by Chilean police for working in clandestine clinics for the Manuel Rodríguez Patriotic Front. She was charged with violating the Antiterrorist Law and the Law on Arms Control in connection with a guerrilla training school and with participating in the September 7, 1986, attack on Chilean president Augusto Pinochet. She was acquitted and released on December 24, 1989.

Miryam Bergholz Maguire: variant of Olga Berghilz.

Miryam Berholz Maguire: variant of Olga Berghilz.

Gerado Bermudez: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when National Liberation Army members occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Don Berna: alias of Diego Fernando Murillo.

Adolf Jose Muller Bernal: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

Eduardo Bernardini: Argentine killed during a Bolivian police raid on a Montoneros safe house on October 1, 1980.

Angel Betancourt Cueto: hijacker of a Cubana Ilyushin 18 flying from Santiago, Chile, to Havana, Cuba, on March 27, 1966. Betancourt, the flight engineer, shot the sky marshal to death and then the pilot when he refused to fly to the United States. He escaped from the plane, but was captured on April 11 in a Havana Franciscan monastery, along with the three Franciscans who were hiding him.

Esteban A. Betancourt: one of three Cubans who, on October 2, 1959, hijacked a Cubana Viscount en route from Havana, Cuba, to Santiago, Chile, and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where they requested political asylum.

Gloria L. Betancourt: one of three Cubans who, on October 2, 1959, hijacked a Cubana Viscount en route from Havana, Cuba, to Santiago, Chile, and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where they requested political asylum.

Nelson Betancourt: U.S. resident of Cuban origin who hijacked an Eastern Airlines Airbus-300 en route from Miami to New York on June 14, 1983, and diverted it to Havana. He was arrested by Cuban authorities. He wanted to get his ailing mother out of Cuba.

Gregorio Bezzerra: leading member, age 70, of the clandestine Communist Party of Brazil in prison since 1964. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, the U.S. ambassador to Brazil. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Clifford Bibbs: sentenced to 15 years on December 2, 1983, for the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador.

Maria Dolores Bicanchi Torres: Chilean arrested but later released in connection with the February 1, 1981, explosion of dynamite sticks in the main plaza of Cuzco, Peru.

Bida: alias of Vitalmiro Moura.

Sonia Bidalon Peralta: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Raul Bidegain Greis-sing: Tupamaros leader wanted for kidnappings and bombings. He was arrested on August 7, 1970, by Uruguayan authorities.

Djen Bien-Aime: one of three armed Haitian soldiers who, on October 1, 1988, hopped the fence surrounding the airport and forced their way on board American Airlines Flight 658, scheduled to fly from Port-au-Prince to New York. The trio surrendered their assault rifles to the crew shortly after takeoff. The plane landed at JFK International Airport, where the trio was taken into custody. They requested political asylum. All three were former members of the security forces at Port-au-Prince Airport.

Lidia Elena Biere Diaz: one of four Tupamaros or Argentine People's Revolutionary Army members who hijacked an Aerolineas Argentinas B737 flying from Buenos Aires to Salta, Argentina, on October 20, 1973. The group forced the pilot to fly to Tucuman and then to Yacuiba, Bolivia, where they released all but five of the hostages and demanded a smaller plane to fly to Cuba. The group surrendered after two days, when Bolivia promised safe passage to Cuba.

Peterson Binarwa: Dane arrested on June 30, 1983, for links with the Shining Path in Peru. He was turned over to the Danish Embassy in Lima on July 5, 1983.

Armando Blanco: Tupamaros member killed during the March 29, 1973, arrest by Uruguayan authorities of several Tupamaros members wanted in the kidnapping and murder of USAID official Daniel Mitrione on July 31, 1970.

Buenaventura Blanco: Colombian National Liberation Army finance chief captured on September 16, 2000.

Carlos Blandon Rojas: alias Noel Blandon. One of the six Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who, on October 29, 1981, hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11. He lived in Costa Rica as a political exile. He was arrested on October 30, 1981, in El Salvador, pending extradition. El Salvador agreed to extradition on November 2, but the court system denied extradition on November 16 due to incorrect filing of the extradition request by Costa Rica.

Noel Blandon: alias of Carlos Blandon Rojas.

Craig Blas: teen, age 16, sentenced to no more than six years in a youthful offender facility for the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador.

Ricardo Villas Boas de Sarega: Brazilian student leader arrested on May 1, 1969, for firing at a policeman who was attempting to prevent him and Maria Augusta Carneiro from distributing anti-government literature. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, U.S. ambassador to Brazil. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Gustavo Bogota Aguablanca: variant Bocota. Member of the Colombian U'wa tribe and suspected member of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. On March 25, 1999, Colombian authorities ordered his arrest as an accomplice in the murder of three U.S. activists kidnapped on February 25, 1999. On September 10, 2001, he was convicted. On April 30, 2002, U.S. attorney general John D. Ashcroft announced murder charges against him.

Ronald Thomas Bohle: hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 831, a B727 flying from Miami, Florida, to Nassau, Bahamas, on January 9, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. He said he was a Communist who loved Russia and Cuba. He was initially well received in Cuba but later held in a political prison for several months. He returned to the United States via Canada on November 1, 1969, with several other hijackers. On July 6, 1972, he was sentenced to 20 years for aircraft piracy. On July 30, 1975, the sentence was reduced to 12 years.

Miguel Bolano: Interior Ministry official who contracted a Salas air taxi at Sandino Airport in Managua, Nicaragua, for an internal flight on May 8, 1983, but hijacked the twin-engine, two-seater Cherokee to Costa Rica. Bolano and the pilot were arrested on air piracy charges. Bolano asked for political asylum; the pilot said he was forced to fly to Costa Rica.

Carlos Bolas: alias of Eugenio Vargas Perdomo.

Marino Bolivar Samon: one of three Cuban exiles who hijacked Northeast Airlines Flight 6, a B727 flying from Miami to New York on May 26, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. Photos of two of the hijackers were found in FBI files. A complaint was filed on May 29, 1969, in the Southern District of Florida. An indictment was handed down on February 18, 1970. As of 1979, the trio remained at large.

Jose German Bonilla: Colombian National Liberation Army kidnapper arrested on January 12, 1984, by F-2 secret police who rescued Lithuanian businessman Algis Mantas Disibiles. The businessman was being held for a $20 million ransom. The six killed or detained were also implicated in the 1983 kidnapping of Jaime Betancur Cuartas, brother of president Belisario Betancur.

Byron Vaughn Booth: one of two hijackers of National Airlines Flight 64, a DC8 flying from Los Angeles, California, to Miami, Florida, which had just pulled out of New Orleans, Louisiana, on January 28, 1969, when it was diverted to Cuba. The Cubans refused extradition. The duo had escaped from a California state prison in Chino, where they were serving terms for robbery. As of 1979, they were fugitives from an indictment handed down on January 28, 1979, by a federal grand jury in the Central District of California. On January 26, 2001, Booth was arrested in Nigeria and returned to Los Angeles to stand trial. The former Black Panther was sentenced to 12 years in prison for hijacking on May 17, 2001. U.S. district judge Edward Rafeedie sentenced him after he pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of assault with a deadly weapon on a flight crew member. He was originally charged with aircraft piracy, which carries a 20-year sentence. Booth had been serving five years to life in Chino.

David Lawrence Booth: high school freshman, age 14, who tried to hijack Delta Airlines Flight 670, a DC9 scheduled to fly from Cincinnati to Chicago on November 10, 1969. He claimed that he wanted to go to Sweden but settled for Mexico. He was talked out of his attempt while on the ground. He had taken great interest in the Minichiello hijacking nine days earlier. Federal authorities declined prosecution. He was remanded to the custody of local juvenile authorities, who charged him as a juvenile incorrigible. He was found mentally incompetent and committed to a mental hospital. He was released on April 6, 1971.

Sister Maurina Borges da Silveira: Mother superior of a convent in Ribeirao Preto, Brazil. She was one of five political prisoners whose release was demanded by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard kidnappers of Japanese consul general Nobuo Okuchi in São Paulo on March 11, 1970. She was freed but decided to remain in Mexico City rather than go to Cuba with the other four political prisoners.

Juan Miguel Borges Guerra: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 993, a DC9 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida (some reports said it was a B727 flying to the Virgin Islands) on September 3, 1971. Holding an ice pick at the throat of a flight attendant, Borges demanded to go to Cuba. A deadheading three-man crew and the passengers overpowered him. The flight attendant and the trio were stabbed. Borges was sentenced on March 16, 1972, to 20 years for interference with a flight crew member.

Oscar Eusebio Borjas Gonzales: one of two National Liberation Army hijackers of a SAM Lockheed Electra flying the Cali–Pereira–Medellin, Colombia, route on May 30, 1973. The gunmen threatened to blow up the plane if 140 Colombian prisoners were not released and $200,000 was not paid. The plane flew to Aruba, Ecuador, Peru, Argentina, and Paraguay. All of the passengers escaped or were permitted by the hijackers to leave at different stops along the way. At one of the stops, the hijackers agreed to settle for $50,000 from SAM. They escaped from the plane in Resistencia, Argentina.

Federico Bottini Marin: leader of the People's Revolutionary Army Zero Point (also known as Punto Cero) of Venezuela. He was one of four hijackers of an Avenza Convair 580 flying from Valera to Barquisimeto on May 18, 1973. They threatened to blow up the plane if 79 prisoners were not released from Venezuelan jails. The plane refueled in Curaçao and flew on to Panama City, where five passengers deplaned. The plane flew on to Merida and Mexico City. The hijackers flew on to Havana, Cuba, where they were taken into custody.

Orlando Bottini Marin: arrested in Mérida, Yucatán, Mexico, on March 28, 1977, while carrying documents belonging to William Niehous, president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela. Niehous was kidnapped by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos–Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976.

Thomas J. Boynton: hijacker of a Piper Apache PA24 he had chartered to fly from Marathon to Miami, Florida, on February 17, 1968, but had diverted to Havana. On November 1, 1969, he was one of six U.S. hijackers who arrived in Montreal on board the Cuban freighter Luis Arces Bergnes. The six were rearraigned at Plattsburgh, New York, and turned over to U.S. marshals. He was sentenced to 20 years for kidnapping on May 12, 1970.

Jose Bracho Campos: associate of the late Mexican guerrilla leader Genaro Vasquez Rojas. His release was demanded on May 4, 1973, by the People's Revolutionary Armed Forces of Mexico members who kidnapped Terrence G. Leonhardy, U.S. consul general to Guadalajara. He and 29 other freed rebels flew to Havana, Cuba, on a Mexican airliner on May 6.

Juan Luis Bravo: Colombian, age 27, extradited with Henri Jamioy Quistial to Miami on October 28, 2002. The duo appeared in federal court on a 10-count indictment that said they were part of a for-profit kidnap group operating in the Amazon basin from 1997 to 2001. They were to face trial in U.S. District Court in Washington. This was the first time Colombia had permitted its citizens to be tried in the United States on a non-drug crime. They faced life for the kidnapping and murder on October 12, 2000, in Ecuador of U.S. hostage Ron Sander, an oil rig supervisor. Some of the kidnappers had been members of the since-disbanded Popular Liberation Front.

William Lee Brent: Black Panther captain identified by the FBI as being involved in a shootout with police in San Francisco following a gas station robbery in November 1968. Skipping bail, he hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 154, a B707 flying from Oakland, California, to New York on June 17, 1969, diverting it to Havana, Cuba, where he was taken into custody and jailed for 22 months. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the district of New York on June 24, 1969.

He attended the University of Havana, graduating in 1981. He later worked as a Havana DJ under the name Bill Beaumont. In 1996, he published his autobiography, titled Long Time Gone: A Black Panther's True-Life Story of His Hijacking and Twenty-five Years in Cuba. He was a Panther spokesman and bodyguard to Eldridge Cleaver. On November 4, 2006, Brent, age 75, died of bronchial pneumonia in his Havana home.

James W. Brewton: one of two fugitives from justice in Miami who took over a Chalk's Flying Service Grumman Goose 73, a general aviation craft scheduled to fly to the Bahamas, on March 7, 1972, and forced the copilot to fly to Havana, Cuba. The duo shot and wounded the pilot, a mechanic, and a bystander. Brewton was killed during an attempted robbery in Jamaica on December 15, 1975.

German Briceno Suarez: alias Grannobles. Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) leader in Arauca, Colombia. On March 25, 1999, Colombian authorities ordered his arrest for the murder of three U.S. activists kidnapped on February 25, 1999. He was charged on July 16, 1999, with ordering the killings. On February 11, 2000, Colombian president Andres Pastrana refused to extradite him to the United States. On September 10, 2001, he was sentenced in absentia to 40 years. On April 30, 2002, U.S. attorney general John D. Ashcroft announced murder charges against him.

His brother was the overall FARC military commander as of 2002.

Jorge Briceno Suarez: alias Mono Jojoy. Commander of the 53rd Jose Antonio Anzoategui Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC). On March 3, 1996, the Colombian Prosecutor General's Office issued an arrest warrant for him in the January 13, 1994, kidnapping and murder of U.S. missionaries Stephen Everett Welsh and Timothy Van Dyke. By May 2008, he had become FARC's military commander and controlled much of FARC's cocaine-trafficking operations.

Mary Brigen: physician and daughter of an Englishman and a Colombian woman. She was one of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Jennifer Brown: arrested in 1983 in connection with the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador. The hostage was held in Brown's home. Brown was sentenced to two and a half years.

Kevin Brown: Jamaican, age circa 30, arrested on April 1, 2008, at Orlando International Airport when authorities found pipe bomb-making equipment in his luggage. He had been acting suspiciously near the Virgin Atlantic and Jamaica Airlines ticket counters in Terminal A. He was scheduled to fly on Air Jamaica Flight 80 to Montego Bay. He was charged with carrying a weapon or explosives onto a plane. His baggage held two galvanized pipes, end caps, two containers of BBs, batteries, two containers of an unknown liquid, a laptop, and bomb-making literature. He was legally in the United States. He was scheduled for an appearance in federal court in Orlando the next day.

Gary C. Bruton: chartered a California Air Charter twin-engine Pipe Navajo to fly from Palomar, California, to Dallas, Texas, on November 24, 1975. He pulled a gun on the pilot while over Phoenix and ordered him to fly to Mexico. The pilot landed on a deserted beach near Mazatlan, where the plane became mired in mud. The hijacker was met by 15 accomplices, who unloaded the cargo of guns. The hijacker then set fire to the plane and fled with his accomplices.

Anthony Garnet Bryant: alias Jimmy Carver. Former Black Panther and hijacker of National Airlines Flight 97, a B727 flying from New York to Miami, Florida, on March 5, 1969, to Havana, Cuba. He was convicted in 1961 of first degree robbery and in 1964 for possession and sale of marijuana, for which he served eight years in San Quentin. He claimed he had been released three months earlier on the narcotics charges. The Cubans arrested him. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by the federal grand jury in the Eastern District of New York on March 25, 1969.

Bryant was among 30 Americans pardoned by Fidel Castro on October 27, 1980, and allowed to return to the United States. He said that his stay in jail had converted him against Castro. He subsequently worked with anti-Castro ReContra groups trying to overthrow the government of Nicaraguan president Violeta Chamorro. He said in his book Hijack that he witnessed Cuban prison brutality that turned him against communism. He died on December 15, 1999, of leukemia in Miami, Florida.

Marijam Buconic: variant Buconjic. One of three Croatian terrorists who forced their way into the Yugoslavian United Nations Mission on June 14, 1977, and wounded Radomir Medich, a guard. The terrorists eventually surrendered. On June 16, 1977, the United States charged them with conspiracy to kidnap Yugoslav ambassador Jaska Petric and hold him for publicity. New York State charged them with attempted murder. On October 12, 1977, they were found guilty of plotting to kidnap the ambassador. On November 17, 1977, Buconic received seven years.

Marco Aurelio Buendia: senior commander of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia killed on October 30, 2003, by Colombian troops in fighting in a mountainous area 50 miles northeast of Bogota. He was involved in the kidnapping of four U.S. birdwatchers in 1998.

Pedro Buendia: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum.

Berta Bueno: one of two hijackers—joining her husband and five children—of an Avianca twin-engine Avro 748 flying from Bogota to Bucaramanga, Colombia, on May 31, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Rodolfo Bueno Cruz: ex-political prisoner from Cuba who attempted to hijack Northwest Orient Flight 714 flying from Tampa to Miami, Florida, on July 21, 1983. The plane flew toward Cuba, but within 60 miles of Havana, two passengers jumped and subdued him, and the plane returned to Miami, where he was arrested by the FBI. He was charged with air piracy, which carried a life sentence.

Hernando Buitrago: senior member of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia who, on November 1, 2004, used a buzz saw to break out of the Bogota headquarters of the Federal Prosecutor's Office. During the night, he snuck past closed-circuit television cameras and dog patrols. He had been captured in July. The Federal Prosecutor's Office suspended seven members on suspicion of helping him escape.

Romero Buj: leftist Colombian lawyer married to Nidia Tobom, an associate of Carlos, the Venezuelan-born Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorist. Buj was assassinated on November 24, 1974, on one of Bogota's main streets. On January 7, 1977, the Pedro Leon Arboleda Marxist–Leninist Group claimed credit for the murder of Buj and Amparo Silva, a woman.

Cesar Bunster Aristea: named by Chilean police as a chief suspect in the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts. Bunster had worked from August 11 to August 20, 1986, at the Canadian Embassy. On December 21, 1987, Chile requested that Spain extradite Bunster, claiming he led the attack.

Alfredo Burgos: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Dr. 'Abdallah Burhan: alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

David Augustus Burke: on November 19, 1987, Burke was fired from USAir as a ticket agent for misappropriating $69 worth of liquor receipts. He was believed to have used a Smith and Wesson .44 caliber revolver on December 7, 1987, to fire six shots in the passenger cabin and the cockpit of Pacific Southwest Airlines Flight 1771, a British Airways Corporation 146-200, just before it crashed. The plane crashed into a hillside near San Luis Obispo, California, killing all 38 passengers and 5 crew. He was born on May 18, 1952, in London, the son of Jamaican immigrants who soon moved to Rochester, New York. Two days before the crash, he had threatened Jacqueline Holt Camacho, his estranged girlfriend, and her six-year-old daughter with a revolver.

David P. Burke: one of three men who chartered an Atlantic Aero Cessna to fly from Greensboro, North Carolina, to Atlanta, Georgia, on October 7, 1975. Shortly after takeoff, one of the three men pulled a .22 caliber revolver and demanded to fly to Cuba. After a refueling stop, the plane landed in Florida. Two of the hijackers walked away from the plane, while the third went with his hostage to the airport. Authorities were alerted, and the hijacker surrendered to police. The other two were subsequently apprehended.

Burke was sentenced to 20 years for air piracy on January 30, 1976.

Oscar Busch: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Everth Bustamante Garcia: attorney identified in press reports as Commander Uno, one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. The gunmen ultimately obtained safe haven in Cuba. By January 19, 1981, Bustamante had become chief of M-19's National Coordinating Board of the Rank and File.

J. Bustamante: one of two armed hijackers of a Faucett B727 flying from Piura to Chiclayo, Peru, on April 8, 1972. They wanted to go to Cuba, but when they failed to ignite their bottle of gasoline, the crew overpowered them.

Dionisio Bustillo Macias: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. His release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released him.

The Butcher: alias of Ramon Campana Lopez.

Hocine Buzidi: variant Hocine Bouzidi; aliases Samir, 'Ali Muhammad 'Ali 'Isa al-Batmi. Algerian among three Abu Nidal members arrested by Peruvian police on July 16, 1988, for the Egypt-Air hijacking of November 24, 1986, as well as the December 1986 Rome and Vienna airport attacks. The trio was trying to form links with Shining Path. Interpol said they had planned the three raids and also planned to attack the Jewish Synagogue of Peru, the Israeli Embassy in Lima, the U.S. Consulate, the Shalom Travel Agency, and national and international maritime transportation companies. Peruvian police planned to expel the trio in early August 1988 for breaking immigration laws.

C

---

Luis Caballero Insfran: terrorist killed on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca-Cola company who had been abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz. The kidnappers killed their hostage. Caballero was in charge of the military branch of the leftist Nestor Paz Zamora Committee.

Lucio Cabanas: leader of People's Revolutionary Armed Forces in Mexico in 1974.

Dora Ileana Caceres: Guatemalan wife of Juan Caceres. Both were arrested in 1983 in connection with the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador. She was the third secretary to the Guatemalan mission to the Organization of American States, but Guatemala waived her diplomatic immunity. She pleaded not guilty.

Ipolito Campos: possible alias Polo. Campos was fired in December 2002 from the Eastern Shore Seafood Products firm when he failed a random drug test. An informant told the Accomack Sheriff's Office on January 18, 2003, that a man known as Polo from an "Arabian" country had been sent to poison the water. Reports said that Campos had threatened to poison the state's drinking water. A raid on a trailer home on Kellam Drive in rural Accomack County where Campos stayed resulted in Virginia State trooper H.A. Chambers, age 32, being wounded in the arm and another man killed.

Campos was arrested on February 4, 2003, on fraud charges for using a false Social Security number and a fake alien registration number. An FBI affidavit said, "Polo further stated that if he did not poison the water, somebody would kill him." Prosecutors said Campos was an illegal immigrant from Mexico who lived with two men named Falco and Carlos, also known as Richard Guillen.

Juan Caceres: Guatemalan arrested on July 14, 1983, in connection with the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador. He pleaded not guilty.

Cacho: alias of Jorge Alberto Ruiz.

Albert Charles Cadon: hijacker of Pan Am Flight 501, a DC8 en route from Houston, Texas, to Guatemala City on August 9, 1961. He hijacked the plane out of Mexico City to Cuba. The Cubans found him mentally incompetent and deported him to Mexico, where he was convicted of robbery and illegal possession of firearms. He served eight years, nine months. Following the incident, President Kennedy requested special anti-hijacking legislation.

Julio Eduardo Caerbone: Argentine architect released by Paraguayan police on October 23, 1980, after being questioned in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastacio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Louis D. Cale: one of three wanted criminals who hijacked Southern Airways Flight 49, a DC9 flying from Birmingham to Montgomery, Alabama, on November 10, 1972. The trio claimed to be Black Panther sympathizers. They demanded $10 million and forced the pilot to fly to nine different locations before finally landing in Cuba, where they were not permitted to keep the money. The hijackers decided to leave, making this the first time a hijacked plane had left Cuba with the hijackers still aboard. After leaving Havana and landing in Orlando, Florida, the FBI shot out the tires of the plane. In retaliation, the hijackers shot the copilot in the hand and forced the pilot to return to Cuba. The three were found guilty by Cuba on September 27, 1973. Jackson was sentenced to 20 years. On August 12, 1975, the Washington Post reported that Cuba had returned the ransom money that had been paid to the hijackers. As of 1979, the three were fugitives from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Alabama on November 27, 1972.

Melvin C. Cale: one of three wanted criminals who hijacked Southern Airways Flight 49, a DC9 flying from Birmingham to Montgomery, Alabama, on November 10, 1972. The trio claimed to be Black Panther sympathizers. They demanded $10 million and forced the pilot to fly to nine different locations before finally landing in Cuba, where they were not permitted to keep the money. The hijackers decided to leave, making this the first time a hijacked plane had left Cuba with the hijackers still aboard. After leaving Havana and landing in Orlando, Florida, the FBI shot out the tires of the plane. In retaliation, the hijackers shot the copilot in the hand and forced the pilot to return to Cuba. The three were found guilty by Cuba on September 27, 1973. Cale was sentenced to 15 years. On August 12, 1975, the Washington Post reported that Cuba had returned the ransom money that had been paid to the hijackers. As of 1979, the three were fugitives from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Alabama on November 27, 1972.

Enrique Fernando Torres Calderon Garate: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Oscar William Calvo: leader of People's Liberation Army of Colombia. He was killed in Bogota on November 20, 1985, by gunmen on a motorcycle.

Jose Antonio Camacho: student, age 20, shot and arrested by Peruvian police on February 21, 1986, following an attack on an office of the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance. Police blamed Maoist Shining Path for the attacks.

Camilo: alias of Jose Rigoberto Valdivia Mora.

Camilo: alias of Luis Alberto Quintero.

Commander Camilo: leader of a Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia group that, on May 1–2, 2002, attacked paramilitary troops in Vigia del Fuerte, chasing them across the river and to a basketball court in the center of Bellavista (or Bojaya, according to some reports). Other paramilitaries fled to the nearby St. Paul the Apostle Church and health clinic. Commander Camilo was shot in the face.

Ramon Campana Lopez: alias The Butcher. Detained in Mexico for his involvement in the 1974 kidnapping of Jose Guadalupe Zuno, father-in-law of former president Luis Echeverria. His release was demanded by two members of the People's Revolutionary Armed Forces who took over a bus in Michoacan State and held 40 hostages on August 21, 1977.

Eduardo Canteras: Cuban refugee who hijacked National Airlines Flight 1439, a B727 flying from New York to Miami, Florida, and diverted it to Cuba on December 3, 1968.

Augusto Cana Martinez: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Daniel Canales Ramirez: on January 8, 1988, a Salvadoran judge denied the request for amnesty by the former guardsman convicted of murdering four U.S. female clerics on December 2, 1980. He was serving 30 years for aggravated homicide and robbery.

Hector Canales: member of Popular League of February 28 of El Salvador whose release was demanded when 15 armed members of January 28 Popular Leagues took over the Spanish Embassy in San Salvador and seized 10 hostages on February 5, 1980. The government released most of the prisoners; one escaped.

Manuel Canaveras: student and member of the Spanish People's Revolutionary Armed Forces (FRAP) who was sentenced to death on September 18, 1975, by a Madrid military court for the shotgun slaying of a traffic policeman, Lt. Antonio Jose Rodriguez. He and four other condemned FRAP members retracted their confessions, claiming they had been tortured.

Alfonso Cano: alias of Guillermo Leon Saenz.

Jorge Carballe Delgado: Cuban exile who hijacked National Airlines Flight 183, a B727 on the Miami–New Orleans–Houston run on August 29, 1969, and diverted it to Cuba. He was accompanied by his wife, a newborn baby, and two small sons. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in Florida on November 6, 1969.

Roberto Carballo: Carballo was questioned by police in the January 7, 1977, assassination of Juan Jose Peruyero, an anti-Castro Cuban exile in Miami. Carballo was the president of the 2506 Brigade Association, a group of Bay of Pigs veterans. He had ousted Peruyero from leadership of the group in March 1976.

Marc Carbonneau: one of five Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) kidnappers of James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec who was taken from his Montreal home on October 5, 1970. The group demanded publication of a political manifesto in all Quebec newspapers, release of political prisoners, a chartered aircraft to fly the prisoners to Cuba or Algeria, $500,000 in gold bullion, federal jobs for 450 truck drivers, publication of the name and photograph of an FLQ informer who led police to the discovery of an FLQ cell, and an end of the manhunt for Cross. Cross was released unharmed on December 3, 1970. Seven individuals were flown to Cuba under a safe conduct agreement for the kidnappers of Cross and Pierre Laporte, the Quebec minister of labor, who was kidnapped by the FLQ on October 10. Laporte's body was found in a car trunk on October 18. On August 6, 1974, France granted temporary asylum to an FLQ member and his wife who had been flown to Cuba.

Jose F. Cardenas Adeas: pilot who diverted his Cuban plane to the United States on July 18, 1960.

Juan Carlos Cansino Azevedo: arrested along with his sister by Chilean police in connection with the September 1, 1987, kidnapping by the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chilean Army Col. Carlos Carreno in front of his home in Santiago. He was accused of kidnapping.

Patricia Cansino Azevedo: arrested along with her brother by Chilean police in connection with the September 1, 1987, kidnapping by the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chilean Army Col. Carlos Carreno in front of his home in Santiago. She was charged with violating the weapons control law and illegal association to commit crimes.

Hector Carbonnell: accused in the February 1975 assassination by the Movement for Cuban Justice of Luciano Nieves, an advocate of peaceful coexistence with the Castro regime. A judge revoked his $10,000 bond on November 23, 1975, when he failed to appear in the courtroom as ordered. He was believed to be one of the members of the Pragmatistas who fled to Mexico after jumping bond.

Pedro Enrique Cardena Sastoque: Honduran arrested in Colombia on February 26, 1980. He admitted that he was smuggling April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) communications equipment into the Dominican Republic Embassy. Sixteen M-19 members had taken over the embassy on February 27, 1980.

Jairo Cardenas: one of two hijackers of an Avianca B727 flying from Cucuta to Bogota, Colombia, on June 26, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Rodolfo Cardenas: alias Gabriel. Huallaga military commander of the Peruvian Shining Path as of March 1995.

Rosa Cardenas: leader of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It who remained at large after several leaders were arrested in Peru on March 4, 1987.

Carmenza Cardona Londono: variant Carmen; aliases La Chiqui, Luz Estela, Martha, Commander Nueve. Terrorist negotiator for the 16 April 19 Movement of Colombia members who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba. On March 19, 1981, Colombia announced her death.

Jose Cardona: hijacker of an Aces Airlines general aviation Saunders ST27 flying from Medellin to Apartado, Colombia, on February 29, 1976. He demanded $300,000. He allowed the passengers to deplane in Chigorodo. The plane returned to Medellin, where Cardona shot at police converging on the plane. He was shot in the throat during the gun battle and died in a hospital a few hours later.

Carlos Alberto Caride: founder of Argentine Revolutionary Armed Forces. He was arrested by police on February 12, 1974, near an intersection where the motorcade of Argentine president Juan Peron and Uruguayan president Juan M. Bordaberry was to pass. He was carrying a gun and grenades.

Daniel Carita Calderon: one of three Shining Path "annihilation squad" members arrested on May 24, 1995, after they set off a car bomb in front of the Maria Angolas Hotel in Lima's Miraflores district, killing 5 people and wounding 64. The attack came minutes after 8 hooded gunmen entered the hotel's casino and ordered the 30 people there to lie on the floor. After failing to open the casino safe, the gunmen left the building and set off the car bomb.

Modesto Carita Velazquez: alias Susana. One of three Shining Path "annihilation squad" members arrested on May 24, 1995, after they set off a car bomb in front of the Maria Angolas Hotel in Lima's Miraflores district, killing 5 people and wounding 64. The attack came minutes after 8 hooded gunmen entered the hotel's casino and ordered the 30 people there to lie on the floor. After failing to open the casino safe, the gunmen left the building and set off the car bomb.

Carlos: most popular alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

Commando Carlos: alias Commander Raul. Leader of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Santiago Carmona Palacios: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front Pablo Fonseca Amado Patrol hijackers of a Navajo plane in Managua, Nicaragua, on March 8, 1979. They ordered the captain to fly to Venezuela, but the pilot landed in Costa Rica's Juan Santamaria Airport, where they surrendered.

Maria Augusta Carneiro: Brazilian student leader arrested on May 1, 1969, for firing at a policeman attempting to prevent her and Ricardo Villas Boas de Sarega from distributing antigovernment literature. Her release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, U.S. ambassador to Brazil. She was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Olivares del Carpio: national coordinator of the Peruvian Shining Path, as of March 1995.

Mack Lewis Carr: Sentenced on December 2, 1983, to a maximum of four years for the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador.

Augusto Antonio Carranza Parada: Armed Forces of National Resistance member arrested on August 11, 1978, in connection with the kidnapping and murder on May 17, 1978, in El Salvador of Fugio Matsumoto, Japanese president of Central American Synthetic Industries, a textile firm.

Gilberto Carranzana y Gonzales: one of three Cuban exiles who hijacked National Airlines Flight 28, a DC8 traveling between Tampa and Miami on March 12, 1968, that was diverted to Cuba. The trio was indicted on October 14, 1969, by a federal grand jury in Florida. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Luis Alberto Carrascal Angarita: leader of the 33rd Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. Carrascal was arrested on December 24, 1995, by members of the Fifth Army Brigade in Norte de Santander Department in Zulía, Venezuela. He and his group were accused of assaulting the Carcasi police station in neighboring Santander del Sur, where eight agents and one civilian were killed.

Delia Carrasco Galdoz: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began her extradition proceedings from Sweden on terrorism charges.

Gonzalo Alfredo Ignacio Carreno Nieto: alias Albeiro Jimenez. Mentally unstable Colombian criminal who, on May 23, 1988, entered the pilot's cabin and hijacked an Avianca HK-1400 B727 from Medellín, Colombia, and forced it to fly to Panama and Aruba. He demanded $100,000. The plane returned to Cartagena, Colombia, where he escaped. He was captured after spending the night in the nearby swamps.

David Carrera Vasquez: one of two hijackers of a Mexicana de Aviación DC6 flying the Mexico City–Minatitlán–Veracruz–Villahermosa–Tabasco run on July 26, 1969, that was diverted to Havana.

Mauricio E. Carrillo del Castro: one of two hijackers of an Avianca B727 flying from Cucuta to Bogotá, Colombia, on June 26, 1970, that was diverted to Cuba.

J. Tapia Carrion: hijacker of an Aeropesca Vicker Viscount flying between Pasto and Popayan, Colombia, on January 21, 1974. The hijacker used a carbine rifle to force the pilot to refuel at Cali, where 23 passengers were released. The plane was slightly damaged upon landing in Barranquilla. Two tires were changed, the plane was refueled, and four more passengers were released. The plane took off for Havana, Cuba.

Hugo Carvajal: chief of the Maoist People's Liberation Army of Colombia who died on January 13, 2000, from injuries suffered during a gun battle with authorities on New Year's Eve. The group operates in northern Santander Province.

Jorge Enrique Carvajalino: arrested on July 18, 2002, by police in Bogota as the mastermind of a Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) plot to crash a plane into the Congress building at the July 20 Independence Day ceremonies or the presidential palace at the August 7 presidential inauguration. Carvajalino is the brother of a top FARC leader also known as Andres Paris. Carvajalino hired a suicide pilot associated with drug traffickers for $2 million, according to Col. Gustavo Jaramillo, director of the secret police.

Diogenes Jose Carvalho de Oliveira: a man who was arrested in 1969 for the murder of U.S. Army Capt. Charles R. Chandler by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) on October 12, 1968. A man of the same name was one of five political prisoners whose release was demanded by the VPR kidnappers of Japanese consul general Nobuo Okuchi in São Paulo on March 11, 1970. He was freed and flew with other released prisoners to Cuba on March 27.

Pedro Carvajal: suspected Colombian guerrilla arrested on May 25, 1987, by police in El Amparo in the southwestern Venezuelan State of Apure.

Manfredo Casado: claimed to be a left-wing revolutionary who took political asylum in the Mexican Embassy in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, in 1972. On September 28, 1973, he was given safe conduct to fly to France after he held the 12-year-old son of Mexican ambassador Francisco Garcia.

Justina Casco: one of two leaders of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It arrested in Peru on March 4, 1987. She was extradited, along with her husband, Edgardo Frias, to Ecuador on March 18, 1987.

Edmund Casey: Albany janitor who hijacked National Airlines Flight 97, a B727 flying from New York to Miami on December 14, 1978, diverting it to Charleston, South Carolina. He wanted to go to Cuba. FBI agents took him off the plane.

Luisa Maria Castanola Otari: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Eduardo Castellano Soto: Peruvian member of Argentine People's Revolutionary Army who was killed by Cordoba security forces on April 3, 1976.

Miguel Castellanos: alias Napoleon Romero Garcia. Top commander of the People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces, one of the largest of the five groups in Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) of El Salvador. Castellanos defected to the government in April 1985. He became the highest-ranking guerrilla defector working for the government. On February 16, 1989, FMLN rebels driving a yellow pickup truck fired dozens of machine-gun rounds into him as he was returning home.

Jose Ricardo Castellon: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Martha Castellon: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Rosa Elena Castellon: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran ran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Alfredo Castillo Montanez: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Alvaro Castillo: released from prison as one of the demands of the 50 armed members of the 28 February Popular Leagues of El Salvador who took over the Panamanian Embassy with several hostages on February 13, 1980.

Angel Luis Castillo: former captain in Fidel Castro's army. The Cuban Representation in Exile, an anti-Castro exile group, said on June 14, 1969, that Castillo had been captured in Oriente Province with a group of infiltrators.

Enrique Castillo Hernandez: Cuban exile who helped hijack a private Piper Apache PA23 from Miami, Florida, to Havana, Cuba. The two hijackers were indicted on February 17, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida. As of 1979, they remained at large. Castillo was tried on an air piracy charge in Miami in 1980. The jury was hung and a mistrial was declared.

Jaime Francisco Sebastian Castillo Petrucci: one of four Chileans arrested in Peru on October 14, 1993, on suspicion of involvement in terrorist acts. On January 7, 1994, they were convicted in Peru of membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement. They were sentenced by a military court to life in prison and fined $50 million. On March 21, 1994, the Special Military Court of the Peruvian Air Force, serving as an appellate court, confirmed the life sentence on charges of high treason. Castillo was involved in the kidnapping of Peruvian entrepreneur Raul Hiraoka Torres and other crimes.

Maria Elisa del Castillo Medina: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Gustavo Castillo: alleged anti-Communist Cuban whose release was demanded on February 5, 1978, by the Anti-Communist Latin American Army group that bombed the Mexican Consulate in Manhattan borough, New York City.

Pablo Gustavo Castillo: unemployed carpet layer from Hialeah, Florida, who was charged on January 31, 1977, with setting off a bomb on April 3, 1976, at the student union of the University of Miami shortly before Marxist Angela Davis—who is black—was scheduled to speak. The Cuban exile was arrested in Puerto Rico and brought to Miami two days later. He was called before a federal grand jury probing international terrorism.

Pacifico Castrellon: Panamanian citizen arrested on December 1, 1995, along with 21 members of the Peruvian Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) in Lima's La Molina neighborhood following an eight-hour shootout. The group planned to take over the Peruvian Congress and kidnap congressional president Martha Chavez, the Peruvian prime minister, and others in a December 22 attack. On December 12, 1995, Castrellon admitted his link with MRTA. He had lived with U.S. citizen Lori Helen Berenson, a MRTA member. On January 4, 1996, he was sentenced to 30 years in prison.

Alex Fernando Castro Martinez: arrested by the Honduran Armed Forces on August 27, 1987, in connection with the bombing on August 9, 1987, of Comayagua's Restaurante China that injured four Honduran civilians and six U.S. Army soldiers.

Miguel I. Castro Cruz: one of three Puerto Rican hijackers of Pan Am Flight 281, a B707 flying from New York to San Juan on November 24, 1968, and diverted to Havana. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and a small child. The hijackers were arrested by Cuban authorities. The trio was indicted by a federal grand jury in December 23, 1968, in the Southern District of New York. He was arrested on February 3, 1976, in San Juan and sentenced to 12 years on May 4, 1976.

Nora Castro: former Uruguayan Tupamaros sworn in as the first woman to chair the Chamber of Deputies on February 15, 2005.

Orlando Castro: Uruguayan who hijacked a Uruguayan Arco flight from Colonia, Uruguay, to Buenos Aires, Argentina, on November 12, 1980. He demanded to fly to Cuba, Algeria, Mexico, Libya, or Nicaragua. He surrendered to Buenos Aires police. His parents were divorced, and he had begun law school.

Oscar Castro: alias El Sapito. Tradesman indicted on July 18, 1995, on charges of violating the motor vehicle law in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was released. He was accused of being an accessory by helping the principal suspect "obtain, arm, and prepare the van used for the car bomb."

Patricia Mairiam Castro Flores: one of four Chilean socialists who hijacked a Ladeco B727 flying from Arica, Chile, on a domestic flight on July 5, 1977, and diverted it to Lima, Peru. They demanded the release of two Chilean socialists from a Santiago military jail. After five hours of negotiation, they settled for asylum in the Venezuelan Embassy. They had requested clearance to fly to Venezuela and then on to Paris. On July 9, 1977, they were granted asylum in Cuba.

Augusto Caucci: Italian right-wing terrorist arrested on April 13, 1993, by Interpol agents in the Once District of Buenos Aires, Argentina, and charged with involvement in the August 2, 1980, attack on the Bologna railroad station which caused more than 80 deaths and 400 injuries. Caucci was believed to be an explosives expert. He was arrested in an apartment at 2400 Sarmiento Street. He had lived in Argentina for a decade.

Salvador Cayetano Carpio: leader and founder of the Salvadoran Popular Liberation Front. Cayetano committed suicide on April 12, 1983, when he learned that one of his trusted comrades had killed his second in command, Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, on April 6, 1983, in Nicaragua.

Leandro Cerezo Sirut: Cerezo, age 19, was one of three renegade soldiers who, on May 3, 2007, tried to hijack a plane at Havana's Jose Marti International Airport, killing their hostage, Lt. Col. Victor Ibo Acuna Velazquez. The three recruits had escaped from a Cuban military base after killing a soldier and wounding another.

Nestor Cerpa Cartolini: aliases Carlos, Edigiro Huerta. Former textile union official and a founder of Peruvian Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) in 1984. Cerpa served as its military commander, in which role he was a highly successful tactical commander obsessed with the treatment of imprisoned comrades. He was MRTA's leader in 1995. He was hiding out in Ecuador when he gave contact instructions to Lori Helen Berenson and Pacifico Castrellon. Using the alias Edigiro Huerta, he was the commander of the Edgar Sanchez Special Forces when the two dozen MRTA gunmen took over the residence of the Japanese ambassador on December 17, 1996, and held hostage 700 diplomats, business leaders, and government officials. He died when authorities raided the scene.

Cesar: alias of Ivan Sacha Mendieta Rivera.

Commander Cero: alias of Eden Pastora.

Rosa Cespedes Miranda: alias of Silvia Gora Rivera.

Juan Chacon: leader of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc of El Salvador in the late 1970s.

Chano: alias of Rosalio de Leon Escobar.

Charles: U.S. citizen, age 55, arrested in a Guatemala City hotel on November 17, 1988, on suspicion of being a U.S. terrorist wanted by Interpol and the FBI. Police said explosives were found in his possession. He was suspected of having planned to use them against public buildings in the capital. He had arrived 15 days earlier.

Ernesto Charry Montealegre: educator and founder of the Trotskyite Worker's Self Defense Movement (Mao) and identified in press reports as Commander Uno. Charry was one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. The gunmen ultimately obtained safe haven in Cuba.

Mohammed Nawaz Chaudhary: one of four Pakistanis suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They were arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges had not been dropped.

Hilario Chavelon: number six leader of the Peruvian Shining Path, Chavelon was arrested by Peruvian national police on October 9, 1992, inside the Jose Granda National School of Condevilla, San Martin de Porres, where he was a fourth-grade teacher. He had participated in the Tarata killings.

Jorge Chaverri: Basque Nation and Liberty member arrested on September 19, 1983, in Costa Rica with 11 others alleged to be plotting the assassination of anti-Sandinista leaders Eden Pastora and Alfonso Robelo. Police chiefs received daily threats after his arrest.

Similiano Chavez Yanac: alias Comrade Jorge. Shining Path member apprehended in Huaraz, Peru, on June 23, 1983.

Fadi Karim Abdul Chekair: one of six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252 and also in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli facility in Buenos Aires. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River delta. They were extradited from Paraguay on July 23, 1995, in connection with the discovery of an arsenal near Buenos Aires. They were released on July 27, 1995, in Argentina.

Antonio Chicas Rosa: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Carlos Alberto Chicchiarelli: Argentine arrested with his girlfriend and an Italian on September 22, 1987, in Rome in connection with the January 13, 1987, shooting and wounding of Colombian ambassador Enrique Parejo Gonzalez in Hungary. The Hernan Botero Moreno Command, a narco group, claimed credit. The men were arrested at their Treasury offices.

La Chiqui: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

Choco: leader of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front gunmen who took over the San Salvador Sheraton Hotel on November 21, 1989, and held hostage U.S. and other foreign citizens.

Alejandro Choque: one of three members of the Tapaj Katari Guerrilla Army (EGTK) of Bolivia turned over to the court system on August 21, 1992, for planning to attack the embassies of Spain and the United States in La Paz on October 12 and conduct five attacks against Bolivian politicians. Choque was a bodyguard of EGTK leader Felipe Quispe Huanca. They planned to set off a dynamite charge on Columbus Day outside the Spanish Embassy and then later attack the home of the U.S. ambassador, attack two high tension towers and a telephone plant, and attack homes of five political leaders of the Bolivian government.

Bonifacio Chura: suspected Peruvian terrorist arrested in a clash with Chilean police on October 11, 1986. He was accused of assaulting the police and illegally entering the country. On October 16, 1986, three of the group were handed over to the Peruvian consul general.

Mario Leonel del Cid Garcia: his release was demanded during the March 6, 1970, kidnapping by five armed Revolutionary Armed Forces members of U.S. Labor Attaché Sean M. Holly. They demanded the release of del Cid and three others. He appeared at the Costa Rican Embassy on March 8 and flew with two other prisoners to Mexico City. He told Mexican newsmen that police had often moved him to different prisons while denying knowledge of his whereabouts.

German Cienfuegos: on January 30, 1989, he signed the communiqué from the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front General Command that was broadcast on San Salvador's Radio Cadena Ysu and on a Mexican radio station. In the communiqué the group suspended attacks against U.S. military personnel.

Commander Cinco: alias of Antonio Jose Navarro Wolfe.

German Cipiantavara: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Clarita: alias of Clara Aurora Beltran Gonzalez.

Cenon Marie Clark: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

E. Charles: one of three Haitian hijackers of a Haiti Air Inter Dehavilland Twin Otter flying from Port-au-Prince to Cap Haitien on September 9, 1975. The trio threatened the pilot with knives and Molotov cocktails and demanded to fly to Cuba. The pilot persuaded them to refuel at Gonaives. One of the hijackers left to find fuel at the deserted airport. Shortly thereafter, the other two hijackers were overpowered by the crew and two passengers. Local authorities took the trio into custody.

Margie Evelyn Clavo Peralta: alias Nancy. One of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced on May 19, 1993, by a Peruvian military court to life in prison and fined up to 1 billion soles. She and 16 others were arrested on March 22, 1995, by Lima, Peru, police. She was the deputy chief of Shining Path at the time.

Raul Clemente Yaguer: major figure in the Montonero guerrilla organization killed in an April 30, 1983, shootout with security forces in Cordoba, Argentina.

Miguel Angel Colina Valdivia: one of four members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front sentenced to life in prison on April 1, 1992, in connection with the September 6, 1986, assassination attempt against Chilean president Augusto Pinochet and the attack on the Los Quenes carabinieri station in Chile. On November 25, 1992, the Supreme Court unanimously confirmed the sentence.

Luis Antonio Colindres Aleman: on January 8, 1988, a Salvadoran judge denied the request for amnesty by the former guardsman convicted of murdering four U.S. female clerics on December 2, 1980. He was serving 30 years for aggravated homicide and robbery.

Oscar Collazo: Puerto Rican nationalist who attempted to shoot into Washington, D.C.'s, Blair House on November 1, 1950, to assassinate President Truman. He was injured in a gun battle with police. He recovered and was convicted of murder and sentenced to death. President Truman commuted the sentence to life in prison. His release was demanded by the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of Liberation, who set off five bombs in New York City on October 26, 1974, and then set off four more bombs on April 3, 1975. His release was demanded by two Puerto Rican nationalists who took over the Chilean Consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978. President Carter granted him clemency on September 7, 1979. He flew to Puerto Rico where he received a hero's welcome. Collazo, age 80, died of a stroke on February 20, 1994, in Vega Baja, Puerto Rico.

Aaron Amartei Commey: on July 27, 2000, Commey ran past security checkpoints at Terminal 4 and took hostage two pilots on a National Airlines plane in New York's JFK International Airport. As he got past the checkpoint, he pointed a gun at the screeners. The 143 passengers and the rest of the crew escaped while he was in the cockpit, threatening the pilots with a handgun and knife. Many of the passengers used an emergency chute deployed by the flight attendants. The deployment also immobilized the plane. Flight 19 was scheduled to go to Las Vegas and Los Angeles, but Commey demanded to be taken to Miami, Buenos Aires, and Antarctica. He surrendered at 3:38 A.M., after five hours. He was charged with one count of air piracy and ordered held for psychiatric evaluation. He told authorities that he arrived at the Port Authority Bus Terminal in Manhattan on July 26. The FBI recovered a bag containing a shotgun and two knives from his bus terminal locker. He claimed that he had been arrested while attempting to transport weapons in Argentina two years earlier. In Brooklyn, Commey's father said he had not seen his son in four years and believed that he was mentally ill. Commey grew up in the Bronx but moved to Milwaukee with his mother and brother years before. A National Airlines spokesperson said that the flight had been chosen randomly; Commey had believed it was an international flight.

Pedro Rene Comas-Banos: Cuban emigrant who, on May 27, 1989, escaped from a Los Angeles, California, mental hospital and tried to hijack an American Airlines B727 en route from Dallas to Miami and divert it to Cuba. He surrendered after the plane landed in Miami. He had earlier escaped from St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington, D.C. He had entered the United States nine years earlier on the Mariel boatlift.

Rafael Concel Miranda: Puerto Rican nationalist who joined three others in firing pistols in the House of Representatives in 1950. His release was demanded by Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation, which set off five bombs in New York City on October 26, 1974, and then set off four bombs in New York City on April 3, 1975. Concel's release was demanded by two Puerto Rican nationalists who took over Chile's consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978. President Carter granted him clemency on September 7, 1979. He flew to Puerto Rico, where he received a hero's welcome.

Jorge Enrique Concha Gonzales: one of six suspected members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested and charged with arms smuggling on August 11, 1986, in connection with the discovery of a huge arms cache in Corral Bay near El Carrizal Bajo, Chile. The cache included 338 U.S. M-16 rifles used in the Vietnam War, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades, 315 Katyusha rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kilograms of U.S. and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, and 124 kilograms of plastic explosives.

Luz Dari Condo Rubio: Colombian rebel wanted in the kidnapping of three U.S. contractors in 2003. On February 2, 2008, the Colombian Army detained her near the Venezuelan border.

Rodolfo Condori: chief car bomb maker for the Peruvian Shining Path. Condori was arrested on April 24, 1998.

Niall Connolly: alias David Bracken. One of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested on August 11, 2001, by Colombian authorities while teaching urban bombing techniques—including the use of plastic explosives and mortars—to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrillas in a rebel-controlled zone. The trio was about to board an Air France flight to Paris. They were carrying false passports. FARC normally uses bombs from propane gas cylinders.

Carlos Castano, a leader of antiguerrilla paramilitaries, said that he was approached by one of the IRA suspects, who offered his “professional services” to train his group. The training apparently took place over five weeks. On August 21, Colombia arrested an Irish citizen, age 48, who claimed he was teaching English in local villages. He was transported to Bogota but not charged. The attorney general charged the trio with helping to train terrorists and traveling on false passports. The IRA members—Niall Connolly, James Monaghan, age 55, and Martin McCauley—were sent to Bogota’s Modelo Prison, where they could be held for 240 days while the prosecution prepared its case. Only Connolly, traveling as David Bracken, spoke Spanish.

The trio said they were Irish journalists preparing a report on the demilitarized zone. They stayed at a FARC camp near La Macarena, in a region where top FARC commanders live. Cuba claimed Connolly was the Sinn Fein Latin America representative since 1996, based in Havana. Monaghan is a former member of the Sinn Fein executive board. Investigators found traces of four kinds of explosives in the IRA members’ clothing. FARC claimed that the IRA members were in the country to learn about the local peace process. However, the military cited intercepted FARC communications regarding the IRA members providing training in Semtex.

On April 26, 2004, the trio was acquitted of charges of training the FARC members but convicted of traveling on false passports and identity documents. Connolly was sentenced to two years two months, fined $6,500, and ordered expelled from Colombia after serving his time.

On December 16, 2004, a three-judge panel in Bogota overturned the acquittal, sentenced the trio to 17-year terms, and ordered their immediate arrests. Their whereabouts were unknown.

On August 5, 2005, the three IRA members snuck back into Ireland. An Irish broadcasting network carried an interview with Monaghan. On August 6, 2005, Colombia demanded extradition from Ireland. On August 18, the trio surrendered to Dublin police at three police stations. Connolly was arrested for carrying a false Irish passport.

Rafael Eduardo Continanza: musician from Buenos Aires and one of two Argentine members of the Red Brigades arrested in Italy on June 5, 1980.

Carlos Joaquín Contreras Palacios: on January 8, 1988, a Salvadoran judge denied the request for amnesty by the former guardsman convicted of murdering four U.S. female clerics on December 2, 1980. He was serving 30 years for aggravated homicide and robbery.

Francisco Orlando Contreras Recinos: on January 8, 1988, a Salvadoran judge denied the request for amnesty by the former guardsman convicted of murdering four U.S. female clerics on December 2, 1980. He was serving 30 years for aggravated homicide and robbery.

D.B. Cooper: the most famous hijacker in U.S. history. He hijacked Northwest Airlines Flight 305, a B727 flying from Washington, D.C., to four other stops, including Portland and Seattle, on November 24, 1971. He boarded the flight at Portland. He showed a flight attendant a briefcase containing several red cylinders connected with wires and demanded $200,000 in $20 bills to be placed in a knapsack, two back parachutes, and two chest parachutes. He allowed the passengers and two flight attendants to deplane in Seattle and then demanded to be flown to Reno and Mexico. While the plane was cruising at 197 miles per hour at 10,000 feet, at 7 degrees below zero, with a wind-chill of 69 degrees below zero, Cooper used two of the parachutes and bailed out with the 21 pounds of money strapped to his body. One was a training chute used by stunt flyers; the other was a training chute used for demonstrations, the panels of which had been sewn shut so that it could not open. Cooper was never seen again. On November 23, 1976, a federal grand jury in Portland, Oregon, handed down an indictment against "John Doe, also known as Dan Cooper." The government said this was a capital crime with no statute of limitations. One count charged Cooper with aircraft piracy, another with obstruction of interstate commerce by extortion.

Lorenzo Enrique Copello Castillo: one of 8 to 10 Cuban hijackers who, on April 2, 2003, took over the Baragua, a 50-foot ferry, in Havana harbor and sailed it to sea until it ran out of fuel. The hijackers claimed by radio to be armed with three pistols and a knife and threatened to throw the 50 passengers overboard unless they were given another boat to reach the United States, about 40 miles away. The ferry is part of a small flotilla that shuttles Cubans from one side of Havana Bay to the other. The FBI sent a hostage negotiation team. The U.S. Coast Guard dispatched two cutters. Cuba also sent two ships from the Frontier Guards and threatened to use force to free the hostages. The hijackers freed three ill adults. The hijackers agreed to let the ferry be towed to Mariel, west of Havana. On the afternoon of April 3, authorities rescued the hostages and arrested the hijackers. The hostages, including one Frenchman, had begun jumping overboard at a signal from Cuban officers. Military divers helped the hostages swim to safety. Some hijackers jumped overboard, but were captured.

Despite the protests of human rights groups, on April 11, Cuban firing squads executed three of the hijackers at dawn after convicting them on terrorism charges. They were identified as Lorenzo Enrique Copello Castillo, Barbaro Leodan Sevilla Garcia, and Jorge Luis Martinez Isaac. They had been given three days to appeal. The death sentences were upheld by Cuba's Supreme Tribunal and by the ruling Council of State. Another four received life sentences.

Eduardo Coppo: Argentine People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) member arrested on April 19, 1972, by police in San Javier, Tucuman Province, in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by ERP's Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The "people's prison" was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro.

Policio Ricardo Coral: commander of the Antonio Narino Front of the April 19 Movement of Colombia. Coral was arrested in southern Colombia near the Ecuadoran border on April 2, 1987.

Pamela del Carmen Cordero Cordero: one of four armed members of the Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement who, on January 16, 1984, scaled a wall of the Apostolic Nunciature in Santiago and requested asylum. They were wanted in connection with the August 30, 1983, assassination of General Urzua and his two escorts. The two men and two women were armed with three submachine guns, five pistols, a bomb, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Victor Cordoba: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Raul Cordova Rojas: apprehended on June 22, 1983, by a Peruvian security guard when he tried to plant a bomb at U.S. ambassador Frank Ortiz's residence in Lima.

Miguel Fernando Ruiz Cornejo Margel: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Benigno Coronado: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Carlos Correa Lacayo: one of two Nicaraguan hijackers of a Nicaraguan Agrarian Reform Institute twin-engine Aztec crop duster, registration YMDDQ, flying from Los Brasiles Airport in Nicaragua to Santamaria Airport in Costa Rica. They requested asylum in Costa Rica on October 22, 1981.

Francisco Cortes: Colombian who was suspected of being a National Liberation Army of Bolivia organizer. Cortes was arrested in Bolivia with two Bolivian radical members of the Movement toward Socialism Party in 2003 and charged with espionage, terrorism, and subversion after they were found with weapons and organizational materials about guerrilla networks and plans to instigate violent revolution in Bolivia.

Ramiro Cortez: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate. The members were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Jacques Cosette-Trudel: one of five Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) kidnappers of James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec who was taken from his Montreal home on October 5, 1970. The group demanded publication of a political manifesto in all Quebec newspapers, release of political prisoners, a chartered aircraft to fly the prisoners to Cuba or Algeria, $500,000 in gold bullion, federal jobs for 450 truck drivers, publication of the name and photograph of an FLQ informer who led police to the discovery of an FLQ cell, and an end of the manhunt for Cross. Cross was released unharmed on December 3, 1970. Seven individuals were flown to Cuba under a safe conduct agreement for the kidnappers of Cross and Pierre Laporte, the Quebec minister of labor who was kidnapped by FLQ on October 10. Laporte's body was found in a car trunk on October 18. On August 6, 1974, France granted temporary asylum to an FLQ member and his wife who had been flown to Cuba.

Louise Cosette-Trudel: one of five Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ) kidnappers of James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec who was taken from his Montreal home on October 5, 1970. The group demanded publication of a political manifesto in all Quebec newspapers, release of political prisoners, a chartered aircraft to fly the prisoners to Cuba or Algeria, $500,000 in gold bullion, federal jobs for 450 truck drivers, publication of the name and photograph of an FLQ informer who led police to the discovery of an FLQ cell, and an end of the man-hunt for Cross. Cross was released unharmed on December 3, 1970. Seven individuals were flown to Cuba under a safe conduct agreement for the kidnappers of Cross and Pierre Laporte, the Quebec minister of labor who was kidnapped by FLQ on October 10. Laporte's body was found in a car trunk on October 18. On August 6, 1974, France granted temporary asylum to an FLQ member and his wife who had been flown to Cuba.

Luis Fernando da Costa: alleged Brazilian arms smuggler and drug trafficker arrested in April 2001 in Barrancominas, the center of Molina's operations. On March 7, 2002, he was indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., on charges of conspiracy to import cocaine into the United States. The indictment, which was unsealed on March 18, was the first time the United States brought charges against Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. He was deported to Brazil to face murder and drug charges.

Julio Costas: one of 120 members of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

Hiran Courouneau X. Sanchez: one of four Guantánamo-born hijackers of Pan Am 460, a B747 flying from San Juan to Miami, Florida, on April 13, 1969, and diverted to Cuba.

James Craig: Provisional Irish Republican Army terrorist arrested on March 16, 1993, in Argentina by Interpol's Airport Operations Division for two murders. He had been in the country since 1990. One of his victims was a detective killed in an armed robbery in Northern Ireland. The other was a U.S. citizen in an apparent settling of accounts in the New York underworld. He was arrested as he was leaving his hideout to come to Buenos Aires. He used several aliases. He was expected to be extradited to the United States.

Telson Crencio: one of five members of the Trotskyist Brazilian Workers Party arrested on April 12, 1986, during a holdup of the Banco do Brasil branch in Salvador. They claimed they were trying to get funds for Nicaragua.

Luis Crespo: Cuban exile who lost an arm in 1974 when a bomb he was preparing exploded. He was jailed in the United States. His friend, Humbert Lopez Jr., lost his left eye and three fingers in a similar explosives accident in October 1975.

Patrick Dolan Critton: U.S. citizen bank robber who hijacked an Air Canada DC9 flying from Thunder Bay to Toronto on December 26, 1971, and diverted it to Cuba to escape prosecution. On September 8, 2001, a FBI and New York City police task force arrested Critton, age 54, at his Mount Vernon, New York, home. His fingerprints matched those on a soda can left on the plane during the crime. He did not attempt to hide. Canadian police had conducted an Internet search of public databases in June 2001 and found his name and Social Security number, which he had not changed. Asking U.S. authorities for help, they were told that he taught elementary school in New York City in 1969; his file contained his fingerprints. Police went to his neighborhood and asked people to look at a photo of a missing child. Critton touched the picture, giving them a print to compare.

Adilio Cruz: member of the Popular League of February 28 of El Salvador whose release was demanded by 15 armed members of January 28 Popular Leagues when they took over the Spanish Embassy in San Salvador and seized 10 hostages on February 5, 1980. The government released most of the prisoners; one escaped. It is not clear whether Adilio Cruz is the same person as Avilio Cruz.

Avilio Cruz: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. His release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released him.

Eduardo Cruz: one of the two dozen members of the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement who, on December 17, 1996, took 700 hostages at the Lima, Peru, residence of the Japanese ambassador. The Associated Press later claimed that listening devices were hidden in Cruz's crutches.

Francisco de la Cruz: leader of the 2 October Movement of Mexico. On March 23, 1988, 32 members of his group peacefully took over the Greek Embassy, demanding his release from prison where he had been held for seven years.

Francisco Cruz Galeano: arrested by the Honduran Armed Forces on August 27, 1987, in connection with the August 9, 1987, bombing of Comayagua's Restaurante China that injured four Honduran civilians and six U.S. Army soldiers.

Jorge Cruz: leader of Shining Path who was arrested after a score of bombings in Lima, Peru, on May 28, 1983.

Juan Felipe de la Cruz Serafin: member of the anti-Castro Cuban Revolutionary Directorate who died when a bomb exploded in his hotel room in Avrainville, France. The Cubans claimed that the bomb exploded in the U.S. citizen's hands and that he had intended to use it against the Cuban Embassy.

Raul Ernesto Cruz Leon: Salvadoran, age 26, who was arrested on September 10, 1997, and confessed to taking $4,500 for each of four bombings of ocean hotels in Havana, Cuba, on September 4, 1997. The Cuban government had blamed Cuban exiles. Cruz left El Salvador for Costa Rica on July 9 and returned from Los Angeles on July 14. Havana said he had confessed to two bombings on July 12 as well as the September 4 bombings. He had worked for a Salvadoran man in the entertainment business. He dropped out of a military high school after six to eight months.

Rodrigo Alfonso Cuadra Clachar: one of two members of the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance (ARDE) in Costa Rica who died on June 19, 1983, when a bomb they were transporting in their car exploded prematurely. They were on their way to a meeting with the anti-Sandinista ARDE and apparently planned to assassinate ARDE leaders.

Jorge Cuba la Rosa: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Raul Cuellar: released from prison following the demands of the 50 armed members of the 28 February Popular Leagues of El Salvador who took over the Panamanian Embassy and took several hostages on February 13, 1980.

Raul Cuestas: Argentine journalism professor at Costa Rica's national university who was charged by the Costa Rican government on March 21, 1981, as a Montonero leader in Mexico.

D

---

Muhammad Dahroug Dahroug: former Tri-border area shopkeeper and suspected al Qaeda associate in Lebanon. His nephew, Ali Nizar Dahroug, was arrested in Paraguay on June 27, 2002.

Jozo Damjanovic: Croatian who shot to death Uruguayan ambassador Carlos Abdala in Asuncion, Paraguay, on June 7, 1976. Damjanovic thought he was shooting at the Yugoslav ambassador.

Commander Danilo: spokesperson of the Salvadoran Unified Revolutionary Directorate Anastasio Aquino Special Brigade in 1980.

Mireya Danza Moreira: one of three female Sandinista National Liberation Front members arrested on July 4, 1981, by Costa Rican Civil Guards. The trio planned to take over the Guatemalan Embassy to obtain the release of political prisoners.

Delia Natividad Daquiri Yanki: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Hassan Abdasllam Dayou: Lebanese arrested on September 10, 1994, by Argentine police in the Puerto Iguaza area in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was sent to Argentine Judge Galeano on September 14, 1994. He was released by the judge on September 19, 1994.

Michael A. DeCarolís: arrested on August 13, 1968, in a raid on a Johnsonburg, New Jersey, farm in which police seized a half ton of dynamite, automatic weapons, and crates of ammunition, as well as a uniform of the 2506th Cuban Assault Brigade of the Bay of Pigs, an anti-Castro organization.

Regis Debray: Bolivian revolutionary of the early 1970s. On April 22, 1970, the U.S. Information Service (USIS) reported that a dissident group was preparing a list of prominent diplomats to be kidnapped and held hostage for Debray's release from Bolivian prison.

Joel Deeb: son of John Deeb, former mayor of Port-au-Prince, and of Lebanese extraction arrested in Miami, Florida, on January 12, 1983, and charged with violating the Arms Export Control Act and the Neutrality Act in connection with the July 1982 attempt by Haitian exiles to land a commando team from a light plane and assassinate the Haitian president at his farm. The five men were armed with U.S.-made submachine guns bought in Miami. On January, 17, 1983, the entire John Deeb family was arrested by the Haitian government in Port-au-Prince. Organization of American States Inter-American Commission on Human Rights termed the arrest a "blind reprisal" and asked for an explanation.

Patricio Fernando Degach Vergue: hijacker, age 15, of a LAN Caravelle flying from Santiago to Puerto Montt, Chile, on November 12, 1969. He and Pedro Varas Flores, age 16, said they wanted to go to Cuba. After a refueling, the crew disarmed the hijackers.

Antonio Degas Bouvier: Ecuadoran associate of Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorist. He joined the PFLP hijackers of Air France Flight 139, an A300 Aerospatiale Airbus flying from Tel Aviv to Paris on June 27, 1976, and ultimately diverted to Entebbe, Uganda.

Leopoldo Degibes: former army major who became a leader of the Isthmian Labor, Peasant, and Student Coalition in Mexico. His release was demanded by the peasants who took over the Indian Embassy in Mexico on February 18, 1981.

Marcelo Delacour: indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was set free, although Judge Galeano ordered an attachment of his assets at 500,000 pesos.

Rosalio de Leon Escobar: alias Chano. Founder of the Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms (OPRA) in Guatemala who died on August 9, 1984, with 20 other OPRA rebels in a shootout with the Guatemalan Army in San Pablo, San Marcos Department.

Henry Vladimir Delgado Salazar: one of two Colombian subversives arrested on April 16, 1989, by Peruvian Antiterrorist Police following an armed attack on the police post at Uchiza in which 10 policemen were killed.

Romulo Delgado: leader of 29 heavily armed Cubans demanding asylum who took over the Ecuadoran Embassy in Havana on February 13, 1981. After the asylum seekers released their hostages and turned their weapons over to Ecuadoran authorities, Cuban authorities stormed the building and arrested the attackers. The Ecuadoran government said it had agreed to let the dissident Cubans stay in the embassy under its care. Ecuador recalled its ambassador in protest.

Rosario Delgado Iriundo: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled by Uruguayan authorities on August 26, 1994. She was accused of carrying out political activities that led to rioting in Uruguay on August 24, 1994. She was detained in Montevideo in May 1992, with a trio of ETA members expelled on August 24, 1994. Uruguayan courts denied a Spanish extradition request for her, and she had lived freely as a refugee in Montevideo. The duo was indicted on terrorism and arms charges on August 29 in Paris. Police searches turned up counterfeit or stolen ID papers and documentation from the ETA. Spanish authorities had issued seven international arrest and extradition orders for her involvement in the killing of 17 Civil Guards, 3 soldiers, 2 civilians, and a policeman. A French court granted extradition on February 22, 1995, but said that she would have to serve time for crimes committed in France. On May 10, 1995, the Paris Court of Appeals granted five of the six requests made by Spanish courts for her extradition. The five were for attacks in which people were murdered. She would not be handed over to Spain until she had served a sentence for crimes committed in France, including illegal possession of arms and membership in a criminal association with terrorist aims. The attacks included a car bombing on July 14, 1986, against a Civil Guard bus in Madrid's Plaza de la Republica Dominicana in which 12 people died.

Carlos Denis: would-be hijacker of Continental Airlines Flight 144, a DC9 flying from Albuquerque, New Mexico, to Tulsa, Oklahoma, on December 19, 1970. He wanted to go to Cuba but permitted the plane to land in Tulsa and the passengers to deplane. The crew, however, took the opportunity to escape. Police arrested Denis, who was hiding in a lavatory. After being subjected to a medical and mental exam, he was found guilty of conveying false information concerning an attempt to commit air piracy and sentenced to five years on February 9, 1971.

Erik Deprez: alias El Frances. Arrested on June 25, 1995, by Buenos Aires police for having in his possession a double-barreled shotgun, a Ballester-Molina 11.25 caliber pistol, and ammunition. He was fined 60,000 pesos. He was ordered on July 18, 1995, into preventive detention for being responsible for a coverup in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Luis Edgar Devia: alias Raul Reyes. One of the seven members of the Secretariat of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, who was killed on March 1, 2008, by Colombian troops in a firefight and air strike at a camp in Putumayo, near the border with Ecuador. The 5 foot 2 inch Devia, age 59, had been a trade union leader who worked at a Nestles milk plant. He favored military action over negotiation and using hostages as pawns.

Diane: arrested in Rio de Janeiro by Brazilian federal police on May 29, 1989, along with Patrick Haemers. Haemers was the alleged Belgian leader of the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnappers on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium and Haemers's wife, Lizzie Shack, fellow Belgians. Brazil's Supreme Court ordered their extradition on March 7, 1990. On March 30, 1990, Belgium sent an Air Force Hercules C130 to Brazil to bring back Haemers, who confessed to the kidnapping.

Emilio Antonio Diaz: chief ideologue and second in command of the Maoist Shining Path who was arrested in December 1983 in Huaraz, 250 miles north of Lima, Peru.

Enrico Rene Diaz: alias of Patrick Arguello.

Ernesto Diaz Rodriguez: one of five anti-Castro Cuban exiles arrested by the Cuban government two days after they landed in Cabanas on December 2, 1968. Diaz and Emilio Nazario Perez Sargent were members of Alpha 66 and the Second Front of Escambray, which had merged their operations.

Commando Nidia Diaz: leader of the Central American Revolutionary Workers' Party whose release was demanded by the Pedro Pablo Castillo Front of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Forces who, on September 10, 1985, kidnapped Ines Guadelope Duarte Duran, the daughter of president Jose Napoleon Duarte, in El Salvador. Diaz was believed responsible for the June 19, 1985, murder of 13 people, including 4 U.S. Marines, at an outdoor café in San Salvador.

Jorge Diaz Reategui: Peruvian detained on June 9, 1994, in a Tucuman hotel by Argentine police. He admitted being a former member of the Peruvian Maoist Shining Path.

Jose Diaz Claro: one of four Guantánamo-born hijackers of Pan Am 460, a B747 flying from San Juan to Miami, Florida, on April 13, 1969, and diverted to Cuba.

Jose Diaz Morejon: member of El Poder Cubano who was convicted on November 15, 1968, of the September 16, 1968, rifle attack against the Polish freighter Polanika in Miami, Florida.

Lucy Diaz Troy: one of two Ecuadorans arrested on October 10, 1992, after holding up a supermarket in Pasto, Colombia, and taking 21 hostages before surrendering after eight hours. They worked with members of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia.

Max Horacio Diaz Trujillo: arrested on December 13, 1987, in connection with the September 1, 1987, kidnapping by the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chilean Army Col. Carlos Carreno in front of his home in Santiago. On December 23, 1987, he was indicted by military judge Col. Fernando Torres for hiding Carreno in one of three hideouts.

Victor Diaz Caro: attempted suicide with a knife on November 4, 1986, while in prison, where he was detained in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago, killing 5 presidential guards and injuring 11 military escorts. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons.

Walter Ernesto Diaz: member of the People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador (FPL), who was arrested later of involvement in FPL's April 6, 1983, assassination in Nicaragua of Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, the group's leader. The murder weapon and blood-stained clothing were found in their possession.

Commander and Olga Dilma: two of six members of Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation who hijacked an Avensa Convair Twin Engine CV440 en route from Ciudad Bolivar to Caracas, Venezuela, on November 28, 1963. The group dropped antielection leaflets over the city, then diverted the plane to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they were arrested. The six were extradited.

Ismael Dimas Aguilar: leader of a faction of the El Salvadoran Revolutionary Workers Party of Central America, a subgroup of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front who claimed credit for the June 19, 1985, machine-gun attack on two outdoor cafés in San Salvador that killed four U.S. Marine guards and nine other diners. On January 26, 1988, the Salvadoran military appeals court ordered him freed under the country's November 5, 1987, amnesty law that was adopted as part of a regional peace plan. The U.S.

Embassy withheld $18.5 million in economic support funds after the court said the attack was "political in nature." On January 28, 1988, the government held Dimas pending preparation of an appeal of the ruling. On April 11, 1988, president Jose Napoleon Duarte ruled that he could not be freed under the amnesty, saying that international law takes precedence over national law.

Jose Dimas Aguilar: member of the El Salvadoran Revolutionary Workers Party of Central America, a subgroup of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, who was arrested in connection with the June 19, 1985, machine-gun attack on two outdoor cafés in San Salvador that killed four U.S. Marine guards and nine other diners. His brother, Ismael Dimas Aguilar, told Radio Venceremos on September 10, 1985, that his brother was innocent and that Ismael's group was responsible.

Ghazi al-Din: on June 18, 2008, the U.S. Department of the Treasury designated two Venezuelans as supporters of Hizballah, freezing their assets and prohibiting Americans from conducting business transactions with the duo. Ghazi Nasr al-Din, a Venezuelan diplomat posted in the Venezuelan Embassy in Beirut, Lebanon, had earlier worked in the Venezuelan Embassy in Damascus, Syria. The United States said he had arranged for Hizballah members to travel to a training course in Iran.

Weliton Pinto Diogenes: one of five members of the Trotskyist Brazilian Workers Party arrested on April 12, 1986, during a holdup of the Banco do Brasil branch in Salvador. They claimed they were trying to get funds for Nicaragua.

Richard Frederick Dixon: hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 953, a B727 flying from Detroit, Michigan, to Miami, Florida, and Puerto Rico on October 9, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. Dixon was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of Michigan on January 19, 1972.

He returned to the United States on January 8, 1976, and was apprehended in Michigan the next day for the murder of a South Haven, Michigan, police officer. The FBI later identified him as the hijacker. He was convicted of air piracy and kidnapping on December 16, 1976.

Ladislav Dobor: Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) member whose release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation and VPR who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum. The VPR member was permitted to give an interview with the media.

Dominguez: alias of Severiano Fuentes.

Francis Dominguez Lopez: signatory of a confessor letter by Torrijist Patriotic Vanguard—December 20, a leftist subversive group in Panama, to claim credit for the January 31, 1993, kidnapping of three U.S. missionaries.

Jesus Dominguez Benitez: convicted on November 15, 1968, of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. He and eight other anti-Castro exiles were given sentences ranging from 1 to 10 years.

Jose Luis Dominguez: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Hilertant Dominique: former captain in the Haitian Army and one of two hijackers of a Venezuelan Aeropostal DC9 en route from Caracas, Venezuela, on July 29, 1984. The duo wanted to go to Aruba and permitted refueling in Margarita and Trinidad. They also demanded $3 million, 50 machine guns, 40 pistols, and other arms. Dominique was jailed in the Dominican Republic for smuggling guns in Haiti in December 1982. He had been living in exile in Venezuela after escaping from prison. On July 31, 1984, an antiterrorist commando group stormed the plane and killed the two hijackers.

Ramon Donato-Martin: one of three Cuban exiles who hijacked National Airlines Flight 28, a DC8 traveling between Tampa and Miami, Florida, on March 12, 1968, that was diverted to Cuba. The trio was indicted on October 14, 1969, by a federal grand jury in Florida. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Jose Luis Donoso Cortes: one of three Chilean members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested by Argentine border police on May 24, 1991, in El Breal Township. Two of the members were among the inmates that had escaped from the Santiago prison in Chile and had been tried for smuggling weapons into the country through Carrizal and for involvement in several terrorist attacks. They told the arresting officers that they were coming from Petorca, Chile, and traveling to the interior along the Los Patos River. On May 30, they were handed over to Chilean Carabineros in Paso Las Cuevas, Punta de Vaca.

Dos: alias of Dora Maria Tellez Argueyo.

Elba Duarte Valles: one of four armed members of the Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement who, on January 16, 1984, scaled a wall of the Apostolic Nunciature in Santiago and requested asylum. They were wanted in connection with the August 30, 1983, assassination of General Urzua and his two escorts. The two men and two women were armed with three submachine guns, five pistols, a bomb, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Mauricio Duarte Alvarez: killed in Jinotepe, Nicaragua, on January 10, 1975. He was suspected of planning the Sandinista National Liberation Front takeover on December 27, 1974, of the Managua home of former agricultural minister Dr. Jose Maria Castillo, who was hosting a party in honor of U.S. ambassador Turner B. Shelton.

Eljvir Duka, Dritan Duka, and Shain Duka:

Eljvir, age 23, Dritan, age 28, and Shain, age 26, were among the six people arrested on May 7, 2007, by the FBI in Cherry Hill, New Jersey, for planning an attack on Fort Dix and killing 100 soldiers with assault rifles and grenades. They were alleged to have conducted firearms training in the Pocono Mountains in Gouldsboro, Pennsylvania. The defendants used cell phones to conduct video surveillances. A Circuit City clerk spotted footage and jihad training videos they wanted transferred to DVD and alerted authorities in January 2006. An Egyptian military veteran worked with the FBI to befriend a suspect and tape conversations. The FBI said the investigation took 16 months.

The ethnic Albanian brothers were born in Yugoslavia and illegally living in Cherry Hill while operating a roofing business. Shain and Eljvir had attended Cherry Hill West High School. The Dukas illegally entered the United States via Mexico at Brownsville, Texas, in 1984. Their father requested asylum and a green card in 1989, a request that sat in the Immigration and Naturalization Service for the next 16 years. In 2001, Dritan married a U.S. citizen, but he did not apply for his green card until 2005. Shain was represented by attorney Michael Riley.

The Dukas were stopped dozens of times each year for speeding, illegal passing, and driving without a license. Dritan pleaded guilty in 2000 to possession of drug paraphernalia; Shain had pleaded guilty to marijuana possession. Dritan was ticketed four times in five weeks. The trio had their driving privileges suspended 54 times in less than 10 years.

They were charged with conspiring to kill military personnel, which carries a life sentence.

Dumar: alias of one of six Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia members charged with murder on April 30, 2002, in the United States in connection with the 1999 killings of three Americans working in Arauca, Colombia.

Hector Lugo Dupont: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

Maximiliano Durand Araujo: Peruvian professor of math and physics identified by a Peruvian intelligence service report on May 31, 1985, as the principal link between the Maoist Shining Path and its Europe counterparts. After involvement in various terrorist activities, Durand escaped arrest in 1981 and left Peru. He is a relative of Osman Morote, a Shining Path leader detained on June 12, 1988, in Lima. On March 28, 1989, United Left Senator Enrique Bernaldes charged that Durand was heading a Shining Path office in Paris and conducting promotion and propaganda activities in several European capitals. In Paris, Durand worked as a consultant for a private company engaged in producing and storing solar energy and for French government organizations as an advisor on nuclear energy. He was one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced on May 19, 1993, by a Peruvian military court to life in prison and fined up to 1 billion soles.

Teresa Durand Araujo: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced on May 19, 1993, by a Peruvian military court to life in prison and fined up to 1 billion soles.

E

---

Jose Manuel Echevers: on February 16, 1989, Costa Rican police discovered weapons in the backyard of his San Jose suburban home. The Panamanian denied ownership of the weapons but admitted membership in a group that opposes Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, commander of the Panama Defense Forces. The cache included rifles, submachine guns, pistols, a rocket launcher, and 1,000 rounds of ammunition. This was the third arms cache discovered by the police on land owned by Echevers. The others were found near a house he owns in San Rafael del Coronado.

Magda Edelmira: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Woody Marc Edouard: Haitian gunman who, on February 18, 1993, hijacked a twin-prop DC3 charter plane at Cap-Haitien and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where he surrendered to the FBI and local police. He did not request asylum. He faced 20 years to life for air piracy. On March 19, 1993, he was charged with air piracy after rejecting a plea bargain from federal prosecutors that he plead guilty to a lesser charge of interference with a flew crew, which has a seven-year sentence.

Commandant Emilio: defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash.

Operation White Terror began 13 months earlier with meetings of undercover FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia, a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez (alias Commandant Napo) and Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization. The charges carry life sentences. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Felix Encina Laguna: one of two brothers named by a trio arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia. The detainees said the brothers were behind the murders, the attacks on the Bolivian Congress, and the attempt against former U.S. secretary of state George Shultz. On July 3, 1989, La Paz's La

Red Panamericana reported that the brothers were members of the Bolivian Socialist Falange and had worked at the Defense Ministry.

Nestor Encina Laguna: one of two brothers named by a trio arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia. The detainees said the brothers were behind the murders, the attacks on the Bolivian Congress, and the attempt against former U.S. secretary of state George Shultz. On July 3, 1989, La Paz's La Red Panamericana reported that the brothers were members of the Bolivian Socialist Falange and had worked at the Defense Ministry.

Henry Engler: Tupamaros arrested by Uruguayan security officials on March 29, 1973, and held for ordering the murder of USAID official Daniel Mittrione. Mittrione was kidnapped by the Tupamaros on July 31, 1970.

Pedro Enrique: hijacker of a Cubana Viscount on April 12, 1960.

Fernando Erazo Murcia: commander of a column of the National Guerrilla Coordinating Board and a key April 19 Movement of Colombia leader arrested by Colombian authorities at a Palmira bar on January 1, 1987.

Michael Glenn Ernest: arrested by the Guatemalan Army on January 11, 1983, on charges of leading two guerrilla raids the previous week against farms between the towns of Patulul and San Lucas Toliman, Solola Department, in western Guatemala and for the January 6, 1983, killing of Enrique de Leon, administrator of a sugar plantation. He was freed on February 8, 1983, for lack of evidence. Ernest was originally from North Dakota or Denver, Colorado.

Monica Ertl: died along with her partner, Oswaldo Ucasqui, on May 13, 1973, in a shootout with police. Argentine citizen and Bolivian National Liberation Army member Ucasqui is believed to be the killer of Roberto Quintanilla, the former Bolivian consul general in Hamburg. Quintanilla was shot to death in the consulate on April 1, 1971.

Lorenzo Edward Ervin Jr.: alias C. Green. Hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 955, a DC8 flying the St. Louis–Atlanta–Miami–San Juan route on February 25, 1969, that was diverted to Cuba. He was indicted for air piracy in March 1969 by a federal grand jury in Atlanta. He surrendered to U.S. authorities in Prague, Czechoslovakia, in September 1969. He was arrested by the FBI as he stepped off a plane from Berlin, Germany, at New York's JFK International Airport. On July 7, 1970, he was sentenced to life in prison for aircraft piracy and kidnapping.

Esbezi: Argentine citizen held at La Reforma Prison on charges of illegal association and arms trafficking. Six members of the Salvadoran Revolutionary Party of Central American Workers planned to demand Esbezi's release but failed in their attempt to kidnap Japanese citizen Otaiasuk Tesuji Kosuga, president of the National Electric Corporation of Costa Rica on November 9, 1982, in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Dalia Escobar Alas: alias of Sofia Lopez.

Jorge Leandro Escobar Diaz: one of two members of the Marxist Lautaro Youth Movement of Chile indicted on October 17, 1989, for violating Article 1, Paragraph 6 of the Antiterrorist Law regarding arson and planting explosives. On July 4, 1989, seven youths attacked the Mormon Church in Santiago, carrying revolvers. They forced a Mormon missionary named Balart to strip and burned the church's cultural hall after dousing it with gasoline. Police deactivated a bomb the terrorists left behind.

Numa Escobar: political training secretary of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc (BPR) of El Salvador, whose release was obtained on May 4, 1979, by 16 BPR members who took over the French Embassy in El Salvador.

Oswaldo Espinosa: alias Esteban. Youth leader in Viacha who was killed on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca-Cola company. Lonsdale was abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz and was killed by the kidnappers. Espinosa participated in the October 11, 1990, attack against the U.S. Marine house in Bolivia and sustained three bullet wounds.

Wilfredo Espinoza Ramirez: one of the six Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who on October 29, 1981, hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11. He was arrested on October 30, 1981, in El Salvador, pending extradition. El Salvador agreed to extradition on November 2, but the court system denied extradition on November 16 due to incorrect filing of the extradition request by Costa Rica.

Agustin Esquivel-Medrano: alias Perez. One of a family of Cuban exiles who hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 7, a DC8 on the New York–Newark–Miami run on June 22, 1969, and diverted it to Cuba. He was accompanied by his ill wife and high school daughter, age 15. The wife wanted to see Cuba one last time before she died.

Luz Estella: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

Edwin Estrada Leiva: Nicaraguan Sandinista Air Force captain who, on December 7, 1988, hijacked his MI-25 helicopter into Honduran territory, landing at Hernan Acosta Mejia Air Base, where he requested asylum. Nicaragua demanded his extradition.

Jerry del Carmen Expinoza Valdez: one of five individuals arrested on March 16, 1987, by Melipeuco, Chile, authorities for holding up a Brink's car carrying arms into Argentina and also in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the Chilean presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Hazine Eytina: alias of Linda Grinage.

Astrid Eyzaguirre: dual-citizen German and American fiancée, age 23, of Osman Petmezci, a Turkish al Qaeda sympathizer. The couple was arrested by German police on September 6, 2002, as they were planning to bomb the U.S. Army's European headquarters and other targets in Heidelberg on September 11. Police found 290 pounds of chemicals, 5 pipe bombs, gunpowder, and marijuana plants in their apartment in Walldorf, six miles south of Heidelberg. Police also found a picture of bin Laden, Islamic literature, and a book about bomb making. The chief law enforcement officer for Baden-Wuerttemberg State said the man is a Muslim "who hates Americans and Jews." The man worked at a chemical warehouse in Karlsruhe.

Eyzaguirre was an assistant manager at the post exchange store at the U.S. military facility in Heidelberg, which gave her access to many post facilities. The facility hosts the Army headquarters (called Campbell Barracks), the Army's Fifth Corps headquarters, a small North Atlantic Treaty Organization facility, and hundreds of U.S. service members and their families. She worked at the base for several years. She was initially identified as of Turkish origin, but her neighbors said she was Hispanic with a Peruvian father and a Dominican Republic mother. Her father, Marcos Eyzaguirre, age 55, was a retired Army officer who had worked for the U.S. military in Germany and returned to the United States five years earlier. He became a Navy civilian employee in Newport News, Virginia. He said his daughter was born and raised in Germany, where he was stationed for 23 years.

A Turkish man living below the duo had complained about a strange liquid leaking into his apartment from theirs. A rash broke out on one side of his face. The neighbors also said Petmezci hated Jews.

Police received a tip on the couple in mid-July, but the arrest was delayed for two months. A judge put off questioning a witness, originally scheduled for August 13, because a summons could not be delivered on time. Prosecutors obtained a search warrant on August 30.

Prosecutors said on September 18 that they had not found a link to international terrorists.

As the trial opened on April 11, 2003, Petmezci denied plotting an attack and said the chemicals were intended for making firecrackers. On May 6, he was convicted of illegal possession of explosives, drug violations, stealing gunpowder and chemicals to make liquid potassium nitrate, and other lesser charges. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison. Prosecutors withdrew the terrorism counts, saying there was not “sufficient specificity” to prove the plot against the base. Eyzaguirre was acquitted of the explosives charge but was convicted of a drug offense and sentenced to six months. The eight months she had already served counted against the sentence.

F

---

Carlos Facaques: one of two students from the Sociology School of Greater San Andres University arrested on November 15, 1990, in connection with the October 10–11, 1990, attacks by two Nestor Paz Zamora Commando gunmen who fired machine guns from their car at the U.S. Marine residence in the Miraflores District of La Paz, then threw a package bomb at the door of the building. They later bombed the John F. Kennedy monument. The duo was linked to the Nestor Paz Zamora Committee.

Shawar Midian Fadel: name on the passport of one of three Lebanese arrested on July 28, 1994, by Costa Rican police in David when they tried to cross the Panamanian border with Costa Rica with false passports. They were suspected of involvement in the July 19, 1994, suicide bombing of ALAS Flight HP1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer. The bomb killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen, shortly after the plane left Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit. They reportedly were freed in August 1994.

Shaykh Abdullah Ibrahim el-Faisal: arrested on February 18, 2002, by Scotland Yard's antiterrorist branch during a dawn raid in East London for inciting racial hatred for remarks he made calling for the murder of nonbelievers, Jews, Americans, and Hindus. The Jamaican Muslim cleric was charged under the Public Order Act and the Offences Against the Person Act. Parliament members demanded his arrest after videos with his message went on sale in London Islamic bookstores. His audiocassettes instructed men to train for battle and called on boys to learn how to use Kalashnikovs. El-Faisal, age 38, was charged with incitement to murder two weeks after London's Times reported his statement. He was detained pending a hearing on February 21, 2002, at Bow Street Magistrates Court. On March 7, 2003, Judge Peter Beaumont in London sentenced him to nine years in prison. The judge made the sentences consecutive to emphasize the United Kingdom's "abhorrence of the views you expressed." He will have to serve at least half his sentence before becoming eligible for parole. The judge also recommended possible extradition to Jamaica.

Ali Fallahian: on March 8, 2003, Argentine judge Juan Jose Galeano issued a 400-page indictment against four Iranian diplomats, including Fallahian, accusing them of the 1994 bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society community center that killed 85 people. Fallahian was serving the Minister of Security and Intelligence when the attack occurred. At the time of the indictment, he was a member of Iran's Assembly of Experts, which chooses the country's leader. Germany wanted him for the 1992 murder of four Kurdish dissidents.

Gilberto Fallas Helizondo: alias Charlie. Former Costa Rican employee of the Costa Rican Supreme Court who, on April 26, 1993, led five gunmen to take hostage 19 of 22 Supreme Court justices in San Jose. They demanded a large ransom and prison releases. The gunmen were arrested on April 29 while boarding a plane to Panama or Guatemala. His brother, Guillermo, was also involved in the takeover and was arrested.

Guillermo Fallas Helizondo: Costa Rican brother of Gilberto Fallas Helizondo. On April 26, 1993, he was one of five gunmen who took hostage 19 of 22 Supreme Court justices in San Jose and demanded a large ransom and prison releases. The gunmen were arrested on April 29 while boarding a plane to Panama or Guatemala.

Ahmad Allameh Falsafi: on August 9, 1994, Argentine judge Galeano ordered the Iranian Embassy third secretary's arrest in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He had already left for Iran prior to the blast.

Ed Kaur Faridah: one of two Iraqis—one of whom was alleged to be a member of the Iraqi intelligence service—reported by Chilean radio on January 28, 1991, to have entered Chile with the objective of attacking mining enterprises supported by U.S. investments. They were discovered by El Litio Mining Company in Calama.

Roxana Farina: arrested on December 12, 1986, by Chile's National Intelligence Center in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Ahmad Adil Fawaz: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

Alvaro Fayad Delgado: April 19 Movement of Colombia leader who met with Colombian president Belisario Betancour on October 8, 1983, in a private home in Spain regarding peace negotiations. On September 12, 1985, in an interview with El Pais, he announced a "revolutionary tax" on foreign enterprises and declared an end to the truce with the government. He was killed on March 13, 1986, in an army and police raid on the apartment of Raul Rosero in Bogota.

Saleh Mahmoud Fayad: arrested by Paraguayan police on October 3, 2001, on criminal association and tax evasion charges. He was linked to Hizballah.

Sobhi Mahmoud Fayad: arrested by Paraguayan police on November 8, 2001, on criminal association and related charges. The Hizballah fund-raiser was arrested in Paraguay in 2002 after he violated the terms of his conditional release from detention while awaiting charges. He had been in prison for nearly 10 months on charges of tax evasion and criminal association before being tried. He subsequently was convicted and sentenced in November 2002 to six and a half years in prison. He was an associate of Assad Ahmad Barakat.

Manuel Federico: leader of the Honduras People's Armed Forces in 1984.

Feliciano: alias of Oscar Alberto Ramirez Durand.

Felipe: alias of Jose Alberto Ramos Martinez.

Segundo Felix: Dominican and one of two hijackers of a Venezuelan Aeropostal DC9 en route from Caracas, Venezuela, on July 29, 1984. The duo wanted to go to Aruba and permitted refueling in Margarita and Trinidad. They also demanded $3 million, 50 machine guns, 40 pistols, and other arms. On July 31, 1984, an antiterrorist commando group stormed the plane and killed the two hijackers. He tried to start a fire with gasoline but was killed instantly by the commandos.

Felipe Ferreira: Carlos the Jackal's name for Antonio Perera Carvalho.

Luis Fergarde Lopez: accused Argentine terrorist who was wanted in connection with attacks against opposition leaders in Argentina and reputedly living in São Paulo, Brazil, according to federal police officials on September 14, 1983.

Alejandro Fernandez: one of five Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement members arrested in 1989 and charged with kidnapping a businessman. On November 24, 1994, Chilean president Eduardo Frei asked Brazilian president Itamar Franco to order the release of the five Chilean terrorists sentenced to 28 years in prison in Brazil and expel them.

Armando Fernandez Larios: one of three Chilean intelligence officials indicted in the September 21, 1976, murder of exiled Chilean diplomat Orlando Letelier. On February 3, 1987, he agreed to turn himself over to U.S. authorities and plead guilty to a lesser charge of accessory to murder in exchange for a short prison term and federal protection. The next day, he implicated Chilean president Augusto Pinochet in the murder coverup. On May 6, 1987, he was sentenced to 27 months to seven years in prison. On September 10, 1987, U.S. district court judge Barrington D. Parker ordered him released “forthwith.”

Carlos Fernandez: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York City and the Mexican Consulate. The members were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Carlos Fernandez: leader of Shining Path who was captured in Peru on October 4, 2000.

Carlos Fernandez: arrested on October 21, 1995, by plainclothes police outside a Guauguaychu, Argentina, teacher training college in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was a colleague of Carlos Alberto Telledin, the key suspect in the case.

Cesar Antonio Fernandez: indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was set free, although Judge Galeano ordered an attachment of his assets at 500,000 pesos.

Eleuterio Fernandez Huidobro: spokesperson for the Tupamaros National Liberation Movement in Uruguay on December 21, 1985. He was a founder of the group and still active in September 23, 1986.

Jose Fernandez: one of five members of the Trotskyist Brazilian Workers Party arrested on April 12, 1986, during a holdup of the Banco do Brasil branch in Salvador. They claimed they were trying to get funds for Nicaragua.

Jose Leonardo Fernandez Pup: retired Cuban lieutenant colonel who, on July 7, 1996, hijacked a Cuban Aerotaxi AN-2, registration CUT1183, flying from Bayamo and Santiago de Cuba to Guantánamo, Baracoa, and Moa with 17 other people—including two children—and forced it to land at the U.S. Naval base in Guantánamo. During the flight, Fernandez fired a shot through an open cockpit window. Fernandez requested political asylum. Havana demanded repatriation. The United States condemned the act as air piracy. All of the rest of those on board returned to Cuba. In May 1997, a jury in Washington acquitted him on grounds that his alternative had been imminent arrest as an anti-Castro rebel leader of the 1,000-strong Fifth of August 2000. In late November 1997, immigration judge John Bryant refused his request for asylum. Bryant recommended that he not be returned to Cuba because of the probability that he would be tortured. Defense attorney Wilfredo Allen said deportation was the most likely outcome, although he knew of no country willing to accept Fernandez.

Victor Fernandez Palmeiro: People's Revolutionary Army member who flew to Havana on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires.

Eduardo Ferrer: pilot who participated in the hijacking of a Cubana flight to the United States on July 28, 1960.

Greg Curtis Fielden: named as an unindicted coconspirator in the kidnapping and murder of U.S. vice-consul John S. Patterson in Hermosillo, Mexico, on March 22, 1974.

Andres Figueroa Cordero: Puerto Rican nationalist held since 1954 for shooting members of the U.S. House of Representatives. His release was demanded by Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) when it set off four bombs in New York City on April 3, 1975, and by two Puerto Rican nationalists when they took over Chile's consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978.

On July 12, 1976, FALN's Andres Figueroa Cordero Armed Commando Unit claimed credit for detonating 12 incendiary devices in the Herald Square area near Madison Square Garden in Manhattan.

Carlos Jesus Figueroa: Cuban exile arrested by Miami International Airport police on September 14, 1980, when he attempted to hijack an Eastern Airlines B727 to Havana. The pilot called his bluff on the ground.

Francisco Figueroa: charged with participating in the September 7, 1986, attack on Chilean president Augusto Pinochet. In December 1989, Figueroa was placed under the jurisdiction of the Sixth Military Prosecutor's Office after no evidence could be found of his participation in the attack. Defense lawyers requested a change from antiterrorist law charges to Arms Control Law charges and based on that change that he be given conditional freedom. The Sixth Military Prosecutor's Office turned down the request, leading to an appeal to the Court Martial in Santiago, Chile. On April 11, 1990, Figueroa was released from jail on conditional freedom.

Juan Eduardo Figueroa: on November 30, 1990, Lomas de Zamora Federal Judge Julio Piaggio ordered the release of the Chilean subversive because the court had not issued an arrest warrant for him. Figueroa had been accused of participating in the September 6, 1986, assassination attempt against Chilean president Augusto Pinochet.

Victor Luis Figueroa Gomez: one of four members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front sentenced to life in prison on April 1, 1992, in connection with the September 6, 1986, assassination attempt against Chilean president Augusto Pinochet and the attack on the Los Quenes carabineros station in Chile. On November 25, 1992, the Supreme Court unanimously confirmed the sentence.

Tiro Fijo: alias of Manuel Marulanda Velez.

Michael R. Finney: one of three members of the Republic of New Africa wanted in the slaying of a New Mexico policeman. They hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 106, a B727 on the ground at Albuquerque that was refueling from its flight from Phoenix and being prepared to fly on to Chicago, Illinois, and Washington, D.C., on November 27, 1971. The trio allowed the plane to refuel at Tampa, Florida, where the passengers deplaned, then flew on to Cuba. As of 1999, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the district of New Mexico on December 14, 1971. The former San Francisco resident was living in Havana and working in the state media.

Mario Eduardo Firmenich: leader of the Argentine Montoneros in the 1970s and early 1980s. He was arrested in Rio de Janeiro on February 12, 1984, at the request of the Argentine government. He had been there since November 1983. Argentina requested extradition on charges of homicide, illicit association, and offenses against the public order. On October 21, 1984, Brazil extradited him to Argentina to face seven terrorism-related charges. On December 29, 1990, he was released from Argentina's Villa Devoto Prison after being pardoned by president Carlos Menem.

Maria Josefa Fleming: Argentine Montoneros member sentenced on March 14, 1979, by a Rome court to 40 months in absentia for illegal possession of weapons and forged identity documents. She was married to Fernando Vaca Narvaja, the Montoneros deputy chief, who received the same sentence.

Carlos Eduardo Fleury: an Action for National Liberation (ALN) member whose release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the ALN and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum. He was permitted to give a media interview. He secretly returned to Brazil and was killed by Rio police on December 10, 1971.

Irvin Flores Rodriguez: Puerto Rican nationalist who joined three others in firing pistols in the House of Representatives in 1954. His release was demanded by the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation, which set off five bombs in New York City on October 26, 1974, and four more bombs on April 3, 1975. His release was demanded by two Puerto Rican nationalists who took over the Chilean Consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978. President Carter granted Flores clemency on September 7, 1979. He flew to Puerto Rico, where he received a hero's welcome. On March 19, 1994, Flores, age 69, died at his San Juan home of cancer. He was divorced from Blanca Rodriguez Rivera.

Julio Flores: member of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc (BPR) of El Salvador who served as spokesperson during the May 11, 1979, BPR takeover of the Venezuelan Embassy in San Salvador.

Pablo Esteban Flores Castillo: one of six suspected members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested and charged with arms smuggling on August 11, 1986, in connection with the discovery of a huge arms cache in Corral Bay near El Carrizal Bajo, Chile. The cache included 338 U.S. M-16 rifles used in the Vietnam War, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades, 315 Katyusha rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kilograms of U.S. and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, and 124 kilograms of plastic explosives.

Rafael Flores: arrested by the Honduran Armed Forces on August 27, 1987, in connection with the bombing on August 9, 1987, of Comayagua's Restaurante China that injured four Honduran civilians and six U.S. Army soldiers.

Sergio Flores: one of 120 members of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

Foca: radio broadcaster named by Paraguayan police as a suspect in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Carlos Fonseca Amador: founder in 1958 of the Nicaraguan Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN), named after Gen. Augusto Sandino, who had opposed the U.S. occupation of Nicaragua from 1927 to 1933. Fonseca had fled from Nicaragua to Costa Rica in 1969 to avoid being captured by Nicaraguan National Guardsmen. However, he was arrested and imprisoned for unlawful possession of a firearm. A group of FSLN members attacked the prison in an escape attempt, killing two guards, but they failed to free him, and several of the attackers were captured. His release was demanded by the FSLN hijackers of a LACSA BAC111 flying from Limon and San Jose, Costa Rica, on October 21, 1970. Costa Rica agreed to release him, and he arrived in Mexico. He was killed in a 1976 clash with the army.

Elvis Rafael Fonseca Machado: convicted of air piracy by U.S. district judge Edward B. Davis after a nonjury trial on March 4, 1994, in connection with the August 14, 1980, hijacking of National Airlines Flight 872 flying from Miami, Florida, to Puerto Rico, diverting it to Cuba. He had arrived in the United States only weeks earlier in the 1980 Mariel boatlift. The Cubans arrested Fonseca and a confederate in Havana. He served five years for violating Cuban air space. He returned on a raft in June 1993 and was arrested when an FBI check revealed the hijacking charge. He faced 20 years in prison. Sentencing was scheduled for May 11, 1994.

Oscar Eduardo Fonseca Alba: alias Raul Martinez Sanchez. Arrested on June 12, 1981, by Colombian secret police in connection with the January 19, 1981, kidnapping and murder of Bible translator Chester Allen Bitterman. A dissident faction of the April 19 Movement of Colombia was thought responsible. Fonseca had a bullet wound in one leg.

Alain Forbus Lameru: Forbus, age 19, was one of three renegade soldiers who, on May 3, 2007, tried to hijack a plane at Havana's Jose Marti International Airport, killing their hostage, Lt. Col. Victor Ibo Acuna Velazquez. The three recruits had escaped from a Cuban military base after killing a soldier and wounding another.

Mercedes Forero de Suarez: she and her husband, carrying their infant, hijacked an Avianca B727 flying between Pereira and Medellin, Colombia, on July 24, 1974. The two forced the pilot to land at Cali, where the passengers escaped. They demanded the release of several political prisoners and $2 million. He was shot by a policeman and died of his wounds. She was sentenced to prison in Colombia. She apparently had brought the pistol on board in her bra.

Miguel Antonio Forero Paez: member of Colombia's Ricardo Franco Movement who died on September 23, 1986, during a police raid of a Bogota hideout to free hostage Flor Alba Manrique de Ocampo, wife of a Modelo Jail guardsman.

Juan Carlos Fotea: Argentine terrorist suspect arrested on June 21, 1985, in Madrid. Argentina requested extradition. On December 2, 1985, Spain turned down the extradition request for the suspected member of the Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance.

Fourth Sword of World Revolution: alias of Manuel Ruben Abimael Guzman Reynoso.

Amair Freijoli da Cunha: suspect who, on February 19, 2005, surrendered to police in Altamira, Colombia, 80 miles from the killing on February 12, 2005, of Sister Dorothy Stang, age 74. Stang was an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary from the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. She was shot to death by two gunmen in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para State, Brazil. Freijoli hired the gunmen and was the intermediary between them and rancher Vitalmiro Moura, alias Bida, for whom an arrest warrant was issued on February 15. On April 26, 2006, Freijoli, age 38, an Amazon farmer, pleaded guilty and told the jury he offered money to two gunmen to kill Stang. He said two ranchers ordered her murder.

Luis Antonio Frese: hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 821, a DC8 on the Newark–Dallas–San Diego–Los Angeles run on March 25, 1969, that was diverted to Havana. He was indicted on June 26, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Texas. He died in Cuba on October 20, 1975.

Edgardo Frias: one of two leaders of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It who were arrested in Peru on March 4, 1987. Frias was extradited, along with his wife, Justina Casco, to Ecuador on March 18, 1987.

Enrique Frias: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curaçao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Leandro Angel Fuentes Rivera: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Leonardo Fuentes: hijacker of a Colombian SAM DC4 flying from Barranquilla to Medellin, Colombia, on February 5, 1969, and diverted to Cuba.

Maria Christina Fuentes Corea: Chilean and one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West German. Swedish police claimed that the group had intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K.G. Svensson. She was one of three Latin Americans sent to Cuba.

Raul Fuentes Gill: alias Comrade Raul. Shining Path member named by Peruvian police as one of three terrorists who threw dynamite bombs and fired machine guns from their car at the Indian Embassy, killing three civil guardsmen on January 26, 1987.

Severiano Fuentes: alias Commander Aparicio. One of two former Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front members who claimed responsibility for the January 2, 1991, shootout of a helicopter carrying U.S. military advisors and their subsequent murder on the ground in El Salvador. The duo voluntarily surrendered on March 17, 1992. Their defense lawyer requested that they be included in the amnesty decree promulgated by the government with the end of the guerrilla war. They faced 30 years if found guilty. Extradition to the United States was denied. Fuentes allegedly ordered the killings. On May 24, 1993, he was freed by judicial authorities after passage of a general amnesty law.

Yolanda de Fuentes Rivera: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Dober Wilfredo Ruiz Fukumoto: alias of T.T.

Dogwer Wilfredo Reiz Fukumoto: variant of Dober Wilfredo Ruiz Fukumoto; alias of T.T.

G

---

Argimiro Gabaldon: Venezuelan guerrilla leader active in the West, who was killed in 1967 when a colleague's weapon accidentally went off.

Fernando Gabeira: member of the Brazilian Revolutionary Movement of the 8th who claimed from Algiers that he had been involved in the two-month planning of the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, U.S. ambassador to Brazil. He served as Elbrick's cook during his captivity. Gabeira had been the editor of the Journal do Brasil.

Gabriel: alias of Rodolfo Cardenas.

Second Lt. Carlos Gadea Arostegui: one of two defecting Nicaraguan Air Force members who, on November 22, 1987, seized a Soviet-made Sandinista Air Force single-engine AN-2 passenger plane from an airfield near Juigalpa and made an emergency landing on a strip at Gustavo Cedeno's Las Piedras Farm near the El Bebedero River in Liberia, Costa Rica.

Orlando Gaetano: former member of the Revolutionary Action Movement arrested in Foz do Iguacu, Parana State, Brazil, on May 10, 1983, at the request of Interpol, which had been asked by the Italian Embassy to take action. Gaetano had entered Brazil from Paraguay. He faced 15 years in Italy for several 1979 terrorist attacks that occurred in Europe. In December 1983, the Brazilian Supreme Court approved Italy's extradition request.

Francisco Galan: spokesperson for Colombia's National Liberation Army in 2007.

Claudio Galeno Megalhaes: one of five members of the Brazilian Armed Revolutionary Guard-Joao Palmares Command who hijacked a Brazilian Cruzeiro do Sul Caravelle flying from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro on January 1, 1970, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba, after 48 hours of stopovers.

Mario Galgardo Zanconato: former medical student, age 22, who claimed to have organized eight bank robberies in Minas Gerais, Brazil, to raise funds for the revolutionary movement. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, U.S. ambassador to Brazil. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Alva Marisol Galindo: released from prison following demands by the 50 armed members of the Popular League of February 28 of El Salvador who took over the Panamanian Embassy with several hostages on February 13, 1980.

Ulises Gallardo: one of five Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement members arrested in 1989 and charged with kidnapping a businessman. On November 24, 1994, Chilean president Eduardo Frei asked Brazilian president Itamar Franco to order the release of the five Chilean terrorists sentenced to 28 years in prison in Brazil and expel them.

Alberto Galvez Olaechea: aliases Beta, Carlos. Journalist of the Peruvian Communist newspaper Cambio and a Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement leader who was believed to have met with members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia and the Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement in Nicaragua in September–October 1986. He was arrested on August 23, 1987, in Lima, Peru.

Nora Galvez Caverro: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Jaime Garces Rivera: commander of the Eighth Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia who was killed on December 16, 1983, by government troops in Cauca in the municipality of Tambo.

Alvaro Garcia: Colombian senator whose arrest was ordered on November 9, 2006, for alleged ties to one of the country's far-right paramilitary groups. His name was found in the computer of a deputy to paramilitary leader Rodrigo Tovar Pupo.

Antonio Garcia: deputy chief of the Colombian National Liberation Army as of December 2000.

Basilio Garcia-Breto: Cubana Airlines pilot who diverted his plane en route to Nassau, Bahamas, on May 8, 1994, to Miami International Airport, where he requested political asylum. He left a wife and three children in Cuba.

Carlos Mauricio Garcia: alias Rodrigo 00. Former Colombian right-wing paramilitary leader who was killed on May 28, 2004, when gunmen shot him in the head five times as he left a Santa Marta supermarket during the evening. No arrests were made. Garcia had e-mailed the Associated Press earlier in the month to say that drug traffickers within the paramilitary group led by Diego Fernando Murillo wanted to kill him. Garcia had led the Metro Bloc, a group of Medellin paramilitaries that fought leftist rebels in that city. He later broke with the main paramilitary group. He was once a Colombian Army officer.

Cecilia Maria Garcia Henao: alias Mariela. One of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

David Garcia: one of two journalists arrested on April 18, 1994, in Bolivia on charges of having ties to Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Brazil terrorists and being involved in the killing of American Mormons, including a woman, a few years earlier. The photographer was freed the next day for lack of evidence.

Fernando Garcia: one of three hijackers of a Colombian Avianca DC3 flying from Barranquilla to Maganque, Colombia, on September 9, 1967, diverting it to Cuba.

Ivan Gustavo Garcia Landaetta: Venezuelan-born hijacker of Pan American 442, a B707 flying from Buenos Aires to Miami on May 29, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, the hijacker was a fugitive from an indictment handed down on April 12, 1973, by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida. Some reports claimed he was politically motivated.

Joaquin Garcia: one of three hijackers of a Colombian Avianca DC3 flying from Barranquilla to Maganque, Colombia, on September 9, 1967, diverting it to Cuba.

Jose Vazquez Garcia: alias of Hernan Ricardo Losano.

Juan Garcia Melendez: member of the El Salvadoran Revolutionary Workers' Party of Central America, a subgroup of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, who was arrested in connection with the June 19, 1985, machine-gun attack on two outdoor cafés in San Salvador that killed four U.S. Marine guards and nine other diners. On January 26, 1988, the Salvadoran military appeals court ordered him freed under the country's November 5, 1987, amnesty law adopted as part of a regional peace plan. The U.S. Embassy withheld $18.5 million in economic support funds after the court said the attack was "political in nature." On January 28, 1988, the government held Garcia pending preparation of an appeal of the ruling. On April 11, 1988, president Jose Napoleon Duarte ruled that he could not be freed under the amnesty, saying that international law takes precedence over national law.

Juan Francisco Garcia Zurita: would-be hijacker of a Mexican SEASA C47 flying from Tampico to Reynosa, Mexico, on October 30, 1968. The plane landed in Brownsville, Texas, and he was extradited to Mexico.

Ramiro Garcia: one of three hijackers of a Colombian Avianca DC3 flying from Barranquilla to Maganque, Colombia, on September 9, 1967, diverting it to Cuba.

Ramon Garcia: hijacker of an Avianca Airlines B727 flying from Barranquilla to Cartagena, Colombia, but diverted to Cuba on September 22, 1968.

Ricardo Garcia: missing Nicaraguan wanted in connection with the April 20, 1983, plot with two Hondurans to assassinate Guatemalan president Efraim Rios Montt and other government officials.

Roberto Garcia Perez: would-be hijacker of a Mexican Airlines B727 scheduled to fly from Mexico City to Monterey on October 10, 1973. He took over the plane on the ground but was overpowered by a security officer.

Sistero Garcia Torres: Peruvian Maoist Shining Path member who was captured by the army during clashes with the American Battalion in the mountains of Cauca Department and later deported by Colombia on August 17, 1986.

Celso Garrido Lecaseminario: Peruvian Shining Path member who was arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Roberto Garrido Visuetti: member of Panamanian 20 December Movement and one of the suspects in the June 10, 1992, shooting in Panama of U.S. Southern Command Cpl. Zak A. Hernandez, who was killed, and Sgt. Ronald Marshall, who died the next day of his wounds. Police said Garrido was one of five Panamanian citizens deported in 1981 by the Colombian government because of ties to April 19 Movement of Colombia guerrillas. On January 25, 1995, the Second Court of Justice ordered further investigations and reissued the arrest warrant against him; he had been charged with the attack. He also faced charges of homicide, association to commit a crime, and injury to a minor. On October 28, 1995, the Fourth Superior Attorney's Office formally indicted him for the murder of Hernandez. He remained at large.

William Alberto Garrote Garcia: arrested on March 30, 1990, with three other people in connection with the March 27, 1990, kidnapping of American Gerardo Robinson Davila near the Santa Paola neighborhood in the northern part of Cali, Colombia.

Luz Carmine Garzon: alias Commander Una. One of seven April 19 Movement of Colombia hijackers who took over a Colombia Aerotal B727 flying from Bogota to Pereira on January 27, 1982. Garzon was from Pereira, Colombia. After the plane refueled, it flew on to Havana, where the hijackers requested political asylum. Colombia requested extradition on February 4, 1982.

Glenn Gebhard: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

Jesus Grant Gelbard: new name of Garland Grant.

Manuel Gerber: released from prison as one of the demands of the 50 armed members of the 28 February Popular Leagues of El Salvador who took over the Panamanian Embassy with several hostages on February 13, 1980.

Albert Germinal Borrell: one of four armed members of the right-wing Argentina National Organization Movement who ambushed two Soviet Embassy officials in a commercial garage on March 29, 1970. He was one of three would-be kidnappers captured following a gun battle with police.

Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi: associate of Syrian arms trafficker Monzer al-Kassar. Al-Ghazi was arrested in Romania on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of small arms, ammunition, thousands of machine guns, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, and “possible surface-to-air missiles” to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels “to protect their cocaine trafficking business and to attack United States interests in Colombia.” Al-Kassar was living in a 15-room Renaissance palazzo near Marbella, Andalusia, Spain, on the Costa del Sol, where he met on February 6, 2007, with two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration informants to discuss a deal worth $7.8 million to $13.5 million, plus costs of transportation. The indictment also said al-Kassar offered “to send 1,000 men to the informants to fight with the FARC against U.S. military officers in Colombia.” Al-Kassar and his associates were indicted on four counts of supplying material support to a foreign terrorist group; conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, officials, and employees; and conspiracy to acquire an anti-aircraft missile.

Mahvash Monsef Gholamreza: on August 9, 1994, Argentine Judge Galeano ordered the Iranian Embassy Third Secretary’s arrest in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He had already left for Iran prior to the blast.

Pedro Gil: Bay of Pigs veteran arrested on August 15, 1977, by federal agents in Miami, Florida, when they seized a cache of automatic weapons and confiscated three boats of a group of Cubans planning a harassment raid on the Cuban coast. He was charged with violating federal arms export control laws.

Nancy Gilvonio Conde: on March 15, 1996, the Peruvian Supreme Court of Military Justice reaffirmed the Peruvian’s life sentence for membership in Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement.

Hernan Giraldo: one of 13 senior paramilitary leaders of the right-wing United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia extradited to the United States on May 13, 2008. They had been accused of ordering the murders of thousands of people, including peasants, leftist politicians, journalists, and union activists. While in Colombian jails, they ran a cocaine trafficking organization.

Jose Vincente Giron Calvillo: a university student and member of the Rebel Armed Forces of Guatemala whose release was demanded on February 27, 1970, by the kidnappers of Guatemalan foreign minister Alberto Fuentes Mohr. Giron was delivered to the residence of Mexican ambassador Delifin Sanchez Juarez and flown to Mexico City.

Jose Maria Goitia Unzurrunzaga: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. His extradition to Spain from Uruguay was granted in 1994. Spain charged him with ETA membership. He was held in custody at the Central Police Precinct Jail in Montevideo. He was one of three imprisoned ETA members who conducted a 14-day hunger strike that ended on August 24, 1994. He was extradited to Spain on August 25, 1994, facing six counts of homicide.

Carlos Goldenberg: Argentine Revolutionary Armed Forces member who flew to Havana, Cuba, on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 en route from Trelew to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Licia Goldin: one of two Argentine members of the Red Brigades arrested in Italy on June 5, 1980. Goldin was from Santa Fe, New Mexico.

David Gomez: alias El Chino. Leader of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty. Gomez was arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrest followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Jarry Gomez: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty. Gomez was arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrests followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Jose Angel Gomez Leon: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army (ELN) guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum. On January 31, 1968, the Colombian Army killed six ELN guerrillas, including Gomez Leon, in the Santander mountains.

Jose Antonio Gomez Feo: alias of Carlos Arturo Sandoval.

Marcos Gomez: alias El Nego. Gomez was arrested on August 12, 1976, in connection with the kidnapping of William Niehous by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos—Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976. Niehous was president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela. Gomez was also arrested for his membership in the Revolutionary Organization.

Marcos Gomez Ontiveros: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty, arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrests followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Mauricio Alberto Gomez Rogers: one of three Chilean members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested by Argentine border police on May 24, 1991, in El Breal Township. Two of the members were among the inmates that had escaped from the Santiago prison in Chile and had been tried for smuggling weapons into the country through Carrizal and for involvement in several terrorist attacks. They told the arresting officers that they were coming from Petorca, Chile, and traveling to the interior along the Los Patos River. On May 30, they were handed over to Chilean Carabineros in Paso Las Cuevas, Punta de Vaca.

Maximiliano Gomez: secretary-general of the leftist Dominican Popular Movement, which was suspected of the March 24, 1970, kidnapping of Lt. Col. Donald J. Crowley, U.S. Air Force attaché, by a group claiming to be the United Anti-Reelection Command. The group demanded the release of 21, later 24, prisoners, including Gomez. Authorities released 20 prisoners, who flew to Mexico. On May 23, 1971, Gomez was found dead in Brussels, Belgium, where he was exiled. His friends in Paris claimed he was murdered by contract of political allies of Dominican President Balaguer.

Pedro Gomez Lopez: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Spain protested his nonextradition on November 27, 1993.

Ruben Gomez: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aero-postal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Mario Gongora Pajares: alias Comrade Martin. Shining Path member who told police in December 1986 that Shining Path leader Abimael Guzman was in hiding in Cusco Department, suffering from a lung ailment.

Adermis Wilson Gonzalez: Gonzalez, age 33, on March 31, 2003, claimed to have two grenades and hijacked a Cuban Airlines plane flying from the Isle of Youth. He forced the pilot to refuel in Havana. On April 1, more than 20 passengers left the aircraft unharmed. The plane sat on the runway for 12 hours and later flew to Key West, where he surrendered and was led away in handcuffs. He was traveling with his wife and three-year-old son. Gonzalez was wearing a red windbreaker with the word America stitched in white on the back. Two fake grenades were found. U.S. officials said he would be prosecuted and denied asylum. Cuba blamed the United States, citing lax treatment of earlier hijackers.

Andrew Gonzalez: convicted on November 15, 1968, of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. He and eight other anti-Castro exiles were given sentences ranging from 1 to 10 years.

Antonio Alfredo Gonzalez Olmeda: Cuban believed to live in Miami who was injured on June 20, 1988, when a bomb exploded in a car in the Balboa sector of Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, killing the bomb manufacturer, Jeff Parker. Police found Gonzalez's driver's license and an Immigration and Naturalization Service card. A briefcase in the car contained a digital remote control detonator. Gonzalez was arrested.

Armando Gonzalez-Carillo: Mexican and one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and to hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany. Swedish police claimed that the group had intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson. Gonzalez-Carillo was one of three Latin Americans sent to Cuba, their point of origination.

Carlos Gonzalez: secretary of Organization of the June 21 National Association of Salvadoran Teachers who was arrested on the southern highway at the entrance of a San Francisco neighborhood on July 3, 1980. His release from prison was demanded by the Committee of Rural Dwellers of the Marxist Popular League of February 28. The group led 115 illiterate peasants in the occupation of the Costa Rican Embassy in San Salvador, El Salvador, on July 11, 1980.

Carlos Gonzalez: one of the rebel representatives who, on December 29, 1996, agreed to end 36 years of fighting with the signing of a peace agreement with the Guatemalan government.

Carmen Gonzalez Peralva: one of two Basque Nation and Liberty members whose extradition Spain requested of the Dominican Republic on October 27, 1989. The duo had been sent from Algiers earlier in the year. They were wanted for the murder of a Spanish Navy admiral.

Daniel Alejandro Gonzalez: on December 2, 1985, Spain turned down Argentina's request for extradition of the suspected member of the Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance.

Diana Gonzalez: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia member detained by Ecuadoran troops after she was wounded in a clash with Colombian troops on March 1, 2008, on the Colombian-Ecuadoran border.

Fernando Gonzalez: alias Commander Tres. Leader of the seven April 19 Movement of Colombia hijackers of a Colombia Aerotal B727 flying from Bogota to Pereira on January 27, 1982. After the plane refueled, it flew on to Havana, Cuba, where the hijackers requested political asylum. Colombia requested extradition on February 4, 1982.

Igoberto Gonzalez Sanches: Cuban key-punch operator living in Puerto Rico who hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 932, a B747 flying from San Juan to Miami, Florida, on June 30, 1979. He wanted to go to Cuba but was overpowered and handed over to the FBI upon landing in Miami. A federal judge set bond at $500,000.

Jose Ignacio Gonzalez: Miami businessman who claimed to be active in Republican Party politics and who pleaded guilty on February 21, 1984, to having placed a time bomb in the Mexican Consulate in Miami on September 11, 1981, causing $2 million damage to the Rivergate Plaza Building. Omega-7, an anti-Castro Cuban exile group, claimed credit. Gonzalez was tried before U.S. district court judge Robert L. Carter and was a close associate of Eduardo Arocena, an Omega-7 leader awaiting trial on charges of attempting to murder the Cuban ambassador to the United Nations in March 1980.

Jose Luis Gonzalez Medina: Puerto Rican-born would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 929, a DC8 flying from New York to San Juan on September 10, 1969. He was subdued by the crew and passengers after he said he wanted to go to Cuba. He was committed to a mental institution on January 30, 1970, from which he was released in December 1971.

Jose Manuel Gonzalez-Gonzalez: New Orleans resident and Cuban citizen who, on January 17, 1990, attempted to hijack an America West 727 flying from Houston to Las Vegas, demanding to go to Cuba. The pilot landed in Austin, Texas, where a policeman subdued him. He paid cash for a one-way ticket.

Jose Miguel Gonzalez: Colombian National Liberation Army kidnapper killed on January 12, 1984, by F-2 secret police who rescued Lithuanian businessman Algis Mantas Disibiles. The businessman was being held for a $20 million ransom. The six killed or detained were also implicated in the 1983 kidnapping of Jaime Betancur Cuartas, brother of president Belisario Betancur.

Leon Gonzalez: on January 30, 1989, Gonzalez signed a communiqué from the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front General Command that was broadcast on San Salvador, El Salvador's Radio Cadena Ysu and on a Mexican radio station, in which the group suspended attacks against U.S. military personnel.

Lidia Yanida Gonzalez de Paniza: alleged by Critica Libre of Panama of knowing where the AK-47 assault rifles were secreted that were used in the June 10, 1992, shooting in Panama of U.S. Southern Command Cpl. Zak A. Hernandez, who was killed, and Sgt. Ronald Marshall, who died the next day of his wounds. On October 28, 1995, the prosecutor dismissed all charges against her. She was the sister of Pedro Miguel Gonzalez, the chief suspect in the killing.

Mario Gonzalez: on March 16, 1990, the first prosecutor of the Third Judicial District in Chiriqui Province in Panama ordered the architect's arrest for inciting rebellion against the government and threatening citizens if they attended the San Jose Fair. The leaflets by the 20 December Movement threatened future attacks against Costa Rican president Oscar Arias and Panamanian president Guillermo Endara.

Mario A. Gonzalez: one of six convicted kidnapers and terrorists—five Guatemalans and one Honduran—executed by a firing squad on March 3, 1983, three days before the scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II to Guatemala.

Pedro Miguel Gonzalez: son of Gerardo Gonzalez, president of the opposition Democratic Revolutionary Party of Panama. A member of the Panamanian 20 December Movement, he was one of the suspects in the June 10, 1992, shooting of U.S. Southern Command Cpl. Zak A. Hernandez, who was killed, and Sgt. Ronald Marshall, who died the next day of his wounds. Police said that he was arrested in September 1990, when his vehicle was found to contain a fragmentation grenade, assorted weapons, and a ski mask. He was allegedly involved in the machine-gun attack on the Arnulfista Party's headquarters in May 1990. He was detained in 1990 with an Argentine citizen related to former Argentine Col. Mohamed Seineldin, a Defense Forces advisor who headed a coup attempt against Argentine president Carlos Menem. The Panamanian attorney general on June 29, 1992, said that Gonzalez was in the car used by the machine gunners to fire on the president. On January 25, 1995, the Second Court of Justice ordered further investigations and reissued the arrest warrant against him; he had been charged with the attack. He also faced charges of homicide, association to commit a crime, and injury to a minor. He turned himself in at the Presidency on January 26, 1995, to face trial. He said that he had gone into hiding since the United States had "illegally" offered $100,000 for his arrest. On February 2, 1995, three witnesses identified him as one of the killers. On October 28, 1995, the Fourth Superior Attorney's Office formally indicted him for the murder of Hernandez.

Rigoberto Gonzalez Sanchez: hijacked Capitol Airlines Flight 236, a DC8 scheduled to fly 202 passengers and 10 crew from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami, Florida, on May 1, 1983. He diverted the plane to Havana, Cuba. He was on parole at the time. Four years prior to the incident, the Cuban had been convicted of an attempted hijacking in the United States. He surrendered to Cuban authorities.

Roberto Gonzalez: name used by one of the members of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front when buying tickets to hijack a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua. The hijackers requested political asylum in Cuba.

Ralph Gonzalez: one of two men who chartered a Sawyer Aviation Cessna 310 to fly from Phoenix to Tucson, Arizona, on March 6, 1975. They forced the pilot to fly to Nogales, Mexico. The hijackers turned the plane and pilot over to a group that met the plane. The pilot escaped the next day and notified the authorities of the hijacking. Gonzalez surrendered to federal agents on April 11, 1975. He was sentenced to six years in prison for kidnapping on July 17, 1975.

Vladimir Gonzalez Obregon: alias Miller Perdomo. Top regional commander of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia rebels operating around Bogota. Gonzalez was killed by Army troops on March 12, 1999. He had a role in major kidnappings, including the 1998 abduction of four Americans.

Comrade Gonzalo: alias of Abimael Guzman Reynoso.

Ralph L. Goodwin: one of three members of the Republic of New Africa wanted in the slaying of a New Mexico policeman. They hijacked Trans World Airlines Flight 106, a B727 on the ground at Albuquerque that was refueling from its flight from Phoenix and being prepared to fly on to Chicago, Illinois, and Washington, D.C., on November 27, 1971. The trio allowed the plane to refuel at Tampa, Florida, where the passengers deplaned, then flew on to Cuba. He drowned while swimming at a beach outside Havana on March 4, 1973.

Silvia Gora Rivera: alias Rosa Cespedes Miranda. One of two Peruvian Shining Path members being tracked by Uruguayan police on December 14, 1995, after the two flew into Uruguay with falsified Bolivian papers obtained in Quito, Ecuador. After their arrival, they went to the headquarters of the National Liberation Movement (the former Tupamaros; MRTA) seeking shelter and claiming that they were being pursued by unidentified individuals. The duo requested refugee status. Gora identified herself as Silvia Sonia Gora Rivera. An arrest warrant was later issued against her “for illegally forming an armed group.” Bolivia requested her expulsion. The media said the duo attempted to open bank accounts in Uruguay to collect ransom they were seeking for the release of Doria Medina. Medina had been kidnapped on November 1, 1995, in Bolivia by the Shining Path. The duo appeared in a Montevideo court and was released because the judge had no request for their arrest or extradition from Peru. On December 24, 1996, Uruguay confirmed that the MRTA member, who had been imprisoned in December 1996 for entering the country with a false passport, had been released by an appeals court.

Enrique Gorriaran Merlo: People’s Revolutionary Army (ERP) member who flew to Havana on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires, Argentina. He was believed to have spent several years in Cuba and Spain directing guerrilla actions in Argentina. On February 14, 1974, he and Domingo Mena announced in Buenos Aires the creation of the Revolutionary Coordinating Junta, composed of the ERP of Argentina, the Revolutionary Left Movement of Chile, the National Liberation Army of Bolivia, and the Tupamaros of Uruguay. He was incorrectly believed killed, along with ERP leader Roberto Mario Santucho, on July 19, 1976, in a gun battle with police at Villa Martelli, a suburb five miles from Buenos Aires.

In 1981, he led the destruction of an air force base in El Salvador by the Salvadoran People’s (or Popular) Liberation Forces.

On February 9, 1989, Uruguayan police said that a person of that name was believed to have led the attack by Argentine terrorists of the Third Infantry Regiment in La Tablada, Argentina, in January 23, 1989, in which 27 people died. The police said he led the attack from a car parked near the garrison, then quietly left the country. Gorriaran, his wife Sonia, and twins, age 20 (one was named Cecilia), escaped by crossing the Uruguay River from Argentina. Police said Gorriaran may have slipped away to Nicaragua.

October 28, 1995, Mexico City police and Argentine intelligence agents arrested him on charges of killing former Nicaraguan dictator Anastasio Somoza in Paraguay on September 17, 1980. He was carrying a false Mexican passport. He was sent to Argentina within nine hours. He had been wanted for 25 years for crimes in Argentina, Paraguay, Nicaragua, and El Salvador. He was suspected of bank robberies in Brazil and Mexico in the 1990s.

William W. Graham: alias Morgan Richards. One of four hijackers, including three male members of the Tuller family, who took over Eastern Airlines Flight 496, a B727 flying from Houston, Texas, to Atlanta, Georgia, on October 30, 1972. They shot to death a ticket agent who tried to stop them, then wounded a maintenance man. The plane refueled in New Orleans, Louisiana, before flying to Havana, Cuba. An indictment was handed down against them by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Texas on November 6, 1972. They were also charged with the murder of Arlington policeman Israel P. Gonzalez and bank manager Harry J. Candee during an attempted robbery of the Arlington Trust Company's Crystal Mall branch on October 25, 1972. They were also charged with attempted bank robbery and the attempted murder of Gladys Willier, a bank clerk who was wounded in the attempt. Graham said he was going to college in Cuba. On October 1, 1993, he pleaded guilty in an Arlington, Virginia, court to two counts of murder and one count of attempted murder committed during the botched bank robbery in Crystal City. Graham had returned to the United States in 1976 and worked in the San Francisco area as a computer technician, using the name Morgan Richards. He surrendered to federal authorities in April 1993. On October 29, 1993, in the U.S. District Court in Alexandria, he entered a guilty plea to the hijacking charge, facing a possible maximum sentence of life in prison for air piracy. On January 14, 1994, he was sentenced to 30 years for the hijacking, a sentence to run concurrently with a life sentence he received for the two murders. He would be eligible for parole in 20 years.

Rodrigo Granda: Colombian guerrilla leader released on June 4, 2007, by president Alvaro Uribe in an attempt to jump-start negotiations for the release of hostages, including three Americans kidnapped by Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) on February 13, 2003, and a French Colombian politician. The alleged "foreign minister" of FARC was accused by Paraguay of involvement in the murder of the daughter of a former president.

Garland J. Grant: alias Gerald Grant; new name Jesus Grant Gelbard. Hijacked Northwest Airlines Flight 433, a B727 flying the Minneapolis–Milwaukee–Detroit–Washington, D.C., run on January 22, 1971, diverting it to Havana, Cuba. He originally wanted to go to Algeria. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of Wisconsin on March 9, 1971. On April 28, 1977, the Black Panther said that he desperately wished to leave Cuba, having spent five and a half years in Cuban prisons and lost an eye in a beating by prison guards. He said he was living in a Havana hotel with 15 other hijackers, who were also unhappy.

Gregory A. Graves: AWOL marine who hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 435, a DC9 flying from Atlanta to Savannah, Georgia, on August 20, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. An indictment was handed down on February 2, 1971, by a Georgia federal grand jury. He was arrested in San Juan on June 1, 1975, and flown to Georgia to stand trial. He was convicted of air piracy and sentenced to 20 years on October 25, 1975.

Linda Grinage: alias Hazine Eytina. Former Black Power activist arrested on July 25, 1988, by the FBI for helping to hijack Eastern Airlines Flight 401 on January 2, 1969, to Cuba. She was picked up at her Albany home where she lived under the name Haziine Eytina with her attorney husband. She faced a minimum of 20 years if convicted.

Facundo Guardado: secretary-general of the Popular Revolutionary Bloc (BPR) of El Salvador, whose release was obtained on May 4, 1979, by 16 BPR members who took over the French Embassy in El Salvador. He was also a leftist labor leader and member of the Revolutionary Democratic Front of El Salvador. He was rearrested on January 18, 1981. His release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua. On November 21, 1989, Guardado phoned the manager of the San Salvador Sheraton Hotel during the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front's takeover of the hotel and subsequent taking of United States and other foreign hostages. He asked that the rebels be given safe passage.

Lenin Guardia: Chilean sentenced in September 2002 by a Chilean judge to 10 years and 300 days for sending a letter bomb to the U.S. Embassy in Chile that arrived on September 27, 2001, and another to a prominent Chilean attorney. He was the ringleader, wanting to create fear to generate business for his security consulting firm. He was charged with obstruction of justice and possession of illegal weapons.

Eduardo Guerra Jimenez: hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 1061, an L1011 Tristar flying from New York to Miami and Fort Lauderdale, Florida, on June 11, 1979, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. The former Cuban Air Force pilot had flown a Cuban MIG17 on October 5, 1969, to Homestead Air Force Base and landed it near President Carter's plane. He was arrested and was expected to be tried in Cuba.

Maikel Guerra Morales: Guerra, age 31, was one of six knife-wielding Cubans who, on March 19, 2003, hijacked a Cuban Aero Taxi DC3 en route from the Isle of Youth to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida. The group broke down the cockpit door and tied up four crew members with tape and rope. Five of the hijackers had knives. The U.S. military scrambled jet fighters and a U.S. Customs Department Black Hawk helicopter to escort the plane. No injuries were reported. The plane landed at Key West International Airport at 8:06 P.M., where the hijackers surrendered. The six were arraigned on air piracy charges and faced 20 years to life in prison if convicted. The 25 passengers and 6 crew were held at an immigration detention center near Miami. Sixteen of the passengers returned to Cuba on March 22; the others opted to stay in the United States. Cuba demanded the return of the plane, its crew, and all of the passengers, saying it was an "act of terrorism." Cuba later said U.S. prosecution would be acceptable. Reports were unclear as to the nationality of the passengers. One report said no passengers were Cuban and that one was Italian.

On August 7, 2003, U.S. magistrate judge John O'Sullivan said confessions by Neudis Infantes Hernandez and Yainer Olivares Samon should not be used at trial because the FBI did not give them their Miranda warnings immediately. Edited summaries of the confessions of their four colleagues could be used in the September trial. Prosecutors were given 10 days to respond to his ruling.

On December 11, 2003, the six Cuban defendants were convicted after jurors were not persuaded that it was a "freedom flight" undertaken with the crew's cooperation. Conviction entailed a mandatory 20 years, with a possible life sentence. On April 21, 2004, four hijackers were sentenced to 20 years in prison; the plot's leader and his brother received 24 years.

Santiago M. Guerra-Valzez: Cuba-born hijacker of National Airlines Flight 183, a DC8 flying from Miami to Jacksonville, Florida, on July 24, 1971, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. During the flight, Guerra-Valzez opened fire, wounding a stewardess and a passenger. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury on May 25, 1972, in the Southern District of Florida.

Alfonso Guerrero Ulloa: on December 8, 1987, the Honduran government permitted him to leave the country for asylum in Mexico. He was a suspect in the bombing on August 9, 1987, of Comayagua's Restaurante China that injured four Honduran civilians and six U.S. Army soldiers. The United States filed protests with Honduras and Mexico.

Oleg Gueton Rodriguez: Venezuelan arrested on October 14, 1976, by Venezuelan authorities in connection with the October 6, 1976, bombing of Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. See also Orlando Bosch, Freddy Lugo, Luis Posada Carriles, and Hernan Ricardo Losano.

Major Ernesto Che Guevara: led a rebel group that ambushed a Bolivian government patrol on March 23, 1967, killing six soldiers and an Indian guard. He was a close friend of Cuban president Fidel Castro. He became a favorite of leftist students around the world; T-shirts with his image are still selling well in the 2000s. He was fatally wounded near La Higuera, Bolivia, in a clash with the Bolivian Army on October 9, 1967.

Nydia Guevas Rivera: one of two people who took over Chile's consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978, and demanded the release of five Puerto Ricans held in federal jails for attempting to assassinate President Truman in 1950 and firing pistols in the U.S. House of Representatives in 1954. The next day, they surrendered. Guevas was held on $250,000 bail.

Raul Guglieiminetti: former member of the Argentine intelligence service and wanted for terrorist acts in Argentina in 1985, including the bombing of Radio Belgrano on April 29, 1985, the murder of businessman Emilio Esteban Naum, and the ransom kidnapping of businessman Meyer and Enrique Pescarmona. He was arrested on June 21, 1985, in Marbella, Spain. Argentina requested extradition. On December 2, 1985, a Spanish court approved extradition of the suspected member of the Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance.

Maria Teresa Guidobro Bermudez: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Berlioze Guillaume: one of two Haitian soldiers who, during a failed mutiny against the government on April 10, 1989, fired into the air and took over a twin-engine plane with seven missionaries on board at Cap Haitien, Haiti. The Cessna landed in Miami International Airport. The hijackers surrendered peacefully to police and the FBI. The next day, U.S. magistrate William Turnoff ordered the duo held without bail on a criminal complaint.

Miguel Guija Barreto: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Mario Guillen Garcia: Costa Rican member of the People's Vanguard, a Costa Rican group, and one of several members of the Carlos Aguero Echeverria Command who fired a bazooka at a van carrying U.S. Marine guards to the U.S. Embassy in San Jose on March 17, 1981, injuring three Marines and two Costa Ricans. Guillen had originally said he was a Nicaraguan when he was arrested in April. On April 29, 1981, police announced that he had confessed to the attack.

Gustavo: one of 20 members of the Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms in Guatemala who died on August 9, 1984, in a shootout with the Guatemalan Army in San Pablo, San Marcos Department.

Jorge Luiz Gutierrez Ulla: convicted on November 15, 1968, of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. He and eight other anti-Castro exiles were given sentences ranging from 1 to 10 years.

Jose Eliseo Gutierrez Amplie: variant of Jose Eliseo Gutierrez Sampie.

Jose Eliseo Gutierrez Sampie: variant Amplie. Nicaraguan whose release from Costa Rican prison was demanded by the five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981.

Jose Luis Francisco Gutierrez: Colombian and suspected member of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) who was arrested on April 16, 1989, by Peruvian police while traveling in a car with Peruvian engineer Miguel Rincon Rincon. Police found subversive propaganda from the outlawed Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) of Peru. Police suggested Gutierrez was the liaison between M-19 and MRTA, which two years earlier had created the now-dismantled America Battalion, which staged armed operations in Colombia.

Mario Gutierrez Serrano: one of two members of the Democratic Revolutionary Alliance (ARDE) in Costa Rica who, on June 19, 1983, died when a bomb they were transporting in their car exploded prematurely. They were on their way to a meeting with the anti-Sandinista ARDE and apparently planned to assassinate ARDE leaders.

Paulina Gutierrez: convicted on November 15, 1968, of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. He and eight other anti-Castro exiles were given sentences ranging from 1 to 10 years.

Loyola Guzman: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Manuel Ruben Abimael Guzman Reynoso: aliases Comrade Gonzalo, President Gonzalo, Fourth Sword of World Revolution. Former San Cristobal de Ayacucho University professor who formed Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path) on May 17, 1980, on Maoist principles. On February 10, 1991, Lima's Channel 5 Television reported that he was wounded by two bullets in the arm in a shootout with police at a house behind a military facility in Lima's Chorrillos District. He was arrested on September 12, 1992, by police and members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate. A military tribunal began his closed trial at the Callao naval base on September 28, 1992, under a new Peruvian antiterrorist decree that called for suspected subversive leaders to be given summary military trials for treason. Shining Path was known for retaliating against judges who sentenced their members.

On October 7, 1992, the tribunal sentenced Guzman and 10 others to life in prison for high treason and fined him and two other defendants $25 billion. On October 14, 1992, the Supreme Military Council for Justice unanimously confirmed the life sentence. He was blamed for the deaths of 23,000 Peruvians and was found guilty of masterminding the murder of popular leader Maria Elena Moyano. He went on a hunger strike in his cell at the naval base on April 3, 1994.

On March 20, 2003, a Peruvian court set aside his life sentence because his treason conviction was handed down by an unconstitutional secret military court.

His new trial was scheduled for November 5, 2004, but was postponed after the first day after the courtroom proceedings were disrupted.

Guzman was the illegitimate son of a middle-class businessman in Arequipa, Peru. He lost his mother at age five. He graduated from the town's university, writing a thesis on Kant's theory of space. He married his wife, Augusta la Torre, daughter of a local Communist leader, when he was age 29. She was believed to have died in 1990, possibly in Sweden. He taught in the early 1960s in the philosophy department of the University of Huamanga in Ayacucho. He joined the Peruvian Communist Party, later joining its Maoist faction, whose newspaper was named Sendero Luminoso. He attended cadre school in China during the Cultural Revolution from 1966 to 1976 to study "people's war." He was arrested three times, most recently in 1979. After an attorney obtained his release, he went underground. He called himself the "Fourth Sword of Marxism," after Marx, Lenin, and Mao. His mistress was Elena Iparraguirre, who was also sentenced to life for treason. He suffered from psoriasis and a throat inflammation.

H

---

Frederick William Hahneman: Honduran-born U.S. citizen who hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 175, a B727 flying from Allentown, Pennsylvania, to Washington, D.C., and Miami on May 6, 1972. At Dulles Airport, he demanded $303,000, six parachutes, two bush knives, two jumpsuits, two crash helmets, and two cartons of cigarettes. He flew to New Orleans, obtaining another plane. He bailed out over Yoro in the northern Honduran jungle. The FBI named him in a warrant on June 1. On June 3, he appeared at the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa with childhood friend Jose Gomez Rovelo. Hahneman, who had been in the Air Force and had worked as a technician for U.S. firms abroad, was indicted for air piracy, kidnapping, and extortion. He claimed “a contact who came to Honduras from Panama took the money and deposited it in the Chinese Communist bank in Hong Kong.” He was sentenced to life on September 29, 1972. The money was recovered in May 1973.

Shafik Handal: on January 30, 1989, he signed a communiqué from the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front General Command that was broadcast on San Salvador, El Salvador’s Radio Cadena Ysu and on a Mexican radio station in which the group suspended attacks against U.S. military personnel.

Michael L. Hansen: hijacker of Western Airlines Flight 407, a B737 flying from Salt Lake City, Utah, to Los Angeles, California, on May 5, 1972, and diverted to Cuba. The hijacker wanted to go to Hanoi, North Vietnam, to protest the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam but was told the plane lacked the range, so he settled for Cuba. He permitted refueling in Los Angeles, California, Dallas, Texas, and Tampa, Florida. He was returned to New York from Cuba via Barbados on June 14, 1975. After being tried in Los Angeles as a result of an indictment handed down against him by a federal grand jury in the Central District of California on September 2, 1972, he was sentenced to 10 years on December 23, 1975, for air piracy.

‘Ali al-Hasan: Syrian arrested on October 8, 1994, by Argentine police who found him carrying four sticks of dynamite and military attaché credentials issued by the Iraqi Embassy. The Iraqi Embassy denied knowledge of al-Hasan. He was arraigned in the Moron Court headed by Judge Susana Morris Douglas for possession of explosives, a federal crime. Police were investigating whether he was involved in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was in possession of a large quantity of newspaper clippings on the blast.

Hassan Rad Hassan: Brazilian member of Hizballah who was arrested in Valencia, Spain, on November 24, 1989, when police discovered that eight Hizballah terrorists had cached several kilograms of Exogen C-4 explosives in jam jars in the port of Valencia and Madrid.

El Haya: alleged member of a Libyan-sponsored Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hit team targeting President Reagan and other senior government officials in November 1981. Some reports located the assassins in Mexico or Canada.

David Thomas Healy: hijacker of a Cessna 172 from the United States to Cuba on April 13, 1962. He and fellow hijacker Leonard Malcolm Oeth were deported to Miami, Florida, on April 20, 1962. They were convicted on November 12, 1964, of aircraft piracy and kidnapping, and sentenced to 20 years and 1 year, to run concurrently. Healy was paroled on December 15, 1969.

Renata Hehr: West German arrested on May 3, 1983, in Arequipa, Peru, and accused of terrorist activities, including the bombing of the Peruvian–U.S. Cultural Institute in Arequipa. She had 39 sticks of dynamite, 83 fuses, 2 revolvers, and subversive materials. She was charged with terrorist activities committed in 1978, 1980, and 1983 while she was a member of Shining Path. She said that Shining Path leader Alberto Segura forced her to commit the 25 terrorist acts, which were directed at stores, banks, power line towers, electricity stations, and radio stations in Cusco, Puno, and Arequipa. On November 7, 1986, she was sentenced to a 12-year prison term to end on April 30, 1995. Her first attorney, Vasquez Huayca, disappeared under mysterious circumstances. Martha Huatay, head of the Peruvian Democratic Lawyers Association, charged that government forces abducted Huayca in the corridors of the building.

Robert McRae Helmey: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 459, a B727 flying from Jacksonville to Miami, Florida, on January 11, 1969, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. The Cubans placed the Green Beret reserve noncommissioned officer in solitary confinement for 109 days. He was then put on a ship to Canada, which returned him to the United States on May 5, 1969. He was the first successful hijacker of an airliner to be arraigned in the United States. He believed he was part of a plot to assassinate Fidel Castro. Two psychiatrists testified that he was temporarily insane. The jury acquitted him of air piracy and kidnapping on November 20, 1969, making him the first sky-jacker of a commercial plane to be acquitted.

Silvia Heriquez Peralta: signatory of a confessor letter by the Vanguardia Patriótica Torrijista 20 de Diciembre, a leftist subversive group in Panama, to claim credit for the January 31, 1993, kidnapping of three U.S. missionaries.

Alfonso Hernandez: on April 24, 1976, he pulled a revolver shortly after takeoff and forced his way into the cockpit of an Avianca B747 flying from Pereira to Bogota, Colombia. He told the pilot to continue to Bogota, where he released all of the passengers. He said he was protesting “the government’s neglect of the peasants,” then surrendered to authorities.

Alfred A. Hernandez: Cuban exile who hijacked National Airlines Flight 411, a B727 flying the Newark–Charleston–Miami route on September 24, 1969, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive from an indictment handed down on November 19, 1969, by a federal grand jury in Florida.

Angel Hernandez Rojo: one of four Cuban exiles arrested on October 27, 1997, when U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico. The exiles were apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Isla Margarita off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group’s executive board. Hernandez and Llama were summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. All were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted seven Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that in 1995 the seven and others began plotting to kill Castro. They obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a hillpoint stakeout that overlooked the airport. He noted its location and an offshore spot into satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro.

On December 8, 1999, the jury found the five Cuban exiles not guilty of plotting to assassinate Castro. This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. The U.S. district court jury deliberated for eight hours over two days before declaring not guilty on all charges Angel Alfonso, age 59, Angel Hernandez Rojo, age 62, Francisco Secundino Cordova, age 51, Jose Rodriguez Sosa, age 59, and Jose Antonio Llama, age 67. Charges against another defendant were dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Carlos L. Hernandez-Tranhs: hijacker of American Air Taxi 208, a Cessna 402 general aviation craft flying from Key West to Miami on April 5, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down on June 8, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida.

Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez: on October 27, 1997, U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico and arrested four Cuban exiles apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Isla Margarita off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group’s executive board. Hernandez and Llama were summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. All were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory.

J. Hernandez: on August 13, 1980, he tripped the Key West metal detector while trying to smuggle a toy gun on board an Air Florida B737 flying from Key West to Miami. He was convicted of air piracy and conspiracy and sentenced to 20 years in February 1981 by a Florida court. Seven of his colleagues hijacked the plane and diverted it to Cuba.

Lazaro Hernandez: Cuban boatlift refugee who on January 18, 1985, attempted to hijack Eastern Air Lines Flight 403, an Airbus A300 en route from Newark to Miami and divert it to Cuba. The pilot tricked the hijacker into thinking that he had landed in Havana, Cuba; they really landed in Orlando, Florida. The copilot and a passenger subdued the hijacker.

Oswaldo Hernandez: one of three Cubans who on October 2, 1959, hijacked a Cubana Viscount en route from Havana, Cuba, to Santiago, Chile, and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where they requested political asylum.

Luis Ralph Hernandez: Chilean who attempted to hijack a Canadian Pacific Air DC10 en route from Canada to Peru on March 19, 1986. He was subdued by passengers. During an emergency landing in Panama, he was arrested by local authorities who said they would extradite him to Chile.

Rogelio M. Hernandez Leyva: a Cuban exile who hijacked National Airlines Flight 1064, a DC8 flying from Los Angeles to Miami on July 17, 1968, diverting it to Cuba, where he was disarmed. He was allowed to remain in Cuba. He was indicted on August 28, 1969 by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of Louisiana. As of 1979, he remained at large.

Luz Mary Hernandez Saavedra: April 19 Movement of Colombia member who was taken prisoner in late 1985 in Brazil for extorting money from Colombian merchants.

Mauricio Hernandez Norambuena: one of four members of the leftist Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chile who, on December 30, 1996, escaped a high-security prison via helicopter. The foursome jumped into a basket dangling from the helicopter during a gun battle between guards and the helicopter team. He was serving a life sentence for the 1991 assassination of rightist senator Jaime Guzman. The helicopter was rented at a Santiago airfield by three women who appeared to be from the United States and two Argentine-accented men. Prison director Claudio Martinez resigned. Police later found the helicopter and a getaway car with two M-16 rifles in a park in southern Santiago. In 2002, a São Paulo, Brazil, judge sentenced Hernandez to 16 years in prison for kidnapping a Brazilian advertising executive.

Fortunato Herrera: left-wing Venezuelan congressman arrested on August 4, 1976, for questioning in connection with the kidnapping by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos—Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976, of William Niehous. Niehous was president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela.

Geraldo Herrera: variant Gerardo Herrera. Former member of the Colombian People's Liberation Army arrested on June 22, 2001, for a U.S. oil worker's kidnapping and murder on October 12, 2000, in Ecuador. He was believed to be the ringleader of the 50 gang members involved in a series of kidnappings. He was extradited to the United States in 2003.

Gerardo Herrera: variant of Geraldo Herrera.

Gonzalo Herrera: hijacker of a Cubana Viscount on April 12, 1960.

Luis Herrera: would-be hijacker of an Avianca DC4 flying from Barranquilla to Santa Marta, Colombia, on July 10, 1969. He was overpowered by the pilot.

Maria A. Herrera: one of two hijackers of an Aerolineas Argentinas Comet IV flying from Cordoba to Tucuman to Buenos Aires, Argentina, on March 24, 1970, and diverted to Cuba after a repair stop in Lima, Peru.

Charles R. Hill: alias Fela Olatunji. One of three members of the Republic of New Africa wanted in the slaying of a New Mexico policeman. They hijacked Trans World Airline Flight 106, a B727 on the ground at Albuquerque, refueling from its flight from Phoenix and being prepared to fly on to Chicago and Washington, D.C., on November 27, 1971. The trio allowed the plane to refuel at Tampa, Florida, where the passengers deplaned, then flew on to Cuba. As of 1999, Hill was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the district of New Mexico on December 14, 1971. As of August 31, 1999, he was living in Havana and had a girlfriend and a 13-year-old daughter from a previous relationship. He had no remorse for the murder of New Mexico State Trooper Robert Rosenbloom, age 28, whose killing led to Hill's hijacking, saying the killing was in self-defense. Hill said the trio wanted to go to Africa, but they stayed and cut sugarcane. He battled alcohol problems, drinking more than a large bottle of rum each day. In 1979, the Cubans arrested him for falsifying currency receipts; he served 14 months of a four-year sentence. In 1986, he was jailed for eight months for possession of a marijuana cigarette.

Silvia Mercedes Hodges: aliases Luisa, Diana, Ana Morales, Ana Aguilar, Alejandra Renata Colombo. Argentine People's Revolutionary Army member who rented the house used by the hit team in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Juan Huaman: narcoterrorist arrested on July 12, 1985, by Arequipa, Peru, police who raided a cocaine processing facility, seizing dynamite and subversive literature. The gang was believed to have ties to the Maoist Shining Path.

Cirilo Javier Huamani: propaganda chief of the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement in Peru who was arrested on November 22, 1985, in the San Antonio neighborhood of Miraflores, Peru.

Martha Huatay: attorney who ran the Shining Path metropolitan unit and was one of 70 Shining Path members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Edigiro Huerta: variant Huerta; aliases Nestor Cerpa Carolini, Comrade Evaristo, Comandante Huertas. Commander of the Edgar Sanchez Special Forces, the two dozen Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) gunmen who, on December 17, 1996, took over the residence of the Japanese ambassador and held hostage 700 diplomats, business leaders, and government officials. He was later identified as a Marxist ideologue and the only MRTA leader at large. A former textile union official, he was one of the group's founders in 1984 and served as its military commander, in which role he was a highly successful tactical commander who was obsessed with the treatment of imprisoned comrades.

Carlos Huete: hijacker of a Honduran SAHSA DC3 flying from La Cieba to Tegucigalpa, Honduras, on September 14, 1969, and diverted to San Salvador, El Salvador's Ilopango International Airport. He was immediately arrested.

Victor Ramon Huembes Jimenez: variant Huemberg. One of the six Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who, on October 29, 1981, hijacked Costa Rican SANSa Flight 11. He was arrested on October 30, 1981, in El Salvador, pending extradition. El Salvador agreed to extradition on November 2, but the court system denied extradition on November 16 because of incorrect filing of the extradition request by Costa Rica. On December 8, 1981, he was arraigned.

Victor Ramon Huemberg Jimenez: variant Victor Ramon Huembes Jimenez.

Esperanza Hugaz de Rossi: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Sean Hughes: Irish citizen arrested on arms smuggling charges on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when a U.S. couple took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van carried 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. His girlfriend, Susan May, was also arrested.

Yvonne Hunter Martinez: one of five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who, on October 29, 1981, hijacked Costa Rican SANSa Flight 11. On December 8, 1981, she was arraigned.

Akram Farhat Hussein: detained Lebanese mentioned on August 18, 1994, by Buenos Aires

LS84 Television as having been identified by a woman to Paraguayan police investigating the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was released after three months for lack of evidence.

I

---

Carlos Iazo: one of two Chilean Socialists held in a Santiago military jail whose release was demanded by four Chilean Socialists, three of them brothers, who hijacked a Ladeco B727 flying from Arica, Chile, on a domestic flight and diverted it to Lima, Peru, on July 5, 1977.

Miguel Ibanez Oteiza: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Uruguayan courts granted his extradition. On March 11, 1994, Uruguayan courts confirmed the extradition request on charges of involvement in an attack. The courts had earlier confirmed an extradition request on murder charges. He was one of three imprisoned ETA members who conducted a 14-day hunger strike that ended on August 24, 1994. He was extradited to Spain on August 25, 1994, facing six counts of homicide.

Pablo Ibanez: indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was also indicted for possession of drugs. His assets were attached for 50,000 pesos.

Roberto Iburguen: one of two students from the Sociology School of Greater San Andres University arrested on November 15, 1990, in connection with the October 10–11, 1990, attacks on the U.S. Marine residence in the Miraflores District of La Paz. Two Nestor Paz Zamora Commando gunmen fired machine guns from their car at the residence and then threw a package bomb at the door of the building. They later bombed the John F. Kennedy monument. The duo was linked to the Nestor Paz Zamora Committee.

Carlos Ibarra Perez: spokesperson, age 60, for the Citizen Defense Committee activist group in Mexico. On June 5, 2000, the group offered a $10,000 bounty for killing a U.S. Border Patrol agent. He claimed that too many illegal immigrants were being slain by federal agents and private landowners while sneaking into the United States. Two weeks earlier, a Border Patrol agent in Brownsville, Texas, shot to death an illegal immigrant in a struggle on the banks of the Rio Grande.

Raul Ibarra: Ibarra was charged with helping deliver the van used in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires. His trial began on September 24, 2001.

Miriam Ibarraguirre: alias Comrade Miriam. Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, with Shining Path founder Abimael Guzman Reynoso in Lima, Peru, and charged with organizing the party congress.

Jose Ibrahim: Brazilian labor leader in the São Paulo area. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of Charles Burke Elbrick, U.S. ambassador to Brazil. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Raul Idilio Ibarra: deputy police superintendent on active duty who testified on July 14, 1996, to Argentine federal judge Juan Jose Galeano regarding the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in Buenos Aires. He and three other police officers allegedly sold the car bomb used in the attack on the AIMA, in which 86 people were killed and 231 or more injured.

Azhar Iqbal: one of four Pakistanis suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They were arrested by the Argentine federal police antiterrorist brigade on March 21, 1992. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges had not been dropped.

Ignacio Ikonicoff: Argentine People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) member arrested in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by ERP's Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The "people's prison" was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro. Ikonicoff, an Inter Press journalist, claimed that he was beaten while in jail.

Carlos Andres Inchaustigui Degoela: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Neudis Infante Hernandez: Infante, age 31, was one of six knife-wielding Cubans who, on March 19, 2003, hijacked a Cuban Aero Taxi DC3 en route from the Isle of Youth to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida. The group broke down the cockpit door and tied up four crew members with tape and rope. Five of the hijackers had knives. The U.S. military scrambled jet fighters and a U.S. Customs Department Black Hawk helicopter to escort the plane. No injuries were reported. The plane landed at Key West International Airport at 8:06 p.m., where the hijackers surrendered. The six were arraigned on air piracy charges and faced 20 years to life in prison if convicted. The 25 passengers and 6 crew were held at an immigration detention center near Miami. Sixteen of the passengers returned to Cuba on March 22; the others opted to stay in the United States. Cuba demanded the return of the plane, its crew, and all of the passengers, saying it was an "act of terrorism." Cuba later said U.S. prosecution would be acceptable. Reports were unclear as to the nationality of the passengers. One report said no passengers were Cuban and that one was Italian.

On August 7, 2003, U.S. magistrate judge John O'Sullivan said confessions by Neudis Infantes Hernandez and Yainer Olivares Samon should not be used at trial because the FBI did not give them their Miranda warnings immediately. Edited summaries of the confessions of their four colleagues could be used in the September trial. Prosecutors were given 10 days to respond to his ruling.

On December 11, 2003, the six Cuban defendants were convicted after jurors were not persuaded that it was a "freedom flight" undertaken with the crew's cooperation. Conviction entailed a mandatory 20 years, with a possible life sentence. On April 21, 2004, four hijackers were sentenced to 20 years in prison; the plot's leader and his brother received 24 years.

Samuel Alben Ingram: self-proclaimed black Muslim who hijacked a Delta L1011 flying the Los Angeles–Dallas–Atlanta–New York route on January 25, 1980. He wanted to go to Cuba, but when in Havana, said he wanted to go to Tehran, Iran. He was overpowered by the pilots. He was accompanied by his wife and two children. He was convicted of hijacking by a U.S. federal jury on November 19, 1980.

Heriberto Luis Inostroza Espinoza: member of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front who was wounded in a shootout with police and arrested in connection with the April 19, 1986, bombing of the Santiago, Chile, residence of U.S. ambassador Harry Barnes.

Elena Iparraguirre: mistress of Shining Path leader Abimael Guzman. On October 14, 1992, the Peruvian Supreme Military Council for Justice unanimously confirmed their life sentences for high treason.

Gaby Ipocco: one of five members of a Shining Path “annihilation squad” led by Rosa Ramos Campos. They were arrested on March 4, 1989, by the Antiterrorist Directorate of the Peruvian Police in Tacna, near the Chilean border, in connection with the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement. Ipocco was studying at the University of Tacna.

Anastasio Irineo Leal: deputy police superintendent on active duty who testified on July 14, 1996, to Argentina federal judge Juan Jose Galeano regarding the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in Buenos Aires. He and three other police officers allegedly sold the car bomb used in the attack on AIMA in which 86 people were killed and 231 or more injured. On September 24, 2001, his trial began; he was charged with helping deliver the van.

Jesus Maria Lariz Iriondo: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. Although Spain requested extradition, Iriondo was released. A Court of Appeals spokesperson said on July 8, 1993, that it had denied extradition because the Spanish charges—belonging to an armed organization, kidnapping, carrying explosives and weapons, and destructive acts—were political crimes.

Carlos Irigoytia: on October 30, 1995, an arrest warrant was issued for Irigoytia in connection with his links to the key suspects in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Luis Iruretagoyena: on August 7, 1996, the Basque explosives expert jailed in Spain confessed that he had helped manufacture bombs for the Nicaraguan Sandinistas and leftist Salvadoran guerrillas. His bombs were used in a 1982 car bombing at the Defense Ministry in El Salvador and in several attacks on Salvadoran bridges and power line towers. He was arrested in Paris in 1992 and extradited to Spain.

Zein Isa: Isa, age 63, was one of four members of the Abu Nidal group jailed on April 1, 1993, by St. Louis police for planning to blow up the Israeli Embassy and murder Jews. He was already in prison awaiting execution for stabbing to death his 16-year-old daughter in 1989. The indictment said he discussed killing Jews in the United States and was involved with Luie Nijmeh with illegal transfers of money. He had received his instructions in Mexico in 1987. Charges against him were dropped in July 1994.

Carroll Ishee: U.S. member of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, a rebel group's political wing, who was killed by gunfire from a Salvadoran government helicopter in August 1983.

Comrade Isidoro: spokesperson for the Shining Path of Peru on February 11, 1991, when the group threatened to kill United Nations secretary-general Javier Perez de Cuellar, a Peruvian citizen.

Jokin Izeta Picavea: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty member deported from Venezuela and turned over to Spanish police by French officials on November 3, 1987.

Andres Izaguirre: Cuban soldier who hijacked a military helicopter with Guillermo Santos, helped kill the pilot, and landed in Key West on March 20, 1964. No charges were brought.

Consuelo Yvonne Izquierdo: variant of Ivon Consuelo Izquierdo.

Ivon Consuelo Izquierdo: variant Consuelo Yvonne Izquierdo; alias La Medica. One of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

J

---

Julio Jacinto Eyzaguirre: alias Roberto. Lautaro United Popular Action Movement terrorist who died on August 24, 1990, after being wounded by a Chilean Carabineros noncommissioned officer during an attack by the terrorists on a Conchali supermarket. Two days later, the group bombed three Mormon temples in his memory.

The Jackal: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

Henry D. Jackson Jr.: one of three wanted criminals who hijacked Southern Airways Flight 49, a DC9 flying from Birmingham to Montgomery, Alabama, on November 10, 1972. The trio claimed to be Black Panther sympathizers. They demanded $10 million and forced the pilot to fly to nine different locations before finally landing in Cuba, where they were not permitted to keep the money. The hijackers decided to leave, making this the first time a hijacked plane had left Cuba with the hijackers still aboard. After leaving Havana and landing in Orlando, Florida, the FBI shot out the tires of the plane. In retaliation, the hijackers shot the copilot in the hand and forced the pilot to return to Cuba. The three were found guilty by Cuba on September 27, 1973. Jackson was sentenced to 20 years. On August 12, 1975, the Washington Post reported that Cuba had returned the ransom money that had been paid to the hijackers. As of 1979, the three were fugitives from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Alabama on November 27, 1972. Jackson was free on bail in Detroit, Michigan, where he was accused of rape.

Robert Lee Jackson: hijacker, along with his Guatemalan-born girlfriend, of Braniff Flight 14, a B707 flying on the Acapulco–Mexico City–San Antonio, Texas, run on July 2, 1971. The duo forced the pilot to fly to Monterey, Mexico, where they received $100,000 from a Braniff official in exchange for the release of the passengers. The plane flew on to Lima, Peru, and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where police tried and failed to arrest the hijackers. The plane flew on to Buenos Aires, Argentina; the hijackers were looking for an Algerian representative who would arrange political asylum for them. The Argentine government surrounded the plane and the hijackers surrendered after 16 hours. The Argentine police took the money from them, although Jackson tried to hide $10,000 in his socks. Complaints were filed against the duo in the Western District of Texas on July 2, 4, and 6, 1971. An Argentine court sentenced Jackson to five years on December 15, 1971. The duo was extradited to Mexico on July 25, 1974. As of 1979, they remained fugitives from U.S. charges.

A. Jacobs: one of two American would-be hijackers who attempted to divert a British West Indian Airways (a Trinidad and Tobago corporation) B727 flying from Kingstown, St. Vincent, and the Grenadines, to Miami, Florida, on May 1, 1970. They said they had an appointment with Eldridge Cleaver in Algiers and demanded to be flown there. The plane landed in Havana, Cuba; the pilot claimed that there was a faulty oil pressure gauge. The duo then demanded to be flown to Senegal but was talked out of it by British and Cuban negotiators.

Alfonso Jacquin: one of three leaders of the 50 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who, on November 6, 1985, stormed the Palace of Justice in downtown Bogota and killed 10 Supreme Court justices.

Jaime: alias of Rene Maximiliano Rodriguez Lopez.

Miguel Gustavo Jaimes: Argentine Judge Galeano indicted Jaimes on January 31, 1995, on charges of “harboring” in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. His assets were embargoed for 500,000 pesos, and then he was released. He was ordered to appear before the court within the first five days of each month. He was indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association.

Henri Jamioy Quistial: Colombian, age 28, extradited with Juan Luis Bravo to Miami on October 28, 2002. The duo appeared in federal court on a 10-count indictment that said they were part of a for-profit kidnap group operating in the Amazon basin from 1997 to 2001. They were to face trial in U.S. District Court in Washington. This was the first time Colombia had permitted its citizens to be tried in the United States on a non-drug crime. They faced life for the kidnapping and murder on October 12, 2000, in Ecuador of U.S. hostage Ron Sander, an oil rig supervisor. Some of the kidnappers had been members of the since-disbanded Popular Liberation Front.

Jessie Jane: one of four members of Brazilian Action for National Liberation who tried to hijack a Cruzeiro do Sul Caravello flying the Rio de Janeiro–São Paulo–Buenos Aires, Argentina, run. They wanted to go to Cuba, but the wounded pilot flew back to Rio. Police stormed the plane and arrested the hijackers before they made any demands.

Guillermo John Jansen: one of four armed members of the right-wing Argentina National Organization Movement who ambushed two Soviet Embassy officials in a commercial garage on March 29, 1970. He was one of three would-be kidnappers captured following a gun battle with police.

Arturo Jarrin: leader of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It who died in 1986 in clashes with police.

Commander Javier: claimed credit on behalf of the People’s Command on March 27, 1986, for the bombing of the U.S. Embassy in La Paz.

Uwe Jensen: defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash. Operation White Terror began 13 months earlier with meetings of undercover FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia, a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez (alias Commandant Napo) and Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization. The charges carry life sentences. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Commander Jeronimo: alias of Jorge Eliecer Martinez.

Willis Jessie: alias Stewart Orth. Hijacker of a Naples Airlines Cessna 182 chartered to fly near Naples, Florida, on August 4, 1968, and diverted to Cuba. The Cubans permitted the U.S. Army deserter to remain in Cuba. He voluntarily returned to the United States via Mexico on January 10, 1969. He was sentenced in June 1969 to 10 years for kidnapping. He was paroled on July 28, 1971.

Alvaro Jimenez: member of the April 19 Movement of Colombia, which demobilized in the early 1990s. By 2007, he had become director of the Colombian chapter of the International Campaign to Ban Land Mines.

Carlos Jimenez Millan: alleged Colombian guerrilla who, with his pregnant wife, Luz Amparo Tamayo, sought asylum in the Austrian Embassy in Bogota on August 19, 1986. They left 10 hours later when they discovered that the embassy did not have power to grant them asylum in Austria.

Carlos Mario Jimenez: one of three members of the directorate of the right-wing United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia (AUC) who commanded the Central Bolivar Bloc. The Central Bolivar Bloc included 6,000 rebels who ran a cocaine trafficking operation. Jimenez, age 42, was extradited to the United States on May 7, 2008. A judge had blocked the extradition in April 2008, but the judiciary's senior administrative panel overruled him on May 6. Jimenez was to be charged with cocaine trafficking and financing a terrorist group. He was the first AUC leader to be extradited.

Enrique Jimenez Cano: would-be hijacker of an Aerovia Quisqueyana (a Dominican airline) L1049

Super Constellation flying from Santo Domingo to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on January 26, 1971. He wanted to go to Cuba, refused to let the plane land in Haiti, but permitted refueling in Cabo Rojo, Puerto Rico. He was overpowered by the crew.

Gaspar Eugenio Jimenez Escobedo: Jimenez was imprisoned on August 9, 1976, in Mexico City on charges of plotting with Orestes Ruiz Fernandez to kidnap and murder Daniel Ferrer Fernandez, Cuban consul in Merida, Mexico, on July 24, 1976, when bombs were found in Ruiz's luggage. They mistook Dartagnan Diaz, an official of the Cuban Fisheries Institute who was accompanying him, for the consul and shot him. On April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced him to eight years for endangering public safety and falsifying documents in connection with the November 2000 plot to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro in Panama City. Panama freed Jimenez, age 69, on August 26, 2004.

Gregorio Jimenez Morales: alias El Pistolas. Basque Nation and Liberty member arrested on September 19, 1983, in Costa Rica with 11 others alleged to be plotting the assassination of anti-Sandinista leaders Eden Pastora and Alfonso Robelo. Police chiefs received daily threats after his arrest. On November 6, 1984, the Superior Criminal Court of Alajuela authorized his extradition to Spain after his trial in Costa Rica. On July 2, 1987, the National High Court in Madrid sentenced him to 15 years.

Harry Jimenez Castillo: member of a band of leftist Dominican Republic guerrillas who robbed the Royal Bank of Canada of $50,000 in November 1971. On January 12, 1972, a daylong battle with a group of suspects resulted in police using bazookas and mortars, with eight policemen and four guerrillas dying in the firefight. Jimenez escaped and was promised an impartial trial by president Joaquin Balaguer if he surrendered.

Javier Enrique Jimenez Alvarez: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Juan Carlos Jimenez Gonzalez: would-be hijacker on March 10, 1987, of Cubana Airlines Flight 706, an AN245 departing from Rancho Boyeros Airport to Nuevo Girona, Isle of Youth. Using a hand grenade, he tried to divert the plane to Miami, Florida. The grenade exploded, injuring 13 passengers. He was shot and killed by an off-duty member of the National Revolutionary Police. Havana TV Service indicated that the hijacker's mother, Rosalina Suarez Lafita, and Arturo Suarez Ramos had two more grenades but were overpowered by police.

Silvia Jimenez Izquierdo: Chilean arrested but later released in connection with the February 1, 1981, explosion of sticks of dynamite in the main plaza of Cuzco, Peru.

Raymond Johnson Jr.: hijacker of National Airlines Flight 186, a B727 en route from Houston, Texas, to Miami, Florida, via New Orleans, Louisiana, and diverted to Havana, Cuba, on November 4, 1968. Johnson claimed to be a Black Panther, renamed the plane the Republic of New Africa, and called the passengers "economic devils." He was indicted on June 13, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of Louisiana. On January 21, 1987, a New Orleans federal judge sentenced him to 25 years in prison for the hijacking. He had served two years in Cuba for the hijacking before returning to the United States in the fall of 1986 after writing to federal authorities and offering to surrender.

El Mono Jojoy: alias of Jorge Briceno Suarez.

Ahmad Mahmud Jomma: Lebanese arrested on September 10, 1994, by Argentine police in the Puerto Iguaza area in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was released on September 14, 1994.

Tarek Jamil Jomma: Lebanese arrested on September 10, 1994, by Argentine police in the Puerto Iguaza area in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was released on September 14, 1994.

Ahmed Jooma: alleged member of a Libyan-sponsored Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hit team targeting President Reagan and other senior government officials in November 1981. Some reports located the assassins in Mexico or Canada.

G. Jones: alias used by the hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 257, a DC9 flying between Richmond, Virginia, and Atlanta, Georgia, that was hijacked after leaving Raleigh, North Carolina, on November 13, 1970. He allowed the plane to refuel at Jacksonville, Florida, before flying to Cuba. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

Jorge: alias of Freddy Ramos.

Comrade Jorge: alias of Similiano Chavez Yanac.

Jose: member of the People's Revolutionary Army of El Salvador who, on November 29, 1984, turned himself in at the Sixth Infantry Brigade at Usulután. He said morale was low in the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front.

Marcelo Fabian Jouce: on August 9, 1994, Argentine Judge Galleano ordered criminal proceedings against Jouce for illegal replacement of a car engine in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. Police believed he sold a Renault van used in the bombing. His assets were confiscated up to 30,000 pesos. The judge confirmed his release on bail.

Jaime Jovanovich Prieto: one of four armed members of the Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement who, on January 16, 1984, scaled a wall of the Apostolic Nunciature in Santiago and requested asylum. They were wanted in connection with the August 30, 1983, assassination of Gen. Urzua and his two escorts. The two men and two women were armed with three submachine guns, five pistols, a bomb, and a large quantity of ammunition.

K

---

A. R. Kagan: alias used by a hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 980 flying from Guatemala City to Miami on August 16, 1979. He was overpowered while the plane was in a landing pattern over Havana, Cuba. The plane safely landed in Miami.

Fawzi Kan'an: on June 18, 2008, the U.S. Department of the Treasury designated two Venezuelans as supporters of Hizballah, freezing their assets and prohibiting Americans from conducting business transactions with the duo. The Caracas-based owner of two travel agencies was a “supporter and a significant provider of financial support to Hizballah.” He had “met with senior Hizballah officials in Lebanon to discuss operational issues including possible kidnapping and terrorist attacks.” He reportedly also traveled with Hizballah operatives for training in Iran.

Giselda Elvira Kanecapacoch: Peruvian Shining Path member who was arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Monzer al-Kassar: variant Munsir al-Qaysar. Syrian arms trafficker who sold weapons to groups in Nicaragua, Brazil, Cyprus, Bosnia, Croatia, Somalia, Iran, Iraq, and the Palestinian territories. He was connected to Mohammed Abbas, alias Abu Abbas, who was behind the Achille Lauro attack, and with Saddam Hussein’s oldest son, Uday. On July 24, 1987, Monzer al-Kassar and his brother Haitham were expelled from Spain. He was accused of being connected with two attacks on Arab citizens in Madrid.

On November 1, 1989, subpoenas issued in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., in connection with a suit against Pan Am pending in federal court in Brooklyn asked for all documents pertaining to his activities. The suit arose from the December 21, 1988, bombing of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie that killed 270 people.

On June 4, 1992, Marbella, Spain, police arrested him. He was believed to have financed the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252.

On February 24, 1993, the Spanish National Hearings Court granted his extradition to Argentina, where he was wanted for forgery. He was accused of having illegally obtained Argentine nationality.

He was acquitted in Spain in 1995 of supplying assault rifles used by the Palestinians who ship-jacked the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro in 1985, killing an American.

He was arrested by Spanish authorities in Madrid on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of small arms, ammunition, thousands of machine guns, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, and “possible surface-to-air missiles” to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels “to protect their cocaine trafficking business and to attack United States interests in Colombia.” He was living in a 15-room Renaissance palazzo near Marbella, Andalusia, Spain, on the Costa del Sol, where he met on February 6, 2007, with two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) informants to discuss a deal worth $7.8 million to $13.5 million, plus costs of transportation. The indictment also said al-Kassar offered “to send 1,000 men to the informants to fight with the FARC against U.S. military officers in Colombia.” He and his associates were indicted on four counts of supplying material support to a foreign terrorist group, conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, officials, and employees, and conspiracy to acquire an antiaircraft missile. Romanian authorities arrested his codefendants, Tareq Mousa al-Ghazi and Luis Felipe Morena-Godoy. The United States requested extradition.

The Spanish National Court approved his extradition in October 2007. The court said that since the 1970s, he had provided weapons to armed groups in Nicaragua, Brazil, Bosnia, Iran, and Iraq, inter alia. The Spanish government gave its final approval in early June 2008.

On June 13, 2008, he was extradited by Spain to the United States, accompanied on the Madrid–New York City flight by U.S. DEA officers. He was held on charges of supplying millions of dollars of weapons to FARC rebels to attack U.S. forces in Colombia. The indictment charged him with conspiracy to support terrorists, conspiracy to kill U.S. soldiers, conspiracy to acquire and use antiaircraft missiles, and money laundering. The United States agreed not to seek the death penalty or life without parole, punishments that are not available in Spanish law.

Robert Joseph Keesee: hijacker of a Bira Air Transport general aviation Cessna 182 flying in northern Thailand on September 18, 1970, and diverted to Dong Hoi, North Vietnam. The plane was fired upon while landing on the beach. Keesee was released to U.S. authorities with a group of American prisoners of war on March 14, 1973. He next showed up in the kidnapping and murder of U.S. vice-consul John S. Patterson in Mexico on March 22, 1974. On May 28, 1974, Keesee was arrested in San Diego on U.S. federal charges of planning and participating in the kidnapping. On April 29, 1975, Keesee was sentenced to 20 years for conspiracy to kidnap a diplomat. He and his partner had claimed to be the fictitious People’s Liberation Army of Mexico.

Kenol Joseph: on May 11, 1987, he stabbed in the back Debbie Rossyn, a U.S. Embassy employee in Haiti and wife of the political attaché, after trying to take her hostage at the U.S. Consulate’s parking lot. He was arrested after a Haitian policeman shot him in the foot. He wanted to pressure the United States to obtain the dismissal of Haitian economy and finance minister Leslie Delatour and get the country’s sugar mills reopened. Joseph worked at the Haitian–American Sugar Company sugar mill.

Azfat Khan: one of three Pakistani sailors arrested on May 2, 1995, in Rosario, Argentina, while taking photos of the Argentine Zionist Union building at 2555 Salta Street in the old Pichincha District. They were placed at the disposal of Federal Judge Galeano. The trio worked on the Cypriot ship Mastrogiorgis B, moored in Rosario. Police were investigating whether they were involved with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Shaker el Khelb: Venezuelan who worked at the Iraqi Embassy in Venezuela as a translator and who was arrested on January 18, 1991, by the Military Intelligence Directorate for links to international terrorist organizations, including one run by Carlos.

Abbas Zarrabi Khorasani: on August 9, 1994, Argentine judge Galeano ordered the Iranian Embassy first secretary’s arrest in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He left for Iran prior to the blast.

Gurmelda King: alias used to register for the October 29, 1981, Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 that was hijacked by five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement.

John Carleton Kivlen: hijacker of Continental Airlines Flight 62, a B727 flying from Los Angeles, California, to Phoenix and Tucson, Arizona, Houston, Texas, and Miami, Florida, on March 17, 1979. He demanded $200,000 and a flight to Cuba. He had been arrested in Tampa, Florida, in 1969 on hijacking charges that were later dropped. Kivlen was overpowered by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents in Tucson. He appeared before U.S. district court judge Leo Brewster on a charge of seizing or exercising control of an aircraft by force of violence. Bail was set at $1 million.

Mario Raul Klacho: wanted by Argentine authorities in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by the Argentine People's Revolutionary Army's (ERP) Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group had demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The "people's prison" was discovered on April 10 and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro. His uncle, Buenos Aires businessman Jose Marinasky, had been kidnapped on May 14, 1973. Klacho's wife, Giomar Schmidt, was acquitted in the Sallustro case.

Annette Klump: suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252. She was in Uruguay until four or five days before the bombing and might have crossed over the border. Her sister is Andrea Martina Klump, a Red Army Faction explosives expert.

Rana Abdel Rahim Koleilat: fugitive bank executive arrested on March 13, 2006, by Brazilian police. Koleilat was held on an unrelated charge but wanted for questioning by the United Nations in the February 14, 2005, car bombing that killed former Lebanese prime minister Rafiq Hariri, age 60, as the billionaire was driving through central Beirut's waterfront just before lunchtime. Another 22 people died and more than 100 people were injured, including the minister of economy.

James Charles Kopp: alias Atomic Dog. Kopp, age 44, was wanted for the October 23, 1998, sniper murder of prominent obstetrician and gynecologist Barnett Slepian, who was killed in his home in Amherst, New York. Kopp had spent time in jails in New York, Georgia, West Virginia, and Vermont for blockading abortion clinics. Authorities believed he might have gone to Mexico or Central America. He was in the Buffalo, New York, area from October 18 to October 21, 1998. On June 5, 2002, he was extradited to the United States from France and pleaded not guilty to federal charges of using deadly force to interfere with the right to abortion and with second degree murder in New York. He had been arrested more than a year earlier. The federal charge carried a sentence of life without parole; the state charge carried a 25-to-life sentence. On November 10, 2002, he admitted to shooting Slepian but meant only to wound him. He declined to rule out shooting more doctors if freed. On December 17, 2002, he was indicted on a new murder charge. He pleaded guilty to reckless murder with depraved indifference to human life, which has a 25-to-life sentence. In early March 2003, he waived a jury trial. On March 18, 2003, Erie County Judge Michael D'Amico found Kopp guilty of second degree murder. On May 9, 2003, he was sentenced to 25 years to life.

L

---

Robert J. LaBadie: hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 134, a B727 flying from Las Vegas, Nevada, to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on August 24, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. The Cuban government found LaBadie undesirable and flew him back on September 24, 1970, making him the first hijacker they had returned. (See Juan Atega-Fresneda and Crecencio Perez-Perez with similar claim in 1980.) He was found incompetent to stand trial on December 28, 1970, and was committed to a mental institution, from which he was released on October 30, 1973.

Ishmael Ali LaBeet: convicted mass murderer who, on December 31, 1984, hijacked American Airlines Flight 626, a DC10 en route from St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands to New York. He was being escorted by three guards to the Metropolitan Correctional Center in New York City. He pulled a gun from the lavatory and then forced the pilot to fly to Havana, Cuba, where he was arrested by Cuban authorities. He had been sentenced to eight consecutive life terms for his role in the 1972 murders of eight people at the Fountain Valley Golf Club on St. Croix.

Guillermo Salvador Lacayo: Salvadoran charged as the ringleader in the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador. He pleaded not guilty. On December 2, 1983, he was sentenced to two life terms.

Margarita Guadalupe Lacayo: sister of Guillermo Salvador Lacayo, a Salvadoran charged with helping the principal kidnappers in the July 8, 1983, kidnapping in Miami, Florida, of Clelia Eleanor Quinones, wife of Roberto Quinones Meza, former Salvadoran ambassador. Charges against her were dropped.

Philippe Lacroix: one of two Belgians arrested on March 15, 1991, by Colombian security forces in Barranquilla for involvement in at least four armed robberies and the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnapping on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. They were also affiliates of Medellin, Colombia, cocaine cartel leader Pablo Escobar. They apparently signed up as mercenaries for the cartel, which was reconstituting its terrorist infrastructure. They entered through Brazil four months earlier after leaving Belgium. They each had a dozen faked national ID cards with different aliases, $170,000 in cash—which they offered the arresting officers—and several telephone numbers of cartel members in Medellin. They were to be returned to Belgium on March 21, 1991, on a special Belgian military plane.

Osama bin Laden: variant Usama bin Ladin, aliases Usama bin Muhammadbin Awad bin Ladin, Shaykh Usama bin Ladin, the Prince, the Emir, Abu Abdallah, Mujahid Shaykh, Hajj, the Director, the Teacher: Founder of al Qaeda. Member of a Saudi family that made its millions in construction, he studied at King 'Abd-al-Aziz University, where he was influenced by two members of the Muslim Brotherhood—'Abdallah 'Azzam, a Jordanian Palestinian, and Muhammad Qutb, brother of the Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood's most extremist militant, Sayyid Qutb, who was executed by Egypt in 1966. Bin Laden was born on July 30, 1957, in Saudi Arabia. He is left-handed and walks with a cane. He is circa six feet five inches and 160 pounds. He said on November 27, 1996, that his followers were responsible for the June 25, 1996, truck bombing of the U.S. military's compound at Khobar Towers near Dhahran that killed 19 U.S. airmen and wounded 547 others. On February 24, 1998, he issued a fatwa that allows attacks on Americans worldwide. He was placed on the FBI's 10 Most Wanted List in June 1999. U.S. Rewards for Justice offered up to $25 million for his apprehension; the U.S. Senate voted 87 to 1 on July 13, 2007, to double it to $50 million. An additional $2 million is available via the Air Transport Association and Airlines Pilots Association.

As of October 2001, his cells were believed to be operating in the United States, Canada, Ecuador, Uruguay, Mauritania, Algeria, Libya, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Yemen, Sudan, Ethiopia, Eritrea, Somalia, Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, Qatar, Afghanistan, Pakistan, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan, Jordan, Lebanon, Azerbaijan, Chechnya, Albania, Bosnia, Germany, the United Kingdom, Spain, France, Italy, Bangladesh, Malaysia, and the Philippines.

Shaykh Usama bin Ladin: variant of Osama bin Laden.

Usama bin Muhammad bin Ladin: variant of Osama bin Laden.

Mariano Lagos Donaire: arrested by the Honduran Armed Forces on August 27, 1987, in connection with the bombing on August 9, 1987, of Comayagua's Restaurante China that injured four Honduran civilians and six U.S. Army soldiers.

Alberto Laila: naturalized-Panamanian Colon Free Zone businessman arrested on October 31, 1995, by Panamanian police on suspicion of involvement in a significant money-laundering network.

He maintained close contacts with Lya Jamal, the suicide bomber of ALAS Flight HP-1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer on July 19, 1994. Jamal killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen, shortly after the plane had left Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit. Laila was sought by the United States because he flew several times with Jamal and took the ALAS flight to the Colon Free Zone the morning of the attack. He faced seven charges of drug trafficking and was to be summoned by the court for questioning in the ALAS case. Laila was released in December 1995 on a $500,000 bond, but was re-arrested on February 16, 1996, and charged with 11 counts of narcotics-related money laundering due to new information supplied by the United States.

Washington Laino Amaral: Uruguayan National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) leader who was arrested in Mexico City for robbery on November 7, 1978. He admitted recruiting at the University of Mexico for the Tupamaros. He claimed that he had come from Nicaragua, where he participated in attempts to overthrow the Somoza government.

Christine Lamont: one of two Canadians convicted in the kidnapping of Brazilian supermarket mogul Abilio Diniz, who was freed in 1989 after police captured 10 suspects with links to the Chilean and Argentine Revolutionary Left Movements. They were suspected of having ties with the Popular Revolutionary Forces. On November 20, 1998, Brazilian authorities placed Lamont and David Spencer on a Canadian airliner. They were eligible to apply for parole on December 28, 1998.

Jacques Lanctot: one of five Quebec Liberation Front kidnappers of James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec who was taken from his Montreal home on October 5, 1970. The group demanded publication of a political manifesto in all Quebec newspapers, release of political prisoners, a chartered aircraft to fly the prisoners to Cuba or Algeria, $500,000 in gold bullion, federal jobs for 450 truck drivers, publication of the name and photograph of an FLQ informer who led police to the discovery of an FLQ cell, and an end of the manhunt for Cross. Cross was released unharmed on December 3, 1970. Seven individuals were flown to Cuba under a safe conduct agreement for the kidnappers of Cross and Pierre Laporte, the Quebec minister of labor who was kidnapped by FLQ on October 10. Laporte's body was found in a car trunk on October 18. On August 6, 1974, France granted temporary asylum to an FLQ member and his wife, Suzanne, who had been flown to Cuba.

Roman Landarra Martin: priest from Santurce, Puerto Rico, arrested on October 3, 1987, in a police sweep of Basque Nation and Liberty members in southwestern France and expelled.

Carlos Lang Pedrovich: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Yves Langlois: one of five Quebec Liberation Front kidnappers of James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec who was taken from his Montreal home on October 5, 1970. The group demanded publication of a political manifesto in all Quebec newspapers, release of political prisoners, a chartered aircraft to fly the prisoners to Cuba or Algeria, $500,000 in gold bullion, federal jobs for 450 truck drivers, publication of the name and photograph of an FLQ informer who led police to the discovery of an FLQ cell, and an end of the manhunt for Cross. Cross was released unharmed on December 3, 1970. Seven individuals were flown to Cuba under a safe conduct agreement for the kidnappers of Cross and Pierre Laporte, the Quebec minister of labor who was kidnapped by FLQ on October 10.

Laporte's body was found in a car trunk on October 18. On August 6, 1974, France granted temporary asylum to an FLQ member and his wife, Suzanne, who had been flown to Cuba.

Augusto Lara Sanchez: founder of the April 19 Movement of Colombia whose disfigured body with two bullet holes was found in Bogota on February 6, 1986.

Betty Lara: Peruvian Congressman Javier Noriega Febres's secretary. She had ties with the Peruvian Shining Path and was a friend of Lori Helen Berenson, an alleged member of the Peruvian Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement in 1995.

Miguel Larios Moreno: Basque who obtained Nicaraguan citizenship in 1982 during Sandinista rule. He used a falsified Ecuadoran diplomatic passport. On May 23, 1993, a bomb exploded in his car repair shop in the Santa Rosa neighborhood on the outskirts of Managua, Nicaragua, killing two people and damaging 16 houses. In the rubble, police found a sophisticated bunker containing tons of weapons, including 19 surface-to-air missiles, hundreds of AK-47 assault rifles, machine guns, and rocket-propelled grenades, and tons of ammunition, including C-4 plastique. Police also found documents detailing a Marxist kidnapping ring, and hundreds of false passports and identity papers. The documents included 310 passports, many blank, from 21 countries. Although most of the papers were dated from 1986 to 1990, some were from the Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty, a separatist group that dated from early 1993, and documents of Salvadoran guerillas from May 1993. Police said that the ring had the tacit approval of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, which ruled Nicaragua from 1979 to 1990. Some fraudulently obtained Nicaraguan passports were found in March 1993 at the home of Ibrahim Elgabrowni, one of the World Trade Center bombing suspects.

Felipe F. Larrazolo: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 598, a B727 flying from San Diego to Los Angeles, California, and Portland, Oregon, on November 1, 1970. He was accompanied by his two children. The plane refueled in Mexico and flew on to Havana, Cuba. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Central District of California on December 9, 1970.

Jose Maria Larrechea: Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) member expelled from French soil on January 11, 1984, and sent to Panama. On April 29, 1984, a special envoy from Spanish prime minister Felipe Gonzalez asked Havana to provide him and five other ETA members with asylum. On May 1, 1984, he was received by Cuba.

C. Laurent and P. Laurent: two of three Haitian hijackers of a Haiti Air Inter Dehavilland Twin Otter flying from Port-au-Prince to Cap Haitien on September 9, 1975. The trio threatened the pilot with knives and Molotov cocktails and demanded to fly to Cuba. The pilot persuaded them to refuel at Gonaives. One of the hijackers left to find fuel at the deserted airport. Shortly thereafter, the other two hijackers were overpowered by the crew and two passengers. Local authorities took the trio into custody.

Guillermo Lazaro Major-Diaz: would-be hijacker on March 1, 1982, of United Airlines Flight 674, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida. The pilot flew toward the Florida Keys to confuse the hijacker, who wanted to go to Cuba, then circled back to Miami. A passenger wrestled the hijacker to the ground. The hijacker was tied up by the crew and taken into custody by the police. He said that he wanted to attend a wedding and then said that his mother had died the previous day. A federal magistrate ordered a psychiatric evaluation. Lazaro had spent a year in a Cuban mental hospital and was arrested several times since entering the United States in the 1980 Mariel boatlift. He was charged with air piracy and using a weapon in the commission of a felony.

Suzanna Lazzati: Argentine citizen who was arrested with her boyfriend and an Italian on September 22, 1987, in Rome in connection with the January 13, 1987, shooting and wounding of Colombian ambassador Enrique Parejo Gonzalez in Hungary. The Hernan Botero Moreno Command, a narco group, claimed credit. She was arrested at her home.

Lolita Lebron: Puerto Rican nationalist who joined three men in firing pistols in the House of Representatives in 1954. Her release was demanded by Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation, who set off five bombs in New York City on October 26, 1974, and four more bombs on April 3, 1975. Her release was demanded by two Puerto Rican nationalists who took over the Chilean Consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978. President Carter granted her clemency on September 7, 1979. She flew to Puerto Rico, where she received a hero's welcome.

Maritza Garrido Leca Rizco: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Alfonso Lechon Canuendo: one of four members of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It expelled from Colombia to Ecuador via the border town of Ipiales on December 26, 1986.

Edna Lee: one of two hijackers of a British Honduran chartered Cessna 180 on a local flight in the British Honduras on March 25, 1970, that was diverted to Cuba.

Carlos Lehder Rivas: leader of the Medellin, Colombia, cocaine cartel whose release was demanded by the Extraditables Command of narcotraffickers who, on May 29, 1988, kidnapped Alvaro Gomez Hurtado, twice presidential candidate of the opposition Conservative Party, as he was leaving Bogota's Chico Church. His release was also demanded on January 3, 1989, by the kidnappers of two U.S. evangelical missionaries in Valle del Cauca Department in Colombia.

Lyglenson Lemorin: alias Brother Levi of Atlanta. Member of the “Liberty City Seven” arrested on June 22, 2006, by U.S. authorities in Miami, Florida, for plotting to attack the Sears Tower in Chicago, the James Lawrence King Federal Justice Building, federal courthouse buildings, the Federal Detention Center, the Miami Police Department, and the FBI office in Miami. They were supporters of militant Islam and had taken a pledge to al Qaeda. On December 13, 2007, Judge Lenard declared a mistrial for six of the defendants. Lemorin was acquitted of all charges but remained in detention as there was an “immigration hold” on him. The retrial began on January 22, 2008. On February 6, 2008, federal immigration prosecutors charged Lemorin, age 33, with nearly identical offenses. They hoped to deport him to Haiti, even though he is a permanent legal resident of the United States. His attorneys were Charles Kuck and Joel DeFabio.

Roger Lentz: hijacker of a Heinzmann Engineering Company general aviation Piper Navajo at Grand Island, Nebraska, on April 18, 1976. He forced the pilot to fly to Denver, Colorado, where he demanded a larger plane to fly to Mexico. The hijacker and his hostages transferred to a Convair 990, but as Lentz was walking down its aisle, he was fatally shot by FBI agents.

Guillermo Leon Saenz: alias Alfonso Cano. As of May 2008, the leader, age 59, of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC). He studied anthropology and law in Bogota, was a Communist Party youth organizer, and joined FARC in the 1980s. He headed FARC’s political section before becoming the chief. The government believed he was hiding in the mountains in Tolima, Colombia.

Susana Lesgart: died on August 22, 1972, attempting to escape from the Trelew prison in Argentina. Her husband, Fernando Vaca Narvaja, was a Montonero member who flew to Havana, Cuba, on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires.

Jorge Omar Lewinger: aliases Joselito, Wilfredo Delgado. Argentine named by Paraguayan police as a suspect in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastacio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Manuel Osvaldo Leyva Osorio: one of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Carlos Lezcano Montenegro: signatory of a confessor letter by the Torrijist Patriotic Vanguard—December 20, a leftist subversive group in Panama, to claim credit for the January 31, 1993, kidnapping of three U.S. missionaries.

Guillermo Lima: Cuban refugee who, on September 12, 1980, attempted to hijack an Eastern Airlines flight going from Newark, New Jersey, to Miami, Florida. When he got out of his seat, he was immediately overpowered and beaten up by the crew and passengers. He was charged with air piracy and jailed with no bond.

Moises Simon Limaco Huayascachi: alias Ramiro. Identified on July 15, 1994, by Peru’s National Counterterrorism Directorate as the leader of the 170-member “historic southern contingent” of Shining Path. He was arrested on June 18 at the Sinchi Roca housing development in Comas. He served as the Shining Path Southern Regional Committee political commander and was a member of the group’s Central Committee and coordinator of the SL Central Directorate.

Marvin Right Lindon: would-be hijacker who, with his brother, attempted to divert a Costa Rican National Airways C46 flying from Puerto Limon to San Jose in Costa Rica to Cuba. Police fired tear gas into the plane, and the duo surrendered.

Germaine Lindsay: alias Abdullah Shaheed Jamal. Jamaica-born British citizen, age 33, who grew up in a single-parent household in southern England. On July 7, 2005, at 8:56 A.M., a device he placed on the floor of the first carriage of the London underground, near the first set of double doors where passengers stand, went off three minutes out of the Russell Square Station en route to King's Cross Station, killing at least 21 people on the Piccadilly Line Train 311. At least 900 passengers were on board.

He had converted to Islam at the urging of his mother, who also converted. She remarried and moved to Cleveland, Ohio, three years earlier. Meanwhile, Lindsay moved in with Samantha Lewthwaite, a British woman, and lived in public housing in Huddesfield, 15 miles southwest of Leeds, where the other suspects who set off three other bombs the same day lived. Lindsay was a carpet layer and sold cell phone covers on the weekend. He had become a father 15 months earlier. The couple moved to Aylesbury, an hour away from London. Lewthwaite, age 22, is pregnant.

Santos Lino Ramirez: mine worker and founder of the Salvadoran People's Revolutionary Army, who was arrested by Honduran troops in La Esperanza on October 24, 1980.

Lynn L. Little: would-be hijacker of a TWA B707 flying from San Francisco to Pittsburgh on April 6, 1970. He attempted to divert the plane to Cuba, but he became confused and surrendered his weapon to the pilot.

Jesus Maria Lizarralde: Lizarralde's extradition to Spain from Uruguay was granted on March 16, 1994. Spain charged him with Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) membership. The next day, the First Chamber of the Appeals Court upheld the extradition on charges of causing damage and destruction, illegal association, and illegally taking hostages. He was held in custody at the Central Police Precinct Jail in Montevideo and was charged with using false documents. He was one of three imprisoned ETA members who conducted a 14-day hunger strike that ended on August 24, 1994. He was extradited to Spain on August 25, 1994, facing six counts of homicide.

Jose Antonio Llama: on October 27, 1997, U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico and arrested four Cuban exiles apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Isla Margarita off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco "Pepe" Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group's executive board. Hernandez and Llama were summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. All were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted Llama and six other Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that in 1995 the seven and others began plotting to kill Castro. They obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a stakeout position on a hill overlooking the airport. He input the location and an offshore spot into the satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro. Llama was represented by attorney Jose Quinon.

This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. On December 8, 1999, after deliberating for eight hours over two days, the U.S. District Court jury declared the five Cuban exiles not guilty on all charges of plotting to assassinate Castro. The five Cubans were Angel Alfonso, age 59, Angel Hernandez Rojo, age 62, Francisco Secundino Cordova, age 51, Jose Rodriguez Sosa, age 59, and Jose Antonio Llama, age 67. Charges against another defendant were dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Mauricio Llanque: suspected Peruvian terrorist arrested in a clash with Chilean police on October 11, 1986. He was accused of assaulting the police and illegally entering the country. On October 16, 1986, three of the group were handed over to the Peruvian consul general.

Maneras Lluveras: one of 150 political prisoners whose release was demanded by the National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) who kidnapped Sir Geoffrey M. S. Jackson, British ambassador to Uruguay, on January 8, 1971. On September 6, 1971, some 106 Tupamaros escaped from the Punta Carretas, Uruguay, prison by digging a tunnel. Two days later, the group said there was no point in keeping Jackson, and they freed him the following day.

Carlos Manuel Lobo: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Carlos Londono: hijacker of an Avianca Airlines DC4 flying from Barranquilla to Santa Marta, Colombia, and diverted to Cuba on September 22, 1968.

Rodrigo Londono Echeverry: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) commander who wrote an e-mail on March 1, 2007, indicating that Venezuelan intelligence operations had offered parts for antiaircraft missiles, according to Colombian officials who confiscated FARC computers on March 1, 2008.

Angel E. Lopez: hijacker of a Cubana Viscount on April 12, 1960.

Angel Lopez Rabi: one of two would-be hijackers of a Cubana IL14 flying from Havana to Cienfuegos, Cuba, on July 11, 1971. The duo threatened the pilot with guns and grenades but was overpowered by the crew. A grenade exploded, killing a passenger and wounding three others. The hijackers, who did not specify a destination, were handed over to authorities in Havana.

Enrique Lopez Olmedo: Spanish citizen believed to be carrying out subversive activities. He was killed in a police shootout on November 16, 1977, in Chile after he refused to identify himself.

Ernesto Lopez: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty, arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrests followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Francisco Lopez: one of two Nicaraguans who hijacked an Aeronica C046 flying from Bluefield to Managua on May 10, 1982, and diverted it to Limn, Costa Rica, where they requested political asylum and then surrendered to police. Nicaragua requested extradition.

Francisco Solano Lopez Dominguez: one of two National Liberation Army hijackers of a SAM Lockheed Electra flying the Cali-Pereira-Medellin, Colombia, route on May 30, 1973. The gunmen threatened to blow up the plane if 140 Colombian prisoners were not released and $200,000 was not paid. The plane flew to Aruba, Ecuador, Peru, Argentina, and Paraguay. All of the passengers escaped or were permitted by the hijackers to leave at different stops along the way. At one of the stops, the hijackers agreed to settle for $50,000 from SAM. They escaped from the plane in Resistencia, Argentina.

Hernando Lopez Quintero: one of three men arrested for the February 17, 1978, kidnapping in Medellin, Colombia, of Jose Bartolini Berlini, an Italian toy-factory owner. The group demanded a 40 million peso ($1.4 million) ransom. Berlini was rescued by the Administrative Department of Security's antikidnapping squad on February 22, 1978, at a fashionable home outside of Medellin, where the members of the ring were arrested.

Humbert Lopez Jr.: Cuban exile arrested in Miami after a bomb he was preparing exploded at his home in October 1975. He lost his left eye and three fingers in the explosion. A jailed friend, Luis Crespo, lost an arm in a similar accident. He had fled the United States to avoid serving a possible 15-year jail term for violation of federal and state laws regulating the use of explosives and firearms. Lopez was held without bail pending arraignment.

Humberto Lopez Candia: sentenced in September 2002 by a Chilean judge to 10 years and 300 days for sending a letter bomb to the U.S. Embassy in Chile that arrived on September 27, 2001, and another to a prominent Chilean attorney. He was charged with manufacturing and sending the bomb.

Jose Luis Lopez Gutierrez: Nicaraguan whose release from Costa Rican prison was demanded by the five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism—Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981.

Juan Benjamin Lopez: released from prison as one of the demands of the 50 armed members of the 28 February Popular Leagues of El Salvador who took over the Panamanian Embassy with several hostages on February 13, 1980.

Manuel Salvador Lopez Marin: one of three hooded members of the National Salvation Democratic Front who, on March 12, 1993, tried to occupy a Radio Mundial studio in Managua, Nicaragua. The takeover was in support of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who, on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. Lopez and the others were arrested after broadcasting a proclamation in support of Jose Manuel Urbina Lara, the leader of the anti-Sandinista gunmen. Lopez and the others were released as part of a negotiated deal with the anti-Sandinista gunmen.

Manuel Valery Lopez Tamaris: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Mireyz Lopez: exiled Chilean wife of Marino Perez Rojas, an exiled Dominican student who, on November 8, 1982, occupied the Peruvian Embassy in the Dominican Republic and took a hostage. He wanted the government to find him work or for Peru to grant him political asylum. The couple surrendered peacefully, and Perez was arrested. He had been exiled from the Dominican Republic during the government of Joaquin Balaguer, who was president from 1966 to 1978.

Reinaldo Juan Lopez: alias Reinaldo Juan Lopez Lima. Hijacked a Piper Apache PA23 to Cuba on February 18, 1964. On May 5, 1989, the FBI arrested him in Arlington, Virginia. He had spent 23 years as a prisoner in Cuba. In 1987, he immigrated to the United States, moving to Arlington to work as a courier. He was due to fly to Florida later the week of the arrest and was to appear before a federal magistrate on July 6, 1989, in Miami. On June 21, 1990, U.S. district judge Kenneth Ryskamp in Miami ruled that the government had failed to give Lopez a speedy trial and dismissed the hijacking case.

Reinaldo Juan Lopez Lima: alias of Reinaldo Juan Lopez.

Reinaldo Juan Lopez Rodriguez: alias Juan Lopez. Joined fellow Cuban exile Enrique Castillo Hernandez in hijacking a private Piper Apache PA23 from Miami to Key West, diverting it to Havana, Cuba. He was wanted for embezzlement and passing bad checks. The duo was indicted on February 17, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Robert Lopez: anti-Castro Cuban arrested by the FBI on January 25, 1980, on Isla de Vieques, Puerto Rico, in connection with the Anti-Communist Alliance bombing of offices of the Puerto Rican Bar Association in San Juan on January 7, 1980. He was charged with conspiring to bomb an airplane operating between San Juan and neighboring islands. The group said the bombing was to retaliate for the December 3, 1979, attack on a Navy bus in which two Navy personnel were killed and eight wounded.

Roberto Lopez: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum.

Sofia Lopez: alias Dalia Escobar Alas. Lopez claimed that she was born in San Salvador, El Salvador, on February 17, 1962. She was arrested for the November 9, 1982, attempt in San Jose, Costa Rica, by six members of the Salvadoran Revolutionary Party of Central American Workers to kidnap Japanese citizen Otaiasuk Tesuji Kosuga, president of the National Electric Corporation of Costa Rica. Two of the kidnappers, a student, and Kosuga were injured when police foiled the kidnapping attempt.

Vicente Geno Lopez: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Victor Lopez Morales: would-be hijacker of a Puerto Rican International Airlines (Prinair) Heron 157 flying from San Juan to Ponce, Puerto Rico, on December 21, 1970. Lopez wanted to go to Mexico, but the crew talked him into refueling in San Juan, where they overpowered him. The criminal complaint against him was dismissed due to his mental incompetence. He was committed to a mental institution and then released on November 29, 1973.

Flor Lord Canelero: released from jail on April 11, 1990, on conditional freedom by the court-martial in Santiago, Chile, after being charged with participating in the September 7, 1986, attack on Chilean president Augusto Pinochet. Lord was on a hunger strike at the Feminine Detention Center on Santo Domingo Street in Santiago. In December 1989, she was placed under the jurisdiction of the Sixth Military Prosecutor's Office after no evidence could be found of her participation in the attack. Defense lawyers requested that the charges under the anti-terrorist law be changed to charges under the Arms Control Law and that she be given conditional freedom. The Sixth Military Prosecutor's Office turned down the request, leading to the appeal to the court-martial.

Jose Gabriel Lorenzo: hijacked a DC9 flying the Barquisimeto–Maracaibo–Caracas, Venezuela, route on October 31, 1973. He demanded to be flown to Cuba. When the pilot told the hijacker he was about to land at Caracas, Venezuela, and had very little fuel, the hijacker shot and seriously wounded himself; some reports claim he died.

Federico Lorgio Guaman: Peruvian member of the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement who was arrested on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca-Cola company. Lonsdale was abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz, Bolivia. The kidnappers killed their hostage.

Jose Armando Lovos: alias Neto. Armed Forces of National Resistance leader arrested on August 11, 1978, in connection with the May 17, 1978, kidnapping and murder in El Salvador of Fugio Matsumoto, Japanese president of Central American Synthetic Industries, a textile firm. One of his colleagues said that Matsumoto was killed when Lovo's pistol accidentally fired.

Aurelio Lucero Dominguez: one of two hijackers of an Aeromexico DC9 on May 16, 1978, that they diverted to Mexico City. The duo was fired in a labor dispute on the Chihuahua Pacific Railroad in the north and was seeking publicity and justice.

Comrade Lucia: alias of Lori Helen Berenson.

Claudio Alberto Luduena: one of the Argentine People's Revolutionary Army kidnappers of Alfred A. Laun, III, age 36, chief of the U.S. Information Service in Cordoba, Argentina, on April 12, 1974. The kidnappers freed him 15 hours later, worried about the seriousness of his wounds. On April 28, 1974, police shot Luduena as he was attempting to kidnap Antonio Minetti, a business executive in Cordoba.

Angel Lugo Casado: hijacker of American Airlines Flight 98, a B747 flying from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on October 25, 1971, and diverted to Cuba.

Freddy Lugo: Venezuelan photographer who with Hernan Ricardo Losano was detained on October 8, 1976, in Barbados and returned to Trinidad the same night as suspects in the Cubana Airlines Flight 455 bombing. On October 18, 1976, Lugo and Ricardo confessed to placing a bomb that exploded on October 6, 1976, on Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. On October 21, 1976, El Condor threatened to bomb a West Indies Airways plane in Trinidad and Tobago if Lugo and Ricardo were not released. On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted Lugo and Ricardo, along with Orlando Bosch and Luis Posada Carriles, on treason and qualified murder charges, which carry a maximum penalty of 30 years.

On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved the four defendants of charges of high treason and homicide, but the prosecutor successfully argued that the defendants should be tried under civilian penal code not military code. They were kept imprisoned pending a new trial.

On August 8, 1985, Lugo and Ricardo were convicted of homicide and sentenced to 20 years in prison. On August 4, 1987, the homicide conviction was upheld by a three-judge Venezuelan panel that agreed with the lower court's 20-year sentence.

Lugo and Ricardo were released in 1993 after serving 17 years.

Jose Luis Lugo: kidnapped banker Jose Luis Carrion and hijacked a four-engine commuter plane in San Juan, Puerto Rico, demanded $290,000, and flew to Camaguey, Cuba, on April 7, 1972.

Rena Lugo Valencia: one of two hijackers of a Nicaraguan Lanica BAC111 flying the Miami–

Managua, Nicaragua–San Salvador, El Salvador–Mexico City route on November 4, 1969, that was diverted to Grand Cayman Island. They were tricked into believing it was Havana, Cuba. But the duo flew on from the island to Havana.

Elias Ribeiro da Luz: Brazilian who on February 21, 1992, purchased for $3,000 the car that carried the explosives in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. He was believed to have ties with Hizballah in southern Paraguay, a few miles from the Argentine border.

Yanes Allen Luz: one of five members of the Brazilian Armed Revolutionary Guard–Joao Palmares Command who hijacked a Brazilian Cruzeiro do Sul Caravelle flying from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro on January 1, 1970, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba, after 48 hours of stopovers.

M

---

A.R.M.: alias Leal Oskiki. One of three members of the Japanese Red Army alleged by La Manana on April 1, 1995, to have entered Uruguay using false passports within the past two weeks. The paper speculated that they planned to carry out a bombing in neighboring Brazil or Argentina. They were believed to be in the River Plate area. Oskiki used a Paraguayan passport.

Ados Magnos: one of five members of the Brazilian Armed Revolutionary Guard—Joao Palmares Command who hijacked a Brazilian Cruzeiro do Sul Caravelle flying from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro on January 1, 1970, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba, after 48 hours of stopovers.

Ali Mahmad: Lebanese citizen, age 48, detained in Paraguay in the triborder area of Argentina, Brazil, and Paraguay on April 27, 1996. Israel announced that he was part of an Iranian-controlled Hizballah terrorist cell on his way to attack a Jewish institution. On April 29, 1996, the Buenos Aires, Argentina, press reported the release of two Lebanese citizens held for not presenting identity papers. The duo claimed to be bakers from Fox do Iguacu, Brazil, and that their attorney, who was applying for their residency papers, was in possession of their identity papers.

Muhammad Mahmud: one of three Lebanese arrested on July 28, 1994, by Costa Rican police in David when they tried to cross the Panamanian border with Costa Rica with false passports. They were suspected of involvement in the July 19, 1994, suicide bombing of ALAS Flight HP-1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer, that killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen. The plane crashed shortly after leaving Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit.

Nasser Mahmud: Lebanese citizen, age 37, detained in Paraguay in the triborder area of Argentina, Brazil, and Paraguay on April 27, 1996. Israel announced that he was part of an Iranian-controlled Hizballah terrorist cell on his way to attack a Jewish institution. On April 29, 1996, the Buenos Aires, Argentina, press reported the release of two Lebanese citizens held for not presenting identity papers. The duo claimed to be bakers from Fox do Iguacu, Brazil, and that their attorney, who was applying for their residency papers, was in possession of their identity papers.

Cornelis Maisi: notorious criminal who escaped from prison and, on March 21, 1994, led 100 members of the Liberation Front of Suriname in seizing the Afobaka Dam, 100 kilometers south of Paramaribo and taking 30 workers hostage.

Malbrich: senior leader of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front who was wanted by Chilean police as of May 31, 1991, when the group renounced armed struggle. He fled a Santiago prison in January 1990 with 100 other prisoners.

Walter Malca Carbajal: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began his extradition proceedings from Spain on terrorism charges.

Nikolay Malenko: Russian arrested with two Peruvians on April 25, 1981, by Peruvian authorities on charges of carrying dynamite and participating in terrorist attacks.

Mohammad Abass Malik: Pakistani arrested on August 18, 2000, by the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Los Angeles for being in the United States without proper documentation. He was wanted for questioning in the bombings of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires in 1992 and the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in 1994.

Ripudaman Singh Malik: Sikh millionaire businessman, age 58, tried in connection with the June 23, 1985, bombing of Air India Flight 182 originating in Canada that killed 329 people. The B747 was flying from Montreal to London and crashed off Ireland. He was also tried in connection with the 1991 bombing at Tokyo's Narita Airport in which two baggage handlers were killed. The bomb went off in baggage intended for Air India Flight 301.

On April 28, 2003, his trial began. On March 16, 2005, after a four-year trial, British Columbia Supreme Court Justice Ian Josephson acquitted Indian-born Canadian Sikhs Malik and Ajaib Singh Bagri, age 55, a sawmill worker from Kamloops, British Columbia, of murder and other charges in the bombing of Air India Flight 182. They were also acquitted of Tokyo's Narita Airport bombing. The judge said the key witnesses—former girlfriends, paid informants, and former business partners—were not credible. Prosecutors claimed that the bombings were revenge by Sikh separatists for a 1984 raid by Indian forces at the Golden Temple at Amritsar, Punjab State, India, a holy site to Sikhs.

Catalina Mamani Yucra: Shining Path member arrested on October 11, 1986, in Juliaca minutes before Peruvian president Alan Garcia was to arrive at the airport. She was carrying 37 dynamite sticks in her skirt and indicated that another woman was carrying detonators.

Simon Mamani Callizaya: arrested on October 22, 1989, by Bolivian policeman in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia. He was taken to the Criminal Unit and Judicial Police Jail in La Paz, where he denied involvement in the attack but admitted knowing the victims and being a member of the Zarate Willka group.

Salvatore Mancuso: one of 13 senior paramilitary leaders of the right-wing United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia extradited to the United States on May 13, 2008. They had been accused of ordering the murders of thousands of people, including peasants, leftist politicians, journalists, and union activists. While in Colombian jails, they ran a cocaine trafficking organization.

Manuel: alias of Jose Yamil Ramos Riano.

Mariano Maquera: Peruvian arrested by Bolivian police on December 9, 1988, who tested positive for traces of gunpowder on his hands. His physical features did not fit those described by eyewitnesses in the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement.

Pablo Marcano Garcia: one of two people who took over the Chilean Consulate in San Juan on July 3, 1978, and demanded the release of five Puerto Ricans held in federal jails for attempting to assassinate President Truman in 1950 and firing pistols in the U.S. House of Representatives in 1954. The next day, they surrendered. He was held on $500,000 bail.

Alfonso Marchela Ruiz: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Ivens Marchetti: architect charged in the October 12, 1968, machine-gun attack on U.S. Army Capt. Charles R. Chandler in Brazil by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard on October 12, 1968. He was among the 15 freed in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick. He was flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Marco Antonio Mardones Villarroel: one of two members of the Marxist Lautaro Youth Movement of Chile indicted on October 17, 1989, for violating Article 1, Paragraph 6, of the Antiterrorist Law regarding arson and planting explosives in connection with the July 4, 1989, attack by seven youths carrying revolvers on the Mormon Church in Santiago. They forced a Mormon missionary named Balart to strip and burned the church's cultural hall after dousing it with gasoline. Police deactivated a bomb the terrorists left behind.

Julio Marenales: member of the central committee of the Uruguayan National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) in 1986.

Mariela: alias of Cecilia Maria Garcia Henao.

Carlos Marighella: Brazilian guerrilla theorist whose views influenced Latin American guerrilla tactics in the 1960s and 1970s. He died in November 1969.

Aldo Orlando Marin Pinones: Chilean leftist terrorist killed on August 5, 1977, when a dynamite bomb he was planting with an Italian terrorist exploded in Turin.

Jose Marin: one of six members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation who hijacked an Avensa Convair Twin Engine CV440 en route from Ciudad Bolivar to Caracas, Venezuela, on November 28, 1963. The group dropped antielection leaflets over the city, then diverted the plane to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they were arrested. The six were extradited.

Luciano Marin Arango: alias Ivan Marquez. Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) leader who told the media on November 30, 2007, that FARC would not be issuing any proof of life of its hostages any time soon. He had met in Caracas with Venezuelan president Hugo Chavez.

Dr. Pedro Marin: arrested on January 20, 1987, by Chilean police for working in clandestine clinics for the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front.

Pedro Antonio Marin: birth name of Manuel Marulanda Velez.

Jose Luis Maria Marinaro: Italian Argentine terrorist hired by Bolivian Colombian drug trafficking families to assassinate U.S. ambassador Edwin G. Corr in La Paz, Bolivia. The plot was discovered on December 7, 1984. Marinaro had entered Bolivia 15 days earlier from Brazil and was being sought by Bolivian and Interpol personnel. Bolivia media deemed him "The Jackal."

Ivan Marino: on July 7, 1980, Panama said it would consider extradition for Marino. He was somehow involved in the April 19 Movement of Colombia takeover of the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, in Colombia.

Ivan Marino Ospina: named leader of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) following the April 28, 1983, death in an airplane accident of M-19 leader Jaime Bateman Cayon. He died in a shootout with Cali, Colombia, police on August 28, 1985.

Mario: alias of Jose Miguel Vega Flores.

John Gerard Marques: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 14, a DC8 flying from Los Angeles to New York on June 25, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, he was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the central district of California on January 14, 1970. He met with Colombian president Belisario Betancour on October 8, 1983, in a private home in Spain regarding peace negotiations.

Zumari Blanca Marquina: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Ivan Marquez: alias of Luciano Marin Arango.

Juan de Dios Marquez Miranda: one of six suspected members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested and charged with arms smuggling on August 11, 1986, in connection with the discovery of a huge arms cache in Corral Bay near El Carrizal Bajo, Chile. The cache included 338 U.S. M-16 rifles used in the Vietnam War, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades, 315 Katyusha rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kilograms of U.S. and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, and 124 kilograms of plastic explosives.

Lisardo Marquez Perez: member of the Red Flag group arrested on October 8, 1983, in Colombia for participation in a September 1983 attack on Cutufi on the Venezuela–Colombia border. A national guardsman was killed and eight others injured.

El Marrano: aliases Rafael, Marrano, Alveiro, Reynaldo. Identified by the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) on March 10, 1999, as having participated in the kidnapping and murder of three American activists on February 25, 1999. He was one of six FARC members charged with murder on April 30, 2002, in the United States.

Hector Marrero Diaz: one of five prisoners who, on December 30, 2002, broke out of Las Cucharas, Chile, maximum security prison after two confederates rented a Caribbean Helicorp helicopter in San Juan, Puerto Rico, ostensibly to examine construction work, and forced the pilot to land on the prison roof during morning recreation. The prisoners flew on to a remote area in the central mountains and escaped. The five had been serving sentences in excess of 100 years for murder and other crimes. Corrections Secretary Miguel Periera said it was possible that prison guards helped the escapees. By January 3, 2003, four of the prisoners and two of the hijackers were back in custody. Police were searching for the fifth prisoner, who may have been killed.

Carlos Alberto Marroquin: alias Antonio. Born in San Salvador, El Salvador, on April 20, 1950, he was arrested for the November 9, 1982, attempt in San Jose, Costa Rica, by six members of the Salvadoran Revolutionary Party of Central American Workers to kidnap Japanese citizen Otaiasuk Tesuji Kosuga. Kosuga was president of the National Electric Corporation of Costa Rica. Two of the kidnappers, a student, and Kosuga were injured when police foiled the kidnap attempt. He claimed to be a painter who served only as a courier of information and money between El Salvador and Costa Rica.

Sergio R. Marroquin: one of six convicted kidnappers and terrorists—five Guatemalans and one Honduran—executed by a firing squad on March 3, 1983, three days before the scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II to Guatemala. Brother of Walter Marroquin.

Walter V. Marroquin: one of six convicted kidnappers and terrorists—five Guatemalans and one Honduran—executed by a firing squad on March 3, 1983, three days before the scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II to Guatemala. Brother of Sergio Marroquin.

Martha: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

Camilo Marti: one of two Nicaraguans who hijacked an Aeronica C046 flying from Bluefield to Managua, Nicaragua, on May 10, 1982, and diverted it to Limn, Costa Rica, where they requested political asylum and then surrendered to police. Nicaragua requested extradition.

Sergio Martin Olivares: one of five Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement members arrested in 1989 and charged with kidnapping a businessman. On November 24, 1994, Chilean president Eduardo Frei asked Brazilian president Itamar Franco to order the release of the five Chilean terrorists sentenced to 28 years in prison in Brazil and expel them.

Carlos Andres Martinez-Torres: alias of Illich Ramirez Sanchez.

Diosdado Martinez Hernandez: one of five individuals who attempted to hijack a domestic Cubana flight on December 8, 1960. Following a gun battle in which the pilot was injured, the plane crashed at the Cienfuego airport, killing one person and injuring four. The five were soon executed.

Dr. Felipe Martinez Soriano: leader of the National Democratic Popular Front (FPDN) of Mexico who allegedly organized the February 18, 1980, takeover of the Belgian Embassy by 10 members of the National Independent Committee for Political Prisoners and Persecuted and Missing Persons and the simultaneous takeover of the Danish Embassy by 20 members of the FPDN. On February 23, 1980, Mexican president Lopez Portillo ordered an amnesty for the occupiers, but it was unclear whether this extended to Martinez, for whom an arrest warrant had been issued. He had served as the vice chancellor of the University of Oaxaca. He was imprisoned on June 27, 1990, and accused of organizing the April 2, 1990, assassination of two security guards for the Mexican daily Jornada, for which the Secret Revolutionary Peoples Union and the Party of the Poor claimed credit. His release was demanding on October 29, 1990, by the five gunmen of the left-wing National Independent Committee for the Defense of Prisoners, the Politically Persecuted, and the Missing when they took over the German Consulate in Oaxaca, Mexico.

Fidel Martinez Rodriguez: founder of the leftist Chichoneros who was killed by Honduran government forces in June 1981.

Guillermo Martinez Marquez: New York spokesman for the Cuban Liberation Front in 1971.

Jorge Eliecer Martinez: aliases Commander Jeronimo, Jeronimo Aljure. One of six Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia members charged with murder on April 30, 2002, in the United States in connection with the 1999 kidnapping and killing of three Americans working in the Arauca, Colombia, rain forest on behalf of the Uwa Indians. The Americans were Terence Freitas, age 24, Ingrid Washinawatok, age 41, and Lahe'ena'e Gay, age 39. Colombian troops captured Eliecer on August 30, 2005.

Jorge Luis Martinez Isaac: one of 8 to 10 Cuban hijackers who, on April 2, 2003, took over the Baragua, a 50-foot ferry, in Havana harbor and sailed it to sea until it ran out of fuel. The hijackers claimed by radio to be armed with three pistols and a knife, and threatened to throw the 50 passengers overboard unless they were given another boat to reach the United States, about 40 miles away. The ferry is part of a small flotilla that shuttles Cubans from one side of Havana Bay to the other. The FBI sent a hostage negotiation team. The Coast Guard dispatched two cutters. Cuba also sent two ships from the Frontier Guards and threatened to use force to free the hostages. The hijackers freed three ill adults. The hijackers agreed to let the ferry be towed to Mariel, west of Havana. On the afternoon of April 3, authorities rescued the hostages and arrested the hijackers. The hostages, including one Frenchman, had begun jumping overboard at a signal from Cuban officers.

Military divers helped the hostages swim to safety. Some hijackers jumped overboard but were captured.

Despite the protests of human rights groups, on April 11, Cuban firing squads executed three of the hijackers at dawn after convicting them on terrorism charges. They were identified as Lorenzo Enrique Copello Castillo, Barbaro Leodan Sevilla Garcia, and Jorge Luis Martinez Isaac. They had been given three days to appeal. The death sentences were upheld by Cuba's Supreme Tribunal and by the ruling Council of State. Another four received life sentences.

Jose Juan Ramon Martinez: Martinez's arrest was ordered on January 27, 1995, by Judge Galeano in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Jose Ramon Juan Martinez: Spaniard detained in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was arrested on January 25, 1995, by police in Mar del Plata, Argentina, following accusations that he had purchased the van used in the bombing. He was released on January 31, 1995.

Jose Santos Martinez Calles: Martinez was arrested for the November 9, 1982, attempt in San Jose, Costa Rica, by six members of the Salvadoran Revolutionary Party of Central American Workers to kidnap Japanese citizen Otaiasuk Tesuji Kosuga, president of the National Electric Corporation of Costa Rica. Two of the kidnappers, a student, and Kosuga were injured when police foiled the kidnap attempt. He was wounded by gunfire.

Luis Eduardo Martinez Rusinke: one of four hijackers of an Avianca B737 flying from Bogota to Pereira, Colombia, on May 20, 1969, and diverted to Cuba.

Martinez next surfaced when he and his wife, carrying their infant, hijacked an Avianca B727 flying between Pereira and Medellin, Colombia, on July 24, 1974. The two forced the pilot to land at Cali, where the passengers escaped. They demanded the release of several political prisoners and $2 million. A policeman disguised as a mechanic boarded the plane and shot Martinez three times when he attempted to resist capture. Martinez died in a hospital an hour later.

M. Martinez: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 929, a B727 flying from New York to Chicago on December 26, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, Martinez remained a fugitive from a complaint filed in the Southern District of New York on December 29, 1969.

Martin Martinez Lacayo: pistol-carrying youth who boarded an Aeronica airliner scheduled to depart Managua, Nicaragua, for El Salvador and Mexico on June 7, 1986. He was overpowered by security forces after three hours of negotiations. Authorities said he was trying to escape military service in the Nicaraguan armed forces.

Ramon Martinez: alias of Carlos Alberto Telledin.

Raul Martinez: member of the Argentine Revolutionary Organization of the People's leadership secretariat in late 1992. On October 28, 1992, he phoned the Uruguayan newspaper La Republica to claim credit for bombing the main offices of Government Oil Deposits.

Raul Martinez Sanchez: alias of Oscar Eduardo Fonseca Alba.

Rodolfo Martinez: as of March 1995, political commander in the Ayachucho Province of the Peruvian Shining Path.

Hector Washington Marturana Uruzua: alias Azel. Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPF) terrorist arrested on April 14, 1989, after having murdered a Carabineros noncommissioned officer in Talca and confessing to participation in the would-be assassination on Chilean president Augusto Pinochet on September 7, 1986. He had arrived in Talca on April 11. He was one of four MRPF members sentenced to life in prison on April 1, 1992, in connection with the Pinochet attack and the attack on the Los Quenes carabinieri station in Chile. On November 25, 1992, the Supreme Court unanimously confirmed the sentence.

Manuel Marulanda Velez: aliases Tiro Fijo, Sure Shot; born Pedro Antonio Marin. Marulanda was born in the town of Genova in Central Colombia and was the founder and leader of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) from 1964 to 1990. On February 15, 1985, the paramilitary group Death to Kidnappers announced it intended to kill him for kidnapping. In July 1990, a hijacked plane took him from Colombia to Cuba for treatment of heart problems.

Marulanda, age 76, died of a heart attack on March 26, 2008, according to ANNCOL, a Web site that runs FARC statements.

Antonio Mas Mas: Spanish student who joined the National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) at Montevideo University and was arrested by Uruguayan security officials on March 29, 1973. He was held for murdering USAID official Daniel Mitrone, who was kidnapped by the Tupamaros on July 31, 1970. He was sentenced on February 16, 1977, to 30 years in prison and 12 years of additional unspecified security measures, the maximum punishment provided by the penal code. He was also charged with murdering Pereira Garay, a police agent, and Ruben Zambrano, a guard, in collaboration with other terrorists, and with the shooting of police officer Hector Moran Charquero. He was also believed to have been an accessory in the kidnapping of Uruguayan political advisor Ulysses Pereira Reverbel and U.K. ambassador Sir Geoffrey Jackson.

Jorge Masetti: member of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation granted clemency by President Clinton in August 1999. On January 2, 2000, a former Cuban intelligence agent who defected to Europe told the House Government Reform Committee that Masetti had conducted one of the country's biggest armed robberies with $50,000 seed money from the Cuban government. He claimed Cuba was behind the 1983 robbery of $7.2 million from a Wells Fargo armored truck in West Hartford, Connecticut. Masetti claimed he had shipped $4 million of the money from the Cuban Embassy in Mexico City to Havana. The story appeared in Masetti's book The Fury and the Delirium.

Alfredo Mason y Sanchez: one of four Cuban gunmen who, on April 16, 1959, hijacked a Cuban Aerovias DC3 flying from Havana to the Isle of Pines, Cuba, and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where four U.S. border patrolmen arrested them. They claimed that they had been imprisoned in La Cabana Fortress and were attempting to escape execution. They had requested the pilot to fly to the Dominican Republic, but he said he did not have enough gas.

Cesar Matamoros: on April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced the Cuban resident of Panama to seven years for endangering public safety in connection with the November 2000 plot to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro in Panama City.

John M. Mathews Jr.: would-be hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 400, a DC9 scheduled to fly from Birmingham, Alabama, to Chicago, Illinois, on March 31, 1971. Mathews, born on March 1, 1957, in Birmingham, Alabama, tried to become America's youngest hijacker when he held a gun on a flight attendant and demanded to go to Cuba. He was talked out of it. In court, the flight attendant said Mathews felt rejected because of his parents' divorce. She offered to give him a home during the summer, and Mathews accepted the offer. His three-year probation on June 7, 1971, for carrying a weapon aboard an aircraft was suspended.

Hector Matiani: alias Hector Hugo Malvano. Argentine who died on February 1, 1981, when sticks of dynamite he had activated exploded in the main plaza of Cuzco, Peru. It was unclear whether he had planted the dynamite or had inadvertently activated it.

Dr. Plinio Matos Moquete: Dominican Republic Communist lawyer accused of being the leader of 12th of January Liberation Movement in the Dominican Republic, a band of leftist guerrillas who robbed the Royal Bank of Canada of $50,000 in November 1971. On January 12, 1972, a daylong battle with a group of suspects resulted in police using bazookas and mortars, with eight policemen and four guerrillas dying in the firefight. Matos escaped and was promised an impartial trial by president Joaquin Balaguer if he surrendered.

Matos's release from prison was demanded by the kidnapers of Barbara Hutchison, U.S. Information Service director in Santo Domingo. The group then took over the Venezuelan Consulate on September 27, 1974. By 1976, Matos was jailed in Vias Vinas on charges of robberies and other criminal actions. Thirty mostly Dominicans planned to demand his release in a plot to kidnap Pedro Padilla Tonos, the Dominican ambassador to Venezuela, but they were unsuccessful and arrested on October 21, 1976.

Mauro: alias used by a spokesperson of the Vanguardia Patriótica Torrijista 20 de Diciembre, a leftist subversive group in Panama, who claimed credit for the January 31, 1993, kidnapping of three U.S. missionaries.

Werner Mauss: former German intelligence agent, age 54, and private investigator who, on November 17, 1996, was arrested by Medellín, Colombia, airport police with a woman (age 36 and using the alias Michaela Moellner) claiming to be his wife, as the duo was boarding a private plane. They were accompanied by Brigitte Schoene, a German they had ransomed from the Colombian National Liberation Army (ELN). Mauss was carrying 14 passports, a satellite telephone with a Global Positioning System, a satellite fax, a computer with encryption, and letters from the German Embassy saying the duo was on an "official mission."

The police claimed that Mauss, who had acted as an intermediary in peace talks between narco-terrorists and the government, had helped the rebels select kidnap targets and increase their ransoms. He would then offer his services as an intermediary and obtain multimillion dollar commissions. He arranged for the release in 1995 of three Italians kidnapped by the ELN. Schoene was kidnapped in September 1996, after which family members had neared a deal to pay a $200,000 ransom. After Mauss entered the picture, the ransom demand increased to $1.5 million, according to the family.

Mauss also tried to get the Cali, Colombia, cartel to close up shop in return for the government permitting its members to keep 20 percent of its drug profits.

On July 26, 1997, Mauss was freed. His lawyer, Abraham Casallas, said that the Mausses would stay in the country to clear their name. Germany pressured Colombia to deport Mauss. The regional head of Colombian intelligence in Medellín, Emilio Rojas, told reporters that as soon as legal issues were cleared up, Mauss and Moellner would be deported for entering the country on false passports.

Miguel Mayor Valasques: one of five Cuban hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 73, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, and diverted to Cuba on November 23, 1968. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and three small children believed related to one of the hijackers. The group was indicted on March 10, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the Western District of Kentucky. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Erazmo Mayorinca Chavez: arrested on January 13, 1987, at a clandestine clinic in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago, Chile. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Mayra: one of 20 members of the Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms in Guatemala who died on August 9, 1984, in a shootout with the Guatemalan Army in San Pablo, San Marcos Department.

Luis Mazo Arango: arrested on March 30, 1990, with three other people in connection with the March 27, 1990, kidnapping of American Gerardo Robinson Davila near the Santa Paola neighborhood in the northern part of Cali, Colombia.

Basilio J. Mazor: self-proclaimed People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) hijacker of an Aerolineas Argentinas B737 flying from Buenos Aires to Tucuman on July 4, 1973. He demanded that Argentina pay $200,000 to charitable organizations. He forced the pilot to fly to Mendoza, Argentina; Santiago, Chile; Lima, Peru; Panama City, Panama; and finally Havana, where he was offered asylum. The ERP denied that he was a member.

Patrick H. McAlroy: hijacker of a San Francisco International Airport Helicopter Company general aviation helicopter that was to fly from Berkeley, California, to San Francisco on January 26, 1972. McAlroy seized the helicopter on the ground and demanded a cash payment and use of a commercial helicopter to take him to the San Francisco airport, where a jet was to take him to Cuba. He surrendered and was committed to a mental institution by the state.

Bill McBride: hijacker of an Island Flying Service Cessna Skymaster 336, chartered to fly from Nassau to Exuma, but diverted to Cuba on August 22, 1968.

Martin McCauley: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested on August 11, 2001, by Colombian authorities while teaching urban bombing techniques—including the use of plastic explosives and mortars—to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrillas in a rebel-controlled zone. The trio was about to board an Air France flight to Paris. They carried false passports. FARC normally uses bombs from propane gas cylinders.

Carlos Castano, a leader of antiguerrilla paramilitaries, said that he was approached by one of the IRA suspects who offered his “professional services” to train his group. The training apparently took place over five weeks. On August 21, Colombia arrested an Irish citizen, age 48, who claimed he was teaching English in local villages. He was transported to Bogota but not charged. The attorney general charged the trio with helping training terrorists and traveling on false passports. The IRA members—Niall Connolly, James Monaghan, age 55, and Martin McCauley—were sent to Bogota's Modelo Prison, where they could be held for 240 days while the prosecution prepared its case. Only Connolly, traveling as David Bracken, spoke Spanish.

The trio said they were Irish journalists preparing a report on the demilitarized zone. They stayed at a FARC camp near La Macarena, in a region where top FARC commanders live. Cuba claimed Connolly was the Sinn Fein Latin America representative since 1996, based in Havana. Monaghan is a former member of the Sinn Fein executive board. Investigators found traces of four kinds of explosives in the IRA members' clothing. FARC claimed that the IRA members were in the country to learn about the local peace process. However, the military cited intercepted FARC communications regarding the IRA members providing training in Semtex.

On April 26, 2004, the trio was acquitted on charges of training the FARC but convicted of traveling on false passports and identity documents. McCauley was sentenced to three years and eight months, fined $6,500, and ordered expelled from Colombia after serving his time. On December 16, 2004, a three-judge panel in Bogota overturned the acquittal and ordered their immediate arrests so that they could serve 17-year terms. Their whereabouts were unknown.

On August 5, 2005, the three IRA members snuck back into Ireland. An Irish broadcasting network carried an interview with Monaghan. On August 6, 2005, Colombia demanded extradition from Ireland. On August 18, the trio surrendered to Dublin police at three police stations. Monaghan and McCauley left the stations without being charged.

John Scott McCreer: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 379, a DC9 flying the Syracuse–Philadelphia–Tampa run on August 5, 1969. He wanted to go to Cuba. He was arrested when the plane landed in Tampa, Florida. Charges against him were dismissed on January 12, 1970, and he was committed to a mental institution and then discharged on September 15, 1971.

Dianne Vivian McKinney: a woman who joined Ira David Meeks, an ex-convict, in hijacking a Caldwell Aviation Corporation Cessna 172 they had chartered to fly over Gastonia, North Carolina, on April 22, 1970, diverting it to Cuba. She was arrested in New York on July 10, 1976, as she returned from Cuba. The duo was held on an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Western District of North Carolina on September 21, 1970, on charges of air piracy and kidnapping. They were declared mentally incompetent to stand trial and charges were dismissed on December 6, 1976.

Roper McNair: on August 16, 1975, McNair entered a private Piper Cherokee 140 taxiing for departure from Woodbridge, Virginia, and pointed a gun at the pilot. He demanded to fly to Jamaica, Puerto Rico, the Bahamas, and Madrid. The plane headed south but ran out of fuel and landed on a highway near Fayetteville, North Carolina. One of the two hostages escaped. McNair commandeered a car and drove his remaining hostage to the Fayetteville airport, where he unsuccessfully attempted to board several parked aircraft. He was persuaded to surrender by local authorities.

Patrice Ann McRary: seajacker, along with her husband and two children, of the pleasure boat Spook in the United States on July 22, 1974. The couple forced the crew to take the boat to Havana, Cuba, after leaving Key West. The four were turned over to competent courts to be tried in accordance with Cuban law for the most severely penalized offense in accordance with the acts they had committed.

La Medica: alias of Ivon Consuelo Izquierdo.

Fabian Medina Filisterraz: one of three April 19 Movement of Colombia terrorists who participated in the Ecuadoran leftist Alfaro Lives, Damn It kidnapping on August 7, 1985, of Nahim Isaias Barquet, an Ecuadoran banker in Quito. In an assault of the hideout by police on September 2, Medina was killed.

Luis Medina Perez: Cuban exile and Bay of Pigs veteran who hijacked National Airlines Flight 209, an Electra 188 bound for Key West from Miami, Florida, to go to Havana, Cuba. The crew subdued him. He was acquitted on June 24, 1966, of aircraft piracy and assault. His mental competence was an issue in court.

Tomas Medina: alias El Negro Acacia. Commander of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia's (FARC) 16th Front, who ran much of FARC's cocaine and arms trafficking through Brazil. His camp was bombed by the Colombian Air Force in September 2007, killing him and 16 other guerrillas.

Jorge Julio Medrano Cabellero: would-be hijacker, age 20, of a RAPSA C47 flying from David

City to Bocas del Toro in Panama on January 9, 1970. He wanted to go to Cuba. While the plane refueled at David City, he was shot to death by the National Guard.

Ira David Meeks: ex-convict who joined Dianne Vivian McKinney in hijacking a Caldwell Aviation Corporation Cessna 172 they chartered to fly over Gastonia, North Carolina, on April 22, 1970, diverting it to Cuba. The FBI arrested Meeks in New York after he flew there from Barbados. The duo was held on an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Western District of North Carolina on September 21, 1970, on charges of air piracy and kidnapping. They were declared mentally incompetent to stand trial and charges were dismissed on December 6, 1976. He had been diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia in 1966. He was released in 1981. He was married in 1990. He worked in Gastonia as a mechanic, drafter, welder, and electrician. On June 23, 2003, Meeks, age 59, died of lung cancer in Gastonia, North Carolina.

Ali Khalik Mehri: naturalized Paraguayan citizen and Lebanese businessman living in Ciudad del Este who was arrested by Paraguayan authorities in February 2000. He had financial links to Hizballah and was charged with violating intellectual property rights laws and aiding a criminal enterprise involved in distributing CDs espousing Hizballah's extremist ideals. He also was charged with selling millions of dollars of counterfeit software and sending the proceeds to Hizballah. In a search of his home, police found videos and CDs of suicide bombers calling for others to follow them. He fled the country in June 2000 after faulty judicial procedures allowed his release. He was believed to be an al Qaeda financier and was a large campaign contributor to members of the ruling Colorado Party.

Abdullah Mehsud: variant Abdullah Mahsud. One-legged former Taliban fighter, age 28 as of October 2004, who was freed from the U.S. Navy detention facility at Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, in March 2004, after being held for two years. He was captured by Afghan forces in Kunduz in northern Afghanistan in December 2001 while fighting for the Taliban. Authorities believed he established ties with al Qaeda after his release. He also led foreign militants, principally from Uzbekistan. He was the leader of the group that on October 9, 2004, kidnapped Chinese engineers working with Pakistanis in South Waziristan. He was killed in Pakistan on July 24, 2007, during a raid by security forces on his hideout in Zhob in Baluchistan Province, 30 miles from the Afghan border. He blew himself up with a grenade rather than surrender. He was one of seven former Guantánamo detainees named by the Pentagon as having returned to the insurgency upon release.

His brother, Baitullah Mehsud, commands 30,000 fighters supporting al Qaeda in Pakistan.

Sosa Matilde Mejia Alegria: one of three female Sandinista National Liberation Front members arrested on July 4, 1981, by Costa Rican Civil Guards. The group planned to take over the Guatemalan Embassy to obtain the release of political prisoners.

William Mejia: leader of an M-19 cell who planned to kill U.S. ambassador to Colombia Charles Gillespie. The plot was discovered, but he escaped the police raid on March 21, 1987, with his companion, Gloria Juliet Munoz.

Eduardo Javier Mejias Morales: Mejias, age 26, was one of six knife-wielding Cubans who, on March 19, 2003, hijacked a Cuban Aero Taxi DC3 en route from the Isle of Youth to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida. The group broke down the cockpit door and tied up four crew members with tape and rope. Five of the hijackers had knives. The U.S. military scrambled jet fighters and a U.S. Customs Department Black Hawk helicopter to escort the plane. No injuries were reported. The plane landed at Key West International Airport at 8:06 p.m., where the hijackers surrendered.

The six were arraigned on air piracy charges and faced 20 years to life in prison if convicted. The 25 passengers and 6 crew were held at an immigration detention center near Miami. Sixteen of the passengers returned to Cuba on March 22; the others opted to stay in the United States. Cuba demanded the return of the plane, its crew, and all of the passengers, saying it was an “act of terrorism.” Cuba later said U.S. prosecution would be acceptable. Reports were unclear on the nationality of the passengers. One report said no passengers were Cuban and that one was Italian.

On August 7, 2003, U.S. magistrate judge John O’Sullivan said confessions by Neudis Infantes Hernandez and Yainer Olivares Samon should not be used at trial because the FBI did not give them their Miranda warnings immediately. Edited summaries of the confessions of their four colleagues could be used in the September trial. Prosecutors were given ten days to respond to his ruling.

On December 11, 2003, the six Cuban defendants were convicted after jurors were not persuaded that it was a “freedom flight” undertaken with the crew’s cooperation. Conviction entailed a mandatory 20 years, with a possible life sentence. On April 21, 2004, four hijackers were sentenced to 20 years in prison; the plot’s leader and his brother received 24 years.

Felix Melgar Antel: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the ten the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Lautaro Enrique Mellado Saavedra: one of four Chileans arrested in Peru on October 14, 1993, on suspicion of involvement in terrorist acts. On January 7, 1994, they were convicted in Peru of membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement. They were sentenced by a military court to life in prison and fined $50 million. On March 21, 1994, the Special Military Court of the Peruvian Air Force, serving as an appellate court, confirmed the life sentence on charges of high treason. Mellado was involved in the kidnapping of Peruvian entrepreneur Raul Hiraoka Torres and other crimes.

Gabriel Melli: indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was set free, although Judge Galeano ordered an attachment of his assets at two million pesos.

Domingo Mena: medical student and People’s Revolutionary Army (ERP) member who flew to Havana, Cuba, on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires, Argentina. On February 14, 1974, he and Enrique Gorriaran announced in Buenos Aires the creation of the Revolutionary Coordinating Junta, composed of ERP of Argentina, the Revolutionary Left Movement of Chile, the National Liberation Army of Bolivia, and the National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) of Uruguay.

Ricardo Mena: student leader whose release was obtained on May 11, 1979, by nine Popular Revolutionary Bloc members who took over the Venezuelan Embassy in El Salvador.

Jose P. Menendez: pilot who diverted his Cubana plane to Jamaica on July 17, 1960.

Radhames Mendez Vargas: spokesperson for the 12th of January Liberation Movement kidnappers of Barbara Hutchison, U.S. Information Service director in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, on September 27, 1974. The group then seized the Venezuelan Consulate, holding seven more hostages. Mendez demanded $1 million from the United States and the release of 38 political prisoners. Mendez was a convicted hijacker who had been released from prison in 1974.

Rafael Angel Mendez: Costa Rican whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, to New Orleans, Louisiana, on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Selva A. Mendez: one of four hijackers, including three Brazilians and one Mexican, who hijacked a Mexicana de Aviacion B727 on the Cozumel–Merida–Mexico City run on May 24, 1970, and diverted it to Cuba.

Ivan Sacha Mendieta Rivera: alias Cesar. One of four individuals arrested on May 28, 1985, in connection with the May 24, 1985, bombing of National Electric Power high tension pylons that blacked out 1,400 kilometers of Chilean territory, including Santiago and Copiapo. Mendieta was a member of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front.

Benjamin Mendoza Amor: mentally unstable Bolivian artist who attempted to assassinate Pope Paul VI with a knife at Manila Airport on November 27, 1970. He was dragged to the ground and arrested.

Gloria Mendoza: one of three April 19 Movement of Colombia terrorists who participated in the Ecuadoran leftist Alfaro Lives, Damn It kidnapping on August 7, 1985, of Nahim Isaias Barquet, an Ecuadoran banker in Quito. In an assault of the hideout by police on September 2, Mendoza was killed.

Salvador Mendoza Hernandez: arrested after a several block car chase by Guatemalan police on December 5, 1995, in the foiled kidnapping of U.S. citizen Debora Casman, a member of the United Nations Mission for Guatemala.

Irardo Mendoze Viera: one of five Cuban hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 73, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, and diverted to Cuba on November 23, 1968. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and three small children believed related to one of the hijackers. The group was indicted on March 10, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the Western District of Kentucky. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Irgeu Mengon: an imprisoned former member of the Brazil Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) who, on January 13, 1971, refused to leave prison and Brazil after President Medici agreed to free 51 prisoners following the December 7, 1970, kidnapping of Swiss ambassador Giovanni Enrico Bucher by the VPR and the Juarez Guimarez de Brito Command of the Action for National Liberation. Mengon said, "I joined the VPR thinking that I could do something for Brazil. But I have been completely deceived. The VPR only uses terror and violence, which horrify me."

Simon Mercado Pleites: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. His release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released him.

Maria Lidia Merchi: one of five Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement members arrested in 1989 and charged with kidnapping a businessman. On November 24, 1994, Chilean president Eduardo Frei asked Brazilian president Itamar Franco to order the release of the five Chilean terrorists sentenced to 28 years in prison in Brazil and expel them.

Gerald Leland Merity: alias Mohamed Jalal Akbar. Black Muslim who jumped a wall at southern California's Ontario Airport and hijacked an American Airlines B727 waiting to take on passengers on April 9, 1980. He diverted the plane to Cuba, where he surrendered to authorities. The former dental school student requested asylum in a Muslim country.

Jairo Merlando: Colombian senator whose arrest was ordered on November 9, 2006, for alleged ties to one of the country's far-right paramilitary groups. His name was found in the computer of a deputy to paramilitary leader Rodrigo Tovar Pupo.

Salom Mesa Espinoza: left-wing Venezuelan congressman who was arrested on August 4, 1976, for questioning in connection with the kidnapping by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos—Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976, of William Niehous, president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela.

Silvio Mesa Cabrera: Cuban claiming to be a Puerto Rican who hijacked the Chicago–Miami–San Juan Delta L1011 flight on July 22, 1980, and diverted it to Cuba. He wanted Havana, but settled for Camaguey.

Nelson Mesquita: alias G.D.J. Silva. Hijacker of a Varig Airlines Lockheed Electra 188 flying from São Paulo to Porto Alegre, Brazil, on May 30, 1972. He hijacked the plane out of Curitiba and demanded $260,000 and three parachutes. The crew on the ground sabotaged the engines and when troops rushed the plane, the hijacker committed suicide.

Carlos Mesto: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Julio Cesar Mezzich: variant of Julio Cesar Mezzich.

Dr. Julio Cesar Mezzich: variant Mezzich. Deputy chief of Shining Path, who was wounded by police on September 7, 1986, when 40 rebels attacked the town of Tauca, Ancash, Peru. He escaped. Mezzich was captured on March 3, 1990, in the Blanca Mountain Range of the Andes Mountains, 450 kilometers west of Lima. His wife was believed to be Rosa.

Jente Kai Midei: member, age 51, of the Japanese Red Army carrying a British passport who was arrested in Ciudad del Este, the capital of Alto Parana Department, Paraguay, on June 12, 1995. The Japanese Embassy said Midei's true name was Jennie Kang Midei.

Fadael Milord: one of two Haitian soldiers who, during a failed mutiny against the government on April 10, 1989, fired into the air and took over a twin-engine plane with seven missionaries on board at Cap Haitien, Haiti. The Cessna landed in Miami International Airport. The hijackers surrendered peacefully to police and the FBI. The next day, U.S. magistrate William Turnoff ordered the duo held without bail on a criminal complaint.

Aimee Miranda: convicted on November 15, 1968, of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. She and eight other anti-Castro exiles were given sentences ranging from one to ten years.

Francisco Emilio Miranda Mungalo: one of two Nicaraguan hijackers of a Nicaraguan Agrarian Reform Institute twin-engine Aztec crop duster, registration YMDDQ, from the Los Brasiles airport in Nicaragua to the Santamaria airport in Costa Rica. There they requested asylum on October 22, 1981.

Rosa Mireya Cardenas: member of the Alfaro Lives, Damn It group in Ecuador, who surrendered to the Constitutional Guarantees Tribunal on June 27, 1990.

Al-Said Hassan Mkhles: variant Mokhles. Suspected Egyptian Islamic Group (EIG) terrorist whose extradition was requested of Uruguay by Egypt in connection with the 1997 al-Gama'at al-Islamiyya attack on tourists in Luxor, Egypt. He was detained in Uruguay in early 1999 on charges of document fraud after trying to enter the country with a false passport.

July 2003, Uruguay extradited him to Egypt. Egypt said he was a member of EIG and a possible al Qaeda associate. Egypt agreed that he would not be subjected to the death penalty, permanent imprisonment, or charged for document fraud, for which he already served four years.

Nelson Molina: hijacker of American Airlines Flight 206, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to New York on May 25, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive in Cuba from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of New York on August 13, 1970.

Michaela Moellner: alias used by a woman, age 36, who was arrested with Werner Mauss, age 54, a former German intelligence agent on November 17, 1996, by Medellin, Colombia, airport police as the duo was boarding a private plane. She claimed to be his wife. They were accompanied by Brigitte Schoene, a German they had ransomed from the Colombian National Liberation Army (ELN). Mauss was carrying 14 passports, a satellite telephone with a Global Positioning System, a satellite fax, a computer with encryption, and letters from the German Embassy saying the duo was on an "official mission."

The police claimed that Mauss, who had acted as an intermediary in peace talks between narcoterrorists and the government, had helped the rebels select kidnap targets and increase their ransoms. He would then offer his services as an intermediary and obtain multimillion dollar commissions. He arranged for the release in 1995 of three Italians kidnapped by ELN. Schoene was kidnapped in September 1996. Family members had neared a deal to pay a $200,000 ransom when Mauss entered the picture. At that point, the ransom demand increased to $1.5 million, according to the family.

Mauss also tried to get the Cali, Colombia, cartel to close up shop in return for the government permitting its members to keep 20 percent of its drug profits.

On July 26, 1997, Mauss was freed. His lawyer, Abraham Casallas, said that the Mausses would stay in the country to clear their name. Germany pressured Colombia to deport Mauss. The regional head of Colombian intelligence in Medellin, Emilio Rojas, told reporters that as soon as legal issues were cleared up, Mauss and Moellner would be deported for entering the country on false passports.

Said Hazan Mohammed: arrested in February 1999 by Uruguayan authorities while he was trying to enter the country from Brazil with a fake Malaysian passport. On February 24, it appeared that Uruguay would extradite him to Egypt to stand trial for the attack in Luxor on November 17, 1997, in which terrorists killed 58 foreigners and four Egyptians.

Nahrim Mokhtari: Iranian woman arrested by Argentine police on December 5, 1998. She was linked to Middle Eastern terrorist groups and had told a former lover of plans to bomb the Israeli Embassy in Argentina before it occurred on March 17, 1992.

Luis Armando Mola: arrested in Costa Rica on September 27, 1992, for narcotics trafficking and money laundering, his release was demanded on April 26, 1993, by five gunmen who took hostage 19 of 22 Supreme Court justices in San Jose.

Tomas Molina Caracas: one of three members of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) who, with four other South Americans, were, on March 7, 2002, indicted by a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., on charges of conspiracy to import cocaine into the United States. The indictment, which was unsealed on March 18, was the first time the United States had brought charges against FARC. Molina was the commander of FARC's 16th Front in eastern Colombia, near the Venezuelan and Brazilian borders.

James Monaghan: one of three Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA) members arrested on August 11, 2001, by Colombian authorities while teaching urban bombing techniques—including the use of plastic explosives and mortars—to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) guerrillas in a rebel-controlled zone. The trio was about to board an Air France flight to Paris. They were carrying false passports. FARC normally uses bombs from propane gas cylinders.

Carlos Castano, a leader of antiguerrilla paramilitaries, said that he was approached by one of the IRA suspects who offered his “professional services” to train his group. The training apparently took place over five weeks. On August 21, Colombia arrested an Irish citizen, age 48, who claimed he was teaching English in local villages. He was transported to Bogota but not charged. The attorney general charged the trio with helping to train terrorists and traveling on false passports. The IRA members—Niall Connolly, James Monaghan, age 55, and Martin McCauley—were sent to Bogota's Modelo Prison, where they could be held for 240 days while the prosecution prepared its case. Only Connolly, traveling as David Bracken, spoke Spanish.

The trio said they were Irish journalists preparing a report on the demilitarized zone. They stayed at a FARC camp near La Macarena, in a region where top FARC commanders live. Cuba claimed Connolly was the Sinn Fein Latin America representative since 1996, based in Havana. Monaghan is a former member of the Sinn Fein executive board. Investigators found traces of four kinds of explosives in the IRA members' clothing. FARC claimed that the IRA members were in the country to learn about the local peace process. However, the military cited intercepted FARC communications regarding the IRA members providing training in Semtex.

On April 26, 2004, the trio was acquitted of charges of training the FARC members but convicted of traveling on false passports and identity documents. Monaghan was sentenced to three years and eight months, fined $6,500, and ordered expelled from Colombia after serving his time.

On December 16, 2004, a three-judge panel in Bogota overturned the acquittal, sentenced the trio to 17-year terms, and ordered their immediate arrests. Their whereabouts were unknown.

On August 5, 2005, the three IRA members snuck back into Ireland. An Irish broadcasting network carried an interview with Monaghan. On August 6, 2005, Colombia demanded extradition from Ireland. On August 18, the trio surrendered to Dublin police at three police stations. Monaghan and McCauley left the stations without charge.

Pedro Moncada: leader of the Alfaro Lives, Damn It group in Ecuador, who said, on June 27, 1990, that the group would officially surrender its weapons to the Andean Parliament to prove that it was giving up the armed struggle to become a political party.

Alejandro Victor Monjo: indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was set free, although Judge Galeano ordered an attachment of his assets at two million pesos.

Francisco Monnar: hijacker of a Cubana Viscount on April 12, 1960.

Luis Angel Monray: founder of the Quintin Lame organization who was killed in a shootout with the Colombian Army on November 12, 1985.

Pablo Monsanto: commander of the Guatemalan National Revolutionary Unity who, on September 1, 1990, had his group ransack and torch three houses and a clinic of the U.S. New Life religious sect, which had been operating in Sayaxche, northern Peten Department. He was one of the rebel representatives who on December 29, 1996, agreed to end 36 years of fighting with the signing of a peace agreement with the Guatemalan government.

Paulo Fernando Montalvan Tuesta: Peruvian Shining Path member who was arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Humberto Montana Valencia: leader of a Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia urban unit who was arrested on November 30, 2007, when Colombian authorities announced a raid of a rebel hideout. They found videos of 15 captives, including 3 Pentagon contractors and Ingrid Betancourt, a former Colombian presidential candidate kidnapped in 2002. Authorities said the five videos were taken in October 2007.

Arturo Montano: Colombian, age 26, indicted by the United States on September 7, 2004, with trying to kill Americans in the November 16, 2003, grenade attacks at two Bogota, Colombia, bars frequented by Americans. One Colombian woman was killed and 72 people were injured. The attacks were in retaliation for the death of Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia deputy commander Edgar Gustavo Navarro, alias El Mocho, at the hands of the Colombian armed forces in October 2003. Montano was charged with attempted murder of U.S. nationals, conspiracy, and use of a weapon of mass destruction.

Miguel Montesino Sanchez: aliases J. Sanchez, J. Lopez. Cuban hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 532, a B720 flying from Miami, Florida, to Dallas, Texas, and diverted to Havana, Cuba, on November 30, 1968. He was indicted on April 9, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida. As of 1979, he remained at large.

Alejandro Montecinos: arrested on December 12, 1986, by Chile's National Intelligence Center in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Fabio Montenegro Gavilo: Colombian National Liberation Army kidnapper killed on January 12, 1984, by F-2 secret police who rescued Lithuanian businessman Algis Mantas Disibiles. The businessman was being held for a $20 million ransom. The six killed or detained were also implicated in the 1983 kidnapping of Jaime Betancur Cuartas, brother of president Belisario Betancur.

Alejandro Montenegro: imprisoned chief of the Salvadoran People's Revolutionary Army whose release was demanded on September 17, 1982, by the dozen members of the leftist Chichoneros Popular Liberation movement. The members seized the building housing the Chamber of Commerce in San Pedro del Sula, Honduras, and took hostage 105 business executives. On September 19, 1982, Honduran authorities claimed he might have been turned over to Salvadoran authorities under another name.

Paola Andrea Montenegro Morales: member of the Ecuadoran Alfaro Lives, Damn It who was captured by the army during clashes with the American Battalion in the mountains of Cauca Department and later deported by Colombia on August 17, 1986.

Maria Monteverde Ascanio: Monteverde, of La Grotava, Spain, was arrested by the Guatemalan Army on January 11, 1983, on charges of leading two guerrilla raids the previous week against farms between the towns of Patulul and San Lucas Toliman, Solola Department, in western Guatemala and for the January 6, 1983, killing of Enrique de Leon, administrator of a sugar plantation. She was freed on February 8, 1983, for lack of evidence.

Juan Cary Montoya: would-be hijacker of a Sociedad Aeronautica De Medellin EC4 on the Medellin–Bogota–Barranquilla flight in Colombia on March 11, 1969. He wanted to go to Havana, Cuba. Police stormed the plane, and Montoya was wounded by gunfire. Troops fatally shot a flight mechanic mistaken for the hijacker.

Pedro Pablo Montoya: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) bodyguard, age 33, of FARC Directorate member Manuel Jesus Munoz. In early March 2008, Montoya shot Munoz to death, then severed Munoz's right hand and delivered it to Colombian authorities.

Carlos Anibal Monzon Novena: aliases Commander Rolo, Captain Tati. Bolivian general who engaged in terrorist attacks between 1975 and 1990. He was arrested on November 28, 1990, by Buenos Aires, Argentina, police who broke up a plot to fire antitank rockets at U.S. president George Bush and his entourage when they passed alongside the Palermo horse racing track during his visit to the country on December 5, 1990. Police seized antitank projectiles manufactured in the 1970s by the Montoneros, along with other arms stolen from the Buenos Aires Province police, the armed forces, and other security forces.

Monzon was the leader of the Revolutionary Workers Union, a splinter group of the People's Revolutionary Army (ERP). He had been detained between 1977 and 1983. He was arrested in 1989 after stealing teachers' wages in San Martin. He was living with a woman named Gringa, who was a contact between the Revolutionary Workers Union and ERP member Enrique Gorriaran Merlo.

Vidalina Antonieta Monzon: her release was demanded by the Guatemalan Rebel Armed Forces members who kidnapped U.S. labor attaché

Sean M. Holly on March 6, 1970, and demanded the release of Aguirre and three others. She was released on March 8 to the Costa Rican Embassy and flew with two other prisoners to Mexico City.

Marcial Soto Moraga Contreras: one of five individuals arrested on March 16, 1987, by Melipeuco, Chile, authorities for holding up a Brink's car carrying arms into Argentina and also in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the Chilean presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts. On August 18, 1987, the Chilean Court of Appeals designated Judge Margarita Osnovikof to conduct the inquiry into the August 13, 1987, escape from Valparaiso Prison of four prisoners, including Moraga.

Mrayan Morak: one of six Iranian Hizballah members detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252. They had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said the group was not involved in the bombing but would be deported to Iran through Bogota and Caracas. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Alexis Normiella Morales: Morales, age 31, was one of six knife-wielding Cubans who, on March 19, 2003, hijacked a Cuban Aero Taxi DC3 en route from the Isle of Youth to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida. The group broke down the cockpit door and tied up four crew members with tape and rope. Five of the hijackers had knives. The U.S. military scrambled jet fighters and a U.S. Customs Department Black Hawk helicopter to escort the plane. No injuries were reported. The plane landed at Key West International Airport at 8:06 P.M., where the hijackers surrendered. The six were arraigned on air piracy charges and faced 20 years to life in prison if convicted. The 25 passengers and 6 crew were held at an immigration detention center near Miami. Sixteen of the passengers returned to Cuba on March 22; the others opted to stay in the United States. Cuba demanded the return of the plane, its crew, and all of the passengers, saying it was an “act of terrorism.” Cuba later said U.S. prosecution would be acceptable. Reports were unclear on the nationality of the passengers. One report said no passengers were Cuban and that one was Italian.

On August 7, 2003, U.S. magistrate judge John O’Sullivan said confessions by Neudis Infantes Hernandez and Yainer Olivares Samon should not be used at trial because the FBI did not give them their Miranda warnings immediately. Edited summaries of the confessions of their four colleagues could be used in the September trial. Prosecutors were given ten days to respond to his ruling.

On December 11, 2003, the six Cuban defendants were convicted after jurors were not persuaded that it was a “freedom flight” undertaken with the crew’s cooperation. Conviction entails a mandatory 20 years, with a possible life sentence. On April 21, 2004, four hijackers were sentenced to 20 years in prison; the plot’s leader and his brother received 24 years.

Cesar Morales Canavar: one of four members of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It expelled from Colombia to Ecuador via the border town of Ipiales on December 26, 1986.

Guillermo “William” Morales: Puerto Rican captured on May 26, 1983, in a safe house in Puebla, Mexico, during investigation of a plot to attack the interparliamentary meeting between U.S. and Mexican legislators scheduled to be held in Puebla in June 1983. Interpol found a significant cache of weapons, dynamite, and propaganda. Morales’s wife was killed in the raid. The United States requested extradition. He was wanted for numerous Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation bombings.

Hector H. Morales Lopez: one of six convicted kidnappers and terrorists—five Guatemalans and one Honduran—executed by a firing squad on March 3, 1983, three days before the scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II to Guatemala.

Jose Luis Morales Canavar: one of four members of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It expelled from Colombia to Ecuador via the border town of Ipiales on December 26, 1986.

Luis Ricardo Morales Munoz: Colombian National Liberation Army kidnapper arrested on January 12, 1984, by F-2 secret police who rescued Lithuanian businessman Algis Mantas Disibiles. The businessman was being held for a $20 million ransom. The six killed or detained were also implicated in the 1983 kidnapping of Jaime Betancur Cuartas, brother of president Belisario Betancur.

Manuel Morales Torres: would-be hijacker of a New York–San Juan flight on February 5, 1981. He wanted to go to Cuba but surrendered to what he thought was the Cuban police when the pilot landed in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Otto Morales: Dominican Popular Movement leader who was shot to death by police on July 16, 1970. He was a suspect in the March 24, 1970, kidnapping of Lt. Col. Donald J. Crowley, U.S. Air Force attaché, by a group claiming to be the Untied Anti-Reelection Command. The group demanded the release of 21, later 24, prisoners. Authorities released 20 prisoners, who flew to Mexico.

Ricardo “Monkey” Morales: anti-Castro Cuban exile who was shot dead from behind with a .32 pistol fired by a patron at the Cherries bar in Key Biscayne, Florida, on December 20, 1982. He claimed he had helped plan and carry out the 1976 bombing of a Cubana airliner in which 73 people died near Barbados. He claimed he had been an officer of the Venezuelan intelligence service when he provided the C4 explosive used in the blast. He said he had built and planted bombs for anti-Castro activists in Miami.

William Morales: bomb maker whose hands and part of his face were blown off on July 12, 1978, when a bomb exploded in a Queens, New York, apartment being used as a Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN) bomb factory. Police suggested he might be the same William Morales who in 1975 was a member of the National Commission on Hispanic Affairs of the Protestant Episcopal Church, an organization with possible links to FALN.

He was sentenced to 99 years on state and federal explosives and weapons charges but escaped the next year from New York's Bellevue Hospital, where he was being fitted for artificial hands. Two New York policemen died while trying to apprehend him. When captured in 1983, Morales confessed that he had been planning to bomb a conference of U.S. and Mexican congressmen in Puebla, Mexico. On June 25, 1988, ignoring a long-pending U.S. extradition request, Mexican foreign secretary Bernardo Sepulveda allowed his release after he served five years of an eight-year sentence for the May 28, 1983, murder of a policeman in a shootout in Puebla. On June 27, 1988, he was sent to Cuba. The United States recalled ambassador Charles J. Pilliod Jr. for consultations, noting that Morales was implicated in more than 50 bombings.

Rene Moralex: Nicaraguan who was one of 120 guerrillas killed in El Salvador in December 1982 during a two-week period.

Rolando Moran: one of the rebel representatives who, on December 29, 1996, agreed to end 36 years of fighting by signing a peace agreement with the Guatemalan government.

Pablo Moreira Mosca: bank employee, age 29, from Uruguay who on February 7, 2002, kicked in the bottom of the cockpit door on United Flight 855, which was flying from Miami after midnight with 142 passengers and 15 crew members bound for Buenos Aires, Argentina. Three passengers subdued him from the passenger cabin while the copilot hit him in the head with a small fire ax, leaving a two-inch gash. The plane landed safely and on time in Buenos Aires. There was no evidence that Moreira was linked to terrorists. Passenger Jan Boyer said that Moreira was kicking the door "kung fu style." Boyer sat on Moreira while the captain shackled him with plastic arm and leg restraints. Other passengers said that he was behaving erratically in the waiting area before the flight and demanding to smoke in the non-smoking area. Moreira was put on a flight for the United States that evening and faced charges of interfering with a flight crew. He told the FBI, "I wanted to destroy everything." He was held without bail and faced up to 20 years in prison.

Roberto Moreira: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the ten the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Luis Felipe Morena-Godoy: associate of Syrian arms trafficker Monzer al-Kassar. Morena-Godoy was arrested in Romania on June 8, 2007, on U.S. charges of conspiracy to sell millions of dollars of small arms, ammunition, thousands of machine guns, rocket-propelled grenade launchers, and "possible surface-to-air missiles" to Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) rebels "to protect their cocaine trafficking business and to attack United States interests in Colombia." Al-Kassar was living in a 15-room Renaissance palazzo near Marbella, Andalusia, Spain, on the Costa del Sol, where he met on February 6, 2007, with two U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration informants to discuss a deal worth $7.8 million to $13.5 million, plus costs of transportation. The indictment also said al-Kassar offered “to send 1,000 men to the informants to fight with the FARC against U.S. military officers in Colombia.” Al-Kassar and his associates were indicted on four counts of supplying material support to a foreign terrorist group, conspiracy to kill U.S. nationals, officials, and employees, and conspiracy to acquire an antiaircraft missile.

Eloy Moreno Bacallado: one of five individuals who attempted to hijack a domestic Cubana flight on December 8, 1960. Following a gun battle in which the pilot was injured, the plane crashed at the Cienfuego airport, killing one person and injuring four. The five were soon executed.

Enildo Moreno Bacallado: one of five individuals who attempted to hijack a domestic Cubana flight on December 8, 1960. Following a gun battle in which the pilot was injured, the plane crashed at the Cienfuego airport, killing one person and injuring four. The five were soon executed.

Jose Rafael Moreno: would-be hijacker of an Avianca DC4 flying from Monteria to Cartagena, Colombia, on May 8, 1971. Moreno was armed with a pistol and grenade. He allowed the passengers to leave in Cartagena. The plane landed in Maracaibo, Venezuela, where he was arrested.

Jose Roberto Moreno Canjura: on January 8, 1988, a Salvadoran judge denied the former guard's request for amnesty. He was convicted of murdering four U.S. female clerics on December 2, 1980. He was serving 30 years for aggravated homicide and robbery.

C. Moreno Merino and V. Moreno Merino: two of the 15 hijackers of an Ecuatoriana International Lockheed Electra 188 on the Guayaquil–Quito–Miami run on January 19, 1969, that was hijacked to Cuba. All of the hijackers, age 15 to 25, were convicted in Ecuadorian court.

Pedro Moreno: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Emilio Hellin Moro: Spanish citizen ordered extradited on October 25, 1989, by a lower court in Paraguay which stated that no political crime had been committed. Interpol agents had detained him in August 1989 on charges of murdering Yolanda Gonzalez, a student who belonged to a leftist party in Spain. He was also charged with membership in an ultra-rightist gang. He had been sentenced to 34 years in prison for the murder.

Osman Morote: deputy chief of the Maoist Shining Path arrested by counterinsurgency police at a house in downtown Lima on June 12, 1988. He was a relative of Maximiliano Durand Araujo, believed by a Lima senator to head the group's Paris office.

Ostad Morote Barrioneuvo: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993, and fined up to 1 billion soles.

Erik Morris: Colombian representative whose arrest was ordered on November 9, 2006, for alleged ties to one of the country's far-right paramilitary groups. His name was found in the computer of a deputy to paramilitary leader Rodrigo Tovar Pupo.

John Hamilton Morrow: would-be hijacker of Trans World Airlines Flight 329, a B727 flying from Kansas City to Las Vegas on July 4, 1968. He was in the custody of U.S. marshals and told the stewardess that he would use dynamite to blow up the plane if it did not fly to Mexico. He pleaded guilty to charges of escape and sentenced on June 16, 1969, to an additional five years to run consecutively with his current sentence.

Amancio Mosqueda Fernandez: alias el Yarey. Radio Havana claimed that he and 4 members of his 10-man group of infiltrators were executed by firing squad, perhaps in May 1969 or December 1969, and that the others received 20-year sentences. He was a member of Cuban Representation in Exile, an anti-Castro exile group.

Israel Motta da Silva: one of two assassins of De-lorme Mehu, Haiti’s ambassador to Brazil, who was gunned down in Salvador, Brazil, on July 3, 1977. The assassins claimed that they were hired by Haitian Embassy first secretary Louis Robert Mackenzie, who denied their charges.

Vitalmiro Moura: alias Bida. Variants Vitalmiro Goncalves de Moura, Vitalmiro Bastos de Moura. Brazilian rancher named on an arrest warrant issued on February 15, 2005, for the February 12, 2005, killing of Sister Dorothy Stang, age 74. Stang was an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary of the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. She was shot to death by two gunmen in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para State, Brazil. Moura turned himself in to federal police in Altamira, Colombia, on March 27. He told police that he was not involved in the murder, although the two suspected gunmen told a judge that Moura told them to kill Stang. Prosecutors said Moura offered Neves and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista $25,000 to kill Stang. On May 15, 2007, the Brazilian rancher was convicted of ordering Stang’s killing. Judge Raymond Moises Alves Flexa sentenced him to 30 years in prison, saying he “showed a violent personality unsuited to living in society” and that the killing was conducted in a “violent and cowardly manner.” The gunman, his accomplice, and go-between Amair Feijoli da Cunha recanted earlier testimony that Moura had offered them $25,000 for the hit. Regivaldo Pereira Galvão, a local rancher and accused accomplice, is yet to be tried.

Roberto Bolanos Moyano Albert: arrested on March 29, 1983, by Colombian Army troops in Morelia. He was a leader of the Finance Committee of the 10th Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia.

Italo Marcelo Abelardo Moyas Canilla: one of six suspected members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested and charged with arms smuggling on August 11, 1986, in connection with the discovery of a huge arms cache in Corral Bay near El Carrizal Bajo, Chile. The cache included 338 U.S. M-16 rifles used in the Vietnam War, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades, 315 Katyusha rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kilograms of U.S. and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, and 124 kilograms of plastic explosives.

‘Imad Fayiz Mughniyah: variants Imad Fayeze Mughniyah, Imad Fa’iz Mughniyah, Imad Mughniyeh, Muqniyah; aliases Imad Fayiz, Imad Fa’iz, Jahh, Haj, al-Haj, Haji Rudwan, The Fox. Head of the security apparatus for Lebanese Hizballah and indicted for his role in planning and participating in the June 14, 1985, hijacking of a TWA commercial airliner that resulted in assaults on various passengers and crew members and the murder of one U.S. citizen. He is wanted for conspiracy to commit aircraft piracy, to commit hostage taking, to commit air piracy resulting in murder, to interfere with a flight crew, to place a destructive device aboard an aircraft, to have explosive devices about the person on an aircraft, and to assault passengers and crew.

He claimed to have been born in Tîr Dibba in southern Lebanon in 1962. He was circa five feet seven inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He studied engineering briefly at the American University of Beirut. He joined Fatah in his teens, serving in Yasser Arafat’s Force 17 security unit. He joined several Shi’ite radical groups in Lebanon, helping to form the Islamic Jihad Organization, a terrorist wing of Hizballah. He may have had contacts with Osama bin Laden, meeting him once in the 1990s.

He was involved in the kidnapping of U.S. hostages in Lebanon in the 1980s, the 1983 bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut in which 63 people died, and the 1984 kidnapping and murder of Chief of Station–Beirut William Buckley. An Iranian intelligence defector told the Germans that Mughniyah joined Iranian diplomats in organizing the July 1994 bombing of a Jewish community center in Buenos Aires that killed 85 people. The Argentines wanted him for the March 17, 1992, bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, in which 23 died. He was believed to be behind the 1983 bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks in Beirut that killed 241 U.S. soldiers and behind the kidnappings of six Americans and five French citizens. He was believed behind the June 17, 1987, kidnapping in Beirut of Charles Glass, a former ABC Television News and Newsweek reporter, of 'Ali 'Usayran, son of defense minister Adel 'Usayran, and of their driver, police officer Ali Sulayman. U.S. officials believed he was one of the April 5, 1988, hijackers of Kuwait Airlines Flight 422, a B747 flying from Bangkok to Kuwait that was diverted to Mashhad, Iran.

Mughniyah was taken into custody on November 16, 1992. On April 19, 1993, his trial began at the 29th Grand Criminal bench of the Berlin Regional Court regarding the bombing of the West Berlin La Belle Disco on April 5, 1986. The stateless Palestinian pleaded not guilty to charges of planning attacks on members of the U.S. military.

On April 7, 1995, the FBI went to Saudi Arabia to arrest him for the 1983 truck bombing of the U.S. Marine barracks in Lebanon that killed 241 servicemen, the 1985 TWA hijacking, and numerous kidnappings and bombings against Westerners in the 1980s. However, the Saudis did not permit his Middle East Airlines B707 to land for a scheduled stopover in Jeddah on its way from Khartoum, where he was attending an Islamic conference, to Beirut.

His brother-in-law, Mustafa Badreddin, was one of 17 prisoners held for years in Kuwaiti prisons for a series of 1983 bombings and was believed to have been the explosives expert involved in the 1983 Marine barracks bombing. U.S. hostages were abducted in Lebanon to obtain the prisoners' release after Badreddin was sentenced to death. He was freed during the 1990 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Mughniyah was 1 of 10 Shi'ite Muslims identified in November 17, 1992, by the Lebanese newspaper Nida' al-Watan as suspected of instigating the kidnappings of U.S. hostages William Buckley, William Higgins, and Peter Kilburn.

On September 2, 1999, the Argentine Supreme Court issued an arrest warrant for planning the March 17, 1992, bombing of the Israeli Embassy. Evidence backing the warrant included handwriting from Hizballah representatives on documents associated with the purchase of the truck used in the bombing.

In mid-February, Israel claimed that Mughniyah had purchased the arms carried by the Karine, a cargo ship that was boarded by Israeli Navy commanders on January 3, 2002, in the Red Sea. They found 50 tons of weapons, including Katyusha rockets, antitank missiles, mortars, mines, and sniper rifles believed originating in Iran and headed for the Palestinian Authority. The weapons were in quantities banned by the 1993 Peace Accords. Israel said interrogation of the 13 crewmen determined that the arms smuggling was coordinated by Lebanese Hizballah.

U.S. Rewards for Justice offered $5 million for his arrest and conviction.

In January 2006, Mughniyah allegedly traveled with Iranian president Mahmoud Ahmadinejad to Damascus to meet with Hizballah secretary-general Hassan Nasrallah, Palestinian Islamic Jihad leader Ramadan Abdullah Shallah, Hamas leader Khaled Meshaal, and Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine–General Command leader Ahmed Jibril. He may have organized the kidnapping of an Israeli soldier that led to the Israel–Hizballah War in summer 2006.

Mughniyah was killed in an explosion in a Mitsubishi Pajero in Tantheem Kafer Souseh, an upscale residential section of Damascus, Syria, on February 12, 2008. Israel denied responsibility.

Imad Mughniyeh: variant of Imad Fayiz Mughniyah.

'Abd-Rabbuh 'Ali Muhammad: alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

Ahmad 'Asad Muhammad: aliases Salim 'Abd al-'Aziz, Salim. Lebanese among three Abu Nidal members arrested by Peruvian police on July 16, 1988, for the EgyptAir hijacking of November 24, 1986, as well as the December 1986 Rome and Vienna airport attacks. The trio was trying to form links with Shining Path. They also planned to attack the Jewish Synagogue of Peru, the Israeli Embassy in Lima, the U.S. Consulate, the Shalom Travel Agency, and national and international maritime transportation companies. Peruvian police planned to expel the trio in early August 1988 for breaking immigration laws.

Khalid Sheikh Muhammad: variant Khalid Sheikh Mohammed; aliases Muktar Balucci, The Brain. Conceptualized the 1990s Bojinka plan to bomb a dozen American planes and of the 9/11 attacks. Born in 1965 in Pakistan, son of two Baluchistan immigrants, and an ethnic Pakistani, Muhammad's parents moved to Kuwait, where he grew up. One of his brothers joined the Muslim Brotherhood in the 1980s and invited Muhammad to join. In 1983, Muhammad obtained a visa to study at Chowan College in Murfreesboro, North Carolina. He graduated from North Carolina State Agricultural and Technical State University in 1986. He later surfaced in Afghanistan and moved to Peshawar, where he met Osama bin Laden. He was arrested on March 1, 2003, in Rawalpindi, Pakistan.

In March 2003, Tunis issued a warrant for the arrest of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed for his role in the truck bombing on April 11, 2002, that killed 19 people in a synagogue in Djerba, Tunisia.

At the beginning of his trial with 13 other detainees in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, on March 10, 2007, he said that he was responsible for 30 planned and actual terrorist attacks, including 9/11. "I was responsible for the 9/11 operation from A to Z." He also claimed credit for the following:

- 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center, carried out by his nephew Ramzi Yousef
- November 2003 attacks in Istanbul against U.K. and Israeli targets that killed 57 and wounded 700
- attempted downing of a transatlantic aircraft by shoe bomber Richard Reid
- 2002 bombing of a Kenya beach resort frequented by Israelis
- failed 2002 missile attack on an Israeli passenger jet at Mombasa, Kenya
- 2002 bombing of two nightclubs in Bali, Indonesia, that killed 202
- 2002 shooting to death of a U.S. Marine in Kuwait's Fikla Island
- planned attacks against U.S. nuclear power plants; suspension bridges in New York; U.S. embassies in Indonesia, Australia, and Japan; Israeli embassies in India, Azerbaijan, the Philippines, and Australia; U.S. naval vessels and oil tankers around the world; an oil company he claimed was owned by former secretary of state Henry Kissinger on Sumatra, Indonesia; the Sears Tower in Chicago; the Empire State Building; the New York Stock Exchange; the Library Tower (now known as the U.S. Bank Building) in Los Angeles; the Plaza Bank in Washington State; the Panama Canal; Big Ben; and London's Heathrow Airport
- planned assassination attempts against former presidents Carter and Clinton
- assassination attempts against Pope John Paul II and Pakistani president Pervez Musharraf
- supervising the "cell for the production of biological weapons, such as anthrax and others, and following up on dirty-bomb operations on American soil"
- personally beheading Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl in February 2002: "I decapitated with my blessed right hand the head of the American Jew Daniel Pearl in the city of Karachi, Pakistan. For those who would like to confirm, there are pictures of me on the Internet holding his head”

- plotting to blow up a dozen airliners heading from the Philippines and other locations in Asia to the United States
- plotting to blow up a flight from London to the United States
- planned attacks on U.S. military vessels in the Straits of Hormuz, Gibraltar, and the Port of Singapore
- planned hijackings of planes leaving Saudi Arabia to crash them into buildings in Eilat, Israel
- sending fighters into Israel to conduct surveillance
- surveilling U.S. nuclear power plants
- planned attack against North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters in Brussels, Belgium
- planned attacks against Israeli passenger jets at Bangkok Airport
- planned attacks against U.S. military bases and nightclubs in South Korea

He did not claim credit for the August 1998 bombings of two U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, the USS Cole bombing in October 2000 in Yemen, or the attack on the U.S. Consulate in Pakistan in June 2002. Many observers doubted that he was this active, suggesting that it would deflect attention away from the true planners.

On September 6, 2006, President Bush announced that the last 14 detainees would be transferred from secret foreign prisons to the military detention facility at Guantánamo Bay. The group was identified as Abu Zubaydah, Khalid Sheikh Mohammed, Ramzi Binalshibh, Mustafa Ahmad al-Hawsawi, Hambali, Majid Khan, Lillie, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, Ahmed Khalfan Ghailani, Abd al-Rahim al-Nashiri, Abu Faraj al-Libi, Zubair, Walid bin Attash, and Gouled Hassan Dourad.

On August 9, 2007, the Pentagon declared him an enemy combatant, a legal status which permitted the military authorities to hold him indefinitely at the detention center and put him on trial for war crimes.

On February 11, 2008, the Pentagon announced that it would seek the death penalty in the war crimes charges of six individuals detained at Guantánamo and believed to have planned the 9/11 attacks: Khalid Sheikh Muhammad, Ramzi bin al-Shibh, Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali alias Ammar al-Baluchi, Mohammed al-Qahtani, Mustafa Ahmed al-Hawsawi, and Walid bin Attash alias Khallad. The six were charged with conspiracy, murder in violation of the laws of war, attacking civilians, attacking civilian objects, intentionally causing bodily injury, destruction of property, terrorism, and material support for terrorism. Muhammad, bin Attash, Binalshibh, and Ali were also charged with hijacking or hazarding an aircraft. His defense team included Navy reserve judge advocate Gen. Prescott L. Prince, Army Lt. Col. Michael Acuff, and civilian attorneys Scott McKay and David Nevin.

At his June 5, 2008, arraignment before the military commission at Guantánamo, he said he wanted to represent himself and wanted to become a martyr. The formal opening of the trial was scheduled for September 18, 2008.

Ayerbe Mujica: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Jose Mujica: secretary-general of the Uruguayan National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) in 1986. On February 15, 2005, Mujica, age 69, who had been imprisoned in a deep well for seven years, was sworn in as the chair of the Senate and was slated to become minister of agriculture.

El Sa'id Hassan Ali Mohamed Mukhlis: Egyptian living in Ciudad del Este, Paraguay, who was arrested on January 29, 1999, by Montevideo, Uruguay, police. He was tied to Egypt's Islamic Group and was en route to Europe to meet with an al Qaeda cell. He was believed to be a member of an Egyptian militant group that wants to establish a Muslim state in Egypt. Mukhlis was picked up attempting to enter the country from Brazil on a false Malaysian passport. London Sunday Times claimed that based upon intercepted phone calls, authorities believed he was about to fly to London to form a terrorist cell that would conduct attacks against the British embassies in Paris and Brussels. He was suspected of involvement in the 1997 Gama'at massacre of 58 tourists in Luxor. He faced extradition to Cairo on murder charges.

Mukhlis had lived in Brazil for five years. He took his wife and their three children, all under age five, to the border. They were all carrying false Malaysian passports. They arrived in Chui, a border town on the Atlantic coast, and checked into a hotel. He told neighbors he had lived in Brazil for ten years, yet he knew no Portuguese.

Mullagy: variant Muyugi. Leader of the six to eight Indians of the former anti-Sandinista Yatama who, on July 2, 1994, kidnapped four U.S. citizens fishing in Caribbean waters near Cape Gracias a Dios on the northeastern tip of Nicaragua. The group included Miskito, Sumu, and Rama Indian and Creole groups. He was believed to be from Santa Marta.

Pilar Munos Ramos: one of two hijackers of a Mexicana de Aviacion DC6 flying the Mexico City–Minatitlan–Veracruz–Villahermosa–Tabasco run on July 26, 1969, that was diverted to Havana, Cuba.

Edith Munoz: one of two journalists arrested on April 18, 1994, in Bolivia on charges of having ties to Zarate Willka Armed Liberation Front terrorists and being involved in the killing of American Mormons, including a woman, a few years before. Munoz was arrested when police found at her house the jeep that was used when the Mormons were murdered.

Gloria Juliet Munoz: companion of William Mejia, a leader of an April 19 Movement of Colombia cell who planned to kill U.S. ambassador to Colombia Charles Gillespie. The plot was discovered but they escaped the police raid on March 21, 1987.

Manuel Jesus Munoz: alias Ivan Rios. Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia commander killed by his followers in early March 2008 in a mountainous, coffee-growing region in north central Colombia. The rebels severed his hand and presented it, his ID card, and a computer to an army column. The United States had offered $5 million for his arrest on drug trafficking charges.

Pablo Munoz: one of four members of the leftist Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chile who, on December 30, 1996, escaped a high security prison via helicopter. The foursome jumped into a basket dangling from the helicopter during a gun battle between guards and the helicopter's team. The helicopter was rented at a Santiago airfield by three women who appeared to be from the United States and two Argentine-accented men. Prison director Claudio Martinez resigned. Police later found the helicopter and a getaway car with two M-16 rifles in a park in southern Santiago.

Sergio Munoz Cadaval: French-born Chilean citizen and one of three deserters from the Juan de Austria regiment of the Spanish Foreign Legion who on August 5, 1979, drove onto the Puerto Rosario, Fuerteventura, Canary Islands airport runway in a stolen police jeep and took over an Iberian Airlines DC9 that was unloading passengers from Las Palmas, Gran Canaria Island. They demanded to be flown to Morocco, Algeria, and then to Lisbon, Portugal. They later asked to go to Bordeaux, France, and then to Zimbabwe-Rhodesia. They flew to Geneva, Switzerland, where they surrendered. Spain said it would not request extradition. The Swiss government said it would charge them with deprivation of liberty and blackmail, which carried maximum sentences of 20 years.

'Ali al-Muqdad: Hizballah member and one of three terrorists reported by Paraguay's Noticias on August 31, 1994, to have entered the country on August 27, 1994, to conduct a bombing against the Jewish community in Buenos Aires, Argentina. They were to travel from Barcelona, Spain, via Hungary and Germany to Rio de Janeiro or São Paulo, Brazil, then to Foz do Iguacu, Brazil, or Asuncion, Paraguay, and then to Ciudad del Este, Paraguay, then onward with their explosives to Buenos Aires for a September 3 attack.

Ivan Dario Murcia Reyes: arrested on August 21, 1983, by the Colombian secret police and charged in the March 7, 1983, kidnapping of Kenneth Stanley Bishop, a U.S. executive of the Texas Petroleum Company in Colombia. His driver and bodyguard were killed. Murcia was also charged with the July 23, 1982, kidnapping and murder of Gloria Lara de Echeverri, a Liberal political leader.

Marcos Murga Zelada: member of the Peruvian Maoist Shining Path who was captured by the army during clashes with the American Battalion in the mountains of Cauca Department and later deported by Colombia on August 17, 1986.

Diego Fernando Murillo: alias Don Berna. Leader of a Colombian right-wing paramilitary group in 2004. He was one of 13 senior paramilitary leaders of the right-wing United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia extradited to the United States on May 13, 2008. They had been accused of ordering the murders of thousands of people, including peasants, leftist politicians, journalists, and union activists. While in Colombian jails, they ran a cocaine trafficking organization.

Esteban Murillo Zubiri: alias Jose Azcona Uriz. Basque Nation and Liberty member who was denied extradition to Spain on April 3, 1991, by Mexican 10th District Court Judge Luis Perez de la Fuente, saying that he would be politically persecuted. He was sentenced to nine months in a Mexican prison for violating the general law and using false documents. The judge said he could obtain temporary release by posting a bail of 10 million pesos.

Orlando Murillo Gonzalez: Nicaraguan whose release from Costa Rican prison was demanded by the five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism—Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981.

Jeffrey Murphy: one of three men who chartered an Atlantic Aero Cessna to fly from Greensboro, North Carolina, to Atlanta, Georgia, on October 7, 1975. Shortly after takeoff, one of the men pulled a .22 caliber revolver and demanded to fly to Cuba. After a refueling stop, the plane landed in Florida. Two of the hijackers walked away from the plane, while the third went with his hostage to the airport. Authorities were alerted and the hijacker surrendered to police. The other two were subsequently apprehended. Prosecution against him was declined on January 7, 1976.

Muhammad Amad Mustafa: one of three Lebanese arrested on July 28, 1994, by Costa Rican police in David, Panama, when they tried to cross the Panamanian border into Costa Rica with false passports. They were suspected of involvement in the suicide bombing of ALAS Flight HP-1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer on July 19, 1994, that killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen, shortly after the plane left Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit.

Myrna: one of 20 members of the Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms in Guatemala who died on August 9, 1984, in a shootout with the Guatemalan Army in San Pablo, San Marcos Department.

N

---

Luis Alberto Nader: one of six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 29 and injured 252 and the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli facility in Buenos Aires. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. He was arrested on January 30, 1995, in Paraguay. He had lived with fellow detainee Johnny Moraes Baalbaki in Italy but had temporary residence in Fox do Iguacu. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. He was believed to be a Brazilian of Lebanese origin and a contact of the Cali cocaine cartel in Italy and Russia. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River delta. They were extradited from Paraguay on July 23, 1995, in connection with the discovery of an arsenal near Buenos Aires. They were released on July 27, 1995, in Argentina.

Fernando Paulo Nagle Gabeira: variant Fernando Nagle Bageira. Former newsman and Brazilian Revolutionary Movement of the 8th member who pleaded guilty to the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. Nagle's release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of Action for National Liberation and the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum.

Raymond Napoleon: leader of the five National Anti-Duvalierist Movement members who kidnapped U.S. ambassador to Haiti Clinton E. Knox on January 23, 1973. He was joined as a hostage by U.S. consul general Ward L. Christensen. The group demanded the release of 30 prisoners and $1 million. The French ambassador negotiated the kidnappers down to 12 prisoners and $70,000. The U.S. government refused a demand of $500,000. It was unclear who paid the ransom, but the hostages were released after 18 hours of captivity. The kidnappers flew with the released prisoners to Mexico, which granted the group asylum but confiscated the money. The group continued on to Chile, which granted them transit visas.

Erasmio Narvaez: the Upala Canton, Costa Rica, home of Nicaraguans Erasmio and his brother Santos Narvaez was raided on June 28, 1994, in connection with the arrest of Miguel Gustavo Ricoy, a Zapatista National Liberation Army guerrilla. Security forces found 11 assault rifles and a .38 caliber gun.

Ruben Narvaez: schoolteacher from the Arauca, Colombia, region near the border with Venezuela who was arrested on March 22, 1981, in connection with the January 19, 1981, kidnapping and murder by a dissident faction of the April 19 Movement of Colombia of Bible translator Chester Allen Bitterman.

Santos Narvaez: the Upala Canton, Costa Rica, home of Nicaraguans Santos and his brother Erasmo Narvaez was raided on June 28, 1994, in connection with the arrest of Miguel Gustavo Ricoy, a Zapatista National Liberation Army guerrilla. Security forces found 11 assault rifles and a .38 caliber gun.

F. Navarrette: one of four hijackers, including three Brazilians and one Mexican, who hijacked a Mexicana de Aviacion B727 on the Cozumel–Merida–Mexico City run on May 24, 1970, and diverted it to Cuba.

Antonio Jose Navarro Wolfe: alias Commander Cinco. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba. He was also involved in the May 29, 1988, M-19 kidnapping of Alvaro Gomez Hurtado as he was leaving Bogota's Chico Church, Hurtado was twice presidential candidate of the opposition Conservative Party.

Antonio Navarro Payano: Dominican Republic-born hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 9, a DC8 flying from New York to Miami on January 19, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. He was living in the Dominican Republic on May 9, 1970, and was scheduled to stand trial there. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of New York on June 16, 1970.

Edgar Gustavo Navarro: alias El Mocho. Second in command of an elite Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia unit who was killed in a gunfight near San Vicente del Caguan on October 19, 2003. He was believed to be behind the February 13, 2003, capture of three Americans whose plane crashed while working on an antidrug program.

Juan Eduardo Navarro: engineer released on bail on January 14, 1987, after being held for three months in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Franklin Navas Chinchilla: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Carlos Della Nave: the Argentine government claimed that he was being "processed for common crimes" and would not be released because he was in the hands of a federal court in San Martin, Buenos Aires, Argentina, when the Armed Forces of Liberation (FAL) of Argentina kidnapped Joaquin Waldemar Sanchez, Paraguay's consul in Buenos Aires, on March 24, 1970. FAL demanded that Della Nave and another political prisoner be released. FAL ultimately released the hostage without obtaining the prisoner release.

Mohammed Nawaz: one of four Pakistanis suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They were arrested by the Argentine federal police anti-terrorist brigade on March 21, 1992. Chemical tests on their clothing indicated the presence of suspicious substances. They were released on March 28, 1992, for lack of evidence, but the charges had not been dropped.

El Nego: alias of Marcos Gomez.

La Negra: alias of Amparo Afanador Soto.

Manuel Negrin: Argentine People's Revolutionary Army (ERP) member arrested on April 19, 1972, by police in San Javier, Tucuman Province, in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by ERP's Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The "people's prison" was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro.

El Negro: alias of Jorge Ivan Rojas Sanchez.

El Negro Acacia: alias of Tomas Medina.

Nelson: alias of Eduardo Sancho Castaneda.

Alvarino Nelson-Gonzalez: one of four Cubans from the Freedom Flotilla arrested by Tampa, Florida, police on August 15, 1980, as they were attempting to board Eastern Airlines Flight 116 to Miami carrying bottles filled with flammable liquid. There had been a spate of hijackings to Cuba that month.

Neto: alias of Jose Armando Lovos.

Rayfran das Neves Sales: variant Raifran das Neves Sales. Confessed on February 22, 2005, to shooting Sister Dorothy Stang, age 74. Stang was an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary from the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. She was shot to death by two gunmen in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para State, Brazil, on February 12, 2005. Neves named others in the contract killing. On February 24, he reenacted the crime for police. On June 22, 2005, a federal grand jury in Washington, D.C., indicted Neves and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista for Stang's murder, conspiracy to murder a U.S. citizen outside the United States, and using a firearm in commission of a crime. On December 9, 2005, Neves told the jury that he acted in self-defense; he thought Stang's Bible was a gun. He and Stang had argued over who owned the land he was working. Neves said that Stang said she would "finish him off" with the help of 150 people living in the sustainable development reserve. Prosecutors said rancher Vitalmiro Moura offered Neves and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista $25,000 to kill Stang. On December 10, Neves and Batista were convicted of killing Stang. Neves was sentenced to 27 years; accomplice Batista received 17 years. During his October 22, 2007, retrial for the shooting of Stang, defendant Neves said he shot her out of fear and rage. Brazil requires a retrial for sentences longer than 20 years. Two ranchers hired him to kill her in a dispute over forest they wanted to clear cut for pasture.

Huey P. Newton: cofounder in 1966 of the Black Panther Party. He was shot to death on August 22, 1989, in Oakland by Tyrone "Double R" Robinson, who thought it was a way to advance in the Black Guerrilla Family, a narcotics distribution gang operating in California's maximum security prisons. Newton and Bobby Seale founded the party as a way of instilling pride in young black men and guard against alleged brutality by the Oakland police. In 1967, Newton was jailed in the shooting of an Oakland police officer. His conviction for manslaughter was overturned on appeal. He served 2 years of the 2- to 15-year sentence. In 1974, he was charged in the shooting death of an Oakland prostitute. He skipped bail and fled to Cuba.

Newton returned three years later to face two trials. At the time, he was working toward a doctorate in the History of Consciousness program at the University of California at Santa Cruz. Neither jury reached a verdict. In 1987, he served nine months of a two-year sentence on an illegal firearms charge. In 1989, he was arrested for cocaine possession and imprisoned for violating parole. In May, he pleaded nolo contendere to a charge of embezzling state funds earmarked for a community school operated in Oakland by the Panthers. More than 2,000 mourners attended his funeral on August 28, 1989.

David Niehous: apparently involved in the kidnapping of Venezuela Congress president Gonzalo Barrios in 1974, Niehous was arrested on July 20, 1976, in Venezuela. His relationship to William Niehous, president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela, was unclear. William Niehous was kidnapped by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos—Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976.

Terrance Jamison Niemeyer: would-be hijacker of Texas International Airlines Flight 669, a CV600 flying from Alexandria, Louisiana, to New Orleans on May 30, 1969. Niemeyer was a prisoner being transported by law enforcement officers. He handed a note to a flight attendant saying he had a grenade and wanted to go to Cuba. The plane landed in New Orleans. On April 15, 1971, charges against him were dismissed due to insanity. He was committed to a state mental institution and released on probation on October 10, 1973.

Luie Nijmeh: one of four members of the Abu Nidal group jailed on April 1, 1993, by St. Louis police for planning to blow up the Israeli Embassy and murder Jews. He was listed in the indictment as having discussed blowing up the Israeli Embassy. He had received his instructions in Mexico in 1987. His brother Saif was held on similar charges. In July 1994, he pleaded guilty to federal racketeering charges of smuggling money and information, buying weapons, recruiting members, illegally obtaining passports, and obstructing investigations and helping plot terrorist attacks. On November 22, 1994, U.S. District Judge Donald Stohr sentenced him to 21 months in prison. With credit for time served, he was due to be released in January 1995. Jewish groups protested, noting that he was eligible for 20 years and a $250,000 fine.

Saif Nijmeh: one of four members of the Abu Nidal group jailed on April 1, 1993, by St. Louis police for planning to blow up the Israeli Embassy and murder Jews. He was listed in the indictment discussing a rocket-propelled grenade launcher he had obtained. He had received his instructions in Mexico in 1987. His brother, Luie, was held on similar charges. In July 1994, he pleaded guilty to federal racketeering charges of smuggling money and information, buying weapons, recruiting members, illegally obtaining passports, and obstructing investigations and helping plot terrorist attacks. On November 22, 1994, U.S. District Judge Donald Stohr sentenced him to 21 months in prison. With credit for time served, he was due to be released in January 1995. Jewish groups protested, noting that he was eligible for 20 years and a $250,000 fine.

Ariel Rodolfo Nitzcaner: on August 9, 1994, Argentine judge Galleano ordered criminal proceedings against Nitzcaner for illegal replacement of a car engine in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. Police believed he had sold a Renault van used in the bombing. His assets were confiscated up to 30,000 pesos. The judge confirmed his release.

Maria Nivense: name used by one of the members of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front when buying tickets to hijack a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua. The hijackers requested political asylum in Cuba.

Raul Nivense: name used by one of the members of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front when buying tickets to hijack a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua. The hijackers requested political asylum in Cuba.

Edwin Noel: one of three armed Haitian soldiers who, on October 1, 1988, hopped the fence surrounding the airport and forced their way on board American Airlines Flight 658, scheduled to fly from Port-au-Prince to New York. The trio surrendered their assault rifles to the crew shortly after takeoff. The plane landed at JFK International Airport, where the trio was taken into custody. They requested political asylum. All three were former members of the security forces at Port-au-Prince Airport.

Catalina Noguera Garcia: pregnant sister of Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN) commander Elias and one of three female FSLN members arrested on July 4, 1981, by Costa Rican Civil Guards. The group planned to take over the Guatemalan Embassy to obtain the release of political prisoners.

Leslie Norbregas: pilot who diverted his Cubana plane to the United States on July 5, 1960.

Nicolas Normil: one of three armed Haitian soldiers who, on October 1, 1988, hopped the fence surrounding the airport and forced their way on board American Airlines Flight 658, scheduled to fly from Port-au-Prince to New York. The trio surrendered their assault rifles to the crew shortly after takeoff. The plane landed at JFK International Airport, where the trio was taken into custody. They requested political asylum. All three were former members of the security forces at Port-au-Prince Airport.

Miguel Northufster: aliases Gonzalo, Raul, Gringo, Largo Miguel. Terrorist of Italian-German origin who was killed on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca-Cola company, who had been abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz. The kidnappers killed their hostage.

Northufster arrived in Bolivia as a member of the Cochabamba Greater Seminar to avoid military service. He was a leader of the leftist Nestor Paz Zamora Committee. Police identified him when they found the car used in the attack on the U.S. Marines on October 10, 1990. The car was abandoned with documents inside.

On December 29, 1990, the La Paz press reported that he had masterminded operations of the Nestor Paz Zamora Committee but did not directly participate in most of them.

Mr. and Mrs. William Norton: Los Angeles couple arrested on June 11, 1986, by Le Havre, France, police when they took possession of a van shipped from California aboard a Panamanian ship. The van carried 2 machine guns, 12 assault rifles, 23 handguns, and 2,200 cartridges intended for the Irish National Liberation Army. The couple was planning to drive the van to Ireland.

Guillermo and Ignacio Novo Sampol: Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations leader Orlando Bosch claimed that these two Cuban American brothers placed a bomb that exploded in Washington, D.C., on September 21, 1976, killing Orlando Letelier, the Chilean ambassador to the United States during Salvador Allende's administration, and Ronni Karpen Moffitt, an administrative assistant at the Trans National Institute, a division of the Institute for Policy Studies. Bosch said the Novos planted the bomb as a favor to the Chilean junta.

On September 15, 1980, the U.S. Court of Appeals overturned their convictions in the Letelier case, ordering new trials for the two men convicted of murder. On May 30, 1981, a federal appeals court acquitted Guillermo of charges of murder and conspiracy in the Letelier case but convicted him of two counts of making false declarations to a federal grand jury. On April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced Guillermo to seven years for endangering public safety in connection with the November 2000 plot to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro in Panama City.

Commander Nueve: alias of Carmenza Cardona Londono.

Number 30: alias of Carlos Arturo Sandoval.

Francisco Nunez: Venezuelan arrested on October 14, 1976, by Venezuelan authorities in connection with the October 6, 1976, bombing of Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. See also Orlando Bosch, Freddy Lugo, Luis Posada Carriles, and Hernan Ricardo Losano.

Jose Nunez: one of 120 members of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

Teresa Nunez de Mendoza: one of five Cuban hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 73, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, and diverted to Cuba on November 23, 1968. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and three small children believed related to one of the hijackers. The group was indicted on March 10, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the Western District of Kentucky. As of 1979, they remained at large.

O

---

Inocente Oaxaca Fernandez: Salvadoran who was slightly injured during his kidnapping with a colleague on February 21, 1978, of Manuel Luna Uzkuiname, a Bolivian economist and advisor to the United Nations in San Salvador, while he was driving to a meeting with a San Salvador private company. Luna managed to escape by disarming one man and forcing the driver of his car to crash in front of a patrol car near a police station. Police arrested Oaxaca.

Victor Obarrio Camargo: Colombian National Liberation Army kidnapper arrested on January 12, 1984, by F-2 secret police who rescued Lithuanian businessman Algis Mantas Disibiles. The businessman was being held for a $20 million ransom. The six killed or detained were also implicated in the 1983 kidnapping of Jaime Betancur Cuartas, brother of president Belisario Betancur.

Conxales Obregon: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia leader killed by the army on March 12, 1999.

Leonard Malcolm Oeth: hijacker of a Cessna 172 from the United States to Cuba on April 13, 1962. Fidel Castro believed the hijackers were CIA agents and deported them to Miami, Florida, on April 20 1962. They were convicted on November 12, 1964, of aircraft piracy and kidnapping and sentenced to 20 years and 1 year, to run concurrently. Oeth was paroled on December 16, 1968.

Filiberto Ojeda Rios: Puerto Rican separatist alleged to have planned the $7 million robbery of a Wells Fargo West Hartford, Connecticut, depot on September 12, 1983. He was released on $1 million bail on May 21, 1988, after being held for 32 months in pretrial detention. He was indicted for the attack. An appeals court ruled that the detention—longer than any defendant in federal history—violated his constitutional rights. Authorities claimed he was a Cuban agent who wanted to finance Los Macheteros (Boricua Popular Army), a violent independence group which he had founded. On August 26, 1988, he was re-arrested on charges of shooting FBI special agent Abelardo Alba in Puerto Rico during his August 30, 1985, arrest. He had jumped bail while awaiting trial and was convicted and sentenced in absentia in 1992 to 55 years.

On September 23, 2005, the FBI shot to death Ojeda, age 72, after he fired on them while they were trying to arrest him at a farmhouse in the Hormigueros area of western Puerto Rico.

Thomas Okusane-Martinez: Mexican and one of 14 people arrested in Sweden on April 1, 1977, for plotting to kidnap former immigration minister Anna-Grete Leijon and hold her for the release of imprisoned Baader-Meinhof Group members in West Germany. Swedish police claimed that the group had arrived from Cuba and intended to bomb several public facilities and kill prosecutor K. G. Svensson. Okusane-Martinez was one of three Latin Americans sent to Cuba. He reportedly had participated in a 1972 hijacking.

Adolfo Hector Olaechea: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began extradition proceedings for Olaechea from the United Kingdom on terrorism charges. Spain extradited the suspected Shining Path member to Peru later in the year. He was released from custody but ordered to remain in Peru while the public prosecutor prepared the case for trial.

David Olarte: would-be hijacker of an Avianca DC4 flying from Cali to Bogota, Colombia, on July 10, 1969. He wanted to go to Cuba but was overpowered by a flight attendant and other passengers.

Adolfo Oleachea: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad who were sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993, and fined up to 1 billion soles.

Damaris Oliveira Lucena: wife of a Brazil guerrilla leader reported killed on February 20, 1970, by São Paulo police. She was one of five political prisoners whose release was demanded by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard kidnapers of Japanese consul general Nobuo Okuchi in São Paulo on March 11, 1970. She was freed and flew with other released prisoners to Cuba on March 27.

Jose Dirceu de Oliveira e Silva: former president of the National Student Union in Brazil. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. Oliveira was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Yainer Olizares Samon: Olizares, age 21, was one of six knife-wielding Cubans who, on March 19, 2003, hijacked a Cuban Aero Taxi DC3 en route from the Isle of Youth to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida. The group broke down the cockpit door and tied up four crew members with tape and rope. Five of the hijackers had knives. The U.S. military scrambled jet fighters and a U.S. Customs Department Black Hawk helicopter to escort the plane. No injuries were reported. The plane landed at Key West International Airport at 8:06 p.m., where the hijackers surrendered. The six were arraigned on air piracy charges and faced 20 years to life in prison if convicted. The 25 passengers and 6 crew were held at an immigration detention center near Miami. Sixteen of the passengers returned to Cuba on March 22; the others opted to stay in the United States. Cuba demanded the return of the plane, its crew, and all of the passengers, saying it was an "act of terrorism." Cuba later said U.S. prosecution would be acceptable. Reports were unclear on the nationality of the passengers. One report said no passengers were Cuban and that one was Italian.

On August 7, 2003, U.S. magistrate judge John O'Sullivan said confessions by Neudis Infantes Hernandez and Yainer Olivares Samon should not be used at trial because the FBI did not give them their Miranda warnings immediately. Edited summaries of the confessions of their four colleagues could be used in the September trial. Prosecutors were given 10 days to respond to his ruling.

On December 11, 2003, the six Cuban defendants were convicted after jurors were not persuaded that it was a "freedom flight" undertaken with the crew's cooperation. Conviction entailed a mandatory 20 years, with a possible life sentence. On April 21, 2004, four hijackers were sentenced to 20 years in prison; the plot's leader and his brother received 24 years.

Chris Ana Olson de Oliva: suspected American leftist who threw a hand grenade at police surrounding a house in Argentina on October 19, 1976, where suspicious activity had been reported. The Berkeley, California, resident, age 30, was shot to death by security forces. She was the daughter of Carol Olson, a vice president of Kaiser Industries, who had worked and lived in Cordoba, Argentina, in the 1950s.

Heber Celso Oliva Zelala: Peruvian convicted on January 7, 1994, in Peru of membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement. He was sentenced by a military court to life in prison and fined $50 million. On March 21, 1994, the Special Military Court of the Peruvian Air Force, serving as an appellate court, confirmed the life sentence on charges of high treason. He was involved in the kidnapping of Peruvian entrepreneur Raul Hiraoka Torres and other crimes.

Hossein Shyrh Olya: Iranian armed with a sub-machine gun who hijacked a U.S. commuter plane in Killeen, Texas, and demanded to be flown to Cuba on February 15, 1983. He forced the pilot to land in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, where he turned himself in to the Federal Security Directorate after being promised safe passage. He was flown to Mexico City, where he was indicted on March 4, 1983, for hijacking and hostage taking. The United States requested extradition.

Guillero Arsenio Oporta Reyes: one of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who, on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. As part of a deal that freed the hostages, he arrived on March 22, 1993, in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, where he was taken in National Department of Investigations (DNI) vehicles to DNI Headquarters. The Dominican government had granted him a provisional visa so he could remain in the country under DNI protection. President Joaquín Balaguer granted him asylum.

Juan Andres Ordenes Narvaes: alias Daniel. Mechanic and Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPF) terrorist arrested on April 14, 1989, after murdering a Carabineros noncommissioned officer in Talca, Chile, and confessing to participation in the would-be assassination of Chilean president Augusto Pinochet on September 7, 1986. He had arrived in Talca on April 11. In May 1987, after having participated in several subversive activities, he traveled to Cuba, where he received marksmanship training. He was one of four MRPF members sentenced to life in prison on April 1, 1992, in connection with the Pinochet attack and the attack on the Los Quenes carabineros station in Chile. On November 25, 1992, the Supreme Court unanimously confirmed the sentence.

Mauro Ordonez Ramirez: April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) member arrested in Ecuador. On September 25, 1988, the Ecuadoran National Police and Navy foiled an M-19 plan to attack the San Lorenzo Naval Base thanks to information from Ordonez. He said 100 M-19 members had infiltrated the country and met daily at the no. 12 kilometer marker on the San Lorenzo–Ricaurte Road to plan the attack.

Orlando Ordonez Betancourt: former member of the Honduran Chichonero movement who, on September 23, 1992, kidnapped Costa Rican minister of public security Luis Fishman, Santa Rosa de Copan archbishop Luis Alfonso Santos, Mexican ambassador to Costa Rica Carmen Moreno, and Honduran Department of National Investigations chief Lt. Col. Manuel de Jesus Luna while they were meeting at San Jose, Costa Rica's, Don Bosco Institute. He forced three hostages onto a hijacked twin-engine plane and flew to Tegucigalpa, Honduras, where he requested the protection of the Honduran Catholic Church. He had been imprisoned in Costa Rica for rape but was free on bail. He was wanted in Costa Rica for the rape of two minors. On September 24, 1992, Mexico granted him political asylum. On September 25, Costa Rica said it would request extradition and sent the papers on September 28. Honduras also wanted him extradited. Mexico later rejected the asylum request and gave him 30 days to leave the country. He arrived in Honduras on October 4. On October 6, a Tegucigalpa police chief said that he was a guest of the Vatican.

Erick Orlando Orozco: alias Sergio. One of 20 members of the Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms in Guatemala who died on August 9, 1984, in a shootout with the Guatemalan Army in San Pablo, San Marcos Department.

Pedro Orozco Guzman: gunman wounded by police in a shootout on December 24, 1973. Before he died of his wounds, he confessed to participating in the kidnappings of U.K. honorary consul Anthony Duncan Williams on October 10, 1973, Mexican industrialist Fernando Aranguren, and U.S. consul general to Guadalajara Terrence G. Leonhardy on May 4, 1973, by the People's Revolutionary Armed Forces of Mexico.

Enrique Ortega: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Odoniel Ortega: leader of the Confederation for Unity of Trade Unions who, on May 22, 1982, led four hijackers of a blue and white helicopter of Rodolfo Reeder Escobar from Chinandega Department, Nicaragua, and forced it to fly to Choluteca, Honduras. The foursome was initially reported to be members of the Sandinista People's Army, but the government denied it, saying Ortega had been jailed three times for trying to artificially bankrupt a business. Nicaragua requested extradition.

Pedro Luis Ortega Contreras: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Sergio Ortega Rojas: Cuban who arrived in the United States in the May 1980 Mariel boatlift. He was homesick and, on February 2, 1982, told the crew of Air Florida Flight 710, a B727 flying from Miami for Key West, that he had a gasoline-filled bottle. He diverted the plane to Havana. The Cubans took him into custody.

Atilio Ortiz: one of two hijackers of an Aerolineas Argentinas Comet IV flying from Cordoba to Tucuman to Buenos Aires in Argentina on March 24, 1970, and diverted to Cuba after a repair stop in Lima, Peru.

Carlos Alberto Ortiz: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty, arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrest followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Jairo Ortiz Acosta: one of three National Liberation Army hijackers of an Avianca DC4 flying from Riohacha to Barranquilla, Colombia, on March 5, 1968. They diverted the plane to Cuba.

Jose Ortiz: one of 120 members of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

Laureano Ortiz: mobile unit policeman arrested on March 30, 1990, with three others in connection with the March 27, 1990, kidnapping of American Gerardo Robinson Davila near the Santa Paola neighborhood in the northern part of Cali, Colombia.

Patriocio Ortiz: one of four members of the leftist Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chile who, on December 30, 1996, escaped a high security prison via helicopter. The foursome jumped into a basket dangling from the helicopter during a gun battle between guards and the helicopter's team. The helicopter was rented at a Santiago airfield by three women who appeared to be from the United States and two Argentine-accented men. Prison director Claudio Martinez resigned. Police later found the helicopter and a getaway car with two M-16 rifles in a park in southern Santiago.

Jose de la Cruz Osaga Urbina: one of three hooded members of the National Salvation Democratic Front who, on March 12, 1993, tried to occupy a Radio Mundial studio in Managua, Nicaragua. The takeover was in support of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who, on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. Lopez and the others were arrested after broadcasting a proclamation in support of Jose Manuel Urbina Lara, the leader of the anti-Sandinista gunmen. Lopez and the others were released as part of a negotiated deal with the anti-Sandinista gunmen.

Marcos Osatinsky: Argentine Revolutionary Armed Forces member who flew to Havana, Cuba, on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Commandante Oscar: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia founder who was killed on March 11, 1999, during a raid in Cali, Colombia.

Commandante Oscar: spokesperson of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took credit for the June 17, 1986, machine-gun attack against the motorcade of government minister Jaime Castro in Bogota that led to the death of one police officer and the injury of another.

Dr. Gladys Diaz Ospino de Amortequi: one of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Luis Francisco Otero Cifuentes: alias Commander Tres. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba. He resurfaced as one of three leaders of the 50 members of M-19 who, on November 6, 1985, stormed the Palace of Justice in downtown Bogota and killed 10 Supreme Court justices. He died in the government's rescue attempt.

Rolando Otero: Cuban exile whose thumbprint was found on a locker at Miami International Airport in which a bomb exploded on October 17, 1975. He was convicted of the bombing on January 27, 1977, by a Fort Walton Beach, Florida, jury, which deliberated only one hour in his case, although he was acquitted of eight other bombing charges.

Jean Tony A. Oulai: Ivory Coast pilot, age 34, who was stopped at Jacksonville, Florida's, airport after an airline employee found a stun gun and old flight manuals in his checked luggage. As of November 2001, he was held in federal custody in connection with the Federal Bureau of Investigation's investigation of the 9/11 attacks. He was released as of November 2002.

Shizuo Ozawa: a member of the Brazilian Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR) arrested on February 26, 1970, for bank robbery. He was one of five political prisoners whose release was demanded by the VPR kidnappers of Japanese consul general Nobuo Okuchi in São Paulo on March 11, 1970. He was freed and flew with other released prisoners to Cuba on March 27.

Amelia Noemi Ozorga: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. Her release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released her.

P

---

Jose Antonio Pablo-Lugones: one of two men arrested on August 17, 1980, by Miami International Airport police and believed to be planning to hijack Air Florida Flight 41 en route from Miami to Key West. The duo was carrying a beer bottle full of gasoline. There had been a spate of hijackings to Cuba that month.

Rosemberg Pabon Pabon: identified by the government as Commander Uno, one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. The gunmen ultimately obtained safe haven in Cuba. On July 7, 1980, Panama said it would consider the extradition request for Pabon. On March 19, 1981, Colombia announced his capture after a pitched gun battle. Press reports identified him variously as Carlos Jaime Bateman or lawyer Everth Bustamante Garcia or Ernesto Charry Montealegre, educator and founder of the Trotskyite Worker's Self Defense Movement (Mao).

Argonauta Pacheco da Silva: Brazilian Labor leader and former São Paulo legislator. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Ignacio Pacheco: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Ivan Padilla: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Pierluigi Pagliai: Italian neofascist who died in Bolivia in 1982. He was connected to neofascist terrorist leader Stefano Delle Chiaie.

Enrique Pagoaga Gallastegui: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Mario Pagola Nicolini: one of four Tupamaros or Argentine People's Revolutionary Army members who hijacked an Aerolineas Argentinas B737 flying from Buenos Aires to Salta, Argentina, on October 20, 1973. The group forced the pilot to fly to Tucuman and then to Yacuiba, Bolivia, where they released all but five of the hostages and demanded a smaller plane to fly to Cuba. The group surrendered after two days when Bolivia promised safe passage to Cuba.

Juan Paillacar Soto: Chilean arrested on April 9, 1979, in Italy on suspicion of being the leader of the leftist Revolutionary Action Group.

Salvador Horacio Paino: alleged founder of the Triple A terrorist organization who was arrested in Montevideo, Uruguay, on November 30, 1983. Argentina requested extradition.

Adolfo Palacios: one of five members of a Shining Path “annihilation squad” led by Rosa Ramos Campos. They were arrested on March 4, 1989, by the Antiterrorist Directorate of the Peruvian Police in Tacna, near the Chilean border, in connection with the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement. Palacios was studying at the University of Tacna. He carried documents in the name of Fernando Palau and a journalist’s card issued by the defunct newspaper La Voz under the same name. The real journalist was in La Paz and Bolivian police had mistakenly accused him of the murder.

Rey Palacios: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia leader captured by the army on June 24, 2000.

Fernando Palau: alias of Adolfo Palacios.

Eiraldo Palha Freire: one of four members of Brazilian Action for National Liberation who tried to hijack a Cruzeiro do Sul Caravello flying the Rio de Janeiro–São Paulo–Buenos Aires, Argentina, run. They wanted to go to Cuba, but the wounded pilot flew back to Rio. Police stormed the plane and arrested the hijackers before they made any demands.

Fernando Palha Freire: one of four members of Brazilian Action for National Liberation who tried to hijack a Cruzeiro do Sul Caravello flying the Rio de Janeiro–São Paulo–Buenos Aires, Argentina, run. They wanted to go to Cuba, but the wounded pilot flew back to Rio. Police stormed the plane and arrested the hijackers before they made any demands.

Ricardo Palma: one of four members of the leftist Manuel Rodríguez Patriotic Front of Chile who on December 30, 1996, escaped a high security prison via helicopter. The foursome jumped into a basket dangling from the helicopter during a gun battle between guards and the helicopter’s team. Palma was serving a life sentence for the 1991 assassination of rightist Senator Jaime Guzman. The helicopter was rented at a Santiago airfield by three women who appeared to be from the United States and two Argentine-accented men. Prison director Claudio Martínez resigned. Police later found the helicopter and a getaway car with two M-16 rifles in a park in southern Santiago.

Wladimir Palmeira: former president, age 24, of the Metropolitan Student Union in Rio, arrested in 1968 and sentenced in August 1969 to three years in prison for leading student demonstrations against the government. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Ricardo Palmera: alias Simon Trinidad. Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) commander, age 54, who was arrested on January 2, 2004, by Colombian and Ecuadoran authorities while he was being treated in Quito for leishmaniasis, a parasitic, flesh-eating disease spread by sand flies in Colombian jungles, according to Colombian police. Ecuadoran authorities reported that he was arrested on a Quito street. Palmera was a negotiator in FARC–government talks. He was helicoptered to the border and handed over to Colombian authorities, who had offered an $820,000 reward for his capture.

Palmera was the son of a prominent Colombian lawyer, had done graduate work at Harvard, and was the manager of Banco del Comercio in northeastern Colombia. In 1987, he left his wife and two sons to join FARC; he took several hundred thousand dollars of the bank's money with him.

Palmera became the nominal head of the Caribbean Bloc, who kidnapped and murdered Consuelo Araujo in September 2001. Araujo was the matriarch of a prominent Cesar Province family and a popular former minister of culture. Palmera was a leader of FARC political ideologists who were losing leadership to the military wing. On December 17, 2004, Colombian president Alvaro Uribe signed extradition orders after obtaining Supreme Court approval to send him to New York to face cocaine trafficking charges. President Uribe said he would revoke the decision if FARC released 63 hostages, including 3 Americans captured on February 14, 2003, and a German, before December 30, 2004. Palmera did not make the deadline, and on December 31, 2004, the former banker was sent to the United States to face drug and kidnapping charges.

On November 7, 2006, Palmera told a court that he had never seen the three U.S. hostages he was accused of helping to hold. He said FARC was noble and peaceful. He faced federal charges of providing material support to a terrorist group, conspiracy, and hostage taking. On November 21, 2006, U.S. district judge Thomas F. Hogan declared a mistrial after the jury said a third time that they were deadlocked after five weeks of testimony but only a day of deliberations. The prosecution said it would retry the case. Palmera also faced federal drug charges.

On July 9, 2007, Palmera was convicted in a U.S. federal court of helping to hold the hostages. The U.S. District Court jurors found him guilty of conspiracy to commit hostage taking but split over convicting him on supporting terrorism. The federal judge asked them to keep deliberating on that charge and three counts of hostage taking. He faced 30 years in the hostage case plus a trial on drug charges. On July 10, 2007, a mistrial was declared after the jury deadlocked on the hostage-taking charges and the terrorism support charge after five days of deliberations. On January 28, 2008, he was sentenced to 60 years in prison. The judge called him a terrorist. On May 6, 2008, U.S. prosecutors asked the judge to dismiss the cocaine charges.

Denis Palmieri: Brazilian killed during a Bolivian police raid on a Montoneros safe house on October 1, 1980.

Jose Palomino Sanchez: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Maria Pantoja Sanchez: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Pantalonzon: alias of Ruben Arturo Villarreal.

Enrique Paracohaki: Argentine arrested but later released in connection with the February 1, 1981, explosion of sticks of dynamite in the main plaza of Cuzco, Peru.

Dr. Manuel Pardo: on March 16, 1990, the first prosecutor of the Third Judicial District in Chiriqui Province in Panama ordered his arrest for inciting rebellion against the government and threatening citizens if they attended the San Jose Fair. The leaflets by the 20 December Movement threatened future attacks against Costa Rican president Oscar Arias and Panamanian president Guillermo Endara.

Andres Paris: Senior Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia leader in mid-2002. He was the brother of Jorge Enrique Carvajalino.

Jeff Parker: American believed to be a resident of Miami who was killed on June 20, 1988, when a car bomb he made exploded in the Balboa sector of Mayaguez, Puerto Rico.

Crecencio Parra Zamora: one of three Cuban exiles who hijacked Northeast Airlines Flight 6, a B727 flying from Miami, Florida, to New York City on May 26, 1969, and diverted it to Cuba. Photos of two of the hijackers were found in FBI files. A complaint was filed on May 29, 1969, in the Southern District of Florida. An indictment was handed down on February 18, 1970. As of 1979, the trio remained at large.

Christian Vladimir Parradok: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) dissident who was murdered on the Sumbico, Colombian, path in early May 25, 1985. FARC was suspected.

Juan Jose Partinni: aliases Pepe, Jose Gonzalez. Argentine named by police as a suspect in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastacio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Ali Akbar Parvaresh: on August 9, 1994, Argentine Judge Juan Jose Galeano ordered the Iranian Embassy Third Secretary's arrest in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He left for Iran prior to the blast. On March 8, 2003, Judge Galeano issued a 400-page indictment against four Iranian diplomats, including Parvaresh, accusing them of the 1994 bombing of the AIMA community center that killed 85 people. Parvaresh was a former minister of education and former speaker of the Iranian Majlis (parliament).

Miguel Pascua: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia founder who was killed on March 11, 1999, during a raid in Cali, Colombia.

Rafael Pascual Arias: one of six suspected members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front arrested and charged with arms smuggling on August 11, 1986, in connection with the discovery of a huge arms cache in Corral Bay near El Carrizal Bajo, Chile. The cache included 338 U.S. M-16 rifles used in the Vietnam War, 37 Soviet-made hand grenades, 315 Katyusha rocket launchers, 10,140 detonators, 600 meters of fuse, 1,872 kilograms of U.S. and Soviet explosives, 210,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition, 857 M-16 cartridges, and 124 kilograms of plastic explosives.

Eden Pastora: Sandinista National Liberation Front commander Cero, who led the seizure of the national palace in Managua, Nicaragua, on August 22, 1978. Armed Forces of National Resistance (FARN) members alleged that Pastora had trained them in Costa Rica. These same FARN members were responsible for the August 14, 1978, kidnapping of Kjell Bjork as he left the offices of Dada and Company in San Salvador, El Salvador. Bjork was a Swedish technical director of Telefonica LM Ericsson. Pastora became a naturalized Costa Rican in September 1977.

J. Patino Hormaza: one of four hijackers of an Avianca DC3 flying from Yopal to Sogamoso en Boyaca, Colombia, on May 21, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Otty Patino: third in command of the April 19 Movement of Colombia in June 1988.

Chappin Scott Patterson: would-be hijacker of Western Airlines Flight 328, a B737 flying from San Francisco, California, to Seattle, Washington, on February 25, 1971. Patterson hijacked the plane out of Ontario, California, in an attempt to avoid military service. He wanted to go to Cuba. He settled for Vancouver, Canada, where he surrendered to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. He was ordered deported to the United States on March 2 and returned on March 8, 1971. He was sentenced on June 11, 1971, to 10 years for interference with a flight crew member.

Gwendolin Joyce Patterson: née Manual. One of two hijackers of Trans World Airlines Flight 496, a B727 flying from St. Louis, Missouri, to Miami, Florida, on December 11, 1968, and diverted to Cuba. She and James Joseph Patterson were indicted on October 13, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Georgia.

James Joseph Patterson: one of two hijackers of Trans World Airlines Flight 496, a B727 flying from St. Louis, Missouri, to Miami, Florida, on December 11, 1968, and diverted to Cuba. He and Gwendolin Patterson were indicted on October 13, 1969, by a federal grand jury in the Northern District of Georgia.

Horacio Henrique Paz: brother of Humberto Eduardo Paz. The Argentine brothers were arrested on December 17, 1989, by São Paulo, Brazil, police on charges of the December 11, 1989, kidnapping of multimillionaire businessman Abilio Diniz, director and shareholder of one of the largest economic groups in Brazil, as he was jogging in a São Paulo city park. The kidnappers were believed to be members of Chile's Independence Movement and Revolutionary Left Movement. They demanded an unspecified ransom, an armored vehicle, weapons, and a getaway plane. They were also charged with participating in the attack on the La Tablada barracks in Buenos Aires, Argentina, in January 1989. Police said the duo were members of the Argentine leftist People's Revolutionary Army, whose members were believed to have received urban guerrilla training in Cuba.

Humberto Eduardo Paz: alias Juan; brother of Horacio Henrique Paz. The Argentine brothers were arrested on December 17, 1989, by São Paulo, Brazil, police on charges of the December 11, 1989, kidnapping of multimillionaire businessman Abilio Diniz, director and shareholder of one of the largest economic groups in Brazil, as he was jogging in a São Paulo city park. The kidnappers were believed to be members of Chile's Independence Movement and Revolutionary Left Movement. They demanded an unspecified ransom, an armored vehicle, weapons, and a getaway plane. They were also charged with participating in the attack on the La Tablada barracks in Buenos Aires, Argentina, in January 1989. Police said the duo were members of the Argentine leftist People's Revolutionary Army, whose members were believed to have received urban guerrilla training in Cuba.

Nestor Paz Zamora: late brother of Jaime Paz Zamora, president of Bolivia in 1990. Paz launched a failed guerrilla movement in 1970 and died of hunger in the Teoponte guerrilla campaign. A Nestor Paz Zamora Commando team fired machine guns from their car at the U.S. Marine residence in the Miraflores District of La Paz and then threw a package bomb at the door of the building. They later bombed the John F. Kennedy monument.

Virgilio Pablo Paz Romero: Cuban exile fugitive charged with the September 1976 car bombing of former Chilean ambassador Orlando Letelier. The FBI, on March 27, 1979, said it wanted to question him about the bombings in New York and New Jersey on March 24, 1979, by Omega-7, an anti-Castro Cuban exile group. He was a member of the Cuban Nationalist Movement. On September 12, 1991, he was sentenced to 12 years. He had pleaded guilty to conspiring to assassinate Letelier on July 30, 1991.

Mirtha Susana Pedroso Silva: one of four Tupamaros or Argentine People's Revolutionary Army members who hijacked an Aerolineas Argentinas B737 flying from Buenos Aires to Salta, Argentina, on October 20, 1973. The group forced the pilot to fly to Tucuman and then to Yacuiba, Bolivia, where they released all but five of the hostages and demanded a smaller plane to fly to Cuba. The group surrendered after two days when Bolivia promised safe passage to Cuba.

Rafael Fredsivindo Pellerano Albantosa: Cuban refugee, age 89, who, on April 10, 1981, grabbed a flight attendant, spread a flammable liquid, and started a small fire during a hijack attempt on Eastern Airlines Flight 17 en route from New York to Miami, Florida. He was overpowered by a passenger and an airline employee and died minutes later. Although a witness said he swallowed a small pill, an autopsy "revealed small bruises indicating compression of the chest and neck which appeared to be related to the events surrounding his apprehension and the ensuing scuffle."

Luis Armando Pena Soltren: one of three Puerto Rican hijackers of Pan Am Flight 281, a B707 flying from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on November 24, 1968, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and a small child. The hijackers were arrested by Cuban authorities. The trio was indicted by a federal grand jury in December 23, 1968, in the Southern District of New York.

Manuel Pena: secretary-general of the Union of Slum Dwellers who was arrested on the southern highway at the entrance of a San Francisco neighborhood on July 3, 1980. His release from prison was demanded by the Committee of Rural Dwellers of the Marxist Popular League of February 28. The group led 115 illiterate peasants in the occupation of the Costa Rican Embassy in San Salvador, El Salvador, on July 11, 1980.

Steven Pera: one of two hijackers, who used the aliases Mr. Hughes and Mr. Garth, who took over a Jamaica Air Taxi Ltd. Cessna 182 that had been chartered to take an excursion flight from Kingston around Jamaica on March 21, 1972. The duo rented the plane for sightseeing. One man pulled a knife and ordered the pilot to fly to Cuba.

Mrs. Peralta: alias of Katie George Thomas.

Roberto Perdia: on August 17, 1989, Argentina requested the arrest of the Montoneros leader believed living in Montevideo, Uruguay.

Ricardo Perdomo: Tupamaros National Liberation Movement militant in Uruguay.

Inti Peredo: leader of the Bolivian National Liberation Army (ELN) who died in 1969. ELN issued a communiqué that claimed Roberto Quintanilla, the former Bolivian consul general in Hamburg, was responsible for Peredo's death. Quintanilla was shot to death in the consulate on April 1, 1971. Argentine citizen and ELN member Oswaldo Ucasqui is believed to be Quintanilla's killer.

Geraldo Pereira dos Anjos: one of two assassins of Delorme Mehu, Haiti's ambassador to Brazil, who was gunned down in Salvador, Brazil, on July 3, 1977. The assassins claimed that they were hired by the Haitian Embassy's first secretary, Louis Robert Mackenzie, who denied their charges.

Hector Pereira: Argentine arrested and later released in connection with the February 1, 1981, explosion of sticks of dynamite in the main plaza of Cuzco, Peru.

Antonio Perera Carvalho: alias Acheme. Brazilian who furnished Japanese Red Army (JRA) member Takahashi Taketomo with weapons in 1974. He was never arrested and was eventually discovered to have ties to Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, alias Carlos, the Venezuelan Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorist. He held messages for JRA and may have given them arms for their takeover of the French Embassy in the Hague on September 13 1974. Listed in the notebook of Michel Moukharbel, Carlos's assistant, as Felipe Ferreira.

Amodio Perez: one of 150 political prisoners whose release was demanded by the National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros), who kidnapped Sir Geoffrey M. S. Jackson, British ambassador to Uruguay, on January 8, 1971. On September 6, 1971, some 106 Tupamaros escaped from the Punta Carretas, Uruguay, prison by digging a tunnel. Two days later, the group said there was no point in keeping Jackson, and they freed him the following day.

Crecencio Perez-Perez: one of two Cuban refugees who claimed to be “tired of all the robbing and killing” in New York City and hijacked Delta Airlines Flight 470, a B727 flying from Atlanta, Georgia, to Charleston, South Carolina, on September 17, 1980, and diverted it to Havana. Cuban authorities arrested the duo and returned them to the United States the next day, the first time that Cuba had returned Cuban hijackers to the United States. (See Robert J. LaBadie with a similar claim in 1970.) They were indicted on air piracy charges in October 1980. In January 1981, they pleaded guilty and were sentenced to 40 years in jail.

Emilio Nazario Perez Sargent: one of five anti-Castro Cuban exiles arrested by the Cuban government two days after they landed in Cabanas on December 2, 1968. Perez and Ernesto Diaz Rodriguez were members of Alpha 66 and the Second Front of Escambray, which had merged their operations.

Esteban Perez: National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) member arrested on March 29, 1973, by Uruguayan authorities who also detained several Tupamaros wanted in the July 31, 1970, kidnapping and murder of USAID official Daniel Mitrone.

Hugo Antonio Perez: friend of Carlos Alberto Telledin, who was detained in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society (AIMA) in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. After Perez testified on January 12, 1995, before Judge Galeano, he was placed into custody. Judge Galeano indicted him on January 31, 1995, on charges of “harboring” in the AIMA case. His assets were embargoed for 500,000 pesos, but he was released. He was ordered to appear before the court within the first five days of each month. He was indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association.

Johanny Perez Canete: one of five individuals arrested on March 16, 1987, by Melipeuco, Chile, authorities for holding up a Brink’s car carrying arms into Argentina and also in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the Chilean presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons; they killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Jose A. Perez Rodriguez: one of five prisoners who, on December 30, 2002, broke out of a maximum security prison after two confederates diverted a helicopter they had rented from Caribbean Helicorp in San Juan, Puerto Rico, by claiming they needed to inspect construction work in Ponce. The renters forced the pilot at gunpoint to land on the roof of Las Cucharas, Chile, prison during morning recreation. The prisoners flew on to a remote area in the central mountains and escaped. The five had been serving sentences in excess of 100 years for murder and other crimes. Corrections Secretary Miguel Periera said it was possible that prison guards helped the escapees. By January 3, 2003, four of the prisoners and two of the hijackers were back in custody. Police were searching for the fifth prisoner, who may have been killed.

Manuel Perez Martinez: former Catholic priest who led the 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army of Colombia (ELN) who kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. Perez’s group also claimed credit for the May 3, 1988, kidnappings of several West European officials and business leaders. On April 6, 1998, the group said Perez, age 54, had died from hepatitis in northeast Santander Province in February 1998. The Spanish-born Perez joined ELN in 1969 and became its leader in the late 1970s. The group had grown to 5,000 members since its inception in 1964.

Mariano Perez Ruiz: on December 22, 1997, 100 masked gunmen wearing blue uniforms gunned down Acteal, Mexico, villagers using .22 caliber rifles and AK47s in a nine-hour slaughter that began after a 9:00 A.M. church service. The victims included 14 children, an infant, 9 men, and 21 women, 4 of whom were pregnant. Some were hacked to death. Most of the victims were members of the peasant group Las Abejas (The Bees), who support the goals, but not the violence, of the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN). EZLN rebelled in January 1994 to demand rights for Chiapas State's impoverished Tzotzil Indians. The state police visited the town once, perhaps twice, during the incident but apparently did nothing to stop it, saying that they heard no gunshots. On April 2, 1998, the Mexican Army arrested Mariano Perez Ruiz, age 23, a Mexican soldier suspected of training the paramilitary group responsible for the attack, and turned him over to civilian prosecutors.

Marino Perez Rojas: exiled Dominican student who was joined by his exiled Chilean wife, Mireyz Lopez, and their three children on November 8, 1982, when he occupied the Peruvian Embassy in the Dominican Republic and took a hostage. He wanted the government to find him work or for Peru to grant him political asylum. The couple surrendered peacefully, and Perez was arrested. He had been exiled from the Dominican Republic during the government of Joaquin Balaguer, who was president from 1966 to 1978.

Lester Ellsworth Perry Jr.: hijacker of Trans World Airlines 79, a B727 on the Philadelphia–Pittsburgh–Indianapolis–St. Louis–Los Angeles run on July 31, 1969, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. He had flown from Scranton to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on another plane, accompanied by a prison guard and a federal marshal who were escorting him to a federal prison. The bank robber was permitted to go to the washroom unattended after the plane left St. Louis, Missouri. He was freed in 1980. On March 10, 1981, he was arrested under an alias in South Bend, Indiana, for car theft. U.S. authorities had thought he was still in Cuba.

Felix Roland Peterson-Coplin: Dominican Republic-born hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 925, a DC8 flying from New York City to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on September 7, 1969, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. As of 1979, he remained at large.

He was arrested on December 7, 1997, by immigration agents as he entered the United States from Canada. On December 11, 1997, he was arraigned in New York in connection with the hijacking.

Angelo Pezzuti: his release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum. He was permitted to conduct an interview with the news media.

Gerald Pierre: alias Pierre Gerald. Haitian private in the Army's 52nd Company who, on April 3, 1990, hijacked American Airlines Flight 653, an A300 airbus scheduled to fly to New York from Port-au-Prince. He boarded the plane armed with an Uzi as the plane was preparing to take off. He demanded to go to New York. He had been under arrest following an argument with Army Lt. Michel Joseph. He was from northern Haiti and had served in the army for the past two years. He was assigned to the security service at Mais Gate International Airport in Port-au-Prince. He spoke French, English, and Creole during the incident. He had advanced to Quatrième Class (the third year of secondary school). He had seven brothers and sisters. On April 6, he jumped out of the plane at 1:10 A.M. and escaped. On March 25, 1991, he surrendered to police, saying he had problems with his superiors. Many people had believed he had died while at large.

Luisa Pimentel Castanola: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Oscar Mario Pimentel Castanola: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Rafael Pina: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Pinana: alias of Freddy Ramos.

Maria Concepcion Pincheira Saenz: one of four Chileans arrested in Peru on October 14, 1993, on suspicion of involvement in terrorist acts. On January 7, 1994, they were convicted in Peru of membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement. They were sentenced by a military court to life in prison and fined $50 million. On March 21, 1994, the Special Military Court of the Peruvian Air Force, serving as an appellate court, confirmed the life sentence on charges of high treason. She was involved in the kidnapping of Peruvian entrepreneur Raul Hiraoka Torres and other crimes.

L. E. P. Pineda: one of four hijackers, including three Brazilians and one Mexican, who hijacked a Mexicana de Aviacion B727 on the Cozumel–Merida–Mexico City run on May 24, 1970, and diverted it to Cuba.

Hector Pinero: one of two men arrested on August 17, 1980, by Miami International Airport police for planning to hijack Air Florida Flight 41 en route from Miami to Key West, Florida. The duo was carrying a beer bottle full of gasoline. There had been a spate of hijackings to Cuba that month.

C. Pino and L. Pino: two of the 15 hijackers of an Ecuatoriana International Lockheed Electra 188 on the Guayaquil–Quito–Miami run on January 19, 1969, that was hijacked to Cuba. All of the hijackers, ages 15 to 25, were convicted in Ecuadorian court.

Miguel Pino: leader of the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance in Peru and owner of the Don Miguel Inn. On October 11, 1986, police deactivated several bombs planted near the inn.

Onofre Pinto: former Brazilian Air Force sergeant charged in the October 12, 1968, machine-gun attack on U.S. Army Capt. Charles R. Chandler in Brazil by the Popular Revolutionary Vanguard on October 12, 1968. He and 14 other prisoners were freed in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador Charles Burke Elbrick. He was flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Carlos Pizarro Leon-Gomez: number three man in the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19), who was wounded on August 3, 1984, in a police ambush. On June 18, 1988, he claimed credit for the kidnapping on May 29, 1988, of Alvaro Gomez Hurtado, twice presidential candidate of the opposition Conservative Party, as he was leaving Bogota's Chico Church. On April 26, 1990, a gunman hired by the Medellin cocaine cartel shot Pizarro to death. He was the presidential candidate for the disbanded M-19.

Robert Pizarro Cohen: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Martinez Platero: one of 150 political prisoners whose release was demanded by the National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) who kidnapped Sir Geoffrey M. S. Jackson, British ambassador to Uruguay, on January 8, 1971. On September 6, 1971, some 106 Tupamaros escaped from the Punta Carretas, Uruguay, prison by digging a tunnel. Two days later, the group said there was no point in keeping Jackson, and they freed him the following day.

Denny Pocorni: identified by the press as having confessed to killing Stasis Obaskauskas, second secretary of the Soviet Embassy in Paramaribo, Suriname, on April 9, 1990. He and two other killers were arrested while attempting to sell the victim's Mercedes.

Victor Polay: jailed leader of Peru's Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA) whose release was demanded on December 17, 1996, by the two dozen MRTA gunmen who took over the residence of the Japanese ambassador and held hostage 700 diplomats, business leaders, and government officials.

German Pompa Gonzalez: reserve helicopter copilot who, on January 3, 1992, joined a group of 34 Cubans in hijacking a Soviet-made Cubana Airlines MI8 helicopter to Miami, where they requested asylum. He was a former Cuban Air Force lieutenant. He had earlier served under Maj. Orestes Lorenzo, who, in 1991, had fled in a Russian-made MIG that landed at Key West Naval Air Station.

Pomponio: alias of Pompilio Aragon Zamora.

Urbano M. Porcilio: would-be hijacker of an Alas Del Caribe Air (a Dominican Republic airline) Islander BN2A flying from Santiago, Chile, to Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, on December 22, 1971. The plane landed in Dajabon, Dominican Republic, where the pilot and passengers overpowered Porcilio.

Porfirio: alias of German Arevalo Hernandez.

Alirio Porras: alias El Gato. Member of the Domingo Lain Front's urban network arrested in Colombia on October 9, 1990. He was carrying documents and plans for attacks by the National Liberation Army on the Cano-Limon oil pipeline installation and the offices of the Occidental Petroleum Corporation in Arauca.

Marco Portillo: released from prison as one of the demands of the 50 armed members of the 28 February Popular Leagues of El Salvador who took over the Panamanian Embassy with several hostages on February 13, 1980.

Luis Posada Carriles: arrested on October 14, 1976, by Venezuelan authorities. He employed Hernan Ricardo Losano at his Caracas security agency. Ricardo, along with Freddy Lugo, confessed on October 18, 1976, to having placed a bomb that exploded on October 6, 1976, on Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. Ricardo and Lugo named Posada and Orlando Bosch as the masterminds of the bombing. Posada was a Cuban who had headed the Venezuelan secret police. On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted him on qualified murder charges, which carry a maximum penalty of 30 years.

On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved the four defendants—Posada, Bosch, Ricardo, and Lugo—of charges of high treason and homicide, but the prosecutor successfully argued that the defendants should be tried under civilian penal code not military code. They were kept imprisoned pending a new trial.

On August 8, 1982, Posada escaped from the San Carlos prison in central Caracas and fled to the Chilean Embassy, where he requested political asylum. He returned to his cell on August 11, 1982, when Chile turned down the asylum request. He escaped from jail on August 19, 1985, just prior to sentencing. On August 4, 1987, a three-judge Venezuelan panel acquitted him of the Cubana attack.

On August 9, 1998, the Miami Herald reported that Posada had planned to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro during a August 20–26, 1998, visit to the Dominican Republic.

On April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced Posada to eight years for endangering public safety and falsifying documents. Panama freed him on August 26, 2004.

On April 12, 2005, Posada applied for political asylum in the United States, where he was in hiding. On May 17, the United States arrested him in Miami after he conducted public interviews with local reporters. On May 19, 2005, the United States charged him with entering the United States illegally. He faced a June 13 hearing before an immigration judge in El Paso, Texas.

On May 21, 2005, Venezuela made a provisional arrest request—just short of extradition—while thousands throughout the country demonstrated for his return. The United States denied the request on May 27, 2005. A judge ruled on June 20, 2005, that the trial would remain in El Paso and not be moved to Florida. In fall 2005, a federal judge ruled that he could not be deported to Cuba or Venezuela. On March 22, 2006, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement said that he would not be released but that efforts to deport him to a willing country would continue.

On January 11, 2007, Posada was indicted on one count of naturalization fraud and six counts of making false statements in naturalization proceedings in 2005 and 2006. On April 6, 2007, U.S. district judge Kathleen Cardone in El Paso ordered Posada freed on bail, pending charges that he lied in his U.S. citizenship statement. The prosecutor requested that he stay in jail while they determined appeal possibilities. Posada was represented by attorney Felipe D.J. Milan, who requested that he merely post a $250,000 cash or corporate surety bond. His wife and adult children were ordered to post a $100,000 appearance and compliance signature bond when he was released. Posada was also ordered to live with his wife in Miami under a 24-hour home confinement and agree to electronic monitoring.

An appeals court rejected the government's appeal on April 17. Posada was freed on April 19, 2007, after posting $250,000 bond.

Judge Cardone threw out the immigration fraud charges against Posada on May 8, 2007, saying that the government's Spanish–English interpretation of his April 2006 interview “is so inaccurate as to render it unreliable as evidence of the defendant's actual statement.”

Luis Posadas Melgarejo: Cordoban metalworker who hijacked an Austral Airlines BAC111 while flying from Cordoba to Buenos Aires on November 8, 1969, hoping to divert it to Cuba. He was arrested during a stopover in Montevideo, Uruguay. He claimed that his brother had hijacked another Argentine plane on October 8 to Havana. (An Argentine plane was hijacked on that date by E. Ugarteche). He was sentenced to one to two years.

Miguel Angel Potosi: one of four members of the Ecuadoran terrorist group Alfaro Lives, Damn It expelled from Colombia to Ecuador via the border town of Ipiales on December 26, 1986.

Hadi Soleiman Pour: former Iranian ambassador to Argentina, age 47, who was arrested by U.K.

officials on August 21, 2003. He was wanted for the 1994 bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society community center that killed 85 people. Police detained him at his Durham home on an extradition warrant. He was freed on November 12, 2003, when the U.K. government said there was not enough evidence to continue the case.

German Prada: April 19 Movement of Colombia member who was taken prisoner in late 1985 in Brazil for extorting money from Colombian merchants.

Rolando Prattes: Brazilian labor leader in the São Paulo area. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

V.L.P. Preskovski: one of four hijackers, including three Brazilians and one Mexican, who hijacked a Mexicana de Aviación B727 on the Cozumel–Merida–Mexico City run on May 24, 1970, and diverted it to Cuba.

William Libero Prevato: Italian charged with organized Communist movement terrorist activities. On August 24, 1985, the Nicaraguan Supreme Court rejected Italy's extradition request.

The Prince: alias of Osama bin Laden.

Roberto Atilio de Prinzio: hijacker of Aerolíneas Argentina 601, a B737 flying from Mar del Plata to Buenos Aires, Argentina, on June 30, 1980. He demanded $100,000 and a flight to Mexico. He survived one attempt to storm the plane when tear gas grenades were thrown inside, and he later surrendered. Police claimed he was a member of Peronist Youth.

Gabriel Puerta Aponte: Venezuelan Red Flag leader who was arrested by Venezuelan police on April 9, 1982. He said his organization was not involved in the December 7, 1981, hijacking of three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela by a dozen Ramón Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos.

Q

---

Jabir Hasan al Qahtani: Saudi held at Guantánamo Bay as of January 2004. In the first week on August 2001, a Saudi named al Qahtani was refused entry to the United States by U.S. customs officials in Orlando. He may have been intending to meet Mohamed Atta, the 9/11 leader, who was in Orlando at the time. He said he planned to visit friends in the United States but could not name them. Al Qahtani was later taken prisoner in Pakistan or Afghanistan and was held in the U.S. Navy's prison in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba. It was not clear which Gitmo-held Qahtani was involved.

Cid de Queiroz Benjamin: a student accused in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. His release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard, who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum.

Graciella C. Quesada: hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 199, a CV880 on the Chicago–Atlanta–Miami run on May 25, 1970, diverting it to Cuba. She was born in Havana. She was accompanied by her son. As of 1979, she was a fugitive from an indictment handed down by a federal grand jury in Georgia on July 27, 1970.

Jose Antonio Quesada Fernandez: leader of the Second National Front of Escambray who led a small military group to Cuba to establish contact with the underground. Radio Havana announced on February 23, 1970, that he had been executed by firing squad.

Juan Jose Quezada Maldonado: one of two hijackers of a Nicaraguan Lanica BAC111 flying the Miami–Managua, Nicaragua–San Salvador, El Salvador–Mexico City route on November 4, 1969, that was diverted to Grand Cayman Island. They were tricked into believing it was Havana, Cuba, but the duo flew on from the island to Havana.

J. Quevedo Mora, Angel Quevedo Mora, Antonion Quevedo Mora, and C. Quevedo Mora: some of the 15 hijackers of an Ecuatoriana International Lockheed Electra 188 on the Guayaquil–Quito–Miami run on January 19, 1969, that was hijacked to Cuba. All of the hijackers, ages 15 to 25, were convicted in Ecuadorian court.

Robert Jorge Quieto: Argentine Revolutionary Armed Forces member who flew to Havana, Cuba, on August 15, 1972, after escaping from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Raul Quian: one of five individuals who attempted to hijack a domestic Cubana flight on December 8, 1960. Following a gun battle in which the pilot was injured, the plane crashed at the Cienfuego airport, killing one person and injuring four. The five were soon executed.

Nestor Quine: suspected Peruvian terrorist arrested in a clash with Chilean police on October 11, 1986. He was accused of assaulting the police and illegally entering the country. On October 16, 1986, three of the group were handed over to the Peruvian consul general.

Pastor Quine: suspected Peruvian terrorist arrested in a clash with Chilean police on October 11, 1986. He was accused of assaulting police and illegally entering the country. On October 16, 1986, three of the group were handed over to the Peruvian consul general.

Jesus Antonio Quintanilla Lara: student arrested on September 9, 1978, for involvement in the Armed Forces of National Resistance kidnapping on August 14, 1978, of Kjell Bjork. Bjork was kidnapped as he left the offices of Dada and Company in San Salvador, El Salvador. Bjork was a Swedish technical director of Telefonica LM Ericsson.

Carlos Fernando Quintero Bordon: member of the Ecuadoran Alfaro Lives, Damn It who was captured by the Colombian Army during clashes with the American Battalion in the mountains of Cauca Department and later deported by Colombia on August 17, 1986.

Luis Alberto Quintero Estrada: alias Camilo. One of four individuals arrested on May 28, 1985, in connection with the May 24, 1985, bombing of National Electric Power high tension pylons that blacked out 1,400 kilometers of Chilean territory, including Santiago and Copiapo. The Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front claimed credit.

Pedro Domingo Quintero: deputy, age 56, to Shining Path leader Oscar Ramirez Durand, alias Feliciano. Quintero was arrested on April 20, 1998, by Peruvian police in a Lima restaurant. He was a founder of Shining Path.

Antonio Quiroga: agent of Alejandro Automotores released on October 30, 1995, for lack of evidence of links to the key suspects in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Antedoro Quispe Camayo: alias Comrade Ante. Leader of Shining Path arrested on June 23, 1983, at the San Martin Plaza in Lima while carrying a plan of downtown marked with intended bombing targets.

Felipe Quispe Huanca: alias Mallki. Leader of the Tapaj Katari guerrilla army of Bolivia who was turned over to the court system on August 21, 1992, for planning to attack the embassies of Spain and the United States in La Paz on October 12 and conduct five attacks against Bolivian politicians. He and his two bodyguards planned to set off a dynamite charge on Columbus Day outside the Spanish Embassy and then later attack the home of the U.S. ambassador, attack two high tension towers and a telephone plant, and attack homes of five political leaders of the Bolivian government.

Victoria Quispe: one of five members of a Shining Path "annihilation squad" led by Rosa Ramos Campos. They were arrested on March 4, 1989, by the Antiterrorist Directorate of the Peruvian Police in Tacna, near the Chilean border, in connection with the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement.

Maria Ines Quiste: Peruvian arrested by Bolivian police on December 9, 1988, who tested positive for traces of gunpowder on her hands. Her physical features did not match those described by eyewitnesses to the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement.

R

---

Daniel Oscar Raconto: alias Toto. Member of the Argentine People's Revolutionary Army and Revolutionary Workers Party and named on September 26, 1980, by Paraguayan police as a suspect in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastacio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Miguel Radas: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Ronald F. Ralph: one of three men who chartered an Atlantic Aero Cessna to fly from Greensboro, North Carolina, to Atlanta, Georgia, on October 7, 1975. Shortly after takeoff, one of the men pulled a .22 caliber revolver and demanded to fly to Cuba. After a refueling stop, the plane landed in Florida. Two of the hijackers walked away from the plane, while the third went with his hostage to the airport. Authorities were alerted and the hijacker surrendered to police. The other two were subsequently apprehended. Ralph was sentenced to 20 years for air piracy on January 30, 1976.

Alberto Ramirez: military leader of the Peruvian Shining Path arrested on April 24, 1998.

Antulio Ramirez Ortiz: alias Elpir Cofrissi. Hijacker of National Airlines Flight 337 from the United States to Havana, Cuba, on May 1, 1961.

He was detained by Cuban authorities, who later released him. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami in the Southern District of Florida on July 28, 1961. On November 11, 1975, the FBI arrested him in Miami. He was sentenced to 20 years for the first hijacking of a U.S. plane.

Diego Ramirel Landeatta: actual name or alias of Diego Ramirez. Hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 939, a DC8 flying from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on March 31, 1971, and diverted to Havana. Ramirez was born in Caracas, Venezuela, on August 30, 1906, making him America's oldest hijacker. A complaint was filed against him on April 8, 1971, in the Southern District of New York. He was returned to the United States via Bermuda on October 8, 1974. As of 1979, his case was pending.

Berta Ramirez Galan: alias Elvira. Member of Armed Forces of National Resistance who was arrested on August 11, 1978, in connection with the kidnapping and murder on May 17, 1978, in El Salvador of Fugio Matsumoto, Japanese president of Central American Synthetic Industries, a textile firm.

Daniel Ramirez: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty, arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrests followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California; a Venezuelan official; and a Mexican businessman.

Diego Ramirez: alias or actual name of Diego Ramirel Landeatta.

Esmeraldo Ramirez Castaneda: one of four Guantánamo-born hijackers of Pan Am 460, a B747 flying from San Juan to Miami on April 13, 1969, and diverted to Cuba.

Fabian Ramirez: chief of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia in March 1998.

Ilich Ramirez Sanchez: aliases Carlos, Naqi Abu-Bakr Ahmad, the Jackal, Carlos Andres Martinez-Torres, Hector Lugo Dupont, Glenn Gebhard, Cenon Marie Clark, Adolf Jose Muller Bernal, Ahmad Adil Fawaz, Dr. Murad Shakir 'Aziz, Martinez Torres, 'Abdallah Barakat, Dr. 'Abdallah Burhan, 'Abd-Rabbuh 'Ali Muhammad. Venezuela-born Popular Front of the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) terrorist.

He was believed to have been involved in the planning of the September 28, 1973, takeover of a train of Soviet Jewish émigrés in Austria by Saika.

He was believed to have fired a shot at Joseph E. Sieff, president of the Marks and Spencer store chain, honorary vice president of the Zionist Federation of Britain, and president of the Joint Palestinian Appeal in London on December 31, 1973. The shot lodged in Sieff's head. The PFLP gunman escaped.

An individual vaguely matching his description threw a bomb into London's Bank of Hapoalim, Israel's third largest bank, on January 24, 1974, injuring a typist. PFLP claimed credit.

He was rumored to have been involved in the August 3, 1974, bombings of two small cars and a minibus parked outside the offices of two anti-Arab newspapers, L'Aurore and Minute, and the United Jewish Social Fund, in Paris. On August 5, PFLP claimed credit in the name of Commando

Muhammad Boudia. Detailed diagrams of all three offices, carefully annotated, were found among Ramirez's papers when his apartment was raided in 1975.

He was believed to have thrown a grenade into the Drugstore Saint-Germaine, a popular Paris shopping complex, on September 15, 1974, killing 2 Frenchmen and wounding 34 others. The Mohammad Boudia Commando claimed credit, as did the Group for the Defense of Europe.

He may have shot Alan Quartermaine, a London insurance broker, who was hit twice in the neck and killed when his chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce stopped at a King's Road traffic light in London on November 18, 1974. Observers believed Ramirez mistook him for a Jewish member of Parliament who drove a Rolls and lived nearby. Others suspected Provisional Irish Republican Army involvement.

He was involved in the planning of the rocket-propelled grenade (RPG-7) attack on an El Al 707 in Orly Airport on January 13, 1975.

Three French Directorate of Territorial Surveillance police visited his apartment at 9 Rue Toullier in Paris at 9:40 p.m. on July 27, 1975. After questioning him for 30 minutes, they asked him to come to the Paris police headquarters. He excused himself to use the bathroom, then emerged with a Czech automatic pistol and killed Michael Waheb Moukharbal, the PFLP Muhammad Boudia Commando member who had fingered him, plus officers Raymoud Dous and Jean Donatini, and wounded Commissaire Principal Jean Herranz in the throat. He escaped. A few days later, the French expelled three members of the Cuban Embassy who they claimed were members of the Direccion General de Inteligencia and had extensive contacts with Ramirez. A bag of weapons and explosives left by Ramirez was found in an apartment of friends with whom he had stayed.

Ramirez next surfaced on December 21, 1975, when he led six members of the Arm of the Arab Revolution, a PFLP cover name, to take over a ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in Vienna, Austria, taking hostage 70 people, including 11 oil ministers. An arrest warrant was handed down in the OPEC case by the Vienna criminal court on December 23, 1975.

In August or September 1979, he opened fire on the occupants of a passenger car in Budapest, Hungary.

Magyar Távirati Taroda, the Budapest news agency, on July 13, 1990, blamed Ramirez for the February 21, 1981, bombing of the Radio Free Europe building in Munich.

In a letter sent to the West German Embassy in Saudi Arabia, he claimed credit for the August 25, 1983, bombing in West Berlin's Kurfürstendamm shopping mall of the French Consulate that killed 1 and injured 23. His fingerprint was on the letter.

In October 1983, he sent a letter to the same embassy, threatening to kill Bonn interior minister Friedrich Zimmermann if authorities prosecuted Gabriele Kroecker-Tidemann for her role in the 1975 Ramirez-led attack on the OPEC headquarters in Vienna.

He sent a letter to the Agence France-Presse office in Berlin claiming credit for the December 31, 1983, bombing of a French Train à Grande Vitesse—France's high-speed train—en route from Marseilles to Paris that killed 3 and injured 10. Experts said that the handwriting was his. He was believed to be hiding in East Berlin.

On June 21, 1990, a Vienna, Austria, newspaper reported that Ramirez had operated from East Berlin during the Erich Honecker regime with the consent of Honecker and Erich Mielke, the former minister of state security.

On November 28, 1991, AFP reported that Syria had expelled Ramirez on September 21, 1991, and that he was probably now in Yemen after Libya refused to have him. He and his family—Magdalena Kopp of the West German Red Army Faction and their two children—reportedly had Yemeni diplomatic passports. His passport said he was Aden-born diplomat Naqi Abu-Bakr Ahmad, age 43.

He had been found guilty and sentenced to life in prison in absentia in 1992.

He was arrested in Sudan on August 14, 1994, and extradited to France.

Sante Prisoner 872686/X went on trial on December 12, 1997, for killing French security officers Raymond Dous and Jean Donatini and Lebanese informant Michel Moukarbal on June 27, 1975. On December 24, 1997, France found him guilty and sentenced him to life in prison for the three 1975 murders. On December 26, 1997, he asked France's highest court to overturn the conviction, claiming he was not permitted to confront his accusers.

On November 9, 1998, he was in the first week of a hunger strike in a French jail.

In April 1999, Venezuela's newly elected president Hugo Chavez wrote him a letter of solidarity, addressing him as a "distinguished compatriot."

In May 1999, he began writing a newspaper column for La Razon, a Venezuelan weekly.

On June 23, 1999, France's highest court rejected a final appeal.

On March 12, 2003, Ramirez went on trial in Berlin on charges of murder, attempted murder, and causing explosions in five attacks in Western Europe that killed six people. On March 17, 2003, his wife, Magdalena Kopp, age 54, refused to testify against him.

Jaime Ramirez Pedraza: on March 15, 1996, the Peruvian Supreme Court of Military Justice reaffirmed the Peruvian's life sentence for membership in the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement.

Jose de Jesus Ramirez Meza: member of the Mexican 23rd of September Communist League who was arrested on January 10, 1974, by Jalisco State authorities. They claimed he participated in the October 10, 1973, kidnapping of U.K. honorary consul Anthony Duncan Williams in Guadalajara. The group demanded the release of 51 political prisoners and $200,000 ransom.

Williams was released unharmed on October 14, 1973.

Airman Jose Jacinto Ramirez Mendez: one of two defecting Nicaraguan Air Force members who, on November 22, 1987, seized a Soviet-made Sandinista Air Force single-engine AN2 passenger plane from an airfield near Juigalpa and made an emergency landing on a strip at Gustavo Cedeno's Las Piedras Farm near the El Bebedero River in Liberia, Costa Rica.

Luis Ricardo Ramirez: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Mauro Ramirez: guerrilla leader captured on August 9, 1985, whose release was demanded by the Pedro Pablo Castillo Front of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front who, on September 10, 1985, kidnapped Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, the daughter of president Jose Napoleon Duarte, in El Salvador.

Oscar Alberto Ramirez Durand: alias Feliciano. One of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993, and fined up to 1 billion soles. By November 24, 1994, he was head of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Peru (Shining Path), a position he held as of April 1998. On July 14, 1999, Peruvian security forces captured Ramirez. He had been the leader of Shining Path's Red Shining Path faction since 1992. He was masquerading as a farmer. He and 3 female and 2 male bodyguards surrendered peacefully to 20 Peruvian soldiers who surrounded him near Jauja, 185 miles east of Lima. Only 200 more guerrillas remained at large. President Alberto Fujimori said that Ramirez would be tried by a military court. Military strategist Ramirez had tried to reorganize the Shining Path after the capture of Abimael Guzman. He had visited Colombia to study the operations of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia.

Following an earlier skirmish between the 2,000 troops in the region and the guerrillas, a starving female rebel showed up at a town store and gave up Ramirez's location. Surveillance flights and intelligence data pinpointed his location and led to his arrest.

Ramirez was found guilty of treason in a closed military trial and sentenced to life on August 30, 1999, according to the Supreme Military Justice Council.

Vilma Ramirez: member of Los Julupesty, a group alleged to be part of Basque Nation and Liberty, arrested on June 25, 1994, in Zapopan, Jalisco State, western Mexico, and accused of involvement in homicides, kidnappings, and bank robberies. The arrests followed an extortion attempt in Zapopan. The Attorney General's Office said the group was involved in the deaths of a citizen from Los Angeles, California, a Venezuelan official, and a Mexican businessman.

Jose Ramon Mata: Honduran arrested in Colombia on February 26, 1980. He admitted that he was smuggling April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) communications equipment into the Dominican Republic Embassy. The embassy was taken over by 16 M-19 members on February 27, 1980.

Mariano Ramon: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Bernabe Ramos: arrested by Colombian police and then confessed to the kidnapping and murder of Fidel Lillo Shifihhno, an Italian executive of General American Pipe on June 2, 1988, and Jacobo Gambini, president of the Latin American division of General American Pipe, on June 3, 1988.

Freddy Ramos: aliases Jorge, Pinana. Law student and one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Jose Alberto Ramos Martinez: alias Felipe. Member of Armed Forces of National Resistance who was arrested on August 11, 1978, in connection with the kidnapping and murder on May 17, 1978, in El Salvador of Fugio Matsumoto, Japanese president of Central American Synthetic Industries, a textile firm. One of his colleagues said that Matsumoto was killed when leader Jose Armando Lovos's pistol accidentally fired.

Jose Yamil Ramos Riano: alias Manuel. April 19 Movement of Colombia financier and one of 16 members who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Jesus Ramos-Cobas: one of three hijackers of Trans-Caribbean Airlines Flight 401, a DC8 flying from Newark, New Jersey, to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on August 19, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, the three were fugitives from an indictment handed down on March 25, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the district of New Jersey.

Judith Ramos Cuadro: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993, and fined up to 1 billion soles.

Rene Ramos Suarez: one of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Robert A. Ramos Michelena: Cuban-born naturalized U.S. citizen and airman first class who stole a Beech T34 Mentor in the United States. He flew it to Cuba on July 18, 1963.

Rosa Ramos Campos: variant Rosas Ramos Ocampos. Leader of a five member Shining Path "annihilation squad" arrested on March 4, 1989, by the Antiterrorist Directorate of the Peruvian police in Tacna, near the Chilean border, in connection with the December 6, 1988, shooting in Bolivia of Capt. Juan Vega Llona, the Peruvian Navy attaché. Shining Path was suspected, although a note on the body claimed credit for the Revolutionary Labor Movement. She was carrying false papers listing her as a correspondent for the government newspaper La Cronica in Arequipa under the name Juana Maria Sanchez Caceres. The real journalist was in La Paz and the Bolivian police had mistakenly accused her of the murder.

Rosas Ramos Ocampos: variant of Rosa Ramos Campos.

Commander Senen Dario Rangel Osorio: alias Omar. Leader for several years of the 24th Front of the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces who was killed on April 13, 1987, in a firefight in Norosi, Morales municipality, by the Nueva Granada Battalion of the Colombian Army's Fifth Brigade.

Hugo Norberto Ratier Noguera: leader of the Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement who was killed in September 1983 in Santiago, Chile, in a shootout with agents of the National Intelligence Center.

Munir 'Abd-al-Ra'uf: Lebanese Hizballah member mentioned on August 18, 1994, by Buenos Aires LS84 Television as having been identified by a woman to Paraguayan police investigating the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Raul: secretary of information of the People's Revolutionary Bloc of El Salvador National Executive Directorate who was arrested on the southern highway at the entrance of a San Francisco neighborhood on July 3, 1980. His release from prison was demanded by the Committee of Rural Dwellers of the Marxist Popular League of February 28. The group led 115 illiterate peasants in the occupation of the Costa Rican Embassy in San Salvador, El Salvador, on July 11, 1980.

Raul: alias of Miguel Northufster.

Commander Raul: alias Commander Carlos. Leader of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Comrade Raul: alias of Raul Fuentes Gill.

Lieutenant Raul: alias of Gonzalo Osorio.

Carmen Razuri Cobarrubias: Chilean arrested but later released in connection with the February 1, 1981, explosion of sticks of dynamite in the main plaza of Cuzco, Peru.

Ana Maria Rebelledo Collazo: student at the University of Tolima and member of April 19 Movement of Colombia. She was killed when the bomb she was setting at the U.S. Consulate in Cali, Colombia, exploded prematurely on May 11, 1980.

Jose Orlando Rebellon Castano: would-be hijacker of a Taxi Aereo del Guaviare flying from Llanos Orientales Airport in Colombia on May 19, 1982. He wanted to go to Cuba but was jumped by the passengers, who turned him over to authorities at the Villavicencio airport.

Elena Albertina Reboredo Piaraguirre: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Bernard and Robert Reed: two brothers who joined the plot of James R. Rose Jr., former Navy diver and demolitions expert who was arrested in Miami in July 1978 for plotting to bomb Soviet and Japanese whale boats moored in the harbor of Talcahuano, Chile. As of July 1978, the duo remained at large.

Miguel Regueira Ederman: Costa Rican member of the People's Vanguard, a Costa Rican group, and one of several members of the Carlos Aguero Echeverria Command who fired a bazooka at a van carrying U.S. Marine guards to the U.S. Embassy in San Jose on March 17, 1981, injuring three marines and two Costa Ricans. He had originally said he was a Nicaraguan when he was arrested in April.

Ashique Rehman: one of three Pakistani sailors arrested on May 2, 1995, in Rosario, Argentina, while taking photos of the Argentine Zionist Union building at 2555 Salta Street in the old Pichincha District. They were placed at the disposal of federal judge Galeano. The trio worked on the Cypriot ship Mastrogorgis B, moored in Rosario. Police were investigating whether they were involved in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Richard Colvin Reid: drifter, age 28, who boarded American Airlines Flight 63 in Paris on December 22, 2001, and attempted to set off explosives hidden in his shoes with a match. The 6 feet 4 inches and 220 pound Middle Eastern-looking man carried a British passport issued on December 7 in Belgium, but some authorities said it was "questionable." Reid had torn several pages out of his old passport. He boarded without any luggage or additional ID, traveled alone, and had a one-way ticket. These are all tipoffs that should trigger suspicions. He lit a match and when confronted by a flight attendant, put it in his mouth. After she alerted the pilot by intercom and returned, he tried to set alight the inner tongue of his sneaker, which had been drilled out and had protruding wires. She tried to stop him, but Reid threw her against the bulkhead. Reid bit a second flight attendant on the thumb. The crew and several passengers, including Kwame James, a 6 feet 8 inches pro basketball player, overpowered him; several passengers suffered minor injuries. Two French doctors on board used the plane's medical kit to sedate him three times; other passengers tied him to his window seat in row 29. The pilot diverted the flight to Boston's Logan International Airport, escorted by two U.S. Air Force F15 fighter jets. The crew questioned Reid, who claimed his father is Jamaican and his mother British and that he was traveling to the Caribbean to visit family members. Some media outlets reported that he was a Muslim convert. The passengers gave the pilot two audiotapes Reid was carrying. The FBI took the man into custody for "interference with a flight crew," a felony. Reid was jailed and placed on suicide watch at the Plymouth County Correctional Facility south of Boston in Plymouth, Massachusetts. He faced charges that could lead to a sentence of 20 years and a $250,000 fine. On December 24, he was formally charged in court in Boston with interference with flight crews by assault or intimidation. He requested a court-appointed attorney for his December 28 court appearance.

Tests on the shoes indicated a substance consistent with C-4. The ignition devices were later "disrupted," and the shoes were detonated in an open field. The FBI said there were two "functional improvised explosive devices" inside the sneakers.

French police said that the suspect was born in Sri Lanka and named Tariq Raja, alias Abdel Rahim. Other reports said he may have dual citizenship. U.S. officials said he might be mentally unstable. French media reported that he had tried to board the same flight on December 21 but was stopped by police unsure of his passport.

On December 11, the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration warned airlines to be on the alert for individuals smuggling weapons or bombs in their shoes. Following the incident, some airports began random inspections of passenger footwear.

Reid and al Qaeda suspect Zacarias Moussaoui attended the Brixton Mosque in London, although worshipers could not establish that the two attended together. Some al Qaeda detainees in Afghanistan said they recognized Reid from photos that appeared in the media.

The French La Provence newspaper quoted police and intelligence sources as indicating that Reid was part of the Tabliq Islamic Movement, but he left because it was not "radical enough." The Boston Globe cited FBI speculation that Reid had an accomplice to put together the explosive device. Reid had previous run-ins with London police for mugging and robbery. Interpol said he had 13 theft charges, one case of offenses against people, and two cases of offenses against property. While in jail, he converted to Islam and moved on to radicalism.

Reid spent the night before the incident in a $175 airport hotel room paid for by American Airlines because he missed the previous day's flight due to extensive questioning by French border police.

Investigators determined that Reid had traveled to Israel, Egypt, the Netherlands, and Belgium and that the shoes contained PETN (pentaerythritol tetranitrate), a C-4 type of explosive and key ingredient in Semtex, TATP (triacetone triperoxide), and nonmetal fuses, which may have made them more difficult to set off.

For a drifter, Reid somehow had enough money for international travel. His estranged father said Reid had traveled to Iran three or four years earlier. Reid was in Israel in June for a week, possibly testing El Al security. He was quizzed when he arrived at Tel Aviv's Ben Gurion Airport. El Al put him on a seat next to a sky marshal. He may have purchased the sneakers in Amsterdam. In Brussels, he picked up the British passport he was carrying along with his old one when he showed up at the Paris airport.

At an initial hearing on December 28, 2001, FBI witness Margaret Cronin said that the bomb could have blown a hole in the plane's fuselage, leading to explosive decompression of the cabin. Because Reid was in a window seat, the blast could also have ignited the fuel tanks. U.S. magistrate judge Judith G. Dein ruled that there was probable cause for the arrest and ordered Reid held without bail. She ruled that he posed a serious flight risk and posed a danger to the public if released. He faced charges punishable by up to 20 years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Prosecutors, including Colin Owyang, could file additional charges and had three weeks to present evidence to a grand jury. Reid was represented by public defender Tamar Birkhead.

On January 16, 2002, Reid was indicted in Boston for attempting to blow up the plane. Five of the nine charges carried life sentences, including attempted use of a weapon of mass destruction and using a destructive device. He pleaded not guilty on January 18, 2002, in U.S. District Court to eight of the charges. Defense attorneys challenged the ninth charge of attempting to wreck a mass transportation vehicle. On June 11, 2002, U.S. district judge William Young threw out one of the nine charges, saying that a plane is not a vehicle under the USA Patriot Act. On October 4, 2002, after initially asking that references to al Qaeda training be dropped in the indictment in return for a guilty plea, he pleaded guilty to all eight charges, including attempting to blow up the airliner. On January 30, 2003, he was sentenced to life in prison.

Luc Reinette: alleged leader of the Caribbean Revolutionary Alliance who was arrested by Goyae, Guadeloupe, police on November 27, 1984, for planning the November 14, 1983, car bombing in Basse-Terre which injured 20 people.

Daniel de Arao Reis Fillio: a student leader accused in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. His release was demanded by eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum.

Maryan Remesani: one of six Iranian Hizballah members detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing but would be deported to Iran through Bogota, Colombia, and Caracas, Venezuela. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Pedro Remon: on April 20, 2004, the Panamanian Supreme Court sentenced the Cuban American, age 60, to seven years for endangering public safety in connection with the November 2000 plot to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro in Panama City. Panama freed Remon on August 26, 2004. He reportedly was the shooter in the killing of a pro-Castro activist and a Cuban diplomat.

Raimundo Renato Alves: aliases Raimundo Nonato Primo, Raimundo Nonato Alves de Conceicao. Mentally disturbed gunman who, on September 29, 1988, boarded a VASP B737 in Belo Horizonte's Confins Airport and demanded to be taken to Brasilia. He shot and killed the copilot and wounded two other flight crew members. He was shot and captured after he shot the pilot, whom he was holding hostage. He faced charges of aggravated homicide, attempted homicide, and kidnapping. A police spokesperson believed he wanted to crash the plane into a Brasilia building. He died in Santa Genoveva Hospital in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, handcuffed to his bed, on October 4, 1988.

Catalino Reyes: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. Her release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released her.

Edmundo Reyes Amaya: imprisoned Mexican People's Revolutionary Army (EPR) member whose release was demanded by the EPR members who bombed a pipeline owned by Pemex in Guanajuato State in early July 2007 and in Querétaro State on July 10, 2007. The Attorney General's Office said he was not in custody.

Erasmó Alfredo Reyes García: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Raul Reyes: alias of Luis Edgar Devia.

Reynaldo: alias of El Marrano.

Mohammad Reza: one of six Iranian Hizballah members detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadorian police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing but would be deported to Iran through Bogotá, Colombia, and Caracas, Venezuela. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Lawrence M. Rhodes: hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 843, a DC8 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, on February 21, 1968. It had left Tampa en route to West Palm Beach when Rhodes said he wanted to go to Cuba, where he was granted asylum. On February 10, 1970, Rhodes surrendered in Spain. He was committed to a mental institution, and hijacking charges were dropped on April 1, 1971. He was returned to jail on July 8, 1971. On July 17, 1972, he was sentenced to 25 years for robbery.

Juan Jose Ribelli: Argentine police chief inspector reported by a congressional commission on November 23, 1997, as having received a suspicious $2.5 million payment a week before the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires in which 86 people were killed and 231 or more injured. Prosecutor Eamon Mullen asked the FBI to search for any U.S. bank accounts Ribelli might have. Ribelli and two other senior provincial police officers and another former officer were charged in 1996 with assisting in the bombing. On September 24, 2001, his trial began; he was charged with helping deliver the van.

Roberto Ribiero Ruiz: variant of Roberto Riviero Ruiz.

Hernan Ricardo Losano: variant Lozano, alias Jose Vazquez Garcia. Venezuelan employee of Luis Posado Carriles's Caracas security agency who, with Freddy Lugo, was detained on October 8, 1976, in Barbados and returned to Trinidad the same night as suspects in the Cubana Airlines Flight 455 bombing. On October 18, 1976, Ricardo and Lugo confessed to placing a bomb that exploded on October 6, 1976, on Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean, killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. The Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. On October 20, Ricardo slit his wrist in his cell in a suicide attempt. On October 21, 1976, El Condor threatened to bomb a West Indies Airways plane in Trinidad and Tobago if Ricardo and Lugo were not released. On November 2, 1976, a Venezuelan judge indicted Ricardo and Lugo, along with Orlando Bosch and Luis Posada Carriles, on treason and qualified murder charges, which carry a maximum penalty of 30 years. Ricardo had named Bosch and Posada as the masterminds.

On September 26, 1980, the Caracas Permanent Council of War absolved the four defendants of charges of high treason and homicide, but the prosecutor successfully argued that the defendants should be tried under civilian penal code not military code. They were kept imprisoned pending a new trial.

On August 8, 1985, Ricardo and Lugo were convicted of homicide and sentenced to 20 years in prison. On August 4, 1987, the homicide conviction was upheld by a three-judge Venezuelan panel that agreed with the lower court's 20-year sentence.

Ricardo and Lugo were released in 1993 after serving 17 years.

Hernan Ricardo Lozano: variant of Herna Ricardo Losano.

Oran Daniel Richards: would-be hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 977, a Convair 880 flying from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, with a stop-over in Baltimore, Maryland, on July 12, 1968. Richards wanted to go to Cuba but surrendered to the pilot in Miami. He was committed to a Springfield, Missouri, hospital on September 3, 1969, after all charges were dropped. He was released from a state mental institution in Dayton, Ohio, on January 10, 1970.

Morgan Richards: alias of William W. Graham.

Robert Patrick Richter: hijacked Air Florida 8, en route from Miami to Tampa on July 7, 1983, and diverted to Havana, where he was arrested. Cuba had announced the day before that hijackers would face jail sentences of up to 40 years.

Miguel Gustavo Ricoy: Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN) guerrilla arrested on June 28, 1994, in the northern part of Costa Rica along with four Nicaraguans. Security forces found 11 assault rifles and a .38 caliber gun. On July 2, the government denied that it had extradited the EZLN rebel to Mexico. Costa Rica said that he had tried to purchase weapons and recruit men for the EZLN, which operated in the southern State of Chiapas, Mexico.

Libardo Rincon: suspected Colombian guerrilla arrested on May 25, 1987, by police in El Amparo in the southwestern Venezuelan state of Apure.

Miguel Rincon Rincon: Peruvian engineer who was arrested on April 16, 1989, by Peruvian police while he was traveling in a car with Jose Luis Francisco Gutierrez, a Colombian and suspected member of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19). Police found subversive propaganda from the outlawed Revolutionary Movement Tupac Amaru (MRTA) of Peru. Police suggested Gutierrez was the liaison between M-19 and MRTA, which two years earlier had created the now-dismantled America Battalion. American Battalion had staged armed operations in Colombia.

On December 1, 1995, Peruvian police arrested Rincon, who had moved up to MRTA's deputy chief, along with 20 followers in Lima's La Molina neighborhood following an eight-hour shootout. The group planned to take over the Peruvian Congress and kidnap congressional president Martha Chavez, the Peruvian prime minister, and others in a December 22 attack. On January 4, 1996, a Peruvian court sentenced him to life in prison.

Jose Rafael Rios Cruz: one of three Puerto Rican hijackers of Pan Am Flight 281, a B707 flying from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on November 24, 1968, and diverted to Havana, Cuba. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and a small child. The hijackers were arrested by Cuban authorities. The trio was indicted by a federal grand jury in December 23, 1968, in the Southern District of New York. Rios was apprehended in San Juan on August 2, 1976, and sentenced to 15 years.

Zenon Rios Montoya: Colombian member of the Colombian narcoguerrilla group Simon Bolivar Guerrilla Coordinating Board who was killed in a clash with Venezuelan authorities on June 11, 1988, in northern Tachira State at the San Felipe farm, Boca de Grita, Garcia Evia municipality. Rios was planning to kidnap a Venezuelan cattle rancher. He was part of a group that had recently held up two buses south of Lake Maracaibo.

Rivadeneira: would-be hijacker of an Avianca plane flying from Barranquilla to Medellin, Colombia, on April 25, 1971. He was overpowered by passengers and crew members.

Patriocio Rivadeneira: one of three April 19 Movement of Colombia terrorists who participated in the Ecuadoran leftist Alfaro Lives, Damn It kidnapping on August 7, 1985, of Nahim Isaias Barquet, an Ecuadoran banker in Quito. In an assault of the hideout by police on September 2, Rivadeneira was killed.

Edgar Rivas: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York and the Mexican Consulate. The members were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Efrain Octavio Rivas: signatory of a confessor letter by the Torrijist Patriotic Vanguard—December 20, a leftist subversive group in Panama, to claim credit for the January 31, 1993, kidnapping of three U.S. missionaries.

William Rivas Bolano: variant of William Rivas Bolanos.

William Rivas Bolanos: variant Bolano. Member of the El Salvadoran Revolutionary Workers Party of Central America, a subgroup of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, who was arrested in connection with the June 19, 1985, machine-gun attack on two outdoor cafés in San Salvador that killed four U.S. Marine guards and nine other diners. On January 26, 1988, the Salvadoran military appeals court ordered him freed under the country's November 5, 1987, amnesty law that was adopted as part of a regional peace plan. The U.S. Embassy withheld $18.5 million in economic support funds after the court said the attack was "political in nature." On January 28, 1988, the government held him pending preparation of an appeal of the ruling. On April 11, 1988, president Jose Napoleon Duarte ruled that he could not be freed under the amnesty, saying that international law takes precedence over national law.

Francisco Rivera-Perez: Cuban exile hijacker of National Airlines Flight 42, a DC8 flying from Los Angeles, California, to Miami, Florida, and diverted to Cuba. A complaint was filed on October 10, 1969, in the Western District of Texas. As of 1979, he remained at large.

Freddy Rivera Lizano: Costa Rican member of the People's Vanguard, a Costa Rican group, and one of several members of the Carlos Aguero Echeverria Command who fired a bazooka at a van carrying U.S. Marine guards to the U.S. Embassy in San Jose on March 17, 1981, injuring three marines and two Costa Ricans. He had originally said he was a Nicaraguan when he was arrested in April.

Raymundo Rivera Bravo: imprisoned Mexican People's Revolutionary Army (EPR) member whose release was demanded by the EPR members who bombed a pipeline owned by Pemex in the state of Guanajuato in early July 2007 and in the state of Queretaro on July 10, 2007. The Attorney General's Office said he was not in custody.

Rodolfo Rivera Rios: hijacker of Pan American Flight 299, a B747 flying from New York to San Juan, Puerto Rico, on August 2, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, the hijacker remained a fugitive from charges filed in the Eastern District of New York.

Felipe Rivero: head of the Cuban Nationalist Association, who was arrested by U.S. immigration authorities in Miami, Florida, on May 12, 1967, and ordered deported on July 11, 1967, after the group threatened to bomb the Cuban pavilion at Montreal's Expo 67. He claimed credit for the September 22, 1966, bombing of the Cuban Embassy in Ottawa.

Jonathan Riverson Castillo: member of the Che Guevara Command of Guatemala, a Mexican carrying a Salvadoran passport, and leader of three female Sandinista National Liberation Front members arrested on July 4, 1981, by Costa Rican Civil Guards. The group planned to take over the Guatemalan Embassy to obtain the release of political prisoners.

Roberto Riveiro Ruiz: variant Roberto Ribiero Ruiz. One of six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252 and the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli facility in Buenos Aires. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. The Brazilian citizen was arrested in Paraguay on January 30, 1995. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River delta. They were extradited from Paraguay on July 23, 1995, in connection with the discovery of an arsenal near Buenos Aires. They were released on July 27, 1995, in Argentina.

Robinson: only name given by a Panamanian resident alien who hijacked a Vermont Transit Lines bus traveling through the Bronx, New York, on July 4, 1977. He shot a librarian in the neck and then forced the driver to go to JFK International Airport. Robinson demanded a DC8 to Cuba and $6 million. He eventually surrendered after nine hours and was held without bail to undergo mental tests. Bath, Maine, authorities said he was being investigated in connection with stolen money orders.

Ida Patrice McCray Robinson: one of two hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 902, a B727 flying from San Francisco to Los Angeles, California, on January 7, 1972. The couple, accompanied by their child, wanted to go to Africa. She had smuggled firearms in the cradle of their 5-month-old. They settled for Cuba, stopping in Tampa, Florida, for refueling. As of 1979, the duo remained fugitives from an indictment handed down on August 2, 1972, by a federal grand jury in the Central District of California. On March 15, 1987, she was arrested by Sacramento police during a routine check on her three children.

Pablo Robleto Miranda: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front Pablo Fonseca Amado

Patrol hijackers of a Navajo plane in Managua, Nicaragua, on March 8, 1979. They ordered the captain to fly to Venezuela, but the pilot landed in Costa Rica's Juan Santamaría Airport, where they surrendered.

Roberto Roca: in February 1988, one of the five commanders of the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front (FMLN) in El Salvador and leader of the Revolutionary Party of Central American Workers. On January 30, 1989, he signed a communiqué from the FMLN General Command that was broadcast on San Salvador's Radio Cadena Ysu and on a Mexican radio station in which the group suspended attacks against U.S. military personnel.

R. Rodelo: hijacker of a SAM Beechcraft D80 flying from Barrancabermeja to Medellín, Colombia, on December 23, 1975. He entered the cockpit after takeoff. Upon landing, he demanded $65,000 and safe conduct to an unspecified country. Local authorities entered the plane, shot him twice in the head, and took him into custody. He died later in a hospital.

Donald Rodney: injured on June 14, 1980, when a bomb his brother was holding in his lap exploded in a car in which he was riding. Police believed Rodney and his brothers planned to set off the bomb at a prison where 17 members of their group were held for trying to overthrow prime minister Forbes Burnham's government in Guyana.

Edward Rodney: apprehended on June 14, 1980, when a bomb his brother was holding in his lap exploded in a car in which he was riding. Police believed Rodney and his brothers planned to set off the bomb at a prison where 17 members of their group were held for trying to overthrow prime minister Forbes Burnham's government in Guyana.

Dr. Walter Rodney: leader of the opposition Working People's Alliance in Guyana who was killed on June 14, 1980, when a bomb he was holding in his lap exploded in a car in which he was riding. Police believed Rodney and his brothers planned to set off the bomb at a prison where 17 members of their group were held for trying to overthrow prime minister Forbes Burnham's government.

Jose Rodone: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York and the Mexican Consulate. They were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

A. S. Rodríguez Díaz: one of four Cubans who, on April 25, 1959, hijacked a Cubana Vickers Viscount flying from Varadero Beach to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida.

Antonio Rodríguez Díaz: one of four Cubans who, on April 25, 1959, hijacked a Cubana Vickers Viscount flying from Varadero Beach to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida. He was a general under deposed Cuban President Batista.

Maria Rodríguez Díaz: one of four Cubans who, on April 25, 1959, hijacked a Cubana Vickers Viscount flying from Varadero Beach to Havana and diverted it to Key West, Florida.

Arturo Rodríguez Vives: one of nine members of El Poder Cubano arrested on October 23, 1968, in New York City and charged with six bombings, including the April 22, 1968, bombing of the Spanish National Tourist Office in New York and the Mexican Consulate. They were also charged with plotting to assassinate Cuban officials and embassy personnel and to invade Cuba, as well as with arson, reckless endangerment, criminal mischief, and illegal possession of weapons and explosives.

Carlos Rafael Rodriguez Lanz: alias Commander Anibal. Leader of the Venezuelan Revolutionary Party–Armed Forces of National Liberation, which claimed credit for the kidnapping by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos–Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976, of William Niehous, president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela. He was identified by Mrs. Niehous as one of the five kidnappers.

Edward E. Rodriguez: one of two men who chartered a Sawyer Aviation Cessna 310 to fly from Phoenix to Tucson, Arizona, on March 6, 1975. They forced the pilot to fly to Nogales, Mexico. The hijackers turned the plane and pilot over to a group that met the plane. The pilot escaped the next day and notified the authorities of the hijacking. Rodriguez was captured in Las Vegas on March 21, 1975. He was sentenced to six years in prison for kidnapping on July 17, 1975.

Jorge Antonio Rodriguez: a Venezuelan guerrilla group announced on August 6 that he had died on July 25, 1976, from torture and had not been involved in the kidnapping by the Group of Revolutionary Commandos–Operation Argimiro Gabaldon on February 27, 1976, of William Niehous, president of the Owens-Illinois glassmaking operations in Venezuela.

Jose Rodriguez Gomez: prominent Cuban exile wounded during the assassination of Aldo Vera Serafin, a Cuban exile involved with the Fourth Republic. The Fourth Republic had ties to Orlando Bosch, the leader of Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations. The assassination took place on October 25, 1976, as Serafin walked along a suburban San Juan street in Puerto Rico.

Jose Rodriguez Sosa: one of four Cuban exiles arrested on October 27, 1997, when U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico. The exiles were apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Isla Margarita off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco “Pepe” Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group’s executive board. Hernandez and Llama were summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. All were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted seven Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that in 1995 the seven and others began plotting to kill Castro. They obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a hillpoint stakeout that overlooked the airport. He noted its location and an offshore spot into satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro.

On December 8, 1999, the jury found the five Cuban exiles not guilty of plotting to assassinate Castro. This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. The U.S. District Court jury deliberated for eight hours over two days before declaring not guilty on all charges Angel Alfonso, age 59, Angel Hernandez Rojo, age 62, Francisco Secundino Cordova, age 51, Jose Rodriguez Sosa, age 59, and Jose Antonio Llama, age 67. Charges against another defendant were dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Marco Rodriguez Ramos: convicted on November 15, 1968, of conspiracy to damage ships of countries trading with Cuba. He and eight other anti-Castro exiles were given sentences ranging from 1 to 10 years.

Maria Isabel Rodriguez Muro: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Nicolas Rodriguez Bautista: member of the Maoist National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia who claimed credit for the May 3, 1988, kidnappings of several West European officials and business leaders. On July 10, 1989, the ELN military commander said that his group would soon release Norwegian anthropologist Bruce Olson, who had been kidnapped on October 24, 1988, by the Simon Bolivar Guerrilla Coordinating Board in the forest region of Catatumbo, Norte de Santander Department. By June 28, 1998, he had become the ELN's top commander and ruled out demobilization, despite peace talks with the new government of Colombian president Andres Pastrana. On August 9, 2000, he said that the ELN kidnappers of 26 biological researchers, including an American, all affiliated with the National University of Bogota's scientific expedition to study the local biodiversity of the grassy highlands of western Antioquia Province, were investigating the scientists' reason for being in the area.

Nieves Rodriguez Peralta: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Otto Rene Rodriguez Llerena: convicted on April 1, 1999, of setting off a bomb on August 4, 1997, at the Mehia Cohiba Hotel in Havana, Cuba, that caused no injuries. His death sentence was appealed automatically to the Supreme Court.

Pedro Rodriguez Hernandez: one of three hijackers of an Avianca B727 flying from Pereira to Bogota, Colombia, on May 11, 1974. The plane landed in Bogota, where the gunmen released 26 passengers. The plane flew to Cali, Pereira, and back to Bogota. The hijackers demanded to go to Cuba and wanted 8 million pesos ($317,300) but were rebuffed. Police stormed the plane at El Dorado Airport, killing one hijacker and capturing the other two. One was wounded in the leg.

Rene Maximiliano Rodriguez Lopez: alias Jaime. One of four individuals arrested on May 28, 1985, in connection with the May 24, 1985, bombing of National Electric Power high tension pylons that blacked out 1,400 kilometers of Chilean territory, including Santiago and Copiapo. The Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front claimed credit.

Ricardo Rodriguez Moya: one of four members of the Armed Communist League of Mexico who hijacked a Mexicana de Aviacion B727 flying from Monterrey to Mexico City on November 8, 1972. The plane returned to Monterrey, where 29 passengers deplaned. The group demanded the release of five comrades who had been arrested the previous day during a police search, a government promise to drop charges against two guerrillas who joined them, a doctor for a wounded prisoner, two machine guns and ammunition, four million pesos ($330,000), and a flight to Havana. The Mexican government complied. Mexico requested extradition of seven of the group on November 16, but was refused on November 30 because the terrorists' actions were deemed political. The ransom and weapons were returned to Mexico on January 2, 1973, but the 11 guerrillas were given political asylum by the Cubans.

Vilma Rodriguez: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Alberto Rojas: one of six members of Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation who hijacked an Avensa Convair Twin Engine CV440 en route from Ciudad Bolivar to Caracas, Venezuela, on November 28, 1963. The group dropped antielection leaflets over the city, then diverted the plane to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they were arrested. The six were extradited.

Anayibe Rojas Valderama: alias Sonia. Commander of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) who, on July 2, 2007, was sentenced by a Washington federal court to 17 years in a U.S. prison for exporting cocaine to the United States to finance FARC.

Angelica Rojas: member of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPF) who was jailed under Chile's Pinochet regime. On May 31, 1991, she was one of the MRPF leaders who abandoned armed struggle to form a legal political organization named the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Movement.

Armando Rojas: one of six members of Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation who hijacked an Avensa Convair Twin Engine CV440 en route from Ciudad Bolivar to Caracas, Venezuela, on November 28, 1963. The group dropped antielection leaflets over the city, then diverted the plane to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they were arrested. The six were extradited.

Fermina Rojas: one of five armed pro-Castro National Liberation Army guerrillas who hijacked a Colombian Aerocondor DC4 flying from Barranquilla to San Andres Islands in Colombia and diverted it to Cuba on August 6, 1967. Fidel Castro granted them political asylum.

Fernando Rojas Rivadenera: participant in the Ecuadoran leftist Alfaro Lives, Damn It kidnapping on August 7, 1985, of Nahim Isaias Barquet, an Ecuadoran banker in Quito. In an assault of the hideout by police on September 2, Rojas was killed.

Gabino Rojas: arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia.

Guillermo Rojas Franno: arrested on August 21, 1983, by the Colombian secret police and charged in the March 7, 1983, kidnapping of Kenneth Stanley Bishop, a U.S. executive of the Texas Petroleum Company in Colombia. His driver and bodyguard were killed. Rojas was also charged with the July 23, 1982, kidnapping and murder of Gloria Lara de Echeverri, a Liberal political leader.

Jorge Ivan Rojas Sanchez: variant Jorge Sanchez Rojas; alias el Negro. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Nick Roland: alias of Nikolai Wischnewsky.

Jaime Enrique Roman: one of five individuals arrested on March 16, 1987, by Melipeuco, Chile, authorities for holding up a Brink's car carrying arms into Argentina and also in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the Chilean presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Wilfred Roman Oquendo: alias J. Marin. Hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 202, an Electra L188 from the United States to Cuba on July 24, 1961. He boarded the plane under the alias J. Marin. Roman was indicted on August 23 by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Florida. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

Romana: leader of the 53rd Jose Antonio Anzoategui Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia from 1996 to 1998. On March 3, 1996, the Colombian Prosecutor General's Office issued an arrest warrant for him in the kidnapping and murder on January 13, 1994, of U.S. missionaries Stephen Everett Welsh and Timothy Van Dyke.

Alejandro Romero Romero: member of the People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador (FPL), who was arrested for involvement in the FPL's April 6, 1983, assassination in Nicaragua of Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, the group's leader. The murder weapon and blood-stained clothing were found in their possession.

Carlos Alberto Romero Flores: arrested on March 7, 1986, and charged with the February 15, 1986, murder of Peter Hascall, a U.S. citizen, in San Salvador.

Carlos Ali Romero Varela: defendant in a plot announced on November 6, 2002, by the U.S. Department of Justice to use drug money to buy weapons for terrorists. Right-wing Colombian paramilitaries planned to buy $25 million worth of East European weapons with cocaine and cash. Operation White Terror began 13 months earlier with meetings of undercover FBI and Drug Enforcement Administration agents in London, Panama City, and the Virgin Islands. The arms were to go to United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia, a paramilitary umbrella group involved in hundreds of assassinations, kidnappings, and massacres. The group planned to buy shoulder-fired antiaircraft missiles, 9,000 assault rifles, grenade launchers and nearly 300,000 grenades, 300 pistols, and 53 million rounds of ammunition. In April, a would-be buyer was shown samples in St. Croix. The four defendants were Carlos Ali Romero Varela and Uwe Jensen, both of Houston, and Colombian nationalists Cesar Lopez (alias Commandant Napo) and defendant Commandant Emilio. They were charged in a Houston federal court with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and conspiracy to provide material support and resources to a foreign terrorist organization. The charges carry life sentences. Jensen was arrested on November 5 in Houston. He claimed he was Danish with U.S. citizenship. The others were grabbed the same day in San Jose, Costa Rica, and faced extradition to the United States.

Francisco Romero: Honduran who was one of 120 guerrillas killed in El Salvador in December 1982 during a two-week period.

Julio Romero Talavera: Costa Rican guerrilla leader captured on January 25, 1981, while supplying arms and whose release was demanded by the Pedro Pablo Castillo Front of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN). On September 10, 1985, FMLN kidnapped Ines Guadalupe Duarte Duran, the daughter of president Jose Napoleon Duarte, in El Salvador. The government pardoned Romero on September 30, 1985, and permitted him to return to Costa Rica.

Raul Renato Romero Ceballos: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Roberto Romero Gracial: one of three Cuban exiles who hijacked Northeast Airlines Flight 6, a B727 flying from Miami, Florida, to New York City on May 26, 1969, and diverted to Cuba. Photos of two of the hijackers were found in FBI files. A complaint was filed on May 29, 1969, in the Southern District of Florida. An indictment was handed down on February 18, 1970. As of 1979, the trio remained at large.

Victor Romo: would-be hijacker of a Mexican DC6 flying from Mexico City to Hermosa on February 8, 1969. He was overpowered by passengers.

Pedro Rosa: Cuban who was one of 120 guerrillas killed in El Salvador in December 1982 during a two-week period.

Jorge Rosal: one of the rebel representatives who on December 29, 1996, agreed to end 36 years of fighting with the signing of a peace agreement with the Guatemalan government.

Marcial Rosales: name used by one of the members of the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front when buying tickets to hijack a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981. The flight was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua. The hijackers requested political asylum in Cuba.

Rigoberto Rosales: alias used to register for the October 29, 1981, Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 that was hijacked by five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement.

William Rosales: alias used to register for the October 29, 1981, Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 that was hijacked by five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement.

Ismael Rosani: one of two brothers denied visas to the United States and then threw Molotov cocktails at the U.S. Consulate in São Paulo, Brazil, on September 15, 1983.

Paulo Jacobo Rosani: one of two brothers denied visas to the United States and then threw Molotov cocktails at the U.S. Consulate in São Paulo, Brazil, on September 15, 1983.

L. Rosas: alias given by a Cuban hijacker who was accompanied by his wife and five children as he diverted National Airlines Flight 43, a DC8 flying from Miami to Tampa, Florida, and San Francisco on October 30, 1970. They flew on to Cuba, where he remained a fugitive as of 1979.

James R. Rose Jr.: former Navy diver and demolitions expert who was arrested in Miami in July 1978 for plotting to bomb Soviet and Japanese whale boats moored in the harbor of Talcahuano, Chile.

Alvin Ross Diaz: jailed in the September 1976 car bombing in the United States of Chilean Orlando Letelier. On September 15, 1980, the U.S. Court of Appeals overturned his conviction, ordering new trials for the two men convicted of murder. On May 30, 1981, a federal appeals court acquitted him of murder and conspiracy in the Letelier case.

Eduardo Pereira Rossi: individual with ties to the Montoneros who was killed on May 14, 1983, in a shootout with police along the Pan American Highway in Buenos Aires, Argentina. Rossi had recently acquired Italian citizenship.

Rossmann: leader of the six to eight Indians of the former anti-Sandinist Yatama who, on July 2, 1994, kidnapped four U.S. citizens fishing in Caribbean waters near Cape Gracias a Dios on the northeastern tip of Nicaragua. The group included Miskito, Sumu and Rama Indian, and Creole groups. He was believed to be from Santa Marta.

Andrew Rowe: British citizen of Jamaican descent and a convert to Islam who was sentenced to 15 years in September 2005 by a British court.

As a cover, he pretended to be a traveling cell phone salesman and used references to Nokia phone models as code words for terrorist communications. Police believed that he was planning, with fellow Bosnian war veteran Lionel Dumont, a major attack in Europe. The duo met in a Frankfurt hotel in August 2003; Dumont was spending time there with his new German wife. The duo met again in Frankfurt, but Rowe was under U.K. and German surveillance. Police raided his London home during Rowe's travels and found a code book and instructions on how to fire mortar shells. Rowe was arrested while boarding a Chunnel train on the French coast. His socks in his luggage bore traces of explosives, including TNT.

Atilio Ruiz: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. His release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released him.

Guillermo Elbecio Ruiz Gomez: alias William. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Jorge Alberto Ruiz: alias Cacho. Argentine rug and lamp peddler named by police as a suspect in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Nancy Ruiz Nano: Peruvian Shining Path member arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Orestes Ruiz Fernandez: Cuban exile member of the National Liberation Army Colombia and Miami resident. Ruiz was imprisoned on August 9, 1976, in Mexico City on charges of plotting with Gaspar Eugenio Jimenez Escobedo to kidnap and murder Daniel Ferrer Fernandez, Cuban consul in Merida, Mexico, on July 24, 1976, when bombs were found in his luggage. They mistook Dartagnan Diaz, an official of the Cuban Fisheries Institute who was accompanying him, for the consul and shot him. His release was demanded by the Anti-Communist Latin American Army bombers of the Manhattan Mexican Consulate on February 5, 1978.

S

---

Fajkumar Naraindas Sabnani: on July 25, 2002, SEPRINTE, the Paraguayan counterterrorism secretariat, raided the Ciudad del Este office and apartment of the alleged Hizballah-connected money launderer. Three of Sabnani's employees were arrested, but Sabnani was in Hong Kong. A cache of what were likely bomb-making materials, letters showing weapons sales, and wire transfer receipts were confiscated.

Juan Jose Saborio Campos: one of two brothers arrested by the Rural Guard for setting off a bomb on June 11, 1985, that destroyed a tower owned by the Costa Rican Electricity Institute that helped carry electricity from Costa Rica to Nicaragua. They were carrying false Rural Guard identification cards, four fragmentation grenades, a .32 caliber pistol, a detonator, and other items linking them to the bombing. The Homeland and Freedom group claimed credit.

Ricardo Alberto Saborio Campos: one of two brothers arrested by the Rural Guard for setting off a bomb on June 11, 1985, that destroyed a tower owned by the Costa Rican Electricity Institute that helped carry electricity from Costa Rica to Nicaragua. They were carrying false Rural Guard identification cards, four fragmentation grenades, a .32 caliber pistol, a detonator, and other items linking them to the bombing. The Homeland and Freedom group claimed credit.

Pedro Haroldo Sac Sompjij: on February 4, 1996, Sac attempted to assassinate recently inaugurated Guatemalan president Alvaro Arzu Irigoyen as he was riding his horse along the Tanque de la Union Street near the ruins of Santa Clara in Antigua Guatemala, 45 kilometers south of the capital. Police killed the attacker with three gunshots after he crashed his pickup truck into the president's convoy, injuring Capt. Byron Miguel Lima, a guard who was on horseback.

Sandro Sacucci: Italian neofascist arrested in Cordoba, Argentina, on February 20, 1985, on suspicion of participation in several terrorist attacks in Italy and elsewhere in Europe and the 1975 murder of a Communist militant. On April 24, 1985, the Italian government asked for further clarifications regarding Argentina's denial of extradition.

Gerardo Saenz Roman: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993, and fined up to 1 billion soles.

Guillermo Saenz Vargas: alias Alfonso Cano. Saenz became the leader of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) in March 2008 upon the death of Mario Marulanda. The former anthropology student at the National University in Bogota joined the Communist Party's youth organization. In college, he was known for his polite formality and love of dance, literature, poetry, and film. In 1982, following jail time for rebellion, he joined FARC. He soon became a key political strategist in talks with the government, attending negotiations in Mexico and Venezuela.

Marenales Saenz: one of 150 political prisoners whose release was demanded by the National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) who kidnapped Sir Geoffrey M.S. Jackson, British ambassador to Uruguay, on January 8, 1971. On September 6, 1971, some 106 Tupamaros escaped from the Punta Carretas, Uruguay, prison by digging a tunnel. Two days later, the group said there was no point in keeping Jackson, and they freed him the following day.

Miguel Saenz: Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front spokesperson in Mexico in January 1991.

Javier Saez Paiva: detained on August 1, 1988, upon arriving in Chile on a flight from Buenos Aires, Argentina, on orders of the military prosecutor in charge of several terrorism trials. Saez was linked to the discovery of the clandestine arsenals in northern Chile in August 1986 thought to belong to the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, which attempted to assassinate President Pinochet in September 1986. Saez was freed on August 5, 1988, after five leaders of the Metropolitan Coordinating Board of Settlers, an organization linked to the illegal Chilean Communist Party, occupied the Swedish Embassy in Santiago to demand his release.

Irma Salazar: arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia.

Julian Salazar Calero: Salazar, age 46, was arrested on June 3, 1996, in a New York federal prison after being named in five arrest warrants in Peru for membership in the Shining Path. He had been detained pending deportation. The Peruvians said he had been involved in numerous attacks that had resulted in the deaths of police officers and civilians.

Angel Alberto Salguera Nunez: alias Roberto Americo Aragon Aragon. Salvadoran who, on August 7, 1994, hijacked Panamanian COPA Flight 317, a B737-200 flying the Guatemala–San Salvador–Managua–San Jose–Panama route, and asked to fly to Mexico. He was overpowered at Managua International Airport. He had boarded in Guatemala. He used a false passport with the name of Roberto Americo Aragon Aragon. He had planned to request political asylum in the Netherlands or Australia. He told the press that he had been attacked by Salvadoran guards some months earlier and received death threats.

Angelica Salas de la Cruz: one of 10 Shining Path terrorists and supporters living abroad and sentenced by a Peruvian military court to life in prison on May 19, 1993, and fined up to 1 billion soles.

Jose Salazar Mendoza: member of the El Salvadoran Revolutionary Workers Party of Central America, a subgroup of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front. Salazar was killed in a crossfire between police and his colleagues while police were trying to arrest them in connection with the June 19, 1985, machine-gun attack on two outdoor cafés in San Salvador. The attack killed four U.S. Marine guards and nine other diners.

Rodolfo Saldana: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Mazen Ali Saleh: arrested by Paraguayan police on October 3, 2001, on criminal association and tax evasion charges. He was linked to Hizballah.

Sergio Rodrigo Salem: one of six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252 and the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli facility in Buenos Aires. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River delta. They were extradited from Paraguay on July 23, 1995, in connection with the discovery of an arsenal near Buenos Aires. They were released on July 27, 1995, in Argentina.

Abumason Sali: one of six Iranian Hizballah members detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing and would be deported to Iran through Bogota and Caracas. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Ali Salim: name used by one of three terrorists reported by Paraguay's Noticias on August 31, 1994, to have entered the country on August 27, 1994, to conduct a bombing against the Jewish community in Buenos Aires. They were to travel from Barcelona, Spain, via Hungary and Germany then to Rio de Janeiro or São Paulo, then to Foz do Iguacu or Asuncion, to Ciudad del Este, then onward with their explosives to Buenos Aires for a September 3 attack. Salim was born in 1969 and was 1.65 meters tall, slim, and dark skinned.

Herman Salvatierra: alias used by an individual to register at the Guatemala City Ritz Continental Hotel. A firearm was discovered in his room. It was believed that he was involved in the plot to assassinate Guatemalan president Ramiro de Leon Carpio on June 30, 1994.

Luis Alberto Miguel Samaniego: alias of Fernando Torres Campos.

Elvia Nila Sanabria Pacheco: Shining Path Central Committee member and one of 70 Shining Path members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Amado Sanchez Ortega: aliases Daniel Batista, Hussein, Mahara. Member of the Panamanian 20 December Movement and one of the suspects in the June 10, 1992, shooting in Panama of U.S. Southern Command Corp. Zak A. Hernandez, who was killed, and Sgt. Ronald Marshall, who died the next day of his wounds. He worked as a security guard at Legislator Gonzalez's farm in Calzada Larga. On January 25, 1995, the Second Court of Justice ordered further investigations and reissued the arrest warrant against him; he had been charged with the attack. He also faced charges of homicide, association to commit a crime, and injury to a minor. On October 28, 1995, the Fourth Superior Attorney's Office formally indicted him for the murder of Hernandez. He remained at large.

Camilo Sanchez: Guatemalan Rebel Armed Forces leader arrested on August 24, 1968, and whose release from prison was to be demanded in what was intended to be the kidnapping of John Gordon Mein, U.S. ambassador to Guatemala on August 28, 1968. Mein was killed in the botched kidnapping.

Carlos Sanchez Gonzalez: Argentine arrested on September 13, 1981, by Peruvian antiterrorist forces.

Felix Sanchez Rodriguez: Cuban exile who, on December 12, 1988, used a fake bomb to demand that Trans World Airlines Flight 469, a B727 flying from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami, Florida, fly to Cuba. The plane landed in the Turks and Caicos Islands, where he was arrested peacefully. The United States drafted a warrant for his arrest. The hijacker claimed he wanted to visit his seriously ill mother on the island.

Francisco Sanchez: Italian who was one of 120 guerrillas killed in El Salvador in December 1982 during a two-week period.

Humberto Sanchez: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aero-postal and Avenza planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Javier Sanchez Valverde: Costa Rican member of the People's Vanguard, a Costa Rican group, and one of several members of the Carlos Aguero Echeverria Command who fired a bazooka at a van carrying U.S. Marine guards to the U.S. Embassy in San Jose on March 17, 1981, injuring three marines and two Costa Ricans. He had originally said he was a Nicaraguan when he was arrested in April. On April 29, 1981, police announced that he had confessed to the attack.

Jose Armando Sanchez: one of two hijackers—joining his wife and five children—of an Avianca twin-engine Avro 748 flying from Bogota to Bucaramanga, Colombia, on May 31, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Juan Sanchez: one of 10 jailed followers of Che Guevara freed when members of the National Liberation Army occupied Teoponte, Bolivia, and kidnapped two West German technicians on July 21, 1970. The government freed the 10 the next day, flying them to Chile. The former prisoners reached Cuba via Mexico on August 30.

Ligia L. Sanchez Archila: alias of hijacker Lydia Lucrezia Sanchez.

Lydia Lucrezia Sanchez: alias Ligia L. Sanchez Archila. Guatemalan-born hijacker who, along with her boyfriend Robert Lee Jackson, on July 2, 1971, forced the pilot of Braniff Flight 14, a B707 flying on the Acapulco–Mexico City–San Antonio, Texas, run to fly to Monterey, Mexico. In Monterey, they received $100,000 from a Braniff official in exchange for the release of the passengers. The plane flew on to Lima, Peru, and Rio de Janeiro, where police tried and failed to arrest the hijackers. The plane flew on to Buenos Aires, Argentina; the hijackers were looking for an Algerian representative who would arrange political asylum for them. The Argentine government surrounded the plane, and the hijackers surrendered after 16 hours. The Argentine police took the money from them, although Jackson tried to hide $10,000 in his socks. Complaints were filed against the duo in the Western District of Texas on July 2, 4, and 6, 1971. An Argentine court sentenced her to three years on December 15, 1971. The duo was extradited to Mexico on July 25, 1974. As of 1979, they remained fugitives from U.S. charges.

Rodoballo S. Sanchez: on January 3, 1974, claiming that he had a hand grenade, he walked through a shop area and boarded an Air Jamaica DC9 scheduled to fly to Detroit, Michigan, from Kingston. He demanded to fly to Miami, Florida. Two security guards overpowered him.

Tranquilino Sanchez Venegas: former Mexican policeman arrested on March 26, 1994, for complicity in the assassination of Luis Donaldo Colosio, presidential candidate of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, as he was campaigning in Tijuana, Mexico, on March 23, 1994. A federal judge freed him on April 1995.

Eduardo Sancho Castaneda: alias Nelson. Member of Armed Forces of National Resistance who was arrested on August 11, 1978, in connection with the kidnapping and murder on May 17, 1978, in El Salvador of Fugio Matsumoto, Japanese president of Central American Synthetic Industries, a textile firm.

Robert Lee Sandlin: hijacker of Delta Airlines Flight 518, a DC9 flying the Dallas–Atlanta–Augusta–Charleston route on March 17, 1969, that was diverted to Havana, Cuba. He was confined for his first six months in a Cuban jail, held in a cell block with other Americans. He returned to the United States via Canada with other hijackers on November 1, 1969. He was committed to a mental institution on February 1, 1972. He was released on a second 18-month furlough on December 5, 1973.

Carlos Arturo Sandoval: aliases Jose Antonio Gomez Feo, Number 30. One of 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who seized the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, and took 54 hostages, including numerous diplomats and Colombian officials. Sandoval died in the initial gun battle. He was identified as Gomez, but the real Gomez said that his identity card had been stolen.

Gerardo Sandoval Montalvan: one of three hooded members of the National Salvation Democratic Front who, on March 12, 1993, tried to occupy a Radio Mundial studio in Managua, Nicaragua. The takeover was in support of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who, on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. Lopez and the others were arrested after broadcasting a proclamation in support of Jose Manuel Urbina Lara, the leader of the anti-Sandinista gunmen. Lopez and the others were released as part of a negotiated deal with the anti-Sandinista gunmen.

Maria Clemencia Sandoval Garcia: aliases Susana, Martha. One of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Antonio Sanguino: former member of the Colombian National Liberation Army who was a Bogota city councilman in May 2008.

Giuseppe Santangelo: arrested on January 21, 1995, in São Paulo, Brazil, by a group of carabinieri from Trapani, Italy, in collaboration with Brazilian police. He had been sentenced to 18 years in prison for the 1976 killing of two carabinieri in Alcamo. He was part of a group that forced open a barracks door and killed the duo as they slept “to strike a blow against a body of the state.” He was married with two children and lived 40 kilometers outside São Paulo, working as a cleaner.

Julio Cesar Santiago Diaz: on December 22, 1997, 100 masked gunmen wearing blue uniforms gunned down Acteal, Mexico, villagers using .22 caliber rifles and AK47s in a nine-hour slaughter that began after a 9:00 A.M. church service. The victims included 14 children, an infant, 9 men, and 21 women, 4 of whom were pregnant. Some were hacked to death. Most of the victims were members of the peasant group Las Abejas (The Bees), who support the goals, but not the violence, of the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN). EZLN had rebelled in January 1994 to demand rights for Chiapas State’s impoverished Tzotzil Indians. The state police visited the town once, perhaps twice, during the incident but apparently did nothing to stop it, saying that they heard no gunshots. On April 2, 1998, police arrested Julio Cesar Santiago Diaz, a retired army general serving as chief of staff of the Chiapas State police and head of the state’s auxiliary police force. The Attorney General’s Office said that by standing by and doing nothing, he contributed to the slaughter. He was in the area with other police officers for five hours during the massacre. The Attorney General’s Office said, “He heard sporadic gunshots and machine-gun bursts, but he did not intervene or ask for help from a nearby police detachment.” Instead, he hid inside the Acteal schoolhouse and told his superiors that nothing unusual was happening.

Antonio Santiz: Mexican paramilitary fighter whom the Chiapas State government, on December 22, 2007, rearrested for ordering the 1997 massacre by right wingers of 45 Tzotzil Indians in Chiapas.

Affonso Felipe dos Santos: Brazilian who, on October 31, 1990, attempted to hijack Varig Airlines Flight 709, a B747 due to arrive in Rio from Lisbon. He was deported to Brazil because he had no money to support himself in Portugal. After boarding the plane in Lisbon dressed as a woman, he broke into the cockpit using tear gas. He appeared to be hallucinating, according to the passengers. He lived in São Paulo and had a long police record of assault, indecent exposure, and vagrancy.

Cleone Santos: one of two men taken into custody on February 26, 2005, by Brazilian police on charges of aiding the two gunmen, Rayfran das Neves Sales and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista, who on February 12, 2005, shot to death Sister Dorothy Stang, age 74. Stang was an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary from the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. She was killed in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para State, Brazil. Cleone and Magnaldo Santos worked for the rancher, Vitalmiro Moura, who ordered the murder. They allegedly gave food and clothing to Neves and Batista while the assassins were hiding in the jungle to ambush Stang.

V. de Los Santos: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curaçao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Guillermo Santos: Cuban soldier who hijacked a military helicopter with Andres Izaguirre, helped kill the pilot, and landed in Key West, Florida, on March 20, 1964. No charges were brought.

Joao Carlos dos Santos: leader of the eight armed members of the Juarez Guimarez de Brito command of the Action for National Liberation and Popular Revolutionary Vanguard who kidnapped West German ambassador Ehrenfried von Holleben in Rio de Janeiro on June 11, 1970. The Brazilian government freed 40 political prisoners, who flew to Algiers, where they were granted political asylum. He was captured by Brazilian authorities on July 24, 1971.

Magnaldo Santos: alias Negao. One of two men taken into custody on February 26, 2005, by Brazilian police on charges of aiding the two gunmen, Rayfran das Neves Sales and Clodoaldo Carlos Batista, who, on February 12, 2005, shot to death Sister Dorothy Stang, age 74. Stang was an American-born naturalized Brazilian missionary from the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur. She was killed in an isolated settlement of landless peasants 30 miles from Anapu in Para State, Brazil. Magnaldo and Cleone Santos worked for the rancher, Vitalmiro Moura, who ordered the murder. They allegedly gave food and clothing to Neves and Batista while the assassins were hiding in the jungle to ambush Stang.

Roberto Mario Santucho: public accountant and leader in the early 1970s of the Argentine People's Revolutionary Army. His wife was killed in an August 22, 1972, prison break near Trelew, Argentina. He flew to Havana, Cuba, on August 15, 1972, after having escaped from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires. He was killed in a gun battle with police on July 19, 1976, in Villa Martelli, a suburb five miles from Buenos Aires.

On July 23, 1976, the Argentine Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica, was badly damaged by a bomb thrown by the Roberto Santucho Revolutionary Group.

Saragot Sardi: one of six Iranian Hizballah members detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252. They had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing and would be deported to Iran through Bogota and Caracas. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Abdul Schalam: Palestinian wanted by Paraguayan authorities on February 20, 1991. He was believed responsible for 47 terrorist attacks in the Middle East and Europe. He reportedly entered Paraguay through Ponta Pora and was to contact foreigners, including Iraqis, who had arrived in Asuncion two weeks earlier. They were believed to be planning terrorist attacks in Paraguay and Argentina.

Hani Abdel-Rahim Hussein al-Sayegh: Saudi, age 28, who was detained on March 18, 1997, by Ottawa immigration officials as “a security risk to Canada.” The FBI wanted to question him in the June 25, 1996, truck bombing of the U.S. military’s compound at Khobar Towers near Dhahran that killed 19 U.S. airmen and wounded 547 others. U.S. officials believed he was a Shi’ite Muslim, possibly the driver of the truck or the getaway car. Shi’ite activists said the Sayegh family came from Tarut, 25 miles northwest of the Khobar Towers. He claimed he had lived in Syria for the previous two years to avoid government harassment for his dissident views. He had studied Islam in Qom, Iran, in 1987. He claimed his wife wanted to visit her family in Tarut and was to meet him in Kuwait. After the bombing, she was placed under house arrest. He was carrying an international driving permit issued in Syria on August 3, 1994. He was held in the Ottawa Detention Center. On May 5, 1997, Canadian federal judge Donna McGillis ruled that there was conclusive evidence that he participated in the bombing, clearing the way for deportation. He declined to take the stand in his own defense. The Los Angeles Times quoted Canadian intelligence officials as saying that he kept surveillance on the target, was at the wheel of the car that signaled the driver of the truck bomb and assisted in the terrorists’ escape. Canada issued a conditional deportation order on May 14, 1997. On May 16, 1997, he expressed interest in cooperating with U.S. authorities. He said that he had studied in Shi’ite Muslim schools in Iran for 10 years and was a member of Hizballah in Saudi Arabia. He claimed to have close contacts with Iranian intelligence. He dismissed his Canadian attorney, Douglas Baum, on May 29, 1997, saying that he did not want to cooperate with the United States. The FBI took custody of him on June 17, 1997. He had agreed to cooperate in the investigation and to enter a guilty plea to surveying U.S. installations for a planned 1995 attack that never took place. He was represented by New York City immigration attorney Michael Wildes when indicted on one count of conspiracy on June 18, 1997. The charge carried a 10-year prison term. The grand jury indictment said that in December 1995, he had traveled to Jizan in the southwest to determine the availability of weapons and explosives for use against U.S. targets. On July 9, 1997, he decided he wanted to explore political asylum in Cuba. He derailed the plea bargain on July 30, 1997, pleading not guilty to the conspiracy charge and saying that he had no information about the Khobar attack. On September 8, 1997, the Justice Department announced it was dropping charges because it lacked sufficient evidence to prosecute. The department said U.S. immigration authorities would seek to deport him to Saudi Arabia. On October 21, 1997, U.S. district judge Emmet Sullivan formally dropped the bomb plot charges. On January 22, 1998, the Immigration and Naturalization Service ordered him deported from the United States. He was deported to Saudi Arabia on a U.S. government plane on October 11, 1999.

Luitz Schewesman: alleged member of a Libyan-sponsored Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine hit team targeting President Reagan and other senior government officials in November 1981. Some reports located the assassins in Mexico or Canada.

Giomar Schmidt: wife of Mario Raul Klacho wanted in the March 21, 1972, kidnapping and murder of Oberdan Sallustro by the Argentine People's Revolutionary Army's (ERP) Luis Pujales and Segundo Telesforo Gomez units. Oberdan Sallustro was president and managing director of the Italian-owned Fiat of Argentina. The group demanded the release of 50 of the more than 500 political prisoners held by the government, a gift of $1 million worth of school supplies and shoes to schoolchildren in poor areas of the country, the reinstatement of 250 workers who had been fired in a 1971 labor strike, the release of Sindicatos de las Empresas de Fiat, MaterFer y ConCord (SITRAC/SITRAM) union workers who had been jailed, and the publication of ERP communiqués. The "people's prison" was discovered on April 10, and during the rescue attempt, the kidnappers killed Sallustro. Schmidt was acquitted of all charges.

Charles Schwandner: one of two hijackers who used the aliases Mr. Hughes and Mr. Garth and took over a Jamaica Air Taxi Ltd. Cessna 182 that had been chartered to take an excursion flight from Kingston around Jamaica on March 21, 1972. The duo had rented the plane for sightseeing. One man pulled a knife and ordered the pilot to fly to Cuba.

Francisco Secundino Cordova: one of four Cuban exiles arrested on October 27, 1997, when U.S. authorities stopped a boat off the west coast of Puerto Rico. The exiles were apparently planning to assassinate Cuban president Fidel Castro. The agents seized two rifles, ammunition, and other military supplies. One of the men said the weapons would be used to kill Castro during an Ibero-American summit in November on Isla Margarita off the coast of Venezuela. One of the weapons was a high-powered rifle belonging to Francisco "Pepe" Hernandez, president of the Cuban American National Foundation. The boat was owned by Jose Antonio Llama, a member of the group's executive board. Hernandez and Llama were summoned to testify before the U.S. grand jury in San Juan. All were charged with violations of the U.S. Neutrality Act, illegal weapons possession, and attempting to bring those weapons into U.S. territory. On August 26, 1998, a federal grand jury in San Juan, Puerto Rico, indicted seven Cuban Americans on charges of conspiring to assassinate Castro. The indictment said that in 1995, the seven and others began plotting to kill Castro. They obtained two .50 caliber semiautomatic rifles, a 46-foot yacht modified for long-distance cruising, night-vision goggles, and satellite positioning devices. The indictment said Llama obtained one of the sniper rifles and purchased the yacht. He accompanied his colleagues to Isla Margarita on October 17, 1997, where they identified a hillpoint stakeout that overlooked the airport. He noted its location and an offshore spot into satellite location devices. The team intended to use the handheld positioning devices to land at night in a dinghy and fire at Castro.

On December 8, 1999, the jury found the five Cuban exiles not guilty of plotting to assassinate Castro. This was the first time the U.S. Department of Justice had charged anyone with plotting to kill Castro. The U.S. District Court jury deliberated for eight hours over two days before declaring not guilty on all charges Angel Alfonso, age 59, Angel Hernandez Rojo, age 62, Francisco Secundino Cordova, age 51, Jose Rodriguez Sosa, age 59, and Jose Antonio Llama, age 67. Charges against another defendant were dismissed the previous week; a seventh defendant was too ill to stand trial.

Santiago Najarro Sedot: variants Cedo, Como. One of three Shining Path "annihilation squad" members arrested on May 24, 1995, after they set off a car bomb in front of the Maria Angolas Hotel in Lima's Miraflores district, killing 5 people and wounding 64. The attack came minutes after 8 hooded gunmen entered the hotel's casino and ordered the 30 people there to lie on the floor. After failing to open the casino safe, the gunmen left the building and set off the car bomb.

German Segovia: one of four members of the Armed Communist League of Mexico who hijacked a Mexicana de Aviacion B727 flying from Monterrey to Mexico City on November 8, 1972. The plane returned to Monterrey, where 29 passengers deplaned. The group demanded the release of five comrades who had been arrested the previous day during a police search, a government promise to drop charges against two guerrillas who joined them, a doctor for a wounded prisoner, two machine guns and ammunition, four million pesos ($330,000), and a flight to Havana. The Mexican government complied. Mexico requested extradition of seven of the group on November 16 but was refused on November 30 because the terrorists' actions were deemed political. The ransom and weapons were returned to Mexico on January 2, 1973, and the 11 guerrillas were given political asylum by the Cubans.

Pierre Seguin: a Quebec Liberation Front kidnapper who was permitted safe passage to Cuba on December 2, 1970, following the kidnappings of James Richard Jasper Cross, the British trade commissioner in Quebec, on October 5, 1970, and Quebec minister of labor and immigration Pierre LaPorte, whose body was found on October 18.

Alberto Segura: leader of the Peruvian Shining Path in the late 1970s and early 1980s.

Juan Oscar Selis Valderrama: member of Colombia's Ricardo Franco Movement who died on September 23, 1986, during a police raid of a Bogota hideout to free hostage Flor Alba Manrique de Ocampo, wife of a Modelo Jail guardsman.

Raul Sendic: founder of the Uruguayan National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros). He was arrested on August 7, 1970, by Uruguayan authorities. He was one of the 150 political prisoners whose release was demanded by the Tupamaros who kidnapped Sir Geoffrey M. S. Jackson, British ambassador to Uruguay, on January 8, 1971. On September 6, 1971, some 106 Tupamaros escaped from the Punta Carretas, Uruguay, prison by digging a tunnel. Two days later, the group said there was no point in keeping Jackson, and they freed him the following day. Sendic was rearrested in September 1972.

On December 19, 1974, the Raul Sendic International Brigade claimed credit for the Paris assassination of Col. Ramon Trabal, the Uruguayan military attaché to France and the United Kingdom.

On September 17, 1984, Sendic was sentenced to 45 years in prison by the Uruguayan Military Supreme Court.

On November 20, 1986, he returned home after a year's travel to Europe and Cuba, where he underwent surgery for facial wounds suffered in a shootout.

On March 16, 1989, Tupamaros' sources said he was taken to France to undergo specialized treatment for a neurological disease. On April 6, 1989, he was taken to a Menninger clinic in Paris for treatment of charcot, a type of arthritis. He was suffering from "lateral muscular amyotrophic sclerosis which greatly limits the movement of his upper and lower limbs, tongue, face, and eating and breathing muscles." He died on April 28, 1989, at age 63.

Gonzalo Sepulveda: engineering student at the University of El Valle who was killed when an April 19 Movement of Colombia bomb he was setting at the U.S. Consulate in Cali, Colombia, exploded prematurely on May 11, 1980.

Aldo Vera Serafin: Cuban exile who was involved with the Fourth Republic, which had ties to Orlando Bosch, the leader of Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations (CORU). He was assassinated on October 25, 1976, as he walked along a suburban San Juan street in Puerto Rico. He was named head of the technical investigations department, the main intelligence organ of the Cuban police, when Fidel Castro came to power in 1959. He fled Cuba in the early 1960s after a split with Castro.

Sergio: alias of Erick Orlando Orozco.

Manuel Serna Ponce: on March 15, 1996, the Peruvian Supreme Court of Military Justice reaffirmed the Peruvian's life sentence for membership in Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement.

Jesus Serrate: one of four Cuban gunmen who, on April 16, 1959, hijacked a Cuban Aerovias DC3 flying from Havana to the Isle of Pines, Cuba, and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where four U.S. border patrolmen arrested them. They claimed that they had been imprisoned in La Cabana Fortress and were attempting to escape execution. They had requested the pilot to fly to the Dominican Republic, but he said he did not have enough gas.

Leonard Serrate: one of four Cuban gunmen who, on April 16, 1959, hijacked a Cuban Aerovias DC3 flying from Havana to the Isle of Pines, Cuba, and diverted it to Miami, Florida, where four U.S. border patrolmen arrested them. They claimed that they had been imprisoned in La Cabana Fortress and were attempting to escape execution. They had requested the pilot to fly to the Dominican Republic, but he said he did not have enough gas.

Rodolfo Setau: released on October 30, 1995, for lack of evidence of links to the key suspects in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He had been held since October 19, 1995.

Barbaro Leodan Sevilla Garcia: one of 8 to 10 Cuban hijackers who, on April 2, 2003, took over the Baragua, a 50-foot ferry, in Havana harbor and sailed it to sea until it ran out of fuel. The hijackers claimed by radio to be armed with three pistols and a knife and threatened to throw the 50 passengers overboard unless they were given another boat to reach the United States, about 40 miles away. The ferry is part of a small flotilla that shuttles Cubans from one side of Havana Bay to the other. The FBI sent a hostage negotiation team. The Coast Guard dispatched two cutters. Cuba also sent two ships from the Frontier Guards and threatened to use force to free the hostages. The hijackers freed three ill adults. The hijackers agreed to let the ferry be towed to Mariel, west of Havana. On the afternoon of April 3, authorities rescued the hostages and arrested the hijackers. The hostages, including one Frenchman, had begun jumping overboard at a signal from Cuban officers. Military divers helped the hostages swim to safety. Some hijackers jumped overboard but were captured.

Despite the protests of human rights groups, on April 11, Cuban firing squads executed three of the hijackers at dawn after convicting them on terrorism charges. They were identified as Lorenzo Enrique Copello Castillo, Barbaro Leodan Sevilla Garcia, and Jorge Luis Martinez Isaac. They had been given three days to appeal. The death sentences were upheld by Cuba's Supreme Tribunal and by the ruling Council of State. Another four received life sentences.

Hassan Shihadah: name used by one of three terrorists reported by Paraguay's Noticias on August 31, 1994, to have entered the country on August 27, 1994, to conduct a bombing against the Jewish community in Buenos Aires, Argentina. They were to travel from Barcelona, Spain, via Hungary and Germany then to Rio de Janeiro or São Paulo, then to Foz do Iguacu or Asuncion, to Ciudad del Este, then onward with their explosives to Buenos Aires for a September 3 attack. He was born in 1969 and was blond and bearded.

Henry L. Shorr: hijacker of Pan Am Flight 551, a B720 flying on the Mexico City–Merida–Miami run and diverted to Cuba on October 21, 1916. He committed suicide in a Cuban hotel on September 28, 1970.

Sure Shot: alias of Manuel Marulanda.

Ricardo Sibrian: commander of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front in El Salvador in 1988.

Luis Arturo Sienrra Mata: one of four Tupamaros or Argentine People's Revolutionary Army members who hijacked an Aerolineas Argentinas B737 flying from Buenos Aires to Salta, Argentina, on October 20, 1973. The group forced the pilot to fly to Tucuman and then to Yacuiba, Bolivia, where they released all but five of the hostages and demanded a smaller plane to fly to Cuba. The group surrendered after two days, when Bolivia promised safe passage to Cuba.

Luis Sierra Molano: member of Colombia's Ricardo Franco Movement who died on September 23, 1986, during a police raid of a Bogota hideout to free hostage Flor Alba Manrique de Ocampo, wife of a Modelo Jail guardsman.

Roy Siller: unsuccessful hijacker of a local private plane from the United States to Cuba on August 5, 1963. He was fined $150.

A., D., and M. Silva Mahecha: three of four hijackers of an Avianca DC3 flying from Yopal to Sogamoso en Boyaca, Colombia, on May 21, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

Amparo Silva: leftist Colombian lawyer married to Nidia Tobom, an associate of Carlos, the Venezuelan-born Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorist, assassinated with Romero Buj on November 24, 1974, on one of Bogota's main streets. On January 7, 1977, the Pedro Leon Arboleda Marxist-Leninist Group claimed credit for the murders.

G.D.J. Silva: alias of Nelson Mesquita.

Joao Leonardo da Silva Rocha: São Paulo lawyer whose release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Luis Alberto Silva: one of five members of the Brazilian Armed Revolutionary Guard-Joao Palmares Command who hijacked a Brazilian Cruzeiro do Sul Caravelle flying from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro on January 1, 1970, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba, after 48 hours of stopovers.

Norma Estela Simard Bravo: one of six Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism-Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981. She was arrested on October 30, 1981, in El Salvador, pending extradition. El Salvador agreed to extradition on November 2, but the court system denied extradition on November 16 due to incorrect filing of the extradition request by Costa Rica. She was arraigned on December 5, 1981.

Allen Gordon Sims: one of two hijackers of Pacific Southwest Flight 902, a B727 flying from San Francisco to Los Angeles, California, on January 7, 1972. The couple, accompanied by their child, wanted to go to Africa. They settled for Cuba, stopping in Tampa, Florida, for refueling. As of 1979, the duo remained fugitives from an indictment handed down on August 2, 1972, by a federal grand jury in the Central District of California. He lived in Havana until 1978. As of March 15, 1987, when accomplice Ida Patrice McCray Robinson was arrested in Sacramento, California, he was serving a 50-year prison term in the United States.

Joel Siqueira Jr.: hijacker of a VASP B737 flying from São Paulo to Brasília on February 22, 1975. He demanded 10 million cruzeiros ($1.3 million), pistols, parachutes, the release of two political prisoners, and radio time for a broadcast. When the plane landed, four policemen slipped into the plane and shot and critically wounded him.

Alvin Antonio Siu Moses: Nicaraguan Miskito Indian exiled in Colombia who, on January 31, 1989, hijacked an ACES Airlines B727 flying from San Andres to Medellin and diverted it to San Jose, Costa Rica. He threatened to set a passenger afire but was overpowered before the plane landed. The hijacker, who lived on San Andres Island, said he wanted to be reunited with his relatives in Jamaica, Miami, or Nicaragua. San Jose's Radio Impacto said an anonymous caller claimed he intended to demand that several political prisoners accused of drug trafficking in Costa Rica be released. The radio station said he would be deported.

Clinton Robert Smith: one of two hijackers of National Airlines Flight 64, a DC8 flying from Los Angeles, California, to Miami, Florida, which had just pulled out of New Orleans, Louisiana, on January 28, 1969, when it was diverted to Cuba. The duo had escaped from a California prison, where they were serving terms for robbery. As of 1979, they were fugitives from an indictment handed down on January 28, 1970 by a federal grand jury in the Central District of California.

Erick Snacke: one of two Chilean Socialists held in a Santiago military jail whose release was demanded by four Chilean Socialists, three of them brothers, who hijacked a Ladeco B727 flying from Arica, Chile, on a domestic flight and diverted it to Lima, Peru, on July 5, 1977.

Alfredo Soiza: Catholic priest and deputy vicar of eastern Santiago, Chile. On December 4, 1987, a court summons was issued for him in connection with the September 1, 1987, kidnapping by the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chilean Army Col. Carlos Carreno in front of his home in Santiago.

Mohammed Ali Aboul-Ezz al-Mahdi Ibrahim Soliman: alias Sulieman. Egyptian arrested by Brazilian Federal Police in April 2002 in the triborder area city of Foz de Iguazu on the basis of an Egyptian government extradition request for his involvement in the 1997 al-Gama'at al-Islamiyya attack on tourists in Luxor, Egypt. The Brazilian Supreme Court released him on September 11, 2002, due to insufficient evidence to extradite him.

Domingo Solis Solis: Costa Rican suspected of carrying out the August 1988 holdup of the Bank of Spain in Chiriqui Province, Panama. Police believed he was linked to leftist revolutionary groups possibly financed by Libya, Cuba, or Nicaragua. He was captured in a shootout in the mountains but later escaped from jail.

Luis Humberto Solorzano Gonzales: Nicaraguan whose release from Costa Rican prison was demanded by the five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981.

Isolde Sommers: one of five members of the Brazilian Armed Revolutionary Guard–Joao Palmares Command who hijacked a Brazilian Cruzeiro do Sul Caravelle flying from Montevideo to Rio de Janeiro on January 1, 1970, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba, after 48 hours of stopovers.

Carlos Fernando Soria del Pino: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Evencio Sosa Mateur: Colombian citizen who died on October 17, 1986, in a clash between Venezuelan military authorities and Colombian guerrillas linked with drug traffickers along the border.

Jose Soto Matsabias: member of the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement who, on January 7, 1991, hijacked a Faucett Airlines DC8 in Trujillo, Peru, and ordered it flown to Lima. He demanded $750,000 in ransom and refueling. A policeman dressed as a maintenance technician entered the plane and shot the hijacker to death. Soto was armed with eight hand grenades and a pistol.

Julio A. Soto Arellano: member of the People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador (FPL) who was arrested for involvement in the FPL's April 6, 1983, assassination in Nicaragua of Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, the group's leader. The murder weapon and blood-stained clothing were found in their possession.

Luis Soto: Venezuelan political prisoner whose release was demanded by the dozen Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos who hijacked three Venezuelan Aeropostal and Avensa planes in Venezuela on December 7, 1981.

Rene Gumersindo Soto Sanchez: name used by one of two members of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front who left a bomb in a room he had checked out of in the Carrera hotel in Santiago, Chile, on June 10, 1985. The hotel is across the street from La Moneda Palace, the residence of president Augusto Pinochet.

D. Romulo de Souza: hijacker of a Brazilian Varig B707 flying from Santiago, Chile, to London, United Kingdom, via Buenos Aires, Argentina, on March 12, 1970, and diverted to Cuba.

David Spencer: one of two Canadians convicted in the kidnapping of Brazilian supermarket mogul Abilio Diniz, who was freed in 1989 after police captured 10 suspects with links to the Chilean and Argentine Revolutionary Left Movements. They were suspected of having ties with the Popular Revolutionary Forces. On November 20, 1998, Brazilian authorities placed Spencer and Christine Lamont on a Canadian airliner. They were to be eligible to apply for parole on December 28, 1998.

Clemmie Stubbs: hijacker of United Airlines Flight 361, a B727 flying the Cleveland–Atlanta–Tampa–West Palm Beach route on March 11, 1970, that was diverted to Cuba. Stubbs, his wife, and four children remained in Cuba, where he was imprisoned for attempting to escape the country. He was shot and killed while trying to escape from prison on March 26, 1973. His wife and children returned to the United States on May 30, 1974.

Aramis Suarez Garcia: one of five Cuban hijackers of Eastern Airlines Flight 73, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, and diverted to Cuba on November 23, 1968. The hijackers were accompanied by a woman and three small children believed related to one of the hijackers. The group was indicted on March 10, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the Western District of Kentucky. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Arturo Suarez Ramos: one of three would-be hijackers, including Rosalina Suarez Lafita and her son, Juan Carlos Jimenez Gonzalez, on March 10, 1987, of Cubana Airlines Flight 706, an AN-245 departing from Rancho Boyeros Airport to Nuevo Gerona, Isle of Youth. Using a hand grenade, he tried to divert the plane to Miami. The grenade exploded, injuring 13 passengers. He was shot and killed by an off-duty member of the National Revolutionary Police. She and Arturo Suarez Ramos had two other grenades but were overpowered by the passengers. In the confusion, Suarez Ramos escaped but was captured five hours later in the Jaimanitas neighborhood.

Jose Antonio Suarez Garcia: Cuban exile hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 960, a B720 flying from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami, Florida, but diverted to Cuba on September 20, 1968. He had entered the United States illegally on July 26, 1968, and had been examined for psychiatric disturbance. A complaint was filed in the district court in San Juan on June 16, 1969. As of 1979, he remained a fugitive.

Benjamin Suarez: would-be hijacker of an Aero Opita Tao flying from San Andres Island to Bogota, Colombia, on July 18, 1972. He killed the pilot and severely wounded the copilot, who managed to land the plane. Suarez was overpowered by the passengers.

Jose Dionisio Suarez y Esquivel: Cuban exile fugitive charged with the September 1976 car bombing of former Chilean ambassador Orlando Letelier. The FBI, on March 27, 1979, said it wanted to question him about the bombings in New York and New Jersey on March 24, 1979, by Omega-7, an anti-Castro Cuban exile group. He had pleaded not guilty to the murder. On April 11, 1990, he was arrested in St. Petersburg, Florida. On April 18, 1990, he pleaded not guilty in the U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C. He was to appear in May before U.S. district judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr., who was to set a trial date. Suarez had been released in 1978 after serving 11-plus months in a D.C. jail on a contempt charge for refusing to testify before a grand jury on the case despite a grant of immunity. Suarez said he fled Cuba in October 1960 and lived in the United States for most of the time. He divorced his first wife in 1979 and married his current wife in Puerto Rico in 1981. He lived for three years at his wife's St. Petersburg home, where he was arrested, and had lived in the area for six years. He and his wife, the administrator of a medical office, had a 15-month-old son. The FBI said Suarez helped buy bomb components. On November 15, 1990, he was sentenced to 12 years per the terms of a plea bargain.

Rosalina Suarez Lafita: one of three would-be hijackers, including her son, Juan Carlos Jimenez Gonzalez, on March 10, 1987, of Cubana Airlines Flight 706, an AN-245 departing from Rancho Boyeros Airport to Nuevo Gerona, Isle of Youth. Using a hand grenade, Jimenez tried to divert the plane to Miami. The grenade exploded, injuring 13 passengers. He was shot and killed by an off-duty member of the National Revolutionary Police. Suarez and another passenger, Arturo Suarez Ramos, had two other grenades but were overpowered by the passengers.

Carlos Subyac: one of six convicted kidnapers and terrorists—five Guatemalans and one Honduran—executed by a firing squad on March 3, 1983, three days before the scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II to Guatemala.

Alejandro Sucksdorf: Argentine Nazi sympathizer and former civilian intelligence officer who was implicated by his estranged wife in the 1992 attack on the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Susana: alias of Maria Clemencia Sandoval Garcia.

Susana: alias of Modesto Carita Velazquez.

T

---

T.T.: alias of Kazuo Toshira.

Muhammad Taa: one of three Lebanese arrested on July 28, 1994, by Costa Rican police in David when they tried to cross the Panamanian border with Costa Rica with false passports. They were suspected of involvement in the suicide bombing of ALAS Flight HP-1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer on July 19, 1994, that killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen. The plane went down shortly after leaving Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit.

Carlos A. Tabares: one of three hijackers of an Avianca B727 flying from Pereira to Bogota, Colombia, on May 11, 1974. The plane landed in Bogota, where the gunmen released 26 passengers. The plane flew to Cali, Pereira, and back to Bogota. The hijackers demanded to go to Cuba and wanted 8 million pesos ($317,300) but were rebuffed. Police stormed the plane at El Dorado Airport, killing one hijacker and capturing the other two, one of whom was wounded in the leg.

Roberto Tacanga Lavado: would-be hijacker in Lima of an Aeroflot Ilyushin II-86 on September 30, 1987. He entered the plane with a false police identification card and a revolver loaded with blanks. The plane was ready to take off for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics via Havana, Cuba. He was found by a crew member and notified police, who captured Tacanga hiding in the rest room. Tacanga shouted to police, "Kill me, because I will not say a word."

Pier Luigi Tagliari: on October 11, 1982, Bolivia expelled him to Italy in connection with the bombing of a train in Bologna on August 2, 1980, that killed 84 and injured 189.

Motan Mohamad Taha: name on the passport of one of three Lebanese arrested on July 28, 1994, by Costa Rican police in David when they tried to cross the Panamanian border with Costa Rica with false passports. They were suspected of involvement in the suicide bombing of ALAS Flight HP-1202, a twin-engine Brazilian-made Embraer on July 19, 1994, that killed 2 crew and 19 passengers, including a dozen Israeli businessmen. The plane went down shortly after leaving Colon Airport in Panama. The Partisans of God, believed to be a Hizballah cover name, claimed credit. They reportedly were freed in August 1994.

Bassam Taher: Austrian terrorist, age 36, arrested by police from Mexico, Austria, and Germany on April 12, 2001, in Tonala on Mexico's Pacific coast where he and his wife, Beate Graf, were living illegally. One of Interpol's five most wanted suspects in the world, Taher was wanted for several terrorist acts against firms in Austria from 1988 to 1995. He worked with several radical leftist groups, including the Vienna-based Anarchy and the Palestinian Group of the Radical Left.

Al-Kabir Talcan: variant Balkan. Moroccan arrested in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. Hizballah was suspected. He entered Argentina on July 11, 1994.

Carlos Tamayo: employee of the Chilean Public Works Ministry who hijacked a LAN B727 flying from Antofagasta to Santiago, Chile, on June 21, 1977, and diverted it to Mendoza, Argentina. He initially wanted to go to Algeria. He was talked into surrendering.

Ernesto Tanuz: Syrian, age 64, arrested on October 8, 1994, by Argentine police. He was an owner of the house where the previous day police had arrested ‘Ali al-Hasan in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. His son Julio was also detained.

Julio Tanuz: Syrian, age 24, arrested on October 8, 1994, by Argentine police. He was an owner of the house where the previous day police had arrested ‘Ali al-Hasan in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. His father Ernesto was also detained.

Hector Ramon Tapia: one of five Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement members arrested in 1989 and charged with kidnapping a businessman. On November 24, 1994, Chilean president Eduardo Frei asked Brazilian president Itamar Franco to order the release of the five Chilean terrorists sentenced to 28 years in prison in Brazil and expel them.

Hesham al-Tarabili: arrested on September 14, 2002, by Brazilian authorities at Egypt’s request in connection with the 1997 al-Gama’at al-Islamiyya attack on tourists in Luxor, Egypt.

Cancio Tason: former Panamanian soldier under arrest at Renacer Jail whose release was demanded by the kidnappers who grabbed Takashi Ota, a Japanese executive of the Citizen Company in Latin America, in Panama on March 14, 1992.

F. Taveras: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic to Curaçao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Flavio Tavares: Brazilian newsman charged in 1966 with organizing guerrilla activities and arrested in 1969 on charges of membership in a terrorist group called the Revolutionary Movement of July 26. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Carlos Alberto Telledin: variant Tellerdin; alias Ramon Martinez. Key suspect questioned in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. Police believed he had sold a Renault van used in the bombing. On August 9, 1994, Judge Galleano ordered proceedings and preventive arrest of Telledin for “concealment,” illegal replacement of an engine, and forgery of a private document. His assets were confiscated up to 100,000 pesos.

Carlos Alberto Tellerdin: variant of Carlos Alberto Telledin.

Dora Maria Tellez Argueyo: alias Dos. Medical student who was one of 25 Sandinista National Liberation Front members who seized the national palace in Managua, Nicaragua, on August 22, 1978.

Pedro Tepet: one of six convicted kidnappers and terrorists—five Guatemalans and one Honduran—executed by a firing squad on March 3, 1983, three days before the scheduled visit of Pope John Paul II to Guatemala.

Joaquim Teixeira: Brazilian Action for National Liberation successor to Carlos Marighella. Teixeira hijacked a Brazilian Viavao Aerea de São Paulo B737 flying from Brasília to Manaus and diverted it to Havana after refueling in Georgetown, Guyana, on April 26, 1970.

Clay Thomas: hijacker of a United Airlines San Francisco to Seattle flight on March 13, 1978, diverting it to Oakland, California. He claimed to have terminal cancer. Thomas hoped to go to Memphis, and later Cuba, but surrendered. He was slightly injured during his arrest. He was charged with air piracy. Bond was set at $250,000.

Clifford Thomas: seajacker, along with his wife and two children, of the pleasure boat Spook in the United States on July 22, 1974. The couple forced the crew to take the boat to Havana, Cuba, after leaving Key West, Florida. The four were turned over to competent courts to be tried in accordance with Cuban law for the most severely penalized offense in accordance with the acts they had committed.

Del Lavon Thomas: hijacker of Wein Consolidated Salta Flight 15, a B737 flying from Anchorage to Bethel, Alaska, on October 18, 1971. He had served a prison sentence for manslaughter. He permitted the passengers to deplane in Anchorage. He flew on to Vancouver and demanded to go to Mexico City. An hour out of Vancouver, he ordered the plane to return, hoping for a larger aircraft. Upon landing, a Royal Canadian Mounted Police inspector boarded the plane. An hour later, Thomas surrendered. He was deported to the United States on October 19, 1971, and was sentenced on May 12, 1972, to 20 years for air piracy.

Guillermo Victor Thomas: alias Julian. Named by Paraguayan police as a suspect in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastacio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980.

Katie George Thomas: alias Mrs. Peralta. Iraqi Christian member of Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine who used a forged Ecuadorian passport of Katie George Thomas, one of the hijackers of Japan Airlines Flight 404 on July 20, 1973.

Libio Tiborcio Sadino: Dominican and one of the 16 members of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who took over the embassy of the Dominican Republic on February 27, 1980. The gunmen ultimately flew to Cuba.

Alberto Tirado Cotrina: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Victor Manuel Tirado Lopez: Mexican reported by some as being the Sandinista National Liberation Front's Commander Cero, who led the seizure of the national palace in Managua, Nicaragua, on August 22, 1978.

Elkin Tobon: attempted to hijack a Cessna general aviation Beechcraft C45 on April 9, 1974, prior to takeoff from Medellin, Colombia, for its flight to Turbo. Tobon, age 17, pointed a knife at the pilot and demanded to go to Lima, Peru. A cargo handler overpowered him.

German Tobon Sarmiento: April 19 Movement of Colombia terrorist who participated in the Ecuadoran leftist Alfaro Lives, Damn It kidnapping on August 7, 1985, of Nahim Isaias Barquet, an Ecuadoran banker in Quito. On September 11, 1985, he was gunned down while being transferred by the national police from the penitentiary to the Modelo Barracks, where he was to await sentencing for the kidnapping and murder.

Carlos Toledo Plata: physician and one of the founders of the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19). On July 7, 1980, Panama or Ecuador (reports differ) said it would consider the extradition request for him from Colombia. He was somehow involved in the M-19 takeover of the Dominican Republic Embassy on February 27, 1980, in Colombia, involving dozens of hostages. Colombia gave him amnesty in 1982. He was killed outside his home by gunmen on a motorcycle shortly before the government and M-19 Peace Accord was to be signed.

Celsa Toledo: Venezuelan arrested on October 14, 1976, by Venezuelan authorities in connection with the October 6, 1976, bombing of Cubana Airlines Flight 455, a DC8 flying to Jamaica and Cuba with stops at Georgetown, Guyana, and Port of Spain, Trinidad. The plane crashed into the ocean killing all 73 people on board, including 58 Cubans. Coordination of United Revolutionary Organizations and the anti-Castro Cuban exile group El Condor claimed credit. See also Orlando Bosch, Freddy Lugo, Luis Posada Carriles, and Hernan Ricardo Losano.

Patrick Toledo: one of six members of the Puerto Rican Armed Forces of National Liberation who hijacked an Avenza Convair Twin Engine CV440 en route from Ciudad Bolívar to Caracas, Venezuela, on November 28, 1963. The group dropped antielection leaflets over the city, then diverted the plane to Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, where they were arrested. The six were extradited.

Francisco Torcios Jimenez: arrested on December 17, 1979, during a clash with El Salvador guardsmen in a labor dispute at a coffee plantation in Berlin, El Salvador. His release from Usulután Prison, 70 miles east of San Salvador, was demanded by 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army (ELN) of Colombia. The ELN members kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980. On January 14, 1980, the government released him.

Carlos La Torre Cardenas: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began his extradition proceedings from Sweden on terrorism charges.

Gisela La Torre Carrasco: on March 11, 1993, the Peruvian government began her extradition proceedings from Sweden on terrorism charges.

Alfredo Torres: evangelical pastor who served as an intermediary between the April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19) and Bitterman's Institute. He was arrested on March 10, 1981, in connection with the January 19, 1981, kidnapping and murder by a dissident M-19 faction of the Bible translator Chester Allen Bitterman.

Brilan Torres-Llurdan: one of three hijackers of Trans-Caribbean Airlines Flight 401, a DC8 flying from Newark to San Juan on August 19, 1970, and diverted to Cuba. As of 1979, the three were fugitives from an indictment handed down on March 25, 1971, by a federal grand jury in the district of New Jersey.

Carlos Julio Torres Angel: attorney and deputy from Chia who was a member of a group that attacked the residence of U.S. ambassador to Colombia Arthur McNamara on July 5, 1989, shooting a U.S. Marine in the shoulder. An arrest warrant had earlier been issued against Torres by the municipal court in Chipaque on charges of forgery. Police found emeralds valued at 80 million pesos, one million pesos in cash, and propaganda of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia at the scene.

Claudio Torres de Silva: sentenced to 10 years in December 1969 for his part in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick.

Felipe Torres: National Liberation Army (ELN) leader released from a Colombian prison in October 2003 in hopes of spurring the ELN to accept government demands to declare a cease-fire and come back to the negotiating table. As of January 2004, peace talks had not resumed.

Fernando Torres Campos: one of two Peruvian Shining Path members who Uruguayan police said on December 14, 1995, were being tracked after the two flew into Uruguay with falsified Bolivian papers obtained in Quito, Ecuador. After arrival, they went to the headquarters of the National Liberation Movement (the former Tupamaros), seeking shelter and claiming that they were being pursued by unidentified individuals. The duo requested refugee status. He identified himself as Luis Alberto Miguel Samaniego. The media said the duo attempted to open bank accounts in Uruguay to collect a $2 million ransom they sought for releasing Doria Medina, who had been kidnapped on November 1, 1995, in Bolivia by the Shining Path. The duo appeared in a Montevideo court and was released because the judge had no request for their arrest or extradition from Peru. The Supreme Criminal Court of Cusco, Peru, requested his extradition on March 7, 1996. On December 24, 1996, Uruguay confirmed that the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement member, who had been imprisoned in December 1996 for entering the country with a false passport, had been released by an appeals court.

Torres was believed responsible for leading raids in 1991 and 1992 against police stations, public offices, towns, and radio stations.

Francisco Torres Cruz: spokesperson for the five gunmen of the left-wing National Independent Committee for the Defense of Prisoners, the Politically Persecuted, and the Missing who took over the German Consulate in Oaxaca, Mexico, on October 29, 1990.

Guillermo Torres: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia commander and a singer-songwriter who was killed on March 1, 2008, by the Colombian Armed Forces in a firefight and air strike near the border with Ecuador.

Hugo Torres: one of two hijackers of a CMA DC6 flying from Merida to Mexico City and diverted to Cuba on November 18, 1968.

Hugo Torres: alias Uno. Law student and one of 25 Sandinista National Liberation Front members who seized the national palace in Managua, Nicaragua, on August 22, 1978.

Martinez Torres: alias of Ilich Ramirez Sanchez.

Miguel Angel Torres: small farmer arrested on September 9, 1978, for involvement in the Armed Forces of National Resistance kidnapping on August 14, 1978, of Kjell Bjork, a Swedish technical director of Telefonica LM Ericsson, when he left the offices of Dada and Company in San Salvador, El Salvador.

Yoan Torres Martinez: Torres, age 21, was one of three renegade soldiers who, on May 3, 2007, tried to hijack a plane at Havana's Jose Marti International Airport, killing their hostage, Army Lt. Col. Victor Ibo Acuna Velazquez. The three recruits had escaped from a Cuban military base after killing a soldier and wounding another.

Carlos Manuel Torrez Mendoza: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Jose de la Torriente: leader of the Miami-based Cuban Liberation Front in 1971.

Kazuo Toshira: aliases T.T., Dober Wilfredo Ruiz Fukumoto; variant Dogwer Wilfredo Reiz Fukumoto. Used a Peruvian passport and was one of three members of the Japanese Red Army alleged by La Manana on April 1, 1995, to have entered Uruguay using false passports within the past two weeks. The paper speculated that they planned to carry out a bombing in neighboring Brazil or Argentina. They were believed to be in the River Plate area. He was arrested on June 12, 1995, in Ciudad del Este, capital of Alto Parana Department, in Paraguay. The Japanese Embassy confirmed his true name.

Reyes Tovar Menjivar: Salvadoran whose release was demanded by the Honduran leftist Cinchonero National Liberation Front hijackers of a Honduran Air Services B727-200 flying from Tegucigalpa to New Orleans on March 27, 1981, that was diverted to Managua, Nicaragua.

Rodrigo Tovar Pupo: alias Jorge 40. Colombian paramilitary leader in November 2006 who was one of 13 senior paramilitary leaders of the right-wing United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia extradited to the United States on May 13, 2008. They had been accused of ordering the murders of thousands of people, including peasants, leftist politicians, journalists, and union activists. While in Colombian jails, they ran a cocaine trafficking organization.

Michael V. Townley: U.S.-born agent of the Dirección Nacional de Inteligencia (DINA), the Chilean intelligence service, who on May 11, 1979, was sentenced by a U.S. District Court judge to serve a reduced sentence of a minimum of 40 months for the bomb that exploded in Washington, D.C., on September 21, 1976, killing Orlando Letelier, who was the Chilean ambassador to the United States during Salvador Allende's administration, and Ronni Karpen Moffitt, an administrative assistant at the Trans National Institute, a division of the Institute for Policy Studies. Townley cut a plea deal in exchange for his testimony against other suspects. Townley claimed that he was working for Gen. Juan Manuel Contreras Sepulveda, the former head of Chile's secret police, and Col. Pedro Espinoza and that he was aided in the assassination by Capt. Armando Fernandez Larios.

On May 6, 1983, Argentina requested Townley's extradition on charges that he helped assassinate

Gen. Carlos Prats and his wife in a car bombing on September 30, 1974, in Buenos Aires. Townley's pending release from jail was blocked by the extradition request. He had served 62 months of a 10-year sentence for the Letelier murder. On July 25, 1983, a federal magistrate denied extradition. A witness protection program relocated Townley.

Carlos Trana: Nicaraguan blamed for the murder of a Costa Rican policeman. He escaped arrest in a police raid on June 28, 1994, that netted a Zapatista National Liberation Army guerrilla and four Nicaraguans in Costa Rica.

Begona Trasvina: variant Trevino. One of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989. She was accompanied by her four-month-old daughter. The daughter's father was Juan Miguel Bardezi, alias Juan Miguel Barbesi Torres (or Trevino), who was also expelled.

William Alben Truitt: former U.S. vice president Alben W. Barkley's (under president Harry S. Truman) grandson hijacked a Key West Airlines Cessna 177 chartered to fly from Key West to Dry Tortugas Island and diverted it to Cuba on October 23, 1968. He was placed under arrest in Cuba until January 1969, when he was put on a ship going to France. He got off at St. John, New Brunswick, and was arrested at Champlain, New York, on February 8, 1969. On August 13, 1969, he was convicted of air piracy and kidnapping and received two 20-year consecutive terms. He was paroled on September 11, 1972.

Luis Travassos: former National Student Union president who was also active in the radical movement of the Roman Catholic Church in Brazil. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Commander Tres: alias of Luis Francisco Otero Cifuentes.

Commander Tres: alias of Fernando Gonzalez.

Simon Trinidad: alias of Ricardo Palmera.

Angela Trujillo: Colombian People's Liberation Army member who was killed in Bogota on November 20, 1985, by gunmen on a motorcycle.

Shaykh Subhi al-Tufayli: leader of the Followers of God and living in Lebanon. On July 24, 1994, the Argentine government instructed the attorney general to request that Judge Galeano request his extradition in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. Hizballah was suspected. On July 29, Lebanon rejected the request, saying that there was no Ansarallah group and that no Lebanese were involved. Al-Tufayli also denied involvement.

Charles A. Tuller: one of four hijackers, including his two sons, who took over Eastern Airlines Flight 496, a B727 flying from Houston to Atlanta on October 30, 1972. They shot to death a ticket agent who tried to stop them, then wounded a maintenance man. The plane refueled in New Orleans before flying to Havana, Cuba. An indictment was handed down against them by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of Texas on November 6, 1972. They were also charged with the murder of Arlington policeman Israel P. Gonzalez and bank manager Harry J. Candee during an attempted robbery of the Arlington Trust Company's Crystal Mall branch on October 25, 1972. They were also charged with attempted bank robbery and the attempted murder of Gladys Willier, a bank clerk who was wounded in the attempt. The senior Tuller was a former Commerce Department worker who became a self-styled white-collar revolutionary. The Tullers found Cuba not to their liking, describing periods of solitary confinement, starvation, and boredom. They secretly returned to the United States via Jamaica in June 1975. Bryce Tuller was captured on July 3, 1975, during an attempted robbery of a K-Mart store in Fayetteville, North Carolina. His father and brother turned themselves in to the FBI soon afterward in Washington, D.C. The trio was found guilty of air piracy on June 24, 1976, and sentenced to 50 years on July 16, 1976. He died in prison of a heart attack in 1987.

Sindy Tumay: one of three Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia members arrested on November 30, 2007, when Colombian authorities announced a raid of a rebel hideout that contained videos of 15 captives, including 3 Pentagon contractors, and of Ingrid Betancourt, a former Colombian presidential candidate kidnapped in 2002. Authorities said the five videos had been taken in October 2007.

Viveca Turcson: Dane arrested on June 30, 1983, for links with the Shining Path in Peru. She was turned over to the Danish Embassy in Lima on July 5, 1983.

U

---

Oswaldo Ucasqui: Argentine citizen believed to be the Bolivian National Liberation Army killer of Roberto Quintanilla, the former Bolivian consul general in Hamburg, who was shot to death in the consulate on April 1, 1971. On May 13, 1973, Ucasqui and Monica Ertl were killed in a shootout with police.

E. Ugarteche: Argentine student who hijacked an Aerolineas Argentinas B707 flying from Buenos Aires to Miami on October 8, 1969, and diverted it to Havana, Cuba, via Santiago, Chile.

Robert Jose Uhrig: released on July 18, 1995, for lack of evidence in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Commander Ulises: leader of the Ernesto Morales Sandoval squad, which operated along the coastal areas of El Salvador. He turned himself in to the Treasury Police on November 29, 1984, in the Las Limitas hamlet. He said morale was low in the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

Zolanda Umana: woman arrested on August 21, 1983, by the Colombian secret police and charged in the March 7, 1983, kidnapping of Kenneth Stanley Bishop, a U.S. executive of the Texas Petroleum Company in Colombia. His driver and bodyguard were killed. She was also charged with the July 23, 1982, kidnapping and murder of Gloria Lara de Echeverri, a Liberal political leader

Commander Una: alias of Luz Carmine Garzon.

The Unabomber: FBI case file name of Theodore Kaczynski.

Uno: alias of Hugo Torres.

Uno: alias used by the leader of the dozen members of the leftist Chichoneros Popular Liberation Movement who, on September 17, 1982, took over the building housing the Chamber of Commerce in San Pedro del Sula, Honduras, taking 105 business executives hostage.

Commander Uno: alias of Rosemberg Pabon Pabon.

Jose Manuel Urbina Lara: leader of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica. He was a lawyer who recently obtained Costa Rican citizenship. In 1984, he was the law student who took over the Costa Rican Embassy in Managua, Nicaragua, pressuring both governments until he was granted asylum. He was a Nicaraguan by birth and a deserter from the Sandinista People's Army. As part of a deal that freed the hostages, he arrived on March 22, 1993, in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, where he was taken in National Department of Investigations (DNI) vehicles to DNI Headquarters. The Dominican government had granted him a provisional visa so he could remain in the country under DNI protection. President Joaquin Balaguer granted him asylum.

On March 24, the Nicaraguan government said it would request extradition. On March 26, Costa Rica's Supreme Court of Justice requested his extradition. On April 6, 1993, Costa Rican foreign minister Bernd Niehaus called such extradition a "closed case" for his country because the Dominican government had granted Urbina Lara asylum.

Wilfred Urdininea: hijacker of a Lloyd Air Boliviano F862 flying from Sucre to La Paz on December 16, 1971. He killed the pilot and injured the copilot and a passenger. He never specified where he wanted to go—perhaps Cuba—and was killed by police.

Francisco Urondo: journalist and poet who headed a People's Revolutionary Army group that kidnapped Ronald Grove, the managing director of the British Vestey Industrial Group in Buenos Aires, Argentina, on December 10, 1972. On February 21, 1973, La Plata police captured a seven-person Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia cell implicated in the kidnapping.

Carlos Alberto Urquijo: arrested in Costa Rica on September 27, 1992, for narcotics trafficking and money laundering, his release was demanded on April 26, 1993, by five gunmen who took hostage 19 of 22 Supreme Court justices in San Jose. He refused to be released on April 27.

Juan Jose Urrutia Pia: one of 14 Spanish Basque Nation and Liberty members arrested in Uruguay on May 15, 1992. They were tried and imprisoned for using false documents. A Uruguayan lower court denied his extradition. The decision was appealed before a higher court and was upheld on March 16, 1994. He was released, although he was still charged with use of false documents.

Leonel de Jesus Usala de Rivera: Colombian arrested on April 23, 1993, by the Darien Police Zone for carrying no identity papers in Pucuru and held on suspicion of involvement in the kidnapping by the Vanguardia Patriótica Torrijista 20 de Diciembre on January 31, 1993, of three U.S. missionaries.

V

---

Fernando Vaca Narvaja: Montoneros deputy chief who flew to Havana on August 15, 1972, after having escaped from prison and hijacking an Austral BAC111 flying from Trelew to Buenos Aires. On March 14, 1979, he was sentenced by a Rome court to 40 months in absentia for illegal possession of weapons and forged identity documents. He was married to Maria Josefa Fleming, who received the same sentence. On August 17, 1989, Argentina requested the arrest of the Montoneros leader believed living in Montevideo, Uruguay.

Fernando Vacha Narvaja: senior Montonero member who was arrested in Rio de Janeiro on February 12, 1984, at the request of the Argentine government. He had been there since November 1983. Argentina requested extradition on charges of homicide, illicit association, and offenses against the public order.

Isaac Valazco: Peruvian Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement spokesperson in Hamburg for the group during the December 17, 1996, takeover of the Japanese ambassador's residence in Lima, Peru, that entailed the taking of 700 hostages. Peru asked Germany to cancel the political asylum it had granted him in 1993. On April 28, 1997, the German government asked Hamburg to ban his political activity.

Roberto Valdez: arrested on October 30, 1995, in connection with his links to the key suspects in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more.

Cecilia Valdes Toro: acquitted and released on December 24, 1989, after being charged with violating the Antiterrorist Law and the Law on Arms Control in connection with a guerrilla training school and with participating in the September 7, 1986, attack on Chilean president Augusto Pinochet.

Jose Rigoberto Valdivia Mora: aliases Miguel Angel, Camilo. Deputy chief of the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front in the central zone who was arrested by the Chilean Carabineros Intelligence Service on November 4, 1994. Prosecutors wanted him for questioning regarding terrorist actions in the Seventh Region, including the attack on the O'Higgins Museum where a watchman was murdered and copies of the National Independence Act were stolen. He was arrested in a house on Americo Vespucio Avenue in the district of Penalolen in Santiago. He had undergone politicalmilitary training in Cuba. Leadership let him reorganize the revolutionary armed forces.

Edelio Valencia: leader of the 11th Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia who was killed by government troops in December 1983.

Bertan Valentino: Italian believed to be an Iraqi detained on May 2, 1992, by Ecuadoran police in Quito on suspicion of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured

252. He and six Iranian Hizballah members had intended to go to Canada via the United States. On May 9, the Crime Investigation Division in Quito said that the group was not involved in the bombing and would be deported to Iran through Bogota and Caracas. They were released on May 12, 1992, and given 72 hours to leave the country.

Leonel M. Valladares: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front members who hijacked a Lancia BAC111 flying from San Salvador to Managua and Miami on December 12, 1971. The trio took over the plane out of Managua and demanded to go to Cuba. Upon landing at San Jose, Costa Rica, for refueling, over 200 civil guards stormed the plane. One hijacker was fatally shot; a passenger and another hijacker were wounded. Several passengers were injured when they jumped from the plane as it burst into flames. The two captured hijackers were returned to Nicaragua but escaped custody during the Nicaraguan earthquake of December 23, 1972. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Juan A. Vallejos: one of two armed hijackers of a Faucett B727 flying from Piura to Chiclayo, Peru, on April 8, 1972. They wanted to go to Cuba, but when they failed to ignite their bottle of gasoline, the crew overpowered them.

Carlos Valverde Barberry: leader of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange.

Carlos Valverde Bravo: son of Carlos Valverde Barberry, leader of the extreme rightist Bolivian Socialist Falange. Valverde Bravo was one of 120 members of the group that took over the U.S. Occidental Oil plant in Tita, Bolivia, on May 2, 1981, taking 52 hostages.

Marc Van Dam: one of two Belgians arrested on March 15, 1991, by Colombian security forces in Barranquilla for involvement in at least four armed robberies and the Revolutionary Socialist Brigade kidnapping on January 14, 1989, of former Christian Democratic prime minister Paul Vanden Boeynants in Belgium. They were also affiliates of Medellin cocaine cartel leader Pablo Escobar. They apparently had signed up as mercenaries for the cartel, which was reconstituting its terrorist infrastructure. They had entered through Brazil four months earlier after leaving Belgium. They each had a dozen faked national ID cards with different aliases, $170,000 in cash—which they offered the arresting officers—and several telephone numbers of cartel members in Medellin. They were to be returned to Belgium on March 21, 1991, on a special Belgian military plane.

Alvaro Vangadeli: one of three anti-Sandinista Nicaraguan gunmen who, on March 8, 1993, took 24 hostages in the Nicaraguan Embassy in San Jose, Costa Rica.

Ramiro Vanoy: one of 13 senior paramilitary leaders of the right-wing United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia extradited to the United States on May 13, 2008. They had been accused of ordering the murders of thousands of people, including peasants, leftist politicians, journalists, and union activists. While in Colombian jails, they ran a cocaine trafficking organization.

Pedro Varas Flores: Varas, age 16, hijacked a LAN Caravelle flying from Santiago, Chile, to Puerto Montt on November 12, 1969. He and his friend Patricio Fernando Degach Vergue, age 16, said they wanted to go to Cuba. After a refueling, the crew disarmed the hijackers.

Eugenio Vargas Perdomo: alias Carlos Bolas. Member of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC) arrested in Suriname for immigration violations for using a fake Peruvian passport. On June 18, 2002, Suriname extradited him to the United States. After being turned over to the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), he faced federal drug trafficking charges, including conspiracy to import more than five kilograms of cocaine into the United States. On July 9, defense attorney Joseph Virgilio asked a federal judge to force his trial within three months, instead of permitting the government to have time to build a case of international terrorism against him. The DEA said FARC had murdered 13 Americans and kidnapped more than 100 since 1980. U.S. district court chief judge Thomas F. Hogan scheduled a July 18 hearing to set a trial date.

Julio Vargas Gamboa: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Manuel Vargas Agueros: one of four Guantánamo-born hijackers of Pan Am Flight 460, a B747 flying from San Juan, Puerto Rico, to Miami, Florida, on April 13, 1969, and diverted to Cuba.

Mariela Vargas: spokesperson on December 21, 1989, for the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front, who said that the group would attack any U.S. objective in Chile in retaliation for the U.S. raid on Panama.

Nelson Vargas Rueda: Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia guerrilla commander arrested on March 23, 2000, by police on suspicion of ordering the murder of three U.S. activists kidnapped on February 25, 1999. On April 30, 2002, U.S. attorney general John D. Ashcroft announced murder charges against him. On May 7, 2003, Colombia's president ordered his extradition to the United States. He was turned over to the United States on May 28, 2003.

Zenon Vargas Cardenas: on October 14, 1992, the Peruvian Supreme Military Council for Justice unanimously confirmed the Shining Path member's life sentence for high treason.

Maria Christina Varrier: beautiful blond star who led 20 members of the Argentina nationalist group El Condor in hijacking an Argentine Airlines DC4 bound from Buenos Aires to Rio Gallegos, diverting it to the Falkland (Malvinas) Islands on September 28, 1966. The group was extradited on October 1; the three leaders were sentenced to five years and the others to three years.

Hamet Vasconez: leader of the American Battalion in Colombia who had also aided Salvadoran guerrillas. He was killed in a police raid on an Alfaro Lives, Damn It safe house in Quito, Ecuador, on September 11, 1986, after the group held up a branch of the Production Bank in northern Quito.

Eduardo Vasques: member of the Popular League of February 28 of El Salvador whose release was demanded when 15 armed members of the January 28 Popular Leagues took over the Spanish Embassy in San Salvador and seized 10 hostages on February 5, 1980. The government released most of the prisoners; one escaped.

Andres Vasquez Molina: member of the People's (or Popular) Liberation Forces of El Salvador (FPL) who was arrested for involvement in FPL's April 6, 1983, assassination in Nicaragua of Melinda Anaya Montes, alias Commander Ana Maria, the group's leader. The murder weapon and blood-stained clothing were found in their possession.

Antonio Vazquez Secum: on December 22, 1997, 100 masked gunmen wearing blue uniforms gunned down Acteal, Mexico, villagers using .22 caliber rifles and AK47s in a nine-hour slaughter that began after a 9:00 A.M. church service. The victims included 14 children, an infant, 9 men, and 21 women, 4 of whom were pregnant. Some were hacked to death. Most of the victims were members of the peasant group Las Abejas (The Bees), who support the goals, but not the violence, of the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN). EZLN rebelled in January 1994 to demand rights for Chiapas State's impoverished Tzotzil Indians. The state police visited the town once, perhaps twice, during the incident but apparently did nothing to stop it, saying that they heard no gunshots. On January 16, 1998, the Mexican Attorney General's Office said that the attack may have been to avenge a son's death. Antonio Vazquez Secum, age 70, confessed to being enraged by his son's death in a December 17 ambush; he held Acteal residents responsible.

Eric Salomon Vasquez Corrales: one of two kidnappers of Arnold McBrown, American administrator of the Adventist Hospital in Valle de Angeles, Honduras, on June 26, 1981. Vazquez left the apartment hideout, shot a policeman, took his weapon, and was then shot to death in a gun battle with police near the apartment.

Felipe Vazquez Espinoza: on December 22, 1997, 100 masked gunmen wearing blue uniforms gunned down Acteal, Mexico, villagers using .22 caliber rifles and AK47s in a nine-hour slaughter that began after a 9:00 A.M. church service. The victims included 14 children, an infant, 9 men, and 21 women, 4 of whom were pregnant. Some were hacked to death. Most of the victims were members of the peasant group Las Abejas (The Bees), who support the goals, but not the violence, of the Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN). EZLN rebelled in January 1994 to demand rights for Chiapas State's impoverished Tzotzil Indians. The state police visited the town once, perhaps twice, during the incident but apparently did nothing to stop it, saying that they heard no gunshots. On January 12, 1998, federal prosecutors charged Felipe Vazquez Espinoza, commander of the state police in Los Chorrros, with assembling the weapons stockpile used in the attack and ordering police trucks to collect the arms from surrounding villages.

Manuel Vasquez Castano: founder of the Colombian National Liberation Army.

Oscar M. Vasquez: one of two would-be hijackers of a LAN Caravelle flying the Puerto Monta-

Punta Arenas-Santiago, Chile, route on February 6, 1970. The two Chilean students wanted to go to Cuba. While refueling at Santiago, police raided the plane. In the shootout, one of the hijackers died and the other was wounded, along with a stewardess, two detectives, and a uniformed policeman.

Rodolfo Vasquez: member of the Popular League of February 28 of El Salvador whose release was demanded when 15 armed members of the January 28 Popular Leagues took over the Spanish Embassy in San Salvador and seized 10 hostages on February 5, 1980. The government released most of the prisoners; one escaped.

Genaro Vazquez Rojas: former schoolteacher who became the leader of a group of Mexican rural guerrillas believed operating near the mountains near Acapulco. His group kidnapped Dr. Jaime Castrejon Diez, rector of the State University of Guerrero and millionaire owner of the Coca-Cola bottling concession in the town, on November 19, 1971. The group demanded the release of 9 political prisoners, $200,000, and trials for 15 other political prisoners. On November 28, the Mexican government freed the prisoners, who were flown to Cuba. The individuals included five individuals said to be close to Vazquez, including one who may have been his sister-in-law. Castrejon was released on December 1. By May 4, 1973, he was dead.

Judith Vazquez: Argentine hijacker of an Aeromaya Airlines Hawker Siddeley 748 flying from Cozumel to Merida, Mexico, but diverted to Cuba. She and her daughter Sylvia, age 12, and son Ernesto, age 2 months, stayed in Cuba.

Vega: would-be hijacker of an Avianca plane flying from Los Angeles to Bogota on April 29, 1971. He tried to divert the plane to Cuba, but the plane landed in Panama, where he was arrested.

Jose Miguel Vega Flores: alias Mario. One of four individuals arrested on May 28, 1985, in connection with the May 24, 1985, bombing of National Electric Power high tension pylons that blacked out 1,400 kilometers of Chilean territory, including Santiago and Copiapo. He was a member of the Manuel Rodríguez Patriotic Front.

Palacios Vega: one of six Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism–Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSa Flight 11 on October 29, 1981. She was arrested on October 30, 1981, in El Salvador, pending extradition. El Salvador agreed to extradition on November 2, but the court system denied extradition on November 16 due to incorrect filing of the extradition request by Costa Rica.

Thomas Raimundo Vegaso Villaneuva: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Enrique Velasco: accused in the February 1975 assassination by the Movement for Cuban Justice of Luciano Nieves, an advocate of peaceful coexistence with the Castro regime. A judge revoked his $10,000 bond on November 23, 1975, when he failed to appear in the courtroom as ordered. He was believed to be one of the members of the Pragmatistas who fled to Mexico after jumping bond.

Mario Velasquez Fonseca: Cuban exile who hijacked Northwest Airlines Flight 714, a B727 flying from Chicago, Illinois, to Miami, Florida, on July 1, 1968, and diverted it to Cuba. He was permitted to stay in Cuba.

Albino Eduardo Velazques Delgado: one of five individuals arrested on March 16, 1987, by Melipeuco, Chile, authorities for holding up a Brink's car carrying arms into Argentina and also in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodríguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the Chilean presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Hernan Velez Vera: leader of Colombia's Ricardo Franco Movement who died on September 23, 1986, during a police raid of his Bogota hideout to free hostage Flor Alba Manrique de Ocampo, wife of a Modelo Jail guardsman.

Arsenio Veloz: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curaçao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Roger Venevides Castellon: variant of Roger Benavides Castellon.

Pedro I. Venezuela: one of two would-be hijackers of a LAN Caravelle flying the Puerto Monta–Punta Arenas–Santiago, Chile, route on February 6, 1970. The two Chilean students wanted to go to Cuba. While refueling at Santiago, police raided the plane. In the shootout, one of the hijackers died and the other was wounded, along with a stewardess, two detectives, and a uniformed policeman.

Ventura: one of eight heavily armed members of a Dutch revolutionary group that hijacked a Netherlands Antilles Airlines Fokker F27 on its way from Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, to Curaçao on May 13, 1970, diverting it to Cuba.

Commander Gabriel Vera: alias Vidal. Leader of 25 to 35 members of the Camilo Torres Front of the National Liberation Army of Colombia who kidnapped British Colombian citizens Mrs. Telery Jones and her son Owen from their ranch in northern Colombia near Chiriguana on January 5, 1980.

Leonardo Vera Viteri: Alfaro Lives, Damn It terrorist rescued by American Battalion terrorists from the Eugenio Espejo Hospital in Quito, Ecuador, where he was recovering from gunshot wounds on August 19, 1986. The attackers shot to death three police guards. The Battalion was made up of the Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement of Peru, the April 19 Movement of Colombia, and the Alfaro Lives, Damn It group of Ecuador.

Julio Cesar Verdugo Valenzuela: Rebel Armed Forces (FAR) of Guatemala member whose release was demanded on July 18, 1979, by the FAR kidnappers of vice foreign minister Alfonso Lima.

Claudio Ezequiel Vergara Dias: arrested on January 13, 1987, at a clandestine clinic in connection with the September 7, 1986, attack by 21 Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front gunmen on the presidential motorcade as it traveled to Santiago, Chile. The gunmen were armed with grenades and automatic weapons and killed 5 presidential guards and injured 11 military escorts.

Ignacio Lopez de Vergara Astola: suspected Basque Nation and Liberty member who had been deported from Venezuela and was turned over to Spanish police by French officials on November 3, 1987.

Colombo Veria de Souza: one of four members of Brazilian Action for National Liberation who tried to hijack a Cruzeiro do Sul Caravello flying the Rio de Janeiro–São Paulo–Buenos Aires, Argentina, run. They wanted to go to Cuba, but the wounded pilot flew back to Rio. Police stormed the plane and arrested the hijackers before they made any demands.

Vidal: alias of Commander Gabriel Vera.

Carlos Vidales Rivera: senior member of the April 19 Movement of Colombia in 1981.

Valdirene Vieira Ferguglia: Brazilian citizen arrested on January 29, 1995, along with six Lebanese suspected of involvement in the March 17, 1992, car bombing at the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires that killed 29 and injured 252 and the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli facility in Buenos Aires. Three of the detainees expressed pro-Hizballah sentiments but denied involvement. She was domiciled in Foz do Iguacu and arrested on January 30, 1995, in Paraguay. She had a plane ticket for Brussels via Madrid. They were charged with drug trafficking, violating immigration law, and illegal possession of weapons. Argentina requested extradition on February 24, 1995, for stockpiling explosives and combat weapons on an island in the Tigre River delta. They were extradited from Paraguay on July 23, 1995, in connection with the discovery of an arsenal near Buenos Aires. They were released on July 27, 1995, in Argentina.

A. Viejo Romero: one of the 15 hijackers of an Ecuatoriana International Lockheed Electra 188 on the Guayaquil–Quito–Miami run on January 19, 1969, that was hijacked to Cuba. All of the hijackers, aged 15 to 25, were convicted in Ecuadoran court.

Peio el Viejo: alias of Jose Luis Ansola Larranaga.

Karin Alicia Eitel Vilar: alias Veronica. Language school student arrested by Chilean police in connection with the September 1, 1987, kidnapping by the Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front of Chilean Army Col. Carlos Carreno in front of his home in Santiago. She was charged with planning the kidnapping, illegal association to commit crimes, and forging official documents, which were discovered on her when she was arrested. She was also carrying false ID papers in the name of Vilma Ximena Fuentealba Helmers.

Amilcar Vilchez: Venezuelan arrested on October 17, 1986, following a clash between Venezuelan military authorities and Colombian guerrillas linked with drug traffickers along the border.

Kepa Viles Escobar: one of 11 Basque Nation and Liberty members expelled by Algiers to Caracas, Venezuela, on May 27, 1989.

Humberto Villa Macias: member of the April 19 Movement of Colombia who was captured on August 10, 1988, in Peru after infiltrating Peruvian government agencies and making the Shining Path and Tupac Amaru Revolutionary movement terrorist groups. Upon entering Peru in 1983, he had obtained forged voter's cards and used the names Alejandro Aguirre Carlos and Alejandro Aguirre Ceras. At his arrest, police seized three revolvers with their brand names and serial numbers filed off, bombs, a .38 caliber gun, and 9-mm ammunition.

Jesus Villa Munoz: resident of Hialeah, Florida, who, on February 16, 1982, attempted to hijack to Cuba an Air Flight B737 being loaded at Miami International Airport. Villa pulled out a handgun and fired two shots during a gun battle with police. He was captured and later charged with attempted first degree murder, attempted air piracy, and use of a firearm to commit a felony.

Pedro Rovert Villacorta: arrested on November 3, 2002, by Peruvian antiterrorist police in Tumbes, 624 miles northwest of Lima near the Ecuadoran border, and charged with the 1989 murder of U.S. journalist Todd Smith, a reporter for the Tampa Tribune who was investigating ties between the Shining Path and drug traffickers.

Adelaido Villafranco Contreras: Puerto Rican who was killed on May 26, 1983, in raid in Cholula, Mexico, during investigation of a plot to attack the interparliamentary meeting between U.S. and Mexican legislators scheduled to be held in Puebla in June 1983. One of those arrested was wanted for a string of Armed Front for National Liberation bombings.

Hugo Villagra: Nicaraguan whose release from Costa Rican prison was demanded by the five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism—Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981.

Carlos Villalba: Argentine journalism professor at Costa Rica's national university charged by the Costa Rican government in March 21, 1981, as a Montoneros leader in Mexico.

Aristides Villalobos Rico: one of three National Liberation Army hijackers of an Avianca DC4 flying from Riohacha to Barranquilla, Colombia, on March 5, 1968. They diverted the plane to Cuba.

Joaquin Villalobos: head of the People's Revolutionary Army of El Salvador. On April 5, 1985, the armed forces said that he was seriously wounded in Morazan Department and was thought to be dead. However, on January 30, 1989, he signed a communiqué from the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front General Command that was broadcast on San Salvador's Radio Cadena Ysu and on a Mexican radio station, in which the group suspended attacks against U.S. military personnel.

Eugenio Villalta Quiros: Costa Rican arrested on January 20, 1991, in the Old Quarter of Panama City, Panama, when police found three grenades in his possession. He claimed he found them in an area close to San Felipe. He had two type CH-N tear gas canisters and a CH smoke bomb. He denied involvement with pro-Iraqi or Panamanian oppositionists.

Carlos Villamar: one of the three person crew who hijacked a Cubana DC3 flying from Havana to Santa Clara, Cuba, on April 13, 1958, and diverted it to Miami.

Gustavo J. Villanueva Valdes: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front members who hijacked a Lancia BAC111 flying from San Salvador to Managua, Nicaragua, and Miami, Florida, on December 12, 1971. The trio took over the plane out of Managua and demanded to go to Cuba. Upon landing at San Jose, Costa Rica, for refueling, over 200 civil guards stormed the plane. One hijacker was fatally shot; a passenger and another hijacker were wounded. Several passengers were injured when they jumped from the plane as it burst into flames. The two captured hijackers were returned to Nicaragua but escaped custody during the Nicaraguan earthquake of December 23, 1972. As of 1979, they remained at large.

Cesar Villarreal Garcia: one of five individuals who attempted to hijack a domestic Cubana flight on December 8, 1960. Following a gun battle in which the pilot was injured, the plane crashed at the Cienfuego airport, killing one person and injuring four. The five were soon executed.

Ruben Arturo Villarreal: variant Ruben Lucero Villarreal; alias Pantalonzon. Member of the Panamanian 20 December Movement and one of the suspects in the June 10, 1992, shooting in Panama of U.S. Southern Command Corp. Zak A. Hernandez, who was killed, and Sgt. Ronald Marshall, who died the next day of his wounds. He was arrested on June 20, 1992, and confessed that day. On October 28, 1995, the prosecutor dismissed all charges against him.

Ruben Lucero Villarreal: variant of Ruben Arturo Villarreal.

W

---

Mark Robert Walker: Wyoming college student, age 18, who, on November 9, 2004, was charged in El Paso, Texas, with providing material support to a terrorist group after telling the FBI that he was trying to send military equipment—weapons, ammunition, night-vision goggles, and bulletproof vests—to the Somali al-Ittihad al-Islamiya group, which is on the U.S. list of terrorist organizations affiliated with al Qaeda. He also was attempting to travel to Somalia to fight alongside them. On October 28, Walker's roommate at Wyoming Technical College called the FBI to say that Walker had used his computer to talk to terrorists. Using the name Abdullah, Walker ran a jihadist Web site. Walker tried to flee to Mexico after his roommate confronted him but was picked up on November 6 at the El Paso border crossing after his name appeared on a watch list. Walker became interested in Islam at a Rochester, New York, mosque.

Thomas George Washington: unemployed chemist who hijacked Eastern Airlines Flight 47, a DC8 flying from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, to Miami, Florida, on December 19, 1968, and diverted it to Cuba. He was accompanied by his daughter, Jennifer, age three. He was led away from the plane at Jose Marti Airport by six Cuban soldiers. In August 1969, he told reporters that he would like to return home. He returned to Canada with a group of hijackers in November 1969. On March 24, 1970, he was sentenced to two years for interfering with a flight crew. On June 4, 1971, he was released.

Donald Webb: gunman hospitalized under police custody after he joined assassins who fired on the car of Michael Manley, prime minister of Jamaica, during the election campaign on October 10, 1980.

William: alias of Guillermo Elbecio Ruiz Gomez.

Marcos Wilson: one of five members of the Trotskyist Brazilian Workers Party arrested on April 12, 1986, during a holdup of the Banco do Brasil branch in Salvador. They claimed they were trying to get funds for Nicaragua.

Marvin Wilson Camano: one of three Sandinista National Liberation Front Pablo Fonseca Amado Patrol hijackers of a Navajo plane in Managua, Nicaragua, on March 8, 1979. They ordered the captain to fly to Venezuela, but the pilot landed in Costa Rica's Juan Santamaria Airport, where they surrendered.

Bobby R. White: attempted to hijack Piedmont Airlines Flight 25, a B737 that had landed in New York on June 18, 1971 after flying from Winston-Salem, North Carolina. White entered the plane and demanded to be flown to Cuba. He was overpowered by the pilot and two sky marshals. He was sentenced to five years for conveying false information concerning an attempt to commit air piracy on September 14, 1971.

Carl White: one of two men who, with their wives and four children, were involved in the hijacking of National Airlines Flight 36, a DC8 flying the Los Angeles–Tampa–Miami route on January 3, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. The group was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of California on January 27, 1971. The six-member White family was apprehended in San Juan, Puerto Rico, on May 24, 1975. They were flown to San Diego to stand trial. He received 20 years for air piracy on November 24, 1975.

Norma Jean White: member of the White family consisting of two men, their wives, and four children who were involved in the hijacking of National Airlines Flight 36, a DC8 flying the Los Angeles–Tampa–Miami route on January 3, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. The group was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of California on January 27, 1971. The six-member White family was apprehended in San Juan, Puerto Rico, on May 24, 1975. They were flown to San Diego to stand trial. All charges against her were dropped.

R. R. Wiggins: one of two American would-be hijackers who attempted to divert a British West Indian Airways (a Trinidad and Tobago corporation) B727 flying from Kingstown to Miami on May 1, 1970. They said they had an appointment with Eldridge Cleaver in Algiers and demanded to be flown there. The plane landed in Havana, Cuba; the pilot claimed that there was a faulty oil pressure gauge. The duo then demanded to be flown to Senegal but was talked out of it by British and Cuban negotiators.

James Arthur Wilson: one of two men who, with their wives and four children, were involved in the hijacking of National Airlines Flight 36, a DC8 flying the Los Angeles–Tampa–Miami route on January 3, 1971, and diverted to Cuba. The group was indicted by a federal grand jury in the Southern District of California on January 27, 1971.

He was arrested on November 18, 1975, in Chicago and sentenced to 20 years for air piracy on March 22, 1976.

Nikolai Wischnewsky: alias Nick Roland. Austrian-born hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 688 flying the Miami–Jacksonville–Atlanta–Indianapolis route on December 25, 1977. He told the stewardess he wanted to go to Miami and on to Cuba. He allowed the DC9 to land in Atlanta, Georgia, and freed 14 passengers. The hijacker was overpowered by an Atlanta police lieutenant and two FBI officers. In November 1975, he was arrested in Sloatsburg, New York, in a similar phony bomb caper. He served 21 months of a three-year sentence for attempted robbery. He had been free on parole from New York's Dannemora State Prison for only a month before the hijacking. He was arraigned on federal charges of air piracy and held in Fulton County Jail.

Rodolfo Wolf: National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros) member arrested on March 29, 1973, by Uruguayan authorities, who also detained several Tupamaros wanted in the kidnapping and murder of USAID official Daniel Mitrione on July 31, 1970.

Tyrone Won: one of two hijackers of a British Honduran chartered Cessna 180 on a local flight in the British Honduras on March 25, 1970, that was diverted to Cuba. Won later committed suicide.

Cheryl Yvonne Worthy: on August 14, 1991, a U.S. magistrate in Boston ordered her to return to Puerto Rico to face charges of hijacking a Capitol Airlines flight on May 12, 1983, from Puerto Rico to Miami, Florida, and diverting it to Cuba. She was convicted in Cuba and sentenced to 25 years in prison. Released after 14 months, she lived in South Africa for several years.

Laughlin Wright: would-be hijacker of Eastern Airlines Flight 140, a B727 flying from Atlanta, Georgia, to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on January 13, 1975. He boarded without a ticket and started pounding on the cockpit door, demanding to be flown to San Juan, Puerto Rico. When the plane landed at Dulles, he locked himself in the lavatory. Police boarded the plane and arrested him. He was committed to a mental institution on March 28, 1975.

Y

---

Yacare: alias meaning “crocodile” used by one of the Shining Path members who kidnapped and killed U.S. journalist Todd Smith on November 17, 1989, in Uchiza. On December 1, 1989, Peruvian police and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration arrested the Colombian in Uchiza, in the heart of the Upper Huallaga River Valley, a coca-producing area. Yacare said four others participated in the killing on orders of the Medellin cartel and the local association of coca producers.

Edgardo Yema: indicted on November 2, 1995, on charges of unlawful association in the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. He was set free, although Judge Galeano ordered an attachment of his assets at 500,000 pesos.

Manuel Rufino Yepes Borges: Venezuelan member of the Colombian narcoguerrilla group Simon Bolivar Guerrilla Coordinating Board who was killed in a clash with Venezuelan authorities on June 11, 1988, in northern Tachira State at the San Felipe farm, Boca de Grita, Garcia Evia municipality. He was planning to kidnap a Venezuelan cattle rancher. He was part of a group that had recently held up two buses south of Lake Maracaibo.

Rodrigo Alberto Yepes: one of three men arrested for the kidnapping on February 17, 1978, in Medellin, Colombia, of Jose Bartolini Berlino, an Italian toy-factory owner. The group demanded a 40 million peso ($1.4 million) ransom. He was rescued by the Administrative Department of Security’s antikidnapping squad on February 22, 1978, at a fashionable home outside of Medellin, where the members of the ring were arrested.

Marco Antonio Yon Sosa: leader of the Guatemalan Revolutionary Movement of November 13. The Mexican government announced that he and two of his followers had been shot to death near the Guatemalan border on May 16, 1970. He was a lieutenant in the Guatemalan Army until 1960, when he joined a rebellion against president Miguel Ydigoras Fuentes.

Hugo Alfredo Yrurzun: alias Captain Santiago. Member of the Argentine People’s Revolutionary Army and believed to have owned the pickup truck that was used in the machine-gun assassination of former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somoza Debayle in Paraguay on September 17, 1980. Yrurzun was killed in a police raid the next day. He had used a false Uruguayan passport to enter Paraguay and had traveled earlier in 1980 to Costa Rica and Panama.

Constantino Yubra: arrested on June 30, 1989, in connection with the May 24, 1989, machine-gun murders of two U.S. Mormon missionaries by the Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia.

Adnan Muhammad Yusif: Iraqi infantry soldier carrying a Brazilian passport issued in 1973 when detained at the border town of Paso de Los Libres, Corrientes Province, Argentina, while trying to leave the country on July 18, 1994. He was questioned in connection with the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine–Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires that killed 86 and wounded 231 or more. Hizballah was suspected. He was released on July 22 for lack of evidence.

Z

---

Parvix Vzez-Zadeh: Cuban-born Communist killed along with seven other Marxist guerrillas in two gun battles with police in Tehran on December 23, 1976.

Abdul Zahir: Afghan man suspected of al Qaeda membership who was charged on January 20, 2006, by federal authorities in the United States in the March 2002 grenade attack that wounded three journalists in Gardez. He was also charged with paying other al Qaeda members to conduct terrorist attacks against coalition forces, conspiracy, aiding the enemy, and attacking civilians. He was held at the U.S. prison in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, since being detained in July 2002. He had been in Afghanistan from 1997 until his capture. He had worked as a courier and translator and moved more than $50,000 to terrorists. He also produced anti-U.S. leaflets to recruit Afghans living near the U.S. Embassy and U.S. military bases. He was charged with working with two other terrorists in the grenade attack that seriously injured a Canadian reporter for the Toronto Star.

Rady Zaiter: Lebanese leader of a Quito-based cocaine ring suspected of funneling cash to Hizballah. He was arrested in Colombia on June 22, 2005.

Alberto Augusto Zalles Cueto: Bolivian citizen arrested on March 6, 1993, by Quito, Ecuador, police. On March 11, 1993, Bolivia requested his expulsion because he was a main member of the Nestor Paz Zamora Commission, an armed cell of the renewed Army of National Liberation, which adopted the name of one of Bolivian president Jaime Paz Zamora's brothers. (See also Augusto Zalles, who is possibly the same individual.)

Augusto Zalles: Army of National Liberation terrorist who was killed on December 5, 1990, in a clash with police at the hideout of the kidnappers of Jorge Lonsdale, the Bolivian executive president of the local Coca-Cola company, who had been abducted on June 1, 1990, in La Paz. The kidnappers killed their hostage. (See also Alberto Augusto Zalles Cueto, who is possibly the same individual.)

Laura Zambrano Badilla: Peruvian Shining Path member who was arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

Guillermo Zapata Velez: one of three men arrested for the kidnapping on February 17, 1978, in Medellin, Colombia, of Jose Bartolini Berlini, an Italian toy-factory owner. The group demanded a 40 million peso ($1.4 million) ransom. He was rescued by the Administrative Department of Security's antikidnapping squad on February 22, 1978, at a fashionable home outside of Medellin, where the members of the ring were arrested.

Jorge Enrique Zapporoli: American arrested on March 2, 1983, with four other Salvadorans when handguns and a shortwave radio were found in a car in which they were riding. The next day, he was freed in El Salvador of all charges that he belonged to the Popular Liberation Front.

Koldo Zaralegui: one of four Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA) members who took refuge at the Apostolic Nunciature in Panama on December 20, 1989. On February 19, 1990, the Venezuelan government announced that they had been granted asylum in Venezuela as of February 10, 1990. The four were living in San Cristobal, the capitol of Tachira State, Venezuela, located 800 kilometers south of Caracas and 40 kilometers from the Colombian border. The government prohibited them from participating in any political activity. Asylum was granted under Article 116 of the Venezuelan Constitution. The four ETA members lived in Panama for several years as a result of an agreement between the Spanish and Panamanian governments. They took refuge in the Nunciature a few hours after the U.S. military raid into Panama.

Ricardo Zarattini: former National Student Union officer who was jailed for subversive activities among Brazilian peasants. His release was demanded in the September 4, 1969, kidnapping of U.S. ambassador to Brazil Charles Burke Elbrick. He was released by the government and flown with 14 other prisoners to Mexico City, where they were granted political asylum. Thirteen of the group resurfaced in Cuba.

Genaro Luis Zarzaburo Robles: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

'ali Zaydan: alias Haytham. Monzer al-Kassar's brother, identified by Doha's al-Sharq on March 19, 1993, as a member of the Abu Nidal Group's Central Committee and an officer in the intelligence administration.

Abdallah el-Zein: on March 8, 1998, the Israeli Yediot Aharonot claimed that the Lebanese-born individual was tied to the 1992 bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires and the July 18, 1994, bombing of the Argentine-Israeli Mutual Aid Society in Buenos Aires, in which 86 people were killed and 231 or more injured. On February 19, 1998, Switzerland caught five Mossad agents trying to bug a Bern apartment where he once lived.

Rolando William Zepeda: arraigned on December 5, 1981, in the case of five Nicaraguan members of the International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism-Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement who hijacked Costa Rican SANSA Flight 11 on October 29, 1981.

Alex de la Zerda: U.S. Navy lieutenant assigned to the Roosevelt Roads Naval Station in Puerto Rico who was arrested by the FBI on January 25, 1980, on Vieques in connection with the Anti-Communist Alliance bombing of offices of the Puerto Rican Bar Association in San Juan on January 7, 1980. He was charged with conspiring to bomb an airplane operating between San Juan and neighboring islands. The group said the bombing was to retaliate for the December 3, 1979, attack on a Navy bus in which two Navy personnel were killed and eight wounded.

Eugenio Zoppis: one of several Italian fugitives, some of whom belonged to the Prima Linea and Terza Posizione gangs, whose extradition was requested of Paraguay on July 5, 1986, by the Italian Justice Ministry.

Reinaldo Zunida Torres: one of 70 Shining Path general staff members arrested in a raid on the group's headquarters in the elegant Lioa district in Lima, Peru, on June 1, 1990.

Maria Pilar Zuniga de Montalvan: Peruvian Shining Path member who was arrested on September 12, 1992, by members of the Counterterrorism National Directorate.

SELECTED READINGS

---

For incident descriptions, see chronology references in the introduction, and for a more thorough bibliographical treatment, see Edward F. Mickolus and Susan L. Simmons, Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology, 3 vols. (Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2006).

Alpert, Jane. "I Bombed the Federal Building." Rolling Stone 348 (1981): 20–23, 62–63.

Atkins, Stephen E. Encyclopedia of Modern Worldwide Extremists and Extremist Groups. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2004.

Ayers, Bill. Fugitive Days. New York: Beacon, 2001.

Beck, Gabriel, and Sara Jess. John Walker Lindh: American Taliban. San Jose: University Press of California, 2002.

Bell, Stewart. The Martyr's Oath: The Apprenticeship of a Homegrown Terrorist. New York: John Wiley, 2006.

Brent, William Lee. Long Time Gone: A Black Panther's True-Life Story of His Hijacking and Twenty-five Years in Cuba. New York: Times, 1995.

Castano, Carlos. My Confession. Bogota: Oveja Negra, 2001.

Castellucci, John. The Big Dance: The Untold Story of Weatherman Kathy Boudin and the Terrorist Family That Committed the Brink's Robbery Murders. New York: Dodd Mead, 1986.

Chase, Alston. Harvard and the Unabomber. New York: W. W. Norton, 2003.

Chesimard, Joanne. Assata: An Autobiography. Westport, CT: Lawrence Hill, 1988.

Cohen, David. Requiem for the Heartland: The Oklahoma City Bombing. San Francisco: Collins, 1996.

Dobson, Christopher, and Ronald Payne. The Terrorists: Their Weapons, Leaders and Tactics. New York: Facts on File, 1982.

Dohrn, Bernardine, Bill Ayers, and Jeff Jones, eds. Sing a Battle Song: The Revolutionary Poetry, Statements, and Communiqués of the Weather Underground, 1970–1974. New York: Seven Stories Press, 2006.

Follain, John. Jackal: The Complete Story of the Legendary Terrorist, Carlos the Jackal. New York: Arcade, 1998.

Gorriti, Gustavo. The Shining Path: A History of the Millenarian War in Peru. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1999.

Hearst, Patricia Campbell, with Alvin Moscow. Every Secret Thing. New York: Doubleday, 1981.

Hoffman, Bruce. Inside Terrorism. New York: Columbia University Press, 1998.

Hunter, Stephen, and John Bainbridge Jr. American Gunfight: The Plot to Kill Harry Truman—and the Shoot-out That Stopped It. New York: Simon and Schuster, 2005.

Lara, Patricia. Siembra Vientos y Recogeras Tempestades. Bogota: Clarin, 1982.

Michel, Lou, and Dan Herbeck. American Terrorist: Timothy McVeigh and the Oklahoma City Bombing. New York: Regan, 2001.

- Mickolus, Edward. International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events, 1968–1977, ITERATE 2 Data Codebook. Ann Arbor, MI: Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research, 1982.
- Mickolus, Edward. The Literature of Terrorism: A Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1980.
- Mickolus, Edward. Terrorism, 1988–1991: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Bibliographies and Indexes in Military Studies 6. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1993.
- Mickolus, Edward. Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2008.
- Mickolus, Edward, with Peter Flemming. Terrorism, 1980–1987: A Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1988.
- Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: Chronology. Vol. 1, 1980–1983. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1988.
- Mickolus, Edward F., Todd Sandler, and Jean Murdock. International Terrorism in the 1980s: Chronology. Vol. 2, 1984–1987. Ames: Iowa State University Press, 1989.
- Mickolus, Edward, with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1992–1995: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1997.
- Mickolus, Edward, with Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 1996–2001: A Chronology of Events and a Selectively Annotated Bibliography. 2 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2002.
- Mickolus, Edward, and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology. 3 vols. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 2005.
- Mickolus, Edward F., and Susan L. Simmons. Terrorism, 2008–2010: A Chronology. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, in press.
- Nash, Jay Robert. Terrorism in the 20th Century: A Narrative Encyclopedia from the Anarchists, through the Weathermen, to the Unabomber. New York: Evans, 1998.
- Post, Jerrold. The Mind of the Terrorist: The Psychology of Terrorism from the IRA to al-Qaeda. New York: Palgrave Macmillan, 2007.
- Shanty, Frank, and Raymond Picquet, eds. Encyclopedia of World Terrorism. Santa Barbara, CA: M. E. Sharpe, 2003.
- Simard, Francis. The Last Word on October. Montreal, QC, Canada: Editions Stanke, 1982.
- Smith, Colin. Carlos: Portrait of a Terrorist. New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1976.
- Stern, Susan. With the Weathermen: The Personal Journey of a Revolutionary Woman. New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 2007.
- Strong, Simon. Shining Path: The World's Deadliest Revolutionary Force. London: HarperCollins, 1992.
- Temple-Raston, Dina, and Marguerite Gavin. The Jihad Next Door: The Lackawanna Six and Rough Justice in the Age of Terror. New York: Public Affairs, 2007.
- Tenet, George J., with Bill Harlow. At the Center of the Storm: My Years at the CIA. New York: HarperCollins, 2007.
- Tinnin, David B. Hit Team. Boston: Little, Brown, 1976.
- U.S. Department of Justice, Office of the Inspector General. "Report by the Inspector General on Data Management by the Terrorist Screening Center." <http://www.usdoj.gov/oig/reports/FBI/a0741/final.pdf>.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2006 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. National Counterterrorism Center, 2005.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. 2007 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. National Counterterrorism Center, 2006.
- U.S. National Counterterrorism Center. Counterterrorism Calendar 2008: Terrorist Threat, Individuals, Groups, Methods and Tactics. Washington, DC: U.S. National Counterterrorism Center, 2007.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2003 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center, 2002.

- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2004 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center, 2003.
- U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center. 2005 Daily Planner. Washington, DC: U.S. Terrorist Threat Integration Center, 2004.
- Wilkerson, Cathy. Flying Close to the Sun: My Life and Times as a Weatherman. New York: Seven Stories Press, 1970.
- Yallop, David A. Tracking the Jackal: The Search for Carlos, the World's Most Wanted Man. New York: Random House, 1993.

INDEX

---

- Abu Nidal Group, 1, 31, 87, 131, 138, 217. See also Fatah Revolutionary Council
- Action for National Liberation (ALN), 9, 12, 53, 63, 159, 208
- Alfaro Lives, Damn It, 20, 23, 36, 38, 90, 100, 120–21, 123–24, 126, 157, 160, 176, 196, 205, 207–8
- ALNE. See Action for National Liberation
- Alpha 66, 51
- Anarchy and the Palestinian Group of the Radical Left, 194
- Ansarallah, 200
- Anti-Communist Alliance, 105
- Anti-Communist Democratic Movement, 1, 23, 26, 57
- Anti-Communist Latin American Army, 39
- Antonio Narino Front, 45
- April 19 Movement of Colombia (M-19), 3, 7–8, 11–12, 14, 22–23, 29, 31, 36, 41, 45, 60, 67, 72, 77–78, 82, 88, 90, 99, 101, 110, 117, 120, 133, 135–36, 143, 145, 147, 150, 155, 158, 164–66, 170–71, 176, 179, 184, 188, 196–97, 208–9
- ARDE. See Democratic Revolutionary Alliance
- Argentina National Organization Movement, 20, 69, 90
- Argentine Anti-Communist Alliance, 77
- Argentine Revolutionary Armed Forces, 70, 145, 159
- Argentine Revolutionary Organization of the People, 113
- Armed Communist League of Mexico, 187
- Armed Forces of Liberation (FAL), 20, 43, 136, 150
- Armed Forces of National Liberation (FALN), 43, 52, 62–63, 110, 114, 126–27, 174, 176, 183, 197–98
- Armed Forces of National Resistance, 37, 106, 160–61, 165
- Armed Front for National Liberation, 209
- Arm of the Arab Revolution, 162.
See also Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- AUC. See United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia
- Baader-Meinhof Group, 65, 71, 141
- Basque Nation and Liberty (ETA), 2, 4–5, 10–12, 15–17, 41, 50, 69–71, 85, 87–88, 91, 99–100, 102–3, 132, 144, 147, 161, 164, 199, 202, 208–9, 217
- The Bees. See Las Abejas
- Black Guerrilla Family, 137
- Black Panthers, 27–29, 34, 75, 89, 92
- Black Power, 75
- Bolivian Socialist Falange, 47, 56, 63, 140, 144, 204
- BPR. See Popular Revolutionary Bloc
- BR. See Red Brigades
- Brazilian Action for National Liberation, 90, 148
- Brazilian Armed Revolutionary Guard—Joao Palmares Command, 107–8, 190–91
- Brazilian Revolutionary Movement, 12, 66, 135
- Camilo Torres Front, 31, 48, 146, 153, 169, 179, 197, 207
- Caribbean Revolutionary Alliance, 168
- Carlos Aguero Echeverria Command, 183
- Central Committee of the Party of Peru (Shining Path), 164
- Che Guevara Command, 172
- Chichoneros Popular Liberation Movement, 112, 124, 143, 201
- Chilean Revolutionary Left Movement, 3, 93
- Chilean Socialists, 5, 85, 191
- Chile's Independence Movement, 151
- Cinchonero National Liberation Front, 3, 6, 31, 35–36, 38, 41, 75, 103, 120, 138–39, 164, 166, 176, 178, 199
- Colombian National Liberation Army, 124, 126, 141, 184
- Colorado Party, 118
- Committee of Rural Dwellers, 152, 166
- Communist Party, 180
- Communist Party of Brazil, 25
- Confederation for Unity of Trade Unions, 144
- Coordination of the United Revolutionary Organizations (CORU), 21, 76, 106, 139–40, 156, 170, 174, 188, 197
- CORU. See Coordination of the United Revolutionary Organizations
- Cuban Liberation Front, 112
- Cuban Nationalist Movement, 151
- Death to Kidnappers, 114
- Democratic Revolutionary Alliance (ARDE), 48, 78
- Democratic Revolutionary Front, 88
- Democratic Revolutionary Party, 8
- Dominican Popular Movement, 70, 126

- Edgar Sanchez Special Forces, 83
EGTK. See Tapaj Katari Guerrilla Army
Egyptian Islamic Group (EIG), 122, 132. See also al-Gama'at al-Islamiyya
Egyptian Muslim Brotherhood, 98
EIG. See Egyptian Islamic Group
El Condor, 140, 156, 170
ELN. See National Liberation Army
El Poder Cubano, 1–2, 21, 46, 51, 171, 173
Ernesto Morales Sandoval Squad, 201
ERP. See People's Revolutionary Army
ETA. See Basque Nation and Liberty
EZLN. See Zapatista National Liberation Army

FAL. See Armed Forces of Liberation
FALN. See Armed Forces of National Liberation
FAR. See Rebel Armed Forces
Farabundo Marti National Liberation (FMLN), 5, 13, 38, 41–42, 51–52, 65, 75, 79, 92, 164, 171, 173, 177, 181, 189, 201, 209
FARC. See Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia
Fatah, 129. See also Force 17
Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC), 17
Fifth Army Brigade, 37
53rd Jose Antonio Anzoategui Front, 177
Finance Committee of the 10th Front, 20, 129
FLQ. See Quebec Liberation Front
FMLN. See Farabundo Marti National Liberation
Followers of God, 200
Force 17, 129
FPDN. See National Democratic Popular Front
FPL. See People's Liberation Forces; Popular Liberation Forces
FRAP. See People's Revolutionary Armed Forces
FRC. See Fatah Revolutionary Council
Freedom Flotilla, 13
FSLN. See Sandinista National Liberation Front

al-Gama'at al-Islamiyya, 122, 191, 195

Group for the Defense of Europe, 162
Group of Revolutionary Commandos—Operation Argimiro
Gabaldon, 28, 70, 82, 121, 138, 174
Guatemalan National Revolutionary Unity, 123

Hamas, 130
Hernan Botero Moreno Command, 100
Hizballah, 3–5, 17, 19–20, 41, 52, 60, 79, 94, 107–8, 118, 125, 129, 133–35, 165, 168–69, 172, 180–82, 185, 194–95, 200, 204, 208, 215
Honduras People's Armed Forces, 60

IJO. See Islamic Jihad Organization
Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI), 15, 183
International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism, 23, 57, 77, 83, 95–96, 104, 134, 178, 190–91, 207, 209, 217
IRA. See Provisional Irish Republican Army
Irish National Liberation Army, 83, 139
Irish Republican Army. See Provisional Irish Republican Army
Islamic Jihad Organization (IJO), 129

January 28 Popular Leagues, 3, 47, 206
Japanese Red Army (JRA), 13, 121, 152, 198
JRA. See Japanese Red Army
Juarez Guimarez de Brito Command, 53, 120, 135, 154, 159, 168, 185

Las Abejas (The Bees), 14, 154, 184, 205
Lashkar-i-Taiba, 6
Lautaro United Popular Action Movement, 89
Lautaro Youth Movement, 110
Liberation Front of Suriname, 20, 108
Liberty City Seven, 2, 101
Los Julupesty, 15, 70

M-19. See April 19 Movement of Colombia
M-20. See 20 December Movement

Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front (MRPF), 6, 12, 18, 20, 23, 25, 30, 35, 42–43, 51–53, 57, 60, 62, 70, 82, 87, 108, 110–11, 113, 116, 120, 124–25, 129, 133, 136, 143–44, 148, 150, 153, 175–76, 181, 191–92, 203, 205, 207–8
Maoist Leftist Revolutionary Movement, 5, 22
Metro Bloc, 67
Mexican 23rd of September Communist League, 163
Mohammad Boudia Commando, 162
Movement for Cuban Justice of Luciano Nieves, 36, 207
MRPF. See Manuel Rodriguez Patriotic Front
MRTA. See Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement
Muslim Brotherhood, 131

National Anti-Duvalierist Movement, 135
National Democratic Popular Front (FPDN), 112
National Democratic Union, 14
National Independent Committee for the Defense of Prisoners, the Politically Persecuted, and the Missing, 112
National Liberation Army (ELN), 8, 11, 18, 23, 25–28, 30–31, 46, 48, 66–67, 70, 72, 74, 78, 103, 105, 115, 119–20, 122, 127, 144, 146, 152–54, 169, 175–76, 179, 181, 197, 201, 206–7, 209, 216
National Liberation Movement (Tupamaros). See Tupamaros
National Liberation Movement
National Salvation Democratic Front, 104, 145, 184
National Student Union, 142, 217
Nestor Paz Zamora Committee, 33, 59, 85, 139, 151, 216
Nicaraguan Anti-Communist Democratic Movement. See International Movement to Save Nicaragua from Communism

OPRA. See Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms
Organization of the June 21 National Association of Salvadoran Teachers, 71

- Pablo Fonseca Amado Patrol, 37, 172–73
- Palestinian Authority, 130
- Palestinian Islamic Jihad (PIJ), 130
- Partisans of God, 4, 59, 108, 194.
See also Hizballah
- Party of the Poor, 112
- Pedro Leon Arboleda Marxist-Leninist Group, 190
- Pedro Pablo Castillo Front, 51, 164
- People's Command, 90
- People's Liberation Army, 12, 34, 37, 82, 200
- People's Liberation Forces (FPL), 8, 10, 13, 23, 38, 52, 74, 177, 192, 205
- People's Revolutionary Armed Forces (FRAP), 28, 35, 144
- People's Revolutionary Army (ERP), 8, 22, 26, 36, 38, 45, 62, 74, 83, 86, 92, 96, 102, 106, 116, 119, 124–25, 136, 147, 151, 161, 169, 172, 185, 187, 190, 202, 209, 214
- People's Revolutionary Bloc, 166
- People's Vanguard, 77, 166, 172, 183
- Peruvian Communist Party, 78
- PFLP. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine
- PFLP-GC. See Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command
- PIJ. See Palestinian Islamic Jihad
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), 1, 13, 15, 30, 50, 79, 92, 152, 162, 186, 190
- Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—General Command (PFLP-GC), 130
- Popular League of February 28, 13, 35, 39, 47, 48, 59, 66, 104, 152, 156, 166, 206
- Popular Liberation Forces (FPL), 8, 10, 13, 23, 38, 52, 74, 177, 192, 205
- Popular Liberation Front, 28, 90, 216
- Popular Revolutionary Alliance, 34, 155
- Popular Revolutionary Bloc (BPR), 41, 56–57, 63, 75, 119
- Popular Revolutionary Forces, 98
- Popular Revolutionary Vanguard (VPR), 9, 10, 12, 27, 38, 53, 63, 120, 135, 142, 145, 155, 159, 168, 185
- PRI. See Institutional Revolutionary Party
- Prima Linea, 15
- Provisional Irish Republican Army (IRA), 44, 47, 116–17, 123
- Punto Cero. See Zero Point
- al Qaeda, 7, 49, 57, 97, 101, 118, 122, 132, 167–68, 211, 216
- Quebec Liberation Front (FLQ), 35, 46–47, 98–99, 188
- Quintin Lame Organization, 123
- RAF. See Red Army Faction
- Ramon Emeterio Betances Puerto Rico Independence Commandos, 53, 121, 128, 136, 147, 155, 158, 161, 183, 192
- Raul Sendic International Brigade, 188
- Rebel Armed Forces (FAR), 4, 12, 20, 69, 125, 182, 208
- ReContra, 30
- Red Army Faction (RAF), 96, 163
- Red Brigades (BR), 21, 44, 70
- Red Flag, 111, 158
- Red Shining Path, 164
- Republic of New Africa, 82, 92
- Revolutionary Action Group, 147
- Revolutionary Action Movement, 66
- Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia (FARC), 4, 8, 10, 12, 18, 20, 26, 29–30, 34, 38, 44, 47, 51, 54, 67, 69, 72, 75, 94, 101, 103, 110–12, 114, 116–17, 122–25, 127–29, 133, 136, 141, 145, 148–50, 162, 164–65, 177, 180, 198, 200, 203–5
- Revolutionary Coordinating Junta, 74
- Revolutionary Labor Movement, 21, 87, 109, 148, 160, 165
- Revolutionary Left Movement, 17, 45, 53, 61, 66–67, 74, 98, 112, 119–20, 151, 165, 192, 195
- Revolutionary Movement of July 26, 195
- Revolutionary Movement of November 13, 214
- Revolutionary Organization of the People in Arms (OPRA), 50, 77, 116, 134, 144
- Revolutionary Socialist Brigade, 97, 204
- Revolutionary Workers' Party, 51–52, 67, 161, 171, 181
- Revolutionary Workers Union, 125
- Ricardo Franco Movement, 64, 188, 190, 207
- Salvadoran Popular Liberation Front, 40
- Salvadoran Revolutionary Party of Center American Workers, 56, 111
- Sandinista National Liberation Front (FSLN), 3, 17, 37, 49, 53–54, 63–64, 118, 139, 150, 172, 195–96, 198, 204, 209, 211
- Sandinista People's Army, 144, 201
- Second Front of Escambray, 51
- Second National Front of Escambray, 159
- Secretariat of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia, 51
- Secret Revolutionary Peoples Union, 112
- Sendero Luminoso. See Shining Path
- Shining Path (Sendero Luminoso), 3, 9, 11–12, 16–17, 21, 25–26, 32, 34, 36–39, 41–42, 44, 46, 48–49, 51, 54–55, 61, 65, 67–68, 71, 74, 77–78, 80, 83, 85–88, 91, 94, 99–101, 104–5, 109, 111, 113, 121, 124, 128, 131, 142, 144, 148–49, 155–56, 160–61, 164–66, 169, 175, 177, 179–82, 187–88, 191, 196, 198, 200, 205, 207, 209, 216, 217. See also Central Committee of the Party of Peru
- Squad of the Martyr Patrick Arguello, 13
- Tabliq Islamic Movement, 167
- Taliban, 118
- Tapaj Katari Guerrilla Army (EGTK), 11, 42
- Terza Posizione, 15, 217
- 33rd Front of the Revolutionary Armed Forces, 37
- Torrijist Patriotic Vanguard—December 20, 53, 80, 101, 115, 171, 202
- Trotskyist Brazilian Workers Party, 47, 52, 61, 211
- Trotskyite Worker's Self Defense Movement (Mao), 41
- Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement (MRTA), 8, 17, 24, 39–40, 48, 67, 69, 78, 83, 99, 106, 119, 143, 155–56, 163, 170, 189, 191, 198, 208–9

- Tupamaros National Liberation Movement, 61, 98, 103, 110, 114, 119, 132, 147, 152–53, 156, 180–81, 188, 190, 198, 212
- 12th of January Liberation Movement, 115
- 20 December Movement (M-20), 8, 68, 73, 182, 210
- 28 February Popular Leagues.
    See Popular League of February 28
- 2 October Movement of Mexico, 48
- 2506 Brigade Association, 35
- 2506th Cuban Assault Brigade of the Bay of Pigs, 49
- United Anti-Reelection Command, 126
- United Popular Action Front, 14
- United Self-Defense Forces of Colombia (AUC), 55, 91, 109, 177, 204
- Vanguardia Patriótica Torrijista 20 de Diciembre. See Torrijist Patriotic Vanguard—December 20
- Venezuelan Revolutionary Army, 174
- VPR. See Popular Revolutionary Vanguard
- Working People's Alliance, 173
- Zapatista National Liberation Army (EZLN), 14, 135–36, 154, 170, 184, 199, 205–6
- Zarate Willka Armed Forces of Liberation of Bolivia, 55–56, 67, 109, 176, 181, 214
- Zero Point, 28

About the Authors

DR. EDWARD F. MICKOLUS wrote the first doctoral dissertation on international terrorism while earning a PhD from Yale University. He then served in analytical, operational, management, and staff positions in the Central Intelligence Agency for 33 years, where he was CIA's first full-time analyst on international terrorism; analyzed African political, economic, social, military, and leadership issues; wrote political-psychological assessments of world leaders; and managed collection, counterintelligence, and covert action programs against terrorists, drug traffickers, weapons proliferators, and hostile espionage services. He founded Vinyard Software, Inc., whose products include ITERATE (International Terrorism: Attributes of Terrorist Events) text and numeric datasets and DOTS (Data on Terrorist Suspects). Clients include 150 universities in 21 countries. His 20 books include a series of multivolume chronologies and annotated bibliographies on international terrorism; 12 book chapters; 100 articles and reviews in refereed scholarly journals and newspapers and presentations to professional societies; and 14 humorous publications. Recent publications include Terrorism, 2005–2007: A Chronology; Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.); The Terrorist List: The Middle East; and International Terrorism in the 1980's: A Chronology of Events, Volumes 1 and 2.

SUSAN L. SIMMONS is an independent writer, editor, and writing coach. She works with faculty to publish and achieve tenure; graduate students to complete dissertations; new fiction and nonfiction writers to complete manuscripts, prepare proposals, and find venues and agents; and businesses to prepare sensitive letters and documents and to research and write reports for venture capital firms. She specializes in the fields of international relations, art history, education, psychology, and business. Simmons holds a master's degree in English literature from the University of Minnesota and has worked in the field of terrorism since 1993. She coauthored Terrorism, 2002–2004: A Chronology (3 vols.).